EMPLASTRUM SAPONIS, E. saponaceum, Soap plaster. (Saponis concis. $\frac{5}{iv}$, emplast. plumb. lbij. Mix the soap with the melted plaster, and boil to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) It is a mild discutient. Applied to tumours, corns, &c.

rubr. $\frac{3}{ij}$, Ph. D.) Uæ :—the same as the plaster of red oxide of iron.

EMPLÂTRE, Emplastrum—e. d'André de la Croix, Emplastrum de piee et resinis glutinans—e. de Ciguë, Emplastrum cieutæ—e. Collant de poix et de résines, Emplastrum de piee et resinis glutinans—e. de Gomme résine, Emplastrum cum gummi-resinis—e. de Nuremberg, Emplastrum Norimbergense.

EMPLATTOMENOS, Emphraetius.

EMPNEUMATOSIS, Emphysema, Inspira-tion.

EMPOISONNEMENT, Poisoning.

EMPORIUM, ἐμποριον, (em, 'in,' and πορευω, 'I transport or send.') The brain was so called, of old, because there all the mental affairs are transacted.

EMPORIUM SPIRITUM, Sensorium.

EMPOSIS, Imbibition.

EMPREINTE, Impression.

EMPRESIS, Empresma.

EMPRES'MA, Empres'mus, Empres'nis, from ἐμπρησω, 'future.' ἐπρησω, 'I burn internally.' Inflammation. Phlegmat'icæ membranosæ et purynchymatosæ, Phlogis'tici, Febres continuæ inflammatoricæ, Inflammatio inter'na, Cui'na, Inter'nal inflammation. A genus in the class hæmatica, order phlogotica, of Good.

EMPRESMUS, Empresma.

EMPRION, from ἐν, and πριων, 'a saw.' Serrated. Galen has given this name to the pulse, when the sensation produced by the artery under the fingers is analogous to that which would be caused by the unequal teeth of a saw.

EMPROSTHOCYRTOMA, Lordosis.

EMPROSTHOTONOS, Emprosthoton'ia, Enta'sin tet'anus anti'cus, Tetanus anticus, from ἐμπροσθεν, 'forwards,' and τενω, 'I stretch, 'I extend.' A variety of tetanus, in which the body is drawn forwards by the permanent contraction of the muscles, EMPSYCHOSIS, from ἐψυχωω, (em, and ψυχη, 'life,') 'I animate, 'I vivify.' A word formerly used for the act of animating. The union of the soul with the body.

EMPTOE, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTOICA PASSIO, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYISIS, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYSMA, Sputum.

EMPYE, Empyema.

EMPYEMA, Empy'e'sis, Em'pyz, from ἐμ, 'in,' and πυν, 'pus.' Aposte'ma empye'ma. A collection of blood or pus, and, conventionally, of other fluid, in some cavity of the body, and particularly in that of the pleura. Empyema is one of the terminations of inflammation of the pleura, and is called also, Pyothorax verus, Pleurorrhœia purulenta, Diapye'ma, Epye'ma, Epye'sis, Empy'e'sis seu Pyo'sis pec'toris, Hydrothorax purulentus, Dyspnc'ia pyothorac'ica, Pneumonia suppurato'ria, Absces'sus pec'toris seu Thora'cis, Pleuraposte'ma, Pleuroppe'sis, (F.) Empyëme, Pnypleurite.

The operation for empyema properly means the making of an opening into the thorax for the purpose of giving issue to the matter collected in the cavity of the pleura, although it has been used for the operation required for the evacuation of any fluid from the chest, or synonymously with Paracentesis thoracis.

EMPYE'SIS; same etymon. Suppuration. An eruption of phlegmonous pimples, gradually filling with a purulent fluid, and terminating in thick scabs, frequently leaving pits or scabs. Pus'tulous Ecan'them. A genus in the order Ex-anthematica, class Hæmatica of Good. See Empyema.

EMPYESIS OCVLI, Hypopyon—e. Pectoris, Empyema—e. Variola, Variola.

EMPYMELIUM POLYSARCIA, Polysarcia adiposa.

EMPYOCE'LE, from εμ, 'in,' πυν, 'pus,' and κηλη, 'tumour,' 'hernia.' A tumour, formed by an accumulation of pus in the scrotum. Different diseases have been described under this name, such as suppuration of the testicle, empyema of the tunica vaginalis, accumulation of pus in the cavity of a hernial sac, abscesses of different kinds formed in the cellular texture of the scrotum, &c.

EMPYOM'PHALUS, from εμ, 'in,' πυν, 'pus,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' This word has been used to designate a suppurating tumour at the umbilicus; or, at times, umbilical hernia, the sac of which is filled with blood.

EMPYOS, Purulent.

EMPYREU'MA, from εμπυρενω, (εμ, and πυρ, 'fire,') 'I kindle.' The burnt smell and acrid taste, which volatile products—gaseous and liquid—contract, when animal or vegetable substances are decomposed by a strong heat. The cause of this smell is seated in an oil, called empyreumatic, which does not exist in the substance subjected to the operation, but is the result of its decomposition. If the empyreuma occurs when the organic substance is placed in a still with a liquid, it is owing to the solid matter touching the bottom of the vessel to which the fire is applied.

EMPYREUMAT'IC, Empyreumaticus; same etymon. Belonging to empyreuma,—as an empyreumatic odour.

EM'PYROS, Febri'itans. Same etymon. One who has fever.—Hippocrates.

EMS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Celebrated springs on the river Lahn, duchy of Nassau. They are thermal (from 83 to 115° Fahrenheit,) and carbonated salines, containing carbonic acid, bicarbonate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and are much used in gastric and intestinal affections, &c.

EMUL'GENT, Emul'gens, from emulgere, (e, and mulgere, mulsum,) 'to milk out,' 'to draw out.' A name given to the renal artery and vein, because the ancients imagined they milked, as it were, the urine through the kidneys. See Renal.

EMUL'SIFY, (F.) Émulstionner, from emulsio, and fio, 'to become.' To make or form an emulsion.

EMULSIN, see Amygdalin.

EMUL'SIO, Emul'sum, Emul'sion; same etymon. A pharmaceutical preparation, of a milky-white opaque appearance, which is composed of oil, divided and held in suspension in water by means of mucilage. Emulsions have been divided into the true and oily, and into the false or not oily; the latter being composed of resinous substances, balsams, or camphor, rubbed up with dilute alcohol, mucilage, or yolk of egg.

EMULSIO ACA'CIÆ, E. Arab'ica, Gum Ar'abic Emul'sion. (Nucleor. amygd. comm. ʒj, aquæ ʒijss., mucilag. acac. ʒij, sacch. ʒiv.) While beating the decorticated almonds with the sugar and water, add the mucilage.—Ph. E.) Used in the same cases as the next. Under the name Mistu'ra Aca'ciæ, Gum Ar'abic Mixture, the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia has the following. Mucilag. Acaciæ f ʒijj; Amygdal. dulc. ʒj, and ʒij; Sacchar. ʒv; Aquæ Oij, (Imper. meas.) Blanch the almonds; peel them; beat to a smooth pulp first with the sugar, and then with the mucilage; add the water gradually, stirring constantly, and strain through linen or calico.

EMULSIO AMYGDALÆ, E. Simplex, Lac amygdalæ, Amygdala'tum, Mistu'ra amygdolæ, Emul'sio sive Lac Amygdala'rum or Almond Emulsion; Mixture or Milk, (F.) Lait d'amandes. (Amygdal. dulc. ʒss; Acaciæ, in pulv. ʒss; Sacchar. ʒij; Aquæ destillat. f ʒvij.) Macerate the almonds in water, and having removed their external coat, beat them with the gum Arabic and sugar, in a marble mortar, till they are thoroughly mixed; then rub the mixture with the distilled water gradually added, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a diluent and demulcent.

EMULSIO CAM'PHORÆ, E. Camphora'ta, Mistu'ra Camphoræ; Camphor Emulsion. (Camphoræ ʒj, amygd. com. decortic., sacch. dur., aā ʒiv, aquæ ʒvj.—Ph. E.) A convenient form for giving camphor.

EMULSIO GUAIACINA, Mistura guaiaci—e. Le-niens, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO O'LEI AMYGDALA'RUM; Emulsion of Oil of Almonds, (Ol. amygd. ʒj, gum acac. pulv. ʒij, syrup. ʒj, aquæ destill. ʒiv. Mix. A good pectoral or cough mixture.

EMULSIO O'LEI RIC'INI; Castor Oil Emulsion (Ol. ricini ʒss, vitelli ovi q. s., aquæ destillat. ʒi.) An aperient draught.

EMULSIO O'LEI TEREBIN'TINÆ; Emulsion of Oil of Turpentine, (Ol. tereb. rect. ʒij, sacch. alb. ʒss, vitell. ovi j, emuls. amygd. vel aquæ destillat. ʒvj. Mix. In rheumatic and nephritic affections. Dose f ʒiss.

EMULSIO OLEOSA, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO PURGANS CUM JALAP'Æ RESI'NA, Purging Emulsion with Resin of Jalap. (Jalapæ resin. gr. xij. sacch. alb. ʒij. Triturate for some time, and add gradually half the yolk of an egg; continue to triturate, adding by degrees emuls. simpl. ʒv, ag. flor. auraut. ʒij.—Ph. P.)

EMULSIO PURGANS CUM SCAMMO'NIO; Purging Emulsion with Scammony. It is prepared like the preceding, substituting only Scammony for the jalap.

EMULSIO SIMPLEX, E. Amygdalæ.

ÉMULSIONNER, Emulsify.

EMUL'SIVE, Emulsi'vus; same etymon. An epithet given to seeds whence oil may be extracted by expression; such as almonds, apricots, peaches, hemp, rape, melons, gourds; those of the nut kind, and cucurbitaceous and cruciferous plants in general.

EMULSUM, Emulsion.

EMUNCTORIUM, Emunetory—e. Cerebri, Nasus.

EMUNCTORY, Emunctorium, from emungere, (e, and ungere, munctum.) 'to drain off,' 'to cleanse.' Emunctorium, (F.) Emunatoire, Émunatoire. Any organ whose office it is to give issue to matters which ought to be excreted. The ancients believed that some organs were more particularly destined to serve as emunctories of others; the nasal fossæ, for example, they believed to be the emunctories of the brain.

EMUNDANTIA, Detergents.

EMYS PALUS'TRIS, Salt Water Terrapin.

This species of turtle is found exclusively in salt or brackish waters, near the sea shore, along the whole Atlantic coast. It is much prized by the epicure, and is nutritious and tolerably easy of digestion when dressed plain.

EN, see Em.

ENADELPHIA, Emboitement.

ENEMA, Hæmostatica.

ENEMON, Styptic.

ENEPHREMA, from en, 'in,' and αἰσρω, 'I lift up,' 'that which hangs or floats in.' (F.) Enéphrème. The Neph'elè, Nubes, Sublimamentum, Sublimitia, Sublimè, Suspensum, S. Uv'ulæ, Suspensæ, Nube'ula or cloud, which is suspended in the urine as it cools.

ENAMEL, E. of the teeth, (en, and (F.) émail.) Dentium Nitro, Cortex, C. striat'a, Substantia filamentosa of Malpighi, S. Adamantina seu vitreæ, Crusta Dentium adamantina, Adamantina or vitreous substance. (F.) Substance vitrée ou émaillée, Émail des Dents. The substance which covers the coronæ of the teeth. The enamel is of a milky white colour, and sufficiently hard to strike fire with steel. Its surface is very smooth and polished, and it forms a thicker layer towards the part where the teeth come in contact, and becomes thinner towards the cervix. The fibres of the enamel are perpendicular to the surface of the teeth, on the ivory of which they seem, as it were, planted. This gives them a velvety appearance, when examined by the microscope. The enamel has no blood vessels, and is not renewed when removed. It is formed of phosphate of lime, and a very small portion of animal matter. A delicate membrane covers the enamel—cuticle of the enamel, Nasmyth's membrane; but so closely united with it, that it can be demonstrated only by the use of chlorohydric acid.

ENAMEL, CUTICLE OF THE, see Enamel.

ENANTHE'MA, same etymon as the next. A name recently given to certain eruptions of the mucous membrane, as exanthema is to certain eruptions of the skin.

ENANTHE'SIS, from en, 'in,' and ανθω, 'I flourish.' Rash exanthem. Eruption of red, level or nearly level, patches, variously figured, irregularly diffused, often confluent, and terminating in cuticular exfoliations. A genus in the order Exanthematica, class Hæmatica, of Cullen, including scarlet fever, measles, &c.

ENANTHESIS ROSALIA, Scarlatina—e. Urticaria, Urticaria.

ENANTIOPATHIC, Palliative.

ENARTHROSIS, Inarticulatio, Bull and Socket-joint, from en, 'in,' and αρθρωσις, 'an articulation.' A kind of diarthrodial articulation, in which the head of a bone is received into the cavity of another, and can be moved in all directions. The joint of the os femoris with the os innominatum is one of this character.

ENARTHURUM, from en, 'in,' and αρθρον, 'a joint.' A foreign body in a joint.

ENASMA, Fomites.

ENCANTHIS, from en, 'in,' and καθος, 'the angle of the eye.' A tumour, formed by an increase in size, or a degeneration, of the caruncula lacrymalis. Any morbid growth in the inner angle of the eye.

ENCANTHIS BENIGNA. Simple excrescence of the caruncula. It commonly yields to astringent collyria.

ENCANTHIS FUNGOSA. A condition of the semilunar fold and lacrymal caruncle, in which they are the seat of morbid growths.

ENCANTHIS INFLAMMATORIA. Inflammation with enlargement—swelling—of the semilunar fold and lacrymal caruncle.

ENCANTHIS MALIGNA has often a cancerous character, and requires extirpation before it has attained any considerable size.

ENCARDITIS, Endocarditis.

ENCARPOS, Pregnant.

ENCASING, Emboitement.

ENCATALEPSIS, Catalepsy.

ENCATHIS'MA, Semien'pium. With the ancients Encathis'ma, εγκαθίσταμα, (ev, and καθίζω, 'I seat upon,') meant a vapour-bath taken sitting.

ENCAUMA, from en, 'in,' and καυω, 'I burn.' Epican'nis, Epican'nis, Encan'nis. A tumour produced by a burn. A burn. Also, an ulcer of the transparent cornea, occasioning loss of the humours.—Ætius, Gorræus.

ENCAUSIS, Burn, Encauma, Moxibustion.

ENCAUSSE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Encausse is a village in the department of the Haute-Garonne, which possesses several saline, acidulous springs.

ENCAVURE, Argema.

ENCEINTE, Pregnant.

ENCENS, Juniperus lycii.

ENCENSIER, Rosmarinus.

ENCEPHALALGIA, Cephalalgia—e. Hydro-pica, Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHALIC, Encephalicus, from en, 'in,' and κεφαλή, 'the head.' That which is situate in the head. A name given to several parts which relate to the encephalon, as the encephalic membrane, mucosa, &c.

ENCEPHALITIS, from Encephalon, and itis, denoting inflammation. This term has been used, by some nosologists, synonymously with Cephalitis and Phrenitis. By others, it has been appropriated to inflammation of the brain, in contradistinction to that of the membranes.

ENCEPHALIUM, Cerebellum.

ENCEPHALOCÉLÉ, from encephalon, and κλήη, 'a tumour.' Hernia seu Fungus Cerebri, Croniocele, Hernia of the Brain. This may be a congenital or accidental affection. In the former case, it is dependent upon tardy ossification of the fontanelles or some faulty conformation. In the latter, it is owing to some considerable loss of substance in the parietes of the cranium, produced by fractures, wounds with a cutting instrument, earies, the application of the trephine, &c. In slight congenital encephalocele, gentle pressure may be exerted upon the protruded portion. When the disease is of considerable extent, it is fatal. In accidental encephalocele, similar means must be used for confining the tumour, and preserving it from the action of external bodies.

ENCEPHALOCHYSIS, Hydrocephalus internus—e. Senilis, Apoplexy, serous.

ENCEPHALODYNIA, Cephalalgia.

ENCEPHALOHÉMIE, Cephalæmia.

ENCÉPHALOHÉMIE, Cephalæmia.

ENCEPHALOID, Encephaloides, Ceph'aloid, Cephaloides, Cephaloma, from encephalon, and eidos, 'resemblance.' Laënnec has given the term Enceph'aloid or Cerebriform matter to one of the morbid substances commonly formed by scirrhous or cancerous tumours. It is either encysted, in irregular masses without cysts, or infiltrated into the texture of the diseased organ. This name was given to it in consequence of its resemblance, when fully developed, to the medullary substance of the brain. It is also called Fungus medullaris seu Cancro'sus medullaris seu Cerebralis, Sarco'ma medullarè, Spongoid inflammation, Cancer cerebriforme seu mollis seu medullaris, Carcinoma medullarè seu spongiosum, Carcinoma spongiosum, Struma fungosa, Myeloma, Myelomyces, Myelospogus, Tela accidentalis medullaris, (F.) Matière cérébriforme, Carcinome nou et spongieux, Tumeur encéphaloïde ou spongieuse ou ossivore ou pulpeuse ou fonguïde ou fongueuse ou spléuiforme, Fongus médullaire, Carcinome sauglant, Cancer nou ou encéphaloïde ou médullaire; Milk-like tumour, Medullary sarcoma, Cellular cancer, Fungoid or Hæmatocerebriform disease. See Cancer.

ENCEPHALOID TUMOUR OF THE LUNG, Phthisis cancerosa.

ENCEPHALOLOG'IA, from encephalon, and logos, 'a description.' A description of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOMALACIA, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOMALAXIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALO-MENINGITIS, Meningocephalitis.

ENCEPH'ALON, Enceph'alum, Enceph'alus, Enkeph'alon; from en, 'in,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' That which is situate in the head. This name has generally been given to the brain, cerebellum, and mesocephalon. At times, it includes likewise the medulla spinalis, when it is also called the Cerebro-spinal, and Neural axis. Under the term Cranio-spinal axis or centre of automatic actions, Dr. Carpenter includes the sensory ganglia—the respiratory and stomato-gastric ganglia forming the centre of the medulla oblongata and the spinal ganglia or true spinal cord.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA, (F.) Encéphalopathie, from encephalon, and pathos, 'disease.' A disease of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA LITERATORUM. The condition of brain, supposed to be produced by over-tasking it.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA PUERPERALIS, Mania puerperal—e. Saturnina, see Encéphalopathie saturnine.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE, Encephalopathie—e. Crapuleuse, Delirium tremens.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE SATURNINE, Encephalopathie Saturnina. Encephalic disorder occasioned by the poison of lead.

ENCEPHALOPHY'MATA, Phymatosis seu Strumosis seu Tubercula cerebri; from encephalon, and φυμα, φυματος, 'a tumour.' Tubercles of the brain.

ENCEPHALOPHTHISIS, see Encephalopyosis.

ENCEPHALOPYO'SIS, from encephalon, and πυον, 'pus.' Apyoste'ma seu Abscessus seu Helcosis cerebri. Suppuration of the brain. When accompanied with emaciation and hectic, it is called Encephalopthysis.

ENCEPHALO-RACHIDIAN, Cephalo-spinal.

ENCEPHALORRHAGIA, see Apoplexy.

ENCEPHALOSCOPIA, Craniology.

ENCEPHALOSEPSIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOSIS OF THE LIVER, Hepatoscirrhus.

ENCEPHALOSISMUS, Concussion of the brain.

ENCEPHALOSTRUMOSIS, see Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHALUM, Encephalon.

ENCEPHALUS OPISTHIUS, Cerebellum.

ENCEROSIS, Inceration.

ENCHARAXIS, Scarification.

ENCHATONNEMENT, Chatounement.

ENCHEIRE'SIS, Euchire'sis, Euche'ria, from en, and χειρ, 'the hand.' Galen uses this term as a part of the title to one of his works, which treats of dissection. It means the manual treatment of any subject.

ENCHEIRIA, Encheiresis.

ENCHIFRÈNEMENT, Coryza.

ENCHIRESIS, Encheiresis.

ENCHONDROMA, Chondroma.

ENCHORIONOSUS, Endemic.

ENCHORIOS, Endemic.

ENCHRISTON, Liniment.

ENCHYLOSIS, Extraction.

ENCHYMA, Infusum, Plethora.

ENCHYMO'MA, Enchymosis, from en, and χυμα, 'I pour.' By the ancients, this word was used to designate the sudden effusion of blood into the cutaneous vessels, which arises from joy, anger, or shame; in the last instance constituting blushing. It differs from echymosis in there being, in the latter, extravasation of blood into the areolar texture, and its being produced by an external cause; a contusion, for example.—Hippocrates.

ENCHYSIS, Infusion.

ENCLAVE, Wedged.

ENCLAVEMENT, see Wedged.

ENCLUME, Incus.

ENCLYDASTICOS, iatus fluctuans, from εγκλύδαζομαι, (en, and κλύω, 'I wash.') 'to float in.' Applied to liquids, e. g., to serum, pus, &c., contained in any cavity.

ENCLYSMA, Clyster, Enema.

ENCLY'LIA, from en, 'in,' and κοιλια, 'the belly.' The abdominal viscera. The entrails.

ENCLYALGIA, Tormina—e. Inflammatoria, Encœlitis.

ENCŒLITIS, Encœlitis, Encœlialg'ia inflammationaria, Inflammatio abdominalis; from εγκοιλια, 'the abdominal contents,' and itis, inflammation. Inflammation of any of the abdominal viscera.

ENCOLPIS'MUS, from en, 'in,' and κολπος, 'the vagina.' Injection or introduction of any thing into the vagina.

ENCOLPITIS, Oolprophlegmymenitis; from en, 'in,' κολπος, 'the vagina,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the lining membrane of the vagina.

ENCOPE, Diacoepa, Incision.

ENCRANION, Cerebellum.

ENCRANIS, Cerebellum.

ENCRE, Atramentum.

ENCYESIS, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYMON, Pregnancy.

ENCYMOSIA, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYSIS, Pregnancy.

ENCYST'ED, Cystidè obductus, Succat'us, Succulat'us, Sac'cated, Sac'culated, Pouchel. Enclosed in a kyst or cyst, or pouch; from en, 'in,' and κυστις, 'bladder.' (F.) Enkysté. An epithet given to certain tumours, or solid or fluid collections enclosed in a particular envelope or cyst. They are movable and often elastic to the touch.

ENCYST'IS, Tumor tuicid'us seu cysticus, Emphy'ma encystis. Same etymon. Lup'ia, Glandula Avicennæ, Nodus. An encysted tumour.

ENDADELPHIA, see Emboîtement.

ENDANGIUM; properly Endangi'on or Endangi'um, Membra'na vaso'rum commu'nis, (F.) Tunique commune de Bichat; from ενδον, 'within,' and αγγειον, 'a vessel.' The serous or lining membrane of vessels.

ENDEICTICOS, Indieant.

ENDEIXIOL'OGY, Endeixiolog'ia; from ενδειξις, (εν, and δεικνω, 'I show,') 'indication,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of indications.

ENDEMIA, Indication.

ENDEMIAS, Endemie.

ENDEMIC, Endem'ical, Endem'ia, Regiona'lis morbus, Endem'icus: from εν, 'in,' and δημος, 'the people;' Encho'rios, Enchorion'osus, Ver-naculus seu Endemius mor'bus, Endemy, (F.) Endemie, Maladie régionale. A disease said to be endemic, (F.) Endémique, or to arise from endemic'ity, (F.) endémicité, when it is owing to some peculiarity in a situation or locality. Thus, ague is endemic in marshy countries; goître at the base of lofty mountains, &c. Some authors use the term in the same sense as epidemic. We have no accurate knowledge of the emanations or other circumstances which give occasion to endemic affections. We seem to know that some emanation from marshy lands does produce intermittents: but we are ignorant of the nature of such emanation.

ENDÉMICITÉ, see Endemie.

ENDEMICITY, see Endemie.

ENDEMIOL'OGY, Endemiolog'ia, from 'endemic,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of endemic diseases.

ENDÉMIQUE, Endemie.

ENDEMY, Endemie.

ENDERPIDERMIS, Epithelium.

ENDERMIC, Ender'micus, Endermat'icus, Emplas'tro-endermic, (F.) Endermique, from εν, and δερμα, 'the skin.' An epithet given to the method of treating diseases by placing the therapeutical agent in contact with the skin, especially after the cuticle has been removed; Ender'miam, Endermi'smus, Endermo'sis, Meth'odus ender'mica seu endermat'ica, Dialermta'ria. Morphina, strychnia, &c., are often administered in this way.

ENDERMIS, see Endermie.

ENDERMISMUS, see Endermic.

ENDERMOSIS, see Endermie.

EN'DESIS, from εν, 'in,' and δεω, 'I bind.' A ligature, bandage, connexion. Hippocrates has so termed the ankle-joint.

ENDIVE, Cichorium endivia—e. Wild, Cichorium intybus.

ENDIVIA, Cichorium endivia.

ENDIXIS, Indication.

ENDO, from ενδον, 'within.' A common prefix, as in the following terms:

ENDO-AÔRTIT'IS, from ενδον, 'within,' and aortitis, 'inflammation of the aorta.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the aorta.

ENDO-ARTERITIS, see Arteritis.

ENDOBlast, see Periblast.

ENDOCARDE, Endocardium.

ENDOCARDIAC, Endocard'ial, Endocardi'acus: same etymon as the next. Relating to the endocardium, or to the interior of the heart; as 'endocardiac sound or murmur,'—a sound produced within the cavities of the heart, in contradistinction to exocardiac or exocardial sounds or murmurs, which are induced by conditions of the external surface of the organ.

ENDOCARDITIS, Encarditis, Carditis interna, Inflammatio superficiali interna cordis, Internal Carditis, Inflammation of the internal membrane of the heart, (F.) Endocardite, from endocardium, the lining membrane of the heart, and itis, inflammation. In this disease, the heart's action is visibly increased, and very manifest to the touch; the hand is strongly repelled, and, at moments, is sensible of a trembling vibratory motion. Percussion gives a dull sound over a surface of several inches, owing, according to Bouillaud, to the inflammatory turgescence of the heart, and the engorged state of its cavities. On auscultation, a bruit de soufflet is generally heard, masking one or both sounds of the heart; and the ear is sensible of a metallic ringing with each systole of the ventricle. The pulsations are rapid as well as strong, and, with few exceptions, irregular, unequal and intermittent. The pulse, by the way, does not always indicate the force or number of the heart's contractions.

ENDOCARDIUM, from ενδον, 'within,' and καρδια, 'the heart.' (F.) Endocar'de. The membrane that lines the interior of the heart.

ENDOCHORION, see Chorion.

ENDOCOLITIS, Dysentery.

ENDOCYMIEN, from ενδον, 'within,' and χυμα, 'the product of conception.' A double monster by inclusion—Isidore G. St. Hilaire. See Emboîtement.

ENDODONTIT'IS, (F.) Inflammation de la Pulpe dentaire, Inflammation of the Dental membrane, from ενδον, 'within,' odontos, odontos, 'a tooth,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the lining membrane of a tooth.

ENDO-ENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

ENDOGASTRITIS, Esogastri'tis; from ενδον, 'within,' and gastritis, 'inflammation of the stomach.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the stomach.

ENODOGEN, see Endogenous.

ENODOG'ENOUS; from ενδον, 'within,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' A term first applied to plants—hence called End'ogens—in which the new woody matter is deposited within the old, and towards the centre. In the animal, cells are often formed endogenously, or within the cells, as in the case of the sperm vesicles.

An endog'enus aneurism is one that originates spontaneously from lesions of the inner coat of the arteries.

ENDOLYMPH, Vitrine auditive.

ENDOMETRIT'IS, from ενδον, 'within,' and metritis, 'inflammation of the uterus.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the uterus. When accompanied with a diphtheritic exudation, it is sometimes called Endometritis cronpo'sa.

ENDONARTERITIS, see Arteritis.

ENDOPHLEBITIS, Phlebitis.

ENDOPLAST, see Perioplast.

ENDORMIE, Datura stramonium.

ENDOSIS, Remission.

ENDO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

ENDOSMOSE, Endosmo'sis, Double Imbibit'ion, from ενδον, 'within,' and ωσμος, 'Impulse.' A term first used by Dutrochet, to express the action by which fluids pass from without to within organic membranes. The action of two fluids on each other, when separated by a membrane. The general conditions of the phenomena are:—first, that they should have an affinity for the interposed membrane; and secondly, that they should have an affinity for each other, and be miscible.

At the present day, endosmose is generally used to signify the passage of the more transmissible fluid, whilst exosmose signifies that of the least transmissible. The rapidity with which endosmose is accomplished varies according to the nature of the septum or tissue and of the penetrating body, and to the penetrability of the tissue.

ENDOSMIC, Endosmotic.

ENDOSMOTIC, Endosmot'icus, Endos'mic,

Endos'micus; same etymon. Belonging to endosmose:—as an 'endosmotic current.'

ENDOSTEÏTIS, from ενδον, 'within,' οστεον, 'a bone,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the internal periosteum.

ENDOSTEUM, Medullary membrane.

ENDOUTERITIS, see Metritis.

ENDUIT (F.), from induire, 'to put upon,' 'to put on.' A coat; a fur. This term is often applied to a layer of greater or less thickness which covers the surface of certain organs, and particularly of the tongue and the interior of the mouth. The enduit is designated variously, according to its appearance,—enduit bilieux, jaune, blanc, &c.—a bilious, yellow, white coat or fur, &c. It is at times owing to the evaporation of the watery portions of the secretions; at others, to a morbid condition of the secretions:—generally, to both causes combined. The tongue, in such a condition, is said to be coated or furred; sometimes, loaded.

ENDUIT CHOROÏDIEN, see Choroid.

ENDURCISSEMENT, Induration—e. du Cerveau, Sclerencephalia—e. Rouge, see Hepatization—e. du Cœur, Cardiosclérose—e. du Tissu cellulaire, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ENDYMA VENTRICULORUM, Ependyma ventriculorum.

ENEHEMA, Tinnitus aurium.

NECIA, Synocha—e. Cauma, Synocha—e. Synochus Puerperarum, see Peritonitis—e. Synochus, Synochus.

EN'EMA, εμμα, from εμνω, (εμ, and νω, 'to inject,' Clysmma, Clysmus, Euclyst'ma, Lavamentum, Lo'tio. An Injection, Clyster, (F.) Clystère, Lavement. A well-known form of conveying medicine into the intestinal canal. See Clyster.

ENEMA ALOËS, Clyster of aloes. (Aloës, \mathfrak{z} ij; Potass. carbon. gr. xv; Decoct. Hordei, Oss, (Imp. meas.,) M. Ph. L.) Used in cases of ascariides and amenorrhœa.

ENEMA ANOD'NYMUM, Enema O'pii; An'odyne or Starch and Opium Clyster. (Decoct. amyli f \mathfrak{z} iv; tinct. opii \mathfrak{m} . xxx. M. Ph. L.) Exhibited in cases of severe diarrhœa or dysentery.

ENEMA CATHART'ICUM; Cathartic or Purging Clyster. (Olei. oliv. f \mathfrak{z} ij; sulph. magnes. \mathfrak{z} ij; nucilag. acaciæ f \mathfrak{z} xvi; M. Ph. D.)

ENEMA COLOCYNTH'IDIS, Clyster of Col'ocynth. (Ext. Colocynth \mathfrak{z} ss; Sapon. mollis \mathfrak{z} ij; aquæ, Oj. (Imp. meas.,) M. Ph. L.) An efficient cathartic clyster.

ENEMA COMMUN'E; Common or Domestic Clyster. (Water gruel or molasses and water Oss or Oj; add a little oil or lard, and a spoonful of common salt.) Given as a cathartic enema; and, without the common salt, as an emollient.

ENEMA FËET'IDUM, E. assafœ'tidæ, Fetid Clyster, Clyster of assafetida; Mist'ura asafœ'tidæ pro clysmatè, Clysmma ton'icum et antispasmod'icum seu in'citans et sedans, (F.) Lavement antispasmodique. (The last, with the addition of \mathfrak{z} ij of the tincture of assafetida. Ph. D.) Given as an antispasmodic and anodyne.

ENEMA NICOTI'ANÆ; Tobac'co Clyster. This generally consists of from half a pint to a pint of the Infusum Tabaci. It is employed in cases of strangulated hernia; but occasionally acts as a fatal poison when given in this way. The smoke of tobacco is sometimes thrown up the rectum to produce the same medicinal effects as the infusion.

ENEMA OPII, E. anodynum.

ENEMA TEREBIN'THINÆ; Tur'pentine Clyster. (Ol. tereb. f \mathfrak{z} ij. Decoct. hordei f \mathfrak{z} xix, one yolk of egg. Incorporate the turpentine with the yolk, then add the gruel. Ph. L.) To be administered in cases of ascariides, (oxyures.)

ENEPIDERM'IC, Enepidem'icus, from εν, 'in,' επι, 'upon,' and δερμα, 'the skin.' An epithet given to the method of treating diseases, which consists in the application of medicines; as plasters, blisters, &c., to the skin.

ENEREISIS, Compression.

ENERGIA, Action, Force.

ENERGY, Energ'ia, from ενεργεω, (εν, and εργον, 'action,') 'I act.' Action. Acting power. Also, vigour; as the 'muscular energy;' the 'brain acts with energy.'

ENERVATIO, Aponeurosis, Enervation.

ENERVA'TION, Enerva'tio, from ε, 'out of,' and νερως, 'strength.' The act of weakening—the state of being weakened. See Debility.

ENERVATIONES TENDINEÆ, Inscripti-ones tendinæ musculorum.

ENERVITAS, Inertia.

ENFANCE, Infancy.

ENFANT, Infans—e. à Terme, see Fœtus—e. Légitime, see Legitimate.

ENFANTEMENT, Parturition.

ENFLURE, Swelling, Œdema—e. des Jambes et des cuisses de la femme accouchée, Phlegmatia dolens.

ENFONCEMENT SCAPHOÏDE, Scaphoides fossa.

ENFONCEURE, Arthrodia.

ENFONCURE, Arthrodia.

ENGASTERION, Laboratory.

ENGASTRIMISME, see Engastrimyth.

ENGASTRIMYSME, see Engastrimyth.

ENGAS'TRIMYTH; Engastrim'ythus, Englottogast'or, Gastril'oquus, Ventril'oquus, Gastril'oquist, En'rycles, Eurycl'itus, Enteroman'tis, Gastroman'tis, from εν, 'in,' γαστρη, 'the belly,' and μυθωμαι, 'I discourse.' A Ventril'oquist. (F.) Ventri'loque, Gastro'loque. One who possesses the art of modifying his natural voice, so that it seems to come from a greater or less distance, and from different directions. It was formerly believed that such persons spoke from the belly; hence their name. It is an imitative art, and is called VENTRILOQUISM. (F.) Engastrimisme, Engastrimysme.

ENGISOMA, Engisma.

ENGELURE, Chilblain.

ENGHIEN MONTMORENCY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Engbien-les-Bains. A hydro-sulphurous water, four leagues from Paris, near Montmorency, which is possessed of some celebrity. It contains chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonate of lime, silica, sulphohydrate of lime and magnesia, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid and nitrogen.

ENGISO'MA, Engeis'o'ma, Engizo'ma, from εγγιζω, 'I approximate.' (F.) Embar'rure. A species of fracture of the skull, in which a splinter passes beneath the sound portion of the bone, and compresses the brain.—Galen. Also, a kind of instrument used in fractures of the clavicle.

ENGLISH DISEASE, Rachitis.

ENGLOTTOGASTOR, Engastrimyth.

ENGOMPHOSIS, Gomphosis.

ENGORGE'MENT, from εν, 'in,' and gorge, 'the throat.' An obstruction occurring in the vessels of a part, giving rise to augmentation of volume. Congestion.

ENGORGE'MENT DES MEMBRES ABDOMINAUX À LA SUITE DES COUCHES, Phlegmatia dolens—e. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia—e. Laitéux des membres abdominaux, Phlegmatia dolens.

ENGOUEMENT (F.), Obstruc'tio, Iner'tia, from angere, 'to choke,' Accumulation in a hollow organ, of the matters secreted by it or carried into it. There is said to be Engouement des bronches, when the mucus accumulates in the bronchia; and Engouement des intestins, when the matters which ought to pass through the intestines are detained; as in a case of strangulated hernia.

ENGOUEMENT DES POUMONS, E. of the lungs, in Pathological Anatomy, signifies that state of the lungs, in which a mixture of air and thin fluid escapes from them when cut into.

ENGOURDISSEMENT, Torpor.

ENGRENURE, Suture.

ENHEMATOSIS, Hæmatisis.

ENIXA, Puerpera.

ENIXIO FËTÛS, Parturition.

ENIXUS FËTÛS, Parturition.

ENKEPHALON, Encephalon.

ENKYSTĒ, Encysted.

ENKYSTEMENT, Catatonement.

ENMETRITIS, see Metritis.

ENNEAPHAR'MACOS, from ennea, 'nine,' and pharmakon, 'a medicine.' A medicine, composed of nine simple ingredients. A pessary, so formed.—Galen, Paulus. The Antid'otus Heracli'dis, described by Galen, and some plasters by Aëtius and Celsus, are, likewise, termed Enneapharmaca.—Gorrieus.

ENORMIS, Abnormous.

ENORMITAS CORDIS, Heart, hypertrophy.

ENOR'MON, ενορμων, Hormon, Impetum faciens, from en, 'in,' and ορμα, 'I rouse,' 'excite.' A word used by Hippocrates in the same sense as vital principle is by modern physiologists.

ENOSIS, Insertion.

ENOSTO'SIS, Entosto'sis, from en, 'in,' and οστεον, 'a bone.' A morbid growth of bone inwards—the opposite to exostosis.

ENRAGE, Rabiid.

ENRHUMER, See Cold.

ENROUEMENT, Raucedo.

ENRYTH'MOS, from en, and ρυθμος, 'number.' Having rhythm. An epithet applied to the pulse when its pulsations occur with some degree of order. It is opposed to Aryth'mos, and differs from Eurythmos, which signifies 'regular.'

ENS, A being. Paracelsus meant, by this term, the power exerted by certain beings on our body. He speaks of the Ens Dei, E. Astro'rinn, E. natural'e, E. virt'u'tis, E. morbo'rinn, E. de potent'ibus spirit'ibus, &c. These absurd denominations suggested to some of the ancient chymists a name for certain chymical preparations. The muriate of ammonia and iron was called Ens martis; the muriate of ammonia and copper, Ens veneris; and Ens primum was, with the alchemists, the name of a tincture which they considered possessed of the power of transmuting metals.

ENS MARTIS, Ferrum ammoniatum—e. Veneris, Boyle, Ferrum ammoniatum.

EN'SIFORM, Enniformis, from ensis, 'a sword,' and forma, 'form.' Sword-like.

ENSIFORM APOPHY'SES or SPOR'ESSES are the lesser ale of the sphenoid bone.

ENSIFORM APPEN'DIX or CAR'TILAGE is the xiphoid appendix of the sternum, &c. See Xiphoid.

ENSIFORMIS, Xiphoid.

ENSI-STERNAL, Relating to the ensiform process of the sternum. Béclard gave this name to the last osseous portion of the sternum. He also called it Vos ultimi-sternal. See Ultimosternal.

ENSOMATOSIS, Incorporation.

ENSTALAX'IS, Instillation.

EN'STROPHE, from en, 'in,' and στροφω, 'I turn.' Inversion of a part, as of the eyelids.

ENTABLEMENT, Depression.

ENTAILLE (F.), from en, 'in,' and tailler, 'to cut.' Excis'io, E'c'corp'e, E'c'tom'e. A deep wound made by a sharp instrument obliquely. Entailles and Taillades are, also, used to designate deep scarifications, made for the purpose of producing a speedy dérgorgement of any tumefied part; such, for example, as are made in the tongue in certain cases of glossitis.

ENTAMURE (F.). A slight incision or laceration.

ENTANTHEMA, Eisanthema.

ENTASIS, Tonic spasm.

ENTAT'ICUS, Intensi'vus, from εντεινω, 'I make tense.' A medicine which excites the venereal appetite.

ENTELIPATHIA, Nymphomania.

ENTELMINTHA, Worms.

ENTENDEMENT, Intellect.

ENTERADELPHIA, see Emboîtement.

ENTERAD'ENES, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and αδην, 'a gland.' The mucous glands of the intestines. See Peyeri glandulae.

ENTERADENOGR'APHY, Enteradenogra'phia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αδην, 'gland,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the intestinal glands.

ENTERADENOL'OGY, Enteradenolog'ia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αδην, 'gland,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' That part of anatomy which treats of the intestinal glands.

ENTERAËRECTASIA, Tympanites.

ENTERAL'GIA, Enterody'nia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the intestines. Colic.

ENTERALGIA ACUTA, Enteritis—e. Inflammatoria, Enteritis—e. Saturnina, Colica metallica.

ENTERANGEMPHIRAXIS, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTERANGIEMPHRAX'IS, Enterangiemphrax'is, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αγγω, 'I strangle,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the vessels of the intestines.

ENTERATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia Intestino'rinn, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and atroph'ia, 'want of nutrition.' Atrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERA'UË, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the muscular coat of the intestines.—Fuchs.

ENTERECHE'MA, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ηχη.ηχω.ηχημα, 'sound.' Son'itus intestinalis. The sound of the movement of the intestines, heard by the stethoscope.

ENTERECTASIS, Dilata'tio Intestino'rinn, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the intestines, as in tympanites.

ENTERELCO'SIS, Enterhelco'sis, Enterohelco'sis, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of intestines—Ulcera'tio intestinal'is, Ulcera intestinal'ia.

ENTERELESIA, Hens.

ENTERELOSIS, Hens.

ENTEREMPHRAX'IS, Infarc'tus Intestino'rinn, Incarcerata'tio intestinal'is inter'na, (F.) Étranglement des Intestins, É. Intestinale, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and εμφραξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction of the Intestines from accumulation of feces or otherwise. Also, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTEREN'CHYTA, Enteren'chytes, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' εν, and χωω, 'I pour.' Any surgical instrument for administering injections.—Sculctetus.

ENTEREPILOCELE, Enterœpiplocele.

ENTEREPILOMPHALOCÉLĒ, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' ομφαλος, 'navel,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Hernia of the umbilicus, with protrusion of the omentum and intestine.

ENTERHELICOSIS, Enterelcosis—e. Nervosa, Typhus (abdominal.)

ENTERHYPERTROPHIA, Hypertroph'ia intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and hypertroph'ia, 'excessive nutrition.' Hypertrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERIC, Intestinal.

ENTERICA, from εντερον, 'an intestine.' Diseases affecting the alimentary canal. Order I., Class I. (Coliaca), of Good. Also, medicines affecting the alimentary canal.

ENTERICUS, Intestinal.

ENTÉRIQUE, Intestinal.

ENTÉRITE FOLLICULEUSE, see Typhus—e. Typhobéhénique, Typhoid fever.

ENTERITIS, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the intestines. Empres'ma Enteritis, Intestino'rum inflammatio. Reo-colitis, Chor'dap'sis, Canma Enteritis, Enterophlog'ia, Enterophlogo'sis, Colica acuta seu inflammato'ria, U'eus inflammato'rius, Enteral'gia acuta seu Inflammato'ria, Feb'ris intestino'rum seu ili'aca inflammato'ria, Enterop'ysia. (F.) Entérite, Inflammation des Intestins. The essential symptoms of this disease are:—violent abdominal pain, increased on pressure; with vomiting and inflammatory fever. Enteritis may affect both the peritoneal and the mucous coat of the intestines; and, in violent cases, all the coats may be implicated. The structure of the mucous and peritoneal coats is different; so are their functions in health and disease. The inflammation of the serous coat, Sero-enteritis, resembles that of the cellular membrane; the inflammation of the mucous coat, that of the skin. The former is usually, therefore, of a more active character. Inflammation of the mucous coat, Eso-enteritis, Endo-enteritis, Muco-enteritis, Mucous Enteritis, Phlegmymenitis enterica, is generally attended with diarrhœa, and its pathology is identical with that of dysentery. Inflammation of the peritoneal coat is, on the other hand, generally attended with constipation.

Enteritis of the peritoneal coat, for such usually is the meaning of the word in the abstract, requires the most active treatment. Copious bleeding, followed up by a large dose of opium—and, if the symptoms be not decidedly ameliorated, repeating the bleeding and opium—warm fomentations, and blisters, are the chief agents to be relied upon. Purgatives ought not to be exhibited until the inflammation and spasm are abated by the use of the bleeding and opium. When the physician is called early, this plan will usually succeed. Sometimes, Enteritis passes into a chronic state, requiring much careful management. Broussais considered inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach and intestines as the proximate cause of the phenomena of fever.

ENTERITIS ARTHRITICA. Cœliagra—e. Colica, Colitis—e. Epiploitis, Epiploitis—e. Follicular, Typhoid fever—e. Folliculosa, see Typhoid—e. Mesenterica, Mesenteritis—e. Mucous, see Enteritis—e. Pustulosa, Dothineritis.

ENTERO, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' in compound words signifies intestine, as in the following:—

ENTEROERO'SIS, Enterorrhex'is, Perford'tio Intestino'rum, (F.) Perforation des Intestins, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.' Perforation of the intestines.

ENTERO'ACE, Dysente'ria pu'trida seu typho'des seu scorbu'tica seu maligna, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and κακος, 'evil.' Adynamic dysentery, accompanied by phenomena indicating a pseudo-membranous and gangrenous state of the lining membrane of the large intestine.

ENTEROCE'LE, Hernia intestinal'is, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and κληη, 'a hernia,' 'tumour.' Abdominal hernia, which contains only a portion of intestine, is so called.

ENTERO-CEPHALOPYRA INFANTUM, Hydrocephalus Internus.

ENTEROCÆ'LICUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen.' Relating to the cavity of the abdomen.

EN'TERO-COL'ITIS, (F.) Entéro-colite, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and colitis, 'inflammation of the colon.' Inflammation of the small intestine and colon.

ENTEROCYSTOCE'LE, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' κυστις, 'a bladder,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia formed by the bladder and a portion of intestine.

ENTERODUR'SIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and δουρασις, 'skinning.' Excoriation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERODOTHIENIA, Dothineritis.

ENTERODYNIA, Enteralgia.

ENTERO-EPIPLOCE'LE, Enteropiploce'le, Hernia intestinal'is omental'is, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Hernia, formed by intestine and omentum.

ENTERO-EPIPLOM'PHALUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, containing intestine and omentum. Almost all umbilical herniæ are of this kind.

ENTEROGRAPHY, Enterogra'phia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and γραφηη, 'description.' The part of anatomy which describes the intestines.

ENTERO-HÆMORRHAGIA, Hæmatochezia.

ENTEROHELICOSIS, Enterelcosis.

ENTERO-HYDROCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Intestinal hernia complicated with hydrocele.

ENTERO-HYDROM'PHALUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, in which the sac contains, along with a portion of intestine, a quantity of serum.

ENTERO-ISCHIOCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' ισχιον, 'ischium,' and κληηη, 'tumour.' Ischiatic hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROLITHI'ASIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and λιθιασις, 'the formation of stone.' The formation of concretions in the intestines.

ENTEROLITHUS, Calculi of the stomach and intestines—e. Bezoardus, Bezoar—e. Scybalum, Scybala.

ENTEROL'OGY, Enterolog'ia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the intestines.

ENTEROMALA'CIA, Enteromalac'is, (F.) Ramollissement de l'Intestin, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and μαλασσω, 'I soften.' Softening of the mucous or other coats of the intestine.

ENTEROMALAXIS, Enteromalacia.

ENTEROMANTIS, Engastrimytha.

ENTERO-MEROCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' μηρος, 'the thigh,' and κληηη, 'tumour.' Crural hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTERO-MESENTER'IC, Entero-mesenter'icus, (F.) Entéro-mésentérique. Relating to the intestine and mesentery.

ENTERO-MESENTER'ICA FEBRIS. MM. Petit and Serres have given this name to the typhoid form of adynamic fever, in which the intestines are ulcerated, with enlargement of the corresponding mesenteric glands. See Typhus.

ENTÉRO-MÉSÉNTÉRITE, Tabes mesenterica—e. Mésentérite typhoïde, see Typhus.

ENTEROMORPHIA COMPRES'SA. One of the algæ, used by the Sandwich Islanders as an esculent.

ENTEROMPHALOCELE, Enteromphalus.

ENTEROMPHALUS, Enteromphaloc'elē, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROMYCODORITIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' μυκος, 'slime,' δωρα, 'skin,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERON, Intestine.

ENTEROPARALYSIS, Enterople'gia, Paral'ysis intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' παρ'αλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the intestines.

ENTEROPARISAGOGE, Intususceptio.

ENTEROPATHIA, Enterop'athy, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and παθος, 'disease.' Disease of the intestines in general.

ENTEROPATHIA CANCEROSA, Enteroscir'rhus, Enteropate'osis scirrho'sa seu organ'ica, Enteroscirco'mia, ladura'tio seu Scirrhus seu Cancer seu Carcino'ma Intestino'rum, (F.) Cancer des Intestins. Cancer of the intestines.

ENTEROPERIS'TOLE, Enterosphig'ma, Hernia incarcerata, Incarceratio intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and περιστελλω, 'I contract.' Constriction or obstruction of the intestines, from a cause which acts either within the abdomen, or without it, as in strangulated hernia.

ENTEROPHLOGIA, Enteritis.

ENTEROPHLOGOSIS, Enteritis.

ENTEROPHTHISIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and φθισις, 'consumption.' Consumption of the bowels. Consumption owing to suppuration in the intestines.

ENTEROPHYMATA, Tubercula intestinorum.

ENTEROPLASTY, Enteroplas'ticē, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' A plastic operation for the restoration of an intestine.

ENTEROPLÉGIA, Enteroparalysis.

ENTEROPYRA, Enteritis. Also, entero-mesenteric fever, Entéropyrie.—Alibert.

ENTEROPYRA ASIATICA, Cholera—e. Biliosa, Fever, bilious.

ENTERORRHAGIA, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ραγη, 'violent rupture.' Hemorrhage, or excessive discharge, from the bowels.

ENTERORRHAGIA SIMPLEX, Hæmatochezia.

ENTERORRHAPHIA, Enteror'rhap'hē, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ραφη, 'a suture.' Suture of the intestines, for the relief of injuries done to them.

ENTERORRHEUMA, Rhēnmatism'us Intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism.' Rheumatism of the intestines.

ENTERORRHEXIS, Enterobrosis.

ENTERORRHŒA, Diarrhœa, Mælena.

ENTEROSARCOCELE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Intestinal hernia, complicated with fleshy excrecence, or rather sarcocele.

ENTEROSARCOMIA, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSCHEOCELE, Enteroschoce'lē, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' οσχον, 'the serotum,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Serotal hernia consisting of intestine.

ENTEROSCIRRHUS, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSES, from εντερον, 'an intestine.' A class of diseases, comprehending all those that are seated in the intestines.—Alibert.

ENTEROSPHIGMA, Enteroperistole.

ENTEROSTENOSIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and στενωσις, 'stricture.' Stricture or constriction of the intestines. See Ileus.

ENTEROSTENOSIS VOLVULUS, Ileus—e. Organica, Enteropathia cancerosa—e. Scirrhus, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTÉROTOME, Enterot'omia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' A name given by J. Cloquet to an instrument for promptly opening the intestinal canal through its whole extent. It consists of a pair of scissors, one blade of which is much longer than the other, and rounded at its extremity. This is passed into the intestine.

ENTÉROTOMIA, Enterot'omy, same etymon. In anatomy, it signifies dissection of the intestines. In surgery, it means an operation, little used, which consists in opening the intestines, in order to evacuate the fecal matters accumulated in it; for example, in certain cases of hernia, accompanied with contraction of the intestinal canal; in operations for an artificial anus, performed on the new-born, where the rectum is imperforate or not existing, &c.

ENTÉROTOMY, Enterotomia.

ENTEROTYPHUS, see Typhus.

ENTEROZOA, Worms.

ENTERYDROCELE, Enterohydroce'lē, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Intestinal hernia with hydrocele.

ENTHELMINTHES, Worms.

ENTHEOMANIA, Demonomania.

ENTHLASIS, Enphl'asis, Illis'io, from εν, 'in,' and θλαω, 'I break.' A fracture of the cranium, with comminution, in which the bone is depressed, or has lost its level.

ENTHLASIS CRANII, Effractura Cranii.

ENTITÉ, Entity.

ENTITY, En'titas, (F.) Entité; from eus, entis, 'a being.' The being or essence of anything. It has been used somewhat vaguely, in modern French medicine more especially, to signify apparently a general or essential disease, the nature and seat of which cannot be determined.—Nysten.

ENTOCELE, Ectopia.

ENTOCELE LENTIS. Dislocation of the crystalline into the anterior chamber of the eye.

ENTOGONYAN'CON, Genu varum, Culf knee, X leg, from εντος, 'within,' γονυ, 'the knee,' and αγκων, 'a bend.' Bending of the knees inwards. The state of being knock-kneed, or in-kneed. (Prov.) Κναρ-κνεδ, (Sc.) Nule-kneed.

ENTOHYALOID MUSCÆ, see Metamorphopsia.

ENTONIA, Tension, Tonic spasm.

ENTONIC, Enton'icus, from εν, denoting excess, and τονος, 'tone.' Having great tension or exaggerated action.

ENTONNOIR, Calix, Infundibulum—e. du Ventricule Moyen du Cerveau, Infundibulum of the brain.

ENTOPARASITES, Worms.

ENTOPHTHALMIA, from εντος, 'within,' and οφθαλμια, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia affecting the interior of the eye.

ENTOPHYTE, Entoph'yton, (pl. Entoph'ytta.) from εντος, 'within,' and φυτον, 'a vegetable.' A vegetable parasite, and especially one growing in the interior of the body. The following are the chief entophytes:—

- Alga* of the month.
- Achorion Schöulcini*.... in Porrigo favosa.
- Achorion Lebertii*..... in Porrigo scutulata.
- Microporon Audouini*. in Porrigo decalvans.
- Mycoderm*..... of Plica Polonica.
- " of Mentagra.
- " of Muguet.
- " of ulcerated and mucous surfaces.
- Sarcina ventriculi*..... of the stomach.
- Torula* " "

ENTOPHYTIC, Entoph'yticus, same etymon. Of or belonging to an entophyte, —as 'an entophytic growth.'

ENTOPTERYGOID, see Pterygoid.

ENTOPTIC, Entopticus, from εντος, 'within,' and οφθς, 'vision.' Relating or appertaining to the vision of objects within the organ of sight, — as of the bloodvessels of the retina.

ENTORSE, Sprain.

ENTOSTHETHIDIA, Entrails.

ENTOSTHIA, Entrails.

ENTOSTOSIS, Enostosis.

ENTOTORRHŒA, Otirrhœa.

ENTOTOZÆNA, Ozæna.

ENTOXICISMUS, Poisoning.

ENTOXISMUS, Poisoning.

ENTOZOA, (sing. Entozoon,) Worms.

ENTOZOAIRES, Worms.

ENTOZOARIA, Worms.

ENTOZOOGENESIS, Helminthiasis.

ENTOZON FOLLICULORUM, Acarus Folliculorum.

ENTRAILLES, Entrails.

ENTRAILS, Splanchna, Enca'lia, Vis'cera, Entosthid'ia, Entos'thia, Entosthethid'ia, Intera'nea, from enteralia, a word of bad Latin, coming from εντερον, 'intestine.' It is used for the viscera enclosed in the splanchnic cavities, and especially for those in the abdomen; Bowels, Guts, (F.) Entrailles, Viscères. Ecta has had this latter signification, but it was most frequently used by the ancients, as by Pliny, for the thoracic viscera.

ENTREFESSON, Chafing.

ENTRICHOMA, from εν, 'in,' and τριχωμα, (τριξ, τριχος), 'hair.' The tarsal cartilage, and the edge of the eyelids, in which the cilia are implanted.

ENTROPION, Entropium, from εν, 'in,' and τροπω, 'I turn.' Inver'sio palpebrarum, Capilli'ium, Trich'iasis, Introsusceptio seu Blepharoptio'sis entropium, Blepharopto'sis, Tri'chia, Trich'o'sis. A name given to the inversion or turning inwards of the eyelids, so that the eye-lashes are directed towards the globe of the eye; irritate and inflame it, and give rise to the affection called Trich'iasis.

The contact of the hair with the surface of the eye occasions considerable irritation of the conjunctiva, which is soon followed by chemosis, ulceration of the eye, and other symptoms, such as fever, watchfulness, &c.

If the disease be entropion, as above defined, that is, dependent upon the inversion of the eyelids, it must be remedied, — either by dispersing the œdema or swelling of the eyelids, or by cutting out a portion of the skin. When the disease is dependent on a vicious direction of the cilia, they must be plucked out and the bulbs be cauterized.

ENTROPIUM, Entropion.

ENTYPOSIS, see Glene.

ENUCLEATION, Enuclea'tio, from enucleare, enucleatum, (e, and nucleus), 'to take out a kernel.' This term has been proposed for the operation of removing tumours, &c., without cutting into them. — Percy.

The word is used in Pharmacy for the operation of shelling or removing the kernels of any nut.

ENULA CAMPANA, Inula Helenium.

ENU'LON, from εν, 'in,' and ουλον, 'the gum.' The inner part of the gums. The external part was called ουλον, and that between the teeth αρμος. — Pollux.

ENURE'SIS, from ενουρωω, (εν, and ουρωω), 'I void the urine in bed.' Paru'ria incontinen's, Incontinen'tia nri'næ, Excretio Urinæ involuntaria seu inopportuna, Mictio involuntaria, Uraer'alia, Urorrhœ'a, Perirrhœ'a, Strangu'ria, (Galen,) Anischu'ria, Hyperure'sis, Diam'nes, Involuntary discharge of urine, Incontinence of urine. This affection is most common in advanced life. It may depend on too great irritability of the bladder, or on distension, or injury of the fibres about its neck, paralysis of the organ, Cysto-paraly'sis, Cysto-ple'gia, the presence of an irregularly shaped calculus impacted in the urethra near its commencement; rupture of the bladder and urethra; renal disease; or on pressure exerted on the bladder by the distended womb or by a tumour. It often occurs after difficult labour, but generally yields, in the course of a week or ten days; the catheter being introduced twice a day in the mean time.

The treatment must of course vary according to the cause; and when the affection on which it is dependent cannot be removed, the discharge of urine may be prevented by exerting a degree of compression on the urethra, by means of appropriate instruments; or a urinal may be employed to receive the urine as it passes off.

ENVIE, Hangnail, Malacia, Nævus — e. de Vomir, Nausea.

ENYPNION, Somnium.

ENYSTRON, Abomasus.

ENZOÏTIA, Enzooty.

ENZOÏTY, Enzoöi'ia, (F.) Enzoöitic, from εν, 'in,' and ζωον, 'animal.' An endemic disease attacking animals.

EP, EPH, EPI, επ, εφ, επι, 'upon, above;' in composition, generally means, 'augmentation, addition, increase, reciprocal action, repetition.' Hence:

EPACMAS'TICOS, from επι, and ακραζω, 'I increase.' An epithet applied to fevers, Febres epacmas'ticæ, whose symptoms go on augmenting in violence, from the commencement to the termination. Such fevers are, also, called Epanadidontes.

EPAGOGIUM, Phimosi, Prepuce.

EPANADIPLOSIS, Anadiplosis.

EPANALEPSIS, Anadiplosis.

EPANAS'TASIS, from επιανστημι, 'to cause to rise up.' Pustule. The formation of a tumour. The breaking out of an eruption — Eruptio exanthematis. A pustule.

EPANASTEMA, Exanthem, swelling.

EPANCHEMENT, Effusion

EPANESIS, Remission.

EPANETUS, Remittent — e. Hectica, Hectic fever — e. Malignus flavus, Fever, yellow — e. Mitis, Remittent fever.

EPANORTHOSIS, Restauratio.

EPANTHEMA, Exanthem.

EPANTHESMA, Exanthem.

EPAPHÆRESIS, from επαφαιρωω, (επι, απωω, and αιρωω, 'I take,' 'I take away.' Repetit'ia sublat'io seu evacuatio. A repeated abstraction or evacuation. It was formerly used synonymously with repeated bloodletting; Phlebotomia iterata. — Galen.

EPAPHRISMOS, Despumation.

EPARMA, Tumour.

EPARSIS, Tumour.

EPAULE, Humerus.

EPECRANIS, Cerebellum.

EPEMDYMA, Membrane.

EPEMDYMA VENTRICULORUM, Endyma seu Indumentum ventriculorum, from επι, and ενδυω, (εν, and δυω), 'I enter;' hence, επενδυμα, 'an upper garment or cloak.' The lining membrane of the ventricles of the brain, formed by a prolongation of the pia mater, and probably also of the arachnoid.

ÉPERON, Hippocampus minor — é. des Arrières, Spur.

ÉPERVIER, Accipiter.

ÉPERVIÈRE DES MURAILLES, Hieracium murorum.

EPHEBE'ON, Ephēbē'um, from επι, and 'ηβη, 'pubes.' The parts of generation: also, the region of the pubes, as well as the hair upon the pubes. It meant, likewise, a part of the ancient gymnasium in which the rhetoricians, philosophers, &c., disputed.

EPHEBEUM, Mons veneris.

EPHE'BIA, Ephēbi'a, Pubertas. Same etymology. The age of puberty.

EPHEBOSYNE, Puberty.

EPHEBOTES, Puberty.

EPHE'BUS, Pubens, Puber, (F.) Pubère, Épèbe. One who has attained the age of puberty.

EPHEDRANA, Nates.

EPHEL'CIS, from επι, and 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.' The crust or scab of an ulcer.

ÉPHELIDE SCORBUTIQUE, Chloasma.

EPHE'LIDES, from επι, and 'ηλιος, 'the sun.' Epichlor'is, Mac'ula solat'ris, Mac'ulæ fusæ seu lenticula'rex, Vitilig'inex, Phaci, Paunus lenticula'ris, Lentic'ula, Lenti'go, Ephelis Lenti'go seu Lentic'ula seu à sole, Nigred'o à sole Spilo'sis ephelis, Estat'es, Ejūla, Freckles, Suabru, (Prov.) Ferntickles, Fantickles, Farntickles, Fernfreckles, Fanfreckles, Fornpeckles, Freckens, Murfles, (F.) Taches de rouxneur, Hâlc. This term includes not only the yellow lentiginex, which appear on persons of a fair skin, and the larger brown patches, which also arise from exposure to the direct rays of the sun, but also those large dusky patches which are very similar in appearance, but occur on other parts of the surface, that are constantly covered. See Chloasma. They do not extend farther than the skin. Many cosmetics have been recommended for their removal. Simple spirituous lotions or weak mineral acids, applied a few times in the day, are as effectual as any other means.

One, affected with freckles, is said to be freckled, (Sc.) Fairtickled, Ferntickled, (Prov.) Furn'tickled, Fun'tickled, Ferufreckled, Fornpeckled, Freckened, Murfled, (F.) Taché de Rouxneur.

EPHELIS, see Ephelides — e. Lentigo, Ephelides — e. à Sole, Ephelides.

EPHELOTES, Leucoma.

EPHEM'ERA, Di'aria, from επι, and 'ημερα, 'a day.' That which continues a day. This epithet is given to diseases, and particularly to fevers, which last only a day. — Febria di'aria seu simplex seu Ephem'era, Ephemero'p'ra, Febri'ula, Ephem'eral, Di'ary or Simple Fever, (F.) Fèvre éphémère. The term prolonged ephem'era is sometimes used for fevers, which cease after two or three days' duration.

EPHEMERA ANGLICA PESTILENS, Sudor anglicus — e. Britannica, Sudor Anglicus — e. Maligna, Sudor Anglicus — e. Mortifera, Plague — e. Pestilentialis, Plague — e. Sudatoria, Sudor Anglicus.

EPHEMERO'PYRA, Ephemera.

EPHEMERUS, Quotidian.

EPHIALTES HYPOCHONDRIACA, Incubus vigilantium — e. Nocturnus, Incubus — e. Vigilantium, Incubus vigilantium.

EPHIDRO'SES, (G.) Ephidrosen. A division of the family Ekzematosen, of Fuchs, comprising morbid varieties of sweating.

EPHIDRO'SIS, from επι, and 'ιδρω, 'I sweat.' Hidro'sis, Idro'sis, Sudat'io, Sweating. Of old, it meant, at times, a slight sweating, sudat'ian'cula, of no value, and of bad augury; at others, a good and critical sweat. It has likewise been used for a copious sweat.

EPHIDROSIS PROF'USA, E. spontanea seu idiopath'ica, Hydropede'sis, Exsudat'io, Exsudat'io, Hyperphidros'is, Hyperhydro'sis, Hydro'rhe'ra, Hydropede'sis, (F.) Flux de Sueur. An excessive sweating. A colliquative sweat. Such copious perspirations are generally owing to debility of the exhalants, and require the use of tonics, especially of the mineral acids, opium, &c.

EPHIDROSIS, Desudatio — e. Cruenta, Sudor cruentus — e. Saccharata, Sudor dulcis.

EPHIPPIMUM, Sella Turcica.

EPH'ODOS, from επι, and 'οδος, 'a way,' 'a road or avenue to a place.' Hippocrates uses this word in three senses: 1. For the vessels or canals, which give passage to the excrements of the body. 2. For a periodical attack or accession of fever; and 3. For the approach of similar or dissimilar things which may be useful or hurtful to the body. — Castelli.

EPH'RATA SPRINGS. These are in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. The water is pure; and facilities are afforded for bathing — warm and cold.

ÉPI, Spica.

EPI'ALOS, Ἐπι'αλος, Quer'cera, Quer'quera. A name given by the ancients to fever, when the hot stage was mingled with irregular chills. Also, the cold stage of fever.

EPIALTES, Incubus.

EPIAMA, Lenitive.

EPIAN, Frambœsia.

EPIBLEMA, Catablema.

EPIBOLE, Incubus.

EPICANTHIS, Canthus.

EPIC'ANTHIS, from επι, and κανθος, 'the angle of the eye.' A defective formation, in which a fold of skin passes from the root of the nose over the inner canthus of the eye.

EPICAR'PIUM, Pericar'pium, from επι, and καρπος, 'the wrist.' An application made to the wrists, or to the region of the pulse, was so called.

EPICAUMA, Encauma.

EPICAUSIS, Eneuma.

EPICERASTICA, Emollients.

EPICHOLOS, Bilius.

EPICHORDIS, Mescetry.

EPICHORION, Decidua.

EPICHORUM, Epidermis.

EPICHRISIS, Inunctio.

EPICHRO'SIS, Spilo'sis, from επι, and χρωμα, 'colour.' Simple discoloration of the surface. — Good. Ephelides.

EPICHRISIS SPILL, see Nævus.

EPICHYSIS, Affusio.

EPICLIDIDES, Cilia, Palpebra (superior.)

EPICØ'MASIS, from επικοιμισμαι, (επι, and κοιμισαι, 'to lie down to rest,' 'to sleep.') De-cubitus ad dormien'dum et Dormit'io. The position of sleeping, as well as sleeping itself.

EPICOLIC, from επι, and κολων, 'the colon.' The epicolic regions, regio'nes epicol'icæ, are those parts of the abdomen which correspond to the colon.

EPICOLLESIS, Agglutination.

EPICON'DYLE, Epicon'dylus, from επι, and κοτύλος, 'a condyle.' A name given, by Chaus-sier, to an eminence at the outer part of the inferior extremity of the os humeri; so called, because it is seated above the condyle. The epicondyle gives attachment to the outer lateral ligament of the elbow joint, and to a very strong tendon to which several of the muscles of the posterior part of the forearm are attached.

EPICONDYLO-CUBITALIS, see Anconeus — e. Radial, Supinator radii brevis — e. Sua-mé-ta-carpien, see Radialis — e. Sua-phn-laungettien commu, Extensor digitorum communis — e. Sua-phn-laungettien du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti.

EPICOPHO'SIS, from επι, and κωφωσις, 'deafness.' Deafness supervening on another disease.

EPICRA'NIUM, from επι, and κρανιον, 'the cranium.' A name given to different parts seated on the cranium. The skin, aponeurosis between the occipital and frontal muscles, and the whole of the scalp, have been so called. Portal includes under this name the occipito-frontalis muscle, pyramidalis nasi, and superior and anterior articular muscles. The pericranium.

EPICRANIUS, Occipito-frontalis.

EPICRA'SIS, Contempera'tio, from επικραννυμι, (επι, and κραννυμι, 'I mix,') 'I temper.' A term used by the humourists for an amelioration of the humours. They called Cure by Epicrasis —per epicrasin, a mode of treatment by imagined alteratives, which they supposed to be possessed of the power of gradually correcting the vitiated humours.

EPICROUSIS, Percussion.

EPICTENIUM, Pubes.

EPICTETI MORBI, Acquired diseases.

EPICYEMA, Superfœtation.

EPICYESIS, Superfœtation.

EPICYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

EPIDEISIS, Deligation.

EPIDEMIC, Epidem'ius, Epidem'icus, (F.) Epidémique. Same etymon as Epidemy. Appertaining to an epidemy. An epidemy.

EPIDEMIC CONSTITUTION, Epidemy—e. Disease, Epidemy—c. Influence, Epidemy.

EPIDEMICITÉ, see Epidemy.

EPIDEMICUS, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIO'GRAPHY, Epidemiograph'ia, from επι, 'upon,' δημος, 'the people,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A history or description of epidemics.

EPIDEMIOL'OGY, Epidemiolog'ia, from epidemy, and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of epidemics.

EPIDEMIQUE, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIUS, Epidemy.

EPI'DEMY, Epidem'ia, Epidem'ia, Morbus publicus seu popul'aris seu epidem'icus seu epidem'ius, Epidem'ic disease, E. influence, E. constitution; from επι, and δημος, 'the people.' (F.) Epidémie. A disease which attacks at the same time a number of individuals, and which is referred to some particular constitutio aeris, or condition of the atmosphere, with which we are utterly ignorant. It differs from endemic, the latter being owing to locality; but it is obvious, that should a particular epidemic constitution of the air — epidemic'ity, (F.) épidémicité — exist along with a favouring endemic condition, these combined influences may act in the causation of several of those serious and fatal complaints, which at times visit a district, and are never afterwards met with, or at least not until after the lapse of a considerable period.

EPIENDRUM VANILLA, see Vanilla.

EPI'DERIS, Epidem'rhis, Epidem'rhion, Hypod'eris, Hypodem'is, Hypodem'rhis, from επι, and δερμα, 'a skin.' This word, with some, means the nymphæ; with others, the clitoris; with others, again, the prepuce of the clitoris.

EPIDERMA, Epidermis.

EPIDERMATIS, Epidermis.

EPIDERMIC, Epidem'icus, Epidem'al, Epidem'al'is, (F.) Épidémique: same etymon as epidermis. Belonging to the epidermis,—as EPIDERMIC CELLS, see Cell, epidermic.

EPIDERMIDON'OSI, Epidermidou'ni, from επίδερμος, 'epidermis,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Diseases of the epidermis.

EPIDERMION, Epidermis.

EPIDERMIS, Epidem'ion, Epidem'omatis, Epidem'ia, Epicho'rium, Sum'mitas cutis, Cutic'ula, C. ex'tima seu extre'ma, Cutis ex'tima seu summa seu ul'tima, Pellis summa, Pellic'ula summa seu supe'rior, Lam'ina prima cutis, Oper'culum cutis, from επι, 'upon,' and δερμα, 'the true skin.' Scarf-skin, Cuticle. (F.) Surpeau, Cuticule. A transparent, dry, thin membrane, devoid of nerves and vessels, which covers all the surface of the body, except the parts that correspond to the nails. It appears to consist of minute scales, placed one above the other. Chaussier considers it to be formed and reproduced by an excretory action of the true skin; to act like a dry varnish, which prevents the immediate contact of bodies with the nervous papillæ, and consequently to deaden tactile impressions, which, without its intervention, might be painful. The Epidem'io, Epidem'ieus, or Epidem'moid (as Bichat called it) System, in general anatomy, comprises three parts. 1. External Epidermis. 2. Epidermis spread over the mucous membranes. 3. The Nails and Hair.

EPIDERMIS LINGUÆ, see Tongue.

EPIDERMOID, Epidem'oides, from epidermis, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling the epidermis.

EPIDERRHION, Epideris.

EPIDERRHIS, Epideris.

EPIDERRHITIS, Nymphitis.

EPIDESIS, see Bandage—e. Hæmostasia, Ligature.

EPIDESMIS, Epidesmus.

EPIDESMUM, Epidesmus.

EPIDES'MUS, Epidem'is, Epidem'mum, Superliga'men, from επι, and δωω, 'I bind.' A fascia, bandage or ligature, by which dressings are secured.—Hippocrates.

EPIDID'YMIS, from επι, 'upon,' and διδυμος, 'a testicle.' Epidid'ymus, Did'ymus, Paras'tata, Testic'ulus accessorius, Caput testis, Corpus varicosum seu variciform'e testis, Supergemina'tis, (F.) Corpus varicieux ou variciform'e. That which is placed upon the testicle. A small, oblong, vermiform, grayish body, lying along the superior margin of the testicle. The Epididymis is a canal formed by the union of all the seminiferous vessels folded several times upon themselves, after having traversed the Corpus Highmorianum. Its lower portion or tail, Cauda seu globus seu caput minor, is curved upwards, and is continuous with the vas deferens; the opposite extremity is called the head, globus seu caput major. The length of this canal, folded as it is upon itself and describing numerous curvatures, is, according to Munro, 32 feet.

EPIDIDYMITIS, Parastatitis — e. Blennorrhagic, Hernia humoralis.

EPID'OSIS, from επι, 'upon,' and δίδωμι, 'to give.' Augmentation, increase. A word applied to the natural increase of the body, or to the increase of a disease.

EPID'ROMĒ, Epidrom'ia, Epiroph'ora, from επίδρωμα, (επι, and δρωμα, 'I run,') 'I run upon.' An afflux or congestion of humours.—Galen.

EPIDROMIA, Epidrome.

EPIFAGUS AMERICANUS, Orobanche Virginiana—e. Virginianus, Orobanche Virginiana.

EPIGÆ'A (properly EPIGE'A) REPENS, (επι, 'upon,' and γη, 'the earth,' from its trailing growth.) Trailing Arbutus, Ground Laurel, Mayflower, called, by the Shakers, Gravelplant. A small, trailing plant, of the Family Ericaceæ, which grows in sandy woods, or in rocky soil, especially in the shade of pines. Its flowers appear in early spring, and exhale a rich, spicy fragrance. The leaves and stems are prepared and used like uva ursi.

EPIGASTRAL'GIA, from epigastrium, and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain at the epigastrium.

EPIGAS'TRIC, Epigas'tricus, Epigas'trius, from επι, 'upon,' and γαστηρ, 'the stomach.' This name has been given to several parts.

EPIGASTRIC ARTERY, Arte'ria epigas'trica, Artere sus-pubice, (Ch.) It arises from the external iliac, on a level with the crural arch; sometimes by a trunk proper to it, at others by one common to it and the Obturator artery. It ascends upwards and inwards, behind the spermatic cord, follows the outer edge of the rectus abdominis muscle, and anastomoses, towards the umbilicus, with the internal mammary. The epigastric artery anastomoses, also, with the obturator, spermatic, lumbar, and intercostal vessels.

EPIGASTRIC REGION, Regio epigastica seu cardiaca seu stomachica seu stomacha'lis, is the superior region of the abdomen, comprised between the false ribs on each side, and extending from the lower surface of the diaphragm to two fingers' breadth above the umbilicus. It is divided into three parts, one middle, the epigastrium,—and two lateral, the hypochondria.

EPIGASTRIC VEIN follows nearly the same course as the artery.

EPIGASTRICUS, Epigastric.

EPIGASTRIUM. Same etymon. The belly; the epigastric region.

EPIGASTRICUS, Epigastric.

EPIGASTROCE'LE, from επι, γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, formed by the stomach; Gastroce'le. This name has been given more especially to hernia, which occurs towards the upper part of the linea alba or in the epigastric region, whether formed or not by the stomach.

EPIGEA, Epigæa.

EPIGENEMA, Epigenesis.

EPIGENESIS, from επι, and γενεσις, 'generation.' A theory of conception, according to which the new being is created entirely anew; and receives at once from each parent the materials necessary for its formation. Also, a new formation.

EPIGENESIS, as well as Epigene'ma, or Epigene'ma, is, also, applied to any symptom occurring during a disease, without changing its nature. An accessory symptom. Epiginou'euos, Superve'nies, has a similar acceptation.

EPIGINOMENOS, see Epigenesis.

EPIGLOTTIC, Epiglotticus: same etymon as Epiglottis. Relating to the epiglottis.

EPIGLOTTIC GLAND, Periglottis, Cavo glandulosa. A collection of small, glandular granula, situate in the adipose, areolar texture at the base of the anterior surface of the epiglottis, in a triangular space, bounded anteriorly by the thyro-hyoid membrane and thyroid cartilage. It pours out an unctuous and mucous fluid, which lubricates the epiglottis, keeps it supple and movable, and prevents the larynx from being irritated by the constant passage of the air, in the act of respiration.

EPIGLOTTIS, from επι, and γλωττις, 'the glottis.' Epiglottic cartilage, Lig'ula, Operculum laryngis, Lingua Ex'igua, Lingula fist'ula, Sublinguam, Superlig'ula. A fibro-cartilage, situate at the upper part of the larynx, behind the base of the tongue. Its form is oval; texture elastic; thickness greater below than above, and greater in the middle than at the sides. By its smaller extremity, which is the lower, it is attached to the thyroid cartilage; its two surfaces are covered by the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx. The special use of the epiglottis would seem to be to cover the glottis accurately at the moment of deglutition, and, thus, to assist in opposing the passage of alimentary substances into the air tubes.

EPIGLOTTITIS, Inflammat'io Epiglottidis, Ang'ina epiglottide'a, (F.) Inflammati' de l'Épiglotte. Inflammation of the epiglottis.

EPIGLOTTUM. An instrument, mentioned by Paracelsus, for raising the eyelids. It resembled the epiglottis in shape.

EPIGLOTTIS, from επι, and γλωττις, 'the buttocks.' The superior region of the nates.—Gorraeus.

EPIGNATHUS, from επι, 'upon,' and γναθος, 'the jaw.' A double monster, in which an incomplete foetus is rooted, with its blood vessels in the palate of one more complete.

EPIGONE, Gonê, Hyproph'ysis, Progen'ies, Proles, Sob'oles, Sub'oles, from επι, and γονη, 'sperm.' Offspring. Progeny. Also, Superfœtation.

EPIGONION, Fœtus.

EPIGONIS, Patella.

EPIGONON, Superfœtation.

EPIGOUNIS, Patella.

EPIGUNIS, Patella.

ÉPILATOIRE, Depilatory.

EPILATORIUM, Depilatory.

EPILEMPISIS, Epilepsy.

EPILENTIA, Epilepsy.

The word is derived from επιλαμβάνω, 'future,' επιληψω, (επι, and λαμβάνω, 'I seize,') 'I seize upon.' It is a disease of the brain, which may either be idiopathic or symptomatic, spontaneous or accidental, and which occurs in paroxysms, with uncertain intervals between. These paroxysms are characterized by loss of consciousness and by convulsive motions of the muscles. Frequently, the fit attacks suddenly; at other times, it is preceded by indisposition, vertigo, and stupor. At times, before the loss of consciousness occurs, a sensation of a cold vapour is felt, hence called aura epilep'tica. This appears to rise in some part of the body, proceeds towards the head; and as soon as it has reached the brain the patient falls down. The ordinary duration of a fit is from 5 to 20 minutes. Sometimes it goes off in a few seconds; at others, it is protracted for hours. In all cases, there is a loss of sensation, sudden falling down, distortion of the eyes and face; countenance of a red, purple or violet colour; grinding of the teeth; foaming at the mouth; convulsions of the limbs; difficult respiration, generally stertorous; with, sometimes, involuntary discharge of feces and urine. After the fit, the patient retains not the least recollection of what has passed, but remains, for some time, affected with head-ach, stupor, and lassitude.

The disease is in the brain, and is generally organic; but it may be functional and symptomatic of irritation in other parts, as in the stomach, bowels, &c. The prognosis, as to ultimate recovery, is unfavourable. It does not, however, frequently destroy life, but is apt to lead to mental imbecility. Dissection has not thrown light on its pathology.

To the attacks of epilepsy which are unaccompanied by convulsions, as is sometimes the case, the French give the name Petit-mal, and Épilepsie Vertige, Cer'eb'ral Epilepsy. Fully formed epilepsy is the Grand-mal of the French, Spinal Epilepsy. When furious mania succeeds to a paroxysm, it is termed Mania epileptica and Epileptic Delirium.

In the treatment, the cause must be sought after, and if possible removed. In the paroxysm, but little can be done, but as the tongue is liable to be injured by the teeth, the jaws may be kept open by putting a cork or piece of wood between them. If the fit has been brought on by indigestible food, the stomach must be cleared. It is between the paroxysms that the great effort must be made. Generally, there is considerable irritability and debility of the nervous system, and hence tonics have been found the best remedies. Of these, perhaps the most powerful, in epilepsy, is the argenti nitras, given regularly and continued for months, if necessary. Preparations of iron, copper, and zinc, have also been used, and vegetable tonics and antispasmodics in general. Counter irritants, as blisters, moxa, &c., may be employed, if necessary, along with this course.

Unfortunately, in many cases, these means are found insufficient, and all that can be done is to palliate, removing carefully the exciting causes; such as the use of spirituous liquors, strong emotions, violent exercise, &c.; and regulating the diet.

EPILEPSY, CEREBRAL, see Epilepsy—e. Spinal, see Epilepsy.

EPILEPTIC, Epilepticus, Epileptus, Lunaticus, Caducans; same etymon. One affected with epilepsy. Any thing relating to epilepsy; as an epileptic individual; an epileptic symptom. Some authors also speak of epileptic remedies.

EPILEPTOID, Epileptoides; same etymon. Resembling epilepsy—as 'epileptoid symptoms.'

EPILOBIUM ANGSTIFOLIUM, (from επι, λοβου, and ισν, 'a violet on a pod,') Great Willow herb. An indigenous plant, Order, Onagraceæ, which flowers in July. The root is emollient and slightly astringent.

EPILOBIUM COLORATUM, Purple-veined Willow herb, has similar properties.

EPILOBIUM VILLOSUM, a South African plant, is used at the Cape of Good Hope as a domestic remedy for cleansing foul ulcers.

EPIMANES, from επιμαίνομαι, (επι, and μαίνομαι, 'I am in a rage at.') A name given to a maniac when in a paroxysm.

EPIMELETAI, from επιμελεμαι, (επι, and μελω, 'I take care,') 'I take care of.' A name by which the ancient Persians called the curers of wounds, who followed their armies.

EPIMORIOS, 'unequal,' from επι, and μειρω, 'I divide.' An epithet applied to the pulse when unequal.—Galen.

ÉPINARD, Spinacia—é. Sauvage, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

ÉPINE, Spine—é. de Cerf, Rhamnus—é. du Dos, Vertebral column—é. Gutturale, Nasal spine, inferior and posterior—e. Sphénoïdale, Sphenoidal spine—é. Vinette, Oxycantha Galeni.

EPINEMESIS, Dispensation.

EPINEPH'ELOS, Nubilosus. Presenting a cloud. Applied to the urine.—Hippocrates.

ÉPINEUX, Spinous—é. du Dos, grand, Spinalis dorsi major: see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum—é. du Dos, petit, see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum.

ÉPINGLE, Pin.

ÉPINIÈRE, Spinal.

EPINOTION, Scapula.

EPINYCTIDES, from επι, and νυξ, νυκτος, 'the night.' Eruptions which appear on the skin in the night, and disappear in the day. Pus'tula livens et noctibus inquitans.—Pliny.

EPINYCTIS PRURIGINOSA, Urticaria.

ÉPIONE, Decidua.

EPIPAROXYSMUS. A paroxysm superadded to an ordinary paroxysm.

EPIPASTUM, Catapasma.

EPIPE'CHU, επιπεχυ, from επι, and πεχυς, 'the elbow.' The upper part of the elbow. The part above the elbow.—Gorræus.

EPIPEPHYCOS, Conjunctiva.

EPIPHENOMENON, Post appa'rens, Epiphénom'emon; same etymon as the next. Any kind of adventitious symptom which occurs during the progress of an affection; and which is not as intimately connected with the existence of the disease as the symptoms properly so called.

EPIPHA'NIA, from επι, and φαίνω, 'I exhibit.' The external appearance of the body.—Castelli.

EPIPHEGUS VIRGINIANA, Orobanchè Virginiana.

EPIPHENOMENON, Epiphénomemon.

EPIPH'LEBUS, from επι, and φλεψ, φλεβος, 'a vein.' An epithet given to those whose veins are very apparent.—Hippoc., Aretæus.

EPIPHLEGIA, Inflammation.

EPIPHLOGISMA, Erysipelatous inflammation.

● EPIPHLOGOSIS, Hyperphlogosis.

EPIPH'ORA, Dacryno'ma, Lacryma'tio, Delacryma'tio, Ilacryma'tio, Stillicidium lacrymarum, Oculus lacrymans; from επιφερω, (επι, and φερω), 'I carry to.' Weeping. (F.) Larmoiement. The watery eye;—an involuntary and constant flow of tears over the cheek. It is almost always symptomatic of some disease of the lachrymal passages, and occurs when the tears cannot pass into the ductus ad nasum. Occasionally, it is owing to the tears being secreted in too great quantity; as in certain cases of ophthalmia. The treatment must of course be directed to the removal of the cause.

EPIPHORA, Epidrome, Ophthalmia—e. Alvi, Diarrhœa—e. Ptyalismus, Salivation.

EPIPHYMATA, Cutaneous diseases.

EPIPHYSIS, Additamentum, from επι, and φνω, 'I arise.' Any portion of a bone, separated from the body of the bone by a cartilage, which becomes converted into bone by age. The epiphysis of the fœtus becomes the apophysis of the adult.

EPIPHYSIS CRURIS LONGIORIS INCUDIS, Os orbiculare.

EP'IPHYTE, Epiph'yton, (pl. Epiph'ytæ) from επι, and φυρον, 'a plant.' Phyto-parasite. A parasite derived from the vegetable kingdom. Epiphytes are divided by Vogel into, 1. Vegetations in the human fluids, as the tor'ula cerevis'ia in vomited fluids, and fecal evacuations, and the sar'cina ventric'uli. 2. Vegetations on the external skin and its appendages, as in tinca fivosa, mentagra, herpes tonsurans and plica polonica; and, 3. Vegetations on the mucous membrane,—as in the aphthæ of children; in the cicatrices of the mucous membrane after typhus, &c. By some, the term epiphytes is restricted to those vegetable parasites which grow on the surface of the body.

EPIPLAS'MA, from επιπλάσσω, (επι, and πλάσσω, 'I smear,') 'I plaster.' Cataplasma. Galen uses it especially for an application of wheat flour, boiled in hylrelanum, and applied to wounds.

EPIPLÉ'GIA, from επι, and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the upper extremities.

EPIPLERO'SIS, from επι, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.' Excessive repletion; distension.

EPIP'LOCĒ, from επι, and πλεκω, 'I twine.' Coition. Entanglement.

EPIP'LOCĒ INTESTINA'LIS, Conglomeratio intestinalium. Conglomeration of the intestines.

EPIPLOCE'LE, from επιπλοον, and κληη, 'tumour.' Epiplōic her'niū, Zirba'lis hernia, Hernia omentalis, Omental hernia, (F.) Hernie de l'épiploon. Omental hernia is recognised—but at times with difficulty—by a soft, unequal, pasty tumour, in which no gurgling sound is heard on pressing or reducing it. It is less dangerous than hernia of the intestines.

EPIPLO-ENTEROCE'LE, from επιπλοον, εντερον, 'intestine,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Hernia, formed by the epiploon and a portion of intestine. It is more commonly called Enteropiplocele.

EPIPLOENTEROÖSCHOCE'LE, Epiplō-enteroschocele, from επιπλοον, εντερον, 'intestine,' σσχων, 'serotum,' and κληη, 'rupture.' Hernia with omentum and intestine in the serotum.

EPIP'LOIC, Epiplōicns. Relating to the epiploon.

EPIPOIC APPENDAGES, Appendicula pinguedinosæ.

EPIPOIC ARTERIES; Arteria Epiplōicæ. The arterial branches, which are distributed to the epiploon, and which are given off by the gastro-epiploicæ.

EPIPLO-ISCHIOCE'LE, from επιπλοον, ισχιον, 'the ischium,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia formed by the epiploon through the ischiatic notch.

EPIPLOÏ'TIS, from επιπλοον, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the omentum; Omentitis, Empresma peritonitis omentalis, Omenti inflammatio, Enteritis epiploïtis, Omentitis. A form of partial peritonitis.

EPIPLOMEROCE'LE, from επιπλοον, μηρος, 'the thigh,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Femoral hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLOMPHALOCELE, Epiplomphalon.

EPIPLOMPHALON, Epiplōm'phalon, Epiplomphaloc'le, Hernia umbilicalis, from επιπλοον, and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLOMPHRASIS, from επιπλοον, and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Induration of the epiploon.

EPIPLOCOMIS'TES, from επιπλοον, and κομιζω, 'I carry.' One who has the omentum morbidly large. Also, one labouring under epiplocele.

EPIP'LOÖN, Epiplōon, from επι, 'above,' and πλω, 'I swim or float.' Omentum, Retē, Reticulum; Derton; Zirbus, Gau'gamē, Gangannu, Operimentum intestinalium, Succus epiploicus, Sage'na, The Caul, (Prov.) Flick, Web. A prolongation of the peritoneum, which floats above a portion of the intestines, and is formed of two membranous layers, with vessels and fatty bands distributed through it. Anatomists have described several epiploons. The uses of the omentum are but little known. The chief one seems to be, to retain the viscera in situ, and to give passage to vessels.

EPIPOON, Colic, Colic Omentum, Omentum colicum, Third Epiploon or Omentum, is a duplicature of the peritoneum, situate along the as-ending portion of the colon, as far as its junction with the transverse portion. It is behind the great epiploon, and fills up the angle formed by the junction of the ascending with the transverse colon. Its two laminae are separated by colic arteries and veins.

EPIPOON, Gastro-Colic, Great Omentum, Omentum gastro-colicum seu majus, Peritonæum duplicatum, Retē majus, Zirbus adipivus, consists of an extensive duplicature, which is free and floating on the folds of the intestines. It is quadrilateral, and longer on the left side than on the right:—its base being fixed, anteriorly, to the great curvature of the stomach; and, posteriorly, to the arch of the colon. It is formed of two laminae, each consisting of two others. In this epiploon a number of vessels is distributed, and there is much fat.

EPIPOON, Gastro-Hepatic, Lesser Omentum, Omentum hepato-gastricum seu minus, Membrana macilentior, is a duplicature of the peritoneum, which extends transversely from the right side of the cardia to the corresponding extremity of the fissure of the liver, and downwards from this fissure to the lesser curvature of the stomach, the pylorus and duodenum. Below it is the foramen or hiatus of Winslow; and between its laminae are lodged the biliary and hepatic vessels. It contains but little fat. If air be blown in at the foramen of Winslow, the cavity or sac of the omentum, Sacculus Peritonæi retroventriculæris, Bursa omentalis, will be rendered perceptible.

EPIPOON, Gastro-Splenic, Gastro-Splenic Omentum, Omentum Gastro-splenicum. A reflection of the peritoneum, which passes between the concave surface of the spleen and the stomach, from the cardiac orifice to near its great curvature, and which lodges the vasa brevia and splenic vessels between its laminae.

EPIPOLOSARCOMPHALOUS, from επιπλοον, σαρξ, 'flesh,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, formed of indurated omentum.

EPIPOSCHOCE'LE, Epiplōschocele, from επιπλοον, σσχων, 'the serotum,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Scrotal hernia, formed by a displacement of the epiploon.

EPIPOUM, Epiploon.

EPIPNOIA, Aflatus.

EPIPOROMA, from επιπρωω, (επι, and πρωω.) 'I harden.' A topaceous concretion which forms in the joints. The callus of fracture.

EPIR'RHOË, Epirrhœa, from επι, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Afflux or congestion of humours.—Hippocrates.

EPIRRHŒA, Epirrhoe.

EPISARCIDIUM, Anasarca.

EPISCHESIS, Retention; from επισχω, 'I restrain.' A suppression of excretions.

EPISCHET'ICUS; same etymon. Sistens, Repr'ivus, Co'hibens. 'Restraining.' An agent that diminishes—secretion, for example.

EPISCHION, Abdomen, Pubes, Pubis os.

EPISCOPALES VALVULÆ, Mitral valves.

EPISEION, Pubis (os), Vulva, Labium Pandendi, Tressoria.

EPISEMA'SIA, from επισημαινω, (επι, and σημα, 'a sign,') 'I afford some sign.' Semiv'sia. It has been used synonymously with sign, and also with the invasion of an attack of fever. See Annotatio.

EPISEOCELE, see Hernia, vulvar.

EPISEÏDE'MA, from επισειον, (modern.) 'the labium pandendi,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Œdema of the labia pandendi.

EPISEIOT'IS, from επισειον, 'the labium pandendi,' and itis, denoting 'inflammation.' Inflammation of the labia pandendi.

EPISION, Episeion.

EPISEION'CUS, Epiophysy'ma, from επισειον,

(modern,) 'the labium pudendi,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumor labio-rum. A swelling or tumour of the labia pudendi.

EPISIOPHYMA, Episioneum.

EPISIORRHAG'IA, from επισσιον, 'the labium pudendi,' and ρρηγη, 'rupture.' Hemorrhage from the labia pudendi.

EPISIORRHAPHY, Episiorrhaph'ia, from επισσιον, 'the labium pudendi,' 'the vulva,' and ραπη, 'suture.' An operation practised in cases of prolapsus uteri, which consists in paring the opposing surfaces of the labia pudendi, bringing them together and uniting them by suture, so as to diminish the outlet of the vulva.

EPISPA'DIA; Hyperspa'dia; same etymon as the next. The condition of an Epispadias.

EPISPA'DIAS, Epispadi'us, Anaspadi'us, Anaspadi'us, Hyperspa'dias, Hyperspa'dias, from επι, 'above,' and σπασω, 'I draw.' The opposite to Hypospadias. One who has a preternatural opening of the urethra at the upper part of the penis.

EPISPAS'TICS, Epispas'tica, Ves'icants, Helic'tica, (F.) Épispastiques; same etymon. An epithet for every medicinal substance which, when applied to the skin, excites pain, heat, and more or less redness, followed by separation of the epidermis, which is raised up by effused serum. Cantharides and mustard are epispastics. See Blister, and Derivative.

EPISPASTICUM, Blister.

ÉPISPASTIQUES, Epispastics.

EPISPASTUM, Cataplasma.

EPISPHÆ'RIA, from επι, and σφαيرا, 'a sphere.' Some physiologists have applied this term to the different convolutions and sinuities presented by the external surface of the brain.

EPISPHAGISMOS, Signature.

EPISPLENITIS, see Splenitis.

EPISTACTIS'CHESIS, from epistaxis, and αχειν, 'to restrain.' Arrest of bleeding from the nose.

EPISTAPHYLINI, see Azygos Muscles.

EPIS'TASIS, Insiden'tia, from επι, and στωω, 'I rest.' A substance which swims at the surface of urine. It is opposed to the hypostasis or sediment. Epistasis has also been employed synonymously with suppression.

EPISTAX'IS, from επι, and σταζω, 'I flow drop by drop.' Hæmorrhag'ia act'iva na'rium, H. narin'ea seu na'rium, Epistax'is junio'rum seu arterio'sa, Hæmorrh'ia, Hæmorrh'ia, Hæmorrh'ia, Hæmorrh'ia, Choanorrhag'ia, Rhinorrhag'ia, Stillicid'ium seu Stilla'tio Sang'uinis e nar'ibus, Hem'orrhage from the pituitary membrane, Bleeding at the nose, Nosebleed, (F.) Hémorrhagie nasale, Saignement du nez, Hémorrhinie. This is one of the most common varieties of hemorrhage; the organization of the Schneiderian membrane being favourable to it, as the blood-vessels are but slightly supported. It does not generally flow from both nostrils, and is very apt to recur. Puberty is the period at which it is most common. Its exciting causes are:—any thing that will induce local congestions, as running, coughing, blowing the nose, &c., provided there be a predisposition to it. A common case of epistaxis requires but little treatment, especially if in a young person. Light diet and a dose or two of the sulphate of magnesia will be sufficient. In more severe attacks, cold and astringent washes of alum, sulphate of zinc, weak sulphuric acid, or creosote, may be used, and the nostrils be plugged anteriorly; but if the bleeding goes on posteriorly, the posterior nares must be plugged likewise, — the patient being kept with the head raised. The flow of blood has been arrested by directing the patient to stand up with his head elevated, compressing the nostril whence the blood flows with the finger, raising the corresponding arm perpendicularly, and holding it in this position for about two minutes. A less vigorous circulation through the carotids appears to result from the increased force required to carry on the circulation through the upper extremities when raised. — Négrier. To prevent the recurrence, strict diet must be inculcated.

EPISTER'NAL, Episterna'lis, from επι, and σπρον, 'the sternum.' An epithet applied to two bones which form part of the sternum, and are situate upon its superior and lateral part. In the young subject, they are attached to the sternum by a synovial membrane, and a fibrous capsule. They have somewhat the appearance of the pisiform bones, but are of a greater size.

According to Professor Owen, the piece of a segment of an articulate animal, which is immediately above the middle inferior piece or sternum.

EPISTHOT'ONOS, from επισθεν, 'forwards,' and τενωω, 'I extend.' A spasm of the muscles, drawing the body forwards. The word emprosthotos is more commonly employed.

EPISTROPHE, Relapse.

EPISTROPHEUS, Axis.

EPISTROPHUS, Axis.

EPISYNAN'CHĒ, (επι, and synanche or cynanche.) Episyng'ina. A Greek word, used by a modern writer for spasm of the pharynx, by which deglutition is prevented, and the solid and liquid food driven back towards the mouth or nasal fosse.

EPISYNTHET'IC, Episyntet'icus, from επισυνθημι, (επι, συν, and τιθημι.) 'to collect, accumulate.' The name of a medical sect, whose object it was to reconcile the principles of the Methodists with those of the Empirics and Dogmatics. Leonides of Alexandria seems to have been one of the first partisans of this sect; of which we know little.

EPIT'ASIS, from επι, and τενειν, 'to extend.' The period of violence of a fever, (Febris intensio.) attack or paroxysm; sometimes it is used in the same sense as epistasis, for 'suppression.'

EPITELIUM, Epithelium.

EPITHE'LIAL, Epithelia'lis; same etymon as epithelium. Appertaining or relating to the epithelium,—as epithelial cells, and scales.

EPITHE'LIAL CANCER, Canceroid of the skin, Epithelio'ma, Carcino'ma epithelio'id'es, is a morbid growth of epithelial cells; forming an epithelial tumour, which, by some, is regarded as carcinoma. See Cancroid.

EPITHELIOMA, Epithelial cancer.

EPITHE'LIUM, Epithe'lium, Epithe'lis, Epithe'lia, Endepiderm'is, from επι, and θηλη, 'a nipple.' The thin layer of epidermis, which covers parts deprived of derma, properly so called,—as the nipple, mucous membranes, lips, &c. Modern histological researches have shown that it exists, in different forms, pavement, cylinder, and vibratile or ciliated epithelium. Tesselated, pavement, scaly, lamel'lar, tubular, or flat'ened epithelium, Epithelium polyed'ricum, and E. lamello'sum, (F.) Épithélium pavimenteux, covers the serous and synovial membranes, the lining of blood-vessels, and the mucous membranes, except where cylinder epithelium exists. It is spread over the mouth, pharynx and œsophagus, conjunctiva, vagina, and entrance of the female urethra. Cylinder, Columnar or Prismatic epithelium, Epithe'lium cylind'ricum, (F.) Épithélium cylindrique is found in the intestinal canal, beyond the cardiac orifice of the stomach; in the larger ducts of the salivary glands; in the ductus communis choledochus, prostate, Cowper's glands, vesiculæ seminales, vas deferens, tubuli uriniferi, and urethra of the male; and lines the urinary passages of the female, from the orifice of the urethra to the beginning of the tubuli uriniferi of the kidneys. In all these situations, it is continuous with tessellated epithelium, which lines the more delicate ducts of the various glands. For the uses of the ciliated epithelium, Epithelium vibraus, see Cilia.

Mr. Bowman has applied the term spheroidal to a variety of epithelium, the cells of which, for the most part, retain their primitive roundness; or, being flattened where they touch, acquire a polyhedral figure. At times, these show a disposition to pass into the columnar, or the tessellated variety; and, hence, this form has been called the transit'ional. The spheroidal epithelium is found in the urinary passages, where it succeeds the columnar epithelium of the urethra at the internal orifice of that canal, and lines the whole of the bladder, ureters and pelves of the kidneys. It is found, also, in the excretory ducts of the mammary, perspiratory, and of many mucous, glands; and a modification of it lines the inmost secreting cavities or commencing ducts of glands generally.

EPITHEM, Epith'ema or Epithe'ma, from επι, and θεμη, 'I put.' This term is applied to every topical application, which cannot be classed either under ointments or plasters. Three sorts of epithems have been usually distinguished, — the liquid, dry, and soft, which comprise fomentations, bags filled with dry substances, and cata-plasms.

EPITHE'ESIS. Same etymon. The rectification of crooked limbs by means of instruments.

EPITHYM'LE, from επι, and θυμος, 'desire.' Morbid desires or longings.

EPITHYMIAMA, Fumigation.

EPITHYMUM, Cuscuta epithymum — e. Officinarum, Cuscuta Europæa.

EPITROCH'LEA, from επι, and τροχλια, 'a pulley.' (F.) Epitrochlée. That which is situate above a pulley. Chaussier gives this name to the unequal, round protuberance situate on the inside of the inferior extremity of the humerus above its articular trochlea. It is the part usually called the inner or lesser condyle of the humerus. From it originate several muscles of the forearm, to which it has given part of their names, according to the system of Chaussier.

ÉPITROCHLO-CARPI-PALMAIRE, Palmaris longus — é. Cubito-carpien, see Cubital muscles — é. Métacarpien, Palmaris magnus — é. Phalanginien commun, Flexor sublimis perforatus — é. Radial, Pronator radii teres.

EPIZO'A, (sing. Epizo'on), (F.) Epizoaires, Ectoparasites, from επι, and ζωον, 'an animal.' Parasitic animals, which infest the surface of the body, or the common integument.

EPIZOÖ'TIA, Epizoöty, (F.) Epizoöte. Same etymon. A disease which reigns amongst animals. It corresponds, in the veterinary art, to epidemy in medicine.

EPIZOÖ'TIC, Epizoöt'icus, same etymon. Relating or appertaining to an epizoöty, — as an 'epizoötic aphtha.'

EP'OCHE, from επι, and εχω, 'to have or to hold.' Doubt, suspension of judgment — Suspensio sententia. Sometimes employed in the same sense as epichesis or suppression.

EPOCHETEUSIS, Derivation.

EPODE, Incantation.

EPO'MIS, Superhumera'lē, from επι, and ωμος, 'the shoulder.' The acromion. The upper part of the shoulder. — Hippocrates, Galen.

EPOMPHALICUM, Empomphalium.

EPOMPHALION, Uterus.

EPOMPHA'LIUM, Empomphal'icum, from επι, and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' A medicine, which, when placed upon the umbilicus, moves the belly. — Paulus of Ægina.

ÉPONGE, Spongia — é. d'Eglantier, Belegar.

ÉPOQUES, Menses.

EPOSTOMA, Exostosis.

EPOSTOSIS, Exostosis.

ÉPREINTE, Tenesmus.

EPSEMA, Decoction.

EPSESIS, Decoction, Elixatio.

EPSOM, MINERAL WATERS OF. Epsom is a town in Surrey, about 15 miles from London. The water is a simple saline; — consisting chiefly of sulphate of magnesia, which has consequently received the name of Epsom salts, though no longer prepared from the Epsom water.

ÉPUISEMENT, Exhaustion.

EPULIS, from επι, and ουλον, 'the gum.' Odon'tia excres'cens, Sarco'ma epul'is, Ulon'eus, Excrescen'tia gingi'væ. (F.) Épuidé, Épulié. An excrescence on the gum, sometimes ending in cancer.

EPULOSIS, Cicatrization.

EPULOTICA, Cicatrization.

ÉPURGE, Euphorbia lathyris.

EQUAL, Æqual'is. An epithet applied particularly to the pulse and to respiration. The pulse and respiration are equal, when the pulsations and inspirations which succeed each other are alike in every respect.

EQUILIB'RIMUM, from æquus, 'equal,' and librare, 'to weigh.' In medicine, this word is sometimes used to designate that state of organs, fluids and forces, which constitutes health.

EQUINA CAUDA, see Cauda Equina.

EQUI'NIA, from equinus, 'belonging to a horse.' Glanders, (F.) Morve. A dangerous contagious disorder, accompanied by a pustular eruption, which arises from inoculation with certain diseased fluids generated in the horse, the ass and the mule. Two forms are met with, — E. mitis, contracted from horses affected with grease, and E. glandulo'sa, a dangerous and commonly fatal disease communicated to man, either in the acute or chronic form, from the glandered horse. The veterinary surgeons make two varieties of the disease in the horse — Glanders, Mal'tia, Mal'ias'mus, Mal'tiē, Mal'is, Malleus; and Farcy glanders, Farcin'o'ma, Farci'men, Mal'lens farcin'us'sus, Morb'us farcin'us'sus, Cachex'ia lymphatic'a farcin'us'sa, (F.) Morve farcin'euse, Farcin'; — the former affecting the pituitary membrane and occasioning a profuse discharge from the nostrils, with pustular eruptions or small tumours, which soon suppurate and ulcerate, being attended by symptoms of malignant fever and by gangrene of various parts: — the latter being the same disease, but appearing in the shape of small tumours about the legs, lips, face, neck, &c. of the horse; sometimes very painful, suppurating and degenerating into foul ulcers. They are often seen together.

The mild cases require little treatment but rest; the more severe generally resist all remedies.

EQUSETUM ARVENSE, &c., see Hippuris vulgaris — e. Minus, Hippuris vulgaris.

EQUITA'TION, Equitatio, Hippe'i'a, Hippa'sia, Hippe'i'sis, from equitare, equitatum, 'to ride on horseback.' Horseback exercise. A kind of exercise, advisable in many diseases, although improper in others — in uterine affections, for instance. It has been much recommended in phthisis pulmonalis. It is less fatiguing than walking, and consequently more available in disease. But to prevent disease, where much exercise is required, the latter is preferable.

EQUIV'OROUS, Equiv'orus, Hippoph'agous, from equus, 'a horse,' and voro, 'I devour.' Feeding or subsisting on horseflesh.

EQUIVOCAL, Equivocus, from æquus, 'equal,' and vox, vocis, 'voice.' Those symptoms are occasionally so denominated which belong to several diseases. Generation is said by some to be 'equivocal,' when it is, or seems to be, spontaneous. See Generation.

EQUUS, Hippus.

ÉRABLE, Acer saccharinum.

ERADICA'TION, Eradica'tio, from e, 'from,' and radix, radicis, 'a root.' The act of rooting out, or completely removing a disease.

ERAD'ICATIVE, Eradic'ans: same etymon. Any thing possessed of the power of completely rooting out a disease.

ÉRAILLEMENT DES PAUPIÈRES, Ectropion.

ERCLE, Bliстер.

EREBINTHUS, Acer arietinum.

ERECTEUR DUPÉNIS, Ischio-cavernosus.

EREC'H'TES HIERACIFOLIA, Sene'cio hieracifol'ius, Fireweed. An indigenous plant, Order Compositæ, which flowers from July to September. It is said to be an acrid tonic, and astringent, and in large doses emetic.

EREC'TILE TISSUE, Tela seu Textus erect'ilis, from erigere, erectum, (e, and rigere), 'to erect,' 'to become erect.' A tissue, whose principal character is, to be susceptible of dilatation, i. e. of turgescence and increase of size. It is formed of a collection of arteries and veins, intermixed with nervous filaments; which form, by their numerous anastomoses, a spongy substance, whose areolæ communicate with each other. Smooth muscular fibres have been detected in it. This tissue exists in the corpora cavernosa of the penis and clitoris, at the lower and inner surface of the vagina, in the spongy part of the urethra, the lips, nipples, iris, &c. Sometimes it is developed accidentally, and constitutes a kind of organic transformation.

EREC'TION, Erec'tio, Arrec'tio; same etymon. The state of a part, in which, from having been soft, it becomes stiff, hard, and swollen by the accumulation of blood in the areolæ of its tissue, as in the case of the penis—Styma, Stysis.

ERECTOR CLITORIDIS, Ischio-cavernosus—e. Penis, Ischio-cavernosus.

EREMACAU'SIS, (F.) Érémacausie, from ερημος, 'waste,' and καυσis, 'combustion.' A term applied by Liebig to the slow combustion, oxidation, or decay of organic matters in the air.

EREMIA, Acinesia.

ÉRÉSIPÈLE, Erysipelas.

ERETHILYTICUM HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanæmic.

ERETHISM, Erethis'mus, Erethis'ia, Irritamentum, Irrita'tio, (F.) Érêthisme, from ερεθίζω, 'I irritate.' Irritation. Augmentation of the vital phenomena in any organ or tissue. Orgasm. Under this name, Mr. Pearson has described a state of the constitution produced by mercury acting on it as a poison. He calls it Mercur'ial Er'ethism or Erethis'mus. It is characterized by great depression of strength; anxiety about the præcordia; irregular action of the heart; frequent sighing; tremors; small, quick, sometimes intermitting pulse; occasional vomiting; pale, contracted countenance, and sense of coldness; but the tongue is seldom furred, nor are the vital and natural functions much disturbed. In this state any sudden exertion may prove fatal.

ERETHISMA, Rubefacient.

ERETHISMUS, Erethism, Irritation—e. Ebriosorum, Delirium tremens—e. Hydrophobia, Hydrophobia—e. Oneirodynia, Incubus, Paroniria—e. Simplex, Fidgets.

ERETHISTICUS, Erethiticus, Rubefacient.

ERETHIT'IC, Erethit'icus, Erethis'tiens. Belonging or relating to erethism—as "erethitic phenomena," or phenomena of irritation.

ÉRÉTISME, Erethism.

EREUGMOS, Eruetation.

EREOXIS, Eruetation, Flatulence.

ERGASMA, Myrrha.

ERGASTERION SPIRITUS, Pulmo.

ERGASTERIUM, Laboratory.

ERGOT, (F.) Ergot, 'a spur.' Er'gota, Seca'lè cornu'tum seu mater'num seu tur'gidum seu temulentum seu lucu'rians seu clava'tum, Clavus secu'li'nis seu secu'lis seu Sili'g'iniis, Spermoe'dia clavus, Mater secu'lis, Calcar, Secu'lis mater, Us'tila'go, Frumen'tum cornu'tum seu cornicula'tum seu lucu'rians seu tur'gidum seu temulentum, Brizoc'eras [?], Melanophy'ma, Spurred or Horned Rye, Spur, Hornseed, Cockspur Rye, Cockspur, (F.) Seigle ergoté ou cornu ou corrompu ou à Éperon ou Ergotisé, Blé cornu, Ergot ou clou ou mère de seigle, Blé avorté ou farouche, Faux seigle. Ergot is generally considered to be the result of a disease in rye, occurring most frequently when a hot summer succeeds a rainy spring. Decandolle, however, regards it as a parasitic fungus, and calls it Scelero'tium clavus; whilst Leveillé esteems it to be a fungus giving a coating to the diseased grain; the medical virtues residing in the coating. This parasitic fungus he calls Sphace'lia seg'etum. More recently, it has been maintained, that it is a diseased state of the grain occasioned by the growth of a fungus not previously detected, to which the names Ergotæ'tia abortans seu abortifa'ciens, Oïdium abortifa'ciens, Ergot-mould, have been given. It is found projecting from among the leaves of the spike or ear, and is a long, crooked excrescence, resembling the spur of a cock, pointed at its extremities, of a dark brown colour externally, and white within.

This substance has been long used in Germany to act on the uterus, as its names Mutterkorn and Gebärpulver ('womb-grain,' puleis parturiens, pulvis ad partum) testify. Upwards of forty years ago, it was recommended in this country, by Dr. John Stearns, of Saratoga County, New York, for accelerating parturition; and since that period, numerous testimonials have been offered in its favour. Half a drachm of the powder is gently boiled in half a pint of water, and one-third part given every 20 minutes, until proper pains begin. Some recommend the clear water infusion; others advise the powder; others the oil; and others the wine. It is obvious that, in many cases, the uterine efforts would return in the period which would necessarily elapse in the administration of ergot; so that several of the cases, at least, of reputed efficacy, may not have been dependent upon the assigned agent. Ergot also possesses, it is affirmed, narcotic virtues, which have rendered it useful in hemorrhagic and other affections of excitement.

Bread, made of spurred rye, has been attended with the effects described under ERGOTISM.

ERGOT, Hippocampus minor—e. de Seigle, Ergot.

ERGOT-MOULD, see Ergot.

ERGOTA, Ergot.

ERGOTÆTIA ABORTANS, see Ergot—e. Abortificans, see Ergot.

ER'GOTIN, Extrac'tum Er'gotæ, Extract of Ergot, (F.) Ergotine, Extrait hémostatique de Bonjean. The extract of ergot has been found an excellent hemastatic in the dose of two grains several times a day. It has also been used externally.

ERGOTINE, Ergotin.

ERGOTISM, Ergotismus, from ergota, 'ergot.' Morbis cerealis. Poisoning by ergot. An affection produced by the use of spurred rye. At times, the symptoms are limited to vertigo, spasms, and convulsions. See Convulsio cerealis. Most commonly, there is torpor with numbness of the hands and feet, which waste away, lose sensation and the power of motion, and separate from the body by dry gangrene,—Ergotismus Sphaecelosis, Sphaecelus cerealis, Necrosis cerealis, Gangræna ustilaginea, Necrosis ustilaginea, Ergot or Mildew mortification, (F.) Ergotisme gangrèneux, Gangrène des Solonais, Mal de Solagne.

ERGOTISME CONVULSIVE, Convulsio cerealis.

ERGOTISMUS, Ergotism—e. Spasmodicus, Convulsio cerealis—e. Sphaecelosis, Ergotism.

ERICA VULGARIS, Calluna vulgaris seu Erica, Common Heath, (Sc.) Heather, (F.) Bryndre vulgaire. This has been regarded as diuretic and diaphoretic.

ERIGERON AMBIGUUM, E. Philadelphicum—e. Annum, see E. Canadense.

ERIGERON BELLIDIFOLIUM, Robin's plantain, Rosy Betty, (πριπύρον, from πρ, 'spring,' and πύρον, 'an old man;') owing to the hoary appearance of some of the vernal species.) An indigenous plant of the Composite family; flowering in May. It is said to possess properties like those of E. Philadelphicum.

ERIGERON CANADENSE, Canada Fleabane, Prideweed, Horseweed, Butterweed, is considered to be allied in properties to E. Philadelphicum; and the same may be said of Erigeron Heterophyllum. E. annuum, Sweet Scabious or various-leaved Fleabane; all of which are in the secondary list of the Pharmacoepœia of the United States.

ERIGERON HETEROPHYLLUM, see E. Canadense—e. Integrifolium, E. Philadelphicum.

ERIGERON PHILADELPHICUM, E. strigosum seu ambiguum seu integrifolium, Scabious, Skevich, Philadelphica or Skevich or Narrow-leaved Flea-Bane, Daisy, Cocash, Frostweed, Fieldweed, Squaw-weed, (F.) Vergerette de Philadelphie. The plant has been used in decoction or infusion for gouty and gravelly complaints, and is said to operate powerfully as a diuretic and sudorific. The essential oil has been given in uterine hemorrhage. Dose, five drops.

ERIGERON STRIGOSUM, E. Philadelphicum.

ERIGERUM, Senecio.

ÉRIGNE, Hook.

ÉRINE, Hook.

ERIOCEPHALUS UMBELLULATUS, Wild Rosemary. A South African shrub, Ord. Compositæ, which is diuretic, and used by the farmers and Hottentots in various forms of dropsy.

ERIOSPERMUM LATIFOLIUM. A South African plant, the tuber of which is muculent, and used externally in abrasions of the skin, and in superficial ulcers. It is also employed by the Mohammedans, in decoction, in amenorrhœa.

ERIX, ερίξ. This word signifies, in Galen, the upper part of the liver.

ERODENS, Caustic.

ERODIUM MOSCHIATUM, Geranium moschatum.

EROMANIA, Erotomania.

ERONOSUS, Eronnosus, from ερ, 'spring,' and νοσος or νοσος, 'disease.' A disease which appears chiefly in spring.

EROS, Love.

EROSIO, Corrosion—e. et Perforatio spontanea Ventriculi, Gastroenteria.

EROSION, Erosio, Diabrosis, Anabrosis, Corrosion, from erodere, erodum, (e, and rodere), 'to eat away.' The action of a corrosive substance, or the gradual destruction of a part by a substance of that kind. It is often employed in the same sense as ulceration,—spontaneous erosion.

EROSION, GANGRENOUS, OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

EROTIC, Eroticus, from ερος, ερωτος, 'love.' That which is produced by love—us Erotic melancholy, E. delirium, &c.

EROTICOMANIA, Erotomania.

EROTION, Melissa.

EROTOMANIA, Eromania, Mania erotica, from ερος, ερωτος, 'love,' and μανια, 'mania.' A species of mental alienation caused by love. Erotic melancholy is Love melancholy. Some authors write it Erotico-mania. Also, Nymphomania.

ERPESES, Herpes.

ERRABUNDUS, Planetes.

ERRATIC, Erraticus, Atactos, Atypus; from errare, erratum, 'to err.' Wandering, irregular. That which disappears and recurs at irregular intervals. This name is given to intermittents, Febres erraticæ, which observe no type. Most commonly, it is applied to pains or to any diseased manifestations which are not fixed, but move from one part to another, as in gout, rheumatism, erysipelas, &c.

ERREUR DE LIEU, Error loci.

ERRHINE, Erhnum or Erchinum, Sternutatorium, Sternutatory, Ptericum, Apoplegmatisans per nares, Nasalê, from ερ, 'in,' and ρην, 'the nose.' A remedy whose action is exerted on the Schneiderian membrane, exciting sneezing and increased discharge. Erhines have been mainly used as local stimulants in head affections. The chief are: Asari Folia, Euphorbia gummi-resina, Hydrargyri sulphas flavus, Tabacum, and Veratrum album.

ERRHINUM, Sternutatory.

ERRHYSIS, from ερ, 'in,' and ρην, 'I flow.' With some, a draining of blood. A trifling hemorrhage.

ERROR LOCI, Apoplansis, (F.) Erreur de Lieu. A term, frequently used by Boerhaave to express deviation of fluids, when they enter vessels not destined for them. Boerhaave admitted several orders of capillary vessels, the diameters of which went on decreasing. The largest received red blood, those which came next received only white, others only lymph, whilst the last of all were destined for yet more subtle fluids—for a kind of vapour. When the red globules entered vessels destined for the white, or the white those intended for the thinner fluids, there was, according to the theory of Boerhaave, an error loci, the proximate cause of inflammation and other mischiefs. See Aberration.

ERUCA, Brassica eruca, Sinapis—e. Barbarea, Erysimum barbarea—e. Fœtida, Brassica crucea—e. Sativa, Brassica eruca.

ERUCTATION, Ructatio, Erengmus, Eryggê, Eructatio, Ructus, Ructamen, Ructatio, Erengis, Restagnatio, (Old Eng.) Bolke, Bouffe, Belke, (Sc.) Boeking, Bokking, Rucking, Rift, (Prov.) Kelking, Rasping, Rosping, Riving, Ruft (N. of England); from eructare, eructatum, (e, and ructare, 'to belch.'): Belching, (F.) Rat, Rapport. A sonorous emission, by the mouth, of flatus proceeding from the stomach. When so frequent as to occasion a diseased condition, this is termed Ructus situs, Morbis ructus.

ERUGATORIA, Tetanothra.

ÉRUGINEUX, Æruginous.

ERUPTIO, Eruption—e. Exanthematis, Epanastasis—e. Sanguinis, Hæmorrhagia.

ERUPTION, Eruptio, from erumpere, eruptum, (e, and rumpere), 'to issue with violence,' 'to break out.' This word has several meanings. 1. The sudden and copious evacuation of any fluid from a canal or cavity—of serum, blood, pus, &c., for example; 2. The breaking out of an exanthem; and, 3. the exanthem itself, whether simply in the form of a rash, or of pustules, vesicles, &c.

ÉRUPTION ANOMALE, Roseolæ — e. Roseolæ, Roseolæ — e. Violet, Ionthus.

ERUPTIVE, Eruptivus. Same etymon as Eruption. That which is accompanied by an eruption. Thus small-pox, measles, scarlet fever, miliaria, &c., are eruptive fevers. The term eruptive disease is nearly synonymous with cutaneous disease.

ERVA DE SANCTA MARIA, Arum Dracunculus — e. do Ruto, Palicourea Maregraavi.

ERVALENTA, see Erum.

ERVUM, E. Ervil'ia, E. plicatum, Vic'ia ervil'ia, Or'obus, (F.) Lentille Ers ou Orobe. In times of scarcity, the seeds have been made into bread, but it is said not to be wholesome. The meal was once much used in poultices: it was formerly called Orob'ion, οροβιον. Under the name Ervulenta, a secret dietetic preparation has been introduced. It is a vegetable powder, which, when mixed with milk and soup and taken night and morning, is said to have succeeded in removing old and obstinate obstructions! Buchner thinks it is bean-meal, Ditticher, the meal of the seed of Erum Ervilia. — Aschenbrenner.

A specimen of Warton's Ervulenta, obtained at the dépôt, and analyzed by Dr. Hassall, was found to contain a mixture of the French and German lentil, reduced to powder, including portions of the shells or husks, and of a substance very closely resembling, in its microscopic characters, corn meal. A sample of Du Barry's Revalenta Arab'ica was found to consist of a mixture of the Egyptian or Arabian lentil and barley meal.

ERVUM ERVILIA, Ervm.

ERVUM LENS, Cicer Lens, Lens esculen'tu, Phacos, the Lentil, (F.) Lentille. The seed, Phacœ, Phacœa, Phacens, is eaten in many places like peas: they are flatulent and difficult of digestion.

ERVUM PLICATUM, Ervm.

ERYGE, Eruccion.

ERYNGIUM, Ηρυγγιον, Ηρυγγος, see E. Aquaticum.

ERYNGIUM AQUATICUM, E. yuccæfol'ium, Water Eryng'oo, Button Snake Root. Order, Umbelliferæ. This root, Eryng'ium, (Ph. U. S.) is nearly allied to the contrayerva of the shops, and acts more especially as a sudorific. It is a secondary article in the Pharm. U. S.

ERYNGIUM CAMPES'TRĒ, E. vulgare, Centum Cap'ita, Lyrin'gium, Aster inquina'tis, Capit'ulum Martis, Acus Ven'eris, (F.) Panicant, Chardon-Roland, is sometimes used for E. maritimum.

ERYNGIUM FÆTIDUM; indigenous, is said to possess properties like those of valerian and contrayerva.

ERYNGIUM MARITIMUM seu MARI'NUM. The Sea Holly or Eryngo, Æthe'rea Herba, (F.) Panicant Maritime. Eryngo root has a slightly aromatic odour, and sweetish and warm taste. It is considered to be diuretic and expectorant, but its powers are so weak, that it is scarcely ever used.

ERYNGIUM VULGARE, E. Campestre — e. Yuccæfolium, E. aquaticum.

ERYNGO, SEA, Eryngium maritimum — e. Water, Eryngium aquaticum.

ERYSIMUM, E. officina'le, from ερωσ, 'to draw,' from its power of raising blisters. Sisymbrium officina'le, Chamæ'plion. Hedge-mustard, (F.) Vélar, Tortelle, Herbe aux Chantres. This was, formerly, much used for its expectorant and diuretic qualities. The seeds greatly resemble mustard.

ERYSIMUM ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM BARBARE'A, E. lyratum, Ar'abis barbare'a, Sisymbrium barbare'a, Eru'ca barbare'a, Barbare'a, B. stric'ta, (F.) Herbe de Sainte

Barbe, has been ranked amongst the antiscorbutic plants. See Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM CORDFOLIUM, Alliaria — e. Lyratum, E. barbarea.

ERYSIPELA'CEA. Same etymon as the next. A family of eruptive diseases, comprising erysipelas, variola, rubeola, and scarlatina.

ERYSIPE'ELAS, from ερωσ, 'I draw in,' and πelas, 'near,' from its tendency to spread. Febris erysipelato'sa seu erysipela'cea, Erythro'pyra, Em'phlysis Erysip'elas, St. Anthony's fire. Wild-fire, Ignis Sancti Anto'nii seu Columell'æ seu Sacer, Hieropyr, Icterit'ia rubra, Rose, Rubra icterit'ia, Vicintra'ha, Vicintra'cus, Bremus, Lugdus, (F.) Érysipèle, Érésipèle, Feu St. Antoine, Feu sacré, Mal Saint Antoine. A disease, so called because it generally extends gradually to the neighbouring parts. Superficial inflammation of the skin, with general fever, tension and swelling of the part; pain and heat more or less acrid; redness diffused, but more or less circumscribed, and disappearing when pressed upon by the finger, but returning as soon as the pressure is removed. Frequently, small vesicles appear upon the inflamed part, which dry up and fall off, under the form of branny scales. Erysipelas is, generally, an acute affection: its medium duration being from 10 to 14 days. It yields, commonly, to general refrigerant remedies. Topical applications are rarely serviceable. At times, when the disease approaches the phlegmonous character, copious bleeding and other evacuations may be required, as in many cases of erysipelas of the face; but this is not commonly necessary. In most cases, indeed, the general action seems deficient, and it becomes necessary to give tonics.

When erysipelas is of a highly inflammatory character, and invades the parts beneath, it is termed Erysip'elas phlegmonodes, (F.) Érysipèle phlegmonœ: when accompanied with phlyctenæ, and the inflammation terminates in gangrene, Erysip'elas gangræno'sum, (F.) Érysipèle gangræneux; and when associated with infiltration of serum, Erysip'elas œdemato'sum, (F.) Érysipèle œdemateux.

At times, the surface in erysipelas has a bronzed rather than a red hue — bronzed erysipelas.

ERYSIPELAS, BRONZED, see Erysipelas — e. Gangrænosum, see Erysipelas — e. Œdematosum, see Erysipelas — e. Phlegmonodes, see Erysipelas — e. Periodica nervosa chronica, Pellagra — e. Phlyctenoides, Herpes zoster — e. Pustulosa, Herpes zoster — e. Zoster, Herpes zoster.

ERYSIPELATODES, Erysiplatodes.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS, Erysiplatodes, Erysiplatoto'sus. Belonging to erysipelas; as an erysipl'atous affection.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS INFLAMMATION, Inflam'matio erysiplatoto'sa, Epiphlogis'ma, Cut'itis, Dermatit'is, is the character of inflammation which distinguishes erysipelas, Eryth'ma erysiplatoto'sum.

ÉRYSIPÈLE, Erysipelas — é. Ambulant, see Ambulant — é. Gangræneux, see Erysipelas — é. Œdemateux, see Erysipelas — é. Phlegmonœux, see Erysipelas — é. Serpigineux, see Serpiginous — é. Pustuleux, Herpes zoster.

ERYSOS, Erythema.

ERYTHE'MA, from ερυθραιος, ερυθρος, 'red, rose-coloured,' ερυθραινα, 'to redden.' Inflammatory blush, Eryth're'ma, (F.) Érythème. This name is sometimes, given to erysipelas, especially when of a local character. It is, also, applied to the morbid redness on the cheeks of the hectic, and on the skin covering bubo, phlegmon, &c. It forms the 6th genus of the 3d order, Exanthemata, of Bateman's classification of cutaneous diseases; and is defined, 'a nearly continuous redness of some portion of the skin, attended with disorder of the constitution, but not contagious.' Many varieties are described by dermatologists, — for example, E. intertrigo, E. fugax, E. papulatum, E. tuberculatum, E. nodosum, E. læve, E. centrifugum, E. marginatum, and E. aerodynia.

ERYTHEMA ACRODYNIA, Aerodynum — e. Ambustio, Burn — e. Anthrax, Anthrax.

ERYTHEMA CENTRIFUGUM. A variety of erythema attacking the face, commencing with a small red spot, and spreading around, so as, at times, to affect the whole face.

ERYTHEMA ENDEMICUM, Pellagra — e. à Frigore, Chilblain.

ERYTHEMA FUGAX. Patches of erythema, that sometimes appear on the body in febrile diseases, teething children, &c., and which are of brief duration.

ERYTHEMA GANGRENOsum, Anthrax — e. Ichororum, Eczema mercuriale — e. Intertrigo, Chafing.

ERYTHEMA LÆVE, (F.) Érythème léger. Slight erythema affecting the skin, as in œdema.

ERYTHEMA MARGINATUM, (F.) Érythème marginal. A form in which the prominent patches of erythema are distinctly separated from the skin at their margins.

ERYTHEMA MERCURIALE, Eczema mercuriale.

ERYTHEMA NODOSUM, (F.) Érythème noueux. A more severe form of Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHEMA PAPULATUM, (F.) Érythème papuleux. Patches of erythema, which are at first papulated, appearing on the face, neck, breast, &c., of females, and young persons more especially.

ERYTHEMA PELLAGRUM, Pellagra — e. Pernio, Chilblain.

ERYTHEMA SOLA'RE. A name given by the Italians to Pellagra, owing to its being attended with an eruption of small red spots or patches on the parts that are exposed to the sun.

ERYTHEMA TUBERCULATUM, E. tuberculosum, (F.) Érythème tuberculeux. A form of erythema in which the patches are in small lumps.

ERYTHEMATOUS, Erythemat'ic, Erythemat'ous, Erythemat'icus, (F.) Erythémateux. Appertaining or relating to Erythema.

ÉRYTHÈME, Erythema — é. Léger, Erythema læve — é. Marginal, Erythema marginatum — é. Noux, Erythema nodosum — é. Populeux, Erythema papulatum — é. Tuberculeux, Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHREA CENTAURIUM, Chironia centaurium — e. Chilensis, Canchalagua, Chironia Chilensis.

ERYTHRÆMIA, Plethora.

ERYTHRAN'CHÈ, Angi'na erysipelato'sa, from ερυθρος, 'red,' and αχχω, 'I suffocate.' Erysipelatous or erythematous sore throat.

ERYTHREMA, Erythema.

ERYTHRINA MONOSPERMA, Butea frondosa.

ERYTHROCHERAS, Cynanche parotidæa.

ERYTHRODANUM, Rubia.

ER'YTHROID, Erythro'des, Erythroï'des. Reddish.

ERYTHROID COAT, Tu'nica erythro'des. Vaginal coat of the testis.

ER'YTHROID VES'ICLE, Vesic'ula Erythroï'dea. A vesicle of the fœtus described by Pockels and others. It is pyriform, and much longer than, although of the same breadth as, the umbilical vesicle. Velpeau, Weber, and others, doubt its being a physiological condition.

ERYTHRONIUM, E. Americanum.

ERYTHRO'NIUM AMERICANUM, E. flavum seu dens canis seu lanceolatum seu longifolium, Common Erythronium, (from ερυθρος, 'red,' which does not, however, apply to the American species,) Yellow Snake-leaf, Yellow Adder's tongue, Adder-leaf, Dog violet, Dog's tooth violet, Rattlesnake violet, Lamb's tongue, Scrofula root, Yellow Snoodrop. Ord. Liliaceæ. This plant is possessed of emetic properties, but is rarely, if ever, used. The root and herb, Erythronium, (Ph. U. S.), are in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

ERYTHRONIUM DENS CANIS, E. Americanum — e. Flavum, E. Americanum — e. Lanceolatum, E. Americanum — e. Longifolium, E. Americanum.

ERYTHROPHLEUM JUDICIALE, Sassybark tree.

ERYTHROPYRA, Erysipelas.

ERYTHRORRHIZA ROTUNDIFOLIA, Gallax aphylla.

ERYTHROSIS, Plethora.

ES'APHÈ, from εσφαω, (εσ, and αφαω, 'I feel,') 'I feel inside,' (F.) Le Toucher, Le Toucher vaginal. The introduction of a finger or fingers into the vagina, for the purpose of examining the condition of the uterus. It is employed to verify the existence or non-existence of pregnancy and its different stages; to detect certain affections or faults of conformation in the genital organs and pelvis; and, during the process of accouchement, to examine into the progress of labour, &c.

ESCA, Aliment.

ESCARA, Esehar.

ESCARGOT, Helix pomatia, Limax.

ESCHALOTTE, Échalotte.

ESCHAR, Es'chara, εσχαρα, (Old Eng.) Asker, a slough, a crust or scab. The crust or disorganized portion, arising from the mortification of a part, and which is distinguishable from the living parts by its colour, consistence, and other physical properties. The inflammation which it excites in the contiguous parts, gives occasion to a secretion of pus between the living and dead parts, which ultimately completely separates the latter.

ESCHARA, Vulva.

ESCHAROT'IC, Escharot'icum, from εσχαρα, 'eschar.' Any substance, which, when applied upon a living part, gives rise to an eschar, such as caustic potassa: the concentrated mineral acids, &c.

ESCHAROTIC POISON, see Poison.

ESCHELLOHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. This water rises at the foot of a mountain near the convent of Etal in Bavaria. It is a sulphuro-saline.

ESCHID'NA OCELLA'TA. A very poisonous viper, which inhabits the sugar-cane fields of Peru. Its bite is almost instantaneously fatal.

ESCORZONERA, Scorzonera.

ESCREVISSE, Crab.

ESCULAPIAN, Medicinal.

ES'CULENT, Esculent'us, Ed'ible, Eat'able, Ciba'rius, from esca, 'food.' (F.) Comestible. Such plants or such parts of plants or animals as may be eaten for food.

ESÈRE, Ordeal nut.

ESKIN, Singultus.

ESO, εσω, 'within.' A prefix which signifies an affection of an internal part; as Esoenteritis, inflammation of the inner membrane of the intestines: — Enogastritis, inflammation of the inner membrane of the stomach, &c.

ESOCHAS, Esoche.

ES'OCHE, Es'ochas. A tumour—as a hemorrhoid—within the anus.

ESOCOLITIS, Dysentery.

ESODIC, Afferent.

ESOENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

ESOGASTRITIS, Endogastritis.

ESOTERIC, εσωτερος, 'interior,' from εσω, 'within.' Private; interior; in contradistinction to Exoter'ic, public, exterior. Hence, we speak of 'esoteric and exoteric causes of disease.'

ES'OTERISM, MED'ICAL. Same etymon as Esoteric. A term used by M. Simon, in his Dé-ontologie médicale, for that esotery, or mystery and secrecy, with which the practitioner performs his daily duties, and which, he conceives, he is compelled to adopt by the prejudices and ignorance of his patients.

ESPACES INTERCOSTAUX, see Costa.

ESPÈCES, Species, see Pulvis—e. Pulvéru- lentes, see Pulvis.

ESPÈCES VULNÉRAIRES, Falltranck.

ESPHLA'SIS, from εσ, εις, 'inwards,' and φλαω, 'I break, bruise,' &c. A fracture of the skull by comminution, the fragments being depressed. See Depression, and Enthlasis.

ESSENTIA PIMEN'TÆ, Essence of Pimen'to. (Ol. Piment. f 3j; Sp. rectific. f 3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, gtt. xxx ad lx.

ESSENTIA ROSMARI'NI, Essence of Rose'mary. (Ol. Rosmar'ni f 3j; Sp. rectific. f 3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, gtt. xxx ad gtt. lx.

ESSENTIAL, Essent'ialis. The word essential has been applied to the immediate or active prin- ciples of vegetables, which were believed to be endowed with the properties of the plants from which they were extracted. Essential oil was so called because it was regarded as the only im- mediate principle which was essential. This expres- sion is retained. Essential salts are true salts or extracts which exist, ready formed, in vegetables; and which are obtained by distillation, incinera- tion, or some other process.

An essential disease is synonymous with a gen- eral disease; that is, one not depending on any local affection, nor symptomatic. See Entity.

ES'SERA, Es'seræ, Sora, Saïre, Sare, Sare, Morbus porci'nus, Rosa saltans, Urtica'ria porcell'ana, (F.) Amponles, Porcelaine. Of Arabic deriva- tion. A species of cutaneous eruption, consist- ing of small, reddish tubercles over the whole body, accompanied by a troublesome itching. It seems to be a variety of lichen or urticaria. See Lichen tropicus.

ESSIEU, Axis.

ESSOUFFLEMENT, Anhelatio.

ESTHEMA, Vestitus.

ESTHESIS, Vestitus.

ESTHIOMÈNE, Esthiomenus.

ESTHIOM'ENUS, Estiom'emus, from εσθιω, 'I eat.' Ec'edens. (F.) Esthiomène. That which devours or eats away. Certain ulcers and eruptions—Dartres rongeantes—are so called.

EST'IVAL, Esti'vus; from æstus, æstatis, 'summer.' Happening in summer, belonging to summer. This epithet is given to summer dis- eases, so called because they reign at that season, and appear to depend on the influence exerted by it on the animal economy. In the United States, the term summer disease or complaint means disorder of the bowels; as diarrhœa, cholera morbus, &c.

ESTOMAC, Stomach.

ESTRAGON, Artemisia dracunculus.

ÉSULE, GRANDE, Euphorbia lathyris.

ESURIES, Hunger.

ESURIGO, Hunger.

ESURITIO, Hunger.

ESYCHIA, Acinesia.

ÉTAGE, Stage.

ÉTAÏN, Tin—é. de Glace, Bismuth—é. Gris, Bismuth.

ÉTAT, Acme—é. Granuleux du Rein, Kidney, Bright's Disease of the.

ÉTERNUEMENT, Sneezing.

ETESTICULATIO, Castration.

ETHER, Æther, Æther sulphuricus—e. Acetic, see Æther—e. Actique, see Æther sulphuricus—e. Azotene, see Æther sulphuricus—e. Azoteux alcoolisé, Spiritus ætheris nitrici.

ETHER, CHLORIC, see Chloroform. Under the names concentrated chloric ether and strong chloric ether—a compound of pure chloroform and nearly absolute alcohol, in the proportion of one-third of the former to two-thirds of the latter—has been used as an anæsthetic by inhalation, in the same cases as sulphuric ether and chloroform. It is properly an alcoholic solution or tincture of chloroform.

ETHER, CHLOROHYDRIC, CHLORINATED, see Æther muriaticus—é. Chlorohydrique, see Æther sulphuricus—é. Chlorohydrique chloré, see Æther muriaticus.

ETHER, COMPOUND. A preparation consisting of a solution of chloroform in sulphuric ether, which has been used as an anæsthetic by inhalation, in the same cases as chloroform.

ÉTHÉR, HYDRATIQUE, Æther sulphuricus—e. Hydriodic, Æther hydriodicus—é. Hydrique alcoolisé, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus—e. Hydrochloric, see Æther—e. Hydrochloric, Spirit of, Spiritus ætheris muriatici—e. Hydrocyanic, Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Iodhydric, Æther hydriodicus—e. Marine, Æther muriaticus—e. Muriatic, Æther muriaticus—*e. ETHEREAL, Æthereal.

ÉTHÉRÉ, Æthereal.

ETHEREUS, Æthereal.

ETHERINE, HYDROCYANATE OF. Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Muriate of, Æther muriaticus.

ETHERISM. The aggregate of phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether—Ætherism'us.

ETHERIZATION, Ætherisa'tio. The administration of ether by inhalation, as an anæsthetic.

ETHERIZED, Ætherisa'tus. Presenting the phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether.

ÉTHÉROLAT, Éthérat. The product of the distillation of ether on aromatic substances.

ÉTHÉROLATURE, see Tincture.

ÉTHÉROLÉ. A liquid medicine formed of ether and medicinal principles united with it by direct solution or simple mixture.—Béral.

Éthérolé d'essence de térébinthine. See Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

ÉTHÉROLIQUE, Etherol'ic. A medicine which has ether for excipient.—Béral.

ÉTHÉROLOTIF. An etherolic medicine which is exclusively employed externally.

ETHICS, MÉDICAL, Deontology, medical.

ETHIK, Hectic.

ETHIOPIAN, see Homo.

ETHIOPS, see Ethiops.

ETHISIS, Filtration.

ETHISMUS, Filtration.

ETHIMOCEPHALE, Ethmoceph'alus; from ἔθμος, 'a sieve,' 'the ethmoidal portion of the nose,' and κεφαλή, 'head.' A genus of monsters, with eyes close together, but distinct; the nasal apparatus atrophied and rudimental.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

ETHMOID, Ethmo'des, Ethmoï'des, Ethmoï'dens, from ἔθμος, 'a sieve,' and αιδος, 'form.' Shaped like a sieve.

ETHMOID BONE, Os ethmoïdeum seu multifor'mè seu spongiosum seu spongoides seu cribrosum seu cribrifor'mè seu culbicium seu crystalatum seu foraminulatum seu colifor'mè seu colato'rium, (F.) Os cribreum. One of the eight bones which compose the cranium; so called, because its upper plate is pierced by a considerable number of holes. The ethmoid bone is situate at the anterior, inferior, and middle part of the base of the cranium. It seems to be composed of a multitude of thin, fragile, semi-transparent laminae, which form more or less spacious cells, called the Ethmoidal labyrinth or cells, distinguished into anterior and posterior. These communicate with the nose, and are lined by a prolongation of the pituitary membrane. The ethmoid bone is constituted of compact tissue, and is surrounded by the Ethmoid suture. It is articulated with the frontal and sphenoidal bones, the cornua sphenoidalia, the superior maxillary bones, the palate bones, the ossa turbinata inferiora, the vomer, the proper bones of the nose, and the lacrimal bones.

ETHMOIDAL, Ethmoïda'lis. Belonging to the ethmoid bone; as, Ethmoidal cells, E. suture, &c. The Ethmoïdal apoph'ysis or process is the advanced part of the sphenoid bone, which articulates with the ethmoid. The ethmoidal arteries are two in number, the anterior of which arises from the ophthalmic artery. The origin of the other varies. The Échancrure ethmoïdale of the os frontis receives the ethmoid bones. The Ethmoïdal veins correspond to the arteries.

ETHMOSE, Cellular tissue.

ETHMOSYNE, Habit.

ETHMYPHE, Cellular tissue.

ETHMYPHITIS, Inflamma'tio telæ cellulosa, from ἔθμος, 'a sieve,' ὑψη, 'texture,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the cellular membrane.

ETHMYPHYTOSIS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ETHNOGRAPHY, Ethnograph'ia; from ἔθνος, 'nation,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A history of the races and families of man.

ETHNOLOGY, Ethnology'ia; from ἔθνος, 'nation,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of the races and families of man.

ETHOS, Habit.

ÉTHUSE, Ethusa cynapium—é. Menu, Ethusa meun.

ETHYLE, CHLORIDE OF, Æther muriaticus—e. Cyanuret of, Æther hydrocyanicus.

ETICK, Hectic.

ETIOLOGICAL, Blanching, (F.) Étiollement. That state of plants which occurs in consequence of privation of light, when they become pale and watery. In pathology, it is sometimes used to denote the paleness produced in those persons who have been kept long without light; or a similar paleness, the result of chronic disease.

ÉTIOLEMENT, Etiolation.

ETIOLOGY, Ætiologia.

ETIQUETTE, MEDICAL. Deontology, medical.

ÉTISE, Hecticis—é. Mésentérique, Tabes mesenterica.

ETNAGH-BERRIES, see Juniperus communis.

ÉTOILE, Stella.

ÉTONNÉE, Stunned.

ÉTOUFFEMENT, Suffocation.

ÉTOUPE, Stupa.

ÉTOURDISSEMENT, Vertigo.

ÉTRANGLE-LOUP, Paris.

ÉTRANGLEMENT, Strangulation, Hysteria—é. des Intestins, Enteremphraxis.

ÉTRANGUILLON, from étrangler, 'to strangle.' An ancient French appellation for a violent angina accompanied by symptoms of imminent asphyxia.

ÉTRIER, Stapes.

ÉTRON, Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

ÉTRON'CUS, from ήτρον, 'the lower belly,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumour of the lower belly.

ETTICK, Hectic fever.

ETTLE, Urtica.

ÉTUI DE L'HIPPOCAMPE. A name given by Vicq d'Azyr to the upper part of the sphenoidal portion of the lateral ventricle of the brain, which is bounded by the lateral cornu of the corpus callosum.

ÉTUYE, Stove—é. Humide, Bath, vapour.

ÉTUYER, to Foment.

EU, eu, 'good, proper,' when prefixed to words. Hence:

EU'EMIA, from eu, and αιμα, 'blood.' A good condition of the blood.

EU'ESTHE'SIA, from eu, and αιθησις, 'perception.' Vigorous perception. A good condition of the perceptive faculties.

EU'ESTHE'TOS. Same etymon. One whose senses are in full vigor.

EU'ANALEP'SIS, from eu, and αναληψις, 'recovery.' Rapid restoration to strength.

EU'ANTHEMON, Anthemis nobilis.

EUCALYPTUS MANNIF'ERA, (eu, 'well,' and καλυπτος, 'covered.') From this Australian species, Order, Myrtaceæ, a manna-like substance exudes, which has similar properties to manna.

EUCALYPTUS RESINIFERA, see Kino.

EUCHR'E'A, from eu, and χρoια, 'colour.' A good or healthy colour of the skin. A good appearance of the surface.

EUCHYM'IA, from eu, and χυμος, 'juice.' A good state of the humours.

EUCRA'SIA, from eu, and κρασις, 'temperament.' A good temperament.

EUDIAPNEUS'TIA, from ευδιαπνευστος, (eu, and διαπνον,—δια, and πνον, 'breath;') 'one who breathes well.' Easy transpiration.

EU'ECTICA (medicina), Gymnastics.

EU'EL'CES, from eu, and ελκος, 'an ulcer.' One in whom wounds and ulcers are readily healed.

EU'EMES, Euem'etos, from eu, and εμεω, 'I vomit.' That which readily excites vomiting. One who vomits with facility.

EU'ETHES, Benign.

EU'EN'IA, from eu, and εξις, 'constitution.' A good constitution.

EU'FRAISE, Euphrasia officinalis.

EU'GENIA CARYOPHYLLA'TA, called after Prince Eugene. Garryophyllus, Caryophyllus aromati'cus, Myrtus caryophyllus. The Indian tree which affords the clove. Order, Myrtaceæ. The Clove, Caryophyllus, C. aromati'cus, is the unexpanded bud, (F.) Girofle, Gérose, Gyrophle, Clou de Girofle. Its odour is strong, aromatic, and peculiar; taste, pungent and acrid. Like all substances whose virtue depends upon essential oil, it is stimulant and carminative. It is generally used as a corrigent to other remedies, and in cases where substances containing the essential oils are demanded. The oil—(F.) Huile de Girofle; Oleum caryophylli, Oil of Cloves—has the properties of the cloves.

EU'GENIA PIMENTA, Myrtus pimenta.

EUGION, Hymen.

EULĒ, εωλη, 'a worm.' Eulæ, εωλαι, with Hippocrates, meant especially worms bred in a wound or ulcer.

EULOPHIA, see Salep.

EUNUCH, Eunuchus, from ευνη, 'the bed,' and εχω, 'I keep.' Hemian'drus, Hemianor, Hemianthro'pus, Semimas, Semimas'culus, Semimacula'tus, Semivir, Thla'dias, Thla'sias, Thlib'ias, Castra'tus, Gallus, Excastra'tus, Eriva'tus, Emacula'tus, Spado, Exsec'utus, Extesticla'tus, Extom'ius. (F.) Eunuque. One whose organs of generation have been removed, or so altered, that he is rendered incapable of reproducing his species, or of exercising the act of venery. Eunuchs were common with the ancient Romans. In Italy, this horrible mutilation still takes place to improve the voice; and in the East, eunuchs have the surveillance of the seraglio.

EUNUCHISMUS, Castration.

EUNUCHIUM MECONIS, Lactuca.

EUNUCHUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EUNUQUE, Eunuch.

EUODES, Benevolentia.

EUONYMUS, Quassia simarouba.

EUOS'YMUS AMERICA'NUS, Strawberry bush, Strawberry tree, Burning bush, Indian arrow-wood. A shrub of the Ord. Celastraceæ, Secr. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia, which, like the next, is found throughout the United States and Canada; flowering from May to June.

EUOS'YMUS ATROPURPUREUS, Burning bush, Spindle tree, Indian Arrow-wood, flowers from June to July.

From these varieties of Euonymus the Whahoo or Whahoo bark is said to be obtained. It is diuretic, antiperiodic, tonic, and a hydragogue cathartic, and has been used in dropsy in infusion, in the proportion of an ounce to a pint of water.

EUPATHIA, from eu, and παθος, 'suffering.' A disposition for being affected by pain easily. Also, a good state of health—Euphor'ia.

EU'PATOIRE D'AVICENNE, Eupatorium cannabinum—c. Percefeuille, Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM, (called after Mithridates Eupator.) Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATO'RIMUM AGERATOI'DES, E. Urticifo'lium, Ag'eratum olissimum, White Snakeroot; indigenous; flowering in August and September; has the same properties as Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM AROMAT'ICUM, Aromati'c Eupato'rium or Hempweed, has similar properties.

EUPATO'RIMUM CANNAB'ICUM, Eupato'rium, E. Arab'icum seu Japon'icum seu trifoliatum, E. of Avicenna, Cannab'ina aquati'ca, Trifolium cervinum, Orig'anum aquati'cum, Hemp agrimony, Herb of Saint Ceneonde, (F.) Eupatoire d'Avicenne. Ord. Compositæ. Secr. Syst. Syn-genesia æqualis. The juice of this plant proves violently emetic and purgative, if taken in sufficient quantity. It has been considered diuretic, cathartic, and emetic.

EUPATORIUM CONNATUM, E. perfoliatum—e. Guaco, Guaco—e. Japonicum, E. Cannabinum—e. Mesues, Achillea ageratum.

EUPATORIUM PERFOLIATUM, E. Connatum, Boneset, Thor'oughwort, Thor'oughstem, Thor'oughwax, Veg'table antimony, Crosswort, Ague-weed, Feverwort, Indian sage, Joe-pye, Teazel, Siccating plant, (F.) Eupatoire percefeuille, is a plant which grows in low, wet meadows throughout the United States. The tops and leaves—Eupato'rium, (Ph. U. S.)—are considered to be stimulating, tonic, emetic, purgative, diuretic, and sudorific. Dose, gr. xv of the powder, as a gentle purgative.

EUPATORIUM, PURPLE-STALKED, E. purpureum.

EUPATORIUM PURPUREUM, Mohawk tassel, Purple-stalked Eupatorium, Trumpet weed, Joe Pye-weed, Gravelroot, is used in similar cases, as well as EUPATORIUM ROTUNDFOLIUM, Round-leaved Hempweed, Wild horehound;

EUPATORIUM SESSILIFOLIUM, Upland Boneset, and

EUPATORIUM TERCFRIFOLIUM, Wild horehound, German-leaved horehound, Rough boneset.

EUPATORIUM TRIFOLIATUM, E. Cannabinum — e. Urticifolium, E. ageratoides.

EUPEPSIA, from eu, and πεπρω, 'I digest.' A good digestion. The antithesis to dyspepsia.

EUPEPTIC, Eupeptus, Eupepticus. Same etymon. Relating to a good digestion. One endowed with a good digestion.

EUPHLOGIA, from eu, and φλεγω, 'I burn.' Mild inflammation. Variola.

EUPHONY, Euphonia, from eu, and φωνη, 'voice.' An agreeable or regular voice.

EUPHORBE CYPRES, E. cyparissias — e. des Marais, E. palustris — c. Vomitive, E. ipecaeuana.

EUPHORBIA CAPITATA, Caecia. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ. Called after Euphorbus, physician to king Juba. A Brazilian plant, which is strongly astringent and not poisonous. It is considered to be one of the best remedies for the bites of serpents. It is, also, called Colubrina Lusitana.

EUPHORBIA CAPUT MEDUÆ. A South African plant, with which, according to Bruce, the wild inhabitants poison their arrows. The Ethiopians use, for the same purpose, Euphorbia heptagona, E. virosa, and E. cereiformis; the savages, in the most southern part of America, the sap of E. antiifolia.

EUPHORBIA CEREIFORMIS, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA COROLLATA, Large flowering spurge, Milkweed, Snakes' milk, Ipeacacuanha, Hippo, Picac, Ipeacac, Milk parslain, Purge root, Emetic root, Boeaman's root, Apple root, Indian Phytic; indigenous; has similar properties to the last. The dose of the root is the same.

EUPHORBIA COTINIFOLIA, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA CYPARISIAS, E. Cypressina, Esula minor seu Cyparissias, Tithymalus Cyparissinus, Cypress spurge, Welcome to our house, (F.) Euphorbe cypres. This, like most of the spurges, is very acrimonious. Amongst the rustics, it was formerly called poor man's rhubarb, and was, consequently, a laxative. It is not used.

EUPHORBIA CYPRESSINA, E. Cyparissias.

EUPHORBIA HELIOSCOPIA, E. obturata, Sun spurge, Wartwort spurge; indigenous. The juice has been given in syphilis. It is said to be cathartic.

EUPHORBIA HEPTAGONA, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA HYPERICIFOLIA, Large spotted spurge, Eyebright. A native of the United States. It is astringent and tonic. Used in infusion — fʒss to Oj of boiling water. Dose, a tablespoonful. EUPHORBIA MACULATA, Milk Purslane, Spotted spurge, has similar properties.

EUPHORBIA IPEACACUANHA, Anisophyllum Ipeacacuanha, Ipeacacuanha spurge, Wild ipeacac, (F.) Euphorbe vomitive. This species of spurge is common in the southern and middle parts of the United States. The root is a powerful emetic, in the dose of from five to fifteen grains: twenty grains act as a cathartic likewise. In large doses, it acts as a narcotico-acrid.

EUPHORBIA LATHYRIS. The systematic name of the plant which affords the lesser catapulta seeds, Catapulta minor, Caper Spurge, Lathyrus, Gar'den spurge, Caper plant, Mole-plant, Tithymalus latifolius seu lathyrus, Galarhæus Lathyrus, (F.) Épurga ou grande Écule. The seeds possess cathartic properties, and an expressed oil of the seeds — Oleum Euphorbiæ Lathyridis, (F.) Huile d'épurga — has been given as a cathartic in the dose of six to twelve drops.

EUPHORBIA MACULATA, see E. hypericifolia — e. Myrtifolia, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — e. Obturata, E. helioscopia.

EUPHORBIA OFFICINARUM. The systematic name of the plant which affords the Euphorbium, Euphorbiæ gummi-resi'na, Gummi euphorbiæ, in greatest abundance. The euphorbium is an odoriferous gum-resin, in yellow tears, which have the appearance of being worm-eaten. It enters into the composition of some plasters, and has been used as an errhine.

EUPHORBIA PALUSTRIS, E. paniculata, Greater spurge, Es'ula major, Tithymalus palustris, Galarhæus palustris, Marsh spurge, Wret-weed, (F.) Euphorbe des marais. The juice is given, in Russia, as a common purge. It is used, too, as an irritant in tinea, warts, &c.

EUPHORBIA PALUSTRIS and E. villosa, or E. pilosa have been brought forward as preventives of hydrophobia — the bitten part being washed with a decoction, and, at the same time, the decoction being taken internally.

EUPHORBIA PANICULATA, E. palustris.

EUPHORBIA PARALIAS, Tithymalus paralias, Sea spurge. This is violently cathartic and irritating, and is seldom used.

EUPHORBIA PEPLUS, Petty spurge; indigenous. The powdered root is actively cathartic. It has been given in drops.

ἔρση. All the spurges are vesicant and rubefacient, when applied externally.

EUPHORBIIUM, Euphorbia officinarum.

EUPHORIA, Eupathia.

EUPHURAGIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

EUPHURASIA (εὐφρασία, cheerfulness; so called from its effects), E. Officina'lis seu Min'ima seu Imbricata, Ocularia, Enphragia, Ophthalmica, Eyebright, (F.) Enfraise, Euphrasie, Casse-Lunette. It has been recommended in diseases of the eye, but is unworthy of notice.

EUPLASTIC, Euplasticus, (F.) Euplastique: from eu, and πλάσσω, 'I form.' Having the capacity of becoming organizable in a high degree, — as in false membranes resulting from acute inflammation in a healthy person.

EUPLEURUM SERRULATUM, Diosma erenata.

EUPNŒA, from eu, and πνέω, 'I respire.' Freedom or facility of respiration.

EURHYTHMIA, from eu, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Regularity of the pulse.

EURIBALI, Juribali.

EURODES, Cariou.

EURODON'TICUS, from eupos, 'caries,' and odontos, 'a tooth.' Suffering from carious teeth.

EURUS, eypus, 'mould, putrefaction,' Mucor, Caries. Corruption of the humours.

EURYCHORIA, Sinus.

EURYCLES, Engastrimyth.

EURYCLITUS, Engastrimyth.

EURYSMUS, Dilatation.

EURYTHMIA, Eurythmus, from eu, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Regularity of pulse, both as regards quantity and quality.

EUSAR'CUS, from eu, and σάρξ, sarkos, 'flesh.' One who is fleshy, robust, muscular.

EUSEMIA, (F.) Eusemie, from eu, and σημειν, 'a sign.' A collection of good signs.

EUSOMPHALIEN from eu, and σμφαλος,

'navel.' A double monster in which each being has a separate navel, and is able to execute, independently, almost all the vital functions.

EUSPLANCH'NIA, from eu, and σπλαγχνον, 'a viscous' A healthy state of the viscera.

EUSTA'CHIAN TUBE, Tuba Eustachia'na seu Aristotel'ico, Syrin'ga, Syrinx, Meatus cæcus, Ductus auris palati'nis, Iter a Pala'to ad Arem, (F.) Trompe ou Conduit d'Eustache, Conduit guttural de l'oreille—Ch. So called from its discoverer, Eustachius. It is partly bony and partly cartilaginous: extending from the cavity of the tympanum to the upper part of the pharynx. Its length is about two inches; the bony portion which belongs to the temporal bone, is about three-fourths of an inch long. It is lined, internally, by a prolongation of the lining membrane of the pharynx. Its nerves are furnished by the palatine branches of the ganglion of Meckel, and its vessels proceed from those of the pharynx and velum pendulum. The use of the tube seems to be, to permit the renewal of air in the cavity of the tympanum.

EUSTA'CHIAN VALVE, Valve of Eusta'chius, Valvule d'Eustachi ou d'Eustache. A membranous, semilunar fold, which corresponds to the opening of the vena cava inferior into the right auricle of the heart.

EUSTHEN'IA, Vigor, Exuberant'ia, from eu, and σθενος, 'strength.' Flourishing, exuberant health.—Hippocrates.

EUSTOM'ACHUS, from eu, and στομαχος, 'stomach.' Digesting rapidly. Having a good stomach.

EUSTRONGYLUS GIGAS, Strongylus gigas.

EUTAX'IA, from eu, and τασσω, 'I arrange.' Euthe'sia. A well-ordered constitution, in which every part has its proper relation. The ready return of a rupture, or of a luxated bone.

EUTHANA'SIA, from eu, and θανατος, 'death.' An easy death. The opposite to this is Cacothana'sia.

EUTHESIA, Eutaxia.

EUTHYENTERON, Rectum.

EUTHYENTEROSTENOMA, Stricture of the Rectum.

EUTHYM'IA, An'imi tranquill'itas, from eu, and θυμος, 'mind.' Tranquillity of mind. A good state of the mental faculties.

EUTHYPNOE, Orthopnoea.

EUTHYPNGA, Orthopnoea.

EUTOC'IA, from eu, and τοκος, 'delivery.' An easy labour. Fecundity.

EUTROPH'IA, from eu, and τροφη, 'nourishment.' A good state of nutrition.

EUTROPH'IC, Eutroph'ic, same etymon. A term introduced into medical terminology, by the author, for an agent whose action is exerted on the system of nutrition, without necessarily occasioning manifest increase of any of the secretions.

The chief eutrophics are,—mercurials, the preparations of iodine, bromine, cod liver oil, the preparations of gold and silver, sulphur, sugar, and sarsaparilla.

EUZOODYNAMIA, Sanitas.

EVAC'UANTS, Evacuanti'na, from e, and vacare, 'to empty.' (F.) Evacuati'fs. Medicines are so called which occasion a discharge by some emunctory; such as purgatives, emetics, &c.

EVACUATIFS, Evacuants.

EVACUATIO, Evacuation, Excretion.

EVACUA'TION. Same etymon. Lapax'is. The discharge of any matter whatever by the natural passages or by an artificial opening.

EVANOUISSEMENT, Syncope.

EVAN ROOT, Geum Virginianum.

EVAPORA'TION, Evaporat'io, Vapora'tio,

Exhalat'io, from e, and vaporare, vaporatum, 'to emit a vapour.' Transformation of a liquid into vapour, in order to obtain the fixed matters contained in it dry and separate from the liquid. When the vapour is received into a proper vessel and condensed, the process is called distillation. Evaporation produces cold, and this is one of the processes by which the body is cooled, through the evaporation of the perspiratory fluid.

ÉVAUX, MINERAL WATERS OF. Evau is situate in Auvergne, in France. The waters are hydrosulphurous and thermal.

EVENTRA'TION, Eventro'tio, Hypogastro-ric'is, from e, 'out of,' and venter, 'the belly.' A tumour, formed by a general relaxation of the parietes of the abdomen, and containing a great part of the abdominal viscera. Also, ventral hernia, or that which occurs in any other way than through the natural openings of the abdominal parietes. Lastly, any very extensive wound of the abdominal parietes, with issue of the greater part of the intestines.

EVEN'TUS, from e, 'out of,' and venire, ven-tum, 'to come.' Apobat'ion, Apobesom'ion, Ec-besom'ion, Terminat'io morbi. The event or issue of a disease, either favourable or unfavourable.

EVERLASTING, DIŒCIOUS, Antennaria dioica.

EVERRIC'ULUM, Specill'um, from everrere, 'to clean out.' A sort of sound or scoop, used for extracting sand or fragments of stone or clots of blood from the bladder, after or during the operation of lithotomy.

EVERSIO PALPEBRÆ, Ectropion.

ÉVIGILATION, see Sleep.

EVIL, THE, Scrofula—e. King's, Scrofula.

EVIRATIO, Castration.

EVIRATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EVISCERATION, Exenterismus.

EVOLUTIO, Development—e. Spontanea, Evolution, spontaneous.

EVOLUTION OF GERMS, see Generation.

EVOLU'TION, SPONTA'NEOUS, Ver'sio seu Evo-lu'tio sponta'nea, from e, and volvere, volutum, 'to roll.' Sponta'neous ver'sion, Sponta'neous expul-sion. Duplication of the fetus. A term, applied, by Dr. Denman, to what he considered to be a spontaneous turning of the fetus in utero, in an arm presentation, in consequence of powerful uterine contractions forcing out the breech and feet, whilst the arm recedes. It is now usually considered to be a doubling of the fetus, so that the arm changes its position but little, whilst the breech is forcibly expelled before the upper extremity:—the case becoming similar to a breech presentation.

EVOLUTION, VESICLE OF, Vesicle of develop-ment.

EVOMITIO, Vomiting.

EVONYMUS, Evonymus.

EVUL'SION, Avulsio, Evul'sio, from evellere, evulsus, (e, and vellere), 'to pluck out.' Apotil'mos, Ectil'mos, Tilmos. The action of plucking out: forcible extraction. (F.) Arrachement. This word is oftener used by the French than by the English surgeons, for the act of extracting certain parts, the presence of which is injurious,—as the teeth, &c.

EW-GOWAN, Bellis.

EX MARIBUS, Castratus.

EXACERBATIO, Exacerbation, Paroxysm.

EXACERBA'TION, Exacerbati'o, Exasperati'o, Exrescen'tio, from exacerbare, exacerbatum, (ex, and acerbus), 'to provoke.' (F.) Rédouble-ment. An increase in the symptoms of a disorder. Often used synonymously with paroxysm.

EXACUM SPICATUM, Coutoubea alba.

EXEMATOSIS, Hæmatosis.

EXEMIA, Anæmia.

EXÆMOS, Exanguious.

EXÆRESIS, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and αἶρω, 'I take away.' A surgical operation, which consists in drawing, extracting, or removing, from the human body, every thing that is useless, noxious, or extraneous. It is a generic term, which includes extraction, evulsion, evacuation, excision, ablation, amputation, &c.

EXÆRESIS, Extraction.

EXAGGERATED, Exaggeratus, (F.) Exagéré, from exaggero, (ex, and aggero, 'I heap up,') 'I magnify,') Heightened. Increased by expression. An epithet for sounds heard on auscultation and percussion, when much increased—Hypereche'sis, Hypereche'ma.

EXAGION. The sixth part of an ounce:—four scruples.—Actuarius.

EXALMA, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and αλλομαι, 'I leap.' Exalsis. Hippocrates calls thus the displacement of the vertebrae.

EXALSIS, Exalma, Leap.

EXALTATION OF THE VITAL FORCES.

Exaltatio vi'rium, from exalto, (ex, and alto,) 'I raise.' This expression has been used, by modern pathologists, to designate a morbid increase in the action of organs, and partly that which occurs in an inflamed organ. Some use exaltation of the vital forces, and inflammation, synonymously.

EXAMBLOMA, Abortion.

EXAMBLOSIS, Abortion.

EXAMEN RIGOROSUM. 'Rigorous examination.' An examination of a Candidate for the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the Prussian Universities, which, like the Tentamen medicum, is conducted in Latin, and takes place before the medical faculty on all branches of medicine.

EXANASTOMOSIS, Anastomosis.

EXANASTROPHE, Convalescence.

EXANGIA, from ἐξαγγίζω, (ἐξ, and αγγος, 'a vessel,') 'I evacuate from a vessel.' Exangei'a. An enlargement or rupture of a blood-vessel, without external opening. A genus in the order Dyssthetica, class Hæmatica of Good. It comprises aneurism and varix.

EXANGIA ANEURISMA, Aneurism.

EXANGUIOUS, Exsangvine, Exsanguineus, Exsæmos, Exsanguis, (F.) Exsanguis, from ex, 'out of,' and sanguis, 'blood.' Seeming to be bloodless; as a female, who has suffered largely from uterine hemorrhage. See Anæmia.

EXANIA, Proctoecele.

EXANIMATION, Exanimatio, from ex, 'out of,' and anima, 'the spirit.' This word has two acceptations. Sometimes, it means real death, corresponding with the Greek θανάτος, mors. At others, it signifies apparent death, corresponding with the Greek ἀλυχία, ἐψυχία, εκλυσis, An'imi deliquium.

EXANTHEM, Exanthe'ma, Anthe'ma erup'tio, Epanthe'ma, Efflorescent'ia, Exanthis'ma, Ethy'ma, Epanuaste'ma, Exanthe'ma, Epanthis'ma, Efflora'tio, from ἐξανθω, (ἐξ, and ανθω,) 'I flourish.' A rash. (F.) Exanthème, Élevure. Under this term is comprehended, by some, every kind of eruption, of which the skin is the seat. Others comprehend by it those eruptions that are accompanied by fever, Febres exanthemat'icæ: including, under the head of the major exanthemata, those which attack a person but once in his life, and which are communicated by specific contagion; and, under the minor exanthemata, those which are not marked by these characteristics. Small-pox, measles, cow-pox, &c., belong to the major:—chicken-pox, herpes, lichen, &c., to the minor. The general acceptation of Exanthe'm is, however, a more or less vivid, circumscribed, or diffuse redness of the skin, which diminishes, or disappears transiently, under the pressure of the finger.

EXANTHEM, CARBUNCULAR, Anthracina—e. Ichorous, Emphlysis—e. Pustulous, Empyesis—e. Rash, Euanthesis.

EXANTHEMA, Eminence—e. Internum, Eis-anthema.

EXANTHE'MA TÖD'ICUM. An eruption of dark-red definite spots, of various sizes, spreading over the whole body, without the formation of scales, and disappearing only after a long time, which seems to be produced occasionally by the use of iodine.

EXANTHEMA MILIARIA. Miliary fever—e. Pectis, Plague—e. Antivariolosum, Vaccina—e. Scrosum, Pemphigus—e. Strophulus, Strophulus—e. Urticatum, Urticaria—e. Vaccina, Vaccina—e. Varicella, Varicella.

EXANTHEMAT'ICA. Same etymon. Eruptive fevers. Cutaneous eruptions, essentially accompanied with fever:—the third order in the class Hæmatica of Good.

EXANTHEMATIS'CHESIS, Exanthematosis, from ἐξανθω, 'exanthe'm,' and ἰσχεῖν, 'to withhold.' Suppression of a cutaneous eruption.

EXANTHEMATOL'OGY, Exanthematolog'ia, from ἐξανθω, 'exanthe'm,' and λογία, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of cutaneous eruptions.

EXANTHEMATOPHTHAL'MIA, Ophthalm'ia exanthemat'ica, from ἐξανθω, 'exanthe'm,' and οφθαλμία, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia in the course of, or succeeding to, a cutaneous eruption.

EXANTHEMATOUS, Exanthematous, Exanthemat'icus, (F.) Exanthématique. Relating or appertaining to exanthe'm, as "an exanthematous eruption." (F.) Éruption exanthématique.

EXANTHÈME INTESTINALE, see Typhus.

EXANTHESIS, see Efflorescence—e. Arthrosia, Dengue—e. Roseola, Roseola—e. Rubeola, Rubeola.

EXANTHISMA, Exanthe'm.

EXANTHROPIA, Misanthropia.

EXAPSIS, Inflammation.

EXARAG'MA, from ἐξαρασσω, 'I tear away,' 'I break.' Collision, violent fracture or friction.

EXARCHIATER, Exarchiatros. Chief of the archiatri, or chief of physicians, a title, like that of Comes Archiatro'rum, given to the chief physician of an emperor or king. Archiater appears to have meant, at times, the same thing.

EXARMA, Swelling.

EXAR'SIO. A burning heat.

EXARTEMA, Amuletum.

EXARTERITIS, Exarteri'itis, from ex, 'out of,' and arteria, 'an artery.' Inflammation of the outer coat of an artery.

EXARTHREMA, Luxation, Sprain.

EXARTHROMA, Luxation.

EXARTHROSIS, Luxatio, Sprain—e. Pareticæ, see Pareticus.

EX ARTICULATIO, Amputation, joint; Luxatio.

EXARYSIS, Exhaustion.

EXASPERATIO, Exacerbation.

EXCÆCARIA AGALLOCHA, Agalochum.

EXCALEFACTIO, Échauffement.

EXCARNA'TION, Excarnatio, from ex, and caro, carnis, 'flesh.' A mode of making anatomical preparations, which consists in separating injected vessels from the parts in which they are situate. This is done by means of corrosion by an acid or by putrefaction.

EXCASTRATIO, Castration, Eunuch.

EXCATHEMA, Bath, half; Semicupium.

EXCAVATOR, Dental, see Dental.

EXCEREBRATIO, Ecephalosis.

EXCEREBRATUS, Delirious.

EXCERNENT, Secreting.

EXCIDENTIA, Eptoma.

EXCIPIENT, Excipiens, from excipere, (ex, and cupere,) 'to receive.' (F.) Intermède. A substance, which, in a medicinal prescription, gives form and consistence to it, and serves as a rebelie or medium for the exhibition of the other ingredients.

EXCIPULA, Cup.

EXCISIO, Entaille.

EXCIS'ION, Excis'io, from excidere, excisum, (ex, and cædere,) 'to cut off.' Ec'tomè. A surgical operation, by which parts of a small size are removed with a cutting instrument.

EXCITABIL'ITY Excitabil'itas. Irritability. From excitare, (ex, and citare, citatum,) 'to excite.' The faculty, possessed by living beings, of being sensible to the action of excitants. The doctrine of excitability forms an important part of the Brunonian system.

EXCITANT, Stimulant.

EXCITA'TION, Excita'tio, Excite'ment; same etymon. The act of exciting; the state of an organ or organs excited. Excitement is, sometimes, used synonymously with augmented arterial action. The effect of the exciting powers acting on the excitability, according to Brown, constitutes excitement. Cullen used the term to express the restoration of the energy and action of the brain, which had been interrupted by sleep or some debilitating cause,—a state opposite to that of collapse. Not unfrequently, it is employed in the sense of excessive action,—Super-excita'tio, (F.) Sur-excitation.

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCITO-MO'TORY. (F.) Excito-moteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow, with the afferent and efferent nerves connected with it;—all of which are concerned in reflex actions; or those by which impressions are transmitted to a centre, and reflected so as to produce muscular contraction without sensation or volition. They constitute the reflex system of nerves. See Nerves.

The term excito-motion has also been employed to signify motion, no matter how excited, by the reflex nerves or by volition.—C. J. B. Williams.

EXCORIATIO, Ecdora.

EXCORIA'TION, Excoria'tio, Excoriaty'ra, Am'yehè, from ex, and corium, 'skin.' (F.) Écorchure. A slight wound, which removes only the skin.

EXCORIATURA, Excoriation.

EXCREA'TION, Excrea'tio, Exscrea'tio, Screa'tio, Rasca'tio, from ex, and screare, 'to spit.' Act of spitting. (F.) Crachement. See Exspitio.

EXCREMENT, Excrementum, Retrimen'tum, Excre'tum, Excre'tio, Perit'toma, Diachore'na, Aph'odas, Aphode'n'na, Apoch'o'reon, Apoc'risis, Aidas, Ar'dalos, from excernere, excretum, (ex, and cernere,) 'to separate,' 'cleanse.' Everything, which is evacuated from the body of an animal by the natural emunctories, as superfluous; such as the fæcal matters, the urine, perspiration, nasal mucus, &c. Generally, however, the term is restricted to the fæcal evacuations;—Purgamenta, Hedra, Sedes, Fæces, Deucus, Cacæ, Spat'ilè, (especially when liquid,) Dejectio alvi'na O'nera alci, Sordes ventris, Hypocho're'ma, Cæ'liu, Hypocho're'sis, Merda, Merdu, Catarrhex'is, Copros, Scor.

EXCREMENT, HUMAN, Stercus humanum.

EXCREMENTIT'IAL, Excrementit'ious, Excrementit'ius, (F.) Excrémenteux, Excrémentiel.

That which is similar to excrement, and forms part of it. Excrementital humours or parts are those destined to be evacuated as incapable of administering to the nutrition of the body.

EXCREMENTO-RECREMENTIT'IAL, Excremento-recrementit'ious. Animal fluids, intended to be partly absorbed and partly rejected.

EXRES'CENCE, Exrescen'tia, Ephy'ma, Phymato'sis, Hypersarco'sis, Sarcophy'ia, Caro exres'cens, from exrescere, (ex, and rescere,) 'to grow upwards.' (Sc.) Sca'lue. (F.) Excroissance. A tumour, which forms at the surface of organs, and especially on the skin, mucous membranes, or ulcerated surfaces. Exrescences differ in size, shape, cause, &c., and each requires its own treatment. Warts, condylonata, polyppi, hemorrhoids, belong to this head.

EXRESCENTIA, Exacerbation, Protuberance, Tumour—e. Carnosa, Sarcoma—e. Fungosa, Fungosity—e. Gingivæ, Epulis—e. Vesicæ urinariæ carnosæ, Cystihypersarcosis.

EXCRETA, see Excretion.

EXCRÉTEUR, Excretory.

EXCRÉTO, Excretion, Excrement—e. Alvina, Defecation—e. Fæcum alvinarum, Defecation—e. Urinæ involuntaria, Enuresis.

EXCRÉ'TION, Excre'tio, E'c'risis, Evacua'tio, Ejectio, Expul'sio, Eges'tio, Diachore'sis, from excernere, excretum, (ex, and cernere,) 'to separate.' The separation or throwing off of those matters, Excre'ta, Eges'ta, Iou'ta, Apiou'ta, from the body of an animal, which are supposed to be useless, as the urine, perspiration, and fæces.

EXCRÉTOIRE, Excretory.

EXCRETORY, Excretorius, (F.) Excréteur ou Excrétoire; same etymon. An Excretory vessel or duct, Ductus excretorius, is one which transmits the fluid secreted by a gland either externally or into the reservoirs into which it has to be deposited. The existence of an excretory duct was regarded as a distinctive character of the glands properly so called.

EXCRETORY ORGAN means any one charged with the office of excreting; thus, the skin is said to be an excretory organ, because through it the perspiration takes place.

EXCRETUM, Excrement.

EXCROISSANCE, Exrescence.

EXCUTIA VENTRIC'ULI, Stomach Brush.

An instrument, composed of iron or brass wire, at one of the extremities of which is a pencil of bristles. Some ancient authors proposed this to extract foreign bodies from the œsophagus, as well as to cleanse the stomach of viscid and tenacious matters adhering to it.

EXECHEBRONCHUS, Bronchocele.

EXECEGLUTI, Exischioi.

EXEDENS, see Herpes edens.

EXELCOSIS, see Ulceration.

EXELCYS'MOS, from ἐξ, 'from,' and ἐλκυω, 'I draw.' Extraction. Also the act of breaking out into ulcers.

EXELCYSMUS, Extraction.

EXENCÉPHALE, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon.' A genus of monsters, in which the encephalon is situate in a great measure out of the cranium, the upper portion of which is almost wholly wanting. Isid. G. St. Hilaire.

EXENTERATION, Exenterismus.

EXENTERIS'MUS, Exenter'isis, Exentera'tio, Exentera'tion, Eviscera'tion, Deviscera'tion, Unbow'elling, Embow'elling or Imbow'elling, Viscera'tion, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and εντερον, 'an intestine.' The operation of taking out the bowels.

EXERA'MA, from ἐξερῶω, 'I throw out.' Any thing cast out. Vomiting; or the matter vomited.—Hippocrates.

EXERCISE, Exercitatio, Exercitium, Ascēsis, Gymnasion, from exercere, exercitum, 'to work.' Every motion of the body arising from the contraction of muscles subjected to the will. Also, the action of any organ whatever. Exercise may be active or passive. The passive are referred to, under the head of Gestation. The chief active exercises are:—walking, running, dancing, hunting, fencing, playing at ball, cricket, racket, quoits, swimming, declamation, and singing. Exercise is an important prophylactic, particularly for those disposed to be plethoric. It improves the digestion; augments the secretions; and, when used in moderation, gives strength to the body; but when carried to excess, produces debility and disease.

EXERRHO'SIS, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ῥεω, 'I flow.' The discharge which takes place by insensible perspiration.

EXFŒTATION, see Pregnancy.

EXFOLIATIF, Exfoliative.

EXFOLIATION, Exfoliatio, Desquamatio, Eclep'isis, Eclep'isis, from ex, and folium, 'a leaf.' By this is meant the separation of the dead portions of a bone, tendon, aponeurosis, or cartilage, under the form of lamellæ or small scales. Exfoliation is accomplished by the instinctive action of the parts, and its object is to detach the dead portion from those subjacent, which are still alive. For this purpose the latter throw out fleshy granulations, and a more or less abundant suppuration occurs, which tends to separate the exfoliated part,—now become an extraneous body. The ancients distinguished exfoliation into sensible and insensible, according as the dead portions of bone were detached in fragments of greater or less size, or in very thin pieces, and in an almost insensible manner. When the dead part embraces all or almost all the substance of a bone, it takes the name Sequestrum.

EXFO'LIATIVE, Exfoliativus, Desquamativus, (F.) Exfoliatif. That which takes away by leaves or scales. The term has been applied to certain medicines, which were regarded as proper to hasten exfoliation, such as alcohol, oil of turpentine, tincture of myrrh, &c.

EXFO'LIATIVE TREPAN, Eclep'isistrep'anum. An ancient raspatory, or instrument for scraping exfoliating portions of bone.

EXHALAISON, Exhalation.

EXHA'LANT, Exhalent, Exhalans, from exhalare, exhalatum, (ex, and halare, 'to breathe,') 'to exhale,' 'throw out.'

EXHALANT VESSELS, Vasa exhalantia, are very minute, and rise from the arterial capillary system. They are situate in every tissue of the body, and on the surface of the mucous and serous membranes and skin; on which each pours its particular fluid. Bichat distinguished three sets. 1. The external, terminating on the mucous and external dermoid system, where they pour the matter of perspiration. 2. The internal, comprising those of the arcolar and medullary tissues, and of synovial surfaces; and, 3. The nutritive exhalants, which vary in each organ where they are found, and preside over the phenomena of composition and increase of every part of the body. The exhalants are the antagonists of the absorbents. They are imaginary vessels, inasmuch as they cannot be detected.

EXHALATIO, Evaporation.

EXHALATION, Exhalatio; same etymon. Anathym'asis, Aponeu'sis, (F.) Exhalaison. A function, by virtue of which certain fluids, obtained from the blood, are spread, in the form of dew, in the arcolæ of the different textures, or at the surface of membranes; either for the sake of being thrown out of the body, or to serve certain purposes. The sweat is a liquid, excrementitious exhalation; the serous fluid of the pleura, a liquid excrementitious exhalation.

Exhalation is, also, applied to that which exhales from any body whatever, organic or inorganic, dead or living.

EXHALATION, PULMONARY, see Perspiration.

EXHAUST'ION, Exar'ysis, Vires exhaust'æ, from exaurire, exhaustum, (ex, and aurire,) 'to draw out.' (F.) Épuisement. Loss of strength, occasioned by excessive evacuations, great fatigue or privation of food, or by disease.

EXHIL'ARANT, Exhil'arans, from ex, and hilaro, 'I make merry.' An agent that exhilarates or enlivens.

EXHUMATION, Exhuma'tio, Effus'io, from ex, and humus, 'the ground.' The disinterment of a corpse. The circumstances which render this necessary are:—1. Judicial investigations relative to the body of the person inhumed. 2. The removal of a body from one cemetery to another; and, 3. The evacuation of cemeteries or sepulchral vaults. The operation is attended with much unpleasant smell and annoyance, and requires the use of disinfecting agents, of which the most powerful is chlorinated lime. See Disinfection. The putrid effluvia from animal substances are not, however, found to excite endemic disease.

EXIDIA AURICULA JUDÆ, Peziza auricula.

EXINANIT'ION, Exinanit'io, from ex, 'out of,' and inanis, 'empty.' Extreme exhaustion; complete evacuation.

EXISCH'IUM. Same etymon as the next. Prominence of the hips.

EXIS'CHIUS, Exis'chus, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ἰσχίον, 'the ischium.' A luxation of the os femoris. Those with large nates, and prominent hips, were formerly called Exis'chioi and Exeche-glu'ti.

EXITU'RA, from exire, exitum, (ex, and eo,) 'to go out.' According to some, any abscess which discharges. Paracelsus calls thus every kind of putrid excrement.

EXITUS. Same etymon. The outer termination or exit of a canal. The termination of a disease.

EXOÄRTERITIS, see Arteritis.

EXOCARDIAC, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDIAL, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDITIS, Pericarditis.

EX'OCHAS, Ex'ochê, from ἐξίχθω, (ἐξ, and ἰχθω,) 'I project.' A soft tumour—as a hemorrhoid—outside of the anus. An outward pile.

EXOCHÉ, Eminence, Exochas.

EXOCHORION, see Chorion.

EXOCOLITIS, see Colitis.

EXOCULA'TIO, from ex, 'out of,' and oculus, 'an eye.' Want of eyes. Want of vision. Blindness.

EXOCYS'TË, Exocys'tis, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and κύστις, 'the bladder.' A prolapsus of the bladder into the urethra. Also called Prolapsus vesic'æ, Adopto'sis vesic'æ, (F.) Reverserment de la vessie.

EXOCYS'TË NOELIA'NA. Protrusion of the inner membrane of the bladder. So called from M. Noel, who first accurately described it.

EXOCYS'TË SOLINGENIA'NA. Protrusion of the neck of the bladder. Called after M. Solingen, who first accurately described it.

EXŒDESIS, Swelling.

EXODIC, Effluent.

EXODIC'ENOUS, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' A term first applied to plants—hence called Ex'ogens—in which the wood increases by annual additions to the outside.

In animal anatomy, processes which shoot out from any part are termed exogenous. An exoge- nous aneurism is one caused by division, from without, of the arterial walls.

EXOGENS, see Exogenous.

EXOGOGE, Extraction.

EXOGONIUM PURGA, Convolvulus jalapa.

EXOGONYAN'CON, from ἐξω, 'outwards,' γόνυ, 'the knee,' and ἄγκων, 'an elbow.' Bowing of the knees outwards.

EXOINE, Excōne, from ex, 'out of,' and idoneus, 'fit,' or rather from exonerare, 'to exonerate' [?]. In France, a certificate of excuse, exemption, or dispensation, given to those summoned to appear before a court of justice, and who are unable to do so.

EXOLCE, Extraction.

EXOLUTION, Syncope.

EXOMETRA, Prolapsus uteri.

EXOMOIOSIS, Assimilation.

EXOMPHALOCELE, Exomphalus.

EXOMPHALUS, Erumbilicatio, Exomphalocelē, Om'phalocelē, Hernia umbilical'is, Om'phaloc'ochē, Omphaloproptosis, Prolap'sus umbil'ici, (F.) Hernie ombilicale, H. du nombril, Umbilical hernia, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ὀμφαλος, 'the navel.' Hernia occurring at the navel. This affection happens more frequently in infants, and takes place by the umbilical ring. In adults, it occurs more commonly in females than in males; and, when it does so, the sac passes in the vicinity of the umbilicus. The organs, found in this kind of hernia, are particularly,—the epiploon, the jejunum, the arch of the colon, and sometimes the stomach. The tumour is, in general, round, and presents all the characters of hernia. It is, commonly, really reducible, and not subject to strangulation. It must be reduced, and retained by an elastic bandage, made in the form of a girdle, and furnished with a pad at its middle part. When strangulated, the stricture may be divided upwards and towards the left side.

EXONC'O'MA, Exonco'sis, from ἐξ, and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A large, prominent tumour. Used, by Galen, for protuberance of the vertebrae after luxation.

EXONCOSIS, Exoncoma—e. Linguae, Glossocoma.

EXONEIROGMUS, Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEURISIS, Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEURISM, Magnetism, animal.

EXOPHTHAL'MIA, Ptosis seu Prolap'sus seu Procidencia Oculi seu Bulbi Oculi, Exorbitismus, Ophthalmocelē, Ophthalmoptosis, Oculi totius prominencia, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'eye,' (F.) Providence de l'œil. A protrusion of the eye from its orbit, occasioned by an abscess or tumour in the areolar texture of the orbit; by exostosis of the parietes of the orbit, &c. In exophthalmia, the eye is pressed forwards, the eyelids are raised and separated, so that they can no longer cover the eye and defend it from the action of extraneous bodies; it becomes inflamed, and the sight is disturbed or destroyed. The treatment of course depends upon the cause.

EXOPHTHALMIA FUNGOSA, Sarcosis bulbi—e. Sarcomatica, Sarcosis bulbi.

EXOPHTHALMUS, same etymon. One whose eyes are very prominent. The opposite to Cœlophthalmus.

EXORBITISMUS, Exophthalmia.

EXORMIA, Papula—e. Lichen, Lichen—e. Prurigo, Prurigo—e. Strophulus, Strophulus.

EXORTUS UNGUIUM, see Nail.

EXOSIS, Luxation.

EXO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

EXOSMA, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ὠθεῖω, 'to move.' A luxated or dislocated limb or organ.

EXOSMIC, Exosmotic.

EXOSMOSE', Exosmosis, Transudation, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and ωσμος, 'impulse.' The opposite to Endosmose. The act by which substances transude from within to without an animal or other membrane.

EXOSMOT'IC, Exosmot'icus, Eros'mic, Eros'micus; same etymon. Belonging to Exosmose:—as an exosmotic current.

EXOSSATIO, Exostosis.

EXOSTEMMA CARIBÆA, Cinchonæ caribææ cortex.

EXOSTOMA, Exostosis.

EXOSTOSE, Exostosis—e. des Dents, Exostosis dentium—e. Sous-ungéale, see Subungual.

EXOSTO'SIS, Hyperostosis, Emphy'ma exostosis, Erosto'ma, Eposto'ma, Eposto'sis, Osteo'ma, Osto'ma, Osteoph'ytia, Exossatio, Ossis Eminencia, (F.) Exostose, Osteophyte; from ἐξ, 'out of,' and οστέον, 'a bone.' An osseous tumour, which forms at the surface of bones, or in their cavities. Various kinds have been enumerated. Ivory Exosto'sis; (F.) E. eburnée;—that which has the appearance and consistence of ivory. Lam'inar Exosto'sis; (F.) E. Laminée;—that which is formed of laminae in superposition, or of distinct filaments. The Spongy Exosto'sis is that whose structure is analogous to the spongy tissue of bones. Exostoses are sometimes distinguished into the true, which seem to be a projection of the osseous substance, and which have the same organization and hardness as that substance; and the false or osteo-sarcoma. Exostosis may depend on syphilis, scrofula, rickets, gout, &c. In such cases, it is important to get rid of the primary disease.

Those exostoses, which occur within the bones, have, by some, been called Enostoses.

EXOSTOSIS, Spina ventosa.

EXOSTOSIS DENTIUM, (F.) Exostose des Dents, Exostosis of the teeth.

EXOSTOSIS SREATOMATODES, Osteosteato'ma—e. Subungual, see Subungual.

EXOTERIC, see Esoteric.

EXOTIC, Exo'ticus, from ἐξω, 'without.' That which comes from abroad. Plants or drugs which are procured from abroad are so called. It is opposed to indigenus.

EXOTICADEN'IA, from exotic, and ἀδένω, 'I dislike.' Aversion for exotic drugs.

EXOTICHEMATOSIS, Transfusion.

EXOTICOMAN'IA, The opposite to exoticadenia. Fondness for exotic remedies.

EXOTICOSYM'PHYSIS, from ἐξωτικός, 'foreign,' and συνφύσις, 'a growing together.' A union or growing together of foreign bodies, as of a foreign body with the human.

EXPANSIO, Expansion—e. Musculosa, Platy'sma myoides.

EXPANSION, Expansio, from expandere, expandere, (ex, and pandere, 'to open,') 'to spread out.' A prolongation or spreading out, presented by certain organs. Thus, we say an oponeurotic expansion, &c.

EXPATRATIO, Ejaculation (of Sperm.)

EXPECTANT, Expectans, from expectare, expectatum, (ex, and spectare, 'to look,') 'to wait.' That which waits:—as Expectant Medicine.—La Médecine expectante. See Expectation.

EXPECTA'TION, Expectatio; same etymon. The word expectation has been applied, in medicine, to that method, which consists in observing the progress of diseases, and removing deranging influences, without prescribing active medicines, unless such shall be imperiously required. It consists, in fact, in leaving the disease almost wholly to the efforts of nature, and has been termed the art of curing diseases by expectation or waiting—Ars sanandi cum expectatio'nē.

EXPECTORANT, Expectorantive, Expectorans, Anacathar'ticus, Sputato'rius, Antib'chicus,

Pty's magogue, from ex, 'out of,' and pectus, pectoris, 'the breast.' A medicine capable of facilitating or provoking expectoration. There is probably no such thing as a direct expectorant. They all act through the system, or by impressions made on parts at a distance, which, through the medium of general, continuous, or contiguous sympathy, excite the secretory vessels of the air-passages into action. The following are the chief reputed expectorants:—Aminoniacum; Asafoetida; Galbanum; Ipeacacuanha; Myroxylon; Myrrha; Inhalations of Iodine, Stramonium, Tar, Burning Wool, Tobacco, &c.; Scilla; Senega, and Tolutanum.

EXPECTORATIO, Expectation—e. Sanguinis, Hæmoptysis—e. Solida, Cynanche trachealis.

EXPECTORATION, Expectoratio, Echel'ysis, Ex h'uidica, Anap'tysis, Prop'tysis, Stethocharis, Anacathar'sis, Anaber'is, Raising. Same etymon. The act of expelling from the chest matters or secretions there collected or existing. It is, likewise, used for the expectorated matter.

EXPECTORATION DE SANG, Hæmoptysis.

EXPECTORATION, PRUNE-JUICE, see Prune-juice.

EXPECTORATIVE, Expectorant.

EXPELLENS, Expulsive.

EXPERIENCE, Experientia, Peira, Empe'ira, from εξ, and πειρα, 'a trial.' A knowledge of things acquired by observation. In medicine, this knowledge can be obtained both by the practitioner's own experience, and by that obtained from tradition and from books. To profit by experience requires a mind capable of appreciating the proper relations between cause and effect; and hence it happens, that false experience, Experientia fallax, is extremely common; and that a man had better, in many instances, trust to that which he has learned from others, than to his own fallacious observation.

The union of accurate observation by the physician with that handed down by medical writers constitutes perfect experience, so far as it is attainable in any individual case.

EXPÉRIENCE, Experiment—e. de Mariotte, Mariotte, experiment of.

EXPERIMENT, Experimentum; same etymon. (F.) Expérience. A trial, made on the bodies of men or animals, for the purpose of detecting the effect of a remedy, or of becoming better acquainted with their structure, functions, or peculiarities. In a more general sense, it means any trial instituted with the intent of becoming better acquainted with any thing. By experiments on living animals, we have obtained much valuable information in the various departments of medicine; but particularly in physiology and toxicology.

EXPERIMENT OF MARIOTTE, see Mariotte.

EXPERIMENT OF WEPFER, Experimentum Wepferianum. An experiment attributed to Wepfer, which consisted in injecting air into the blood-vessels of animals, with the view of observing its effects on the economy.

EXPERTS NUPTIARUM, Virgin.

EXPERT (F.), Exper'tus, from ex, and peritus, 'skilled.' Skilful or of good experience. A physician, charged with the duty of making a report, (F.) Expertise, upon any case of legal medicine.

EXPERTISE, see Expert.

EXPIRATION, Expiratio, Exspiratio, Εξπνοή, Εκπνευστήσις, Εκπνεύσις, Αποπνεύσις, Αποπνοή, Αποπνεύα, from expirare, (ex, and spirare, spiratum) 'to breathe out.' The act of expelling from the chest, the air received during respiration.

EXPIRATORY, Expiratio'ni inser'viens. Same etymon. Relating or appertaining to expiration. The expiratory muscles are all those which contribute to diminish the cavity of the chest, for the purpose of expelling the air contained in the lungs, or of producing expiration. These muscles are, chiefly, the intercostals, triangularis sterni, quadratus lumborum, serratus posticus inferior, the oblique and recti muscles of the abdomen, and the sacro-lumbalis.

EXPLORATIO, Exploration—e. Abdominis, Abdominoseopia.

EXPLORATION, Exploratio, Recongnit'io, from explorare, exploratum, 'to search into.' The act of observing and attentively examining or investigating every thing connected with a case of disease. The word is chiefly used in this sense by the French practitioners.

EXPLORATOR, CHEST. An instrument, proposed by Dr. B. Babington for exploring the chest in cases of empyema. It consists of a needle, contained in the smallest sized canula. This is passed between the ribs into the chest. The needle is then withdrawn, and the escape of fluid indicates the nature of the case.

EXPLORATORIUM, Sound, Specillum.

EXPRES'SION, Expres'sio, Ecpres'nos, Ecthip'sis, from ex, 'out of,' and premere, pressum, 'to press.' The act of compressing a substance, for the purpose of separating from it the fluids which it contains. Also, the manner in which impressions made upon us are depicted; especially in the traits of the countenance.

EXPRESSION OF SWEAT, (F.) Sueur d'expression, is a term given to the passive perspiration observable in very debilitated individuals.

EXPUITION, Exspuition.

EXPULSIO, Excretion—e. Fæcum, Defecation—e. Fœtus, Parturition.

EXPULSIF, Expulsive.

EXPULSION, SPONTANEOUS, Evolution, spontaneous.

EXPULSIVE, Expellens, Expulsorius, (F.) Expulsif, from expellere, expulsum, (ex, and pellere.) 'to drive away.'

An expulsive bandage, (F.) Bandage expulsif, is one constructed with the view of compressing a part, from which we are desirous of expelling pus, serum, &c. Certain medicines were formerly called expulsives, which were believed to have the power of driving the humours towards the skin:—as diaphoretics, and sudorifics.

EXPULTRIX, see Vis expultrix.

EXSANGUE, Exanguinus.

EXSANGUINE, Exanguinus.

EXSANGUINITY, Anæmia.

EXSANGUIS, Exanguinus. Exsanguis is used by Ausonius for one exhausted by venery;—as sanguis meant sperm as well as blood. See Sperm.

EXSARCOMA, Sarcoma.

EXSERCATIO, Excretion.

EXSECTIO VIRILIUM, Castration.

EXSECTUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXSICCATIO, Drying.

EXSICCATIVA, Desiccativa.

EXSOLUTIO, Elysis.

EXSPIRATIO, Exspiration.

EXSPUIT'ION, Exspuit'io, Sputit'io, Sputatio, Anachrem'sis, Apochrem'sis, Chrem'sis, Pty'sis, Anacine'ma, Anacine'sis, (F.) Exspuition, Sputation, from ex, 'out of,' and spuo, 'I spit.' Rejection of the matters accumulated in the pharynx and larynx; spitting.

EXSTASIS, Ecstasis.

EXSTIRPATIO, Extirpation.

EXSTROPHIA, Ex'strophia, Εξ'sτροφή, from εξ, 'out of,' and στροφη, 'turning.' Εξτροφείσις, Εξτροφείσις. Eversion or turning out of a part —as of the eyelids. A term used by M. Chaussier for certain displacements of organs, and especially of the urinary bladder.

EXSTROPH'IA or EX'STROPHY OF THE BLADDER, (F.) Renversement de la Vessie, is a faulty conformation, in which the organ opens above the pubes; so that in the hypogastric region there is a red, mucous surface, formed by the inner coat of the bladder; on which two prominences are distinguishable, corresponding to the openings of the ureters.

EXSUCCATIO, Eechymoma.

EXSUC'TIO, Suc'tio, Emyze'sis, from ex, and sugere, suctum, 'to suck.' The action of sucking.

EXSUDATIO, Ephidrosis.

EXSUFFLATIO, Ephysexis.

EXTA, see Entrails.

EXTASE, Ecstasis.

EXTEMPORA'NEOUS, Extempora'neus, Extempora'lis, (F.) Extemporané, from ex, and tempus, temporis, 'out of time.' Those prescriptions are called 'extemporaneous,' or 'magistral,' which are made on the spot, and composed according to the prescription of the physician.

EXTENSEUR COMMUN DES DOIGTS, Extensor digitorum communis — e. Commun desorteils, Extensor communis digitorum pedis — e. Court du ponce, Extensor pollicis brevis — e. Long du ponce, Extensor longus pollicis — e. Petit desorteils, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis — e. Propre du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti — e. Propre de l'Index, Extensor proprius indicis.

EXTENSIBILITY, Extensibilitas. A property, possessed by certain bodies, of being capable of extension or elongation.

EXTENSIO, Extension, Tetanus.

EXTENSION, Extensio, Tasis, Ec'tasis, Catut'asis, Anat'asis, from extendere, (ex, and tendere, tensum), 'to stretch out.' An operation in surgery, in which either with the hands alone, or by straps, a fractured or luxated limb is pulled strongly, to restore it to its natural position. It is the opposite of Counter-extension.

EXTENSOR. Same etymon. (F.) Extenseur. A muscle, whose office is to extend certain parts.

EXTENSOR BREVIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, Ped'icus, (F.) Calcanéo-phalangien commun, of DUMAS; Muscle pédieux ou petit extenseur desorteils, Calcanéo-sus-phalangien commun — (Ch.), Carré du pied; Short Extensor of the Toes. A muscle, situate on the dorsal region of the foot. It arises from the external surface of the calcaneum, and at the anterior edge of a ligament, which unites that bone to the astragalus. Anteriorly, each of its divisions terminates by a small tendon, which is fixed successively, at the superior part of the posterior extremity of the first phalanx of the great toe, and to the second and last phalanges of the next three toes. Its use is to extend the first four toes, and to direct them a little outwards.

EXTENSOR CARPI RADIALIS BREVIS, see Radialis — e. Carpi radialis longus, see Radialis — e. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital muscles.

EXTENSOR COMMUNIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, E. Longus Digitorum Pedis, E. Digitorum longus, Cnemodactylæ'us, (F.) Péronéo-tibi-sus-phalangien commun, Péronéo-sus-phalangien commun, Extenseur commun des Orteils. This muscle, also, is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is long, thin, flattened, simple, and fleshy above, and divided into four tendons below. It arises from the outer tuberosity of the tibia and the anterior surface of the fibula, and is inserted into the superior part of the posterior extremity of the second and third phalanges of the last four toes. It extends the three phalanges of these toes.

EXTENSOR DIGITORUM COMMUNIS, E. digito-

rum communis manûs cum extenso'rē proprio uncularis, Digitorum Tensor; (F.) Épicondylous-phalangien commun — (Ch.), — Extenseur commun des Doigts, Common Extensor of the Fingers. A long, flattened muscle; simple above, and divided into four portions inferiorly. It is situate at the posterior part of the forearm; arises from the external tuberosity of the humerus; from the aponeurosis of the forearm, and from the aponeurotic septa situate between it and the neighbouring muscles, and is inserted at the posterior surface of the second and third phalanges of the last four fingers. This muscle extends the phalanges of the last four fingers upon each other, and upon the metacarpal bone. It can, also, extend the hand on the forearm.

EXTENSOR POL'ICIS BREVIS, E. minor pollicis manûs seu primi internodii seu pollicis primus seu secun'di internodii (DOUGLAS,) seu secun'di internodii ossis pollicis; (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du ponce, — (Ch.), Court extenseur du ponce. Seated at the posterior and inferior part of the forearm. It is thin, long, and broader at its middle than at the extremities. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted behind the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the thumb, and aids in supination.

EXTENSOR POL'ICIS LONGUS; E. major pollicis manûs seu secun'di internodii seu pollicis secun'dus seu ter'tii internodii (DOUGLAS,) seu internodii ossis pollicis, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du ponce, — (Ch.), Muscle long extenseur du ponce. This muscle is long, flat, and fusiform; and is seated at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted at the posterior part of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the last phalanx of the thumb upon the first.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS IN'DICIS, E. proprius primi dig'iti manûs, E. Indicis, Indicator seu secun'di internodii in'dicis proprius. (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien de l'Index, — (Ch.), Extenseur propre de l'Index. This muscle is long and thin; broader in the middle than at the extremities; and is situate at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna, and is inserted at the posterior part of the upper extremity of the second and third phalanges of the index-finger. It extends the three phalanges of the index-finger; and has, besides, the same uses as the other extremities of the fingers.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS MIN'IMI DIG'ITI, (F.) Épicondylous-phalangien du petit doigt, — (Ch.), Extenseur propre du petit doigt. Situate on the inside of the Extensor communis digitorum. It arises from the external condyle of the os humeri and the aponeurotic septa seated between it, the extensor communis digitorum, and the extensor carpi ulnaris; and is inserted into the last two phalanges of the little finger. Its use is to extend the little finger, and even the hand upon the forearm.

EXTENSOR PRO'PRIUS POL'ICIS PEDIS, E. proprius Hallucis seu Longus (DOUGLAS,) seu pollicis longus, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du ponce, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du ponce, — (Ch.) This muscle is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is fleshy, broad, flat above; small and tendinous below. It arises from the anterior part of the middle third of the fibula, and is inserted into the posterior part of the superior extremity of the last phalanx of the great toe. It extends the last phalanx of the great toe upon the first, and the first upon the first metacarpal bone.

EXTENSOR PRIMI INTERNODII, E. pollicis brevis — e. Secundi internodii, E. pollicis brevis, Extensor longus pollicis — e. Secundi internodii indicis proprius, E. proprius indicis — e. Tertii internodii, E. longus pollicis — e. Tertii internodii indicis, Prior annularis — e. Tertii internodii minimi digiti, Abductor minimi digiti — e. Ossis metacarpi pollicis manus, Abductor longus pollicis — e. Pollicis longus, E. proprius pollicis pedis — e. Pollicis secundus, E. longus pollicis — e. Minor pollicis manus, E. pollicis brevis — e. Primus pollicis, Abductor longus pollicis.

EXTENSOR TARSII MAGNUS, E. Tarsi suralis. A name given, by some anatomists, to the gastrocnemius and soleus combined.

EXTENSOR TARSII MINOR, Plantar muscle.

EXTENUATIO, Emaciation.

EXTERGENTIA, Detergents.

EXTERNAL DISEASES, Extrin'sic Diseases, Morbi extrin'seci, Surgical diseases, (F. Maladies externes. Those diseases which occupy the surface of the body, and form the object of surgical pathology, requiring, generally, external means, or surgical operations.

EXTERNAT. The post or office of an externe.

EXTERNE, see House-surgeon.

EXTERNUS AURIS, Laxator tympani — e. Mallei, Laxator tympani.

EXTESTICULATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXTINCTIO, Death — e. Hydrargyri, Extinction of Mercury — e. Mercurii, Extinction of Mercury.

EXTINCTIO VOCIS, (F. Extinction de voix. The French use this term for cases in which the voice is not wholly suppressed, but produces only feeble sounds: — Incomplete aphonia).

EXTINCTION OF MERCURY, Extinctio Mercurii seu Hydrargyri. Trituration of mercury with lard or other substance, until the metallic globules disappear. The mercury is then so divided, that it forms a black powder, generally considered to be a protoxide of mercury, but, perhaps, erroneously.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpation — e. Linguae, Glossostereosis — e. Testiculorum, Castratio.

EXTIRPATION, Extirpatio, Extirpatio, Ablatio, Apha'esis, from extirpare, (ex, and stirps, 'a root,') 'to root out.' The complete removal or destruction of any part, either by cutting instruments or the action of caustics. Thus, we speak of the extirpation of cancer, polypus, encysted tumour, &c.

EXTOMIUS, Eunuch.

EXTOZOA, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOAIRES, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOARIA, Ectozoa.

EXTRA-PELVIO-PUBI-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator externus.

EXTRACTA, see Extractum — c. Fluida, see Extractum.

EXTRACTIF, Extractive.

EXTRACTION, Extractio, Exa'esis, Ex-og'o'yê, Exolecè, Exeley's'mus, Enchylo'sis, from extrahere, extractum, (ex, and trahere,) 'to draw out.' The act of removing an extraneous substance from any part of the body. Thus, a splinter is said to be extracted. It is also applied to the removal of certain parts. The cataract is said to be extracted; a tooth is extracted, when carious, &c.

EXTRACTIVE, (F. Extractif. Same etymon. A peculiar, immediate principle, which has been admitted in extracts. Thus, bitter extractive is the immediate principle of bitter vegetables, &c.

EXTRACTS, see Extractum — e. Fluid, see Extractum.

EXTRACTUM, Extract, Ecchyloma, (F. Extrait, Apostolé. Same etymon. An extract is prepared by evaporating vegetable solutions, till a tenacious mass is obtained. When prepared from an infusion or decoction, it is called a scutery; from ether, an etheral; and from alcohol, an alcoholic or a spirituous extract. Both kinds contain all the principles of the vegetable that are soluble in the menstrua with which they are prepared; but the volatile parts are dissipated, and some of the fixed parts are decomposed; the proper extractive is oxygenized, and the virtues of the vegetable substance consequently altered or destroyed. Extracts are hard, soft, or fluid: the consistence of the soft being such as to retain the pillular form without the addition of a powder. A patent was taken out, many years ago, by a Mr. Barry, of London, for preparing them in vacuo; and, as the temperature is much lower than in the ordinary method, the virtues of the plant are less altered, and the extracts are generally green. Extracts are also prepared by displacement or percolation. They have, likewise, received different names, according to their predominant principle. The gummy or mucous, or mucilaginous, are those which are mainly composed of gum or mucilage. Gum tragacanth may be considered a pure gummy extract. Gelatinous extracts are those composed especially of gelatin; resinous extracts, those of a resinous character; extracto-resinous, those composed of extractive or colouring matter and resin; gum-resinous, those containing gum and resin; and saponaceous or saponaceous saline, those containing a notable quantity of saline substances and a resinous matter, so combined with mucus and other soluble substances, that they cannot be separated. Under the name Fluid Extracts—Extracta Fluida—a class of preparations has been introduced into the United States Pharmacopœia (1851), the distinctive character of which is, the concentration of the active ingredients of medicinal substances into a small bulk, in the liquid form. Extractum sarsaparillæ fluidum is one of these.

EXTRACTUM ABSINTHII CACUMINUM, Extract of Wormwood. (A decoction defecated and evaporated.) The flavour is dissipated along with the essential oil. It is a bitter tonic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, in pill.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI, Extract of Aconite, Succus spissatus aconiti napelli, (from the inspissated juice without defecation.) It is esteemed to be narcotic and diuretic, and has been given in the cases referred to under Aconitum. Dose, gr. j, gradually increasing it.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Aconite. (Aconit. in pulv. crass. ℥j; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Moisten the aconite with half a pint of diluted alcohol: let it stand for 24 hours: transfer it to a displacement apparatus, and gradually add the remainder of the diluted alcohol. When the last portion of this has penetrated the aconite, pour in from time to time water sufficient to keep the powder covered. Stop the filtration when the liquid which passes begins to produce a precipitate, as it falls, in that which has already passed. Distil off the alcohol, and evaporate to a proper consistence.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM ALLOËS, Extract of Aloes, E. aloës aquosum seu purificatum, Purified extract of aloes. (The gummy part extracted by boiling water, defecated and inspissated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv.

EXTRACTUM ALOES AQUOSUM, E. aloës — e. Aloës purificatum, E. aloës.

EXTRACTUM ANTHEMIDIS, E. anthemidis nobilis seu chamæmeli seu florum chamæmeli, Extract of Chamomile. The volatile oil is dissipated in this preparation. It is a pure, grateful bitter, and is tonic and stomachic. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM ASPARAGI, see Asparagus.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ, Succus spissatus atropæ belladonnæ, Extract of Belladonna (an expressed juice inspissated). Properties same as those of the plant. Dose, gr. ʒ, gradually increased. It dilates the pupil when applied to the eye.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic extract of Belladonna. (Prepared like the extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM CANNABIS, see Bangue.

EXTRACTUM CARNIS, Extract of Flesh. An extract formed by evaporating beef tea in a water-bath. It can be kept for sale. An ounce of it may represent thirty-two ounces of meat.

EXTRACTUM CASCARILLÆ RESINOSUM, Resinous extract of cascarilla. (Cort. cascarilla, in pulv. crass. ℥j; Sp. vini rect. ℥iv. Digest for four days; then decant and strain; boil the residuum in ten pints of water to two; filter and evaporate the decoction, and distil the tincture in a retort, till both are thickened; then mix and evaporate to a pilular consistence.) Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM CATECHU, Catechu — e. Catharticum — E. Coleoynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CATHOLICUM, (F.) Extrait Catholique. This epithet is given to pills composed of aloes, black hellebore, and coleoynth, resin of jalap, and scammony. See, also, Extractum coleoynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CHAMÆMELI, E. Anthemidis — e. Cicutæ, E. Conii.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ, E. Corticis Peruviani seu Cinchonæ Mollæ, Extract of Cinchona or of Bark. (A decoction evaporated.) The active principles are similar to those of the bark in substance; but it is not so effectual, owing to the chymical change induced in the drug during the boiling. When reduced, by drying, to a state fit for being powdered, it is called the Hard Extract of Bark, Extractum Corticis Peruviani durum, E. Cinchonæ durum. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ FLAVÆ, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842), is directed to be prepared as follows: Yellow Bark, in coarse powder, ℥j; Alcohol, Oiv; Water, a sufficient quantity. Macerate the Peruvian bark with the alcohol for four days; then filter by a displacement apparatus, and when the liquid ceases to pass, pour gradually on the bark water sufficient to keep its surface covered. When the filtered tincture measures four pints, set it aside, and proceed with the filtration until six pints of infusion are obtained. Distil off the alcohol from the tincture and evaporate the infusion till the liquids are respectively brought to the consistence of thin honey; then mix and evaporate to form an extract.—Ph. U. S.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ PALMIDÆ (Ph. L. & E.) May be prepared in the same manner.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RESINOSUM, E. Cinchonæ lancifoliæ seu Cinchonæ Rubræ resinosum, Resinous Extract of Bark, E. Cinchonæ Resinæ. The aqueo-spirituos extract contains both the extractive and resin of the bark. Dose, gr. x to xxx.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RUBRÆ (Ph. U. S.), may be prepared in the same manner as Extractum cinchonæ flavæ.

EXTRACTUM COLCHICI, Extract of Colchicum, (Ph. L.), is prepared in the same manner as Extractum Aconiti. Dose, one or two grains.

EXTRACTUM COLCHICI ACETICUM, Acetic or Acetic Extract of Colchicum. (Colchic. rad. in pulv. crass. ℥j, Acid. acet. ℥ʒiv, Aquæ q. s. To the acid add a pint of water, and mix this with the root. Put the mixture in a percolator, and pour on water until the liquid that passes has little or no taste. Evaporate to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. j to gr. iij.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYNTHIDIS, Extract of Colocynthis. (Ph. L. & E.) A cathartic, in the dose of from gr. v to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYNTHIDIS COMPOSITUM, E. Catharticum seu Catholicum seu Quercetani. Compound Extract of Colocynthis. (Colocynthis. pulp. concis. ʒvj, Aloës pulv. ʒxij, Scammon. pulv. ʒiv, Cardamom. pulv. ʒj, Saponis ʒij. Alcohol. dilut. cong. Macerate the pulp in the spirit at a gentle heat for four days; strain; add the aloes and scammony; then distil off the spirit and mix in the cardamom seeds. Ph. U. S.) It is an active cathartic, and is used in obstinate visceral obstructions, &c. Dose, gr. vj to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM CONII, E. Cicutæ, Succus cicutæ

spissatus, S. spissatus conii maculati, Extract of Hemlock. (Expressed juice inspissated without defecation.) Employed in the same cases as the conium. Dose, gr. iij to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM CONII ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Hemlock. (Prepared like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, two or three grains.

EXTRACTUM CONVULVULI JALAPÆ, E. jalapæ —e. Corticis Peruviani, E. Cinchonæ.

EXTRACTUM CUBEBÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Cubebs. (Cubebs exhausted by ether through percolation, and the solution evaporated. Ph. U. S.) Dose, from 5 to 30 minims.

EXTRACTUM DIGITALIS, Extract of Foxglove. Prepared like Extractum conii. Dose, from half a grain to two grains.

EXTRACTUM DULCAMARÆ, Extract of Bittersweet. (Prepared by displacement from bittersweet in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM ELATHEMI, Elate'rium, Extract of Eluterium. (The fecula of the expressed juice.) It is violently cathartic, hydragogue, and sometimes emetic. Dose, gr. ss every hour till it operates.

EXTRACTUM ERGOTÆ, Ergotin.

EXTRACTUM GENIS'TÆ CACUMINUM, Extract of Broom Top. Diuretic and stomachic. Dose, ℥ss to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM GENTIANÆ, E. Gentianæ luteæ seu Radicis Gentianæ, Extract of Gentian. (The evaporated decoction.) Prepared also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Properties like those of Gentian. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM GLYCYRRHIZÆ, Succus Glycyrrhizæ inspissatus seu Liquiriti'æ, Spanish Juice, Italian Juice, Extract of Liquorice. (The evaporated decoction.) It is demulcent, taken ad libitum.

Refined Liquorice, which is sold in the form of cylinders, is made by gently evaporating a solution of the pure extract of liquorice with half its weight of gum Arabic, rolling the mass and cutting it into lengths, and then polishing, by rolling them together in a box.

EXTRACTUM GRAMINIS, Extract of Grass. An extract prepared from Triticum repens. It is considered by the Germans to be a mild tonic; and is greatly used, especially in convalescence from fever. It is probably devoid of all injurious properties, and as probably totally inefficacious.

EXTRACTUM HÆMATOX'YLI, E. Hæmatoxyli Campechi'ani seu Scobis Hæmatoxyli, Extract of Logwood. (The evaporated decoction.) It is astringent. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, E. Hellebori nigri, Extract of Black Hellebore. (The evaporated decoction.) In large doses, this is cathartic; in smaller, diuretic, resolvent, [?] and emmenagogue. [?] Dose, as a cathartic, gr. x to ℥j; as an emmenagogue, gr. iij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842), is prepared from Black Hellebore, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM HU'MULI, E. Lu'puli, Extract of hops. (The evaporated decoction.) It is tonic, anodyne, [?] diuretic. [?] Dose, gr. v to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI, Succus spissatus Hyoscyami, Extract of Henbane. (The expressed juice, inspissated without defecation.) Its virtues are narcotic. Dose, gr. v to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Henbane. (Prepared from leaves of Hyoscyamus, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two grains.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ, E. Convolvuli Jalapæ seu Jalap'ii seu Jalap'i, Extract of Jalap. (A spirituous tincture distilled; and an aqueous decoction evaporated; the residua being mixed together: kept both soft and hard.) It is cathartic and hydragogue. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ of the Ph. U. S. is prepared like Extractum einchina, Ph. U. S.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ RESINOSUM, Resinua Jalap'æ, Resinous Extract of Jalap. This is cathartic.

EXTRACTUM JUGLANDIS, Extract of Butternut. (Prepared by displacement from butternut, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM KRAME'RIÆ, Extract of Rhatany. (Prepared by displacement from rhatany, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM LACTU'CÆ, Succus spissatus Lactucæ sativæ, Extract of Lettuce. (Leaves of fresh lettuce lbj; beat them in a stone mortar, sprinkling them with water; then express the juice and evaporate, without allowing it to subside until it acquires a proper degree of consistence.) It is said to be narcotic and diaphoretic. Dose, gr. iij to gr. x.

An extract is, sometimes, made from the juice of the wild lettuce, Lactuca viro'sa, which is regarded as diuretic.

EXTRACTUM MARTIS ACETICUM, Ferri Acetas —e. Nucis Vomicae, see Strychnos nux vomica.

EXTRACTUM NUCIS VOMICÆ, Extract of Nux Vomica (Nucis Vomice). lbj; Alcohol, q. s. Expose the nux vomica to steam until it is softened, slice, dry and grind to powder. Put it into a percolator, and pour alcohol upon it gradually, until the liquor passes without bitterness. Filter, distil off the alcohol, and evaporate. Ph. U. S.) Dose, from half a grain to two grains.

EXTRACTUM OPII, E. Opii aquosum seu Thebaicum seu Opii gummosum, Extract of Opium, Laudanum opiatum seu simplex, Opium colatum seu depuratum. (A watery solution defecated and evaporated.) Dose, gr. ss to gr. v,—about half that of opium.

EXTRACTUM PANCHYMOG'GUM. A drastic medicine, composed of colocynth, bruised with its seeds; senno bruised; black hellebore root, Agaric, Scammony, in powder, Extract of Aloe, and Powder of Diarrhodon.

EXTRACTUM PAPAVERIS, E. Papaveris somniferi seu Papaveris albi, Extract of white poppy. (The decoction evaporated.) It possesses nearly the same virtues as opium, but is much weaker. Dose, gr. ij to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM PAREIRÆ, Extract of Pareiru Brava. Prepared like Extractum Hæmatoxyli. Dose, ten grains to half a drachm.

EXTRACTUM PIP'ERIS FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Black Pepper. (Black pepper exhausted by ether through percolation, the solution evaporated, and the piperin in crystals separated by expression. Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two minims.

EXTRACTUM PODOPHYLLI, Extract of May-apple. (Prepared from podophyllum, in coarse powder, in the same manner as the Extract of einchina.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv, as a cathartic.

EXTRACTUM PURGANS, see Hedera helix —e. Quercetani, E. Colocyntidis compositum.

EXTRACTUM QUASSIÆ, Extract of Quassia. (Prepared by displacement from Quassin rasped.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, as a tonic, five grains.

EXTRACTUM CORTICIS QUERCUS, Extract of oak bark. (The decoction evaporated.) It is astringent and tonic.

EXTRACTUM QUINIÆ, Quiniæ sulphas inspissatus. This is made by evaporating the liquor poured off the crystals of sulphate of quinia to the consistence of a pilular mass. Twenty-four grains will generally arrest an intermittent.

EXTRACTUM RHEI, Extract of Rhubarb. (A solution in diluted alcohol evaporated.) Uses like those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x. to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM RHEI FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Rhubarb. (Rhej in pulv. crass. ℥viiij, Sacchar. ℥v, Tinct. Zingib. f℥ss, Ol. fœnicul., Ol. anis. āā ℥iv; Alcohol. dilut. q. s. Digest the rhubarb, mixed with an equal bulk of coarse sand, with ℥xij of the diluted alcohol for 24 hours. Put the mass into the percolator, and pour on diluted alcohol until the liquid that passes has little odour or taste of rhubarb; evaporate to f℥v; dissolve it in the sugar, and mix the tincture of ginger and oils. Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM RUDII, Extract of Rudiis, (F.) Extrait de Rudiis. Pills made of colocynth, agaric, scammony, roots of black hellebore and jalap, socotrine aloes, cinnamon, mace, cloves, and alcohol.

EXTRACTUM RUTÆ GRAVEOLENTIS, E. Ruta seu foliorum Rutæ, Extract of Rue. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic, stomachic. The volatile oil being dissipated in the boiling, this is not a good preparation. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM FOLIORUM SABI-NÆ, Extract of Savine. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic. The same remarks may be made on this preparation as on the last. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SANGUINIS BOVINI, see Blood.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ, Extract of Sarsaparilla. (A strained decoction evaporated.) Virtues the same as those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. Extractum Sarsaparillæ of the United States Pharmacopœia is prepared from Sarsaparilla, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ FLUIDUM, E. Sarsæ Liqueidum, E. Sarsæ Fluidum, Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. concis. et contus. ℥xvj, Glycyrrhiz. contus., Sassafr. rad. contus., āā ℥ij, Mezerei concis. ℥vj, Sacchar. ℥xij, Alcohol. dilut. Oviij. Macerate, with the exception of the sugar, for 14 days; express and filter; evaporate to f℥xij; and add the sugar. Ph. U. S.) Dose, a fluidrachm.

EXTRACTUM SATURNI, GOULARD'S, Liquor plumbi subacetatis—e. Scobis hæmatoxyli, E. hæmatoxyli.

EXTRACTUM SENNÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Senna. (Sennæ in pulv. crass. ℥iijss; Sacchar. ℥xx; Ol. fœnicul. f℥j; Sp. Ether. compos. f℥ij; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Mix the senna and diluted alcohol; let the mixture stand for 24 hours; put it into a percolator, and gradually pour on water mixed with one-third its bulk of alcohol, until a gallon and a half of liquid shall have passed; evaporate to f℥xx; add the sugar, and, when it is dissolved, the compound spirit of ether holding the oil in solution. Dose, f℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SPIGELLÆ ET SENNÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Spigelia and Senna. Spigel. in pulv. crass. ℥ij; Sennæ in pulv. crass. ℥vj; Sacchar. ℥iijss; Potass. carbon. ℥vj; Ol. Carui, Ol. Anisi, āā f℥ss; Alcohol. dilut. q. s. Pour on the spigelia and senna Oij of diluted alcohol; let it stand for 48 hours; place it in a percolator, and pour on gradually diluted alcohol until half a gallon has passed; evaporate to a pint; add the carbonate of potassa; and afterwards the sugar, previously triturated with the oils, and dissolve. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM STRAMONII, E. Stramonii foliorum, (Ph. U. S.), Extract of Stramonium or of Stramonium leaves. (The expressed juice inspissated.) The Extractum Stramonii Seminis, Extract of Stramonium Seed, is made from the powdered seed by means of diluted alcohol, and with the aid of the percolator;—the solution being evaporated. Ph. U. S.) Used as a narcotic in asthma and other spasmodic affections. Dose, gr. ij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM STYRACIS, see StyraX.

EXTRACTUM TARAXACI, E. Herba et Radicis Taraxaci, Extract of Dandelion. (The strained juice evaporated.) It has been considered deobstruent, laxative, and diuretic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM THEBAICUM, E. Opii.

EXTRACTUM UVE URSI, Extract of Uva Ursi. (The Decoction evaporated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xxx.

EXTRACTUM VALERIANÆ, Extract of Valerian. (An expressed decoction evaporated.) The virtues of the valerian being dependent upon its essential oil, this is an objectionable preparation. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

A fluid extract of Valerian, Extractum Valerianæ fluidum, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia U. S. (1851). It is prepared by exhausting the valerian by ether and alcohol, through the percolator, and evaporating. Dose, f℥j or f℥ij.

EXTRAIT, Extract—e. Alcoholiche de noix vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica—e. de Kino, Kino—e. des Fruits, Rob—e. Hémostatique de Bonjean, Ergotin—e. de Viande, Osmazome.

EXTRA-NEOUS BODY, Foreign body, from extra, 'without.' Corpus extra-neum, C. exter-num, C. ali-enum, (F.) Corps étranger. Any solid, liquid, or gaseous substance, inanimate or animate, proceeding from without, or formed in the body; and which constitutes no part of the body, but occupies, in the substance of the textures, or some of the cavities, a place foreign to it.

EXTRAVASATION, Extravasatio, Extravasation, from extra, 'out of,' and vasa, 'vessels.' Escape of a fluid—extravasatum—from the vessel containing it, and infiltration or effusion of the fluid into the surrounding textures.

EXTRAVASATUM, see Extravasatio.

EXTRAVASION, Extravasation.

EXTREMITY, Extremitas, (F.) Extrémité; from extremus, 'the outermost;' the end or termination of a thing. The limbs, acrotéria, have been so called,—as the upper and lower extremities. See Membrum. It has been, also, used to express the last moments of life; as when we say, a patient is in 'extremity,' (F.) le malade est à l'extrémité, à toute extrémité.

EXTRINSIC, Extrinsecus. 'From without.' That which comes from without. This term has been used for muscles, which surround certain organs and attach them to the neighbouring parts; in order to distinguish them from other muscles, which enter into the intimate composition of those organs, and which have been named intrinsic. Thus, there are extrinsic and intrinsic muscles of the tongue, ear, &c.

EXTROVERSIO, Exstrophia.

EXTUBERANTIA, Protuberance.

EXTUBERATIO, Protuberance.

EXTUMEFACIO, Swelling.

EXTUSIO, from ex, and tussis, 'a cough.'

'I cough with expectoration.'

EXUBER, from ex, 'out of,' 'devoid of,' and ubera, 'breasts;' Apogulac'tos. 'A child which has been weaned.'

EXUDATION CORPUSCLES, see Corpuscles. exudation.

EXULCERATIO, Ecthlimma, Ulceration—e. Uteri, Hysterelcosis—e. Ventriculi, Gastrelcosis.

EXUMBILICATIO, Exomphalos.

EXUSTIO, Cauterization.

EXUTORIUM, Fonticulus.

EXUTORY, Fonticulus.

EXUVIÆ, see Exuviation.

EXUVIATION, Exuviatio, from exuere, 'to put off.' The shedding or casting off of parts, as the deciduous teeth, the skins of serpents, &c., which are hence called Exuvia.

EYE, Sax. ear, Teuton. Auge, Oculus, Ops, Omma, Ophthalmos, Illos, Op'tilos (Doric.) Visorium Org'anum, (Sc.) Ee, plural Een, (F.) Oeil. The eye is the immediate organ of vision. It is seated in the orbit, while its dependencies, called by Haller Tutamina Oculi, occupy the circumference of the cavity, and are composed of the eyebrows, the eyelids, cilia, glands of Meibomius, &c. The Ball, Globe, or Bulb of the Eye, Bulbus Oculi, is covered anteriorly by the tunica conjunctiva; is moved by six muscles, four straight, two oblique, and is constituted of membranes, as the sclerotic, cornea, choroid, tunica Jacobi, retina, iris, hyaloid, and, in the fœtus, the membrana pupillaris; and of fluids, called Humours, or Media,—the aqueous, crystalline, and vitreous. The eyeball is invested with a membranous tunic, which separates it from the other structures of the orbit, and forms a smooth, hollow surface, by which its motions are facilitated. This investment has been called cellular capsule of the eye, ocular capsule, tunica vaginalis oculi, vaginal coat, and submuscular fascia of the eye. The vessels of the eye proceed from the ophthalmic artery. The nerves, except the optic, are chiefly furnished from the ophthalmic ganglion. The following are the dimensions, &c., of the organ, on the authority of Petit, Young, Gordon, and Brewster:

Length of the antero-posterior diameter of the eye.....	0.91
Vertical chord of the cornea.....	0.45
Versed sine of the cornea.....	0.11
Horizontal chord of the cornea.....	0.47
Size of pupil seen through the cornea, 0.27 to 0.13
Size of pupil diminished by magnifying power of cornea to, from.....	0.25 to 0.12
Radius of the anterior surface of the crystalline.....	0.30
Radius of posterior surface.....	0.22
Principal focal distance of lens.....	1.73
Distance of the centre of the optic nerve from the foramen centrale of Sömmerring.....	0.11
Distance of the iris from the cornea.....	0.10

Distance of the iris from the anterior surface of the crystalline.....	0.02
Field of vision above a horizontal line, 50° } 120°
Field of vision below a horizontal line, 70° }
Field of vision in a horizontal plane.....	150°
Diameter of the crystalline in a woman above fifty years of age.....	0.378
Diameter of the cornea.....	0.400
Thickness of the crystalline.....	0.172
Thickness of the cornea.....	0.042

EYE-BREEN, see Supercilium.

EYE BRIGHT, Euphrasia officinalis, Lobelia Veronica—e. Brow, Supercilium.

EYE, CAT'S, Amaurotic, see Amaurotic—e. Cellular capsule of the, see Eye.

EYE, CYLINDRICAL. An eye is so called in which the rays of light, on entering the organ, are refracted to a nearer focus in a vertical than in a horizontal plane.

EYE DROP, Tear.

EYE GLASS, Scaphium oculare, see Spectacles. Also, a glass adapted for the application of collyria to the eye.

EYE, GUM OF THE, Chassie.

FACE, Facies, Vultus, Voltus, Prosopon, (F.) Face. The face is the anterior part of the head. It is formed of 13 bones, viz., the two superior maxillary, the two malar, the two ossa nasi, the two ossa unguis, the vomer, the two ossa spongiosa inferiora, the two palatine bones, and the inferior maxillary, without including the frontal portion of the os frontis, and the 32 teeth, which may be considered to form part of it. Its numerous muscles are chiefly destined for the organs of sight, hearing, taste, and smell. Its arteries proceed from the external carotid: its veins end in the jugular, and its nerves draw their origin immediately from the brain.

The face experiences alterations in disease, which it is important to attend to. It is yellow in jaundice, pale and puffy in dropsy; and its expression is very different, according to the seat of irritation, so that, in infants, by an attention to medical physiognomy, we can often detect the seat of disease.

Hippocrates has well depicted the change which it experiences in one exhausted by long sickness, by great evacuations, excessive hunger, watchfulness, &c., threatening dissolution. Hence this state has been called Facies Hippocratica, Facies Cadaverica, F. Tortuâlis. In this, the nose is pinched; the eyes are sunk; the temples hollow; the ears cold, and retracted; the skin of the forehead tense, and dry; the complexion livid; the lips pendent, relaxed, and cold, &c.

The term Face (F.) is likewise given to one of the aspects of an organ; thus, we say, the superior face of the stomach.

FACE AGUE, Neuralgia, facial.

FACE INJECTÉE, see Vultueux—f. Vultueuse, see Vultueux.

FACET', (F.) Facette. Diminutive of Face. A small face. A small, circumscribed portion of the surface of a bone, as the articular facette of a bone.

FACHINGEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are at no great distance from those of Geilenau, and two miles north of Wisbaden. They contain free carbonic acid: carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda; chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

FACIAL, Facialis, from facies, 'the face.' Belonging to, or connected with, the face.

FACIAL ANGLE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL ARTERY, La'bial artery, Au'gnlar or external max'illary artery, A. palato-labial—(Ch.), is a branch of the external carotid, which rises beneath the digastricus, and is distributed to almost every part of the face. It furnishes the inferior palatal, submental, superior labial, inferior labial, and dorsalis nasi.

FACIAL LINE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL NERVE, Ramus du'rior sept'imæ conjugatio'nis, Sympathet'icus minor, Par sept'imum seu facia'le, Commu'nicaus fa'ciei nervus, Portio dura of the 1th pair, Res'piratory nerve of the face. This nerve arises from the inferior and lateral part of the tuber annulare, in the groove which separates it from the medulla oblongata, external to the corpora olivaria, and by the side of the auditory nerve. It issues from the cranium by the meatus auditorius internus; enters the aqueduct of Fallopius; receives a branch of the Vidian nerve; forms a gangliform swelling—Intumescen'tia gangliform'is;—sends off filaments to the internal muscles of the malleus and stapes; furnishes, according to many anatomists, that called Chorda Tympani; makes its exit at the foramen stylo-mastoideum, and divides into two branches—the temporo-facial, and cervico-facial. On the face it is termed Pes anseri'nus, Plexus nervo'rum anseri'nus. See Portio Wisbergii.

FACIAL VEIN, Pal'ato-labial—(Ch.), arises between the skin and frontalis muscle, and bears the name Vena Fronta'lis, (F.) Veine frontale ou V. Préparate. It then descends, vertically, towards the greater angle of the eye, where it is called Angula'ris; and afterwards descends, obliquely, on the face, to open into the internal jugular, after having received branches, which correspond with those of the facial artery. It is only in the latter part of its course that it is called Facial Vein. Chaussier calls the external carotid artery, Facial Artery.

FACIENT, faciens, 'making,' from facio, 'I make.' A suffix, as in Calefacient, Rubefacient, &c., 'warm making,' 'red making.'

FACIES, Face—f. Cataverica, see Face—f. Concava pedis, Sole—f. Hippocratica, see Face—f. Inferior pedis, Sole—f. Tortualis, see Face.

FACTICE, Factitious.

FACTIT'IOUS, Factit'ius, (F.) Factice, from facere, factum, 'to make.' Artificial. That which is made by art, in opposition to what is natural, or found already existing in nature. Thus, we say, factitious mineral waters, for artificial mineral waters.

FACULTAS, Faculty—f. Auctrix, Plastic force—f. Formatrix, Plastic force—f. Nutrix, Plastic force—f. Vegetativa, Plastic force—f. Zotica, Vis vitalis.

FACULTATES NATURALES, see Function.

FACULTY, Facultas, Dy'namis, Power, Virtue, (F.) Faculté, from facilis, (itself from facere, 'to make,') 'what can be made or done.' The power of executing any function or act. The collection of the intellectual faculties constitutes the understanding. We say, also, vital faculties for vital properties, &c. Faculty likewise means the whole body of the medical profession, and, also, a body of medical or other professors.

FÆCAL, Stercoraceous—f. Retention, Constipation.

FÆCES, Plural of Fæx; Feces, Chersæ, 'the dregs of any thing.' Feculence, (F.) Fèces. The alvine evacuations are so called; (F.) Garderobes; the excrements, Impurita'tes alvinae, Fæcal matter. See Excrement.

FÆCES INDURATÆ, Seybala.

FÆCOSITAS, Feculence.

FÆCULA, Fecula.

FÆCULENTIA, Feculence.

FÆCUNDATIO, Fecundatio.

FÆCUNDITAS, Fecundity.

FÆX, Feculence.

FAGARA OCTAN'DRA, Xanthoxylum octan'dra, Elaph'rium tomento'sum, An'yris tomento'sum, from fagus, 'the beech,' which it resembles. Ord. Rutaceæ. The systematic name of the plant, which affords Tacamaha'ca, a resinous substance, that exudes from the tree Tacamahaca, which has a fragrant, delightful smell, was formerly in high estimation, as an ingredient in warm, stimulating plasters, and was given internally, like the balsams generally. The East India Tacamahac, Balsamum Vir'idæ seu Cal'aba seu Mariae, O'leum Mar'ia, (F.) Baume de Calaba, Baume vert, B. Marie, is yielded by Calophyllum inophyllum seu Balsama'ria Inophyllum.

The name Tacamahac is also given to a resin furnished by Populus balsamifera seu tacamahaca, (F.) Peuplier baumier ou de la Caroline, which grows in the northern parts of America and Siberia.

FAGARA PIPERITA, (F.) Fagarier poivré; a native of Japan, possesses the qualities of pepper, and is used as such by the Japanese. It is, also, employed as a rubefacient cataplasm.

FAGARAS'TRUM CAPEN'SË. Nat. Ord. Xanthoxylæ. A South African plant, the fruit of which is known to the Colonists as wild Cardamom; and, on account of its aromatic qualities, is prescribed in flatulency and paralysis.

FAGARIER POIVRÉ, Fagara octandra.

FAGOPYRUM, Polygonum fagopyrum.

FAGUS, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS CASTANEA. The systematic name of the Chestnut Tree; Castanea, C. vulg'aris seu vesca, Lo'pina, Mota, Glaus Jovis THEOPHRASTI, Ju'piter's or Sardin'ian Acorn; the Common Chestnut, (F.) Châtaignier commun, of the Oak Family. Ord. Cupuliferæ. Sex. Syst. Monœcia Polyandria. The Chestnut, Castanea nux, (F.) Châtaigne, is farinaceous and nutritious, but not easy of digestion.

FAGUS CASTANEA PU'MILA. The Chin'capin or Chinquapin, Castanea Pumila, (F.) Châtaignier nain. The nut of this American tree is eaten like the chestnut. The bark, Castanea (Ph. U. S.), has been used in intermittents.

FAGUS PURPUREA, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS SYLVAT'ICA. The systematic name of the Beech, Fagus, F. sylvest'ris seu purp'ura, Oxya, Balan'da, Valan'ida; the Beech Tree, (F.) Hêtre. The Beech-nut or Beech-mast, (F.) Faine, affords an oil, by expression, which is of a palatable character, and is eaten in some places instead of butter. It has been supposed to be a good vermifuge, but it is no better than any mild oil.

FAGUS SYLVESTRIS, F. sylvatica.

FAIBLESSE, Debility.

FAIM, Hunger — f. Canine, Boulimia — f. de Loup, Fames lupina.

FAINE, see Fagus sylvatica.

FAINT, see Syncope.

FAINTING, Syncope.

FAINTING-FIT, Syncope.

FAINTISHNESS, see Syncope.

FAINTNESS, Languor, Syncope.

FAIRBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters at this place, which is in the county of Ross, in Scotland, are sulphureous, and frequented.

FAIRNTICKLED, see Ephelides.

FAISANDÉES (VIANDES), see Hyposaprus.

FAISCEAU, Fasciculus — f. Intermédiaire de Wrisberg, Portio Wrisbergii — f. Petit, Fasciculus.

FAIX, Fœtus.

FALCADINA, see Scherlievo.

FALCES, see Falx.

FAL'CIFORM, Faleifor'mis, Drepanoï'des, from fale, falcis, 'a scythe,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a scythe. This term has been applied to different parts. See Falx, and Sinus.

FALCIFORM EXPANSION OF THE FASCIA LATA, is the scythe-shaped reflection of the fascia lata, which forms, outwards and upwards, the opening for the vena saphæna, and is attached to the crural arch by its superior extremity, forming the anterior paries of the canal of the same name.

FALLACIA, Hallucination.

FALLACIA OPTICA. An optic illusion.

FALLAND-EVYL, Epilepsy.

FALLING-DOWN, Epilepsy.

FALLING SICKNESS, Epilepsy.

FALLOPIAN TUBE, see Tube, Fallopian.

FALLOPOISON, Amianthum muscætoxicum.

FALLTRANCK, Faltranck (G.), literally, a drink against falls. A vulnerary. It is a mixture of several aromatic and slightly astrigent plants, which grow chiefly in the Swiss Alps, and hence the name—Vulnéraire Suisse—given to such dried plants cut into fragments. They are called, also, Espèces Vulnéraires, and Thé Suisse. Within the present century, in England, a kind of vulnerary beer was often prescribed, in country practice, in all cases of inward bruises. It bore the name Cerevis'ia nigra, or black beer, and was formed by infusing certain reputed vulnerary herbs in beer or ale.

The infusion of the Faltrauck is aromatic, and slightly agreeable, but of no use in the cases for which it has been particularly recommended.

FALMOUTH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Falmouth, in Cornwall, England, resembles that of Penzance: and, like it, is in many respects, a favourable retreat for the phthisical during the winter months.

FALSA VIA, False passage.

FALSE, Falsus, Nothus, Pseudo, Spu'rious, Bastard, (F.) Faux, Fausse. This epithet has been frequently added to peripneumony, pleurisy, &c., to designate a disease similar to these, but less severe. Most commonly, a severe catarrh or pleurodynia has received the name. See Peripneumonia notha.

FALSE PASSAGE, Falsa Via, (F.) Fausse Route. An accidental passage, made in surgical operations, and particularly in introducing the catheter. The catheter is sometimes passed through into the rectum.

FALSE WATERS, Hydrollan'te, False Deliv'ery. Water, which sometimes collects between the amnion and chorion, and is commonly discharged before the birth of the child.

We say, also, False Ribs, False Rhubarb, &c.

FALSETTO VOICE, see Voice.

FALSIFICATION, Adultera'tio, from falsus, 'false,' and facere, 'to make.' A fraudulent imitation or alteration of an aliment or medicine by different admixtures. Manga'nium, Manga'nisa'tio. It is synonymous with adulteration and sophistication.

TABLE OF COMMON FALSIFICATIONS OF SOME OF THE MOST USEFUL DRUGS, &c.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
ACACIE GUMMI.	Gum Senegal	G. S. is clammy and tenacious. The A. G. is perfectly soluble in water, and its solution limpid.
ACETUM DESTILLATUM.	Sulphuric Acid	Acetate of barytes causes a white precipitate.
	Nitric Acid	By evaporating it, the residuum deflagrates, when thrown on burning charcoal.
	Copper	Supersaturate with ammonia—a blue colour is produced.
ACIDUM MURIATICUM.	Lead	Sulphuretted hydrogen causes a dark precipitate.
	Sulphuric Acid	Deposites by evaporation the salts it may contain; precipitates with solution of hydrochlorate of baryta if it contains sulphuric acid.
— NITRICUM.	Muriatic and Sulphuric Acids .	The presence of chlorine is indicated by a precipitate with nitrate of silver: that of sulphuric acid by the same result with hydrochlorate of baryta.
— SULPHURICUM.	Muriatic and Nitric Acids .	The presence of muriatic and nitric acid is indicated by the smell, when the acid tested is strongly heated.
— CITRICUM.	Tartaric and Oxalic Acids .	Their presence is indicated by forming a granular sediment in a concentrated solution of a neutral salt of potassa,

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
ÆTHER RECTIFICATUS.	Too dilute. Sulphuric Acid Alcohol	The S. G. detects this. By acetate of baryta. Precipitate white. With phosphorus a milky instead of limpid solution is formed.
AQUA AMMONIÆ. AMMONIÆ CARRO- NAS.	Carbonic Acid	A precipitation occurs on adding a solution of muriate of lime. It should be capable of complete volatilization by heat.
AMMONIACUM.....		The Guttæ Ammoniaci are white, clear, and dry. The lump Ammoniacum, lapis Ammoniaci , is often adulterated with common resin.
AMMONII SULPHURE- TUM. Lead. Arsenic Manganese and Iron.	It ought to be entirely volatilized by a red heat. Imparts a foliated texture, and is not vaporizable. A smell of garlic is emitted when thrown on live coals, &c. Are not vaporizable.
	Copper	The solution assumes a blue colour, when supersaturated with ammonia. It may be suspected when the salt deliquesces.
ARGENTI NITRAS.	Nitrate of Potassa.	The adulteration with nitrate of potassa is easily recognized by the fracture of a stick of it, which is radiated when pure, and granular if adulterated; or by precipitating a solution of the salts with a sufficient quantity of muriatic acid, and evaporating the clear liquor: the nitrate of potassa or other salts will remain.
ABSERICUM ALBUM.	Chalk, Sulphate of Lime, Sulphate of Baryta.	Not volatilizable by heat.
BALSAMUM PERUVI- ANUM.	A mixture of Resin and some Volatile Oil, with Benzoin.	Not easily detected.
CAPSICUM. Cayenne Pepper.	Chloride of Sodium Red Lead	This disposes it to deliquesce. Digest in acetic acid, and add a solution of sulphuret of ammonia — a dark-coloured precipitate will be produced.
CASTOREUM. Castor.	A mixture of dried blood, gum ammoniac, and a little real castor, stuffed into the scrotum of a goat. Earth or Peasmeal	Smell and taste will generally detect the fraud. May be suspected when the cake is brittle and colour grayish.
CERA FLAVA. Yellow Wax.	Resin Tallow	Put it in cold alcohol, which will dissolve the resin, without acting on the wax. Is known by the greater softness and unctuousity, and its smell when melted. Turmeric is generally added in this case to obviate the paleness.
CERA ALBA. White Wax.	White Lead Tallow	Melt the wax, the oxide will subside. The cake has not its ordinary translucency.
CINCHONA. Bark.	This is variously adulterated, but generally with the Carthagena and other inferior barks.	Can only be detected by practice, and examining into the quantity of quinia or cinchonia it contains.
COCCUS. Cochineal.	Pieces of dough formed in moulds, and coloured with cochineal.	Throw it into water, the adulteration will appear.
COLOMBA.	The true is distinguishable from the false Colomba by adding to an infusion of the root, a few drops of solution of sulph. iron, which gives to the infusion of the false Colomba a greenish black colour; but produces no change in the other.
COPAIBA. Balsam of Copaiva.	Oil	If it does not retain its spherical form when dropped into water, its adulteration may be inferred. Mix one part of strong liquid ammonia of 22°, with three parts of copaiba. If pure, the mixture will, in a few minutes, become transparent; if not, it will remain opaque.
CROCUS. Saffron.	Fibres of smoked Beef .. Petals of the Calendula officinalis, and Carthamus Tinctorius.	Affords an unpleasant odour when thrown on live coals. Infuse the specimen in hot water, and the difference will be perceptible.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
CUBEBA. Cubebs.	Turkey Yellow Berries, or the dried fruit of the Rhamnus Catharticus.	Detected by attentive examination.
CUSPARIE CORTEX. Angustura Bark.	False Angustura some- times sold for it.	The epidermis of the true Cusparia is character- ized by being covered with a matter resembling the rust of iron.
GUAIACI RESINA. Resin of Guaiacum.	Common Resin	Detected by the turpentine smell emitted when thrown upon hot coals.
	Manchineel Gum	Add to the tincture a few drops of spirit of nitre, and dilute with water; the guaiacum is precipi- tated—the adulteration floats in the white stric.
HYDRARGYRI CHLO- RIDUM MITE. Calomel.	Corrosive Sublimate, and Subnitrate of Bismuth.	A precipitation will be produced by the carbonate of potass, from a solution made by boiling the suspected sample with a small portion of mu- riate of ammonia in distilled water; or, the presence of deuto-chloride of mercury is indi- cated, by warming gently a small quantity of calomel in alcohol, filtering and adding to the clear liquor some lime-water, by which a red- dish yellow precipitate is afforded. When calomel is rubbed with a fixed alkali, it ought to become intensely black, and not exhibit any orange hue.
HYDRARGYRI OXI- DUM RUBRUM. Red Precipitate.	Red Lead	Digest in acetic acid: add sulphuret of ammonia, which will produce a dark coloured precipitate. It should be totally volatilized by heat.
HYDRARGYRI SUL- PHURETUM RUBRUM	Red Lead	Digest in acetic acid, and add sulphuret of am- monia—a black precipitate will be produced.
HYDRARGYRI SUL- PHURETUM NIGRUM.	Ivory Black	Throw a suspected portion on hot coals—the re- siduum will detect the fraud.
IODINE.	Plumbago, Charcoal, and Oxide of Manganese.	The tests of its purity are—that it is perfectly soluble in ether. Heated on a piece of glass or porcelain, it sublimes without residuum.
JALAPÆ RADIX. Jalap Root.	Bryony Root, spurious or false Jalap Root, and Liquorice Root.	Bryony root is of a paler colour, and less compact texture, and does not easily burn at the flame of a candle. Liquorice is detected by the taste.
MAGNESIA.	Lime	Detected by the solution in dilute sulphuric acid, affording a precipitate with oxalate of ammonia.
	Sulphuret of Lime	Gives off when moistened, the smell of sulphu- retted hydrogen.
MAGNESIÆ SUBCAR- BONAS. Carbonate of Magnesia.	Chalk	Detected by adding dilute sulphuric acid to the suspected substance, when, if chalk be present, there will be a white insoluble precipitate.
	Gypsum	Boil in distilled water, and test the solution by a barytic and oxalic reagent.
MANNA.	A factitious article, con- sisting of honey or sugar, mixed with scam- mony, is sometimes sold for it.	The colour, weight, transparency and taste detect it.
MORPHIÆ ET EJUS SALES. Morphia and its Salts.	Morphia and its salts, when placed in contact with nitric acid, are coloured red; with per- salts of iron, blue. They are perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and acidulated warm water. When morphia is mixed with narcotina, the adulteration is ascertained by mixing them with sulphuric ether, which dissolves the narcotina, without sensibly affecting the morphia.
MOSCHUS. Musk.	Dried Blood	The bag must not appear to have been opened. This may be suspected, if it emits a fetid smoke when inflamed.
	Asphaltum	Discovered by its melting and running, before it inflames.
	Fine particles of Lead ..	Rub with water. The metallic particles will subside.
OLEA DESTILLATA. Essential Oils.	Fixed Oils	Touch writing paper with it, and hold it before the fire: fixed oil leaves a stain of grease.
	Alcohol	Add water. A milkiness and increase of tempe- rature occurs.
OLEUM RICINI. Castor Oil.	Olive or Almond or Pop- py Oil.	Alcohol S. G. 820 will mix with any proportion of castor oil, whilst it dissolves very little of the others.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
OPIMUM.	Extract of Liquorice, Bullets and Stones sometimes in it; Extract of Poppy, of Chelidonium majus; G. Arabic, G. Tragacanth, Linseed Oil, Cow's Dung.	The best opium is covered with leaves and the reddish capsules of a species of Rumex . The inferior kinds have capsules adherent. It is bad when soft and friable, when intensely black or mixed with many impurities, and when sweet. The quantity of morphia affords the best test.
POTASSII IODIDUM. Iodide of Potassium.	Chlorides of Potassium and Sodium, Nitrate of Potassa.	The adulteration is ascertained by precipitating a solution of the salt with nitrate of silver, and treating the precipitate with ammonia, which dissolves the chloride of silver, without acting upon the iodide of this metal.
QUINÆ SULPHAS. Sulphate of Quinia.	Maunite.....	Leaves no residue when submitted to calcination: is perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and in water slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid.
STRYCHNÆ ET EJUS SALES. Strychnia and its Salts.	Brucea.....	They are free from brucia when no colour is produced by contact with nitric acid.
ZINCI OXYDUM. Flowers of Zinc.	Chalk..... White Lead.....	Sulphuric acid excites an effervescence. Sulphuric acid forms an insoluble sulphate of lead.

FALTRANCK, Falltranck.

FALX. Anatomists have given this name to several membranous reflections having the shape of a falx or scythe.

FALX CEREBELLI, Falx minor, Septum Cerebelli seu parvum occipitale, Processus falciformis Cerebelli, (F.) Faux du cervelet, Septum médian du cervelet, (Ch.), is a triangular process of the dura mater opposite the internal occipital protuberance. Its base is attached to the middle of the tentorium, and its top or apex bifurcates, to proceed to the sides of the foramen magnum. Its convex surface is towards the cranium, and its concave in the fissure or groove, which separates the two lobes of the cerebellum.

FALX CEREBRI, F. major, Vertical superior longitudinal process, Mediastinum cerebri, Septum Cerebri, (F.) Faux du cerveau, Repli longitudinal de la méninge, (Ch.), Processus falciformis duræ matris. The greatest process of the dura mater. It extends from the fore to the hind part of the skull, on the median line; is broad behind and narrow before, and is lodged in the groove which separates the hemispheres from each other—the interlobular fissure. At its superior part is situated the longitudinal sinus (superior), and at its lower, corresponding to the edge of the scythe, the inferior longitudinal sinus. Its anterior extremity is attached to the crista galli; its posterior is continuous with the tentorium cerebelli, and contains the straight sinus.

FALX MAJOR, Falx cerebri—f. Minor, Falx cerebelli.

FALX OF THE PERITONEUM, GREAT, F. peritonei majorima, (F.) Grande faux du péritoine, Faux de la Veine Umbilicale, Falx of the umbilical vein, is a reflection of the peritoneum, which ascends from the umbilicus to the anterior and inferior surface of the liver.

FALCES OF THE PERITONEUM, LESSER, Falces Peritonei minime, (F.) Petites faux du péritoine, are the lateral ligaments of the liver and the reflections which the peritoneum forms, raised up by the umbilical arteries.

FALX OF THE UMBILICAL VEIN, Falx, great, of the Peritoneum.

FAME, Lancet.

FAMEL/TICA FEBRIS, from fames, 'hunger.' Fever accompanied with insatiable hunger.—Sylvius.

FAMELICUS, Hungry.

FAMES, Hunger—f. Bovina, Boulimia—f. Canina, Boulimia.

FAMES LUPINA, Lycorex'is, (F.) Faim de Loup. Authors have described, under this name, a kind of boulimia, or deprivation of the digestive function, in which the patient eats voraciously, and passes his food, almost immediately afterwards, per anum.

FAMEX, Contusio.

FAMIGERATIS/SIMUM EMPLASTRUM, from fama, 'fame,' and gero, 'I wear.' A plaster, extolled in ague, and made of aromatic, irritating substances. It was applied to the wrist.

FAMILIARICA SELLA, Close stool.

FAMILY DISEASES, see Hereditary.

FAMIS, Contusio.

FAMIX, Contusio.

FANCULUM, Anethum.

FANCY MARK, Nævus.

FANFECKLES, Ephelides.

FANG, Radix.

FANON (F.) from (G.) Fahne, 'a banner,' 'ensign,' 'standard.' Fer'ula, Lec'tulus stramin'ens, Thor'ulus stramin'ens. A splint of a particular shape, employed in fractures of the thigh and leg to keep the bones in contact.

The Fanons were divided into true and false.

The true consists of a cylinder of straw, strongly surrounded with a cord or riband, in the centre of which a stick is usually placed to ensure its solidity. The false consists of a thick piece of linen, made flat like a compress, and folded at the extremities. It was placed between the fractured limb and the true fanon. The Drap-fanon is a large piece of common cloth placed between the fractured limb, in which the fanon or lateral splints are rolled.

FANTICKLES, Ephelides.

FANTOM, Phantom, Phanto'ma, from φαντασμα, 'a spectre.' (F.) Phantôme, Fantôme. This word has two acceptations. It means the spectres and images which the imagination presents to the sick, when asleep or awake; and, also, the figure called, also, Man'ikin, Man'ikin, and Man'akin, (F.) Mauequin, on which surgeons practice the application of bandages, or the accoucheur the manual part of midwifery,—Phanto'ma obstetric'ium.

Fantom or Phantou Tumour is one that forms, in the abdomen for example, simulating organic disease, and occasionally exceedingly deceptive.

FARADISATION, Far'adism; from Faraday, the celebrated physicist. A term proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, for electricity by induction.

FARCIMEN, see Equinia.

FARCIMALIS MEMBRANA SEU TUNICA, Allantois.

FARCIN, see Equinia.

FARCINOMA, Equinia.

FARTURA, Fart'ura; from farciare, fartum, 'to stuff.' The operation of introducing medicinal substances into the cavities of animals or of fruits, which have been previously emptied.

FARTUS, Emphraxis.

FARTY GLANDERS, see Equinia.

FARD, Point.

FARDEAU, Mole.

FARFARA, Tussilago—f. Bechium, Tussilago.

FARIGOLE, Thymus.

FARINA, Al'phiton, Crimmon, Al'eton, Alet'ron, Ale'mo, from fer, 'corn,' or grain of any kind, of which it is made. Meal or flour. The powder, obtained by grinding the seeds of the gramineous, leguminous, and cucurbitaceous plants in particular. It is highly nutritious and much used, dietetically as well as medicinally. In the pharmacopœias of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, Fari'na means wheat flour—Farina Tritici.

Leath's Alimetary Fari'na, or Homœopathic Farina'ceous Food, is said to consist principally of wheat flour, slightly baked, and sweetened with sugar, together with potato flour and a very small quantity of Indian corn meal and tapioca.

FARINA AMYGDALARUM, see Amygdala.

FARINA, COMPOUNDED, BASTER'S, is said to consist of wheat flour, sweetened with sugar.

FARINA, NUTRITIOUS, MAIDMAN'S, is said to consist of potato flour, artificially coloured of a pink or rosy hue, the colouring matter being probably rose pink.

FARINA TRITICI, wheaten flour; F. Seca'lis, Rye flour or meal; F. Hor'dei, Barley meal; F. Avena'cea, Oat meal, &c. See Amylum.

FARINE RESOLVENTES, (F.) Farines Résolutives. This name was formerly given to a mixture of the farina of four different plants; the lupine, Lupinus albus, the Eremm Ervilia, the Vicia faba, and the Barley, Hordeum distichum. They were recommended to form cataplasms.

FARINACEOUS, Farina'ceus, Farino'cus, Farinosus, (F.) Farinacé, Fariuenz, Mealy. Having the appearance or nature of farina. A term given to all articles of food which contain farina. The term Farinacea includes all those substances, called cerealia, legumina, &c., which contain farina, and are employed as nutriment.

Hard's farinaceous food is fine wheat flour, which has been subjected to some heating process. Braden's farinaceous food is said to be wheat flour, baked.

In Pathology, the epithet farinaceous, (F.) fariuenz, is applied to certain eruptions, in which the epidermis exfoliates in small particles similar to farina.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, BRADEN'S, see Farinaceous—f. Food, Hard's, see Farinaceous—f. Food, homœopathic, see Farinaceous.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PLUMBE'S, is said to consist principally of bean or pea flour, most probably the former, with a little Tacea arrowroot, some potato flour, and a very little Maranta arrowroot.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PRINCE ARTHUR'S, for infants and invalids of all ages, is said to consist entirely of wheat flour, slightly baked.

FARINARIUM, Alica.

FARINES RÉSOLUTIVES, Farinæ resolutives.

FARINEUX, Farinaceous.

FARINOSUS, Farinaceous.

FARMERY, Hospital.

FARTICKLES, Ephelides.

FARRIER, Hippiater.

FARSIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

FART, Sax. fart, from Teut. fah ren, 'to go'—fart, 'a voyage.' (G.) Furz, Bdelius, Bdoins, Bdelyg'mia, Bdelyg'was, Bombus, Tenula, Porda, Physa, Physæ, Flatus, Crep'itus, C. ventris, (F.) Pet. A sonorous or other discharge of wind from behind. A low word, but of respectable parentage.

FARTURA, Fartura.

FARTUS, Emphraxis.

FAS'CIA, from fascis, 'a bundle.' Ligatio, Ligatu'ra, Alligatu'ra, Anades'mns, Viu'cula, Sparguon, Epides'mos, Vincu'ra. A bandage, fillet, roller, ligature. The aponeurotic expansions of muscles, which bind parts together, are, likewise, termed Fasciæ. See Tænia.

FASCIA APONEUROTICA FEMORIS, Fascia lata aponeurosis—f. Capitalis, Bonnet d'Hippocrate, Capelina—f. Capitis, Diadema—f. Cooperi, F. Transversalis.

FASCIA, CRIBRIFORM, F. Cribrifor'mis. The sieve-like portion of the fascia lata; so called from its being pierced by numerous openings for the passage of lymphatic vessels.

FASCIA DENTA'TA, F. D. Tari'ni, Corps godronné of Vicq d'Azyr. A band of gray matter seen beneath the tænia hippocampi on raising it up, which runs along the inner border of the cornu ammonis. It is, as it were, crenated by transverse furrows.

FASCIA DIGITALIS, Gantelet—f. Diopthalmica, Binoculus—f. Dividens, Dividing bandage—f. Heliodori, T bandage.

FASCIA ILI'ACA, Iliac aponeuro'sis. An aponeurosis which proceeds from the tendon of the psaos minor, or which arises from the anterior surface of the psaos magnus, when the former muscle does not exist. It is attached, externally, to the inner edge of the crest of the ilium, below, and anteriorly—on one side, to the crural arch, sending an expansion to the fascia transversalis; and on the other, continuous with the deep-seated lamina of the fascia lata, which forms the posterior paries of the crural canal. Within and behind, the fascia iliaca is attached to the brim of the pelvis, and is continuous with the aponeurosis, which M. Jules Cloquet has called Pelvican. The iliac aponeurosis covers the iliac and psaos muscles, which it separates from the peritoneum.

FASCIA INFUNDIB'ULIFORMIS, a funnel-shaped offset from the fascia transversalis, which is prolonged as a sheath upon the vas deferens and spermatic vessels as they pass out of the abdomen.

FASCIA INGUINALIS, Spica.

FASCIA LATA. A name given by anatomists to an aponeurosis, and to a muscle.

FASCIA LATA APONEUROSIS, F. aponeurot'ica fem'oris, Vagi'na fem'oris, Crural or Fem'oral Aponeurosis, is the most extensive in the body, and envelops all the muscles of the thigh. Above, it is attached to the outer edge of the ilia' before, it arises from the crural arch by two distinct laminae, separated by the femoral vessels, and becoming confounded a little below the part where the great vena saphæna opens into the crural vein. Of these two laminae, the one is more anterior and thicker than the other, and may be considered as a prolongation of the aponeurosis of the external oblique. It is intimately united to Poupart's ligament. The other, which is thinner, is behind, and deeper seated, and, after its union with the former, proceeds to be inserted into the pubis. Inferiorly, the fascia lata becomes confounded with the tendon of the triceps, and is attached to the external tuberosity of the tibia. The use of the fascia lata, like that of other aponeuroses, is to strengthen the action of the muscles, &c.

FASCIA LATA MUSCLE, Tensor vaginæ femoris, Fascia'tis, Membrano'sus, Musculus aponeurosis seu fascia lata seu femoris membrano'sus, (F.) Ilio-aponevrosi-fémoral, Ilio-aponevroti-fémoral—(Ch.), Tenseur de l'aponévrose fémorale. A muscle, situate at the upper and outer part of the thigh. It arises, above, from the outer part of the anterior and superior spine of the ilium; and is inserted, below, between the two laminae of the fascia lata, which it stretches and raises when it contracts.

FASCIA, OBTURATOR, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Internal, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Lateral, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Superior, see Pelvic aponeuroses.

FASCIA PROPRIA. A layer of areolar tissue derived from the sheath of the femoral vessels,—or according to some from the cribriform fascia. It is one of the coverings of femoral hernia, and is generally pretty dense about the neck of the hernia; but thin or even wanting on its fundus.

FASCIA REPENS, Spica—f. Scapularis, Scapulari—f. Sculteti, Bandage of separate strips—f. Semicircularis, Tænia semicircularis—f. Spiralis, Ascia—f. Stellata, Stella—f. Submuscular, see Vaginal, (of the eye.)

FASCIA, SUBPERITONE'AL, Subperitone'al aponeuro'sis. A thin tendinous layer on the outer surface of the peritoneum.

FASCIA SUPERFICIALIS, Superficial aponeuro'sis of the abdomen and thigh, (F.) Aponévrose superficielle de l'abdomen et de la cuisse. A very thin aponeurosis, which covers the muscles and aponeuroses of the abdomen; passes before the crural arch, to which it adheres with some degree of force; sends a membranous sheath, which surrounds the spermatic cord; and is continuous with the dartos, which it assists in forming. The fascia superficialis presents, beneath the crural arch, very distinct fibres, whose direction is parallel to the fold of the thigh. It is applied over the fascia lata aponeurosis, and is attached, internally, to the ascending ramus of the ischium, near the root of the corpus cavernosum. Before the descent of the testicle from the abdomen, the fascia superficialis is very manifestly continuous with the Gubernaculum testis.

FASCIA TIFORMIS, T. bandage—f. Tortilis, Tourniquet.

FASCIA TRANSVERSALIS, F. Coop'eri. An aponeurosis, which separates the transversalis muscle from the peritoneum in the inguinal region. It arises above the posterior edge of the crural arch, where it seems to be continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle. Above, it is lost in the areolar tissue at the internal surface of the transversalis abdominis. Within, it is continuous with the outer edge of the tendon of the rectus muscle and Gimbernat's ligament; below, it is continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique, and receives an expansion from the Fascia Iliaca. Towards its middle and a little above the crural arch, the fascia transversalis has the wide orifice of a canal, which is occupied, in the female, by the round ligament of the uterus; and, in man, furnishes an expansion, that serves as a sheath to the spermatic vessels.

FASCIÆ, Swathing clothes—f. Coli, see Colon—f. Ligamentosæ Coli, see Colon.

FASCIALIS, Fascia lata muscle, Sartorius—f. Longus, Sartorius—f. Sutorius, Sartorius.

FASCIARUM APPLICATIO, Deligation.

FASCIATIO, Deligation, see Bandage—f. Cucullata, Couvrechef.

FASCICULI CORTICALES, Ferrein, pyramids of—f. Graciles, see Corpora restiformia.

FASCICULI INNOMINATI. Two large bundles of fibres in the interior of the medulla oblongata, behind the corpora olivaria, and more or less apparent between those bodies and the corpora restiformia. They ascend, and become apparent in the fourth ventricle, under the name Fasciculi seu Processus teretes.

FASCICULI, MEDIANI POSTERIOR, OF THE MEDULLA OBLONGATA, Funiculi graciles—f. Musculorum, see Muscular fibre—f. Pyramidales, Ferrein, Pyramids of—f. Teretes, Processus teretes, see Fasciculi innominati—f. Teretes cordis, Columnæ carneæ.

FASCICULUS, Phacellus, Phacelus, Fascicula, diminutive of fascis, 'a bundle'; Desmedion, 'a small bundle.' In Anatomy, it is employed in this sense; as "a fasciculus of fibres." (F.) Fascicule, Faisceau ou Petit Faisceau, Troussseau. In Pharmacy, it means manipulus, Chetropole'thes, χειροπληθής, 'a handful.' Musa Brasavolus says, — as much as can be held in two fingers.

FASCICULUS CUNEATUS, Reinforcement, fasciculus of—f. Reinforcement, Reinforcement, F. of.

FASCICULUS UNCINATUS. A white bundle, seen on the lateral aspect of the cerebral hemispheres, passing across the bottom of the fissure of Sylvius, and connecting the anterior with the middle and posterior lobes. The fibres of this fasciculus expand at each extremity, and the superficial portions of them curve or hook sharply between the contiguous parts of the anterior and middle lobes, whence the epithet 'uncinatus.'

FASCINOSUS, Membrosus.

FASCINUM, Penis.

FASCIOLA, Bandelette—f. Cinerea, Tuberculum cinereum—f. Hepatica, Distoma hepaticum—f. Humana, Distoma hepaticum—f. Lanceolata, Distoma hepaticum.

FASELUS, Phaseolus vulgaris.

FASÉOLE, Phaseolus.

FASTIDIUM, abridged from fatis tedium. Fastidiousness, Squeamishness, or the condition of a stomach that is really affected with nausea.

FASTIDIUM CIBI, Asitia, Disgust—f. Potûs, Loathing of drink.

FASTIGIUM, Acme.

FASTING, from Sax. fæstan, Limo'sis experts protracta, Anorexia mirabilis, Inedia, Jejunium. Loss or want of appetite, without any other apparent affection of the stomach; so that the system can sustain almost total abstinence for a long time without faintness. Some wonderful cases of this kind are on record. See Abstinence.

FAT, Pingue'do, Pim'elè, Piar, Pie'r'on, Lipos, Stear, Adeps, Sevum, Sebum, Corpus adiposum, Arun'gia, Fat, (F.) Graisse: from (G.) Fett, (Sax.) fat. A soft, white, animal substance; inodorous; insipid; oily; inflammable, easy to melt; spoiling in the air, and becoming rancid by union with oxygen: almost insoluble in alcohol; insoluble in water; soluble in fixed oils. Fat is formed of the immediate principles, stearin, margarin, and olein or elain, all of which are regarded as salts composed of stearic, margaric and oleic acids, and a common base, to which, from its sweetish taste, the name Glycerin, Glycerina, Glycerinum, (F.) Glycérine has been given. To these are, almost always, joined an odorous and a colouring principle. GLYCERIN, Glycerina, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the U.S. (1851), in which it is directed to be prepared as follows:—Lead plaster, recently prepared and yet fluid; boiling water, of each a gallon; mix: stir briskly for 15 minutes; allow it to cool and pour off the liquid. Evaporate until it has the s. g. 1.15, and pass slowly through it a current of sulpho-hydric acid until a black precipitate is no longer thrown down. Filter and boil until the sulpho-hydric acid is driven off, and evaporate the liquid until it ceases to lose weight. Glycerin is a colourless or straw-coloured syrupy fluid; s. g. 1.25. It is soluble in water and in alcohol, but not in ether. It is used in the form of lotion, composed of half an ounce to ten fluidounces of water, in cutaneous diseases, as psoriasis, pityriasis, lepra and ichthyosis. It forms a kind of varnish, and might be useful in cases of burns.

Fat is found in a number of animal tissues, and is very abundant in the neighborhood of the kidneys and in the epiploon. It is generally fluid in the cetacea; soft, and of a strong smell in the carnivora; solid, and inodorous in the ruminating animal; white, and abundant in young animals; and yellowish in old. It generally forms about a twentieth part of the weight of the human body. The fat, considered physiologically, has, for its function, to protect the organs; maintain their temperature; and to serve for nutrition in case of need; as is observed in torpid animals.

FAT, Corpulent—f. Cells, Fatty vesicles.

FAT, MACKAW, see Cocos butyracea.

FATIGATIO, Copos.

FATIGUE, Copos.

FATTY, Adiposus, Adipatus, Pimell'icus, Pimelodes, Liparodes, Liparus, Sax. $\text{fæ}\tau$; past participle of $\text{fæ}\tau\alpha\iota$, to feed, Ad'ipous, Pinguid, Pinguid'ipous. Relating to fat. Resembling or containing fat. The cellular membrane has been called fatty or adipous; from an opinion that, in its areolæ, the fat is deposited. The areolar membrane, however, merely lodges, between its lamellæ and filaments, the vesicles in which the fat is contained.

FATTY LIGAMENT, Ad'ipous ligament. This name has been given to a reflection of the synovial membrane of the knee joint, which passes from the ligamentum patellæ towards the cavity that separates the condyles of the femur.

FATTY MEMBRANE, Ad'ipous membrane, Adipous tissue. The subcutaneous areolar tissue, or that containing the fatty or adipous vesicles.

FATTY VESICLES, Sacculi adiposi, Ad'ipous vesicles, Fat cells. This name is given to small bursa or membranous vesicles which enclose the fat, and are found situate in the areolæ of the areolar tissue. These vesicles vary much in size. Generally, they are round and globular; and, in certain subjects, receive vessels which are very apparent. They form so many small sacs without apertures, in the interior of which are filaments arranged like septa. In fatty subjects, the adipous vesicles are very perceptible, being attached to the areolar tissue and neighbouring parts by a vascular pedicle. Raspail affirms that there is the most striking analogy between the nature of the adipose granules and that of the amylaceous grains.

FATTY VESSELS, Ad'ipous vessels. The vessels connected with the fat. Some anatomists have called Adipous canals, (F.) Conduits adipeux, the vessels to which they attribute the secretion of fat.

FATTY DEGENERATION OF THE LIVER, Adiposis hepatica—f. Liver, Adiposis hepatica.

FATUISME, Fatuitas.

FATUITAS, Morosis, Stultitia, Stupor mentis, Amentia; (F.) Fatisme, Fatuité, from fatuus, 'foolish.' Mental imbecility. Idiotsm. Dementia. One affected with fatuity is said to be fatuous, (Sc.) Davepit.

FAVEUX, Favosus.

FAVIFORMIS, Favosus.

FAVOSUS. Similar to a honeycomb. Faviformis, Favosus, from favus, cerion, 'a honeycomb.' (F.) Favens. An epithet given to a species of porrigo. Cerion, Kerion, Favus; means also a state of ulceration, resembling a honeycomb.

FAVULUS; diminutive of favus, 'a honeycomb.' Favuli is used by Dr. Morton, of Philadelphia, for the honeycomb-like depressions in the lining membrane of the stomach—the stomach-cells of Messrs. Todd and Bowman.

FEBRUARIA, from februo, 'I purge.' In ancient mythology, a goddess who presided over menstruation.

FECAL, Stercoraceous.

FÆCES, Fæces.

FÆCONDATION, Fecundation.

FÆCONDITÉ, Fecundity.

FÆCULA, Fæculna, diminutive of fæx, fæcis, 'lee.' An immediate principle of vegetables, composed of hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon. It exists in several plants, and has different names, according to that which furnishes it. (F.) Fæcule, Amygdolè. When extracted from wheat or barley, it is called starch, Am'ylum. When from Cycas circinalis, Sago;—from Orchis morio, Salep. We say, also, Fecula of the Potato, Bryony, Arum, Manioc, &c.

FÆCULA, GREEN. This name is given to a green, solid matter, of variable character, which is believed to be resinous, and which renders turbid several kinds of juices, extracted from vegetables. It is also called Chlorophyll.

FÆCULA AMYLACEA, Amylum—f. Marantæ, Arrow-root—f. Tapioka, see Jatropha manihot.

FÆCULE, Fecula.

FÆCULENCE, Fæculen'tia, Fæcos'itas, Fæx, plural Fæces, Lenma, Lee, Depos'it, Dregs. In Pharmacy, feculent, albuminous, or other substances, which are deposited from turbid fluids.

FÆCULENT, Fæculen'tus, Hypot'rygnus, Trygo'des. 'Foul, dreggy, excrementitious;' as a feculent fluid, feculent evacuations, &c.

FÆCUND, Fæcun'dus, Fæcun'dus, (F.) Fæcond. Same etymon as the next. Fruitful, prolific.

FÆCUNDA'TION, Fæcunda'tio, Impregna'tion, Imprægnat'io, Ingravida'tio, Prægnat'io, Gravida'tio, Prægnat'us, Fructifica'tio, Cyè'sis, Encyè'sis, Encymo'sia, Procrea'tion, (F.) Fæcundation. The act by which, in organized beings, the material furnished by the generative organs of the female, unites with that prepared by those of the male, so that a new being results.

FÆCUNDITY, Entoc'ia, Fæcun'ditas, Productiv'itas, (F.) Fæcondité. The faculty of reproduction, possessed by organized bodies.

It has been estimated that, throughout a country, taking one marriage with another, not more than 4 children are the result; and in towns only 35 children to 10 marriages.

FEE, Pysehorages, Sostrum.

FEET, BURNING OF THE. A singular eacheitic disease, described by Mr. Malcolmson as occurring in India, the prominent symptom of which was a sense of burning in the feet.

FÊGARITE, Cancer aquaticus, Stomatitis, pseudo-membranous.

FEIGNED DISEASES, Morbi dissimula'ti seu simula'ti seu cæla'ti seu infit'ia'ti seu pseudal'ei, Sim'ulated or Pretend'ed diseases, (F.) Maladies dissimulées ou simulées ou feintes ou supposées. The tricks employed, by impostors, to induce a belief that they are attacked with diseases when they are not. These are generally assumed by beggars to obtain alms; by criminals to escape punishment; and by soldiers to be exempt from duty.

The following table exhibits the chief feigned diseases, with the means of detection:

A TABLE OF FEIGNED, PRETENDED, SIMULATED, OR EXCITED DISEASES OR DISQUALIFICATIONS.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
1. ABORTION.	By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.	By constant and minute attention.
2. ABSTINENCE.
3. AMAUROTIC BLINDNESS.	By applying the extract of belladonna or datura stramonium to the eye.	Amaurosis is characterized by dilated pupil. Where these substances have been applied, the effects will go off in ten days or a fortnight.
4. APOPLEXY.	By falling down as if deprived of sensation and consciousness.	By powerful stimulants; an electric shock; application of hot water, sternutatories, actual cautery, &c.
5. CACHEXIA, ANÆMIA, AND DEBILITY.	Using substances to make the face appear pale and livid. Indulging freely in wine, and privation of sleep prior to examination.	By examining if the pulse be strong, and the skin hot, and whether there be loss of appetite or of strength, or swelling of the limbs.
6. EXCRETION OF CALCULI.	Putting sand, pebbles, &c., into the urine.	By the aid of ehyministry. We are acquainted with the ehyminical composition of urinary calculi.
7. CANCEROUS ULCER.	By gluing on a portion of a spleen with the smooth side to the skin, leaving on the outside the appearance of an ulcerated surface.	By noticing whether there be signs of cachexia, and by attentive examination of the part.
8. CATALEPSY.	By seeming to be suddenly motionless, the joints remaining flexible, and external objects making no impression.	By powerful stimulants, as recommended under apoplexy. Letting fall a drop of boiling water on the back. Proposing to use the actual cautery, and seeing whether the pulse rises.
9. CHOREA.	By assuming the convulsive motions of a part which characterize chorea.	By examining the patient whilst he may imagine himself unobserved, and seeing whether the convulsive motions go on. By anæsthetics. (?)
10. CONTRACTION OF JOINTS IN GENERAL.	Mode of discrimination sometimes so obscure as to deceive the most practised and attentive.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
11. CONTRACTION OF THE FINGERS.	Introduce a cord between the fingers and the palm of the hand, and gradually apply weights so as to expand the fingers. Confine him so that he cannot obtain his food without using his clenched hand.
12. CONVULSIONS.	When feigned, they do not present the rigidity of muscles or the rapidity of action which characterize the real. The mode of detection must be the same as in epilepsy.
13. OPAKE CORNEA.	Produced by the application of a strong acid, by acrid powders, as quicklime, &c. Some articles of diet will bring on urticaria or nettle-rash , in particular individuals, as shell-fish, bitter almonds, &c. By acrids, acids, or any irritants applied to the surface. An ointment of tartarized antimony causes a painful pustular eruption. See Porrijo, in this list.	The existence of the opacity can be detected by attentive observation.
14. CUTANEOUS DISEASES	By careful examination on the part of practitioner and nurse.
15. DEAF-DUMBNESS.	The really deaf and dumb acquire an expression of countenance and gestures which it is difficult to assume.
16. DEAFNESS.	It may be assumed or excited by putting a pea in the ear, or by inserting irritants, so as to induce inflammation and temporary loss of function.	Make a noise when not expected, and see if the countenance varies or pulse rises. Put to sleep by opium, and then fire a pistol close to the ear, when he may be thrown off his guard. Examine the ear to see if any trick has been played there.
17. DEATH.	Some persons possess the power of suspending or moderating the action of the heart.	If suspected, the plan recommended under apoplexy will be found most efficacious.
18. DEBILITY, see CACHEXIA.
19. DEFORMITY.	Examine the part and its articulation, naked, and compare it with the opposite.
20. DELIVERY.	After enlargement produced artificially, a subsidence of the tumefaction; the parts being moistened by borrowed blood, and the child of another substituted as the female's own.	Can only be positively detected by examination par vaginam . Soon after delivery, the vagina will be relaxed and the lochial discharge be flowing in greater abundance, the shorter the time that may have elapsed since delivery.
21. DIARRHŒA.	Said to have been caused by a mixture of vinegar and burnt cork. (?) May be occasioned by the use of any of the purgative roots, &c.	When diarrhœa is feigned by the lower classes, inspect the linen; if clean, the bowels are probably not much out of order. Let every individual have a close stool of his own; and inspect the evacuations, taking care that one suffering under the disease does not lend his evacuations to another.
22. DROPSY.	May be feigned, like pregnancy, by wearing pads. The anasarous condition of the lower limbs has been caused by applying a ligature round them. By inflating the cellular membrane of the abdomen.	Can be detected by attentive examination. There will be a want of that leucophlegmatic habit which accompanies and characterizes dropsy.
23. DYSENTERY.	May be feigned, like diarrhœa, by adding a little blood to the evacuations, or by introducing a soap or some more irritating suppository.	Same rules as under diarrhœa.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
24. EPILEPSY.	The foaming of the mouth has been produced by keeping a piece of soap in it.	Sensation in epilepsy is totally abolished. If any remain, disease probably feigned. Incontractility of pupil, which occurs in epilepsy, cannot be feigned. Same means to be used as in feigned apoplexy.
25. FEVER.	By various stimulants, as wine, brandy, pepper; swallowing a small quantity of tobacco, or introducing it into the anus. Flour or chalk used to whiten the tongue. Redness of skin, caused by friction with a hard brush.	This deceit is generally developed by a day or two's examination. Where flour or chalk has been used to whiten the tongue, the line of demarcation between the whitened part and the clean, healthy margin of the tongue, is too well marked to escape observation.
26. FISTULA IN ANO.	By making an incision near the verge of the anus, and introducing into it an acrid tent, such as the root of white hellebore, &c.	By careful examination.
27. FRACTURES.	There is generally nothing but the man's own testimony. He complains of pain in the part; if fracture of the skull be feigned, he states, perhaps, that he becomes deranged on tasting liquor.	By attentive examination.
28. HÆMATEMESIS.	By drinking the blood of some animal, or using some coloured liquid, and then throwing it up.	By cutting off the supply of the fluid and careful examination.
29. HÆMOPTYSIS.	By secreting bullock's blood for the purpose of colouring the saliva; making small incisions in the mouth; using bole armeniac or paint of vermilion.	Blood from the lungs is frothy and light-coloured. Mouth and fauces must be carefully inspected, and the individual be observed.
30. HÆMORRHOIDS.	By introducing bladders of rats or of small fish partly into the rectum. The linen has also been stained with borrowed blood.	The means are obvious.
31. HEART, DISEASES OF, see PALPITATION.
32. HEPATITIS.	Unless the person be a well-educated impostor, acute inflammation of the liver will be detected by the absence of marks of strong inflammatory action. Chronic liver disease is, frequently, not characterized by well-marked symptoms, and hence, when assumed, is difficult of detection.
33. HERNIA.	In the same manner as hydrocele; — by inflation.	The detection is easy.
34. HYDROCELE.	By puncturing the skin of the scrotum, and inflating the cellular membrane.	Do.
35. HYDROCEPHALUS.	By opening the integuments of the head, near the vertex, e. g. and blowing in air.	Do.
36. HYSTERIA.	Does not easily resist the application of strong sternutatories to the nostrils. Attentive examination necessary.
37. INSANITY.	The expression of countenance cannot easily be feigned. Nor can the affection be kept up so long as in real mental alienation. The individual cannot do so long without food, sleep, &c.
38. JAUNDICE.	By colouring the skin with an infusion of turmeric or tincture of rhubarb. Clay-coloured stools produced by taking daily a small quantity of muriatic acid. High-coloured urine by rhubarb taken internally.	The eyes cannot be coloured, although smoke has been used for this purpose. The skin must be washed to remove the colouring matter if any exist, and the supply of acid and rhubarb be prevented.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
39. LAMENESS.	By keeping the limb in a contracted state, and resisting any efforts to move it.	By two persons taking hold of the individual and moving rapidly along with him; and when they are tired, having relays. The impostor will generally give in.
40. MENSTRUATION.	By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.	By cutting off the supply.
41. MYOPIA. Short-Sightedness.	Present an open book, and apply the leaves close to the nose. If it cannot be read distinctly, when thus placed, or when glasses proper for short-sightedness are used, the disease is feigned.
42. OPHTHALMIA.	Excited by a variety of acrid and corrosive substances applied to the eye; as lime, &c. A portion of black muslin, spread over the cornea. The eyelashes are sometimes extracted, and caustic applied to excite disease in the palpebræ.	When ophthalmia is thus excited, its progress is ordinarily very rapid, arriving at its height within a few hours.
43. OZÆNA.	By impregnating a piece of sponge with some offensive juices or oils, mixed with decayed cheese, and putting the imbued sponge into the nostrils.
44. PALPITATION.	White hellebore, given in the dose of 10 or 12 grains, and repeated, will occasion general indisposition, and undue action of the heart.	Cut off the supply.
45. PAINS.	The detection is here often difficult. The non-existence of pain cannot be proved, and great pain may be present without any appearance externally.
46. SHAKING PALSY.	The imposition is more frequently detected by inconsistencies and contradictions in the patient's history of the case, than in any other manner.
47. PARALYSIS.	May be suspected, if the person be in an ordinary state of vigour. Try violent remedies and means, recommended under Chorea.
48. PHTHISIS PULMONALIS.	Individuals with long necks and contracted shoulders have simulated phthisis, by covering the chest with blisters, cicatrices of issues, &c., and by taking drugs which cause paleness.	Violent remedies are here required. Cold affusion, actual cautery, electric shocks, &c.
49. POLYPUS NASI.	By introducing the testicle of a young cock, or the kidney of a rabbit, into the nostril, and retaining it there by means of a sponge fastened to it.	By attentive examination of the symptoms.
50. PORRIGO. Scalped Head.	By applying nitric acid to the head, after protecting the face with fatty substances; but the chronic state is imitated by the use of depilatories of different kinds applied sometimes in patches, so as to resemble the Porrigio decalvans .
51. PREGNANCY.	By wearing pads, and assuming the longing after particular articles of diet, &c.	By the absence of the areola; the presence of a pad; and, if necessary, by examination per vaginam .
52. PROLAPSUS ANI.	By a portion of the intestine of the ox, in which a sponge filled with a mixture of blood and milk is placed.
53. PROLAPSUS UTERI.	By a similar fraud.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
54. PULSE, WEAKNESS OR DEFECT OF.	By ligatures applied to the corresponding arm.	By examining whether the arteries of the two arms beat alike; and if a ligature be placed on the arm.
55. CHRONIC RHEUMATISM. See Pain.
56. SCROFULA.	By exciting ulcers below the angles of the jaw.	By examining the general habit, and observing whether the ulcerations be glandular, and the discharge of a serofulous character.
57. SCURVY.	By covering the teeth with wax, and then applying acid, corrosive substances to the gums.	By examining the general habit; whether debilitated, cachectic, and possessing the usual general signs of scorbutus.
58. STAMMERING.	Simulators of this defect generally state, that it is connate, or ascribe it to a fit of apoplexy or severe fever. Where the organs of speech were perfect, and the moral evidence of the previous existence of the infirmity was not satisfactory, the French authorities used to confine the soldiers, and not supply them with food, until they called for it without stammering.
59. STRICTURE OF THE URETHRA.	By passing a bougie.
60. SWELLING OF THE LEGS.	By ligatures round the thighs.	Examine the limbs uncovered.
61. SYNCOPE.	Ligatures are sometimes used to prevent the pulse being felt. By applying lotions to the face to make it pale.	By using sternutatories. By the absence of some of the symptoms of syncope. Examine the naked arms. Wash the face.
62. TYMPANY.	Persons have possessed the power of swallowing air, so as to distend the stomach, and simulate tympany.
63. ULCER OF THE EAR.	By introducing a tent, imbued with blistering plaster into the ear, and repeating the application, until the tube becomes ulcerated, and a discharge of puriform matter is established. The fetid smell is imitated, by dropping into the ear a mixture of empyreumatic oil, asafetida, and old cheese. Also, by introducing a little honey into the meatus.	By careful examination.
64. ULCERS OF THE LEGS, &c.	By corrosives, or irritants. Sometimes by abrasion, by rubbing sand on the shin-bone. At others, they are pretended, by gluing on a piece of spleen or the skin of a frog.	Artificial ulcers have, usually, a more distinct margin, and are more readily healed than others; the latter being generally indicative of an impaired constitution.
65. BLOODY URINE.	The fruit of the Indian Fig (Cactus opuntia) colours the urine as red as blood. Cantharides will cause it. Blood may also be procured and mixed with the urine.	By making the patient pass his urine in the presence of the physician, and examining the vessel before and after. By cutting off the supply of any substance, which could cause the appearance.
66. INCONTINENCE OF URINE.	Difficult, at times, of detection. Give the person a full dose of opium, and introduce the catheter when he is asleep. If there be urine, the incontinence is feigned.
67. VARICOSE VEINS.	By a ligature, placed tightly round the limb. They may be excited in this manner, or aggravated if already existing.	By examining the limb.

FEL, Bile—f. Anguilla, see Bile—f. Bovinum, Bile of the Ox—f. Bovis, see Bile—f. Naturæ, Aloes—f. Tauri, see Bile—f. Terræ, Ludus Helmontii—f. Ursi, see Bile—f. Vitri, see Vitrum.

FELDSCHEREN, Bathers.

FELINEUS, Biliious.

FELLEUS, Biliary, Biliious.

FELLIDUCUS, Cholagogue.

FELLIS OBSTRUCTIO, Icterus—f. Superfusio, Icterus—f. Suffusio, Icterus.

FELON, Paronychia.

FELTING, from Anglo-Saxon felt, cloth or stuff made without weaving. Tangling. A term applied to the hair when inextricably interlaced, as occurs occasionally in women from inattention.

FÉLURE DE GLASER, Fissure, glenoid.

FELWORT, Gentiana lutea.

FEMALE, Fœmina, Femina, Gynê, (F.) Femelle, (Femme, 'woman.') In animals, the one that engenders and bears the young. It is, also, used adjectively;—as, the Female Sex, &c.

FEMALE PARTS, Vulva.

FEMELLE, Female.

FEMEN, Thigh (inner part), Vulva.

FEMINA, Female.

FEMINES'CENTE, Fœminescencia, from fœmina, 'a female.' The possession or assumption of certain male characteristics by the female.—Mehlis.

FEMME EN COUCHE, Puerpera.

FEM'ORAL, Femoralis, from femur, femoris, 'the thigh-bone.' Belonging or relating to the thigh; as Femoral artery, Femoral hernia, &c. See Crural.

FEMORALIS, Triceps cruris.

FÉMORO-CALCANIEN PETIT, Plantar muscle—f. Popliteal, great, Sciatic nerve, great—f. Popliti-tibial, Poplitæus muscle.

FEM'ORO-TIB'IAL, Femoro-tibialis. Belonging to the femur and tibia. The Femoro-tibial articulation is the knee-joint.

FEMUR, Merus, Me'rium. The thigh (q. v.) Also, the thigh bone, Os femoris, (F.) L'os de la Cuisse. The strongest and longest of all the bones of the body, extending from the pelvis to the tibia, and forming the solid part of the thigh. The femur is cylindrical, slightly curved anteriorly, unsymmetrical and oblique downwards and inwards. The body of the bone is prismatic, and has, behind, a prominent ridge, the linea aspera.

PROCESSES.	{ Upper or Pelvic Extremity.	{ Head supported on a column or neck. Great trochanter. Lesser trochanter. External condyle. Internal condyle.

The femur ossifies from five points:—one on each process of the pelvic extremity; one in the body of the bone; and two on the condyles. It is articulated with the pelvis, tibia, and patella. See Thigh.

FÉMUR COL DU, Collum femoris—f. Moventium septimus, Iliacus internus—f. Moventium sextus, Psoas magnus—f. Summum, Vulva.

FENESTRA. A window, (akin to φαινα, 'I show,' and to Sanscrit fānu.) (F.) Fenêtre. Anatomists have given this name to two apertures, situate in the inner paries of the cavity of the tympanum. The one of these is the Fenestra ovalis seu vestibularis, Fora'men ovale. It is oval-shaped; situate at the base of the stapes, and corresponds with the cavity of the vestibule. The other is the Fenestra rotunda seu cochlearis seu triangula, Fora'men rotundum. It is closed by a fine, transparent membrane, called Membra'na Tympani secun'daria, Tympanum minus seu secunda'rium, Membra'na fenestræ rotundæ, and corresponds to the inner scala of the cochlea.

FENESTRA OCULI, Pupil.

FENESTRAL, Fenestra'tus, from fenestra, 'a window.' (F.) Fenêtré et Fenestré. Bandages, compresses, or plasters with small perforations or openings, are so called. The openings prevent the detention of the discharge.

FENESTRATUS, Fenestral.

FENESTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENÊTRE, Fenestra.

FENÊTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENNEL, Anethum—f. Dogs', Anthemis cotula—f. Flower, Nigella—f. Hog's, Peucedanum—f. Sweet, Anethum—f. Water, Phellandrium aquaticum.

FENOUIL, Anethum—f. d'Eau, Phellandrium aquaticum—f. Marin, Crithmum maritimum—f. de Porc, Peucedanum—f. Puant, Anethum graveolens.

FENTE, Fissure—f. Capillaire, see Pilatio—f. Glénoïdale, Fissure, glenoid—f. Orbitaire, Orbital fissure—f. Orbitaire inférieure, Sphenomaxillary fissure—f. Sphéno-maxillaire, Sphenomaxillary fissure—f. Sphénoïdale, Sphenoidal fissure.

FÉNUGREC, Trigonella fœnum.

FENUGREEK, Trigonella fœnum.

FER, Ferrum—f. Acétate de, Ferri acetas—f. Bromure de, see Bromine—f. Carbonate de, Ferri protocarbonas—f. Carbure de, Graphites—f. Chaud, Pyrosis—f. Hydrate de, tritoxide de, Ætites—f. Hydriodate de, see Ferri iodidum—f. Iodure de, Ferri iodidum, see Iodine—f. Lactate de, Ferri Lactas—f. Limaille de, Ferri limatura—f. Perchlorure de, Ferri chloridum—f. Peroxide de, Ferri subcarbonas—f. et de Potasse, tartrate de, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. et de Potassium, cyanure de, Potassii Ferrocyanuretum—f. et de Potassium, protocyanure de, Potassii Ferrocyanuretum—f. Réduit par l'hydrogene, Ferri pulvis—f. Sulphate de, Ferri Sulphas—f. Sulphure de, Ferri Sulphuretum—f. Tannate de, Ferri tannas—f. Trichlorure de, Ferri chloridum—f. Valérianate de, Ferri Valerianas.

FERALIS PEDICULUS, see Pedienlus.

FERINE, Ferinus; 'savage, brutal;' from fera, 'a wild beast.' Therio'des. A term, applied to any malignant or noxious disease. In France it is used only when joined to Toux; Toux férine, a dry, obstinate, and painful cough.

FERMENT, Fermentum, (quasi fervimentum, from ferreo, 'I burn, I ferment,') Zyma, Zymoma, Leven, (F.) Lévain. The Iatrochymists applied this name to imaginary substances, Fermenta mor'bi, to which they attributed the power of producing disease, by exciting a fermentation in the humours.

FERMENTA'TION, Fermenta'tio, Zymo'sis, Æstua'tio, Causis, Brasmos. Same etymon. An intestinal movement, occurring spontaneously in a liquid; whence result certain substances, that did not previously exist in it.

The chemical physicians attributed all diseases to an imaginary fermentation of the humours.

FERMENTATION, PUTREFACTIVE, Putrefaction.

FERMENTUM CEREVISLE, Yest—f. Morbi, Ferment—f. Ventriculi, Gastric juice.

FERN, BUSH, Comptonia asplenifolia—f. Cinnamon, Osmunda cinnamomea—f. Eagle, Pteris aquilina—f. Female, Asplenium filix femina, Pteris aquilina—f. Flowering, Osmunda regalis—f. Gale, Comptonia asplenifolia—f. Male, Polypodium filix mas—f. Meadow, Comptonia asplenifolia—f. Rock, Adiantum pedatum—f. Root, Polypodium vulgare—f. Sweet, Adiantum peda-

FERNAMBUCO WOOD, Cæsalpinia echinata.

FERNFRECKLED, Ephelides.

FERNITICKLES, Ephelides.

FERO'NIA ELEPHAN'TUM, (from the goddess Ferounia.) A tree of India, Order Aurantiacæ, which yields a gum closely resembling Gum Arabic. Dr. Pereira thinks it not improbable, that a part of the East India gum taken to England may be the produce of this tree. The leaves are aromatic, of an odour resembling anise, and are used as a carminative.

FERRAMENTUM, Side'riou, Instrumentum fer'reum, from ferrum, 'iron.' Any surgical instrument made of iron. By the vulgar, in France, the word ferrements means the instruments used in difficult labours.

FERRARIA, Serophularia aquatica.

FERRATUS, Chalybeate.

FERREIN, CANAL OF, Ductus Ferrei'ni. A triangular channel, which Ferrein supposed to result from the approximation of the free edges of the eyelids applied to the globe of the eye; and which he considered adapted for directing the tears towards the puncta lacrymalia, during sleep. The canal is, probably, imaginary.

The same name is likewise given to the cortical canals,—the first portions of the uriniferous ducts, whilst still in the cortical substance of the kidney.

FERREIN, PYRAMIDS OF, Pyram'ides Ferrei'ni. Each of the papillæ of the kidney, according to Ferrein, consists of, at least, 700 subordinate cones or pyramids. To these last the names 'pyramids of Ferrein,' Pyram'ides renales Ferrei'ni, Fasciculi pyramida'les, Fasciculi cortical'les, Lobuli renium, have been given.

FERRI ACETAS, Extractum martis acet'icæ, Acet'icum martiale, Ac'etate of Iron, Iron Liqueur. (F.) Acétate de fer. A preparation of the Dublin Pharmacopœia, made by digesting 1 part of carbonate of iron in 6 parts of acetic acid for three days, and filtering. Dose, as a tonic and astringent, ℥j to ℥℥x. in water.

FERRI ERUGO, F. Subcarbonas—f. et Ammonia' murias, Ferrum ammoniatum—f. Ammoniochloridum, Ferrum ammoniatum.

FERRI ET ALUMINE SULPHAS, Sulphate of Iron and Alumina, is made by treating bicarbonated solution of soft iron and carbonated solution of pure washed alumina, with sulphuric acid. It has been recommended as a valuable astringent. Dose, from five to ten grains.

FERRI AMMONIO-CITRAS, Ammonia' ferro-citras, Ferrum ammoni'aco-cit'ricum, Ammonio-citrate of iron, Citrate of ammonia and iron. Prepared by adding ammonia to citrate of iron, so as to neutralize the excess of acid. Dose, gr. v. to gr. viij. A POTASSIO-CITRATE and a SODIO-CITRATE of IRON have also been introduced; and a CITRATE of the MAGNETIC OXIDE of IRON prepared by combining the magnetic oxide with citric acid.

FERRI AMMONIO-TARTRAS, Ammonio-tartrate of Iron. This salt is best made by dissolving to saturation freshly precipitated hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of bitartrate of ammonia, and evaporating to dryness. It is very soluble. The dose is five grains or more in pill or solution.

FERRI ARSENIAS, Arseniate of Iron—f. Borussias, Prussian blue—f. Bromidum, see Bromine—f. Carbonas, F. subcarbonas—f. Carbonas Saccharatum, see F. Protocarbonas—f. Carbonas cum Saccharo, see Ferri Protocarbonas—f. Carbonatum, Graphites—f. Carburetum, Graphites.

FERRI CHLORIDUM, F. Sesquichloridum, (F.) Trichlorure ou Perchlorure de fer, Chloride, Sesquichloride, Perchloride or Moriate of Iron, is obtained by dissolving sesqui-chloride of iron in chlorohydric acid. It is generally prescribed in the form of Tinctura Ferri Chloridi. A concentrated solution of the perchloride has been used as an injection for the radical cure of aneurism.

FERRI CITRAS, Ferrum cit'ricum, Citrate of Iron. Two citrates of iron are prepared—the Sesquicitrate or Citrate of the Sesquioxide; and the Citrate of the Protoxide. The former is official in the Ph. U. S. They resemble, in their medical properties, the tartrate and the lactate of the metal. Dose, five grains or more.

FERRI CYANURETUM, Prussian blue—f. Deuto-carbonas fuscus, F. subcarbonas—f. Deutoxydum nigrum, Æthiops martial—f. Ferrocyanus, Prussian blue—f. Ferrocyanuretum, Prussian blue.

FERRI FILUM. The pharmacoepœial name of iron wire.

FERRI HYDRIDAS, F. Iodidum—f. Hydrocyanas, Prussian blue—f. Ilypercarburetum, Graphites.

FERRI IODIDUM, F. Ioduretum, Ferrum ioda'tum, Iodide, or Ioduret of Iron, (F.) Iodure de fer; in solution, Hydroiodate of Iron, Ferri hydro'idat'is, Ferrum hydroioda'tum, (F.) Hydroiodate de fer, (Iodin. ℥j, Ferri rament. ℥j, Aq. destillat. Oiss.) Mix the iodine with a pint of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, stirring constantly. Heat the mixture gently until the liquid acquires a light greenish colour; then filter; and, after the liquid has passed, pour upon the filter half a pint of the distilled water, boiling hot. When this has passed, evaporate the filtered liquor, at a temperature not exceeding 212°, in an iron vessel, to dryness; keep the dry iodide in a closely stopped bottle. (Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. iij to gr. x or more.

FERRI IODURETUM, F. Iodidum.

FERRI LACTAS, Ferrum lact'icum, Lactate of Iron, L. of Protoxide of Iron, (F.) Lactate de Fer. Prepared by digesting in a sand-bath, at a low temperature, diluted lactic acid with iron filings. It is employed in the same cases as the precipitated subcarbonate of iron, and especially in chlorosis. Twelve grains of the lactate may be given in the 24 hours, in the form of lozenges.

FERRI LIMAT'RA PURIFICA'TA, Purified Iron Filings:—purified by means of the magnet, for internal use. The filings are, also, called Ferri Scoba, F. Ramenta et Fila, Martis Limat'ra, Speculum Ind'icium, Ferri in pul'veren' resolutio, (F.) Limaille de Fer. They are considered to possess the general properties of iron:—the iron becoming oxidized.

FERRI ET MAGNE'SIE CITRAS, Citrate of iron and magnesia, is prepared by dissolving hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of citric acid, saturated with carbonate of magnesia, and evaporating to dryness. It is soluble in water, and does not constipate. Dose, from four grains to fifteen, in solution.

FERRI NITRAS, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Nitratis Liqueur, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Oxidum Fuscum, F. subcarbonas—f. Oxidum hydratum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum—f. Percyanidum, Prussian blue—f. Peroxydum hydratum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum—f. Persequintras, see Liquor Ferri nitratis.

FERRI PHOSPHAS, Phosphate of Iron, (Ferri Sulphat. ℥v, Soda' Phosphat. ℥vi, Aqua, cong.) Dissolve the sulphate of iron and phosphate of soda, severally, in four pints of the water; then mix the solutions, and set the mixture by, that the powder may subside; lastly, having poured off the supernatant liquor, wash the phosphate of iron with water, and dry it with a gentle heat.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 5 to 10 grains as a chalybeate. Rarely used.

FERRI PILA, F. limatura—f. et Potassæ tartras, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Potassio-citras, see Ferri ammonio-citras—f. Potassio-tartras, Ferrum tartarizatum.

FERRI PROTOCAR'BONAS, Protocar'bonate of Iron, (F.) Carbonate de Fer. The protocarbonate of iron, thrown down from a solution of the sulphate of iron by the carbonate of soda, readily attracts oxygen and becomes converted into the sesquioxide. To prevent this, it may be associated with honey and sugar, and the mixture be reduced by evaporation to a pilular consistence. The mass constitutes the Ferru'ginous Pills, Pilules ferrugineuses, of Vallet, Vallet's Pills. See Pilule Ferri Carbonatis. The Edinburgh Pharmacopœia contains the Ferri Car'bonas Saccharatum, Ferri Car'bonas cum Sac'charo, Sac'charine Car'bonate of Iron, prepared in this manner. It is the Ferrum Carbonicum Saccharatum of Klauer.

The protocarbonate is given in the same diseases as the lactate of iron; ten or fifteen grains in the course of the twenty-four hours.

FERRI PROTOSULPHAS VIRIDIS, F. Sulphas—f. Prussias, Prussian blue.

FERRI PULVIS, Fer réduit, F. réduit par l'hydrogène, Ferrum metallicum, Powder of iron, Réd'ced Iron, Quevenuc's Iron, prepared by passing a stream of hydrogen gas over the sesquioxide of iron, contained in an iron or porcelain tube heated to low redness. It is very liable to become oxidated, and must be kept in a dry, well-stopped bottle. It has been prescribed in anæmia, and especially in chlorotic cases. The ordinary dose is three to six grains, or more, three times a day, in pill made with sugar and gum. A formula for its preparation is given in the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851).

FERRI ET QUI'NLE CITRAS, Ferrum et Chininum citricum, Citrate of Iron and Qu'nia, formed by the union of four parts of citrate of iron and one part of citrate of quinia, has been prescribed in cases where a combination of these tonics is indicated.

FERRI RAMENTA, F. limatura—f. Rubigo, F. Subcarbonas—f. Scobs, F. limatura—f. Sesquichloridum, Ferri chloridum—f. Sesquioxidum, F. subcarbonas præcipitatus.

FERRI SESQUINITRATIS, LIQUOR, see Tinctura Ferri muriatis—f. Sodio-tartras, see Ferri et ammonio-citras.

FERRI SUBCAR'BONAS, F. Car'bonas, F. Rubi'go, Ferrum præcipitatum, Chalybis Rubi'go præparata. (The last two terms, as well as Ferru'go, are applied to the subcarbonate or rust, Æru'go Ferri, Cæuferri, formed by the action of moist air on metallic iron.) A protoxide of iron, oxidized by the decomposition of water; the carbonic acid being attracted from the air. Dose, gr. v to ʒss and more.

Ferri Subcarbonas may be precipitated from sulphate of iron by carbonate of soda. The following is the formula of the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Ferri sulph. ʒviij; sodæ carb. ʒix; aqua bullient. cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and carbonate of soda severally in four pints of the water, then mix the solutions, and, having stirred the mixture, set it by that the powder may subside: having poured off the liquor, wash the subcarbonate with hot water, wrap it in bibulous paper, and dry with a gentle heat. It is, also, called Ferri sesquioxidum, Oxidum ferri fuscum, O. ferri rubrum, Dentocar'bonas Ferri fuscus, Crocus martis apereius, Sesquioxide or peroxide of iron, (F.) Peroxide de fer, Safran de Mars apertif.

FERRI SULPHAS, Sal Martis, Vitriolum Martis seu Ferri, Ferrum Vitriolatum, Sulphas seu Protosulphas Ferri vir'idis, Cæcaul'ium, Cal'catar, Cal'catar, Chæcal'thum, Calcic'ea, Atramentum sutorium, Vitriol, Vitriolum viridè, An'ina Hep'atis, Sulphate of Iron, Green Vitriol, Copperas, (F.) Sulfate de fer. The Pharmacopœia of the United States directs it to be made by the action of sulphuric acid ʒxviiij, on iron voice, cut in pieces, ʒxij—water, a gallon—evaporating, crystallizing, and drying the crystals on bibulous paper. This salt is inodorous, and of a strong styptic taste. The crystals are light green, transparent, rhomboidal; and soluble in two parts of water. It is tonic and anthelmintic. Dose, gr. j. to vj and more.

FERRI SULPHAS CALCINATUM, Colcothar.

FERRI SULPHAS EXSICC'ATUM, Ferri Sulphas sicc'atum, of the Pharmacopœias, is Sulphate of Iron exposed to a moderate heat, until it is capable of being reduced to powder. In this form it can be made into pills. Three grains may be esteemed equivalent to five of the crystallized salt.

FERRI SULPHURETUM, Sulphuret of Iron, Iron pyrites, (F.) Sulfure de fer; may be made by heating one part of sublimed sulphur, over three parts of iron filings in a crucible until the mass begins to glow. It is employed as a ready means for obtaining hydrosulphuric acid gas by the addition of sulphuric or chlorohydric acid.

FERRI TANNAS, Ferrum tannicum, Tannate of Iron, (F.) Tannate de fer. This salt is usually obtained by adding a solution of a salt of sesquioxide of iron, as the persulphate, to a decoction of nut-galls. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, and has been extolled, especially in chlorosis.

FERRI TARTARUM, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Tritoxydum, Colcothar.

FERRI VALERIA'NAS, Ferrum Valerianicum, Valer'ianate of Iron, (F.) Valer'ianate de fer. Formed by the action of valerianic acid on oxide of iron. It is a dark brick-red powder, insoluble in water, and has been given in hysteria complicating chlorosis. Dose, from two to four grains. The Dublin Pharmacopœia of 1850 has a formula for this salt.

FERRICUS HYDRAS, Ferrum oxydum hydratum.

FERRO-MAN'GANIC, Ferro-manganicus. Composed of iron and manganese—as a “ferromanganic preparation.”

FERRUGINEOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGINOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGO, Ferri subcarbonas, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum.

FERRUM, Mars, Side'ros, Metal'um hæmatopœticum, Iron, (F.) Fer. A metal of a bluish-gray colour; fibrous texture; brilliant and fine-grained fracture. Specific gravity 7·600 to 7·800; hard, ductile, malleable, and magnetic. The medicinal virtues of iron are tonic; producing fetid eructations, when it takes effect, owing to its meeting with acid in the stomach, which oxidizes it, and causes the evolution of hydrogen gas. When given in the metallic state, the filings are chiefly used; but the oxides and salts are most commonly employed.

FERRUM OXYDATUM HYDRATUM, Ferri Oxi-dum Hydratum (Ph. U. S.) seu Peroxydum Hy-dratum, Ferrug'o, Hydras Fer'ricus, Hydro-oxide of Iron, Hydrated peroxide of Iron, Hydrated Tritoxide of Iron. It may be prepared by taking a solution of sulphate of iron, increasing its dose of oxygen by heating it with nitric acid, and precipitating the oxide by adding pure ammonia in excess, washing the precipitate, and keeping it moist.

The following is the formula adopted by the Pharmacopœia of the United States: Ferri Sulph.
℥iv; acid. sulphuric. f℥iijss; acid. nitric. f℥vi, vel q. s., Liq. ammonia' q. s., aquæ Oij. Dissolve the sulphate of iron in the water, and having added the sulphuric acid boil the solution: then add the nitric acid in small portions, boiling the liquid for a minute or two after each addition, until the acid ceases to produce a dark colour.
Filter the liquid, allow it to cool, and add the liquor ammonia' in excess, stirring the mixture briskly; wash the precipitate with water, until the washings cease to yield a precipitate with chloride of barium, and keep it close in bottles with water sufficient to cover it.

It has been brought forward as an antidote to arsenic; and many cases of its efficacy have been published.

From 10 to 20 parts of the hydrated oxide would seem to be more than sufficient to convert
1 part of arsenious acid into the basic salt of iron.

Mix the subcarbonate of iron and the muriatic acid, and digest for two hours; pour the solution into a gallon of the distilled water; set aside for an hour, and pour off the supernatant liquor.
To this add the liquor potassæ; wash the precipitate formed frequently with water, and while yet moist, mix it with the bitartrate of potassa and half a gallon of the distilled water. Keep the mixture at the temperature of 140° for 30 hours, frequently stirring; filter the solution, and evaporate by means of a water bath, at the same temperature, to dryness.—(Ph. U. S.) It is one of the mildest of the salts of iron, and not unpalatable. Dose, gr. x. to ℥ss.

The Tinctura Martis Aperitiva, Tincture of Ludwig; Al'cohol cum Sulphat'e Ferri tartarizatus; Tinctura Martis Glauberi is, essentially, a solution of this salt. It is also called Eau de
Boule, and is used in contusions.

Helvetius's Styptic was composed of the filings

FEVER, Febris, from feritas, 'wildness,' or from fervor, 'heat,' or from februo, 'I purify.'
Pyr, Pyl'etos, πυρετος, (F.) Fèvre. One of the most frequent and dangerous affections to which the body is liable. A person has an attack of fever, when he is affected with rigors, followed by increased heat of skin, quick pulse, languor, and lassitude. Rigors, increased heat, and frequency of pulse have each been assumed as the essential character of fever. It is not characterized, however, by any one, but depends upon the coexistence of many symptoms. Fevers have been usually divided into idiopathic or essential, and into symptomatic. The idiopathic arise without any obvious local cause. The symptomatic are dependent upon local irritation. Idiopathic fevers may be divided into three classes: 1. Those attended with distinct paroxysms:—intermittents.
2. Remittent and continued fevers: and, 3. Fevers complicated with eruptions, or the exanthematous. These divisions admit of great variety, owing to climate, season, soil, age, &c. All ages and climates are liable to fever; and its exciting causes are very numerous. These causes may be common; as irritations in the intestines; external injuries, stimulants, &c.; or they may be specific; as miasmata, contagion, &c. The greatest diversity has prevailed regarding the theory of fever. Its primary seat has been placed in the brain, mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines, skin, nerves, blood-vessels, liver, vena cava, pancreas, &c. It would seem, however, that although, in fever, the whole of the functions are morbidly impressed, the arguments in favour of the impression being first made on the nervous system and the system of nutrition are the strongest. The exciting cause of fever, whatever it may be, produces an irregular action in the system of nutrition, which is soon conveyed to the rest of the system, owing to the extensive sympathy which exists between every part of the body; and it is probable, that all those local inflammations and congestions are the consequence, rather than the cause, of this disordered condition of the system. The general character of fever is clearly shown by examination of the blood. When fever is devoid of inflammatory complication, the quantity of fibrin is in no case augmented. It frequently remains in the healthy proportion, and at times diminishes to an extent not met with in any other acute disease. The alteration of the blood in fevers, which consists generally in a diminution of the fibrinous element, is the reverse of what occurs in inflammation.

Many phenomena of fever are influenced by that periodicity, which we notice in the execution of several of the functions of the body. The types of intermittents are strong evidences of such an influence.

In the treatment of fever, it is important to bear in mind, 1. Its tendency, particularly in the case of the exanthemata, to run a definite course, and terminate in restoration to health. 2. The disposition to local determination or hyperæmiæ:—the most frequent cause of the fatal termination of fever; a circumstance requiring the vigilant attention of the physician. 3. That the symptoms must be attentively studied, in order to deduce, as far as possible from them, the indications of cure. Lastly, attention must be paid to the prevalent epidemic. There are particular seasons in which fevers are very malignant; and others in which they are as mild; circumstances which necessarily have an effect upon the treatment.

FEVER AND AGUE, Intermittent Fever—f. Acclimating, F. strangers.

FEVER, ADE'NO-MENINGE'AL, Febris adenomeningea seu mesenterica (BAGLIVI.) seu mucosa, Morbus mucosus, Gastro-duodenop'gra, Mucosus or Pituitous or Catar'rh'al Fever, Phlegmap'gra, Phlegmop'gra, Phlegmatop'gra, Gastro-Bronchitis. Fever, accompanied with considerable mucous secretion; especially from the digestive tube.

FEVER, ADE'NO-NERVOUS, Plague.

FEVER, ADYNAM'IC, Febris adynamica, Asthenicop'gra, Asthenicopyr'etnus, Asthenop'ora, Asthenopyr'etnus. Fever attended with great prostration of the vital powers—as Typhoid and Typhus fever.

FEVER, AF'RICAN, Febris Africa'na. The malignant bilious remittent fever, which prevails on the western coast of Africa.

FEVER, ALGID, see Algidus.

FEVER, ANOM'ALOUS, Febris Anom'ala seu erratica seu irregul'aris seu vaga. A fever, whose progress and type are irregular.

FEVER, APHON'IC, Febris apho'nica. A variety of intermittent, in which the voice is lost during the paroxysm.

FEVER, APOPLEC'TIC, Febris apoplec'tica seu comatos seu lethar'gica seu soporosa, Cona- tose Fever. An intermittent or continued fever, attended with apoplectic symptoms.

FEVER, ARTICULAR ERUPTIVE, Dengue—f. Articular rheumatic, Dengue.

FEVER, ARTIFIC'IAL, Febris artificia'lis seu arte promo'ta. Fever produced designedly by the internal or external use of stimulants.

FEVER, ASTHEN'IC, Febris asthen'ica. Fever accompanied with debility. It may include every variety of fever under certain circumstances, but is generally appropriated to typhus.

FEVER, ASTHMAT'IC, Febris asthmat'ica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of asthma.

FEVER, ATAXO-ADYNAM'IC, Febris ataxo-odynami'ca. Fever characterized by symptoms of ataxia and adynamia.

FEVER, BARCELONA, Fever, yellow—f. Bastard, Illegitimate fever.

The common remittent fever of summer and autumn; generally supposed to be owing to, or connected with, derangement of the biliary system.

FEVER, BILIOUS REMITTING, YELLOW, Fever, yellow—f. Bladdery, Pemphigus.

FEVER BLISTER. A term, vaguely applied to vesicular or pustular eruptions, which appear particularly about the mouth, during or after febrile disturbance.

FEVER, BOÁ VISTA. A malignant bilious remittent fever, greatly resembling yellow fever, which was very fatal at Fernando Po, and in ships in its waters, in the year 1845.

FEVER, BONA. A malignant paludal fever, which prevailed amongst the troops of the garrison at Bona in Algeria, from 1832 to 1835.

FEVER, BONE, see Inflammation—f. Bouquet, Dengue—f. Brain, F. cerebral, Phrenitis—f. Brain, water, Hydrocephalus internus—f. Breakbone, Dengue—f. Bucket, Dengue—f. Bulam, Fever, yellow—f. Camp, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, CARDIAL'GIC, Febris Cardial'gica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with violent cardialgia during the paroxysm.

FEVER, CARDIT'IC. Intermittent fever, accompanied with pain at the heart.

FEVER, CATARRHAL, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, CEPHALAL'GIC, Febris cephalal'gica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with intense pain of the head. Also, intermittent cephalalgia.

FEVER, CEPHAL'IC, Febris cephal'ica. A febrile affection of children—intermediate between the acute form of active cerebral congestion and the chronic form—which is attended by fever, pain in the head, disorder, or more generally constipation of the bowels, and a train of phenomena often supposed to be premonitory of an attack of hydrocephalus.—Mauthner.

FEVER, CER'EBRAL, Brain fever. Fever, generally of an ataxic character, in which the brain is considerably affected.

FEVER, CHAGRES, Panama' Fever. A severe form of endemic fever, common on the isthmus of Panama.

FEVER, CHILDBED, Fever, puerperal, Puerperal Fever—f. Childbed, Low, see Peritonitis.

FEVER, CHOL'ERIC, Febris choleric'ica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of cholera morbus.

FEVER, CHOLERIC, OF INFANTS, Cholera infantum.

FEVER, CHRONIC, Febris chron'ica. Some authors apply this name to protracted fevers; others to hectic fever.

FEVER, COLLIQUATIVE. Febris tabida seu colliquativa. Fever, characterized by rapid emaciation, copious evacuations, and rapid prostration of strength.

FEVER, COMATOSE, F. apoplectic.

FEVER, CONGESTIVE. Febris congestiva. Fever accompanied by obscure symptoms; or by great oppression and depression; in which it is difficult—and often impossible—to induce reaction. Congestive fevers occurs in various parts of this country, especially in the fall; and they are very common in India. The term congestive fever is often used in some parts of the south of the United States very indefinitely—to include winter typhus, and typhoid fevers, typhoid pneumonia, as well as intermittents and autumnal remittents.—Diekson.

FEVER, CONTINENT, see Continent and Continued fever—f. Continual, see Continued fever—f. Continued, common, Synochus.

FEVER, CONVULSIVE. Febris convulsiva. A pernicious intermittent or remittent, accompanied by convulsions.

FEVER, COUNTRY. Fever occasioned by exposure to the miasms of a highly malarious soil. A term much used in the Southern States.

FEVER, DELIRIOUS. Febris cum delirio, (F.) Fièvre délirante. A pernicious intermittent, characterized by delirium in the paroxysms.

FEVER, DEPURATORY. Febris depuratoria. A fever, to which was attributed the property of purifying the blood; or which indicated, that such a supposed depuration had occurred.

FEVER, DIAPHORETIC. Febris diaphoretica, Febris sudatoria. A pernicious intermittent, with excessive sweating during the fit.

FEVER, DIARY, Ephemera.

FEVER, DIGESTIVE. The chilliness, followed by increased heat and quickness of pulse, which frequently accompanies digestion.

FEVER, DOUBLE, (F.) Fièvre double ou doublée. An intermittent, which has two paroxysms in a given time, instead of one.

FEVER, DOUBLE-QUARTAN. A fever, whose paroxysms occur two days in succession, and fail the third day; the first paroxysm resembling the 4th, and the second the 5th.

FEVER, DOUBLE-QUOTIDIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return twice every day at corresponding hours.

FEVER, DOUBLE-TERTIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return every day; the first corresponding with the 3d, the second with the 4th, and so on.

FEVER, DUODECIMANE. Febris duodecimana. A supposititious intermittent, whose paroxysms recur on the 12th day, or every 11 days.

FEVER, DYNAMIC, Synocha—f. Endemial, Remittent F.—f. Endemic, Remittent F.—f. Endemial, Remittent F.—f. Enteric, see Typhus—f. Ephemeral, Ephemera.

FEVER, EPILEPTIC. Febris epileptica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with attacks of epilepsy.

FEVER, EROTIC. Febris erotica, (F.) Fièvre d'amour. A chronic fever, occasioned by unpropitious love.

FEVER, ERRATIC, see Erratic—f. Eruptive, Exanthematica—f. Eruptive, articular, Dengue—f. Exacerbating, Remittent Fever.

FEVER, FAINTING, OF PERSIA. A singular and fatal epidemic, presenting some points of analogy with cholera, which prevailed at Teheran in the autumn of 1842.

FEVER, FIVE DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, GANGRENOUS. Febris gangrenosa. Fever, accompanied by gangrene of various parts, and especially of the limbs and genitals. Sénac describes an intermittent of this kind.

FEVER, GASTRALGIC. An intermittent accompanied with acute burning lacerating pain at the stomach.

FEVER, GASTRIC. Febris gastrica seu gastrica biliosa, Gastropyræa, Gastropyretus, Gastrocholosis, Hepato-gastrocholosis, Stomachic fever, Synochus Biliosa. A name given by some to bilious fever, which has appeared to them to be dependent on an affection of the stomach. Also, called Meningo-gastric fever, Febris meningogastrica, Meningo-gastritis, Gastro-meningitis, Harvest fever, (F.) Fièvre de la Moisson, F. Méningo-gastrique.

FEVER, GASTRO-ADYNAMIC. Febris gastro-adynamica. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are joined with those of adynamic fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ANGIOTENIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious are united with those of inflammatory fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ATAXIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are united with those of ataxic fever.

FEVER, GIBALTAR, Fever, yellow—f. Harvest, F. Gastric—f. Hæmagastric, F. yellow.

FEVER, ΗΕΜΟΡΡΟΙΟΙΣ, Febris Hæmorrhoidica. A variety of masked intermittent, in which periodical hæmoptysis is the chief symptom.

FEVER, HAY, Catarrhus æstivus, Summer Catarrh, Hay Asthma, Rose Catarrh, Summer Bronchitis. A catarrh to which certain persons are subject in summer, and which has been ascribed in England to the effluvium of hay, but this is not the probable cause. It is a catarrh with sneezing, headach, weeping, snuffling and cough, with, at times, fever and general discomfort. It is not uncommon in this country. It disappears spontaneously,—to recur on subsequent years about the same period.

FEVER, HEBDOMADAL. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms return weekly, and on the same day.

FEVER, HECTIC, see Consumption, and Hectic Fever.

FEVER, HEPATIC or HEPATALGIC. A pernicious intermittent, with violent pain in the right hypochondrium.

FEVER, HILL. A modification of remittent, occurring in the hilly districts of India.

FEVER, HOSPITAL, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, HUMORAL. Febris humoralis. Fever in which an alteration or deterioration of the humours is suspected.

FEVER, HUNGARY. Febris Hungarica seu Pannonica, Lues Pannonica, Morbus Ungaricus, Cephalovomus, Vermis cerebri, (F.) Fièvre Hongroise ou de Hongrie. An epidemic typhus, common amongst the soldiers in barracks, in Hungary.

FEVER, HYDROPHOBIC. Febris hydrophobica. Pernicious intermittent, with dread of liquids.

FEVER, HYSTERIC. Febris hysterica. Hysteria, accompanied by fever. Hysteria, occurring with each paroxysm of an intermittent.

FEVER, ICTERIC. Febris icterica. Fever, accompanied with jaundice. Some intermittents exhibit this complication at each paroxysm.

FEVER, ICTERIC, REMITTING, see Relapse.

FEVER, INFANTILE REMITTE. Febris infantium remittens, F. verminosa, (of many), F. verminosa, F. levata, Spurious worm fever, Remitting fever of children, Hæctica infantilis. A fever occurring in childhood, which often assumes many of the characters of hydrocephalus. It appears generally to be dependent upon a morbid condition of the stomach and bowels.

FEVER, INFLAMMATORY. Synocha.

FEVER, INSIDIOUS. Fever, which, at first, seems devoid of danger, but subsequently becomes of a more or less malignant character.

FEVER, INTERMITTENT, see Intermittent fever—f. Jail, Typhus gravior—f. Jungle, see Jungle fever.

FEVER, LAKE. Fever produced by exposure to the malaria in the neighbourhood of the northern lakes of this country.

FEVER, LENTICULAR, Miliary fever—f. Irritative, Irritation, morbid.

FEVER, LO'CHIAL, Febris lochia'lis. That acceleration of the circulation which sometimes occurs during the discharge of the lochia.

FEVER, LUNG, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

FEVER, MALIGNANT, Febris maligna. Fever which makes its approaches insidiously, and subsequently becomes formidable. Any fever which exhibits a very dangerous aspect. Typhus gravior.

FEVER, MALIGNANT PESTILENTIAL, Fever, yellow—f. Marsh, Elodes (febris.)

FEVER, MASKED, Febris larva'ta, (F.) Fièvre larvée, Dead or Dumb Aque. An anomalous intermittent, the paroxysms of which have not the regular stages, or are masked.

FEVER, MENINGO-GASTRIC, Fever gastric.

FEVER, MESENTERIC, Febris mesenter'ica. A name given, by Baglivi, to a species of fever which appears to have belonged either to the mucous or bilious.

FEVER, MILK, Febris lac'tea, (F.) Fièvre de lait ou lactense ou lactée; Galactop'gra, Galactopyr'etus. The fever which precedes or accompanies the secretion of milk in women recently delivered. It comes on generally about the third day after delivery, and is characterized by quick pulse; increased heat; redness of face; diminution or temporary suspension of the lochial discharge; tumefaction and tension of the breasts. It commonly terminates in twenty-four hours, and often with profuse perspiration. It requires the use of antiphlogistics, with dry diet.

FEVER, MIXED, Synochus—f. Mucous, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, NEPHRITIC, Febris nephrit'ica. Intermittent fever, accompanied with nephritic pain during the paroxysm.

FEVER, NERVOUS, Febris nervo'sa seu neuro'des seu lenta nervo'sa, Neurop'gra, Neuropyr'etus. A variety of Typhus; the Typhus mitior of Cullen. By many, however, it is esteemed a distinct disease. See Typhoid fever.

FEVER, NERVOUS, WITH EXANTHEMATOUS ERUPTION, Typhus.

FEVER, NEURALGIC, Dengue.

FEVER, NIGER. A malignant fever, of the bilious remittent kind, which proved fatal to many in the expeditions sent out by the British government to explore the Niger, in the years 1841-42, and previously.

FEVER, NON'ANE, Febris nona'na. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms recur every ninth day, or every eight days.

FEVER, OCTANE, Febris octa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every eighth day.

FEVER, PALUDAL, Intermittent—f. Panama, Fever, Chagres—f. Paroxysmal, Remittent fever—f. Periodic, Intermittent.

FEVER, PERIODICAL, Febris period'ica. An intermittent or remittent fever.

FEVER, PERNICIOUS, Febris pernicio'sa. Intermittent fever, when attended with great danger, and which destroys the majority of those affected by it in the first four or five paroxysms; sometimes in the very first.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, Febris pestilentia'lis. The Plague. Also a severe case of typhus. The yellow fever and sweating sickness have, likewise, been thus designated.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, OF CATTLE, Murr—f. Pituitous, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, PLEURITIC. An intermittent or remittent, accompanied with inflammation of the pleura.

FEVER, PNEUMONIC, Febris pneumon'ica. An intermittent, accompanied with inflammation of the lungs. Also, pneumonia.

FEVER POISON, see Poison—f. Pseudo, Irritative, morbid.

FEVER, PUERPERAL, Febris puerpera'lis, Child-bed fever, (F.) Fièvre puerpérale. This name has been given to several acute diseases, supervening on delivery. It means, generally, a malignant variety of peritonitis, which runs its course very rapidly, and passes into a typhoid condition, unless met, at the very onset, by the most active depleting measures. By the generality of practitioners, it is esteemed to be eminently contagious; some, however, deny that it is so. See Peritonitis, and Puerperal fever.

FEVER, PUERPERAL ADYNAMIC or MALIGNANT, see Peritonitis—f. Peking, Milk sickness.

FEVER, PU'RULENT, Febris purulen'ta. Fever, which accompanies suppuration.

FEVER, PUTRID, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, QUINTAN, Febris quinta'na. A fever, whose paroxysms return every fifth day. It is seen rarely, or never.

FEVER, QUOTIDIAN, see Quotidian—f. Red Tongue, see Typhus.

FEVER, REG'ULAR, Febris regula'ris seu exquisi'ta. An intermittent whose paroxysms follow a determinate type. It is opposed to atypic. Sometimes opposed to anomalous.

FEVER, RELAPSING, see Relapse.

FEVER, REMITTENT, see Remittent Fever—f. Remittent, Bilious, see Relapse—f. Remittent, infantile, see Fever, infantile remittent—f. Remittent of children, F. infantile remittent—f. Remittent icteric, see Relapse—f. Rheumatic, Rheumatism, acute—f. Root, Triosteum perfoliatum.

FEVER, SCORBU'TIC, Febris scorbut'ica. The febrile movement, which sometimes accompanies scorbutus or scurvy.

FEVER, SEASONING, F., strangers'.

FEVER, SEC'ONDARY. A febrile condition which recurs in certain affections after having ceased; such as the secondary fever, which comes on at the time of the maturation of the variolous pustules, or as the eruption of scarlatina, &c., disappears.

FEVER, SEPTAN, Febris septa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every six days, and consequently on the seventh.

FEVER, SEVEN DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, SEXTAN, Febris sexta'na. A fever, which recurs every five days, and consequently on the sixth.

FEVER, SHIP, see Typhus.

FEVER, SIMPLE, Febris Simplex. Simple fever is that which has no predominant character—bilious, inflammatory, or nervous; and which is unaccompanied by any local determination, hyperæmia, or complication. It may be continued, remittent, or intermittent.

FEVER, SIMPLE CONTINUED. This is the most favourable form of continued fever, and has a tendency to wear itself out, provided only the lædientia be avoided. The prognosis is consequently favourable, and the treatment simple; consisting in perfect repose of body and mind, abstinence, and relieving the thirst by cold drinks.

FEVER, SINGUL'TOUS, Febris singulto'sa seu lygmo'des seu lyngo'des. Fever, accompanied with singultus or hiccough.

FEVER, SOLAR, Dengue—f. Spotted, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, STERCORAL, Febris stercora'lis. Fever, produced by an accumulation of fæces in the intestines.

FEVER, STOMACHIC, Gastric Fever.

FEVER, STRANGERS', Acclimating or Sea-sailing fever. Yellow, or remittent fever, which is endemic in certain places, and to which strangers are especially liable.

FEVER, SUBCONTINENTAL, Remittent Fever.

FEVER, SUBINTRANSIT, Febris subintransiva. An intermittent, in which one paroxysm is scarcely finished before the other begins.

FEVER, SUN, Dengue—f. Sweating, Sudor Anglicus.

FEVER, SYN' COPAL, Febris syncopealis seu minutata, (F.) Fèvre syncopele. A variety of pernicious intermittent, in which there is, in every paroxysm, one or more faintings.

FEVER, SYNOCHOID, Synochus.

FEVER, SYPHILITIC, Febris syphilitica. Fever, accompanying syphilis, or supposed to be owing to a syphilitic taint.

FEVER, TER'TIAN, Febris tertiana. A fever, whose paroxysm returns on the third day, and consequently every two days.

FEVER, THIRD DAY, Tertian.

FEVER, TRAG'IC, Febris Trag'ica. A low fever, in which the patient declaims like an actor during the delirium.

FEVER, TRAUMAT'IC, Febris traumatica. The fever, which supervenes on wounds or great surgical operations.

FEVER, TREMBLING, Intermittent fever—f. Typhoid, see Typhus—f. Typhoid, of India, Cholera—f. Typhous, Typhus—f. Varicellar, see Varioloid—f. Varioloid, see Varioloid.

FEVER, VERMINOUS, Febris verminosa, Helminthopyra, Worm fever. Fever, produced by the presence of worms in the digestive tube, or accompanied by their expulsion.

FEVER, VERNAL, Febris vernalis. An intermittent or other fever occurring in the spring. Vernal intermittents were formerly considered salubrious.

"An ague in the spring
Is physic for a king."

FEVER, VESICULAR, Pemphigus.

FEVER, WAL'CHEREN, Gall-sickness. The remittents and intermittents to which the British troops were exposed, who were attached to the expedition to Walcheren, in 1809.

FEVER, WATER BRAIN, Hydrocephalus internus—f. Winter, see Tongue, black—f. Worm, Verminous F.—f. Worm, spurious, Fever, infantile remittent.

FEVER, YELLOW, Febris flava, F. seu Pestis Americana, F. flava Americanorum, F. tropica, F. continua putrida ictero'des Carolinien'sis, F. elv'des ictero'des, F. maligna bilio'sa America, F. maligna flava India Occident'lis, F. tox'ica, Chol'ra's America, Ochrot'yphus, Loimocholo'sis, Pestilent'ia hæmagast'rica, Pestis occident'lis seu intertrop'ica, Vom'itus niger, Epan'e'tus malignus flavus, Remitt'ens ictero'des, Tritæoph'ya Americana, Typhus ictero'des, Ochrop'ya, Syn'ochous ictero'des, Endem'ial Canans of the West Indies, Canans trop'icus endem'icus, Bilious remitting yellow fever, Malignant pestilential fever, Fèvre jaune d'Amérique, F. matelote, F. gastro-dynamique, F. de la Barbade, F. de Siam, F. Intérique, F. Gastro-hépatique, Typhus miasmatic ataxique putride jaune, T. jaune, T. d'Amérique, Vomito prieto, Vomito negro, Mal de Siam, Hæmagast'ric Fever or Pestilence, Black vomit, Bulam, Gibralt'ar and Barcelo'na Fever,—vulg., in the West Indies, Malaria Jack and Yellow Jack. A very acute and dangerous febrile affection; so called, because complicated, in its second stage, with a jaundiced appearance, accompanied by vomiting of black matter. Sauvages, Cullen, and others regard it as a variety of typhus; and Pinel, as a species of gastro-dynamic, or bilious putrid fever. It occurs, endemically, only within the tropics; but it has been met with epidemically in the temperate regions. Broussais regards the disease as gastro-enteritis, exasperated by atmospheric heat; so that it runs through its stages with much greater rapidity than the gastro-enteritis of our climates. The yellow colour of the skin, according to him, is owing to the inflammation of the small intestine,—and especially of the duodenum,—augmenting the secretion of the liver, and at the same time preventing its discharge into the duodenum. The pathology of this affection, as well as its origin, is still unsettled. The treatment must generally be of the most active nature at the onset; consisting in bleeding largely, and exhibiting mercury, so as to excite a new action, if possible;—the other symptoms being combated according to general principles. It must vary, however, according to the epidemic.

FEVER, YELLOW, MILK, see Relapse.

FEVERBUSH, Laurus benzoin, Prinos.

FEVER DROPS, WARBURG'S, see Bebeeru.

FEVERET, Febriola.

FEVERFEW, Matricaria.

FEVERFOULLIE, Matricaria.

FE'VERISH, Fe'verous, Feb'riens, Febrico'sus, (F.) Fèvreux, from febris, 'fever.' That which causes fever or is febrifugient or febrific; as feverish food, feverish diathesis, &c. Also, the state of one labouring under fever, Feversick. If affected with intermittent fever, he is said to be a'garified in Suffolk, England.

FE'VERISHNESS, Febricitatio, Febriculos'ity. The state of having fever. A slight febrile disorder.

FEVEROUS, Feverish.

FEVERROOT, Pterospara andromeda.

FEVERSICK, see Feverish.

FEVERTREE, Pinckneya pubens.

FEVERWOOD, Laurus benzoin.

FEVERWORT, Eupatorium perfoliatum, Triosteum.

FEY, Psychorages.

FEYK, Fidgets.

FIBER, Castor fiber.

FIBRA, Fibre—f. Aurea, Coptis—f. Nervea, Nerve-fibre—f. Sanguinis, Fibrin.

FIBRE ARCIFORMES, see Arciform.

FIBRE, Fibra, Is, Ctedan, Filum. An organic filament, of a solid consistence, and more or less extensible, which enters into the composition of every animal and vegetable texture. The simple or elementary fibre of the ancients, from a particular assemblage and arrangement of which every texture of the body was conceived to be constituted, seems entirely ideal. The moderns usually admit, with Haller and Blumenbach, three elementary fibres or tissues. 1. The cellular or laminated, formed chiefly of thin plates, of a whitish colour and extensible, which seems to consist of concrete gelatin. 2. The nervous, pulpy, or medullary, formed of a soft substance, contained in a cellular sheath, and consisting of albumen united to a fatty matter. 3. The muscular, composed of round filaments, of a grayish or reddish colour, and formed of fibrin. Chaussier has added to these the albuminous fibre, but it seems to differ from the cellular fibre only in greater condensation of the molecules. See Fibrous.

A very small or ultimate fibre is called a Fibril, Fibrilla.

FIBRE, ALBUGINEOUS, see Albuginea.

FIBRE LISSE, see Muscular fibre—f. Striée, see Muscular fibre.

FIBRES, CONVERG'ING. Nervous fibres, whose office it is to associate different portions of the nervous centres with each other. They form the Commissures.

FIBRES, DIVERG'ING. The fibres composing the columns of the medulla oblongata, which separate in their progress to the periphery of the cerebrum and cerebellum.—Gall and Spurzheim.

FIBRES OF REMAK. Fibres described by Remak as peculiar to the sympathetic nerve, but which Valentin considers to be neurilemma, and to consist of fibro-cellular bundles.

FIBREUX, Fibrous.

FIBRIL, see Fibre.

FIBRILLA, Fibril—f. Muscularis, Muscular fibre.

FIBRILLAR, Fibrilla'ris. Relating or appertaining to fibrils.

FIBRILLATION, Fibrilla'tio. The formation of fibrils.

FIBRIN or Fib'rin, Fibrine, Fibrin'a, Fibrin'e, Fibra sanguinis, Materia fibrosa, Lympha plastica, Matière fibreuse du sang. An immediate animal principle—solid, white, and inodorous; insipid; heavier than water; without action on the vegetable blues; elastic, when moist; hard and brittle when dry. It enters into the composition of the chyle and the blood, and forms the chief part of the muscles of red-blooded animals. Muscular fibrin, Syntouin, Musculin, has been shown, however, to be different from that of the blood. In certain diseased actions, Fibrin or Coagulable Lymph, gluten, is separated from the blood, and is found in considerable quantity on the surfaces of membranes, and in the cavities of the body. See Liquor Sanguinis.

Fibrin is likewise a proximate principle of vegetables, and differs but little in chemical composition from animal fibrin; nor does it differ much from albumen and casein.

Fibrin is very nutritious.

FIBRINATION, Fibrina'tio. The act of adding fibrin to the blood. The opposite to defibrination.

FIBRINOUS, Fibrinosus, (F.) Fibrineux. That which is composed of fibrin, or has the appearance of fibrin.

FIBRO. In composition, appertaining or relating to fibrous tissue.

FIBRO-AREOLAR, Fibro-cellular.

FIBRO-BRONCHITIS. Fibrous or rheumatic inflammation of the bronchial tubes.

FIBRO-CARTILAGE, Fibro-cartilago. An organic tissue, partaking of the nature of the fibrous tissue, and of that of cartilage. It is dense, resisting, elastic, firm, supple, and flexible. Fibro-cartilages are distinguished into.—1. Membraniform, or those which serve as moulds to certain parts, as the alæ nasi and eyelids. 2. Vaginiform, or those which form sheaths for the sliding of tendons. 3. Interarticular, those which are met with in the movable articulations. 4. Uniting. (F.) Fibro-cartilages d'union, which form a junction between two bones, as the symphysis pubis. Fibro-cartilages are sometimes formed adventitiously, as the result of a morbid process in different organs.

FIBRO-CARTILAGES, TARSAL, see Tarsus.

FIBRO-CARTILAGINES INTERVERTEBRALES, Intervertebral cartilages.

FIBRO-CELLULAR, Fibro-cellularis, Fibro-areolar, Fibro-areolaris. That which partakes of the fibrous and of the cellular tissue, as the fascia transversalis.

FIBRO-CELLULAR TUMOUR, Tumour, fibro-cellular.

FIBROMA, Tumour, fibrous.

FIBRO-MUCOUS, Fibro-mucosus, (F.) Fibro-muqueux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and of mucous membranes. A term applied to fibrous membranes, which are intimately united with other membranes of a mucous nature, as the pituitary membrane, the membrane of the urethra, &c.

FIBRO-PLASTIC, Fibro-plasticus, (F.) Fibro-plastique, from fibra, 'fibre,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' An epithet for a morbid formation, constituted of the elements of areolar tissue transformed, in part, into fibre.—Lebert.

FIBRO-PLASTIC TUMOUR, Sarcoma.

FIBRO-SEROUS, Fibro-serosus, (F.) Fibro-séreux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and serous membranes. Membranes, composed of a fibrous, and a serous sheet, intimately united:—as the Dura Mater, Pericardium, Tunica albuginea testis, &c.

FIBROID, Fibrous, Tumour, fibrous.

FIBROUS, Fibrosus, Fibroid, (F.) Fibreux. Composed of fibres. Certain membranes, as the dura mater, periosteum, ligamentous capsules of the joints, &c., are fibrous. The fibrous system of Bichat includes the system of organs formed by the albugineous fibre of Chaussier. It comprises, particularly, the periosteum and perichondrium; the articular capsules and ligaments; the tendons; the dura mater, pericardium, tunica sclerotica, tunica albuginea testis, outer membrane of the spleen, &c. Under simple fibrous tissues, Tela fibrosa, certain writers have classed the white and yellow fibrous tissues, and areolar tissue. Both the yellow and the white may be detected in the areolar tissue. The white is said to exist alone in ligaments, tendons, fibrous membranes, aponeuroses, &c. The yellow, (F.) Tissu jaune, exists separately in the middle coat of the arteries, the chordæ vocales, ligamentum nuchæ of quadrupeds, &c. It differs from the white in possessing a high degree of elasticity, owing to the presence of a distinct principle, called by MM. Robin and Verdeil, élasticine.

FIBROUS GROWTH, Tumour, fibrous—f. Matter of the Brain, see Cerebrum—f. Membranes, see Membranes, fibrous.

FIB'ULA, (for Figibula [?] from figo, 'to fix,') Cruris radialis, Canna minor, Os per'onæ, Peroneum, Foc'ilâ minus, Sura, Aru'do minor, Fist'ula Cruris, Tibia minima, Os tib'ia minus, Spelli-bone, 'a clasp.' The splinter bone of the leg. (F.) Péroné. The long, small bone, situate at the outer part of the leg. The superior or tibial extremity of the fibula is rounded and forms the caput or head. It is articulated with the tibia. Its inferior or tarsal extremity is broader than the superior. It is articulated with the tibia and astragalus, and forms the malleolus externus or outer ankle by means of its coronoid process. The body of the bone has three faces, having more or less prominent edges. It is separated from the tibia by the interosseous space, and is developed by three points of ossification; one at the body, and one at each extremity. It prevents the foot from turning outwards.

FIBULAD, see Fibular aspect.

FIBULAR, Peroneal.

FIBULAR ASPECT. An aspect towards the side on which the fibula is situated.—Barclay, Fib'ulad is used by the same writer adverbially, to signify 'towards the fibular aspect.'

FIBULATIO, Infibulation.

FIC, Ficus.

FICAIRE, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICARIA, Scrophularia aquatica—f. Communis, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Ranunculoides, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Verna, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICICION, Physician.

FICOSA EMINENTIA, Ficus.

FICUS, Sycē, Sy'cea, Sycon, Sycosis, Sycoma, Fica'tio, Ficosus Tumor, Fico'sa eminentia, Maris'ca, (F.) Fic. A fleshy excrescence, often soft and reddish, sometimes hard and scirrhous, hanging by a peduncle, or formed like a fig; occurring on the eyelids, chin, tongue, anus, or organs of generation. The figs seated on the last-mentioned parts are generally of a syphilitic character.

FICUS, F. Carica.

FICUS CARICA, F. vulgaris seu communis. The systematic name of the fig tree; (F.) Figuiar. Ord. Urticaceæ. Carica, Ficus, Sycè, συκή, (F.) Figue: the fig—is a pleasant fruit when ripe; as well as when dried in the state in which it is found in the shops—Ficus, (Ph. U. S.) It is used, at times, in place of a cataplasm; especially in gum-boils.

FICUS COMMUNIS, F. Carica—f. India grana, Cocœus cacti—f. India, Musa paradisiaca, see Couchou, Carica papaya, and Lacca—f. Religiosa, see Lacca.

FIDERIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, in the Canton of the Grisons, are strong, acidulous, and alkaline, and possess all the virtues of the class.

FIDGETS. Of doubtful etymology. Dysphoria simplex, D. nervosa, Erethismus simplex, Titubatio, Creepers, (Sc.) Feyk, (F.) Frcttillement. General restlessness and troublesome uneasiness of the nerves and muscles, with increased sensibility, and inability of fixing the attention, accompanied with a perpetual desire of changing the position. See Agacement des Nerfs.

FIDICINALES, Lumbricales manus.

FIE, Psychorages.

FIEL, Bile—f. de Bœuf, Bile of the ox—f. de Terre, Fumaria.

FIGUIER, Ficus carica—f. d'Inde, Cactus opuntia.

FIGURA VENOSA, Circulus venosus.

FIGURATIO, Imagination.

FIGURE, Countenance.

FIGURÉ, (F.) An epithet for a compressive bandage, applied over the head after bleeding from the frontal vein. It has also been called bandage royal.

FIGWORT, Scrophularia nodosa—f. Water, greater, Scrophularia aquatica.

FILACEOUS, Filamentous.

FILA NERVEA, Nerve-fibres—f. Spermatica, Spermatozoa.

FILAIRE DE MÉDINE, Dracuncul.

FILAMENT, Filum, Filamentum, from filum, 'a thread.' This word is used synonymously with fibril; thus, we say, a nervous or cellular filament or fibril. Also, the glairy, thread-like substance which forms in the urine in some diseases, and which depends on a particular secretion from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages.

FILAMEN'TOUS, Filamentous. Filaceous; threadlike; filiform. Same etymon. Containing threadlike substances, as the tunica filamentosa or decidua:—Filamentous urine; urine containing threadlike substances.

FILAMENTUM, Frænum.

FILARIA GUINEENSIS, Dracuncul—f. Homini bronchialis, see Worms—f. Medicensis, Dracuncul—f. Oculi, see Worms.

FILETUM, Frænum linguæ.

FILICULA, Polypodium filix mas—f. Dulcis, Polypodium vulgare.

FILIFORM, Filiformis, from filum, 'a thread,' and forma, 'form.' Having the shape of a thread; as the "filiform papillæ of the tongue;" a "filiform pulse." See Papilla.

FILING, Limatio.

FILIPENDULA, Spiræa filipendula.

FILIUS ANTE PATREM, Tussilago.

FILIX FEMINEA, Pteris aquilina—f. Florida, Osmunda regalis—f. Mas, Polypodium filix mas—f. Non ramosa dentata, Polypodium filix mas—f. Nymphæa, Pteris aquilina—f. Pinnata, Polypodium filix mas—f. Veneris, Adiantum pedatum.

FILLE, Girl.

FILLET, Fascia, Laqueus—f. of the Corpus Callosum, Gyrus fornicatus.

FILLING. A term employed in dentistry for the operation of stuffing the cavity of a carious tooth with some indestructible substance, to prevent the access of extraneous matters—Odontoplerosis. See Plugging.

FILTRATION, Filtratio, Percolatio, Ethisio, Ethisimus. Same etymon as the next. A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in passing a fluid through a filter or strainer, for the purpose of clarifying it. In ancient physiology, it meant the action by which the different humours of the body are separated from the mass of the blood.

FILTRUM. A filter. (F.) Filtre;—from feutre, 'felt or fulled cloth,' which was used to form it. Any porous material; such as sand, some kinds of freestone, powdered charcoal, pounded glass, flannel, unsized paper, &c., through which a fluid is passed for the purpose of separating it from the matters suspended in it.

FILUM, Filament—f. Muscular, Muscular fibre—f. Tæniaforme, Tæniola.

FILUM TERMINALE. A slender ligament, prolonged from the nervous sheath, formed by the spinal pia mater, which descends through the centre of the cauda equina, and is attached to the dura mater, lining the canal of the coccyx.

FIMBRIA, Parar'ma. A band, a fringe; as the fimbria or fimbriated or fringed extremity of the Fallopiian tube.

FIMBRIÆ CARNOSÆ COLLI, Appendiculæ pinguinosæ—f. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube, Fallopiian.

FIMBRIATED, see Fimbria.

FIMUS, Bor'borns, Oonthus, Stercus. (F.) Fiente. Dung, excrement.

FIMUS SEU STERCUS AN'SERIS, Goose-dung, was applied as a poultice to the feet in malignant fever. See Chenocoprus.

FIMUS EQUINUS, Stercus equi non castrati. Stone horse-dung was once thought antipleuritic.

FIMUS VACCÆ, Cow-dung, was employed as a cataplasm, especially in gout.

FINICLE, Anethum.

FINGER, Digitus—f. Middle, Medius digitus—f. Ring, Annular finger—f. Stall, Digitale.

FINIS ASPERÆ ARTERIÆ, Larynx.

FIRING, Cauterization.

FIRST INTENTION, see Intention.

FISHSKIN, Ichthyosis.

FISH-TONGUE. (F.) Langue de Carpe. An instrument—so called from its shape—used by some dentists for the removal of the dentes sapientie.

FISSICULA'TIO, from fissiculare, 'to cut off,' 'open,' 'make incisions.' An old word for an opening made with a scalpel.

FISSIPARITE, see Generation.

FISSIPAROUS, see Generation.

FISSURA, Fissure—f. Canalis Fallopii, see Aquæductus Fallopii—f. Capillorum, Distrix—f. Contrajacens, Contra-fissura—f. Cerebri longitudinalis, Fissure, longitudinal, of the Brain—f. Interlobularis, Interlobular fissure—f. Magna vulvæ, see Rima—f. Palpebrarum, see Palpebra—f. Pilaris, Trichismus.

FISSURA LONGITUDINALIS, ANTE'RIOR ET POSTE'RIOR. Two vertical fissures in the median line, in front of, and behind, the medulla oblongata, which divide it superficially into two symmetrical lateral columns.

FISSURA TRANSVERSA MAGNA CEREBRI, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain.

FISSURE, Fissu'ra, Schisma, Scissu'ra, Rhegē, Rhegma, Rhegmus, from findere, fissum, 'to cleave;' a long and narrow cleft or opening in a bone—Rhagē, ραγή, Ceasma, κασμα. (F.) Fissure, Fente.

FISSURE has various acceptations: 1. A fracture, Catag'ma fissu'ra, in which the bone is cracked, not separated, as in fracture; 2. A narrow, long, and superficial solution of continuity, around the external openings of the mucous membranes. A sort of chaps—(F.) Gercure—observed on the hands, particularly on the callous hands, of workmen, in certain mechanical employments; 3. Small chapped ulcerations, sometimes noticed in young children, owing to the contact of the faces and urine with the fine, delicate skin of the thighs, nates, and genital organs; 4. Clefts of a more or less deep nature, occurring on the genital organs in the vicinity of the anus, in those labouring under syphilis. These are usually called rhagodes. See Monster.

FISSURE OF BICHUT, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain—f. Capillary, see Pilatō.

FISSURE, CENTRAL. The aggregate of the cavities or ventricles of the brain. Meckel considers them but one cavity, in the form of a cross.

FISSURE OF GLASER, Fissure, glenoid—f. of Glaserius, F. Glenoid.

FISSURE, GLENOID, Fissure of Glaser or Glose'rius, (F.) Fissure ou Scissure de Glaser, Fente glenoidale ou Fêlne de Glaser, divides the glenoid cavity of the temporal bone into two parts, and gives passage to the chorda tympani, &c.

FISSURE OF THE HELIX. A small vertical fissure of the helix of the ear, a little above the tubercle for the attachment of the atrahens aurem muscle.

FISSURE, INFRAORBITAR, Suborbitar fissure.

FISSURE, LONGITUDINAL, OF THE BRAIN, Fissu'ra cerebri longitudinalis. The space which separates the two hemispheres of the brain.

FISSURE, ORBITAR, see Orbitar fissure—f. Orbitar, inferior, Spheno-maxillary fissure—f. Orbitar, superior, Sphenoidal fissure—f. Portal, see Liver.

FISSURE OF ROLAN'DO. A transverse fissure placed between two superior cerebral convolutions, which are met with above the fissure of Sylvius.

FISSURE, SEMILUNAR. A notch at the anterior edge of the cerebellum, where it receives fibres which connect it to the cerebellum and mesocephalon.

FISSURE OF SYLVIVS, Fissu'ra seu Fossa Magna Syl'vii. A deep, narrow sulcus, which ascends obliquely backwards from the temporal ala of the sphenoid bone, near to the middle of the parietal bone, and which parts the anterior and middle lobes of the cerebrum on each side.

FISSURE OF THE TRAGUS. A fissure on the anterior surface of the tragus of the ear.

FISSURE, TRANSVERSE, OF THE BRAIN, Great transverse fissure, Fissure of Bichut, Fissu'ra seu Rima transver'sa magna cerebri. A fissure, which passes beneath and behind the edge of the middle lobe of the brain, and extends beneath the hemisphere of one side to the same point of the opposite side.

FIST, Sax. fýrτ, πυγμα, Pygmē, Pugnus, (F.) Poing. The clenched hand.

FISTULA, 'a pipe or reed,' Syrinx, Syrin'ga, Aulos—when of a small size, Aulis'cos. A solution of continuity, of greater or less depth and sinuosity; the opening of which is narrow, and the disease kept up by an altered texture of parts, so that it is not disposed to heal. A fistula is incomplete or blind, when it has but one opening; and complete when there are two, the one communicating with an internal cavity, the other externally. It is lined, in its whole course, by a membrane which seems analogous to mucous membranes. Incomplete fistulæ may be internal or external. The former are those which open internally; the latter those which open externally. External incomplete fistulæ are kept up by caries or necrosis of bones, by extraneous bodies in any of the living textures, or by purulent cavities, the walls of which have not become united. Internal incomplete fistulæ generally soon become complete, since the discharge that escapes from them into the cavities into which they open has a constant tendency to make its way outwardly, and soon occasions ulceration of the integuments. Fistulæ have received different names, according to the discharge which they afford, and the organs in which they are seated.—as lachrymal, biliary, salivary, synovial, urinary—Fistula urinæ, Uris. The great object of treatment, in fistulous sores, is to bring on an altered condition of the parietes of the canal, by astringent or stimulating injections, caustics, the knife, pressure, &c. Those which are dependent on diseased bone, cartilage, tendon, &c., do not heal until after the exfoliation of the diseased part. Fistulæ of excretory ducts are produced either by an injury of the duct itself or by the retention and accumulation of the fluids to which they have to give passage. Thus, Fistula lacrymalis, Dacryosyrinx, Empyagma lacrymalis, Hydrops sacci lacrymalis, Dropsy of the lachrymal sac, commonly proceeds from the obliteration of the nasal ducts, or from atony of the lachrymal sac; which circumstances prevent the tears from passing into the nostrils.

FISTULA IN ANO, Archosyrinx, generally occurs from some mechanical pressure or impediment. The principal indication in the treatment of these fistulæ of the excretory canals being to put a stop to the constant discharge of the secretions, &c., through the preternatural channel, the fistulous passage is at times laid open, and a communication established with the natural excretory canal; at others, strong pressure is employed to procure its obliteration.

FISTULOUS, Fistulo'us, Syring'icus, Syringo'des, (F.) Fistuleux. Relating to, or resembling, a fistula: as 'a fistulous opening.'

FIT, Pes.

FIT-ROOT, Monotropa uniflora.

FITS, NINE DAY, Trismus naseentium.

FIVE FINGERS, Panax quinquefolium.

FIXATIO MONONGEA, Melancholy.

FIXED, Fixus, from figere, fixum, 'to fasten.' A body not capable of being volatilized by fire is said to be fixed. Thus, we say fixed oils, in contradistinction to volatile oils.

FIXEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is four leagues from Waldsassen, in Bavaria. It contains carbonic acid, holding in solution carbonates of lime and magnesia, chlorides of lime and magnesia, carbonate of soda and silica. In Bavaria, it replaces the Seltzer water.

FIXI DENTES. The teeth of the second dentition.

FLABELLA'TION, Flabella'tio, from flabellare, flabellatum, (from flabrum, 'a blast of wind,') 'to agitate the air.' An operation recommended by Ambrose Paré, which consists in keeping fractured limbs cool, as well as the dressings surrounding them, by the renewal of the air around them, either by the use of a fan, or the repeated change of position of the parts affected.

FLABELLUM ET VENTILABRUM CORDIS, Pulmo.

FLACCID'ITY, Flaccid'itas, from flaccidus, 'flabby,' 'soft.' Softness of a part, so as to offer little resistance on pressure.

FLAG, BLUE, Iris versicolor—f. Blue, slender, Iris Virginica—f. Dwarf, Iris lacustris—f. Myrtle, Acorus calamus—f. Root, Acorus calamus.

FLAGELLATIO, Mastigosis.

FLAMMULA, Fleam, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Cordis, Biolychnium—f. Jovis, Clematis recta—f. Vitalis, Animal heat, Biolychnium, Vital principle.

FLANCS, Flanks.

FLANKS, Il'ia, Il'ea, La'gonæ, Lap'ara, Cæno'nes, (Prov.) Lists, (F.) Flançes, Les Ilcs. The regions of the body which extend, on the sides, from the inferior margin of the chest to the crista ili.

FLAP, (F.) Lambeau. A portion of the soft parts of the body separated from those beneath, but still attached by the base. Hence there may be 'flap wounds,' (F.) Plaies à lambeau, and 'flap operations,' (F.) Opérations à lambeau. When the flap is taken from one part, and applied to another, in plastic operations, the operation is said to be by migration of the flap, (F.) Migration du Lambeau. At times, the flap is made to slide over the part to which it has to adhere:—the operation is then said to be by the sliding of the flap, (F.) Glissement du Lambeau. The flap is also, at times, rolled, inverted, &c., (F.) Roulement on Inversion du Lambeau.

FLAP-DOCK, Digitalis.

FLAP OPERATION OF AMPUTATION, Amputation à lambeau.

FLAT TOP, Vernonia noveboracensis.

FLATUARIUS, Alehymist.

FLATUEUX, Windy.

FLATULENCE, Flatulent'ia, Flatus, Flatulo'itas, Aëri'flux'us, Pneumat'osis, Pneumatosis ventriculi et enter'ica, Ides'ma, Hyperpneustic, Clydon, Physa, Polyphy'sio, Limo'sis Flatus, Erenz'is, Bombus, Flatuosity, Wind, Wind'iness, Ventosity, Vapour, (F.) Ventosité, Flatosité, Vents; from flō, flatum, 'to blow.' Wind emitted from, or accumulated in, the digestive tube especially.

FLATULENT, Windy.

FLATULENTIA, Flatulenee.

FLATUOSITÉ, Flatulenee.

FLATUOSITY, Flatulenee.

FLATUS, Crepitation, Flatulenee—f. Furiosus, Ambulo-flatulentus—f. Spinæ, Spina ventosa.

FLAVEDO CORTICUM CITRI, see Citrus medica.

FLAVOUR, from (F.) flairer, 'to smell.' The quality of a sapid body, which is appreciated by the taste and smell combined, and more especially by the latter. Some physiologists consider that flavour is effected through the smell alone.

FLAVUS, Yellow.

FLAX, COMMON, Linum usitatissimum—f. Purging, Linum catharticum—f. Seed, see Linum usitatissimum—f. Seed tea, Infusum lini compositum—f. Toad, Antirrhinum linaria.

FLEA. COMMON, Pulex irritans.

FLEABANE, GREAT, Conyza squarrosa—f. Various-leaved, Erigeron heterophyllum—f. Canada, Erigeron Canadense—f. Narrow-leaved, Erigeron Philadelphicum—f. Philadelphia, Erigeron Philadelphicum—f. Skevish, Erigeron Philadelphicum.

FLEAM, Flamma, Flam'mula, Schaste' rion, Fosso' rium, Phlebot' omum. A surgical instrument used for the operation of phlebotomy. (F.) Flamme, Flammette. It consists of a small metallic box, containing a spear-pointed cutting instrument, which, by means of a spring, can be forced into the vein. It is much used in Germany and some other European countries, and is not unfrequently employed in America; but is scarcely ever seen in France or Great Britain.

FLEAWORT, Plantago psyllium.

FLÉCHISSEUR, Flexor—f. Court commun des orteils, Flexor brevis digitorum pedis—f. Court du petit doigt, Flexor parvus minimi digiti—f. Court du petit orteil, Flexor brevis miimi digiti pedis—f. FLEXIBIL'ITY, Flexibil'itas, from flectere, flexum, 'to bend.' Capability of being bent. A physical property of the tissues, which varies greatly according to the structure. The tendons exhibit this property in a marked manner.

FLEXIO, Campsis, Flexion.

FLEX'ION, Flex'io, Camp'. Same etymon. The state of being bent. The action of a flexor muscle.

FLEXOR. Same etymon. (F.) Fléchisseur. A muscle, whose office it is to bend certain parts.

FLEXOR BREVIS DIGITO'RUM PEDIS PERFORA'RUS, F. Subli'mis seu brevis seu digito'rum brevis seu perforatus pedis, Perforat'us seu flexor secun'di interno'dii digito'rum pedis, (F.) Calcaéno-sous-phalangien commun, —Calcaéno-sous-phalangien commun, —(Ch.), Muscle court fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, placed at the middle of the sole of the foot. It is narrower and thicker behind than before, where it is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior part of the inferior surface of the os calcis, and is inserted at the inferior surface of the second phalanx of the last four toes. It bends the second phalanges of the toes on the first, and the first on the metatarsal bones; in this manner augmenting the concavity of the vault of the foot.

FLEXOR BREVIS MINIMI DIGITI, F. Parvus minimi digiti.

FLEXOR BREVIS MIN'IMI DIG'ITI PEDIS, Para'thenar minor, (F.) Court fléchisseur du petit orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du petit orteil—(Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and outer part of the sole of the foot. It arises from the posterior extremity of the fifth metatarsal bone, and is inserted into the posterior part of the first phalanx of the little toe, which it bends.

FLEXOR BREVIS POL' LICIS MANÛS, F. secun'di interno'dii, F. primi et secun'di ossis pollicis, Thenar, (F.) Court fléchisseur du ponce, Carpo-phalangien du ponce—(Ch.), Demi-interosscus du ponce. A muscle, situate at the outer part of the palm of the hand. It is divided into two portions by the tendon of the Flexor longus pollicis. It arises from the os magnum, the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the third metacarpal bone; and is inserted into the superior part of the first phalanx of the thumb, and into the two ossa sesamoidea at the articulation of the first phalanx with the first metacarpal bone. Its use is to bend the first phalanx of the thumb on the first metacarpal bone, and the latter upon the trapezium.

FLEXOR BREVIS POL' LICIS PEDIS, F. brevis seu hal'lucis seu brevis pollicis, (F.) Tarso-phalangien du ponce, Court fléchisseur du gros orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du premier orteil—(Ch.) It is situate at the anterior and inner part of the sole of the foot; is thin and narrow behind, thick and divided into two portions before. It arises from the inferior part of the os calcis and the last two cuneiform bones, and is inserted at the inferior part of the base of the first phalanx of the great toe, and into the two sesamoid bones of the corresponding metatarso-phalanganian articulation. It bends the first phalanx of the great toe on the first metacarpal bone.

FLEXOR CARPI RADIALIS, Palmaris magnus—f. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital (muscles)—f. Hallucis, F. brevis pollicis pedis—f. Hallucis longus, F. longus pollicis pedis.

FLEXOR LONGUS DIGITO'RUM PEDIS PROFUN'DUS PERFORANS; Perforans seu Flexor profundus, Perodactyl'eus, Peronodactyl'ius, Peronodactyl'eus, Peronodactyl'ius, Flexor digito'rum longus seu Perforans pedis, Perforans seu Flexor tertii interno'dii digito'rum pedis; (F.) Tibio-phalangien—(Ch.), Grand ou long fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, situate at the posterior and deep-seated part of the leg. It is broader at its middle than at its extremities, the inferior of which is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior surface of the tibia, and its tendons are attached to the posterior part of the lower surface of the three phalanges of the last four toes. It bends the three phalanges on each other, and the toes on the metatarsus, and extends the foot on the leg.

The Accessorius Flexo'ris Longi Digito'rum Pedis, Caro quadra'ta Syl'vii, C. accessor'ia, Massa car'nea Jacob'i Syl'vii, Planta'ris verus, (F.) Accessoire du long fléchisseur commun des orteils, Carrée (Chair), is a small muscle of the sole of the foot, which passes obliquely from the os calcis to the outer edge of the flexor longus, whose force it augments, and corrects its obliquity.

FLEXOR LONGUS POL' LICIS MANUS, F. longus pollicis, F. tertii interno'dii seu longis'simus pollicis; (F.) Radio-phalangien du ponce, —(Ch.) Situate at the anterior and profound part of the forearm. It arises from the upper three quarters of the anterior surface of the radius and interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the anterior surface of the last phalanx of the thumb. It bends the second phalanx of the thumb on the first; the first on the corresponding metacarpal bone, and this upon the radius. It can, also, bend the hand on the forearm.

FLEXOR LONGUS POLICIS PEDIS, F. Hallucis seu Pollicis longus, (F.) Péronéo-phalangien du gros orteil, Long fléchisseur du gros orteil, Péronéo-phalangien du pouce, (Ch.) It is situated at the posterior and profound part of the leg. It arises from the posterior surface of the fibula and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by means of a long tendon, into the inferior part of the first phalanx of the great toe. It bends the third phalanx on the first, and this upon the corresponding metatarsal bone. It augments the concavity of the sole of the foot, and extends the foot on the leg.

FLEXOR PARVUS MINIMI DIGITI, F. brevis minimi digiti manus, Abductor minimi digiti, Hypothenear Riola'ni seu minimi digiti, (F.) Carpo-phalangien du petit doigt—(Ch.), Court fléchisseur du petit doigt. It arises from the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the process of the os unciniforme, and is inserted at the inner side of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the little finger. It bends the first phalanx of the little finger.

FLEXOR PERFORANS, F. profundus perforans—f. Perforatus, F. sublimis perforatus—f. Primi internodii, Opponens pollicis—f. Primi internodii digitorum manus, Lumbricalis manus—f. Primi et secundi ossis pollicis, F. brevis pollicis manus.

FLEXOR PROFUNDUS PERFORANS, F. Profundus seu Perforans seu tertii internodii digitorum manus, Perforans manus; (F.) Cubito-phalangien commun—(Ch.), Fléchisseur profond des doigts. A thick, flat, long muscle, seated beneath the Flexor sublimis perforatus. Its upper extremity is simple, and arises from the anterior surface of the ulna and from the interosseous ligament. Its inferior extremity terminates by four tendons, which, after having passed through slits in the sublimis, are inserted into the anterior surface of the last phalanges of the four fingers. It bends the third phalanges on the second, and, in other respects has the same use as the flexor sublimis perforatus.

FLEXOR SECUNDI INTERNODII DIGITORUM PEDIS, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Tertii internodii, F. longus pollicis manus—f. Tertii internodii digitorum manus, F. profundus perforans—f. Tertii internodii digitorum pedis, F. longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—f. Ossis metacarpi pollicis, Opponens pollicis—f. Perforatus pedis, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Sublimis, F. brevis digitorum pedis.

FLEXOR SUBLIMIS PERFORATUS, F. Perforatus, (F.) Fléchisseur sublime ou superficiel des doigts, Épitrôclo-phalangien commun, (Ch.) It is a thick, flat, muscle, seated at the anterior part of the forearm. Its upper extremity, which is simple, arises from the internal condyle of the os humeri;—from the coronoid process of the ulna, and from the anterior edge of the radius. Its lower extremity divides into four tendons, which slide under the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and are inserted into the second phalanges of the last four fingers, after having been slit to allow the tendons of the flexor profundus to pass through them. This muscle bends the second phalanges on the first; these on the carpal bones, and the hand on the forearm.

FLEXURA, Curvature—f. Iliaca, Sigmoid flexure—f. Sigmoidea, Sigmoid flexure.

FLICK, Epiploon.

FLIXWEED, Symbrium sophia.

FLOATING, Hæmorrhagia.

FLOCCI, see Villous membranes—f. Volitantes, see Metamorphosis.

FLOCCILATION, Carphologia.

FLOCCILEGIUM, Carphologia.

FLOCCITATION, Carphologia.

FLOCCORUM VENATIO, Carphologia.

FLOCCULI, see Villous membranes.

FLOCCULUS; diminutive of floccus, 'a lock of wool'—Pneumogastric lob'ule, Lob'ulus pneumogastricus. A long and slender prominence, extending from the side of the vallicula around the corpus testiforme to the crus cerebelli, lying behind the filaments of the pneumogastric nerves.

FLOR DE MISTELA, see Mistura.

FLORENCE, CLIMATE OF. This agreeable Italian city is by no means a favourable residence for the phthical invalid. Sir James Clark affirms, indeed, that he does not know any class of invalids for whom Florence offers a favourable residence. It is subject to sudden vicissitudes of temperature, and to cold, piercing winds during the winter and spring.

FLORIDA, WATERS OF. Near Long Lake, in Florida, United States, which communicates with St. John's River by a small creek, there is a vast fountain of hot mineral water, issuing from a bank of the river. From its odour it would seem to be sulphureous.

FLORION, Influenza.

FLOS, Anthos. A flower. Also, the finest and noblest part of the body, and virginity.

FLOS, JOVIS, Crocus—f. Lactis, Cremor lactis—f. Salis, Soda, subcarbonate of—f. Sanguineus monardi, Tropæolum majus—f. Trinitatis, Viola tricolor—f. Virginitatis, Hymen.

FLOR, COLD, Pinoli.

FLOUR, PATENT, JONES'S. A farinaceous preparation, which is said to consist of wheat-flour, with tartaric acid and carbonate of soda.

FLOUR, POTATO, see Solanum tuberosum.

FLOWER DE LUCE, Iris Germanica.

FLOWERS, Flores, (F.) Fleurs. The ancient egyptians gave this name to different solid and volatile substances obtained by sublimation. The term is not yet entirely banished from chymical and medical language, as Flowers of Benjamin, Flowers of Sulphur, &c.

FLOWERS, Menses.

FLOWERS, FOUR CARMINATIVE, Quat'vor flores carminati'vi, were chamomile, dill, fever-few, and melilot.

FLOWERS, FOUR COR'DIAL, Quat'vor flores cordia'les, were formerly, borage, bugloss, roses, and violets.

FLUCTUATIO, Fluctuation—f. Anrium, Tinnitus aurium.

FLUCTUATION, Fluctuatio, from fluctuare, fluctuatus, (fluctus, 'a wave,') 'to undulate.' Undulatio, (F.) Ondulation. The undulation of a fluid collected in any natural or artificial cavity, which is felt by pressure or by percussion, properly practised—periph'eric fluctuation. In ascites, the fluctuation is felt by one of the hands being applied to one side of the abdomen whilst the other side is struck with the other hand. In abscesses, fluctuation is perceived by pressing on opposite points.

FLUCTUATION, PERIPHERIC, see Fluctuation—f. Rhonchal, see Rhonchal—f. by Succession, see Succession.

FLUELLEN, Antirhinum elatine.

FLUELLIN, Veronica.

FLUEURS, Menses—f. Blanchés, Leucorrhœa.

FLUID, Flu'idus, from fluere, 'to flow.' The human body is chiefly composed of fluids. If one, weighing 120 pounds, be thoroughly dried in an oven, the remains will be found not to weigh more than 12 or 13 pounds; so that the proportion of fluids to liquids in the body is about 9 or 10 to 1.

TABLE OF FLUIDS OF THE HUMAN BODY.

- 1. Blood.
- 2. Lymph.
- 3. Exhaled or Perspiratory.
 - Transpiration of the mucous, serous, and synovial membranes; of the areolar membrane; of the adipous cells; of the medullary membrane; of the interior of the thyroid gland; of the thymus; suprarenal capsules; eye; ear; vertebral canal, &c.
 - Sebaceous humour of the skin; cerumen; gum of the eye; mucus of the mucous glands and follicles; that of the tonsils, of the glands of the cardia, the environs of the anus, the prostate, &c.
- 4. Follicular.
 - Tears; saliva; pancreatic fluid; bile; cutaneous transpiration; urine; fluid of the glands of Cowper; sperm; milk; of the testes and mammæ of the new-born child.
- 5. Glandular.

FLUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid—f. Cerebro-spinale, Cephalo-spinal fluid.

FLUKE, Distoma hepaticum—f. Liver, Distoma hepaticum.

FLUMEN DYSENTERICUM, Dysentery.

FLUMMERY, (Scotch) Sowens. A preparation of oatmeal, which forms a light article of food during convalescence. It may be made as follows:—Take of oatmeal or groats, a quart. Rub with two quarts of hot water, and let the mixture stand until it becomes sour; then add another quart of hot water, and strain through a hair sieve. Let it stand till a white sediment is deposited; decant, and wash the sediment with cold water. Boil this with fresh water till it forms a mucilage, stirring the whole time.

FLUOR, Flux—f. Albus Intestinorum, Cœliac flux—f. Albus malignus, Gonorrhœa impura—f. Muliebris, Leucorrhœa—f. Muliebris non Gallicus, Leucorrhœa—f. Sanguinis pulmonum, Hæmoptysis—f. Sanguinis vesicæ, Cystorrhœgia.

FLUSH, Flushing, (F.) Rougeurs, Bouffé de Chaleur; from (G.) Fliessen, 'to flow.' The temporary redness and heat produced by accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the face; as the sudden 'flush' or 'blush of emotion'; the 'flush of hectic.'

FLUX, Fluxus, Proflu'vium, Fluor, from fluere, 'to flow.' A discharge. Rhysis. In nosology, it comprises a series of affections, the principal symptom of which is the discharge of a fluid. Generally it is employed for dysentery.

FLUX, BILIOUS, Fluxus bilio'sus. A discharge of bile, either by vomiting or by stool, or by both, as in cholera.

FLUX, BLOODY, Dysentery—f. de Bouche, Salivation—f. Brouchique, Bronchorrhœa—f. Dysentérique, Dysentery—f. Hemorrhoidal, see Hæmorrhôis—f. Hépatique, Hepatirrhœa—f. Menstrual, Menses—*f. FŒCUNDUS, Fecond.

FŒDI COLORES, Chlorosis.

FŒMEN, Perineum.

FŒMINA, Female.

FŒMINESCENTIA, Feminescence.

FŒNICULUM, Anethum—f. Aquaticum, Phelandrium aquaticum—f. Erraticum, Peucedanum silaus—f. Marinum, Crithmum maritimum—f. Officinale, Anethum—f. Porcinum, Peucedanum—f. Vulgare, Anethum.

FŒNUGREEK, Trigonella fœnum.

FŒNUM CAMELORUM, Juncus odoratus—f. Græcum, Trigonella fœnum.

FŒTAB'ULUM. An encysted abscess.—Marcus Aurelius Severinus.

FŒTAL, Fœtal'is. Relating to the fœtus. A name given to the parts connected with the fœtus. Thus we say—the fœtal surface of the placenta, in contradistinction to the uterine or maternal surface.

FŒTAL CIRCULATION differs from that of the adult in several respects. Commencing with the placenta, where it probably undergoes some change analogous to what occurs in the lungs in extra-nterine existence, the blood proceeds by the umbilical vein as far as the liver, where a part of it is poured into the vena porta; the other proceeds into the vena cava inferior; the latter, having received the suprahepatic veins, pours its blood into the right auricle. From the right auricle, a part of the blood is sent into the right ventricle; the rest passes directly through into the left auricle, by the foramen ovale. When the right ventricle contracts, the blood is sent into the pulmonary artery; but as the function of respiration is not going on, no more blood passes to the lungs than is necessary for their nutrition; the remainder goes directly through the ductus arteriosus into the aorta. The blood, received by the left auricle from the lungs, as well as that which passed through the foramen ovale, is transmitted into the left ventricle; by the contraction of which it is sent into the aorta, and by means of the umbilical arteries, which arise from the hypogastric, it is returned to the placenta.

FŒTAL HEAD. The diameters of this at the full period are as follows:—1. The Biparietal or transverse, extending from one parietal protuberance to the other, and measuring 3½ inches. 2. The Temporal, from one temple to another, 3 inches. 3. The Occipito-mental, from the occiput to the chin; the greatest of all, 5 inches. 4. The Occipito-frontal or antero-posterior, 4¼ or 4½ inches. 5. The Cervico-bregmatic, from the nape of the neck to the centre of the anterior fontanelle. 6. The Fronto-mental, from the forehead to the chin, about 3½ inches. 7. The Trachelobregmatic, from the front of the neck to the anterior fontanelle, 3½ inches. 8. The Vertical diameter, from the vertex to the base of the cranium.

FŒTAL NUTRITION, Cytotrophy.

FŒTATION, Pregnancy.

FŒTICIDE, Fœticid'ium, from fœtus, and cœdere, 'to kill'; Aborticid'ium. Criminal abortion.

FŒTIDUS, Fetid.

FŒTOR, Dysodia.

FŒTOR ALARUM. The disagreeable rank odour exhaled from the arillæ.

FŒTOR ORIS, Breath, offensive.

FŒTUS, Fœtus, Cye'na, Ova' ventris, Sar'cina. 'The young of any creature.' The unborn child. (F.) Fœtus, Foix. By κυμα, Cye'na, Hippocrates meant the fecundated, but still imperfect, germ. It corresponded with the term embryo, as now used; whilst εμβρυον, 'embryo,' signified the fœtus at a more advanced stage of the utero-gestation. The majority of anatomists apply to the germ the name embryo, which it retains until the third month of gestation, and with some until the period of quickening; whilst fœtus is applied to it in its latter stages. The terms are, however, often used indiscriminately. When the ovule has been fecundated in the ovarium, it proceeds slowly towards, and enters the uterus, with which it becomes ultimately connected by means of the placenta. When first seen, the fœtus has the form of a gelatinous flake, which some have compared to an ant, a grain of barley, a worm curled upon itself, &c. The fœtal increment is very rapid in the first, third, fourth, and sixth months of its formation, and at the end of nine months it has attained its full dimensions—Enfant à terme. Generally, there is but one fœtus in utero; sometimes, there are two; rarely three. The fœtus presents considerable difference in its shape, weight, length, situation in the womb, proportion of its various parts to each other, arrangement and texture of its organs, state of its functions at different periods of gestation, &c. All these differences are important in an obstetrical and medico-legal point of view. The following table exhibits the length and weight of the fœtus at different periods of gestation, on the authority of different observers. Their discordance is striking. It is proper to remark, that the Paris pound—Poid de Marc—of 16 ounces, contains 9216 Paris grains, whilst the avoirdupois contains, only 8532.5 Paris grains, and that the Paris inch is 1.065977 English inch.

FOLLICULES DE GRAAF, Follieuli Graafiani.

FOLLICULI GRAAFIANI, F. Ora'rii, Ora sen Ovu'la Graafiana, Follieles or Vesicles of De Graaf, Graafium or Ovarian vesicles, (F.) Fol- licules ou Vésicules de Graaf. Small spherical vesicles in the stroma of the ovary, which have at least two coats; the outer termed ovicapsule and tunic of the ovisac, tunica fibrosa and theca folliculi; the latter, ovisac and membrana propria; vésicule onduifère of M. Pouchet. See Membrana granulosa. They exist in the fœtus. The ovum—ovule of some—is contained in, and formed by, them.

Kölliker terms the follicles themselves, O'visacs, Ovisac'ci. The interior of the follicles contains a clear, light yellowish fluid—liquor folliculi—of the density of the serum of the blood, in which are, almost always, isolated granules, nuclei and cells, which appear to be detached portions of the membrana granulosa.

FOMENT, Fove're, (F.) Étuver, Bassiner. To apply a fomentation to a part.

FOMENTATION, Fomentatio, Fotus, Py'ria, Thermas'na, Chlias'ma, Æone'sis, Perfu'sio, Asper'sio, Fomentum, (quasi fomentum.) from fovere, 'to bathe.' (F.) Hydrolé, Hydrolotif. A sort of partial bathing, by the application of cloths which have been previously dipped in hot water, or in some medicated decoction. They act, chiefly, by virtue of their warmth and moisture, except in the case of narcotic fomentations, where some additional effect is obtained.

A dry fomentation, Fomentum siccum, Lectulus medicatus, is a warm, dry application to a part;—as a hot brick, wrapped in flannel;—a bag, half filled with chamomile flowers made hot, &c.

FOMENTATION HERBS, Herbæ pro fotu. The herbs, ordinarily sold under this title by the English apothecary, are—southernwood, tops of sea wormwood, chamomile flowers, each two parts; bay leaves, one part. ʒiijss of these to Ovj of water.

FOMENTUM, Fomentation—f. Siccum, see Fomentation.

FOMES MORBI, F. mali. The focus or seat of any disease. (F.) Foyer.

FOMES VENTRICULI, Hypochondriasis, Spleen.

FOMITES, plural of fomes, fomitis, 'fuel, any thing which retains heat.' Evans's'ma, Zop'yrion. A term applied to substances which are supposed to retain contagious effluvia; as woollen goods, feathers, cotton, &c.

FONSANGE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Fonsange is situated near Nismes in France. The water is sulphuretted.

FONTAINE DE LA TÊTE, see Fontanella.

FONTANA, CANAL OF. A canal of a triangular shape, at the inner side of the ciliary circle; partly formed by the groove at the inner edges of the cornea and scleroticæ.

FONTANEL'LA. A fontanel:—diminutive of fons, fontis, 'a fountain.' (F.) Fontanelle. Fons, F. pulsatilis seu pulsans, Vertex palpitans, Bregma, Fonticulus, Lacuna, Mould. The opening of the head. A name, given to a space occupied by a cartilaginous membrane, in the fœtus and new-born child, and situate at the union of the angles of the bones of the cranium. There are six fontanels. 1. The great or sincipital or anterior, fonticulus quadrangularis, Fontaine de la Tête, situate at the junction of the sagittal and coronal sutures. 2. The small or bregmatic or posterior, situate at the part where the posterior and superior angles of the parietal bones unite with the upper part of the os occipitis. 3. The two sphenoidal, in the temporal fossæ; and 4. The two mastoid, or of Casserius, Fonticuli mastoïdes seu Casserii, at the union of the parietal, occipital, and temporal bones.

FONTICULUS, Fontanel'la, Exutorium, Exutorium, Issue, (F.) Fonticule, Cautére, Écutoire. Diminutive of fons, fontis, 'a fountain.' A small ulcer produced by art, either by the aid of caustics or of cutting instruments; the discharge from which is kept up with a view to fulfil certain therapeutic indications. The Pea issue, (F.) Fonticule à pois, is kept up by means of a pea placed in it. This pea, (F.) Pois à cautère, is sometimes formed of wax; at others, the young, blasted fruit of the orange is employed. The common dried garden pea answers the purpose. The seton is also an issue.

FORAMINA CRIBROSA, see Cribratus.

FORAMINA THEBÆ'SII. Openings resembling vascular orifices, found below the orifice of the vena cava superior in the right auricle, which are supposed to be the openings of veins.

FORATIO, Trepanning.

FORCE, from fortis, 'strong.' Vis, Potentia, Energi'a, Dy'namis, Cratos. Any power which produces an action. Those powers which are inherent in organization are called vital forces. We say, also, organic force, and muscular force, to designate that of the organs in general, or of the muscles in particular. To the latter the word Dynamis, δύναμις, corresponds; and the absence of this force is termed adynamia. The vital forces have to be carefully studied by the pathologist. The doctrine of diseases is greatly dependent on their augmentation or diminution; freedom or oppression, &c.

FORCE OF ASSIMILATION, Plastic force—f. Catalytic, see Catalysis—f. Cell, see Cell force—f. of Formation, Plastic force—f. Germ, Plastic force—f. Médicatrice, Vis medicatrix—f. Metabolic, see Metabolic force—f. of Nutrition, Plastic force—f. Osmotic, see Osmotic force—f. of Vegetation, Plastic force—f. Vital, Vis vitalis—f. Vitale, Vis vitalis.

FORCE-REAL, MINERAL WATERS OF.

The name of a mountain, situate four leagues from Perpignan in France. The water is chalybeate.

FORCEPS, quasi, ferriceps, from ferrum, 'iron,' and capio, 'I take.' Pincers, Lobis, Volsell'æ. An instrument, for removing bodies which it would be inconvenient or impracticable to seize with the fingers. (F.) Pince, Pincette. There are various kinds of forceps. 1. The ordinary kind, contained in every dressing-case, for removing lint, &c. from wounds or ulcers. (F.) Pince à pansement ou à amczanz. 2. Dissecting or Lig'ature or Arterial Forceps, (F.) Pince à dissection, P. à ligature, to lay hold of delicate parts. 3. Polypus Forceps, Tooth Forceps, Forceps of Museux for laying hold of the tonsils or other parts to be removed. 4. The Bullet Forceps, Strombul'ens, (F.) Tireballe. 5. The Lithotomy Forceps, Lithot'abon, Lithog'ogum, Tenac'ula, Volsell'a, which resembles the Craniotomy Forceps, (F.) Tenettes. 6. The Cataract Forceps, (F.) Pince à Cataracte, resembling the dissecting forceps, but much finer. 7. The Pince à goïne, the branches of which can be brought together, and retained by a movable sheath.

Forceps is also an instrument used by obstetrical practitioners to embrace the head, and bring it through the pelvis. It consists of two branches, blades or levers; one of which, in the case of the short forceps, is passed over the ear of the child, and the other opposite the former, so that the blades may lock. When the head is securely included between the blades, the operation of extraction can be commenced. See Parturition.

FORCEPS, see Corpus callosum—f. Anterior, see Corpus callosum—f. Arterial, see Forceps—f. Bullet, see Forceps—f. Craniotomy, see Forceps—f. Deceptoris, see Forceps—f. Lithotomy, see Forceps—f. of Museux, see Forceps—f. Polypus, see Forceps—f. Tooth, see Forceps.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, see Balsam of horehound.

FOREARM, Antibra'chium, Pygmæ, Pars inf'erior bra'chii, Cu'bitus, (F.) Avant-bras. The part of the upper extremity, comprised between the arm and the hand. It is composed of two bones—radius and ulna—and 20 muscles.

FOREFRONT, Front.

FOREHEAD, Front.

FORE-MILK, Colostrum.

FOREIGN BODY, Extraneous body.

FORENSIC ANATOMY, see Anatomy—f. Medicine, Medicine, legal.

FORES, Genital organs.

FORESKIN, Prepuce.

FORETOP, Front.

FORFEX, Ciscau, Scissors—f. Dentaria, Dentagra.

FORFIC'ULA AURICULARIA, Earwig. An insect of the Order Orthoptera, which occasionally enters the meatus auditorius externus, and excites intense pain. It may be destroyed by tobacco-smoke, or by oil poured into the meatus.

FORGES, MINERAL WATERS OF. Forges is situate four leagues from Gournay, in the department of Seine Inférieure, France. There are three springs, which are acidulous chalybeates. These are called Royal, Reimette, and Cardinal, in honor of Louis XIII., Queen Anne of Austria, and Cardinal Richelieu, who used them.

FORMATIVE, Plastic.

FORMICA, Myrmex. The ant or pismire. (F.) Fourmi. It contains an acid juice and gross oil, which were formerly extolled as aphrodisiacs. The chrysalides of the animal are said to be diuretic and carminative; and have been used in dropsy. 2. Also the name of a black wart, verru'ca formica'ria, with a broad base and cleft surface; so called because the pain attending it resembles the biting of an ant, μυρμηκία, myrmecia.—Forestus. 3. A varicose tumour on the anus and glans penis. 4. Miliary herpes.

FORMICA AMBULATORIA, Herpes circinatus—f. Corrosiva, Herpes exedens.

FORMICANT, Formicans, Myrmecizon, from formica, 'an ant.' (F.) Fourmillant. An epithet given to the pulse, Pulsus formicans, when extremely small, scarcely perceptible, unequal, and communicating a sensation like that of the motion of an ant through a thin texture.

FORMICATION, Formicatio, Myrmeciasimus, Myrmeciasis, Myrmecismus, Myrmecosis, Stupor formicans. Same etymon. (F.) Fourmillement. A pain, compared with that which would be caused by a number of ants creeping on a part.

FORMIX, Herpes esthiomenus.

FORMULA, Prescription—f. Extemporanea, see Magistral—f. Magistralis, see Magistral—f. Medica, Prescription—f. Officinalis, see Magistral.

FORMULARY, Formulaarium, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narhex. From formularius, (diminutive of forma, 'form'). One skilled in preparing writs or forms of process.—Quintilian. A collection of medical formulæ or receipts.

FORMULE, Prescription.

FORMYL, PERCHLORIDE OF. Chloroform.

FORMYLE, IODURE DE, Iodoform.

FORNIX, 'an arch or vault.' F. cer'eбри seu trilat'erns seu tricuspida'lis, Psalis, Psalid'imm, Cam'era, Testu'do cer'eбри, Arcus medulla'ris, (F.) Trigone cérébral—(Ch.) Voûte à trois piliers, Triangle Médullaire. A medullary body in the brain, below the corpus callosum and above the middle ventricle, on the median line. This body, which is curved upon itself, terminates anteriorly by a prolongation, which constitutes its anterior pillar, Crus seu Colum'na forni'cis, (F.) Pilier antérieur, and posteriorly by two similar prolongations, called posterior pillars or crura. See Achieolum, and Vault.

FORNIX CEREBRI, Fornix.

FORNPECKLES, Ephelides.

FORPEX, Scissors.

FORRET, Front.

FORSTERA'NIA DIFFORM'IS, Echi'tes difform'is seu puber'ula; indigenous: Ord. Apocynaceæ; is said to be used as a wash with milk to remove freckles. The juice destroys warts.

FORTIFIANT, Corroborant, Tonic.

FORTRAITURE, Hysteralgia.

FORTYKNOT, Achyranthus repens.

FOSSA, Fo'vea, from fodio, fossam, 'I dig.' Scamma. A cavity of greater or less depth, the entrance to which is always larger than the base. The fossæ of bones have been called simple, when they belong to one bone only, as the parietal fossæ; and compound, (F.) Fosses composées, when several concur in their formation, as the orbital fossæ, temporal fossæ, &c.

FOSSA, AMYG'DALOID, Amyg'daloid excav'ation. The space between the anterior and posterior pillars of the fauces, which is occupied by the tonsils.

FOSSA AMYN'TÆ. A kind of bandage, used in fractures of the nose; so called, by Galen, from Amyntas of Rhodes, its inventor. It consisted of a long band, applied round the head, the turns of which crossed at the root of the nose.

FOSSA CANINA, Canine fossa.

FOSSA CEREBEL'LI, (F.) Fosse cérébellense. The inferior occipital fossa, which lodges the corresponding portion of the cerebellum.

FOSSA CORONA' LIS, Coro'nal or frontal fossa. A depression on the orbital plate of the frontal or coronal bone, which supports the anterior lobe of the brain.

FOSSA CORONOÏ'DEA, Cor'onoid fossa. A cavity before the inferior extremity of the humerus, in which the coronoid process of the ulna is engaged during the flexion of the forearm.

FOSSA COTYLOIDEA, see Cotyloid.

FOSSA, DIGAS'TRIC, Fossa digas'trica. A deep groove on the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which gives origin to the digastric muscle.

FOSSA ETHMOIDA' LIS, Ethmoid fossa. A shallow gutter on the upper surface of the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, in which is lodged the expanded portion of the olfactory nerves.

FOSSA GENU, Popies.

FOSSA GUTTURA' LIS, Gut'tural fossa. The depression which forms the guttural region of the base of the cranium, between the foramen magnum and posterior nares.

FOSSA HYALOIDEA, see Hyaloid (Fossa)—f. Iliac, see Iliac fossæ—f. Infra-orbital, Canine fossa—f. Infra-spinosæ, see Infra-spinata fossa.

FOSSA INNOMINA'TA. The space between the helix and antihelix of the ear.

FOSSA, ISCHIO-RECTAL, Perineal fossa—f. Jugularis, Jugular fossa—f. Lacrymalis, Lachrymal fossa—f. Lenticularis, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Magna Muliebris, Vulva—f. Magna Sylvii, Fissura Sylvii.

FOSSA, MENTAL, Fossa menta'lis. A small depression on each side of the symphysis on the anterior surface of the body of the maxilla inferior, for the attachment of muscles.

FOSSA NAVICULARIS, Navicular fossa.

FOSSA OCCIPITA' LIS, Occipital fossa. The occipital fossæ are four in number: the superior or cerebral, and the inferior or cerebellous. They are separated by a groove, which lodges the lateral sinus.

FOSSA OVALIS, see Ovalis fossa—f. Palatina, Palate—f. Patellaris, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Perinæi, Perineal fossa—f. Pituitaria, Sella Turcica.

FOSSA POPLITE'A, Poplite'al fossa. The hollow of the ham;—the popliteal region.

FOSSA, PORTAL, see Liver—f. Scaphoides, Navicularis fossa.

FOSSA SIGMOÏDEA, Sulcus sinûs latera'lis. A broad deep groove on the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which supports part of the lateral sinus.

FOSSA, SUBORBITAR, Canine fossa.

FOSSA, SUBPYRAM'IDAL, F. subpyramida'lis. A deep fossa under the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda in the middle ear, remarkable for its constancy, and pierced by several foramina at the bottom.

FOSSA SUPRA-SPHENOIDALIS, Pituitaria fossa—f. of Sylvius, Fissure of S.—f. Temporalis, Temporal fossa—f. Transversa, see Liver—f. Umbilicalis, see Liver.

FOSSÆ CEREBRA'LES, Cerebral fossæ. Fossæ or excavations at the base of the cranium. They are nine in number: three occupy the median line, and three are placed at each side. They are distinguished into anterior, middle, and posterior.

FOSSÆ DIGITALES, see Impression.

FOSSA BASILAIRE, Basillary fossa—f. Sous-épineuse, Infra-spinata fossa—f. Sus-épineuse, Fossa supra-spinata.

FOSSÆ CONDYLŒIDIENNES, Condylœidea foramina—f. Nasales, Ouvertures postérieures des Nares, posterior.

FOSSETTE (F). Diminutive of fossa. Scribiculus, Both'rium. Several depressions are so called. A dimpled chin. Fossette du menton, consists in a slight depression, which certain persons have on the chin. 2. A dimple of the cheek, (F.)

Fossette des joues, a depression which occurs on the cheeks of certain persons when they laugh. Scrobiculus cordis, Anticardion, Præcordium, (F.) Fossette du cœur. The depression observed on a level with the xiphoid cartilage at the anterior and inferior part of the chest. It is, also, called pit of the stomach, (F.) Creux de l'estomac.

FOSSETTE, Fos'sula, A'nulus, Bothrium, is also a small ulcer of the transparent cornea, the centre of which is deep.

FOSSETTE ANGULAIRE DU QUATRIÈME VENTRICULE, Calamus scriptorius—f. du Cœur, Serobiculus cordis.

FOSSORIUM, Fleam.

FOSSULA, Argema, Fossa, Fossette, Fovea.

FOUL DISEASE, Syphilis.

FOULURE, Sprain.

FOUNDLING HOSPITAL, Brephotropeum.

FOURCHE, (F.), fouché, 'cleft;' from furca, 'a fork.' Apostema Phalan'gum. A French provincial term for small abscesses which form on the fingers and hands of working people. Also, an instrument, invented by M. J. L. Petit, for compressing the ranine artery in cases of hemorrhage from that vessel.

FOURCHETTE', diminutive of fourche, Furcilla, a little fork, Fur'cula. A surgical instrument used for raising and supporting the tongue, during the operation of dividing the frænum.

Fourchette, in anatomy, is, 1. The posterior commissure of the labia majora, called also, Frænum, Fræ'nulum pudendi, Fur'cula Labi'rum; 2. The cartilago ensiformis: so called from its being sometimes cleft like a fork. Also, the semilunar notch at the superior or clavicular extremity of the sternum.

FOURMI, Formica.

FOURMILLANT, Formicant

FOURMILLEMENT, Formication.

FOUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FOVEA,—diminutive, Fove'ola,—from fodio, 'I dig.' (?) Bothros. A slight depression. Fos'sula. The pudendum muliebre; see Vulva. The fossa navicularis. A vapour-bath for the lower extremities.

FOVEA AXILLARIS, Axilla—f. Elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Hemisphærica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Lacrymalis, Lachrymal fossa—f. Oculi, Orbit—f. Ovalis, Ovalis fossa—f. Semielliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Sulciformis, see Crista Vestibuli.

FOVEOLA, Fovea.

POWER, Syneope.

FOX BERRY, Arbutus uva ursi.

FOXGLOVE, Digitalis.

FOYER, Fomes morbi.

FRACTIONNEMENT, Segmentation.

FRACTURA, Fracture—f. Dentis, Odontodelasis.

FRACTURE, Fractu'ra, from frangere, fractum, 'to break,' 'bruise.' Catag'ma, C. Fractu'ra, Cutax'is, Clasis, Clasma, Agmè, Agma, Diar'rhagè. A solution of continuity in a bone, Osteoclasia. A simple fracture is when the bone only is divided. A compound fracture is a division of the bone with a wound of the integuments communicating with the bone,—the bone, indeed, generally protruding. In a com'minuted fracture, Alphite'don, αλφιτηδον, Carye'don Catag'ma, καρυηδον καταγμα, the bone is broken into several pieces; and in a complicated fracture there is, in addition to the injury done to the bone, a lesion of some considerable vessel, nervous trunk, &c. Fractures are also termed transverse, oblique, &c., according to their direction. The treatment of fractures consists, in general, in reducing the fragments when displaced; maintaining them when reduced; preventing the symptoms which may be likely to arise; and combating them when they occur. The reduction of fractures must be effected by extension, counter-extension, and coaptation. The parts are kept in apposition by position, rest, and an appropriate apparatus. The position must vary according to the kind of fracture. Commonly, the fractured limb is placed on a horizontal or slightly inclined plane, in a state of extension; or rather in a middle state between extension and flexion, according to the case.

FRACTURE, CAMERATED, Camerosis—f. en Rave, Raphanedon.

FRACTURE OF THE RADIUS, BARTON'S, Barton's fracture. A term applied to a fracture of the lower extremity of the radius, which commences at the articular surface, and extends upwards for an inch or more, to terminate on the dorsal aspect. Owing to the extensor muscles drawing up the separated portion of the bone, and with it the carpus, a deformity results, which has been confounded with simple dislocation. In consequence of the fracture having been well described by Dr. John Rhea Barton, of Philadelphia, it is often called after him.

FRACTURES PAR RÉSONNANCE, see Contrafractura.

FRÆNA MORGAGNII, F. of the Valve of Bauhin.

FRÆNA OF THE VALVE OF BAUHIN, (F.) Freins de la valvule de Bauhin. A name given by Morgagni to the projecting lines formed by the junction of the extremities of the two lips of the ileo-cæcal valve. They are also called Fræna and Retinac'ula Morgagnii.

FRÆNULUM, see Frænum, Bride—f. Clitoridis, Frænum clitoridis—f. Epiglottidis, Glossopiglottic ligament—f. Labiorum, Fourchette—f. Novum, Tænia semicircularis—f. Pudendi, Fourchette.

FRÆNULUM VELI MEDULLÆ RIS ANTERIORIS. A narrow slip, given off by the commissure of the encephalic testes, which strengthens the junction of the testes with the valve of Vieussens.

FRÆNUM, Fre'uum, (F.) Frein, 'a bridle.' Fræ'nulum, File'llum, Filamen'tum. 'A small bridle.' A bridle. Names given to several membranous folds, which bridle and retain certain organs.

FRÆNUM CLITORIDIS, Fræ'nulum Clitor'idis, (F.) Frein du Clitoris. A slight duplicature formed by the union of the internal portions of the upper extremity of the nymphæ.

FRÆNUM EPIGLOTTIDIS, Glossopiglottic ligament—f. Glandis, F. Penis.

FRÆNUM LABIORUM, (F.) Frein des lèvres. There are two of these; one for the upper, the other for the lower lip. They unite these parts to the maxillary bone, and are formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth. Also, the Fourchette.

FRÆNUM LINGUÆ, Fræ'nulum seu Viu'culum Lingua, Glossodes'mus, File'tum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la langue, is a triangular reflection, formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth, and situate between the inferior paries of that cavity and the inferior surface of the tongue.

When the frænum extends as far as the extremity of the tongue, it cramps its movements, interferes with sucking, &c. This inconvenience is remedied by carefully snipping it with a pair of scissors. The French call this l'opération du filet.

FRÆNUM PENIS, F. seu Frænum seu Vinculum Præputii, F. Glandis, Cynodesmion, Cynodesmus, Vinculum Caninum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la verge, is a membranous reflection which fixes the prepuce to the lower part of the glans. When too short, it prevents the prepuce from sliding over the glans.

FRÆNUM PRÆPUTII, F. Penis.

FRAGARIA, from frago, 'I smell sweetly.' The Strawberry, Fragaria vesca seu vulgâris seu semperflorens, Chamæbatos, (F.) Fraisier. Ord. Rosaceæ. The fruit is agreeable and wholesome, and the roots have been used as tonic and slightly diuretic. The fruit is the Fragrum, κόρυμβος, of the ancients; (F.) Fraise.

FRAGARIA ANSERINA, Potentilla anserina—f. Pentaphyllum, Potentilla reptans—f. Tormentilla officinalis, Tormentilla.

FRAGARIA VIRGINIANA, Wild Strawberry. An indigenous plant, which has astringent leaves.

FRAGILE VITREUM, Fragilitas ossium.

FRAGILITAS, Ruptibilitas, from frango, 'I break.' Fragility, Brittleness. The state of being easily broken or torn.

FRAGILITAS OS'SIUM, Osteopsathyrosis, Parositia frag'ilis, Brittleness of the bones, Friability of the bones, Frag'ile vitreum. Pathologists have given this name to the extreme facility with which bones break in certain diseases of the osseous texture. It is owing to a deficiency of the animal matter.

FRAGMENT, Fragmen'tum, Fragmen, Ramen'tum, from frangere, fractum, 'to break.' The French use this term for the two portions of a fractured bone; thus, they speak of the superior and the inferior fragment.

FRAGMENTS, PRECIOUS. A name formerly given, in Pharmacy, to the garnet, hyacinth, emerald, sapphire and topaz. The Arabs falsely attributed to them cordial and alixiterial properties.

FRAGON, Ruscus.

FRAGUM, see Fragaria.

FRAISE, see Fragaria.

FRAISIER, Fragaria.

FRAMBŒSIA, Frambæsia, Lepra fungifera, from framboise, (F.) 'A raspberry.' Syphilitis Indica, Anthracia rubula, Thymiosis, Th. seu Lues Indica, Variola Amboinensis, Lepra fungifera, Scroph'ula Moleuca'na. The Yaws, Epian, Pian. A disease of the Antilles and of Africa, characterized by tumours, of a contagious character, which resemble strawberries, raspberries, or champignons; ulcerate, and are accompanied by emaciation. The Pian, for so the Indians call it, differs somewhat in America and Africa.

Pian of America, Frambæsia Americana, under similar circumstances with the next, and seems to be transmitted by copulation. The tumours have a similar form, and are greater in proportion to their paucity. In some cases they are mixed with ulcers.

Pian of Guin'ea, Frambæsia Guineensis, Anthracia Rubula Guineensis, is common amongst the negroes, especially in childhood and youth. It begins by small spots, which appear on different parts, and especially on the organs of generation and around the anus; these spots disappear, and are transformed into an eschar, to which an excrescence succeeds, that grows slowly, and has the shape above described.

The treatment is nearly the same in the two varieties. The tumours will yield to mercurial friction, when small. When large, they must be destroyed by caustic. In both cases, mercury must be given to prevent a recurrence.

An endemic disease resembling yaws was observed in the Feejee Islands by the medical officers of the United States' Exploring Expedition. It is called by the natives Dthoke.

FRAMBŒSIA ILLYRICA, Scherlievo—f. Scotica, Sibbens.

FRAMBOISE, Rubus idæus.

FRANCOLIN, Attagen.

FRANGES SYNOVALES, Synovial glands.

FRANGIPANE. An article of food, prepared by evaporating to dryness, in a water-bath, milk mixed with almonds and sugar.

FRANGULA ALNUS, Rhamnus frangula.

FRANKINCENSE, COMMON, see Pinus abies—f. African Daniellia thurifera—f. Tree, Daniellia thurifera—f. True, Juniperus lycia.

FRANZENSBAD, FRANZBAD, or FRANZENBRUNN, MINERAL WATERS OF. A celebrated water at Eger, in Bohemia, which contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid gas. The springs are called Franzenbrunnen.

FRAPPER, Percuss.

FRASERA, Calumba, American—f. Carolinensis, see Calumba—f. Officinalis, see Calumba—f. Verticillata, Calumba American—f. Walteri, see Calumba.

FRAXINELLA DICTAMNUS, Dictamnus albus—f. White, Dictamnus albus.

FRAXINUS AMERICANA, White Ash; and FRAXINUS QUADRANGULATA, Blue Ash, indigenous; Ord. Oleaceæ; have bitter and astringent barks, and have been used as antiperiodics.

FRAXINUS APETALA, F. excelsior—f. Aurea, F. excelsior—f. Crispa, F. excelsior—f. Excelsa, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS EXCELSIOR. The systematic name of the Ash tree, Fraxinus Ornus seu Fraxinus sylvestris, F. apetalâ seu aurea seu crispa seu excelsa seu pendula seu verrucosa, Bume'lia seu Macedonica Fraxinus, Bume'lia, (F.) Frêne. The fresh bark has a moderately strong, bitterish taste. It has been said to possess resolvent and diuretic qualities, and has been given in intermittents, and in gout and rheumatism, and as an antidote to serpent bites. The seeds, called Birds' tongue, Lingua avis, Ornithoglossa, have been exhibited as diuretics, in the dose of a drachm. Its sap has been extolled against deafness.

FRAXINUS FLORIFERA, F. ornus—f. Macedonica, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS ORNUS, F. mel'ia seu paniculata seu florifera, Ornus mannifera seu rotundifolia. The systematic name of the tree whence mannâ flows. This substance is also called Manna Calabri'na, Ros Calabri'nis, Aërom'eli, Drosom'eli, Drysom'eli, Mel æ'rimum, Succus orni concre'tus. In Sicily, not only the Fraxinus Ornus, but also the F. rotundifolia and F. excelsior are regularly cultivated for the purpose of procuring mannâ, which is their condensed juice. In the Ph. U. S. it is assigned to Ornus Europæa. Manna is inodorous, sweetish, with a very slight degree of bitterness; in friable flakes, of a whitish or pale yellow colour; opaque, and soluble in water and alcohol. It is laxative, and is used as a purgative for children, who take it readily on account of its sweetness. More generally it is employed as an adjunct to other purgatives. Dose, ʒss to ʒij. Its immediate principle is called Mannite or Mannin. This has been recommended by Magendie as a substitute for manna. Dose, ʒij. for children.

FRAXINUS PANICULATA, F. Ornus—f. Quadrangulata, see F. Americana—f. Rotundifolia, F. ornus.

FREINS DE LA VALVULE DE BAUHIN, Fræna of the valve of Bauhin.

FREINWALDE. MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are in Brandenburg, twelve leagues from Berlin. They contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of lime, carbonates of lime and magnesia, iron, &c., and are used in asthenic diseases.

FRÉMISSEMENT, Shuddering.

FRÉMISSEMENT CATAIRE (F.), 'Cat's purr.' Purring Tremor. Lænnec has given this name to the agitation which is sensible to the hand, when applied on the præcordial region, and which he considers a sign of ossification or other contraction of the auriculo-ventricular openings. The name was chosen by him from the analogy of the sound to the purring of a cat.

FREMITUS, Bruissement, Frémissement, Shuddering.

The PECTORAL or VOCAL FREMITUS, Pectoral Vibration, Tactile vibration, is an obscure diffused resonance of the voice, which is felt when the hand is applied to the chest.

A FRICTION FREMITUS is perceptible to the hands in many cases of pleurisy, when the surfaces of the pleura have become roughened from deposition; as well as in rare cases of pericarditis.

FRETTING, Tormina.

FRICTIO, Friction.

FRICTATORIUM, Liniment.

FRICĒ, Frænum, Fricōnium. A medicine which the ancients employed under the form of friction. They distinguish the Fricē sicca and F. mollē.—Gaubius.

FRICONIUM, Frice.

FRICTA, Colophonia.

FRICTIO, Friction—f. Humida, see Friction—f. Sicca, see Friction.

FRICTION, Fric'tio, Frica'tio, Anat'ribē, Anat'rip'is, Trypsia, Chirap'is, from fricare, frictum, 'to rub.' The action of rubbing a part of the surface of the body more or less forcibly, with the hands, a brush, flannel, &c., constituting Xerotrib'ia, Xerotrip'is, Fric'tio sicca or dry friction; or with ointments, liniments, tinctures, &c., constituting moist friction, Fric'tio hu'mida. It is a useful means for exciting the action of the skin.

FRICTRIX, Tribas, FRICTUM, Liniment.

FRICUM, Frice.

FRIGEFACIENTIA, Refrigerants.

FRIGID, Frig'idus, (F.) Froid; from frigeo, 'to be cold.' Cold. Not easily moved to sexual desire; Imbel'lis ad ven'erem. Impotent.

FRIGIDARIUM, Bath, cold.

FRIGIDITY, Frig'iditas. Same etymon. A sensation of cold. Also, impotence, and sterility. Frigidity of the stomach is a state of debility of that organ, imputed to excessive venery,—the Anorexia exhaustivum of Sauvages.

FRIGIDUS, Frigid.

FRIGORIFIC, from frigus, 'cold,' and ficō, 'I become.' That which has the power of producing cold. The best FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES are the following. Their effects are owing to the rapid absorption of heat when solids pass into the liquid state.

FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES WITH SNOW.

FRIGUS, Cold—f. Tenue, see Rigor.

FRINGE TREE, Chionanthus Virginica.

FRISSEMENT, Rigor.

FRISSEMENT, Horripilation.

FROGLEAF, Brasenia Hydropeltis.

FROG TONGUE, Ranula.

FROGS' SPAWN, Sperma ranarum.

FROID, Cold, Frigid—f. Glacial, Ice cold.

FROISSEMENT (F.), 'Rubbing, bruising.'

FROISSEMENT PULMONAIRE, Bruit de froissement pulmonaire, Pulmonary crumpling sound. A name given by M. Fournet to a respiratory sound, which communicates to the ear the sensation of the rubbing (froissement) of a texture compressed against a hard body. It is by no means well defined.

FRÔLEMENT, (F.) 'Grazing or touching lightly.'

FRÔLEMENT PÉRICARDIQUE, Bruit de frôlement péricardique. Rustling noise of the pericardium. A sound resembling that produced by the crumpling of a piece of parchment or of thick silken stuff, accompanying the systole and diastole of the heart. It indicates roughness of the pericardium induced by disease.

FROMAGE, Cheese.

FROMENT, Triticum.

FRONCEMENT, Corrugation.

FRONCLE, Furunculus.

FRONDE, Funda.

FRONT, Frons, Metopou, Forehead, Fore-front, Fore-top, Brow, (Sc.) Forret. That part of the visage, which extends from one temple to the other, and is comprised in a vertical direction, between the roots of the hair and the superciliary ridges.

FRONTAL, Frontalis. From frons, frontis, 'the front.' Relating or belonging to the front. This name has been given to several parts. Winslow, Sömmering, and others, call the anterior part of the occipito-frontals—the frontal muscle or frontalis, Musculo'sa Frontis Cutem movens substantia Par (Vesalius).

FRONTAL ARTERY, Arteria supra-orbitalis, is given off by the ophthalmic, which is itself a branch of the internal carotid. It makes its exit from the skull at the upper part of the base of the orbit, and ascends the forehead between the bone and the orbicularis palpebrarum; dividing into three or four branches, which are distributed to the neighbouring muscles.

FRONTAL BONE, Os frontis seu corona'le seu inverecundum seu puppis seu syncip'itis seu prora seu ratio'nis, Metopou. A double bone in the fœtus, single in the adult, situate at the base of the cranium, and at the superior part of the face. It forms the vault of the orbit; lodges the ethmoid bone in a notch at its middle part; and is articulated, besides, with the sphenoid, parietal, and nasal bones, the ossa unguis, superior maxillary, and malar bones.

FRONTAL FURROW extends upwards from the frontal spine, and becomes gradually larger in its course, to lodge the upper part of the superior longitudinal sinus, and to give attachment to the falx cerebri.

FRONTAL NERVE, Palpébro-frontal—(Ch.), is the greatest of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve,—the first division of the 5th pair.

It proceeds along the superior paries of the orbit, and divides into two branches:—the one, internal, which makes its exit from the orbitar fossa, passing beneath the pulley of the oblique muscle:—the other, external, issuing from the same cavity by the foramen orbitarium superius.

FRONTAL PROTUBERANCE, F. tuberos'ity, Taber fronta'le, Suggrun'dium supercilio'rum. The protuberance of the frontal bone above the superciliary arch.

FRONTAL SINUSES, Frontales Sinus, Metopop'etra, Prosopop'etra, Sinus Supercilia'res seu pituita'rii frontis, Caverna' frontis, are two deep cavities in the substance of the frontal bone, separated from each other by a median septum, and opening, below, into the anterior cells of the ethmoid bone.

FRONTAL SPINE, Crista inter'na, is situate in the middle of the under part of the bone, and is formed by the coalescence of the inner tables for the attachment of the falx cerebri.

Surgeons have given the name FRONTALIS to a bandage or topical application to the forehead. Such have, also, been called τρομετωπίδια and αναπολλήματα.

FRONTAL TUBEROSITY, Frontal protuberance.

FRONTA'LE, from frons, 'the forehead.' A medicine applied to the forehead.

FRONTALIS ET OCCIPITALIS, Occipito-frontalis.

FRONTALIS VERUS, Corrugator supercillii.

FRONTODYMIA, see Cephalodymia.

FRONTO-ETHMOID FORAMEN, Cœcum foramen—f. Nasal, Pyramidalis nasi—f. Sourcilier, Corrugator supercillii.

FROSTBITE, Congelation.

FROSTPLANT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWEED, Erigeron Philadelphicum, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWORT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROTH'Y, from Gr. αφρος, 'froth.' [?] Spumo'sus, (F.) Spumeux, Écuméux, Mousseux. An epithet given to the fœces or sputa, when mixed with air.

FROTTEMENT, see Bruit de frottement.

FROTTEMENT GLOBULAIRE. A name given by M. Simonnet, to the pulse in aortic regurgitation, when it is jerking; and, in well marked cases, appears as if the blood consisted of several little masses, which passed in succession under the finger applied to the artery.

FRUCTIFICATIO, Fecondation.

FRUCTUS HORÆI, Fruit, (summer)—f. Immaturus, Abortion.

FRUGIVOROUS, Frugiv'orus, from fruges, 'fruits,' and voro, 'I eat.' One that eats fruits.

FRUIT, Fructus, from fruo, fructus, 'to enjoy.' Carpos. In botany, the seed with its enclosing pericarp. In a medical sense it may be defined to be:—that part of a plant which is taken as food. The effects of fruits on the body, in a medical as well as a dietetical point of view, are various. They may be distinguished into classes: for, whilst the Cerealia, for example, afford fruits, which are highly nutritious; the Summer Fruits (Fructus Horæi), which include strawberries, cherries, currents, mulberries, raspberries, figs, grapes, &c., are refrigerant and grateful, but afford little nourishment.

FRUIT-SUGAR, Glucose.

FRUMENT, Fru'menty, Fur'menty, from frumentum, 'wheat' or 'grain,' quasi frugimentum; from fruges, 'fruit.' Pottage made of wheat. Food made of wheat boiled in milk.

FRUMENTUM. Same etymon. Sitos. Any kind of grain from which bread was made;—especially wheat.

FRUMENTUM, Triticum—f. Corniculatum, Ergot

—f. Cornutum, Ergot—f. Luxurians, Ergot—f. Temulentum, Ergot—f. Turgidum, Ergot.

FRUSTRATOIRE, (F.) Any liquor, taken a short time after eating, for the purpose of assisting digestion when difficult. Sugared water, eau sucrée, or water with the addition of a little brandy, or some aromatic substance, is commonly used for this purpose.

FRUTEX BACCIFER BRAZILIENSIS, Caa-hivuyo—f. Indicus spinosus, Cara schulli.

FUCUS, F. vesiculosus, Paint.

FUCUS AMYLA'CEUS, Jaffna, Ed'ible or Ceylon Moss, Plocaria can'dida, Gracilaria seu Sphaerococcus seu Gigartina seu Fucus lichenoides, Marine Moss. This moss belongs to the natural order Algae. It was introduced some years ago into England, from India. It is white, filiform and fibrous, and has the usual odour of sea-weeds. Its medical properties are similar to those of Irish moss.

FUCUS, BLADDER, F. vesiculosus.

FUCUS CRISPUS, F. Irlandicus, Lichen Car'rageen, Chondrus (Ph. U. S.), Ch. crispus seu polymorphus, Sphaerococcus crispus, Ulva crispa, Irish Pearl, Car'rageen or Cor'rigeen moss, (F.) Mousse d'Irlande ou perlé. This Fucus is found on the coasts of England, Ireland, Western France, Spain, and Portugal, and as far as the tropics. It is also a native of the United States. In Ireland, it is used by the poor as an article of diet. As met with in America, it is of a light yellow colour, and resembles plates of horn, crisped and translucent. An agreeable jelly is obtained from it by boiling it in water or milk, which forms a good article of diet in consumptive cases. Its properties are indeed exactly like those of the Iceland Moss.

FUCUS HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana—f. Inflatus, F. vesiculosus—f. Irlandicus, Fucus crispus—f. Lichenoides, F. amyloaceus—f. Saccharine, Rhodomela palmata.

FUCUS VESICULOSUS, Fucus, F. inflatus, Hal'idrys vesiculosa, Quercus Mari'na, Bladder Fucus, Sea Oak, Sea Wrack, Yellow Bladder Wrack, (F.) Varec vésiculeux, Chêne marin. It has been said to be a useful assistant to sea-water, in the cure of disorders of the glands. When the wrack, in fruit, is dried, cleaned, exposed to a red-heat in a crucible with a perforated lid, and is reduced to powder, it forms the -E'thiops vegetabilis—the Pulvis Quercus Mari'næ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia—which is used, like the burnt sponge, in bronchocele and other scrofulous swellings. Its efficacy depends on the iodine it contains. Dose, gr. x to ℥ij, mixed in molasses or honey. See Soda.

FUGA DEMONUM, Hypericum perforatum.

FUGACIOUS, Fugax, fugacis, (F.) Fugace, from fugere, 'to fly.' An epithet given to certain symptoms, which appear and disappear almost immediately afterwards; as a fugacious redness,—a fugacious swelling, Tumor fugax, &c.

FUGAX, Fugacious.

FUGE, from fugo, 'I expel,' 'an expeller.' A common suffix. Hence, Febrifuge, Vermifuge, &c.

FUGILÈ, Fugilla. This term has several acceptations. It means, 1. The crumen of the ear. 2. The nebulous suspension in, or deposition from, the urine. 3. An abscess near the ear.—Ruland and Johnson. 4. Abscess in general.

FUGILLA, Fugile.

FULGUR, Astrape.

FULIGINOSUS, Fuliginosus, Lignosus, (F.) Fuliginosus, from fuligo, fuliginis, 'soot.' Having the colour of soot. An epithet given to certain parts, as the lips, teeth, or tongue, when they assume a brownish colour, or rather are covered with a coat of that colour. Fuliginosity.

FULIGO, genitive fulig'inis, Lignys, Soot, (F.) Snie, &c., Woodsoot, Fuligo Ligni, consists of volatile alkaline salt, empyreumatic oil, fixed alkali, &c. A tincture, Tinctura Fulig'inis, prepared from it, has been recommended as a powerful antispasmodic in hysterical cases. (Fulig. lign. ℥ij; potass. subcarb. ℥ss; ammon. muriat. ℥j; agua fluvial. Oij. Digest for three days.) This tincture bears the name Soot drops and Fit drops. An ointment of soot has been used in various cutaneous diseases.

FULIGO ALBA PHILOSOPHORUM, Ammonia murias.

FULIGO KALI, from fuligo, 'soot,' and kali, 'potassa.' This is an analogous preparation to anthrakokali; soot being used in the place of coal. It is employed in the same diseases. What might be regarded as a weak solution of fuligo-kali has been used for many years in Philadelphia, under the names medical lye, soot tea, alkaline solution, dyspeptic lye, and Physick's lye tea. It is made by mixing a quart of hickory ashes; half a pint of soot; and a gallon of boiling water; allowing the mixture to stand for twenty-four hours, and decanting.

FULLERS' EARTH, Cimolia purpureseens.

FULMEN, Astrape.

FULMICOTON, see Collodion.

FULNESS, Repletio, Plenitudo, Plethora, Repletio. The state of being filled. Also, a feeling of weight or distension in the stomach or other part of the system.

FUMARIA, Fumaria officinalis seu me'dia, Fumus terra, Capnos, Herba melaucholif'uga, Sola'men Scabiosorum, Fumitory, Common Fumitory, Fumiter'ra, (F.) Fumeterre, Fiel de terre, Pisse-sang. Ord. Fumariaceæ. The leaves are extremely succulent, and have a bitter, somewhat saline, taste. The infusion of the dried leaves and the expressed juice of the fresh plant have been extolled for their property of clearing the skin of many disorders of the leprous kind.

FUMARIA BULBOSA, F. cava seu major, Borchhansen'ia seu Capnosides cava, Aristolochia fabacea seu cava seu vulgaris rotunda, Corydalis bulbosa seu cava seu tuberosa, Capnos'is. The root of this plant was formerly used as an emmenagogue and anthelmintic. (F.) Fumeterre bulbeuse.

FUMARIA CAVA, F. bulbosa—f. Major, F. bulbosa—f. Media, Funnaria—f. Officinalis, Fumaria.

FUMETERRE, Fumaria.

FUMIGATIO, Fumigation—f. Antiloinica Gaubii, see Disinfection—f. Guytoniensi, see Disinfection—f. Smythiana, see Disinfection.

FUMIGATIO, Fumigatio, from fumus, 'smoke.' Suffitus, Suffitio, Suffumigatio, Suffumig'ium, Suffimentum, Apocapnis'mus, Thymia'ma, Epithymia'ma, Hypothymia'ma, Hypothymia'sis, Thymia'sis, Capnis'mos, Hypocapnis'mos, Hypat'mus, Hypat'mis'mus, Anathymia'sis. An operation, the object of which is to fill a circumscribed space with gas or vapour, with the intention either of purifying the air, or of perfuming it, or of charging it with a substance proper for acting upon a part of the surface of the human body. See Sulphurous acid. Hence, fumigations have been distinguished into aqueous, aromatic, sulphureous, mercurial, disinfecting, Guytonian, &c. Benzoin generally constitutes the chief ingredient in the Fumigating Pastilles, to which any variety of odoriferous substances may be added. The following are formulae.

R. Benzoin. ℥j; cascarilla. ℥ss; myrrh. ℥j; ol. myrsint. ol. caryoph. āā gtt. x; potassæ nitrat. ℥ss; carbon. lign. ℥vj; mucil. trag. q. s.—or FUMUS ALBUS, Hydrargyrum—f. Citrinus, Sulphur—f. Terræ, Fumaria.

FUNAMBULA'TIO, from funis, 'a cord,' and ambulare, 'to walk.' An exercise with the ancients, which consisted in scaling ropes.

FUNCTION, Functio, Actio, (F.) Function; from fungor, functus, 'I act,' 'perform.' The action of an organ or system of organs. Any act, necessary for accomplishing a vital phenomenon. A function is a special office in the animal economy, which has, as its instrument, an organ or apparatus of organs. Thus respiration is a function. Its object is the conversion of venous into arterial blood, and its instrument is the lungs. The ancient physiologists divided the functions into vital, animal, and natural. They called vital functions those which are essential to life, as innervation, circulation, respiration; animal functions, those which belong to the encephalon; viz.: the functions of the intellect, the affections of the mind, and the voluntary motions; and natural functions, Facultates seu Actiones naturales, those relating to assimilation, such as the actions of the abdominal viscera, of the absorbent and exhalant vessels, &c. Bichat divided the functions into those which relate to the preservation of the individual, and those that relate to the preservation of the species. The former he subdivided into animal and organic. The animal functions or functions of relation are those of the intellect, sensation, locomotion, and voice. The organic functions include digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, secretion, nutrition, and calorification. The functions, whose object is the preservation of the species—the organic, nutritive, or vegetative functions—are all those that relate to generation;—such as conception, gestation, accouchement, &c. Each of these admits of numerous subdivisions in a complete course of Physiology;—for so the doctrine of the functions is called.

FUNCTIONAL, Functionalis, (F.) Functionnel. Relating or belonging to the function of an organ, or to the functions in general.

Functional or vital phenomena are those produced by some modification in the action of an organ or organs, in contradistinction to those of a material or physical character;—thus we distinguish the functional phenomena of phthisis from those indicated by physical diagnosis—the physical phenomena.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASES, see Organic Diseases.

FUNDA, 'a sling.' Sphenodonē, (F.) Fronde. A bandage, composed of a fillet or long compress, cleft at its extremities to within about two inches of its middle. It is used in diseases of the nose and chin, and especially in cases of fracture of the lower jaw. In such case it has, also, been called Mentonnière, because placed beneath the chin; from (F.) Menton, 'the chin.'

FUNDAMENT, Anus—f. Falling down of the, Proctocele.

FUNDAMENTAL, from fundare, 'to found; to lay the bottom of any thing.' (F.) Fundamental. Some anatomists have called the sacrum Os Fundamenta'le, because it seems to serve as a base to the vertebral column. The sphenoid bone has likewise been so denominated, from its being situate at the base of the cranium.

FUNDUS, 'the bottom.' (F.) Fond. The base of any organ which ends in a neck, or has an external aperture; as the Fundus vesicæ, F. uteri, &c. Also, the Vulva.

FUNDUS VAGINÆ, Laquear vaginæ.

FUNES CORDIS, Columnæ carnae—f. Semicirculares, Semicircular canals.

FUNGIFORM PAPILLÆ, see Papillæ of the Tongue.

FUN'GOID, Fungoides, Mycodes, Fungiformis, Fun'giform, (F.) Fonguide, Fongiforme, from fungus, 'a mushroom,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' That which has the shape of, or grows in some measure like a mushroom, as the fungoid or fungiform papillæ of the tongue.

FUNGOID DISEASE, Encephaloid.

FUNGOSITY, Fungositas, Caro luxurians seu fungosa, Escarocoma, Hyperescarocoma, Hyperescarocosis, Proud Flesh, (F.) Fongosité. The quality of that which is fungous:—fungous excrecence, Excrecentia fungosa. The fungosities which arise in wounds or ulcers are easily repressed by gentle compression, dry lint, the sulphas cupri, or other gentle caustics. At times, the more powerful are necessary, and sometimes excision is required.

FUNGOUS, Fungosus, (F.) Fongueux. Having the characters of fungosity or fungus—as a fungous wound.

FUNGUS, Mycēs, (σφογγος), (F.) Fongus, Champignon. The mushroom order of plants; class Cryptogamia, in the Linnæan system. In Pathology, the word is commonly used synonymously with fungosity, mycosis. M. Breschet has proposed to restrict the term fungosity to vegetations which arise on denuded surfaces, and to apply the term fungus to the tumours which form in the substance of the textures, without any external ulceration. Fici and warts, for example, would be fungi of the skin.

FUNGUS ALBUS SALIGNUS, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Articuli, Spina ventosa—f. Bleeding, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Cancerosus hæmatodes, Hæmatodes F.—f. Cancerosus medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebralis, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebri, Encephalocœle—f. Chirurgorum, Lycoperdon—f. Cynosbati, Bedeguar—f. Faginusus, Morchella esculenta—f. Hæmatodes, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Ignarius, Boletus ignarius—f. Laricis, Boletus laricis—f. of Malta, Cynomorium coccineum—f. Medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Melanodes, Cancer, melanotic—f. Melitensis, Cynomorium coccineum—f. Petreus marinus, Umbilicus marinus—f. Quercinus, Boletus ignarius—f. Rosarum, Bedeguar—f. Salicis, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Sambucinus, Peziza auricula.

FUNIC BELLOWS' SOUND, see Bellows' Sound, funic.

FUNIC'ULI GRAC'ILES, (diminutive of funis, 'a cord,') Posterior Med'ian Column or Fasciculi of the medulla oblongata. Along the posterior border of each corpus restiforme, and separated from it by a groove, is a narrow white cord, separated from its fellow by the fissura longitudinalis posterior. The pair of cords are the funiculi graciles. Each funiculus forms an enlargement—processus clavatus—at its upper end, and is then lost in the corpus restiforme.

FUNIC'ULI SILIQUÆ. Longitudinal fibres seen in the groove which separates the corpus olivare from the corpus pyramidale and corpus restiforme. They enclose the base of the corpus olivare,—those which lie on its inner side forming the funiculus internus; and those on its outer side the funiculus externus.

FUNICULUS, Cord—f. Externus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Internus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Spermaticus, Spermatie cord—f. Tympani, Chorda tympani.

FUNICULUS UMBILICALIS, Funis umbilicalis. Intestinulum, Vinculum umbilicale, Umbilical cord, Navel string, diminutive of Funis, 'a cord.' (F.) Cordon ombilicale. A cord-like substance, which extends from the placenta to the umbilicus of the fœtus. It is composed of the chorion, amnion, an albuminous secretion called the Jelly of the Cord, cellular substance, an umbilical vein, and two umbilical arteries. The former conveys the blood from the placenta to the fœtus—the latter return it. All these parts are surrounded by a sheath—Investitura seu Vagina funiculi umbilicalis. Its usual length is from 16 to 22 inches.

FUNICULUS VARICOSUS, Cirsoecle.

FUNIS, Cord, Laqueus—f. Argentus, Medulla spinalis—f. Hippocretis, Achillis tendo—f. Umbilicalis, Funiculus umbilicalis.

FUNK, Boletus ignarius.

FUNNEL, see Infundibulum.

FUR, Enduit.

FURCELLA, Fur'cula; diminutive of furca, 'a fork.' The upper part of the sternum, the clavicle. The Fourchette.

FURCELLA INFERIOR, Xiphoid cartilage.

FURCHMUHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These Bavarian springs contain carbonic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, carbonates of lime and soda; chlorides of lime and magnesium, oxides of iron and magnesium, &c.

FURCIFERA, Penis.

FURCILLA, Fourchette.

FURCULA, Furcella, Clavicle, Fourchette.

FURFUR UTÉRINE, Nymphomania.

FURFUR, (from fur, 'bran,') Bran, Pit'yon, Ach'yon, Apobras'ma, Lemma, Cutabru'no, (F.) Son. The decoction is sometimes employed as an emollient.

FURFURA, Scarf.

FURFURACEOUS, from furfur, 'bran.' Scurfy, Cunicaceus, Pityri'nus, Pityroïdes, Pityroïdes, (F.) Furfuracé. Resembling bran. A name given to eruptions, in which the epidermis is detached in small scales resembling bran. Also, a bran-like sediment observed at times in the urine;—Urina furfuracea, Sedimentum Urinæ pityroïdes.

FURFURAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURFURATIO, Desquamation, Porrigo, Pityriasis.

FURFURINE, Furfuri'na, from furfur, 'bran.' By the action of dilute sulphuric acid on corn meal or bran an oil is obtained—furfuröl or furfurole. By the action of ammonia on this, furfuramide or furfuroloamide results; and by the action of dilute potassa on this the alkaloid furfurine is obtained. This was found by Professor Simpson, of Edinburgh, to possess tonic, if not antiperiodic, properties.

FURFURISCA, Pityriasis.

FURFUROL, see Furfurine.

FURFUROLAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURIA INFERNALIS. A kind of vermifera insect, scarcely two lines long, common in Sweden, which flies about and stings both man and animals, exciting the most excruciating torture.

FURIBUNDUS, Maniodes.

FURIOSUS, Maniodes.

FURIOUS, Maniodes.

FURMAGE, Cheesc.

FURMENTY, Fragment.

FURNAS, MINERAL WATERS OF. A

thermal chalybeate water in St. Michael's, Azores, which contains carbonic acid, and carbonate of iron.

FURONCLE, Furunculus.

FURONCLE GUÉPIER. A malignant boil, Wasp's nest boil, which generally attacks the nape and region of the neck, and rarely others than old people. Hence it has been called Old People's boil.

FURONCULEUX, Furuncular.

FUROR, Mania—f. Brevis, Rage—f. Mania, Mania—f. Uterinus, Nymphomania.

FURRED, see Enduit.

FURROW, MENTO-LABIAL, see Mentolabial furrow.

FURUNCULAR, Furunculous, Furunculosus, (F.) Furunculeux. Relating or appertaining to furunculus,—as 'a furuncular epidemic.'

FURUNCULI ATONICI, Ecthyma—f. Ventriculus, see Furunculus.

FURUNCULOID, Furunculoïdes. A hybrid term, from furunculus, and oides, 'resemblance.' Resembling furunculus,—as 'a furunculoïd epidemic.'

FURUNCULUS, from furere, 'to be mad,' Chi'adus, Chi'oli, Duth'ien, Dothion, Furunculus suppurat'rius, F. Verus, F. benignus, Phyma furunculus, Abscessus nucleatus, a furuncle, a boil, a bile, (Sc.) Bruick, Bruk, (Prov.) Pinsweal, (F.) Furoucle, Froucle, Clou. A small phlegmon, which appears under the form of a conical, hard, circumscribed tumour, having its seat in the dermoid texture. At the end of an uncertain period, it becomes pointed, white or yellow, and gives exit to pus mixed with blood. When it breaks, a small, grayish, fibrous mass sometimes appears, which consists of dead areolar tissue. This is called the Core, Setfast, Venticulus seu Nucleus Furunculi, (F.) Bourbillon. The abscess does not heal until after its separation. The indications of treatment are,—to discuss by the application of leeches and warm fomentations;—or, if this cannot be done, to encourage suppuration by warm, emollient cataplasms. When suppuration is entirely established, the part may be opened or suffered to break, according to circumstances.

The term blind boil is given to an indolent, imperfectly suppurating, phlegmonous tumour, of the kind described above, which is often seated in a sebaceous follicle, as in Aene indurata.

FURUNCULUS GANGRÆNOSUS, Anthrax—f. Malignus, Anthrax.

FUSARIA VERMICULARIS, Ascaris vermicularis—f. Visceralis et renalis, Strongylus gigas.

FUSÉE PURULENTE (F.). The long and sinuous route which pus takes, in certain cases, in making its way to the surface. These Fusées almost always form beneath the skin between the muscles; or along aponeuroses, bones, tendons, &c.

FUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FUSIBLE, see Fusion.

FUSIBILITY, see Fusion.

FUSION, Fusio, Melting, Liquefaction; from fundere, fusum, 'to melt.' In chemistry, the transition of a solid body into a liquid by the aid of heat. Substances capable of such transition are said to be fusible; or to be possessed of fusibility.

FUSTIC TREE, Cladastris tinctoria.

FUTUTRIX, Tribas.

G.

THE Greek G, Γ, with the ancient Greek physicians, signified an ounce.—Rhod. ad Scribonium.

GAB, Mouth.

GABALLA, Cabal.

GABELLA, Mesophryon.

GABIR'EA, γαβίρα. A fatty kind of myrrh, mentioned by Dioscorides.

GADUS ÆGLIFINUS, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Callarias, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Carbonarius, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Lota, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Merluccius, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Morrhua, see Oleum jecoris aselli—g. Pollachius, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

GÆOPHAGIA, Geophagism.

GÆOPH'AGUS, from γαῖα, 'earth,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One who eats earth.

GAGEL, Myrica gale.

GAGUE SANG, Caque-sang.

GAHET, Cagot.

GAÏAC, Guaiacum.

GAILLET ACCROCHANT, Galium aparine—g. Crochant, Galium aparine—g. Jaune, Galium verum—g. Vrai, Galium verum.

GAÏNE, Vagina or sheath—g. de l'Aporhyse styloïde, Vaginal process of the temporal bone—g. de la Veine porte, Vagina or sheath of the vena porta.

GAITLING, Infans.

GALA, γαλα, genitive γαλακτος, milk; hence:

GALACTACRA'SIA, from γαλα, and ακρασια, 'imperfect mixture.' A morbid mixture or constitution of the milk.

GALACTACRATIA, Galactia.

GALACTÆ'MIA, from γαλα, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood in which it contains milk.

GALACTAGOGA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTAPOSTEMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALAC'TIA, Galactirrhœ'a, Galactorrhœ'a, from γαλα. Lactis redundant'ia, Polygalact'ia, Galactozœ'mia. A redundant flow of milk, either in a female who is suckling, or in one who is not. It may occur without being provoked by suckling. When to a great extent, it sometimes causes wasting; Tabes lac'tea, T. nutri'eum. Dr. Good uses Galact'ia, in his Nosology, for 'morbid flow or deficiency of milk,' Galactaerati'a.

GALACTICUS, Lactic.

GALACTIDRO'SIS, from γαλα, and 'ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' Sweating of milk.

GALACTIFER, Galactophorous.

GALACTINE, Casein.

GALACTINUS, Lactic.

GALACTIRRHŒA, Galactia.

GALACTIS, Galaxias.

GALACTIS'CHESIS, Galactos'chesis, Lactis reten'tio, from γαλα, and ισχειν, 'to restrain.' Retention or suppression of milk.

GALACTITES, Galaxias.

GALACTOCATARACTA, Cataract, milky.

GALACTOCE'LĒ, Galacton'cus, Lactocœ'lē, from γαλα, and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Tumor lac'teus. Distension of one or more of the galactophorous sinuses by milk. Lactiferous engorgement. The French use the term Poïl for such engorgement; a relic of an idea, as old as Aristotle, that a hair swallowed may have obstructed one of the milk tubes, which must be got rid of by sucking.

The name has, also, been given by Vidal de Cassis to a tumour produced by an effusion of a white liquid into the tunica vaginalis, which he considered to be true milk.

GALACTODEN'DRON U'TILĒ, from γαλα, and δένδρον, 'a tree.' Palo de Vacca, Arbol de Leche, Cow tree of South America. Family, Urticaceæ. When an incision is made into the trunk, a fluid similar to milk flows out, which is agreeable and nutritious.

GALACTO'DES, from γαλα, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' In Hippocrates, the term signifies milk-warm, and likewise a milky colour, as of the urine—uri'na galact'o'des.

GALACTODIĒ'TA, Diœ'ta lac'tea, from γαλα, and διαίτα, 'diet.' A milk diet.

GALACTODIARRHŒA, Cœliac Flux.

GALACTOGANGLION, Milk knot.

GALACTOHE'MIA, Galacthœ'mia, Galœ'mia, from γαλα, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Lactis sanguinolenti Excretio. The secretion of bloody or bloodlike milk.

GALACTOMASTOPARECTOMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTOM'ETER, Lactom'eter, from γαλα, and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for appreciating the quantity of cream in milk. It is a kind of graduated separatory or épreuve—the degrees on the scale indicating the thickness of the layer of cream that forms on the surface of the milk.

GALACTONCUS, Galactocœle.

GALACTOPH'AGOUS, Galactoph'agus, Lactiv'orus, sometimes used substantively; from γαλα, and φαγω, 'I eat.' That which feeds on milk. A name given to certain people, with whom milk appears to constitute the chief nourishment.

GALACTOPHORA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTOPHORITIS, Inflammation of the galactophorous ducts. It has been inaccurately used for ulceration of the top of the nipple towards their orifices.

GALACTOPHOROUS, Lactiferous—g. Ducts, Lactiferous ducts—g. Receptacle, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sac, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sinuses, see Lactiferous vessels.

GALACTOPH'ORUS. Some accoucheurs have given this name to an instrument intended to facilitate sucking, when the faulty conformation of the nipple prevents the child from laying hold of it.

GALACTOPH'YGUS, from γαλα, and φευγειν, 'to shun.' That which arrests or disperses the secretion of milk. Hence Galactoph'ygua Medicamen'ta.

GALACTOPLA'NIA, Metas'tasis seu Aber-ra'tio seu Viz extraordi'nariæ lactis, Galactorrhœ'a erro'nea, from γαλα, and πλανη, 'wandering.' Extravasation of milk into the areolar membrane. Secretion of milk elsewhere than from the breasts.

GALACTOPLERO'SIS, from γαλα, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.' Redundance of milk.

GALACTOPOEA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTOPOESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPOET'ICA, Galactoph'ora, Galactago'ga, Galactopoe'a, from γαλα, and ποιω, 'I make.' Substances to which has been attributed the property of favouring the secretion of milk and augmenting its quantity.

GALACTOPOIESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPO'SIA, from γαλα, and ποσις,

'drink.' The drinking of milk. Treatment of a disease by means of milk.

GALACTOPOTES, Galactop'otus, Lactip'otor. Same etymon. A drinker of milk. One subjected to a milk diet.

GALACTOPYRA, Fever, milk.

GALACTOPYRETUS, Fever, milk.

GALACTORRHOEA, Galactia—g. Erronea, Galactoplaia—g. Saccharata, Saccharorrhoea lactea.

GALACTOSACCHARUM, Saccharum lactis.

GALACTOSCHESIS, Galactischesis.

GALACTOSIS, Galactopoe'sis, Galactopoe'sis, Secre'tio lactis; from γαλα. The secretion or formation of milk.

GALACTOTROPIE, Galactotroph'ia, from γαλα, and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Nourishment by means of milk.

GALACTOZE'MIA, from γαλα, and ζῆμα, 'loss.' Loss of milk. Also, Galactia.

GALACTU'CHOS, from γαλα, and εχειν, 'to have.' Suckling. Giving milk.

GALACTURIA, Chyluria.

GALEMIA, Galactohaemia.

GALANGA, Maranta galanga.

GALANGAL, Maranta galanga.

GALANGALE, Cyperus longus.

GALARHOEUS LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris—g. Palustris, Euphorbia palustris.

GALARIPS, Allamanda.

GALAX APHYLLA, G. rotundifolia, Erythrorrh'za rotundifolia; Carpenter's leaf, Beetleweed; indigenous; Order Ericaceæ. The root is astringent, and the leaves, in domestic practice, are applied to cuts and wounds.

GALAXIA, Thoracic duct.

GALAX'IAS, Galacti'tes, Galac'tis; from γαλα. A milk stone. A stone supposed to be capable of promoting the secretion of milk.

GALBANUM, see Bubon galbanum—g. Long-leaved, Bubon galbanum.

GAL'BULUS, from galbus, 'yellow.' A kind of congenital jaundice, in which the yellow colour continues through life. It is rather a defect in colour than a disease.—Vogel.

GALE, Myrica gale—g. Odorant, Myrica gale—g. Scotch, Myrica gale—g. Sweet, Myrica gale.

GALE, Psora—g. Canine, Psoriasis—g. Épide'mique, Ezeina—g. Miltaire, Psoriasis—g. Sèche, Liehen, Psoriasis.

GA'LEA. A helmet, from γαλα, 'a cat;' of the skin of which it was formerly made. [?] A name given to the amios, and also to the bandage of Galen. In Pathology, it indicates a headache affecting the whole head. See, also, Caul.

GALEA APONEUROTICA CAP'ITIS, Ga'lea tendin'ea Santori'ni, Ga'lea cap'itis, Membra'na epicra'nia. The tendinous expansion which unites the frontal and occipital portions of the occipito-frontalis muscle.

GALEAMAUROSIS, Amaurotic cat's eye.

GALEAN'CON, Galian'con, from γαλα, 'a cat,' 'a weasel,' and αγκων, 'an elbow.' Mustela'neus. One who has two short arms.

GALEAN'THROPY, Galeanthro'pia, from γαλα, 'a cat,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy in which the patient believes himself changed into a cat. An affection similar to lycanthropy and cynanthropy.

GALE'GA, G. officina'lis seu vulga'ris seu Per'sica, Ruta capra'ria, Goat's Rue. (F.) Rue de chèvre, Faux Indigo. Ord. Leguminosæ. It is slightly aromatic, and was once used as a sudorific and alexiteric in malignant fevers, &c.

GALECA APOLLINEA, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Persica, Galega—g. Purpurea, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Toxicaria, Tephrosia toxicaria.

GALECA VIRGINIA'NA, Tephro'sia Virginia'na, Turkey Pea, Hoary Pea, Devil's shoestrings, Virginia Goat's rue or cat-gut, is used in some parts of the United States as an anthelmintic. The decoction of the root is given.

GALEGA VULGARIS, Galega.

GALENE, Graphites.

GALENEA, Graphites.

GALEN'IC, Galen'ical, Galen'icæ, Galen'ius, (F.) Galenique, from Galenus. That which relates to the doctrine of Galen or to Galenism. Used, substantively, for drugs that are not chymical.

GALENIC MEDICINE, Galenism.

GA'LENISM, Galen'ic medicine. The doctrine of Galen.

GA'LENIST, Galenis'ta, Galenis'tes. A follower of the doctrine of Galen.

GALENIUS, Galen.

GALEOBDOLON, Galeopsis.

GALEOPDOLON, Galeopsis.

GALEOPSIDE, Galeopsis grandiflora.

GALEOPSIS, Lamium album.

GALEOP'SIS, Galiop'sis, Galeob'dolon, Galeop'dolon, La'minum rubrum, Urti'ca invers magna fetidissima, Stachys fetida, Hedge nettle, (F.) Ortie morte des bois. Ord. Labiate. From γαλα, 'a weasel,' and οφει, 'appearance;' the corolla having been supposed to resemble the head of the weasel. This plant was formerly reckoned a vulnerary and anodyne.

GALEOPSIS ANGSTIFOLIA, G. grandiflora—g. Dubia, G. grandiflora.

GALEOP'SIS GRANDIFLO'RA, G. Ochrolen'ca seu la'danum seu angustifolia seu du'bia seu prostrata seu villosa, Tetrabit longiflorum, G. Seg'etum, Herba Sideritidis, (F.) Galeopside, Chanvre bâlard. This plant is regarded in Germany as a bitter resolvent. It is the basis, also, of a celebrated nostrum, the Blankenheimer Tea, called likewise Lieber's pectoral and phthisical herbs (Lieber'sche Brust oder Auszehrungs-Krauter), which has enjoyed great repute in pectoral complaints. The tops of the plant are given in decoction (℞j, boiled in a pint of water for a quarter of an hour). This quantity to be taken in a day.

GALEOPSIS LADANUM, G. grandiflora—g. Ochroleuca, G. grandiflora—g. Prostrata, G. grandiflora—g. Segetum, G. grandiflora.

GALEOP'SIS VERSICOLOR, is possessed of the same virtues.

GALEOPSIS VILLOSA, G. grandiflora.

GALEROPIA, Oxyopia.

GALEUX, Psorie.

GA'LIA. An ancient composition, in which galls were an ingredient; the Galia pura. There was also a Galia aromatica, moschata seu musca'ta, which consisted of a mixture of several perfumes, such as musk.

GALIANCON, Galeancon.

GALIOPSIS, Galeopsis.

GALIUUM, Gallium, (from γαλα, 'milk,' because some species curdle milk.) G. verum.

GALIUUM ALBUM, G. Mollugo.

GALIUUM APARIN'Æ, G. infestum seu aparino'ides seu brachycarp'um seu scaber'imum, Valan'tia aparin'æ, Aparin'æ, A. his'pida, Lappa, Philanthropus, Ampelocarpus, Ombalocarpus, Lrus, Asphari'næ, Asper'ula, Goose-grass, Cleaver's becs, Cleavers, Goose-shave, Robin-run-the-hedge, Hayriff, (Old Eng.) Clitheren, (Prov.) Clider, Cliver; Order, Rubiaceæ; Ser. Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia. (F.) Galliet eccrocant, G. crochant, Grateron.

The expressed juice has been given as an aperient diuretic in incipient dropsies; also in cancer; and the decoction in Lepra and Psoriasis.

GALIUUM APARANOIDES, G. aparine.

GALIUUM ASPRELL'UM, Rough bed-straw, Rough ladies' bed-straw; indigenous; has the diuretic properties of most of its genus.

GALUM BRACHYCARPON, G. aparine—g. Caucasicum, G. verum.

GALUM CIRCEÆZANS, Wild Liquorice, Master of the Woods. An indigenous plant, which flowers from June to August. It is demulcent and diuretic, and is a popular domestic remedy.

GALUM INFESTE, G. aparine—g. Luteum, G. verum.

GALUM MOLLUGO, Galium album seu Tyrolin'se. Alys'sum Plin'ii. Greater ladies' bed-straw, (F.) Caillelait blanc. The herb and flowers have been used medicinally in epilepsy.

GALUM ODORATUM, Asperula odorata—g. Scaberrimum, G. aparine.

GALUM TINCTURUM, an American species, closely allied in properties to G. verum.

GALUM TYROLENSE, G. mollugo—g. Tuberculatum, G. verum.

GALUM VERUM, Galium, G. luteum seu Caucasicum seu tuberculatum, Ladies' bed-straw, Cheese-rennet, Bed-straw, Cleavwort, Goose-grass, Savoyan, Clabber-grass, Milksweet, Poor Robin, Gravel-grass, (F.) Gaillet jaune ou vrai, Vrai Caillelait. The tops were used in the cure of epilepsy. The leaves and flowers possess the property of curdling milk.

A membranous, pyriform reservoir, lodged in a superficial depression at the inferior surface of the right lobe of the liver. It receives, by the hepatic and cystic ducts, a portion of the bile secreted by the liver, when the stomach is empty, which becomes in it more acrid, bitter, and thick. It receives an artery, called the cystic. Its veins empty into the vena porta. Its nerves come from the hepatic plexus, and its lymphatic vessels join those of the liver.

GALVANISM, Galvanismus, Electric'itas animalis seu Galvan'ica seu metallica, Irritamentum metallo'rum seu metallicum, Vol'taism, Vol'taic or Chemical or Contact Electricity. Called after Galvani. A series of phenomena, consisting in sensible movements, executed by animal parts, which are endowed with irritability, when placed in connexion with two metallic plates of different nature, between which a communication is established by direct contact or by means of a metallic wire. Galvanism has been employed medicinally in the same cases as electricity, and especially in neuralgic affections. It is often applied in the form of plates,—"Mansford's plates." In asthma, for example, a small blister, the size of a dollar, may be placed on the neck over the course of the phrenic and pneumogastric nerves, and another on the side, in the region of the diaphragm. One metal is placed mediately or immediately over the vesicated surface on the neck, and another over that in the side. They are then connected by means of a wire. The new nervous impression, in this way induced, is often signally beneficial.

GALVANIZATION, Galvanisatio, (F.) Galvanisation. The act of affecting with galvanism.

GALVANIZATION, Lo'CALIZED, (F.) Galvanisation localisée. A mode of employing galvanism, proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, by which, he conceives, the electric influence may be arrested, at will, in the skin; or, without any incision or puncture, the skin may be traversed, and the electric influence be limited to the organs which it covers—to the nerves, muscles, and even the bones.

GANGLIAR, Ganglionic.

GANGLIATED, Ganglionic.

GANG'LIFORM, Gang'lioform, Ganglifor'mis. Having the shape of a ganglion. From ganglion, and forma, 'form.'

GANGLITIS, Ganglionitis.

GANGLI'OLUM, Diminutive of ganglion. A small ganglion.

GANGLIO'MA. A tumour of the glands or of the lymphatic ganglions, and especially epithelioma of them.—Nysten.

GANG'LION, Gang'lium. In anatomy, a name generally given to a knot-like enlargement in the course of a nerve. It is applied, however, to organs differing considerably from each other in size, colour, texture, functions, &c. They are divided into glandiform, lymphatic, and nervous. 1. Glandiform ganglia, called also adenoid, vascular, and sanguineous ganglia; blind, aporic, ductless, blood, and vascular glands; glandulæ spuria, &c., are organs of whose functions we are, in general, ignorant; and which have the appearance of glands. They are formed of agglomerated globules, pervaded by blood-vessels surrounded by areolar membrane, and contain a milky or yellowish fluid. To this class belong the spleen, thymus, thyroid, and supra-renal glands. They are, doubtless, concerned in sanguification.

2. Lymphatic ganglia. See Conglobate. 3. Nervous ganglia, Ganglia seu Ganglio'nes seu Nodi seu Noduli Nervorum, Tumores seu Plexus gangliiformes, Plexus glandiformes, Tubercula nodosa Nervorum, Diverticula spiritalium animalium, Ganglia of increase, Formative ganglia. Enlargements or knots in the course of a nerve. They belong, in general, to the system of the great sympathetic. One exists on the posterior root of every spinal nerve, and on one cerebral,—the 5th. Bichat regarded them as so many small brains, or centres of nervous action, independent of the encephalon, and intended exclusively for organic life. Being formed by the union of the cerebral and spinal nerves, they may send out the influence of both these nervous centres to the parts to which the nerves proceeding from them are distributed. Ganglia are chiefly composed of vesicular neurine; and appear to be concerned in the formation and dispensation of nerve power.

GANGLION, (γαγγλιον, Aëtius.) Same etymon. Empy'na ency'stis ganglion. A globular, hard, indolent tumour, without change in the colour of the skin; of a size varying from that of a pea, to that of an egg, and always situate in the course of a tendon. The tumour is formed of a viscid, albuminous fluid, contained in a cyst of greater or less thickness. The cyst is sometimes loose; but in the majority of cases it communicates, by a narrow footstalk, with the sheath of a tendon, or even with the synovial capsule of a neighbouring articulation. The causes are generally unknown. The treatment consists in compression, percussion, the use of discutients, extirpation, or incision.

GANGLIONARY, Ganglionic.

GANGLIONES NERVORUM, Ganglions, nervous.

GANGLION'IC, Ganglion'icus, Gan'glinary, Gan'gliar, Gan'gliated, from ganglion, (F.) Ganglionnaire. Relating to ganglia. Nerves are so called in the course of which ganglions are met with; as the greater part of the branches of the great sympathetic or trisplanchnic, the posterior roots of the spinal nerves, &c. Ganglionics, according to Dr. Pereira, are agents, which affect the ganglionic or great sympathetic system of nerves, [?]-as stimulants and sedatives.

GANGLIONIC NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve—g. Nervous System, see Trisplanchnic nerve.

GANGLION'ITIS, Gan'gli'itis, from γαγγλιον, 'a ganglion,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nervous ganglion. Sometimes used for inflammation of a lymphatic ganglion.

GANGLIONITIS PERIPHERICA et MEDULLARIS, Cholera.

GANGLIONNAIRE, Ganglionic.

GANGRÆNESCENTIA, Gangrænosis.

GANGRÆNICUS, Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNODES, Gangrenous.

GANGRÆNOPS'IS, from γαγγραινα, 'gangrene,' and opsis, 'the countenance.' Cancer aquaticus; also, gangrenous inflammation of the eyelids; Blephor'itis gangræno'sa.—Siebenhaar.

GANGRÆNO'SIS, Gangrænescent'ia, from γαγγραινα, 'gangrene.' The state of being gangrenous or of becoming gangrenous.

GANGRÆNOSUS, Gangrenous.

GANGRENE, Gangræ'na, Cancere'na, Hot mortification, (F.) Gangrène, G. Chande, Aephyrie des parties, from γρω, γραινω, 'I eat.' Privation of life or partial death of an organ. Authors have generally distinguished mortification into two stages; naming the first incipient or gangrene. It is attended with a sudden diminution of feeling in the part affected; livid discoloration; detachment of the cuticle, under which a turbid fluid is effused; with crepitation, owing to the disengagement of air into the areolar texture. When the part has become quite black, and incapable of all feeling, circulation, and life, it constitutes the second stage, or mortification, and is called sphac'elns. Gangrene, however, is frequently used synonymously with mortification,—local asphyxia being the term employed for that condition, in which the parts are in a state of suspended animation, and, consequently, susceptible of resuscitation. When the part is filled with fluid entering into putrefaction, the affection is called humid gangrene, (F.) Gangrène humide: on the other hand, when it is dry and shrivelled, it constitutes dry gangrene; (F.) Gangrène sèche. To this class belongs the gangræ'na senil'is, G. Pot'tii, Presbyosphac'elns, or spontaneous gangrene of old people, which rarely admits of cure. Whatever may be the kind of gangrene, it may be caused by violent inflammation, contusion, a burn, congelation, the ligature of a large arterial trunk, or by some inappreciable internal cause.

The treatment, both of external and internal gangrene, varies according to the causes which produce it. Gangrene from excessive inflammation is obviated by antiphlogistics; and that from intense cold by cautiously restoring the circulation by cold frictions, &c. When the gangrene has become developed, the separation of the eschars must be encouraged by emollient applications, if there be considerable reaction; or by tonics and stimulants, if the reaction be insufficient.

GANGRENE, HOSPITAL, see Hospital gangrene—g. of the Lungs, Necropneumonia.

GANGRENOUS, Gangræ'nicus, Gangræno'sus, Gangræno'des, (F.) Gangrénéux. Affected with or relating to gangrene.

GANGRENOUS EROSION OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

GANJAH, Gunjah.

GANTELET (F.), Chirotheca, Fas'cia digi'talis, Gauntlet; from (F.) gant, 'a glove.' A sort of bandage which envelops the hand and fingers like a glove. It is made with a long roller, about an inch broad: and is applied so that the fingers are covered to their tips, when it is called Gantelet entier or complet. The Demi-gantelet includes only the hand and base of the fingers. Both bandages are used in fractures and luxations of the fingers, burns of the hand, &c. See Chirotheca.

GANTS DES DAMES, Condom—g. de Notre Dame, Digitalis.

GAOL CACHEXIA, see Cachexia, gaol.

GAPING, Yawning.

GARANÇE, Rubia.

GARCINIA CAMBO'GIA, G. seu Cambogia gutta, Mangosta'na Cambogia. Ord. Guttiferæ. A tree of Ceylon, Family, Guttifereæ, which affords a concrete juice similar to Gamboge.

GARCINIA GUTTA, G. Cambogia.

GARCINIA MANGOSTA'NA, Mangosta'na Garcin'ia, from Garcin, who accurately described it. The systematic name of the Mangostan', Mangoustan', Mangostine' or Mangosteel' tree, Mau- gosta'na. It grows in great abundance in Java and the Molucca islands. The fruit, which is about the size of an orange, is delicious, and is eaten in almost every disorder. The dried bark is used medicinally in dysentery and tenesmus; and a strong decoction has been much esteemed in ulcerated sore throat.

GARCINIA PURPU'REA. From this species a concrete oil of Mangosteen is obtained, which is called, in India, Kokum bitter, Kokum being the Indian name of Mangosteen. The oil is extracted from the fruit by boiling. It is used in India in cases of chaps.

GARDE-MALADE, Nurse.

GARDENIA DUMETORUM, Randia dumetorum—g. Spinosa, G. dumetorum.

GARDEROBE, Artemisia abrotanum.

GARDEROBES, Fæces.

GARDINER'S ALIMENTARY PREPARATION, see Oryza.

GARDOUCHES, Vesiculæ seminales.

GARETUM, Poples.

GARGALISMUS, Gargalus.

GARG'ALUS, Gar'gale, Gargalis'mus, Titilla'tio, Irrita'tio, Pruri'tus. Titillation, irritation, itching. Also, masturbation; and, rarely, animal magnetism.

GARGAREON, Uvula.

GARGARISATIO, Gargarism.

GARGARISM, Gargaris'mus, Gargaris'ma, Anagargalic'ton, Gargaris'mum, Collu'tio, Diacly'sma, Anagargaris'ton, Anagargaris'mus, Anaconchylis'mus, Anaconchylis'tum, Titillamen'tum, from γαργαρίζω, 'I wash the mouth,' 'I gargle.' A gargle. Any liquid medicine, intended to be retained in the mouth, for a certain time, and to be thrown in contact with the uvula, velum pendulum, tonsils, &c. For this purpose, the liquid is agitated by the air issuing from the larynx, the head being thrown back. Gargles are employed in cynanche tonsillar and other diseases of the fauces, and are made of stimulants, sedatives, astringents, refrigerants, &c., according to circumstances.

The process is termed gargling, gargarisa'tio.

The term collu'torium or collutorium oris is generally restricted to a wash for the mouth.

GARGET, Phytolacca decandra.

GARGLE, Gargarism.

GARGLING, see Gargarism.

GARGOUILLEMENT, Borborygmus, Gurgling. See Râle muqueux.

GARLIC, Allium—g. Hedge, Alliaria—g. Meadow, Allium Canadense.

GARLOCK, Sinapis arvensis.

GAROSMUM, Chenopodium vulvaria.

GAROU BARK, Daphne gnidium.

GARRETUM, Poples.

GARROPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata.

GARROT (F.), garrot, from garrotter, 'to tie fast.' A compressing bandage, tightened by twisting a small cylinder of wood, by which the arteries of a limb are compressed, for the purpose of suspending the flow of blood in cases of hemorrhage, aneurism, amputation, &c.

GARROTILLO, Cynanche maligna.

GARRULITAS, Loquacity.

GARULEUM BIPINNATUM. A South African plant, Ord. Compositæ; known under the name Snakeroot, from its reputed effects as an antidote to the bites of venomous serpents. The root is a great favourite with the Boers in chest diseases—as asthma—and in affections in which a free secretion from the mucous membrane of the bronchia is indicated. It has diaphoretic properties, and acts as a diuretic in gout and dropsy. It is given in decoction or tincture. Dr. Pappe thinks the root ought to have a place in the Materia Medica.

GARUM. γαρὺν, Licul'men, Liqua'men. The ancient Romans gave this name to a kind of pickle made by collecting the liquor which flowed from salted and half-putrefied fish. It was used as a condiment.—The Geoponics, Humelberg on Apicius, Martial, &c.

GARVANCE. Cicer arictinum.

GAS, see Gaz—g. Ammoniacale, Ammonia—g. Annuale sanguinis, Gaz sanguinis—g. Azoticum, Azote—g. Azoticum oxygenatum, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of—g. Hepaticum, Hydrogen, sulphuretted—g. Hydrogenium sulphuretum, Hydrogen, sulphuretted—g. Intoxicating, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of—g. Laughing, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of—g. of the Lungs, Gaz, pulmonary—g. Nitrons, dephlogisticated, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of—g. Oxygenated muriatic acid, Chlorine—g. Oxymuriatic acid, Chlorine—g. Palustre, Miasm, marsh—g. Paradise, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of—g. Sulphuris, Sulphurous acid.

GASCARILLA, Croton casearilla.

GASPING, Anhelatio.

GASTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Gastein or Gasteiner Wildbad is in the Noric Alps, Austria. The waters are thermal. Temp. 106° to 118° Fah. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, chloride of potassium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, magnesia, manganese, iron, &c.

GASTER, γαστήρ. The abdomen. At times, but rarely, the uterus. Also, the stomach, in particular; Hence:

GASTERALGIA, Gastralgia.

GASTERANAX, from γαστήρ, 'the abdomen,' and ἀναξ, 'a king.' A name given by Dolæus to a hypothetical vital principle, corresponding to the Archæus of Van Helmont, the seat of which he placed in the lower belly. See Bithnimalca.

GASTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiempyraxis.

GASTERANGIEMPHRAX'IS, Gasteraugempyrax'is, Gasteremphrax'is. Obstruction of the pylorus; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' αἴχμα, 'I strangle,' and ἐμφρασσα, 'I obstruct.'—Vogel. Also, and properly, obstruction or congestion of the vessels of the stomach.

GASTÉRIASE, Pepsin.

GASTERATHEN'IA, Imbecill'itas seu Aton'ia seu Lax'itas ventriculi; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ἀσθενία, 'debility.' Debility of the stomach.

GASTERATAXIA, Embarras gastrique.

GASTERECHE'MA, Gastreche'ma, Sou'itus stomach'icus; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and ἤχημα, 'sound.' Sound heard on auscultating or percussing the region of the stomach, and referred to that organ.

GASTEREMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiempyraxis.

GASTERHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean section.

GASTRÆ'MIA, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia of the stomach.

GASTRALGIA, Cardialgia.

GASTRANEURYSMA, Gastrectasis.

GASTRATROPH'IA, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and ἀτροφία, 'wasting.' Atrophy of the stomach.

GASTRECHEMA, Gasterocheima.

GASTRECTASIS, Gastrect'asia, Gastraueury'sma, Dilat'io ventriculi; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the stomach.

GASTRELCOBROSIS, Gasterobrosis ulcerosa.

GASTRELCOS'IS, Ulcera'tio seu Eru'cerat'io seu Ul'cera ventriculi; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and ἕλκος, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the stomach. When accompanied with hectic, it constitutes Gastrophth'isis, Gastroph'thoë.

GASTRELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean Section.

GASTRENCEPHALO'MA, Gastromyelo'ma, Gastromyelo'sis, Gastroëncephalo'sis; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and εγκέφαλος, 'the brain.' Encephaloid of the stomach.

GASTRENCHYTA, Stomach pump.

GASTRENERIC, Gastroentericus.

GASTRENERITIC, Gastroenteritic.

GASTRENTEROMALA'CIA, Gastroenteromala'is, from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' εντερον 'intestine,' and μαλακία, 'softening.' Softening of the stomach and intestines.

GASTREPEPTICUS, Gastrohepatic.

GASTREPATIT'IS, Inflamma'tio ventriculi et hep'atis; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ἥπαρ, 'liver.' Inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTREPIPLOICUS, Gastroëpiploic.

GASTREREITHIS'IA; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ερεθίζω, 'I irritate.' Irritation of the stomach.

GASTRIC, Gastr'icus; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach.' Belonging or relating to the stomach.

GASTRIC ARTERIES are three in number, Arteria gastro-epiplo'ica dextra, A. gastro-epiplo'ica sinistra, and A. coronaria ventriculi.

GASTRIC JUICE, Succus gastr'icus, Men'strum seu Fermentum Ventriculi, (F.) Sac Gastrigue, Gastric Acid. A fluid, secreted from the mucous membrane of the stomach. As met with, it is a mixture of the fluids secreted by that organ with those of the supra-diaphragmatic portion of the alimentary canal. Owing to such admixture, the most contrary properties have been assigned to it. That such a fluid is secreted, which concurs powerfully in digestion, is evident from many considerations, and has been positively proved by the author and numerous others. It was found by him to contain, in man chlorohydric and acetic acids. The gastric fluid in cases of sudden death sometimes corrodes and perforates the stomach; giving rise to interesting questions in medical jurisprudence.

GASTRIC NERVES. The two cords by which the pneumogastric nerves terminate, and which descend on the two surfaces of the stomach; as well as the filaments of the great sympathetic, which accompany the gastric vessels.

GASTRIC PLEXUS, Plexus coronarius ventriculi. A nervous network, formed by the solar plexus. It accompanies the Arteria coronaria ventriculi, and passes along the lesser curvature of the stomach, to which it gives branches.

GASTRIC VEINS follow the same distribution as the arteries, and open into the Vena porta abdominalis.

GASTRICISM, Gastric'ismus, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach.' A name by which is designated the medical theory, that refers all, or almost all, diseases to an accumulation of saburra in the digestive passages.

GASTRICITÉ, Embarras gastrique.

GASTRILOQUE, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUIST, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUUS, Engastrimyth.

GASTRIMARGUS, Glutton.

GASTRINUM, Potash.

GASTRISMUS, Gluttony, see Saburra.

GASTRITIC, Gastrit'icus; same etymon as the rest. Relating to gastritis.

GASTRIT'IS, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Ventriculi inflammatio, Canna seu Empres'ma seu Cardial'gia inflammato'ria, Feb'ris stomach'ica inflammato'ria, Inflammatio gastritis, I. ventriculi seu stom'achi, Phlegmonë ventriculi, Inflammation of the stomach, (F.) Inflammation de l'Estomac, Gastrite, Catarrhe gastrique. A disease, characterized by pyrexia; great anxiety; heat and pain in the epigastrium, increased by taking any thing into the stomach; vomiting and hiccup. Gastritis may either be seated in the peritoneal or mucous coat. It is most frequently in the latter—Eso-gastritis, Endogastritis, Gastromyoenteritis, Gastritis muco'sa—being excited directly by acrid ingesta. It requires the most active treatment;—bleeding, blistering, fomentations, diluents, &c. Some degree of inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach was considered by the followers of Broussais to be present in almost all fevers; and the various forms of dyspepsia have been supposed by some to be nothing more than chronic endogastritis.

GASTRITIS ARTHRITICA, Coeliagra.

GASTRO, from γαστήρ, 'stomach.' In composition, relating or appertaining to the stomach, or belly.

GASTRO-ARTHRITIS, Gout—g. Ataxia, Dyspepsia—g. Atonia, Dyspepsia—g. Bronchitis, Fever, adenomeningal—g. Entérite intense, Synocha—g. Entérite, with nervous affection of the brain, see Typhus—g. Enteritis, follicular, Dothi-enteritis; see Typhus.

GASTROBRO'SIS, Perforatio ventriculi, Gastro-rhex'is, (F.) Perforation de l'Estomac; from gastro, and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.' Corrosion and perforation of the stomach.

GASTROBRO'SIS ULCERO'SA, Gastrelcrobros'is. Destruction and perforation of the coats of the stomach by ulceration.

GASTROCE'LE, from gastro, and κλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the stomach, Hernia ventriculi, (F.) Hernie de l'Estomac. Hernia formed by the stomach through the upper part of the linea alba: a disease, the existence of which has been doubted by many. See Epigastrocele.

GASTRO-CEPHALITIS; from gastro, κεφαλή, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and head,—a not uncommon concomitant of certain malignant fevers.

GASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROCNEME, Sura.

GASTROCNEMIA, Sura.

GASTROCNEMII, from gastro, and κνημη, 'the leg.' The name of the two fleshy masses which occupy the posterior and superficial part of the leg, Gemelli; (F.) Gastrocnémiens, Sommeaux de la jambe, Bifémoro-calcaneiens—(Ch.); the two constituting the Gastrocnémius externus, of English anatomists. These muscles are distinguished into internal and external, which are distinct above, but united at their inferior extremity. They are long, flat, and thick; and arise—the former from the posterior part of the outer condyle of the femur; the latter, from the posterior part of the inner condyle of the same bone. The aponeurosis, which unites these muscles below, joins with that of the solaris, and forms with it, a large tendon, which, under the name Tendo Achillis, is inserted at the posterior part of the calcaneum. These muscles extend the foot on the leg, and the leg on the foot. They can, also, bend the leg and the thigh reciprocally on each other. For the Gastrocnemius internus, see Soleus.

GASTROCNEMIUM, Sura.

GASTROCELIACUS, Coeliac.

GASTROCELICUS, Coeliac.

GASTROCOLIC, see Epiploon, gastrocolic.

GASTROCOLICA, Cardialgia.

GASTROCOLITIS, from gastro, and κωλον, 'colon.' Inflammation of the stomach and colon.

GASTROCOLPOTOMIA, see Cæsarean section.

GASTRODID'YMUS, Gastrod'ymus, Did'ymus Symphyogastrius, Psod'ymus; from gastro and διδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the abdomen.

GASTRODUODE'NAL, Gastroduodenal'is; from gastro, and duodenum. Relating to the stomach and duodenum.

GASTRO-DUODENITIS, (F.) Gastro-duodénite. Inflammation of the stomach and bowels, an affection, which figured largely in the system of Broussais. See Gastro-enteritis.

GASTRODUODENOPYRA, Fever, adenomeningal.

GASTRODYNE, Cardialgia.

GASTRODYNIA, Cardialgia—g. Flatulenta, Colica flatulenta.

GASTRO-ELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean section.

GASTRO-ENTERAL'GIA, from gastro, εντέρον, 'intestine,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the stomach and intestines.

GASTROENTER'IC, Gastroënter'icus, Gastroenter'ic, Gastroenter'icus, Gastro-intes'tinal, from gastro, and εντέρον, 'intestine.' Relating to the stomach and intestine.

GASTROËNTERITE, Gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERIT'IC, Gastroënterit'icus, Gastroenterit'ic, Gastroenterit'icus; same etymon as the next. Relating to gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERIT'IS, Inflamatio ventriculi et Intestino'rum, (F.) Gastro-ëntérite, Gastro-enteric disease, from gastro, εντέρον, 'an intestine,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and small intestine. According to Broussais, the essential fevers of authors are gastro-enteritis, simple, or complicated.

GASTROËPIP'LOIC, Gastro-épiplo'icus, Gastroépiplo'icus, from gastro and επιπλοον, 'the epiploon.' That which relates to the stomach and epiploon.

GASTROËPIPL'IC ARTERIES, Gastric inferior arteries, are two in number, and distinguished into right and left. The right, also called Gastro-hepat'ic, Gastrica inferior dextra, Gastro-épiplo'ica dextra, is furnished by the hepatic artery. It descends behind the pylorus, and passes from right to left, along the great curvature of the stomach. It gives branches to the pancreas, duodenum, stomach, omentum majus, and terminates by anastomosing with the Gastro-épiplo'ica sinistra, Gastrica sinistra seu inferior sinistra. This—the left—arises from the splenic artery. It is of considerable magnitude, and passes from left to right, along the great curvature of the stomach, distributing its branches more particularly to the stomach and omentum majus. It terminates by joining the right gastro-epiploic.

GASTROËPIPL'IC GANGLIONS are the lymphatic ganglions or glands, situate towards the great curvature of the stomach, between the two anterior laminae of the omentum majus.

GASTROËPIPL'IC VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into right and left. They empty themselves;—the former, into the superior mesenteric; the latter, into the splenic vein.

GASTROHEMORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTROHEPAT'IC, Gastro-hepat'icus, Hep'ato-gast'ricus, Gastrohepat'icus; from gastro, and ηπαρ, ηπατος, 'the liver.' Relating to the stomach and liver. This name has been given to several organs. See Epiploon, gastrohepatic, &c.

GASTROHEPATITIS. Simultaneous inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTROHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean section.

GASTRO-INTESTINAL, Gastro-enteric.

GASTROLIENALIS, Gastrosplenicus.

GASTROLITH'ASIS, from gastro, and λιθιασις, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, gastrolithi, in the stomach.

GASTROMALACIA, Gastromalaxia.

GASTROMALAX'IA, Gastro-malac'ia, Gastro-malaco'sis, Malacogast'ic, Malax'is ventriculi, Dissolutio ventriculi, Emolli'tio ventriculi, Pseudophlogo'sis ventriculi resolut'ia et colli- quati'ca, Metamorphosis ventriculi gelatiniformis, Ero'sio et perforatio spontanea ventriculi, Resolutio et diabro'sis ventriculi, (F.) Raimollissement de l'Estomac, from gastro, and μαλαξίς, 'softening.' Softening of the stomach, induced at times by the gastric secretions after death,—Resolutio ventriculi antopeptica.

GASTROMANTIS, Engastrimyth.

GASTROMELES, from gastro, and μελος, 'a limb.' A monster with one or more supernumerary limbs on the abdomen.

GASTROME'NIA, from gastro, and μην, 'a month.' Vicarious menstruation from the stomach.

GASTRO-MENINGITIS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROMETROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

GASTROMYCODERIS, see Stomach.

GASTROMYCODERITIS, see Gastritis.

GASTROMYELOMA, Gastroencephaloma.

GASTRONOSUS, Gastropathy.

GASTROPARALYSIS, Gastroparē'gia, Paralysis ventriculi; from gastro, and παράλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the stomach.

GASTROPATHY, Gastropathī'a, Gastron'oons, Gastron'ons, from gastro, and πάθος, 'disease.' Disease of the stomach.

GASTROPERIODY'NIA, Sool (India.) A violent periodical neuralgic pain at the pit of the stomach, not uncommon in Hindoostan.

GASTROPHREN'IC, Gastro-phren'icus, from gastro, and φρενς, 'the diaphragm.' Belonging to the stomach and diaphragm.

GASTROPHRENIC LIGAMENT is a reflection of the peritoneum, which descends from the inferior surface of the diaphragm to the cardia.

GASTROPHTHISIS, Gastræcosis.

GASTROPHTHOE, Gastræcolysis.

GASTROPLEGIA, Gastroparalysis.

GASTROPYRA, Fever, gastric.

GASTROPYRETUS, Fever, gastric.

GASTRO'APHY, Gastro-rhā'phia, Gastro-rhaphē, Sutura abdominalis, from gastro, and ραφή, 'a suture.' The suture used for uniting wounds penetrating the abdomen, when they are too extensive or too unequal to be kept in contact by position, adhesive plaster, or appropriate bandages. The interrupted and quilted sutures are those chiefly employed.

GASTRORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTRORRHEXIS, Gastrobrosis.

GASTRORRHŒ'A, from gastro, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Blennorrhœ'a seu Fluxus ventriculi, (F.) Flux mucus de l'estomac, Cutarrhe stomacal. A morbid condition of the stomach, which consists in the secretion of an excessive quantity of mucus from the lining membrane. Also, Cæliac flux.

GASTROSCIRRHUS, Induratio ventriculi scirrhosa, Scirrhus seu carcinoma ventriculi. Scirrhous induration or cancer of the stomach.

GASTROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

GASTRO'SES. A generic name for diseases which are seated in the stomach.—Alibert.

GASTROSPLE'NIC, Gastrosple'nicus, Gastro-lieno'lis, from gastro, and σπλην, 'the spleen.' Relating to stomach and spleen.

GASTROSTENOSIS, Stricture of the stomach.

GASTROSTENOSIS CARDIACA et PYLORICA; from gastro, and στενός, 'narrow.' Narrowness of the cardiac and pyloric orifices of the stomach from cancer of that organ.

GASTROT'OMY, from gastro, and τομή, 'incision.' Several different operations have been so called. 1. The Cæsarean Section. 2. An incision made into the abdomen for the purpose of removing some internal strangulation or volvulus, or to reduce hernia, Laparotomy; and, 3. The opening made in the stomach, to remove a foreign body which has passed into it through the œsophagus.

GASTRYPERNEU'RIA, from gastro, ὑπερ, 'above,' and νεύρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly increased activity of the nerves of the stomach.

GÂTEAU FÉBRILE, Ague cake.

GÂTEUX (F.), from gâter, 'to spoil.' A name given, in the insane hospitals, and in the hospitals for incurables and the aged, in France, to persons who are incapable of attending to themselves, and have lost all sense of cleanliness.

GATHERING, Abscess, Suppuration.

GATTLIER, Vitex.

GAUDIA FŒDA, Masturbation.

GAULTHERIA, Gaulthe'ria seu Gualthe'ria procumbens, Gaultie'ra repens, Mountain Tea, Partridge Berry, Berrid Tea, Gromsberry, Deerberry, Spice berry, Tea berry, Red berry, Wintergreen, Red berry Tea, Ground berry, Ground ivy, Ground holly, Hill berry, Box berry, Chequer berry, (F.) Gauthérie, Palommier, Thé du Canada, called after Dr. Gaultier, of Quebec. Ord. Ericaceæ. An American plant, which is one of the principal articles of the materia medica of some Indian tribes. The infusion of the leaves is stimulant and anodyne, and is said to have been used, with advantage, in asthma. The oil—Oleum Gaultheriæ, Ph. U. S.,—is used, chiefly on account of its pleasant flavour, to cover the taste of other medicines.

GAUNTLET, Gauntlet.

GAUQUAVA, Smilax China.

GAUTERA REPENS, Gaultheria.

GAY FEATHER, Liatriis spicata.

GAYAC, Guaiacum.

GAYLUSSACIA RESINO'SA, Vaccinium resinosum, Black Huckleberry, Order, Ericaceæ, (called after the chemist, Gay-Lussac.) An indigenous plant, whose fruit is sweet and agreeable. The leaves and root, as well as those of GAYLUSSACIA DUMO'SA, Dwarf huckleberry, and of G. FRONDO'SA, Blue tougle, indigenous, are used in decoction as astringents in diarrhoea, sore throat, &c.

GAZ, Gas, Air. Van Helmont first designated by this name,—the etymology of which is unknown,—the carbonic acid developed in the vinous fermentation. Afterwards, the term was appropriated to every permanently elastic fluid: that is, which preserves its æriform state at all temperatures; and ultimately it was extended to all æriform bodies;—which were divided into permanent and non-permanent gazes. The latter are generally termed vapours:—they return to the liquid state, when a portion of their caloric is abstracted. The permanent gazes, or gazes properly so called, are numerous, and may be divided into three sections with regard to their effects on the animal economy.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| 1. Irrespirable gazes. | } Carbonic acid, ammoniacal gaz, chlorohydric acid gaz, deutoxide of azote, nitrous acid gaz, and chlorine. |
| 2. Negatively deleterious gazes. | |
| 3. Positively deleterious gazes. | } Hydrogen, azote.
Oxygen, protoxide of azote, carburetted hydrogen, carbonic oxide, sulphuretted hydrogen, and arseniuretted hydrogen. |

It is proper to remark that the term respirable has been very differently employed by different writers. Sometimes it has meant the power of supporting life when applied to the blood in the lungs. At others, all gazes have been deemed irrespirable, which are incapable of being introduced into the lungs, by voluntary efforts,—without any relation to their power of maintaining vitality; and this is perhaps the best sense. The gazes were, at one time, employed in medicine, under great expectations,—especially by the enthusiastic Beddoes; but they are now scarcely ever had recourse to. They differ, considerably, in their effects on the animal economy. Some, as oxygen, are exciting; others, as azote, depressing; whilst others, again, as the Protoxide of azote or laughing gas, produce the most singular effects.

GAZ DES BALLONS, Hydrogen.

GAZ, PUL'MONARY, Gaz of the lungs. A name given to the expired air; which contains—besides common air, an increase of carbonic acid, water, and some animal matter.

GAZ SANG'UINIS, Gaz anima'lē san'guinis, Hallitus seu Anra seu Vapor san'guinis, Spiritus roriferus, Hæmat'us. The halitus, or vapour, given off by freshly-drawn blood.

GAZEL, Ribes nigrum.

GAZELLE, Antilopus.

GEANT, Giant.

GEANTISME, see Giant.

GEBÄRPULVER, Ergot.

GEDE'OLA. The convex part of the liver.—Du Cange.

GEILNAU, MINERAL WATERS OF. Geilnau is a village in the grand duchy of Nassau, at no great distance from Frankfort. The waters contain carbonic acid, carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda, chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

GEISMAR, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters of Geismar, in Bavaria, are acidulous chalybeates.

GEISUM, γεῖσον, Geison. The part of the frontal bone over the eyes.

GELAPPIUM, Convolvulus jalapa.

GELASINI DENTES, Incisive teeth.

GELASMUS, Canine laugh.

GELATIG'ENOUS. A hybrid term, from gelatin, and γενω or γεννω, 'to engender.' That which forms gelatinous structure. Dr. Carpenter restricts the term to substances yielding gelatin. The propriety of this may well be questioned.

GEL'ATIN, Gel'atine, Gelat'ina, Galveda. (F.) Gélatine, from (F.) Gelée, 'gelly or jelly.' From (L.) Gelu, 'ice.' An immediate animal principle. It is semitransparent, insipid, inodorous, insoluble in cold water, very soluble in hot, which it thickens, and transforms into jelly on cooling. Gelatin is a nutritious substance; and, when dissolved in a considerable quantity of water, forms an emollient fluid, much used in therapeutics, but not the most easy of digestion. Two forms of gelatin are admitted—the one glutin or gelatin proper: the other chondrin.

GELATIN OF WHARTON, Gelat'ina Whartonia'na, Jelly of the Cord. A soft, dense, fluid, gelatinous substance, which envelops the umbilical cord, and is conceived, by some, to be inservient to the nutrition of the fetus.

GELATINA AQUATICA, Brasenia hydroptilis.

GÉLATINE DES CARTILAGES, Chondrin.

GELATINIFORM MATTER OF THE INTTESTINE, Albuminose.

GELAT'INOUS, Gelatino'sus, (F.) Gélatineux. Relating, or appertaining to, or having the character or appearance of gelatin or jelly. Viscid.

GELATINOUS NERVE-FIBRE, see Nerve fibres.

GELATIO, Congelation.

GELDING, Castration.

GELÉE, Gelly—g. c ntre le Goître, Balsam, iodurcted.

GELLY, Jelly, Jus gela'tum seu coagula'tum, Gelu, (F.) Gelée. Same etymon. A substance of a soft consistence, tremulous, and transparent, which is obtained, by an appropriate treatment, from animal and vegetable matters: hence the distinction into animal and vegetable jelly. The former is merely a concentrated solution of gelatin, left to cool.

Vegetable Jelly is found in the juice of the currant, mulberry, and of almost all acid fruits, when ripe. It is of itself colourless, but almost always retains a little colouring matter of the fruit which has furnished it. It has an agreeable taste: is scarcely soluble in cold water, but boiling water dissolves it readily: the jelly is, however, almost all deposited on cooling. If this aqueous solution be boiled for a long time, it becomes analogous to mucilage, and loses the property of being jellied on cooling.

GELSEM'INUM NIT'IDUM, G. Sempervi'rens, Bigno'nia sempervirens, Yellow Jes'samin. The flowers, root, &c., of this shrub of the Southern States, Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, Nat. Ord. Apocynæ, are narcotic, and the effluvia from the former are said sometimes to induce stupor.

GELU, Gelly.

GELUS, Risus.

GEMELLI, Gastroenemii, Ishio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMEL'LUS, Gem'inus, 'a twin,' Did'yimus, (F.) Jumeau, Jumelle, Besson, Bessonne. One of two children, twins, born at the same accouchement, or gestation. Also, relating to twins, as 'a twin conception.'

GEMELLUS MUS'culus. Cowper applies this name to the long portion of the triceps brachialis united to the inner portion.

GEMINI, Ishio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMINUM CENTRUM SEMICIRCULARE, Tænia semicircularis.

GEMINUS, Gemellus.

GEMIPOMA, Mamma.

GÉMISSEMENT, see Moaning.

GEMMA, Granulation—g. Oculi, Crystalline.

GEMMATION, see Generation.

GEMMATION, GENERATION BY, see Generation.

GEMMIPARITÉ, see Generation.

GEMMIPAROUS, see Generation.

GEMUR'SA, a corn; also a name given by the ancients to a disease seated between the toes:—the nature of which is unknown to us.

GEN, Gen'esis, 'generation,' from γεννω, 'I make.' Hence Hydrogen, Osteogeny, &c.

GENA. The Cheek, Genys, Parci'a, Gamp'hē, Gamphe'lē, Gnathos, Gnathmus, Malu, (Sc.) Wouge, (F.) Joue. The cheeks form the lateral parts of the mouth. Externally, they have no precise limits: they are continuous, above, with the lower eyelid; below, they descend as far as the base of the jaw; before, they terminate at the alæ nasi, and at the commissures of the lips; and behind, at the ear. Their thickness varies according to the degree of fatness of the individual. They are formed of three layers;—one dermoid, another muscular, and the third mucous.

GENCIVES, Gingivæ.

GENEANTHROPY, Anthropogenia.

GENE'AS, Lani'go prima, Probar'binum. The downy hairs, which first cover the cheek. Also, a bandage which passes under the chin.

GENEION, Beard, Mentum.

GENERAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy—g. Practitioner, Surgeon-apothecary.

GÉNÉRALE, Influenza.

GENERATIO, Generation—g. Æquivoca, see Generation—g. Calculi, Lithia—g. Homogenea, see Generation—g. Primigena, see Generation—g. Primitiva, see Generation—g. Originaria, see Generation—g. Spontanea, see Generation.

GENERATION, Genera'tio, Gen'esis, Genne'sis, Gonē, Gonus, Procrea'tio, Procreation, Bred'ing, from (L.) geno, genere, genitum, γενω, or γεννω, 'to engender.' Under this name physiologists comprehend the aggregate of functions, which concur, in organized beings, towards the production of their kind. The act of generation means the union of the sexes. See Coition. The writers of antiquity believed, that all organized bodies are produced either by what is termed univ'oecal or regular generation, Homogen'esis, genera'tio homogen'ea, propaga'tio, which applies to the upper classes of animals and vegetables, or by spontaneous generation, Antogon'ia, heterogen'esis, generatio heterogen'ea seu æquiv'oeca seu primiti'va seu primig'ena seu originaria seu sponta'nea, spontéparité (Dugès), which they considered applicable to the very lowest classes only, as the mushroom, the worm, the frog, &c. There are still many distinguished naturalists who consider that beings, low in the scale of animality, are produced in the latter way. Spontaneous generation and equivocal generation have been regarded by many to be synonymous. Others, however, mean by spontaneous generation, the production of a new being from the mere combination of inorganic elements; whilst by equivocal generation they understand the evolution of a new being from organized beings dissimilar to themselves, through some irregularity in their functions, or through the incipient decay or degeneration of their tissues. As to the mode in which regular generation is accomplished, there have been many views. According to the doctrine of Hippocrates, and of the ancient philosophers, the ovaries of the female furnish a prolific fluid, similar to that of the male; and the fœtus results from the mixture of the two seeds in copulation. Steno and others conceived, that the ovaries contain ova, which are not developed until vivified by the male sperm. Bonnet and Spallanzani believed in the pre-existence of germs, created since the origin of the world, but encased in each other, and becoming developed in succession; whence it would follow that the ovary of the first female must have contained the germs of all subsequent generations: and that the number of these germs must go on always diminishing, until ultimately extinct. This was the system of the evolution of germs. According to Leueenhock, the ovaries do not contain eggs, but vesicles destined to receive animalcules; which, in his view, live in the sperm. Thousands of these animalcules are thrown into the uterus during copulation, and the most expeditious and vigorous reaches the ovary, after having scattered and destroyed its competitors. Buffon—admitting the hypothesis of the two seeds—supposed that they were formed of molecules proceeding from every part of the body of each parent; and that, by a kind of elective affinity, those which were furnished by the head, the trunk, or the extremities of the male parent, could only unite with those proceeding from the same parts of the female. Before him, Maupertuis, admitting, with many of the ancient philosophers, the system of Epigenesis, and adopting, as regarded the composition of the sperm, a theory analogous to that of Buffon, had supposed that the molecules, capable of being organized, were attracted towards a centre; that the nose attracts the two eyes; the body, the arms; the arms, the hands, &c., nearly as the particles of a salt, dissolved in a liquid, arrange themselves in regular crystals around the same nucleus. These and various other systems have been successively proposed and abandoned, and the mystery of generation remains impenetrable.

The simplest kind of reproduction does not require sexual organs. The animal separates into several fragments, which form so many new individuals. This is Fissip'arous generation, Fissiparism, G. from fission, (F.) Fissiparité, Scissiparité, Scission, Cloisonnement, Reproduction ou Multiplication mérismatique. Gemmip'arous generation, (F.) Gemmiparité, Génération par Gemmation, Sarcenlation ou Bourgeonnement, consists in the formation of buds, sporules or germs on some part of the body, which at a particular period drop off and form as many new individuals. These kinds of reproduction require but one parent—Monog'eny. In Ovip'arous generation, (F.) Oviparité, the egg is hatched out of the body. In ovovivip'rous generation, the new being is hatched in the excretory passages. In vivip'arous generation, the new individual is born under its appropriate form; and in marsup'ial or marsup'iate generation, the young being, born at a very early stage of development, is received and nourished in a marsupium or pouch. In alternate generation, (F.) Génération alternante, the young not only do not resemble the parent at birth, but remain dissimilar during their whole life, so that their relationship is not apparent until a succeeding generation. Thus, the cercaria undergoes a change into the distoma. See Metagenesis. All these kinds of reproduction require the union of sexes—Dig'eny.

All the acts comprising the function of generation in man may be referred to five great heads. 1. Copulation. 2. Conception or fecundation. 3. Gestation or Pregnancy. 4. Delivery or Accouchement; and, 5. Lactation.

GENERATION, ACT OF, see Generation—g. Alternate, see Generation, and Metagenesis—g. Equivocal, see Generation—g. by Fission, see Generation—g. Fissiparous, see Generation—g. by Gemmation, see Generation—g. Gemmiparous, see Generation—g. Marsupial, see Generation—g. Organs of, female, see Vulva—g. Oviparous, see Generation—g. GEN'EROUS, Genero'sus. From genus, generis, 'a race;' generosus, 'of a noble race, noble.' A name given to wines which contain a great quantity of alcohol.

GENESIAL, Genital.

GENESIOL'OGY, Genesisiolog'ia, from γενεσις, 'generation,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of generation.

GENÉSIQUE, LE, Appetite, venereal.

GENESIS, Generation.

GENÉT. Spartium scoparium—g. à Balai, Spartium scoparium—g. des Teinturiers, Genista tinctoria.

GENETHLI'ACUS, from γενεθλιος, 'natal,' 'pertaining to nativity.' A name given by the ancients to certain astrologers, who, from the state of the heavens at the time of the birth of an individual, predicted his future character and the events of his life.

GENET'ICA, from γενεσις, 'generation.' Diseases of the sexual functions; the 5th class in Good's Nosology. Also, agents that act on the sexual organs.—Pereira.

GENETICUS, Genital.

GENEVA, Gin, see Spirit.

GENÉVRIER, Juniperus communis—g. Oxyèdre, Juniperus oxycedrus.

GENGIVITE, Ulitis.

GÉNI, Genian.

GEN'IAN, Genia'nus, Gen'ial, from γενειον, 'the chin.' The Genian apoph'ysis or Process, (F.) Apophyse génienne ou géné, is situate at the posterior part of the symphysis menti, and is formed of four small tubercles.

GENICULATUM, see Corpora geniculata.

GÉNIE, Ge'nius. The French sometimes apply this term to diseases nearly synonymously with nature; as Génie inflammatoire, G. bilieux, G. adynamique. Some use it in the same sense as type; Génie intermittent. The unwonted predominance of any mental faculty is also so called.

GÉNIEN, Genian.

GENIÈVRE, Gin, Juniperus communis (the berry.)

GENIO. from γενιον, 'chin.' In composition, means relating or appertaining to the chin.

GENIOGLOSSUS, Genio-hyoglossus, from γενιον, 'the chin,' and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' Mesoglossus, Mesoglossus, Nonus lingua muscularis. The name of a flat, triangular muscle, which extends from the genian apophysis to the inferior surface of the os hyoides and tongue, which last it carries forward.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOIDEUS, Geniohyoïdes, Geniohyoïdes, Mento-bicor'nens, from γενιον, 'the chin,' and βοειδης, 'the os hyoides.' A muscle which arises from the genian apophysis, and is inserted at the anterior part of the body of the os hyoides. Its use is to raise the os hyoides, and carry it forwards. It may, also, contribute to depress the lower jaw in contracting towards the os hyoides.

GENIO-PHARYNGE'US, from γενιον, 'the chin,' and φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx.' A name given, by some anatomists, to a bundle of fibres which passes from the lower jaw to the sides of the pharynx, and forms part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GENIOPLASTY, Genioplastie, from γενιον, 'the chin,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The operation for restoring the chin. At times used instead of Genioplasty, for the operation for restoring the cheek.

GENIPA OBLONGIFOLIA, Huito. A plant of Peru, with the juice of which the Indians paint their legs, to protect them against the stings of insects.

GENIPI ALBUM. Achillea moschata, Artemisia rupestris — g. Blanc, Artemisia rupestris — g. Verum, Achillea atrata.

GENISTA, Spartium scoparium — g. Canariensis, see Rhodium lignum — g. Hirsuta, Spartium scoparium — g. Scoparia, Spartium scoparium.

GENISTA SPINOSA IS'DICA, Bahel Schulli. Ord. Leguminosæ. An oriental tree, a decoction of the roots of which is diuretic. The leaves boiled in vinegar have the same effect. — Ray.

GENISTA TINCTORIA, Genistoides tinctoria, Spartium tinctorium, Dyers' broom or weed, Green weed, Wood waxen, Woodwee, (F.) Genêt des Teinturiers. A shrub cultivated in this country and in Europe. The flowering tops and seed have been used in medicine. It has the same properties as Spartium scoparium.

GENISTOIDES TINCTORIA, Genista tinctoria.

GENITAL, Genitalis, Geneticus, Generatio'ni inser'viens, Genesial, Gennet'icus. Same etymon as Generation. That which belongs or relates to generation.

GENITAL ORGANS, Sexual Organs, Puden'da, Naturalia, Natu'ra, Ædæ'a, Me'zea, Me'sa, Mo'ri'on; Genital, Noble, Natural or Private parts; Priv'ities, Privy parts, Privy Members, the Parts, Pars, Pars corporis seu obscæ'na, Fores, Partes genital'es seu generatio'ni inser'vientes seu obscæ' næ, Me'dea, Veren'da, Pedes, Inguen, Genita'lia, Gennet'ica, Gymna, Membra puden'da, Organa generatio'ni inser'vientia, O. sexna'lia seu genitalia, (F.) Organes génitæux, Parties génitales ou honteuses ou génétoires ou nobles ou sexuelles ou naturelles, Les Parties, Génétoires. The parts that are inservient to the reproduction of the species. These are very different in the male and female. In man, they are numerous; some secreting the sperm, as the testicles and their appendages; others retaining it, as the vesiculae seminales; and another for carrying it into the organs of the female, — the penis. In the female, the parts of generation form an apparatus, perhaps more complicated than that of the male. Some are inservient to copulation, as the vulva, vagina, &c., others to conception and the preservation of the product for a determinate time, as the uterus and its appendages; whilst others concur in the aliment of the infant after birth, as the mamma.

GENITALE, Sperm — g. Caput, Glans.

GENITALIA, Genital organs — g. Viri, Pudibilia.

GENITO-CRURAL NERVE, Nervus genito-cruralis, Subpu'bial or Inter'nal inguinal nerve. A branch of the second lumbar nerve, which passes through the psoas muscle, and, approaching the femoral arch, divides into two branches, — an internal, scrotal, or genital, nervus spermaticus seu puden'dus exter'nus, and an external or femoral cutaneous branch, lumbo-inguinalis.

GENITO-URINARY, see Uro-genital.

GÉNITOIRES, Genital Organs.

GENITURA. That which is fecundated or engendered in the maternal womb. This word has been used synonymously with embryo, foetus, and infant. Also, the sperm; and the penis. See GONÆ.

GENIUM, Mentum.

GENNESIS, Generation.

GENNETICA, Genital Organs.

GENNETICOCNESMUS, from γεννητικός, 'genital,' and κνησμος, 'itching.' Itching of the genital organs.

GENNETICON'OSI, Genneticou'si from γεννητικός, 'genital,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Diseases of the genitals.

GENNETICUS, Genital.

GENOÀ, CLIMATE OF. The climate of this Italian city and its vicinity has been often selected as favourable for the phthisical valetudinarian during the winter; but it is now admitted to be decidedly improper for pulmonary affections, being subject to frequent and rapid changes of temperature, and to dry cold winds from the north, alternately with warm moist winds from the south-east. — Sir James Clark.

GENONU'SI, Morbi sexūs, from γενος, 'sex,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Sexual diseases.

GENOPLASTIC, Meloplastic.

GENOS, Sex.

GENOU, Genu.

GÉNOUILLÉS, (Corps.) Corpora geniculata.

GENOUILLET, Convallaria polygonatum.

GENRE, Genus.

GENSANG, Panax quinquefolium.

GENIA, Genetianina.

GENTIAN, (from Genetius, King of Illyria, who used some species medicinally), Genetian lutea, Triosteum — g. Blue, Genetian catesbæi — g. Catesbæian, Genetian catesbæi — g. Horse, Triosteum — g. White, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Southern, Genetian catesbæi — g. White, Triosteum — g. Yellow, Genetian lutea, see Calumba.

GENTIANA, G. lutea — g. Alba, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Amarylloides, G. quinqueflora — g. Cachenlaguen, Chironia Chilensis — g. Centaurium, Chironia centaurium.

GENTIANA CATESBÆI; G. Catesbiana, Blue Gentian, Ph. U. S., Catesbian or Southern Gentian, Bluebells, Bitterroot. Ord. Gentianaceæ. It is a pure and simple bitter, and the root may be used wherever that of the Gentiana lutea is proper.

GENTIANA CHIRAYTA, G. Chirayita, Henricea Pharmaceutica, Sicertia, Agathites chirayita, Opheelia chirayita, Chiretia, Chirayita, Chirayita. A native of India, which has been much employed in that country, in dyspepsia, and as an antiperiodic in intermittents. It is preferred by some to sarsaparilla, where the latter is considered to be indicated,—as after large quantities of mercury have been taken, or where profuse salivation has been induced. It has also been advised in atonic leucorrhœa. It yields its virtues to alcohol and water.

GENTIANA CRINITA, see G. quinqueflora—G. Gardii, Chironia centaureum.

GENTIANA LUTEA. The systematic name of the officinal gentian; Gentiana, G. major seu colerum seu rubra, Sicertia lutea, Asterias lutea, Yellow Gentian, Felwort. Ord. Gentianæ. (F.) Gentiane jaune. This is a plant common in the mountains of Europe. The root is almost inodorous, extremely bitter, and yields its virtues to ether, alcohol, and water. It is tonic and stomachic; and in large doses, aperient. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. It is most frequently, however, used in infusion or tincture.

GENTIANA MAJOR, G. lutea—G. Ochroleuca, see G. saponaria—G. Peruviana, Chironia Chilensis.

GENTIANA QUINQUEFLO'RA, G. omarilloides, Fire-flowered Gentian; and GENTIANA CRINITA, Fringed Gentian, indigenous, are possessed of like virtues.

GENTIANA RUBRA, G. lutea.

GENTIANA SAPON'RIA, Soapwort Gentian, and G. ochroleuca, Sampson's Snakeroot; indigenous, have the properties of Gentiana lutea; and are said also to be diaphoretic.

GENTIANA VETERUM, G. lutea.

GENTIANE JAUNE, Gentiana lutea.

GENTIANINA, Gentianine, Gentianin, Gentiana, Gentia. A supposed neutral substance, obtained from gentian, and, by some, presumed to be its active principle. It is not so.

GENTILITIUS, Hereditary.

GENU, Gony, γόνυ, (F.) Genou. The articulation of the leg with the thigh;—the Femoro-tibial or knee-joint, the knee. It is the most complicated in the body, and is formed by the inferior extremity of the femur, the superior extremity of the tibia, and the rotula. The articular surfaces of the bones are covered by layers of cartilage—more or less thick—and by the synovial membrane of the articulation. The soft parts of this joint are,—the ligamentum patellæ, two lateral ligaments, distinguished by the names internal and external; a posterior ligament, Ligamentum posticum Winslowii; two crucial ligaments,—the one anterior, and the other posterior; two interarticular fibro-cartilages; some albugineous fibres, which form an imperfect capsule, &c. The knee receives its arteries from the femoral and popliteal. They bear the name articular. Its veins have the same distribution as the arteries, and discharge their blood into the saphena and crural. Its nerves are furnished by the sciatic, popliteal, and crural. The joint is protected by the tendons and muscles which surround it.

The French use the term Articulation en genou for a joint, in which the head of a bone is received into a bony cavity of another, where it rolls and moves in all directions.

GENU CORPORIS CALLOSI, see Corpus callosum—G. Varum, Entogonyancon.

GENUGRA, Gonagra.

GENUINUS, Legitimus.

GENUS, (F.) Genre. A collection or group of species, analogous to each other, and which can be united by common characters. When a species cannot be referred to a known genus, it constitutes a distinct one.

GENUS CURATIONIS, Ratio medendi.

GENY, Genys.

GENYANTRAL'GIA, from γένυς, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRI'TIS, from γένυς, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRUM, Antrum of Highmore.

GENYOCYANANCHE, Cynanche parotideæ.

GENYOPLASTY, see Genioplasty.

GENYS, γένυς, Genn, γένυ, 'the jaw;' also the chin. See Genæ.

GEOFFRÆA INERMIS, Geoffræa, G. racemosa seu Piso'nis seu Jamaicenis, Vonacop'ona Americ'na, Geoffroya, Cabbag'ium, And'ra inermis seu racemosa, Cabbage Tree, Cabbage Bark Tree, Worm-bark Tree. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Deandria. The odour of the bark is very unpleasant. It is antihelmintic and anthartic. Dose of the powder, ℥j to ℥ij.

GEOFFRÆA JAMAICENSIS, G. inermis—G. Pisonis, G. inermis—G. Racemosa, G. inermis.

GEOFFRÆA SURINAMENSIS, And'ra Surinamensis, has similar properties.

Huttenschmidt has separated their active principles, to which he has given the names Jamaïcine and Surinamine. They are all alkaline.

GEOFFRÆA VERMIFUGA, Andira ibai, Arriba, Skolom'ra Fernambucen'sis; a South American plant, has a fruit, the almond of which, called angéline, has a reputation at Rio Janeiro as a vermifuge. Dose, a grain to fifteen; or it may be given in infusion.

GEOFFROYA, Geoffræa inermis—G. Jamaicensis, G. inermis.

GEOGRAPHY, MEDICAL, Geographia Medica, Nosogeography, Nosogeographia. The description of the surface of the globe as regards the influence of situation on the health, vital functions, and diseases of its inhabitants, vegetable and animal; but principally on those of man.

GEOPHAGISM, Geophagia, Gæophug'ia, from γη, 'earth,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' The act or practice of eating earth. See Chthonophagia.

GEORGIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The water of Indian Springs in Butts County, is sulphureous. The Warm Springs, in Meriwether County, have a temperature of 90° Fahr. Madison's Springs, in Madison County, are a chalybeate; and so are Roseland's Springs, in Cass County. All these are frequented by invalids.

GERÆOLOG'IA, Geratolog'ia, from γῆρας, 'old age,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine, or a description, of old age.

GERAFLOURIS, Dianthus caryophyllus.

GERANIS, from γῆρας, 'a crane,' which it resembled. A bandage, used by the ancients in cases of fractured clavicle. Some authors attribute it to Hippocrates; others, to Perigenes.

GERANIUM, same etymon, because its pistil is long, like the bill of the crane. Ord. Geraniaceæ. The Crane's Bill.

GERANIUM CAROLINIANUM, see G. Robertianum—G. Fœtidum, G. Robertianum—G. Maculatum, see Geranium, and G. Moschatum.

GERANIUM MOSCHATUM, Erod'ium Moschatum, (F.) Bec de grue musqué. A European plant, esteemed to be excitant and diaphoretic.

GERANIUM NOVEBORACENSIS, G. Maculatum—G. Purpureum, G. Robertianum.

GERANIUM ROBERTIA'NUM, G. foetidum seu purpureum, Stinking Crane's Bill, Herb Robert, (F.) Herbe à Robert, Bec de Grue Robertin. This plant was, at one time, used as an antispasmodic and slight stimulant, as well as for an external application in various painful sores and inflammations.

GERANIUM CAROLINIA'NUM, has similar properties.

Most of the species of geranium have been used as astringents. In some of the northwestern parts of the United States, the root of Geranium maculatum—Geranium, (Ph. U. S.)—G. Noveboracense, Spotted Crane's Bill, Crowfoot, Alum root, Tormentil, Stork bill—is called Rucine à Bequet, after a person of that name. It is highly extolled by the Western Indians as an antisyphilitic.

GERAS, Senectus.

GERÇURE, Fissure.

GERM, Germen, Blastè, Blaste'ma, (F.) Germe. The rudiment of a new being, not yet developed, or which is still adherent to the mother.

GERM FORCE, Plastic force.

GERMANDER, COMMON, Teucrium chamædrys—G. Creeping, Teucrium chamædrys—G. Marum, Teucrium marum—G. Small, Teucrium chamædrys—G. Water, Teucrium scordium.

GERMANDRÉE AQUATIQUE, Teucrium scordium—G. Maritime, Teucrium marum—G. Officinale, Teucrium chamædrys—G. Scorodone, Teucrium scordium.

GERME FAUX, Conception, false.

GERMEN, Germ, Speru—G. Dentale, Dental Pulp—G. Falsum, Mole—G. Spurium, Conception, false.

GERMINAL, Germinative, Germinalis, Germinativus, (F.) Germinatif; from germen, a germ. Relating or belonging to germ; as "germinal cell."

GERMINAL CELL, see Cytoplast—G. Membrane and Vesicle, see Molecule—G. Nucleus, see Molecule—G. Spot, see Molecule—G. Vesicle, see Molecule.

GERMS, DISSEMINATION OF, Panspermia—G. Pre-existence of, see Preformation.

GEROBOS'CIA, Gerontobos'cia, from γρηας, 'old age,' and βοσκν, 'food.' Nourishment or maintenance proper for the aged.

GEROCOMEUM, Gerocomeum.

GEROCOM'IA, Gerocomi'acè, Gerontocom'icè, from γρηων, γρηωντος, 'an aged person,' and κομειν, 'to take care of.' The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of the health of the aged;—the hygiene of old people.

GEROCOMEICE, Gerocomia.

GEROCOM'UM, Gerocome'um, Presbyodochi'um, Gerontocomi'um, Gerotrophe'um. Same etymon. An hospital for the aged.

GÉROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GÉROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GERONTATROPHIA, Marasmus senilis.

GERONTOBOS'CIA, Geroboscia.

GERONTOCOMEICE, Gerocomia.

GERONTOCOMIUM, Gerocomeum.

GERONTO'PIA, from γρηων, γρηωντος, 'an old person,' and οφθ, 'the eye.' Weakness of sight of the aged.

GERONTOTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GERONTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GEROTOX'ON, Gerontox'on, Gerontotox'on, Leuca'ma Gerontotox'on, Mac'ula cor'neæ arcuata, Arcus senilis; from γρηων, γρηωντος, 'an old person,' and τοξον, 'a bow.' A bow-shaped opacity at the outer margin of the cornea, common to old people.

GEROTROPHEUM, Gerocomeum.

GEROTROPHIA, Geroboscia.

GERSA, Plumbi subcarbonas—G. Scrpentariæ, see Arum maculatum.

GÉSIER, Ventriculus callosus.

GESTA, 'things done,' from gerere, gestum, 'to do,' 'carry.' Acta. A Latin term, introduced by Hallé into medical language, to designate, among the objects which belong to hygiene, the functions which consist in the voluntary movements of muscles and organs. In the class Gesta are found sleep, the waking state, movements or locomotion, and rest.

GESTA'TION, Gesta'tio, Phora, from gestare, gestatum, 'to carry.' The time during which a female who has conceived carries the embryo in her uterus. See Pregnancy. Gestation, likewise, signifies the bearing or carrying of an individual; a kind of exercise easier than that in which he moves by virtue of his own powers. Thus, we speak of gestation on horseback, in a carriage, &c.

GESTATION, PROTRACT'ED, Pregnancy protracted beyond the usual period. See Pregnancy.

GESTICULA'TION, Gesticula'tio, same etymon. The act of making many gestures; a symptom in disease, which indicates great cerebral erethism. It is met with in numerous affections.

GETHYL'IS SPIRA' LIS. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amarylloideæ, the orange-coloured fruit of which has a peculiar fragrance. An infusion in spirit or tincture is used in flatulence and colic.

GEUM, G. rivale—G. Caryophyllatum, G. urbanum—G. Nutans, G. rivale—G. Palustre, G. rivale.

GEUM RIVALE, G. palustrè seu nutans, Caryophyllata aquat'ica seu nutans, Benedic'ta sylvestris, Water or Purple avens, Choc'olate root, (F.) Benoîte aquatique ou des Ruisseaux. Ord. Rosaceæ. Nat. Syst. Icosandra Polygynia. The root of this plant—Geum (Ph. U. S.)—is astringent. It has been much extolled in the cure of intermittents, diarrhœa, hemorrhage, &c.

GEUM URBA'NUM, G. caryophyllatum, Caryophyllata, C. enlg'aris seu urba'na, Caryophyllus vulg'aris, Sauamun'da, Lagophthal'mus, Caryophyllata, Janamun'da, Herba benedic'ta, Common avens, Herb Bennet, Yellow avens, Star of the North, Blessed herb, (F.) Benoîte. The root of this plant has a smell not unlike that of cloves. Taste bitterish, austere; virtues yielded to water and alcohol. It has been used in intermittents, dysentery, chronic diarrhœa, debility, &c. Dose, \mathfrak{ss} to $\mathfrak{ʒj}$ of the powder.

GEUM VERNUM, Western early avens, has the same properties as GEUM VIRGINIA'NUM, White avens, Avens, Even root, Choc'olate root, Bennet, Throat root, Cure-all, (F.) Benoîte de Virginie, is common from Maine to Carolina and Kentucky, flowering in June and July. It has the same medical properties as Geum rivale.

GEUMA, Taste.

GEUSION'OSI, from γευσis, 'taste,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Gensionu'si. Diseases of the organ or sense of taste.

GEUSIS, Taste. Rarely, the root of the tongue—Radix lingueæ.

GEUTHMOS, Taste.

GEZIB, see Pastinaca opoponax.

GÉZIT, Cagot.

GÉZITAIN, Cagot.

GHERKIN, see Cucumis sativus.

GHITTA JEMOCO, Cambogia.

GIALAPPA, Convolvulus Jalapi.

GIANT, Gigas, (F.) Géant. One much above the ordinary stature; of excessive growth—Macrosomia, Macrosomat'ia, Magnitudo gigante'a, (F.) Géantisme.

GIBBA, Hump.
 GIBBER, Hump.
 GIBBEROSITAS, Gibbositas.
 GIBBOSITAS, Gibberositas, Cyphosis, Rhachio-cyphosis, from (F.) Gibbenz, (L.) Gibbus, gibbus, 'something arched or vaulted; prominent.' Gibbosity, Gibbousness, Curvature of the spine, Hyplo'ma. A phenomenon which occurs in different diseases, particularly in rickets and caries of the vertebrae. See Hump.

GIBBOSITAS CARIOSA, Vertebral disease.
 GIBBOUSNESS, Gibbositas.
 GIBBUS, Hump—g. Pottii, Vertebral disease.
 GIBLETS, According to Minsheu, from Gobbet, 'a mouthful' [?]; but, according to Junius, from (F.) Gibier, 'game.' The word seems to be the old (F.) Gibeloz, Gibélet, &c., i. e. Gibier, (L.) Gibbarium, 'food,' (F.) Abattis. It means, generally, the parts which are cut off from a goose before it is roasted. Also, the extremities of fowls, such as the head, wings, feet; to which are sometimes added the liver, gizzard, &c. Soup, made from these, is moderately nutritious.

GIDDINESS, Vertigo.
 GIDDY, Vertiginous.
 GIGANTEUS, Gigantic.
 GIGANTESQUE, Gigantic.
 GIGANTIC, Giganteus, Gigantoides, (F.) Gigantesque. Relating to one much above the ordinary stature.

GIGANTODES, Gigantic.
 GIGARTINA HELMINTHOCHORTON, Corallina Corsicana—g. Lichenoides, Fucus amylicus.

GIGARUS SERPENTARIA, Arum draconium.

GIGAS, Giant.
 GILARUM, Thymus serpyllum.
 GILEAD, BALM OF, see Amyris opobalsamum.
 GILET DE FORCE, Waistcoat, strait.
 GILL, Glechoma hederacea.
 GILL-GO-BY-GROUND, Glechoma hederacea.
 GILLA THEOPHRASTI, Zinci sulphas—g.

Vitrioli, Zinci sulphas.

GILLE'NIA STIPULACEA, Small-flowered Indian Physic has the same properties as GILLE'NIA TRIFOLIATA, Spiræa trifoliata, Common Gille'nia, Indian Physic, Western Dropwort, Indian Hippo, Ip'ecac, Bozeman's root, Meadow sweet, Beauumont root, (F.) Gillénie. Ord. Rosaceæ. See, Synt, Icosandria Pentagynia. The root of this shrub, and of G. stipulacea—Gille'nia, (Ph. U. S.)—which grows plentifully in the United States, is a safe and efficacious emetic, in the dose of about 30 grains. It resembles ipecacuanha in its properties.

GILLÉ'NIE, Gillenia trifoliata.
 GILLIFLOWER, Dianthus caryophyllus.
 GILLON, Viscum album.

GIMBERNAT'S LIGAMENT. A fibrous, triangular expansion, which is detached from the posterior and inner part of the crural arch, and is inserted into the crest of the pubis. This ligament forms the inner part of the superior aperture of the crural canal. It is one of the most frequent causes of strangulation in crural hernia.

GIN, Hollands Gene'va, (F.) Genièvre. This spirit, which is distilled from corn and juniper berries, or from some substitute for them, is largely used in Great Britain, and is extremely detrimental, to the lower classes particularly. It possesses the properties of other spirituous liquors, but is diuretic, and, in popular medicine, is more used than other varieties, in cases of colic or intestinal pain of any kind. Schiedam Schnapps is understood to be Hollands of good quality. See Spirit.

GIN DRUNKER'S LIVER, Liver, nutmeg—g. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

GINGEMBRE, Amomum zingiber.

GINGER, Amomum zingiber.

GINGER BEER POWDER, see Amomum zingiber.

GINGER, GARDEN, Capsicum—g. Indian, Asarum Canadense—g. Jamaica, concentrated essence of, see Amomum zingiber—g. Preserved, see Amomum zingiber—g. Wild, Asarum Canadense.

GINGIBRA' CHIUM, from gingivæ, 'the gums,' and brachium, 'the arm.' A name given to the scurvy, because the gums and arms are chiefly affected by it. It has also been called Gingipe'dium, because the lower limbs are in many cases the seat of scorbutic spots. See Porphyra nautica.

GINGIPEDIUM, see Gingibrachium, Porphyra nautica.

GINGIVÆ, from gignere, 'to beget,' because the teeth are, as it were, begotten in them. [?] The gums, ovla, U'la, Carnic'ula, (F.) Genives. The portion of the mucous membrane of the mouth which covers the maxillary bones to the level of the alveolar arches. The gums are formed of a red tissue, more or less solid, and of a fibro-mucous nature, which adheres strongly to the necks of the teeth, and transmits, between the roots and their alveoli, a very thin expansion,—the alveolo-dental periosteum. The gums fix the teeth and contribute greatly to their solidity. In the aged, after the loss of the teeth, they become fibrous and very solid, and are inservient to mastication.

GINGIVALIS, Ulcicus, U'licus; from gingivæ, 'the gums.' Relating to the gums.

GINGLYMOID, Ginglymoï'dens, Ginglymoï'des, from γινγλυμος, 'a ginglymus or hinge,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling a ginglymus or hinge. An epithet applied to joints which resemble a hinge, as a ginglymoid joint.

GINGLYMUS, Cardinamentum, Cardo, 'a hinge.' (F.) Charnière, Articulation en charnière. A species of diarthrodial articulation, which only admits of motion in two directions, like a hinge,—as the knee-joint or elbow-joint.

GINSENG, Panax quinquefolium—g. Asiatic, Panax Schinseng—g. Blue, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes—g. Yellow, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes—g. Horse, Triosteum—g. White, Triosteum.

GIRAFFE, Dengue.
 GIRARD-ROUSSIN, Asarum.

GIRDLE, Cingulum.

GIRL. This seems, formerly, to have been an appellation common to both sexes. Many etymologists deduce the word from the Su. Goth. Karl, 'a man.' It means a young female, (L.) Fili'ia, from φίλειν, 'to love.' (F.) Fille.

GIROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GIROFLÉE JAUNE, Chairanthus cheiri.

GIROLE, Sium sisarum.

GIRON, Arum maculatum.

GIRSLE, Cartilage.

GIRN, Anhelatio.

GISSA, Cynanche parotidæa.

GIZZARD, Ventriculus callosus.

GIZZEN, see Parturition.

GLABELLA, Mesophryon.

GLABELLAD, see Glabellar.

GLABELLAR, from glabella, 'the space between the eyebrows.' An epithet for an aspect towards the glabella.—Barelay. Glabellad is used adverbially by the same writer to signify 'towards the glabellar aspect.'

GLABRITIES, Calvities.

GLACE, Ice.

GLACIAL, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum.

GLACIALIS HUMOR, Crystalline.

GLACIES, Ice.

GLADI'OLUS, diminutive of gladius, 'a sword,' from the sword-like shape of its leaf. Machæriou—g. Cæruleus, Iris Germanica.

GLADIOLUS COMMUNIS, G. vulgaris, Victoria'sisratini'daseu femine'a, Cornflag, (F.) Glæuel. Ord. Iridiæ. The root of this plant has been considered aphrodisiac. Applied in cataplasms, it has been extolled against serofulous tumours.

GLADIOLUS LUTEUS, Iris pseudacorus—g. Vulgaris, G. communis.

GLADIUS, Penis.

GLAMA, Lippitudo, Chassie.

GLAND, Glan'dula, Gran'dula, (diminutive of glans, 'an acorn, a kernel.')

Aden. The ancient anatomists gave this name to a number of organs of a texture generally soft, and a shape more or less globular, but differing greatly in their nature and functions. They applied it, for instance, 1. To those organs which separate from the blood, any fluid whatever. When such organs were composed of several lobules, united by common vessels, they received the name conglomerate glands, as the parotid, pancreas, &c. 2. To the reddish and spongy, knot-like bodies, which are met with in the course of the lymphatics. These they called conglobate glands;—see Ganglion, (lymphatic;) and 3dly and lastly, to various other organs, whose intimate texture and functions are still unknown, as the Pineal gland, Pituitary gland, Glands of Paechioni, Thyroid gland, Thymus gland, Supra-renal glands, &c. Chaussier restricts the word gland to those softish, granular, lobated organs, composed of vessels, and a particular texture, of which there are in the human body, the lachrymal, salivary, and mammary, the testicles, the liver, pancreas, and kidneys. These permanent glands, or glands with permanent ducts, are all destined to draw from the blood the molecules necessary for the formation of new fluids, and to convey these fluids externally, by means of one or more excretory ducts. Several glands, besides their excretory ducts, have especial reservoirs, in which the fluids, secreted by them, collect, remain for a greater or less space of time, and undergo slight modifications before being evacuated;—such are, the gall-bladder for the liver, the urinary bladder for the kidneys, &c. Each gland has an organization peculiar to it, but we know not the intimate nature of the glandular texture.—Malpighi believed that the vessels terminate in small, solid masses, to which he gave the name—glandular grains or acini. In these, he considered, the excretory ducts originate. Rayseh thought that the glands are entirely vascular, and that the excretory ducts are immediately continuous with the vasa afferentia, &c. The best view, perhaps, is, that the exhaling or secreting vessel is distributed on the animal membrane, which forms the blind extremity of the excretory duct, and that the secretion is effected through it by means of cells.

The term glande (F.) is sometimes appropriated to the tumour formed by inflammation or engorgement of a lymphatic ganglion.

GLANDULAIRE, Glandular.

GLAND'ULAR, Glandularis, Glandulosus, (F.) Glandulaire, Glanduleux. Having the appearance, form, or texture of Glands; as a glandular body, a glandular texture, &c.

GLANDULAR SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney.

GLANDULE OF MALPIGHI, see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLANDULEUX, Glandular.

GLANDULO'SO-CARNEUS. Ruysch gives this epithet to fleshy excrescences which he found in the bladder.

GLANDULOSUS, Glandular.

GLANS, genitive glandis, ('an acorn.') Balanus, Cylindrus, Carpus, Caput, C. Penis, Genitule caput, (F.) Gland. The extremity of the penis and of the elitoris. The glans penis is of a conical, slightly flattened shape. It is continuous with the urethra, which opens at its apex; and is circumscribed by a projecting edge, called the Corona glandis, behind which is a depression. Callum seu Sulcus retroglandularis. It is covered by a thin mucous membrane, is furnished, at its base, with sebaceous follicles, called glandulæ odoriferae Tysoni, the secretion from which is termed Sanguis preputii; and can, almost always, be covered by the reflection of the skin, called the prepuce. Lastly, it is formed of a spongy texture, susceptible of being thrown into erection.

GLANS, Bronchocele, Pessary, Suppository.

GLANS CLITORIDIS is smaller. It imperforate, and likewise covered with a sort of prepuce formed by the mucous membrane of the vulva.

GLANS JOVIS THEOPHRASTI, Fagus castanea—g. Ulme, Olecranon—g. Unguentaria, Guilandina uoriga, Myrobalanus.

GLAREA, Gravel.

GLASS, Vitrum.

GLAUBER'S SALTS, Soda, sulphate of.

GLAUCEO, Glaucoma.

GLAUCOMA, from γλαυκος, 'sea-green.' Glaucosis, Glaucosa, Cataracta glauca, Oculus caecus, Caecus, Phtharisma glaucosa, Parapsis glaucosa, Apyglauca. Amongst the older pathologists, this word was used synonymously with cataract. It is now ordinarily applied to opacity of the vitreous humour or of the tunica hyaloidea, which manifests itself by a grayish, or greenish spot, apparent through the pupil. The diagnosis is generally difficult; and the disease is almost always incurable.

GLAUCOMA WOULHOESI, Cataract.

GLAUCOSIS, Glaucoma.

GLAYEUL, Gladiolus vulgaris—g. Pnaut, Iris foetidissima.

GLECHOMA HEDERA'CEA. G. hirsuta, Nepeta glechoma, Hederula, Chamaelema, C. hederacea, Calamintha hederacea, Calamintha humilior, Chamaecissus, Hedera terrestris, Nepeta glechoma, Pannacea pectoris, Ground-ivy, Gill, Gill-go-by-ground, Alehoof, Robin runaway, (F.) Lierre terrestre, Torrette, Rondelet, Herbe Saint-Jean. This plant—Ord. Labiate—has a strong smell, and a bitterish, somewhat aromatic, taste. It has been considered expectorant and tonic.

GLECHOMA HIRSUTA, G. hederacea.

GLECHON, Mentha pulegium.

GLECHONITIS. Wine, impregnated with the Glechon, γληχων, mentha pulegium or pennyroyal.

GLEEFING, Strabismus.

GLEET, see Gonorrhoea.

GLEME, Chaussie, Lippitudo.

GLÈNÈ, γληνη. The pupil. The anterior part of the eye. The eyeball. The eye. According to some, the crystalline lens. Also, a glenoid cavity.

GLENGORE, Syphilis.

GLENGOUR, Syphilis.

GLENITIS, Phacitis.

GLENN'S SPRINGS, see South Carolina, Mineral waters of.

GLENOID, Glene.

GLE'OID, Glenoid'al, Gleuoid'alis, Gleuoid'ides, Gleno'des, Gleuoid'ens, from γληνη, and ειδος, 'resemblance.' (F.) Glénoïde, Glénoïdale, Glénoïdien. Any shallow, articular cavity, γληνη, gleni, which receives the head of a bone; such as, 1. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the scapula, Fossa gleuoidæa, Omocol'yle, Acetabulum humeri, Cavitas humeri gleuoides, Entglenoides, is situate at the anterior angle of the scapula; and is articulated with the head of the humerus. 2. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the temporal bone. It is seated between the two roots of the zygomatic process, and receives the condyle of the lower jaw.

GLENOID LIG'AMENT, (F.) Ligament Glénoïdien, is a fibro-cartilaginous ring or bourrelet, which seems formed by the expansion of the tendon of the long head of the biceps brachialis, and surrounds the glenoid cavity of the scapula, the depth of which it increases.

GLÉNOÏDALE, Glenoid.

GLEYED, see Strabismus.

GLIADINE, Haematin.

GLISCHRAS'MA, Glischrottes, from γλισχραιω, (γλα, 'gline,') 'I become glutinous.' Lentor, visciditas. — Hippocrates.

GLISCHROCH'OLUS, from γλισχροσ, 'viseid,' and χολη, 'bile.' An epithet for excrement which is glutinous and bilious.

GLISCHROTES, Glischrasma.

GLISOMARGO, Creta.

GLISSEMENT DU LAMBEAU, see Flap.

GLISTER, Clyster.

GLOBE, Bandage (head)—g. of the Eye, see Eye—g. Flower, Cephalanthus occidentalis, Trollius laxus.

GLOBULAIRE PURGATIVE, Globularia alypum.

GLOBULARIA ALYPUM, Globularia, Globularia, Montpellier Turbith, (F.) Globulaire purgative, Turbith blanc. Ord. Globularia. The leaves of this plant are bitter, and have been used in intermittents and in constipation. See Alypum.

GLOBULE, Globulus, Sphæriou, Sphæ'rula. A small globe.

GLOBULES OF THE BLOOD, Blood globules, Blood-corpuscles, Blood-disks, Blood-vesicles, Globuli seu Vesiculae seu Sphaerulae seu Folliculi seu Corpuscula seu Cellulae seu Particulae seu Granula sanguinis, (F.) Globules du sang, Disques sanguins, are small, circular bodies, which are particularly observable when the transparent parts of cold-blooded animals are examined by the aid of the microscope; and are met with in the blood of all animals. They are circular in the mammalia, and elliptical in birds and cold-blooded animals; are flat in all animals, and generally composed of a central nucleus enclosed in a membranous sac. Chemically, they consist of haematin and globulin—haemato-globulin. The chemical composition of the nucleus, where it exists,—it does not in man,—has been by some regarded as fibrin; by others, as fat; and by others, again, as a species of horn, to which the name uuclein has been given.

Besides these, the blood contains white globules, (F.) Globules blancs, Leucocytes, which are probably lymph and chyle corpuscles in process of development into red corpuscles.

Dried blood globules of the ox have been given internally in cases of anæmia.

GLOBULE D'ARANTIUS, see Sigmoid valves—g. du Sang. Globule of the blood.

GLOBULES BLANCS, see Globules of the blood—g. Ganglion, see Nymph—g. Chyle, see Chyle—g. Lymph, see Lymph—g. Milk, see Milk—g. Mucous, see Mucus—g. Pus, see Pus—g. Pyoid, see Pus.

GLOBULI ARTERIARUM TERMINI, see Acinus—g. Mammillares, see Mammillary eminence—g. Sanguinis, Globules of the blood—g. Tartari martialis, Ferrum tartarizatum—g. Tartaratis ferri et lixivie, Ferrum tartarizatum.

GLOBULIN, Glob'uline, Blood ca'sein. The colourless substance that remains after the abstraction of the colouring matter of the blood-corpuscle. It is a peculiar albuminous principle. The globulin of Berzelius consists of the envelopes of the blood globules, and of the part of their contents that remains after the extraction of the hæmatin. Lecanu regards it as identical with albumen; and, according to Mulder, it belongs to the combinations of protein. Robin and Verdeil consider it to be albuminose.

The term globulin is likewise given by M. Donné to small granulations appertaining to the chyle, which are observable in the blood with the microscope. They are small, white, roundish, isolated or irregularly-agglomerated grains; of about the 1-300 of a millimètre in diameter, and are regarded by M. Donné as the first elements of the blood globules. They are the white granulated corpuscles of Mandl.

GLOBULISM, Homœopathy.

GLOBULUS ARANTII, see Sigmoid valves—g. Nasi, see Nasus—g. Sanguineus, Punctum saliens—g. Stapedius Ossis, Os orbiculare.

GLOBUS HYSTERICUS, Angone—g. Major, see Epididymis—g. Minor, see Epididymis—g. Martialis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

GLOBUS UTERI'NUS. A term applied by accoucheurs to the round tumour, formed by the uterus in the lower part of the abdomen immediately after delivery.

GLOMERATE, Conglomerate.

GLOMERULE, Glomer'ulus; from glomus, 'a clow of thread.' A ball or clow, formed by an agglomeration of vessels; as Glomerule of Malpighi; see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOMERULI RENALES, Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOSSA, Glotta, 'the tongue.' The power of speech. Speech. Hence:

GLOSSAGRA, Glossalgia.

GLOSSAL'GIA, Gloss'agra, Glottal'gia, Glott'agra, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the tongue.

GLOSSANIS'CHUM, Glossanoch'eus, Glossan'

ochum, from γλωσσα, 'tongue,' and ανειχειν, 'to hold up.' An instrument for holding up the tongue.

GLOSSANOCHÆUS, Glossanischum.

GLOSSANOCHUM, Glossanischum.

GLOSS'ANTHRAX, Pestis gloss'anthrax, (F.) Boussole, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and ανδραξ, 'a carbuncle.' Carbuncle of the Tongue. A disease more common in cattle than in man.

GLOSSEPIGLOT'TIC, Gloss'epiglott'icus. Relating to the tongue and epiglottis, as Ligamentum glossepiglott'icum.

GLOSSIANUS, Lingual muscle.

GLOSSITIS, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Glosson'eus inflammatorius, Angi'na lingua'ria seu lingua'lis, Inflammatio Lingue, Inflammation of the tongue, (F.) Inflammation de la Langue. When confined to the mucous membrane, it is of slight importance. That which affects the whole of the tongue is a serious disease, and requires the vigorous use of antiphlogistics. It is rare.

GLOSSO, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' In composition, relating or appertaining to the tongue.

GLOSSOC'ACË, from glosso, and κακος, 'evil.' Ulceration of the tongue, with symptoms of adynamic fever.

GLOSSOCARCINO'MA, Glossoc'ei'rhus, Carcino'ma Lingue, from glosso, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the tongue.

GLOSSOCAT'OCHEUS, Glossocat'ochë, Catagloss'um, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κατεχω, 'I arrest.' Lingua Deten'tor, (F.) Abaisseur de la langue. An instrument, the invention of which is attributed to Paulus of Ægina, and which was employed to depress the tongue, in order to examine diseases of the fauces. It was composed of two branches; one of which had, at its extremity, a plate for depressing the tongue; whilst the other, shaped like a horse-shoe, was applied under the chin. The finger, or the handle of a spoon, or a spatula, is generally used in similar cases. See Cataglossum.

GLOSSOCE'LE, from glosso, and κηλη, 'hernia,' 'tumour.' Hernia of the Tongue, Paragloss'is, Prolap'sus lingue, Glossomeg'istis, Glossopto'sis. Projection of the tongue from the mouth. It depends, generally, on an inflammatory swelling of the organ. At times, however, a chronic glossocele, or sort of œdematous engorgement, is met with; which proceeds to a great length, and deforms the dental arches, the lips, &c. Inflammatory glossocele must be combated by antiphlogistics. In the œdematous kind, such as is sometimes caused by excessive salivation, the infiltrated fluid may be pressed back by the hand of the practitioner, to get the tongue behind the teeth; and it may be kept there by a piece of gauze tied over the mouth. The chronic, elongated kind sometimes requires amputation of a portion of the organ.

GLOSSOCOMA, Glossospasmus.

GLOSSOC'OMON, Glossoc'omion, Glossocom'ion, from glosso, and κομω, 'to guard.' The ancients gave this name to a small case for holding the tongues of their wind-instruments. By extension, it was applied to the box or cradle in which fractured limbs were kept. We find, in the ancient writers, a Glossocomion of Hippocrates, of Nymphodoros, Galen, &c.

GLOSSODESMUS, Frænum lingue.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOT'TIC, Glosso-epiglott'icus. That which belongs to the tongue and epiglottis. Some anatomists have so denominated certain fleshy fibres, which pass from the base of the tongue towards the epiglottis. These muscles are more evident in some of the mammalia than in man; and their use seems to be,—to raise the epiglottis, and to remove it farther from the glottis. Santorini, who described them after Eustachius, calls them Retractores Epiglottidis.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOTTIC LIGAMENT, Frænum seu Frænum epiglottidis, Ligamentum membracæ-cœcum, Velamen linguae. Three folds of mucous membrane, which connect the anterior surface of the epiglottis with the root of the tongue.

GLOSSOGRAPHY, Glossographia, from glossos, and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the tongue.

GLOSSO-HYAL. A name given by Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, to the posterior cornua of the os hyoides.

GLOSSOLOGY, Glossologyia, from glossos, and λογος, 'a treatise,' 'a discourse.' A treatise on the tongue. Nomenclature.

GLOSSOLYSIS, Glossoplegia, Paralysis linguae, P. Nervi hypoglossi, from glossos, and λυσις, 'solution.' Paralysis of the tongue.

GLOSSOMANTIA, Prognosis ex lingua, from glossos, and μαντεια, 'divination.' Prognosis from the state of the tongue.

GLOSSOMEGISTUS, Glossocœle, Paraglossa.

GLOSSONCUS, from glossos, and ογκος, 'tumour.' Econcoësis linguae. Swelling of the tongue.

GLOSSONCUS INFLAMMATORIUS, Glossitis.

GLOSSO-PALATINUS, Glossostaphylinus—g. Pharyngeal, Glossopharyngeus, Pharyngoglossal—g. p. Nerve, Pharyngoglossal nerve.

GLOSSO-PHARYNGEUS, Glossopharyngeal, from glossos, and φαρυγξ, 'the pharynx.' Belonging to the tongue and pharynx. Some anatomists thus designate certain fleshy bundles, which arise from the lateral parts of the base of the tongue, and are inserted into the parietes of the pharynx. They form part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GLOSSOPLEGIA, Glossolysis.

GLOSSOPTOSIS, Glossocœle.

GLOSSOSCIRRHUS, Glossocarcinoma.

GLOSSOSCOPIA, from glossos, and σκοπεω, 'I view.' Inspection of the tongue as an index of disease.

GLOSSOSPASMUS, Glossocoma, Spasmus linguae, from glossos, and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Cramp or spasm of the tongue.

GLOSSOSPATHA, Spatula pro oris, from glossos, and σπαθη, 'spatula.' A spatula for pressing down the tongue to enable the fauces to be examined.

GLOSSO-STAPHYLINUS, from glossos, and σταφυλη, 'the uvula.' Glossopalatina, Palatoglossus, Constrictor Isthmi Fancium. A small, thin, narrow, and long muscle, which arises from the base of the tongue, and is inserted at the inferior and lateral part of the velum palati, in the anterior pillar of which it is situate. Its use is to contract the isthmus faucium, by depressing the velum palati, and raising the base of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTERE'SIS, Linguae extirpatio, from glossos, and στερησις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTROPHIA, from glossos, and στροφω, 'I turn.' Doubling of the point of the tongue upwards and backwards, — said to have been a mode of suicide. [?]

GLOSSOTOMY, Glossotomia, from glossos, and τομη, 'to cut.' Dissection of the tongue. Amputation of the tongue.

GLOSSYPERTROPHIA, from glossos, and υπερ, 'over,' and τροφω, 'to nourish.' Hypertrophy or supernutrition of the tongue.

GLOTTA, Glossa, Tongue.

GLOTTAGRA, Glossalgia.

GLOTTALGIA, Glossalgia.

GLOTTIS, γλωττις, ('the mouth-piece of a flute,') Ligula. A small oblong aperture, in the larynx, comprised between the chordæ vocales. It is narrow, anteriorly; wider, posteriorly; and is capable of being modified by muscular contraction, as may be required by the voice. It is by the chordæ vocales, that voice is produced. The glottis is nearly an inch long in the adult male; less in the female and child.

Glottis is, by some, used synonymously with ventricle of the larynx: with others, it includes the whole of the larynx.

GLOTTIS, LIPS OF THE, Thyreo-arytenoid ligaments—g. Spasm of the, Asthma thymicum.

GLOUGLOU D'UNE BOUTEILLE, Gurgling.

GLOUTERON, Aretim Lappa—g. Petit, Xanthium.

GLOUTIUS, Gluteal—g. Maximus et extimus, Gluteus maximus—g. Secundus et medius, Gluteus medius—g. Tertius et intimus, Gluteus minimus.

GLOUTON, Glutton.

GLOWWORM, Cicindela.

GLUANT, Glutinous.

GLUCOGENIA, Glycogeny.

GLUCOGENESIS, Glycogeny.

GLUCOSE, Glycose, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet.' Grape, Fruit, Starch, and Honey sugar. A variety of sugar, that occurs naturally in many vegetable juices, and in honey. Compared with cane sugar, it is much less soluble in water, and less disposed to crystallize; and, when injected into the blood-vessels, does not pass off to the like extent by the kidneys. Diabetic, Urinary, and Hepatic sugar appear to have the same chemical composition.

GLUCOSURIA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLUE BONE, Osteocœlla.

GLUE FISH, Ichthyocœlla.

GLUMPOT, Gallipot.

GLUTEUS MAGNUS, G. major—g. Major, G. inaximus.

GLUTEUS MAXIMUS, G. major seu magnus, Maximus et extimus gloutinus, (F.) Muscle grand fessier, Ilio-sacro-fémoral; Sacro-fémoral, (Ch.), from γλουτος, 'the buttock,' 'the breech.' This muscle is situate at the posterior part of the pelvis, and at the upper and posterior part of the thigh. It is large, thick, and quadrilateral; and is attached, above, to the posterior part of the crista ili, to the part of the ilium comprised between the crista and the upper curved line, to the posterior surface of the sacrum, coccyx, and great sacro-sciatic ligament; and below, it terminates by a broad aponeurosis, which is inserted into the rugged surface that descends from the trochanter major to the linea aspera of the femur. This muscle extends the thigh on the pelvis, and rotates the thigh outwards. It is greatly concerned in station and progression.

GLUTEUS MEDIUS, Gloutinus Secundus et Medius, (F.) Ilio-trochanterien; Grand Ilio-trochanterien, (Ch.) Moyen Fessier. This muscle is situate in part beneath the preceding; it is broad, very thick, radiated, and triangular; attached, above, to the crista ili, and to the part of the outer surface of that bone comprised between the three anterior fourths of its crista, its upper curved line, and its lower; and below, it ends by a tendon, inserted at the upper edge of the great trochanter. It is an abductor of the thigh; but can turn the thigh outwards or inwards, according as its posterior or inferior fibres are thrown separately into contraction.

GLUTEUS MINIMUS, G. minor, Tertius et Intimus Gloutinus, (F.) Petit Fessier; — Ilio-ischii-trochanterien, Petit Ilio-trochanterien (Ch.)

This muscle, which is situate beneath the preceding, is flat, triangular, and with radiated fibres. It is attached, above, to the external surface of the os ili, from the inferior curved line to the acetabulum; and, below, is inserted into the anterior part of the great trochanter. It has the same uses as the preceding.

GLUTEUS MINOR, G. minimus.

GLUTEAL, Gloutius, Glutæus. Same etymon. (F.) Fessier. That which belongs or relates to the nates. This name has been given to many parts which compose the nates.

GLUTEAL APONEURO'SIS. The upper and back part of the femoral fascia. In it is a remarkable opening, called the gluteal arch, for the passage of the gluteal vessels and nerves.

GLUTEAL ARCH, see Gluteal aponeurosis.

GLUTEAL ARTERY, Posterior Il'iac Artery, (F.) Artère fessière, is one of the largest branches of the hypogastric. It makes its exit from the pelvis at the upper part of the superior sciatic foramen; gains the posterior part of the pelvis, and divides into two branches:—the one superficial, the other deep-seated. The last subdivides into three secondary branches, whose ramifications are distributed particularly to the Glutæi, Longissimus Dorsi, Sacro-lumbalis, &c., and anastomose with the sciatic and internal circumflex arteries.

GLUTEAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf Fessier, is a large branch, furnished by the 5th pair of lumbar nerves. It is chiefly distributed to the glutæi muscles.

GLUTEAL VEIN, (F.) Veine fessière, follows the same march as the artery of the same name.

GLUTEN, Glutinum, Lentor, 'glue, paste.' Veg'etable Gluteu, Veg'etable Ca'sein. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is soft, of a grayish white, viscid consistence, and very elastic. Exposed to the air, it becomes hard, brown, and fragile; and, in moist air, putrefies. Water and alcohol do not dissolve it. It is soluble in vegetable, and in weak mineral, acids, at a high temperature. The farinae, in which it is found, are those preferred for the preparation of bread; on account of the property it has of making the paste rise. It is a compound of protein, and hence has been ranged amongst the "proteinaceous alimentary principles" by Dr. Pereira. By washing wheaten dough with a stream of water, the gum, sugar, starch and vegetable albumen are removed: the ductile, tenacious, elastic, gray mass left is the gluten, common gluten, Beccaria's gluten. Pure gluten is the soluble portion on boiling common gluten in alcohol. Granulated glue, Gluten granule, is a paste made by adding wheat gluten to ordinary wheat. It is said to form an agreeable and nutritious aliment.

GLUTEN ARTICULORUM, Synovia—g. Beccaria's, see Gluten—g. Bread, see Bread, gluten—g. Common, see Gluten—g. Granulated, see Gluten—g. Granule, see Gluten—g. Pure, see Gluten.

GLUTI, Nates.

GLUTIA, Nates, Quadrigemina corpora.

GLUTIN, see Gelatin.

GLUTINANS, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIF, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIO, Agglutination.

GLUTINEUX, Glutinous.

GLU'TINOUS, Glutinosus, Collo'des, from glutea, 'paste, glue.' (F.) Glutinæus, Gluant. An epithet given to substances taken from the animal or vegetable kingdom, and endowed with unusual viscosity. The decoctions of marsh-mallows, and figs, and the jelly of hartshorn, are said to be glutinous.

GLUTINUM, Gluten.

GLUTI'TIS, from γλουτοι, 'the nates,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the nates.

GLUTOI, Nates.

GLUTOPYO'SIS, from γλουτοι, 'the nates,' and πυωσις, 'suppuration.' Suppuration of the nates.

GLUTTON, same etymon as the next. Gastrimar'gus, Gnathon, Hel'luo, Maudo, Gulo'sus, Lurco, Bellygod, (F.) Gloutou, Gourmaud, Goulou. An excessive eater.

GLUT'TONY, from glutio, 'I swallow,' glutus, 'the gullet.' Limo'sis Helluo'num, Gastris'mus, (F.) Gourmaudise. Excessive appetite, owing often to habitual indulgence.

GLUTTUPATENS, Stomach.

GLUTTUS, Œsophagus.

GLUTUS, Trochanter major.

GLYCANSIS, Edulcoration.

GLYCAS'MA, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet.' A sweet wine, prepared from must.—Linden.

GLYCERATON, Glycerrhiza.

GLYCERIN, see Fat—g. Butyrate of, see Butter.

GLYCIPICROS, Solanum dulcamara.

GLYCISIDE, Pæonia.

GLYCOG'ENY, Glycogen'ia, Glycogen'esiss, Glucogen'ia, Glucogen'esiss, (F.) Glycogénie, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' Generation or formation of sugar,—as in the liver.

GLYCOSE, Glucose.

GLYCYPHYTON, Glycerrhiza.

GLYCYRRHIZA, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet,' and ριζα, 'a root.' G. Glabra seu Lavis, Liquoril'ia Scyth'ica, Glycera'ton, Glycyph'yton, Adip'sos, Alceas, Al'iuos, Liq'orice, Lic'orice, (F.) Réglisse, Bois doux. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this southern European plant is inodorous; has a sweet taste; is mucilaginous; and leaves, when unpeeled, a degree of bitterness in the mouth. It is used as a demulcent, and chiefly in catarrh. The extract, made from it and sold in the shops, is known under the name Spanish Liquorice or Liquorice Juice, (F.) Jus de Réglisse.

Pectoral Balsam of Liquorice—a quack preparation—is said by Dr. Paris to consist chiefly of Paregoric Elixir, strongly impregnated with Oil of Aniseed.

GLYCYRRHŒ'A, from γλυκυσ, 'sweet,' and ρευ, 'I flow.' A discharge of saccharine fluid from the system.

GLYCYRRHŒA URINOSA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLYSTER HERBS, Herbæ pro Enem'atē. The herbs ordinarily sold by the English apothecary under this title, are:—mullow leaves, one part; chamomile flowers, one part. (℞iss to ℞j of water).

GNAMPISIS, Curvature.

GNAPHALIMUM DIOICUM, Antennaria dioica—g. Plantaginifolium seu Plantagineum, Antennaria plantaginifolia.

GNAPHALIMUM MARGARITACEUM, Antennaria Margaritu'cea, Cudweed, Pearly Life everlasting, from γναφαλον, 'a lock of wool,' owing to the floccose down of the leaves. An indigenous plant, growing in woods and fields, and flowering in August. Its virtues are not defined, and the same may be said of GNAPHALIMUM POLYCEPHALUM; Sweet-scented Life everlasting, Catfoot. They appear to be mild astringents.

GNATHALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHANCYLO'SIS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and αγκυλωσις, 'stiffness of joint.' Ankylosis of the lower jaw.

GNATHANTROPOLYPUS, from gnathantrum, 'the antrum of Highmore,' and polypus. Polypus of the antrum of Highmore.

GNATHI'TIS, Inflamma'tio genæ, from γναθος,

'the cheek, the jaw.' Inflammation of the cheek or upper jaw.

GNATHMUS, Gnathus.

GNATHOCEPHALUS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster which has no head visible externally, but exhibits voluminous jaws.—G. St. Hilaire.

GNATHOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GNATHON. Glutton.

GNATHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHOPLASTY, Gnathoplasti'cicē, from γναθος, 'cheek,' and πλαστικός, 'formative.' The formation of an artificial cheek.

GNATHOPLEGIA, Gnathoparaly'ysis, from γναθος, and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the cheek. Gnathoparaly'ysis is employed by Fuchs to signify paralysis of the lesser portion of the trifacial nerve, which supplies the muscles of mastication.

GNATHORRHAG'IA, from γναθος, and ῥογηννυμι, 'to burst forth.' Hemorrhage from the internal surface of the cheeks.

GNATHOSPASMUS, Trismus.

GNATHUS, Gnathus, from κνω, 'I scrape, rub.' The cheek, the jaw. Also, the part of the jaws in which the teeth are fixed.—Hippocrates, Pöësius. See Bucca, Genæ, and Maxillary Bone.

GNESIOS, Legitimate.

GNOME, Intellect.

GNOSIS, γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A common suffix, as in Dignos'is, Prognos'is, &c.

GOACONAX, see Toluifera balsamum.

GOADBY'S SOLUTION, see Solution,

Goadby's.

GOATS' BEARD, COMMON, Tragopogon.

GOATS' MILK, goats' milk, Tragopogon. Artificial, see Milk, goats'—g. Thorn, Astragalus verus.

GOB, Mouth.

GOBELET ÉMÉTIQUE, Goblet, emetic.

GOBLET, EMET'IC, Poc'ulum emet'icum, Caliz vomitoria, (F.) Gobelet émélique. A vessel, made by pouring melted antimony into a mould. By putting wine into this and allowing it to stand some time, it acquires the property of producing vomiting. This kind of emetic has been long rejected, as the practitioner could never be certain of the dose he exhibited.

GODESBERG, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, at Godesberg, a German mile from Bonn, are an efficacious, acidulous chalybeate, formerly known by the name, Draitsch Water. They contain chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, and carbonate of iron.

GODFREY'S COR'DIAL. A celebrated nostrum, for which Dr. Paris has given the following formula. Infuse \mathfrak{z} ij of sassafras and of the seeds of carraway, coriander, and anise, each \mathfrak{z} ij, in six pints of water. Simmer the mixture until reduced to \mathfrak{h} iv; then add \mathfrak{h} vj of treacle, and boil the whole for a few minutes. When cold, add \mathfrak{z} ij of tincture of opium. The following form is recommended by a committee of the Philadelphia college of Pharmacy. Tinct. Opii, Oiss; Syrupi Nigri, Oxxvj; Alcoholis, Oij; Aquæ, Oxxvj; Carbonatis Potassæ, \mathfrak{z} ijss; Olei Sassafras, \mathfrak{z} iv, M. It is anodyne.

GDORONNÉ, (CANAL) Canalis Petiti'ana seu Petitii, Canalonne ciliaire, Canal de PETIT ou goudronné, Canal or Bull'ular Canal of Petit. Petit gave this name (from F.) godron, 'a plait or fold,' to the semicircular canal, formed by the tunica hyaloidea around the edge of the crystalline; because it appears, as it were, plaited or festooned.

GOGGLE-EYED, (Prov.) Grozet-eyed. Having prominent, staring and rolling eyes.

GOITRE, Bronchocele—g. Leaf, see Laminarin.

GOITRE STICKS. In South America the stems of a seaweed are so called, because they are chewed by the inhabitants where goitre prevails.—Royle.

GOIT'ROUS, (F.) Goîtreux. Relating or pertaining to goitre. One affected by goitre or Bronchocele,—Goïtréd.

GOLD, An'rum, Chrysoa, Sol, Rex metallo'rum, (F.) Or. (Sax.) goltz. A solid, yellow, very brilliant, hard, very ductile, malleable, tenacious, and heavy metal; found in nature, either in its native state, or combined with a little silver, copper, or iron. S. g. 19.25.

Muriate or Chloride of Gold, Auri Chloridum seu Terchloridum seu Murius seu Chloruretum, Aurum Muriaticum seu Chloratum seu Oxydulatum muriaticum seu Solutum, (F.) Chlorure ou Muriate ou Hydro-chlorate d'or has been admitted into the Pharmacopœia of the United States, and into that of Paris, &c. The formulæ, however, differ. That of the United States is a muriate with two bases; and is prepared, according to the form of Dr. Christen, by dissolving the gold in a mixture of nitric and muriatic acids, and adding chloride of sodium to the residuum after evaporation; then redissolving and evaporating slowly to dryness. The Parisian formula for the Muriate d'or, Murias seu Chloruretum Auri, consists in simply dissolving the gold in the acids, and evaporating to dryness. It has been recommended as an antisypilitic in old, rebellious, venereal affections, exostoses, and in venereal, serofulous or cancerous glandular enlargements. Dose, gr. 1-8th to gr. ss, rubbed on the tongue or gums. Internally, one-sixteenth of a grain, in pills.

Various other preparations, as the Cyanide or Tercyanide, (Auri Cyanidum seu Cyanuretum seu Tercyanidum, (F.) Cyanure d'or;) the metallic gold in a state of division (Aurum metallicum, Pulvis Auri, (F.) Or divisé ou métallique), obtained by amalgamating gold with mercury and driving the latter off by heat; and in the form of filings (Aurum limatum); the Chloride of Gold and Sodium, (Aurum muriaticum natronatum seu muriaticum chloratum natronatum, Chloruretum Auri cum Natrono, (F.) Nitromuriate d'or;) the Oxide of Gold, (Auri Oxidum, Aurum Oxidatum, Auri teroxidum, Peroxide of gold, Auric acid, (F.) Oxide d'or;) and the Iodide of Gold, (Auri Iodidum seu Ioduretum, (F.) Iodure d'or;) have been employed in the like affections, and with similar results.

GOLD-BEATER'S SKIN. The intestinal recta of the ox, which have been beaten quite smooth, for the manufacture of gold leaf. Used as a defensive dressing for slight cuts, &c.

GOMPHIASIS, Gomphiasis, from γομφος, 'a nail.' A disease of the teeth, and particularly of the molares; looseness of the teeth in their sockets, Agomphiasis. Pain in the teeth. Odontalgia.

GOMPHIASMUS, Gomphiasis.

GOMPHIOL, Molar teeth.

GOMPHOCARPUS CRISPUS. A South African plant, the root of which, formerly known to the Dutch apothecaries as Radix Asclepi'adis crispæ, is extremely bitter and acid; and, on account of its diuretic virtues, a decoction or infusion of it has been advised in various kinds of dropsy. A tincture of it is said to be valuable in colic.

GOMPHOMA, Gomphosis.

GOMPHO'SIS, Cardinamentum, Clava'tio, Gompho'ma, Coagmenta'tio, Inclava'tio, Incunctio, from γομφος, 'a nail.' Engompho'sis. An immovable articulation, in which one bone is received into another, like a nail or peg into its hole. Gomphosis is only met with in the articulations of the teeth with the alveoli. It is, also, called Articulation par implantation.

GOMPHUS, Clavus.

GOMUTO PALM, see Toddy.

GOMUTOS GOMUTO, see Toddy.

GONACRASIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GONACRATIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GON'AGRA, Gon'yagra, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and αγρα, 'a prey.' "That which attacks the knees." Gout or rheumatism in the knees. Gongorrhœma. Paracelsus calls it Gen'agra.

GONAL'GIA, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the knee. Gonyal'gia. This is almost always produced by gout. It may, however, depend on some other disease, either of the knee or of another part—particularly of the hip-joint.

GONARTHRI'TIS, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' αρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the knee-joint.

GONARTHROCACE, Gonocace.

GONAURA, see Sperm.

GONDOLE OCULAIRE, Scaphium oculare.

GONDRET'S AMMONIACAL CAUSTIC, Pommade de Gondret—g. Counter-irritant, Pommade de Gondret.

GONÈ, Gonos, Genit'ra. The semen; (hence, gonorrhœa)—the uterus, offspring.—Hippocrates. See Epigone, and Generation.

GONECYSTIDES, Vesiculæ seminales.

GONECYSTI'TIS, Inflammatio vesiculæ'rum seminalium, from γόνυ, 'sperm,' κύστις, 'bladder,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the vesiculæ seminales.

GONEPŒUS, Spermatopœus.

GONEPOETICUS, Spermatopœus.

GONFLEMENT, Swelling.

GONGRONA, Bronchocele.

GONGROPTHISIS, Pithisis pulmonalis.

GONGYLIDIUM, Pilula.

GONGYLION, Pilula.

GONGYLIS, Pilula.

GONIOCATHETER, from γωνία, 'an angle,' and καθετηρ, 'a catheter.' An angular or crooked catheter.

GONIOME'LE, from γωνία, 'an angle,' and μηλη, 'a probe.' An angular or crooked probe or sound.

GONIOMETER, Goniom'etrum, from γωνία, 'an angle,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring angles.

A 'FACIAL GONIOMETER' has been invented by Mr. Turnpenny, of Philadelphia, which is well adapted for measuring the facial angle.

GONOBOLIA, Ejaculation; spermata.

GONOC'ACÈ, Gonarthroc'acè, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and κακος, 'evil.' Tumor genui albus. White swelling of the knee. Hydrarthrus.

GONOCELE, Spermatocèle.

GONOÏ'DES, from γόνυ, 'sperm,' and αιδος, 'appearance.' Genit'ra sim'itis. Similar to sperm. Sperm'atoid, Spermatoï'des, Spermatoï'des. A term appropriated to any substance which resembles sperm.

GONOL'OBUS MACROPHYLLUS, (γωνία, 'an angle,' and λοβος, 'a pod'); indigenous. Nat. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. The root is cathartic. It is said to furnish a juice with which the Indians poison their arrows. [?]

GONOPOETICUS, Spermatopœus.

GONORRHÉE BÂ TARDE, Gonorrhœa spuria.

GONORRHO-BLEPHARRHŒA, Ophthalmia gonorrhœa.

GONORRHO-PROSTATITIS, see Prostatitis.

GONORRHŒ'A. Erroneously called from γόνυ, 'sperm,' and ρœω, 'I flow,' because the older writers believed it to be a flux of semen. Blenorrhag'ia, Blenorrhœ'a, B. urethral'is, Blenorrhœ'ria, Phallorrhœ'a, Medorrhœ'a, M. viri'lis, Catar'rhus gonorrhœ'a seu ure'thræ, Urethrit'is, Inflammati'o ure'thræ, Urethral'gia, Profluvium mucosum ure'thræ, Catar'rhus urethral'is, (F.) Écoulement, Urétrite, Urétrite. An inflammatory discharge of mucus from the membrane of the urethra in both sexes; and from that of the prepuce in man, and the vagina in woman. It may be excited spontaneously, or by irritants applied directly to the membrane; but is usually produced by impure connexion. Two great varieties have been generally reckoned.—1. GONORRHŒA PURA SEU BENIG'NA. That which does not follow an impure connexion; (F.) Échauffement, Blenorrhag'ia benigna, Caulorrhœ'a benigna, Catar'rhus Ure'thræ, Gonorrhœ'a catarrhal'is seu non contagio'sa:—and, 2. GONORRHŒA IMPU'RA, maligna, contagio'sa, symphilit'ica, et virulent'a; Fluxus albus malignus, Fluxus venereus, Blenorrhœ'a luo'des, Baylorrhœ'a, Myxio'sis, Lues gonorrhœ'icæ, Scroph'ulæ gonorrhœ'icæ, Tuber'cula gonorrhœ'ica, Clap. (Old E.) Chawdpye. (F.) Chandepisse; that which is the result of impure commerce. The French, also, distinguish the Chandepisse sèche, or that unaccompanied with discharge; and the Chandepisse chardée, Gonorrhœ'a corda'ta, or that accompanied with chordee, and which, of course, occurs only in the male. It is the kind that most frequently engages the attention of the practitioner, and is characterized by mucous discharge from the urethra or vagina, intermixed with specific matter, and accompanied with burning pain on micturition. It is decidedly infectious. It is, however, a distinct disease from syphilis, and never produces it. Its duration is various, but the inflammatory symptoms usually subside in four or five weeks; leaving generally behind more or less of the gonorrhœa mucosa or gleet. Gonorrhœa of every kind, attended with any inflammatory symptoms, is best treated by the antiphlogistic regimen; avoiding every kind of irritation, and keeping the body cool by small doses of salts, and the urine diluted by the mildest fluids. After the inflammatory symptoms have subsided, cubebæ, or the balsam of copaiba, exhibited in the dose of a teaspoonful, three times a day, will be found effectual; indeed, during the existence of the inflammatory symptoms, it often affords decided relief. Injections are rarely required.

Sometimes, gonorrhœa affects the glans: when it is called Gonorrhœa Spuria seu Balani, Balanoblennorrhœa, Balanorrhœa, Balani'tis, Blennorrhag'ia spuria seu notha, (F.) Blennorrhagie du gland, Gonorrhée bâtarde, Fausse Blennorrhagie. It requires only cleanliness and cooling lotions. This is the simple form of balanitis. It may, however, be of the impure kind—Balanorrhag'ia, (F.) Balanite contagieuse.

Some other varieties of gonorrhœa have been enumerated, but they are of little moment.

In consequence of repeated attacks of gonorrhœa, or of the debility induced by a single attack, it not infrequently happens, as already remarked, that a constant, small discharge occurs, or remains behind, after all danger of infection is removed. The great difference between it and gonorrhœa is, that it is uninfected. The discharge consists of globular particles, contained in a slimy mucus, and is generally devoid of that yellow colour which characterizes the discharge of gonorrhœa virulenta. It is unattended with pain, sealding, &c. To this state the names Gleet, Gonorrhœa mucosa, Blennorrhœa chronica, Blennorrhœa, &c., have been given. It is commonly a disease of some duration, and demands the use of the copaiba, astringent injection; and, if obstinate, the introduction of the bougie.

GONY, γόνυ, Genu, 'the knee'; hence:

GONYAGRA, Gonyagra.

GONYALGIA, Gonalgia.

GONYAN'CON, Gonycamp'sis, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and αγκών, 'a curvature.' A curvature or bending of the knee. A bent knee.

GONYCAMPISIS, Gonyancon.

GONYC'ROTUS, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and κρούω, 'I strike.' One who is knock-kneed, or in-kneed. See Entogonyancon.

GONYON'CUS, from γόνυ, 'the knee,' and ὄγκος, 'a tumour.' A swelling of the knee.

GONYORRHEUMA, Gonygra.

GOOD KING HENRY, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

GOODYE'RA PUBES'CENS, Tussa'ca reticulata, Satyr'ium, Neott'ia, Rattlesnake leaf, Rattlesnake Plantain, Networt, Netleaf, Scroph'ula weed, Cancer weed. Ord. Orchidaceæ. An indigenous plant, used empirically in scrophula—the fresh leaves being applied to the sores. It is employed by the Indians.

GOOSEBERRY, Ribes uva crispæ.

GORGERET, Gorget—g. Lithotome, Gorget, lithotomy—g. à Repoussoir, see Gorget.

GORGET, from (F.) gorge, 'the throat.' Canalis canaliculatus, Ductor canaliculatus, (F.) Gorget. An instrument representing a long gutter, in the shape of a throat, which is especially employed in the operations of lithotomy and fistula in ano.

GORGET, Cutting, see Gorget, and Lithotomy.

GORGET, LITHOTOMY, (F.) Gorget à Lithotome, Cutting Gorget, is the one used in the operation for the stone, for the purpose of dividing the prostate and the neck of the bladder, so as to enable the surgeon to introduce the forceps and extract the stone. At the end of this gorget is a crest or beak, which fits the groove of the staff, and admits of the gorget being passed along it into the bladder. Besides cutting, there are also blunt gorgets, intended to be introduced into the wound—their concavity serving as a guide for the forceps into the bladder.

The chief modifications in the gorget have been made by Andouillet, Bell, Blicke, Bromfield, Cline, Desault, Foubert, Hawkins, Larrey, Lefèvre, Michælis, Thomas, &c.

GORGET FOR FISTULA IN ANO consists of a semi-cylindrical wooden staff, four inches long, without including the handle, and furnished with a wide groove. This is introduced into the rectum, to prevent the point of the bistoury from injuring the intestine, when the internal orifice of the fistula is deeply situate, and it is desirable to perform the operation by incision. This instrument, invented by Marchetti, has been modified by Percy, Runge, &c.

Desault invented an instrument for conducting the wire by the anus, in the operation for fistula by ligature. He called it Gorget à repoussoir.

GORGO'NEI FONTES. Fountains described by Libavius as containing water which possessed a petrifying property; probably, water holding in solution supercarbonate of lime.

GORGOSSET, Pyrosis.

GOSIER, Pharynx, Throat.

GOSSUM, Bronchocele.

GOSSYP'UM, Gossyp'ium Herba'ceum, Gossyp'ium Nylum, Nylum, Bombacæ, Cotton, (F.) Cotton. Family, Malvaceæ. Sex, Syst. Monadelphia Polyandria. The seeds of the Cotton Tree, Gossyp'ium arbor'um, have been administered in coughs, on account of the mucilage they contain, and a decoction of a pint of the seeds to a quart of water has been given, in the Southern States, in intermittents. A decoction of the root has been prescribed as an emmenagogue and parturifacient. The cotton wool is used in medicine for making moxas, &c., and is applied in the treatment of recent burns and scalds.

GOUT, Arthritis, Arth'ragra, Arthral'gia, Morbus domiuorum seu articula'ris, Malum articulo'rum, Gutta, Arth'rosia Pod'agra, Podal'gia, Pod'agra, Arthrit'icus verus, Arthrit'is Podag'ra, Podag'ra Arthrit'is, Flux'io arthrit'ica, Febris arthrit'ica seu Podag'rica, Arthrodyn'ia podag'rica, Cauma podag'ricum, Flerecin, Gastroarthrit'is, Misopt'ochos, (Sc.) Gat, (F.) Goutte, Agric.—Piorry. The gout was formerly regarded as a catarrh, and received its name from (F.) goutte, (L.) gutta, 'a drop;' because it was believed to be produced by a liquid, which distilled, goutte à goutte, 'drop by drop,' on the diseased part. This name, which seems to have been first used about the year 1270, has been admitted into the different languages of Europe. Gout is an inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints. It almost always attacks, first, the great toe; whence it passes to the other smaller joints, after having produced, or been attended with, various sympathetic phenomena, particularly in the digestive organs: after this, it may attack the greater articulations. It is an affection which is extremely fugitive, and variable in its recurrence. It may be acquired or hereditary. In the former case, it rarely appears before the age of thirty-five; in the latter, it is frequently observed earlier. It is often difficult to distinguish it from rheumatism. A combination is, indeed, supposed to exist sometimes; hence called Rheumatic gout. During the paroxysm or fit, a burning, lancinating pain is experienced in the affected joint, attended with tumefaction, tension, and redness. One or more joints may be attacked, either at the same time or in succession; and, in either case, the attack terminates by resolution in a few days. This is the Arthrit'is acuta seu inflammato'ria seu regula'ris, Regular gout, Arth'rosia pod'agra regula'ris, Arth'ragra legit'ima seu vera seu genu'ina seu norma'lis, (F.) Goutte régulière chaude. At other times, pains in the joints exist, of more or less acute character; the swelling being without redness. These pains persist, augment, and diminish irregularly, without exhibiting intermission, and, consequently, without having distinct paroxysms. The disease is then called atonic, asthen'ic, imperfect or irregular gout, Chronic G., Arthrit'is atonic'a seu asthen'ica, Arthro'sia Podag'ra larval'a, Dysarthrit'is. It is, also, commonly called in France Goutte froide, Goutte blanche. It may appear primarily, or succeed attacks of regular gout.

Gout does not always confine itself to the joints. It may attack the internal organs: when it is called Arthritis aber'rans seu errat'ica seu planet'ica, Arth'ragra anom'ala, Pod'agra aber'rans, Vare'ni, Wandering, misplaced, or anomalous gout, (F.) Goutte vague.

Ret'rograde gout, Arthritis retrograd'a, Podag'ra retrograd'a, Arthro'sia Podag'ra complicata, Recedent or mispla'ced gout, (F.) Goutte remontée, G. malplacée, G. rentrée, is when it leaves the joints suddenly and attacks some internal organ, as the stomach, intestines, lungs, brain, &c.

Gout is also called, according to the part it may affect, Podag'ra, Gonag'ra, Chivag'ra, &c. It may be acute or chronic, and may give rise to concretions, which are chiefly composed of urate of soda. See Calculus, (arthritis). It may, also, give occasion to nodosities, when it is called Arthritis nodo'sa, (F.) Goutte nouée.

The treatment is of the antiphlogistic kind, and the local disorder should be but little interfered with. Colchicum seems to have great power over the disease. It forms the basis of the Eau médicinale d'Hussou, a celebrated French gout-remedy. The bowels must be kept regular by rhubarb and magnesia; and a recurrence of the disease be prevented by abstemious habits.

GOUT, DIAPHRAGMATIC, Angina pectoris.

GOUT PAPER, so called, Charta antiarthrit'ica, Charta antirheumat'ica, is made by spreading a very thin layer of a mixture of an ethereal or spirituous extract of the bark of mezereon root, with wax, spermaceti, and oil, over the surface of paper.

GOUITTÈRE (F.), Collie'ia. A gutter in a bone, like that used for carrying off rain. Some of these cavities are intended to facilitate the sliding of tendons, such as the Gouttière Bic'ipitale or Bic'ipital groove. Others, as the Gouttière sagittale or Sagittal groove, lodge blood-vessels and especially veins. Others, again, are merely intended for the support of certain organs; as the Gouttière basilare or Bas'illary fossa, which supports the medulla oblongata.

GRAMINIVOROUS, Graminivorus, from gramen, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat.' Feeding or subsisting on grass.

GRAMMARIUM, Seruple.

GRAMME, γραμμον. An ancient weight, equivalent to the 24th part of an ounce, or to 24 grains, or a scruple, avoirdupois. At the present day, the gramme is equal in weight to a cubed centimètre of water; or to 18 grains, poids de marc—15.434 grains, Troy.

GRAMME, Iris, Linc.

GRAMMITIS AUREA, Asplenium eeterach—g. Ceterach, Asplenium eeterach.

GRANA, Hemierania—g. Guineensis, Pepper, malageta—g. Molicuca, Croton tiglium—g. Moschi, Hibiscus abelmoschus—g. Orientis, see Menispermum oeculus—g. Paradisi, Amomum granum Paradisi—g. Tiglii seu Tiglia, see Croton tiglium—g. Tili, Croton tiglium—g. Triticea, see Hyoides os.

GRANADILLA, APPLE-SHAPED, Passiflora maliformis.

GRANATI RADICIS CORTEX, see Punica granatum.

GRAND DORSAL, Latissimus dorsi.

GRANDEBALE. The hair which grows in the arm-pits.

GRANDGORE, Syphillis.

GRANDINOSUM OS, Cuboid.

GRANDO, Chalaza.

GRANDULA, Gland.

GRANIVOROUS, Granivorus, from granum, 'a grain,' and voro, 'I eat.' Feeding or subsisting on grain or seeds.

GRANTRISTUM, Anthrax.

GRANULA SANGUINIS, Globules of the blood—g. Seminis, see Sperm.

GRANULAR, Granulatus, Granulosus. (F.) Granulé, Granuleux, from granulum, 'a small grain.' Composed of or containing granules or small particles,—as 'granular eyelid,' 'membrana granulosa,' &c., &c.

GRANULAR DEGENERATION OR DISORGANIZATION OF THE KIDNEY, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—g. Conjunctiva, Trachoma—g. Eyelid, Trachoma—g. Layer, Membrana granulosa—g. Liver, Cirrhosis—g. Tin, see Tin.

GRANULATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

GRANULATION, Granulatio, from granum, 'a grain.' Gemma, (F.) Bourgeon, B. charnu. Granulations are the reddish, conical, flesh-like shoots, which form at the surface of suppurating wounds and ulcers. They are the product of inflammatory excitement, and may be produced in indolent ulcers, by exciting the parts by proper stimulants. They form the basis of the cicatrix.

GRANULATION is, likewise, a name given by the modern French physicians to an organic lesion, consisting in the formation of small, round, firm, shining, semi-transparent tumours, of the size and shape of millet-seed, or of a pea; which are met with in the lungs particularly, and in considerable quantity; often without materially interfering with their functions.

In pharmacy, granulation is a process by which a metal is reduced to fine grains, by melting it, and causing it, whilst liquid, to pass through a kind of sieve into a vessel of water,—as in the making of shot;—or by shaking or rubbing the melted metal in an appropriate box or vessel,—as in the formation of granular tin or granulated zinc.

GRANULATIONS CÉRÉBRALES, Glandulæ Pæchioni.

GRANULATIONS MILIARY, or Miliary tubercles, are the small, transparent grains, of variable size, from that of a millet-seed to that of a grain of hemp, which are presumed to be the primitive state of tubercles.

GRAN'ULE, Granulum; diminutive of granum, 'a grain.' A small grain; a small compact particle; a cytoblast.

GRANULES SEMINAL, Granula sem'inalia. Minute, rounded, granulated bodies, observable in the semen, which are, in all cases, much less numerous than the spermatozooids. See Sperm.

GRANULEUX, Granular.

GRANULOUS, Granular.

GRANVILLE'S LOTION, see Lotion, Granville's counter-irritant.

GRAPE, see Vitis vinifera—g. Sea-side, see Kino.

GRAPE-CURE, (F.) Cure du raisin, (G.) Traubenkur, Weintrau. A mode of medication in Germany, which consists in the use of the grape for both meat and drink; nothing more at the farthest being allowed than a piece of dry bread. This diet is continued for weeks. Its effects are altogether revellent, and resemble in many respects those of hydropathy.

GRAPES, DRIED, Uvæ passæ.

GRAPHIDOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIODES, Styloid.

GRAPHIOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHISCUS, Graphiscus Di'ocles. An instrument invented by Dioeles for extracting darts [?]. Said, in many of the Dictionaries, but erroneously, to be described by Celsus. He speaks only of the Cyathiscus Di'ocles, Διοκλιον κυθισκον. See Cyathiscus.

GRAPHITES, Plumbago, Supercarbure'tum seu Carbure'tum Ferri, Ferri Carbonatum seu Supercarbure'tum, Carbo mineralis, Galena's Gal'nè, Plumbum nigrum, Cernis'a nigra, Graphite, Car'bu'et of iron, Black lead, Wod, (F.)

Crayon noir, Plombagine, Charbon minéral, Carbone de fer, from γραφω, 'I write.' This substance has been esteemed slightly astringent and desiccative. It has been advised by Weibhold in the cure of herpes.

GRAPHOÏDES, Styloid.

GRAPHOSPASMUS, Cramp, writers'.

GRAS DES CADAVERES, Adipocire — g. de Jambé, Sura — g. des Cimetières, Adipocire — g. de Jambé, Sura.

GRAS FONDURE (F.), Diarrhœa adiposa, literally, molten grease. A species of diarrhœa, referred to by old writers; accompanied with great emaciation, and in which the evacuations contain fat-like matter. According to Sauvages, the Gras-fondure differs from colliquative diarrhœa in not being attended with hectic fever.

GRASS, Asparagus — g. Bear's, Yucca filamentosa — g. Bermuda, Cynodon dactylon — g. Bitter, Aletris farinosa — g. Blue-eyed, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum — g. Brome, Bromus ciliatus — g. Goat's, Scorzonera — g. Knot, Polygonum aviculare — g. Lily, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum.

GRASS OIL OF NEMAUR, Oleum graminis Indici.

GRASS, PHYSIC, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum — g. Rib, Plantago lanceolata — g. Scurvy, Sisyrinchium Bermudianum — g. Silk, Yucca filamentosa — g. Sweet, Acorus Calamus.

GRASS TREE, Xanthorrhœa.

GRASS, VIPERS', Scorzonera — g. Yellow-eyed, Xyris bulbosa.

GRASSET (F.). The anterior region of the thigh, bounded below by the patella.

GRASSEYEMENT (F.), Sonus blæsus, Rotacismus, from (F.) gras, 'thick.' 'Speaking thick.' According to Sauvages, a vicious pronunciation of the letter r. They who speak thick, like the inhabitants of Newcastle, in England, or of Havre, in France, have difficulty in pronouncing the r, and they frequently substitute for it the letter l; but this does not properly constitute Grasseyement. It consists in this: that, in words in which the letter r is joined to another consonant, a sort of burring or guttural rolling is heard, nearly like that produced by gargling. See Rotacism.

GRASUS, Cinabra.

GRATELLE, Psoriasis.

GRATIA DEI, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATIOLE CENTAURIOIDES, G. officinalis.

GRATIOLE OFFICINALIS, Digitalis minima, Gratia Dei, Gratiola Centaurioides, Hedge hyslop, Herb of Grace, from gratia, 'grace or favour,' owing to its presumed excellent medical virtues. It is a native of the south of Europe (F.) Gratiolle, Séné des prés, Petite digitale, Herbe au pauvre homme. The plant is inodorous; taste strong, bitter, nauseous. It is possessed of antihelmintic, purgative, emetic, and diuretic properties. Dose, ten grains.

GRATIOLE, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATTERON, Galium aparine.

GRATTOIR, Raspatorium.

GRAVATIF, Heavy.

GRAVE, Serious — g. Plant, Datura sanguinea.

GRAVEDO, Catarrh, Coryza — g. Neonatorum, Snuffles.

GRAVEL, Lithia renalis arenosa, Lithi'asis nephritica seu renalis, (F.) Gravelle. A disease occasioned by small concretions, similar to sand or gravel, Gla'ra, (F.) Gravier, which form in the kidneys, pass along the ureters to the bladder, and are expelled with the urine. These concretions, which are commonly composed of uric acid and an animal matter, are deposited at the bottom of the vessel, immediately after the excretion of the urine; and, by their hardness and resistance under the finger, differ considerably from the ordinary sediment of that liquid. A vegetable diet and alkaline drinks are the best prophylactics. See Calculi, urinary. A fit of the Gravel, Nephral'gia calculosa seu arenosa, Colica nephritica, is the excruciating suffering induced by the passage of gravel from the kidney to the bladder. It can only be relieved by anæsthetics, opiates, the warm bath, &c.

When the deposit is in fine particles, it is termed Sand, Are'no, Are'nula, Psammia, Psammus.

GRAVEL GRASS, Galium verum.

GRAVEL, PILEOUS or HAIRY, (F.) Gravelle pileuse. A species of gravel containing hairs, phosphate of lime, ammoniaco-magnesian phosphate, and a little uric acid. — Magendie.

GRAVEL PLANT, Epigœa repens — g. Root, Eupatorium purpureum.

GRAVELLEUX, Calculous.

GRAVELLE, Chalaza, Gravel — g. Pileuse, Gravel, pileous.

GRAVEOLENS, Fetid.

GRAVID, Pregnant.

GRAVIDIN; from gravidus, 'pregnant,' gravis, 'heavy.' A sediment in the urine of pregnant women, which by its decomposition gives rise to the pellicle kyestein. It differs from albumen, casein and gelatin. — Stark.

GRAVIDITAS, Fecondation, Pregnancy — g. Abdominalis, Pregnancy, abdominal — g. Extra-uterina, see Pregnancy — g. Extra-uterina in Ovario, Pregnancy, ovarian — g. Extra-uterina Secundaria, Metacystis — g. Interstitialis, Pregnancy, interstitial — g. Molaris, Mole — g. Ovarii, Pregnancy, ovarian — g. Spuria, Pregnancy, false — g. Tubaria, Pregnancy, tubal, Salpingo-cystis — g. Uteri substantiâ, Pregnancy, interstitial — g. Uterina, Pregnancy.

GRAVIER, Gravel.

GRAVIMETER, Areometer.

GRAVIS, Heavy.

GRAVITY, SPECIFIC, Gravitas specifica, (F.) Pesanteur spécifique. The relation between the weight of a body and its bulk: thus, supposing four bodies to be of the same size, but to weigh, one four, another three, another two, and the fourth one; the specific gravity of the first will be four times greater than that of the last. The specific gravities of different bodies are, therefore, as the weights, bulk for bulk. For solids, and liquids, water is taken as the unit; atmospheric air for the gases. Thus, water is 1.000; mercury, at the common temperature, 13.58. Whence, we conclude mercury is between thirteen and fourteen times heavier than water.

GRAYHAIRD, see Poliosis.

GRAY MATTER OF THE BRAIN, Cortex cerebri, see Neurine.

GREASE, from (F.) Graisse, 'fat.' A specific inflammation, affecting the skin of the heels of the horse, which is especially interesting from the circumstance, that the matter, if inserted under the cuticle of an unprotected individual, may give rise to an affection — grease-pox, variolæ equinæ — which preserves the person from small-pox. [?]

GREASE, BARROW'S, Adeps suillus — g. Goose, Adeps anserinus — g. Molten, Gras-fondure.

GREASE POX, see Grease.

GREENHEART, see Bebeern.

GREENHOW'S TINCTURE FOR THE TEETH, Spiritus armoraciæ compositus.

GREEN SICKNESS, Chlorosis.

GREENWEED, Genista tinctora.

GRÊLE (F.), Grac'itis, 'long and thin.' This epithet is given by the French to various parts, as the Apophyse Grêle du Marteau, the slender apophysis or process of the malleus. A long process situate at the anterior part of the neck of the mallens, which passes out by the fissure of Glaserius. It is also called the Apophysis of Rau, although it was already known to Fabricius ab Aquapendente and to Cœcilus Follius.

GRÊLE, Chalaza—g. Interne de la Cuisse, Gracilis.

GRÊMIL OFFICINAL, Lithospermum officinale.

GREMIUM, Vulva.

GRENADE, Influenza.

GRENADIER, Punica granatum.

GRENADIN, see Punica granatum.

GRENIERS, Vesiculae seminariae.

GRENOUILLE, Rana esculenta.

GRENOUILLETTE, Ranula.

GRÉOULX, MINERAL WATERS OF. Sulphuretted springs in the department of Basses-Alpes, France.

GRESSURA, Perinæum.

GRESSUS, Walking.

GREVEURE, Hernia.

GRIELUM, Apium petroselinum, Smyrnum olusatrum.

GRIFF, see Mulatto.

GRIFFO, see Mulatto.

GRINCEMENT DES DENTS, Brygmus.

GRINCOMES, Syphilis.

GRINDERS, Molar teeth—g. Asthma, see Asthma, grinders'—g. Rot, Asthma, grinders'.

GRINDING MILL, see Pulverization.

GRIPE, CUTTING ON THE, see Lithotomy.

GRIPEs, Tormina, Colic.

GRIPEs, WATERY. A popular name for a dangerous disease of infancy, common in England, which does not differ essentially from the cholera infantum of this country.

GRIPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRIPPE (F.), from gripper, 'to gripe,' 'catch hold of.' A vulgar name for several catarrhal diseases, which have reigned epidemically; as the influenza.

GRIPPÉ, Pinched.

GRISOU, see Hydrogen, carburetted.

GRISTLE, Cartilage.

GRITS, Groats.

GRIT GRUEL, Water gruel. This is made as follows:—Take three ounces of grits; wash them well in cold water, and, having poured off the fluid, put them into four pints of fresh water, and boil slowly until the water is reduced one-half; then strain through a sieve. It is a good demulcent, and is employed also as a vehicle for clysters.

GROAN, see Susprium.

GROATS, German Grütze; Grutum, Avena excoarctata; (F.) Gruau, Oatmeal, (Yorkshire.) Oats, hulled, but unground, (Lancashire.) Hulled oats, half ground. Oats that have the hulls taken off; Grits, (Prov.) Cultius. When crushed, they are termed Embeu groats. In America, fine hominy is called Grits, and wheat prepared in the same way is likewise so designated. It is also called scheaten hominy.

GROATS, CRACOW, Semolina.

GROCCERS' ITCH, see Eczema Impetiginodes, Psoriasis.

GROG-BLOSSOMS, Gutta rosea.

GROG-ROSES, Gutta rosea.

GROMWELL, Lithospermum officinale.

GROOVE, Furrow, Sulcus, (F.) Ruinaire. Icelandic, grafa, Sax. zrafan, 'to dig.' A channel or gutter in a bone or surgical instrument. See Coulisse.

GROOVE, PRIM'ITIVE, Primitive streak or trace, Nota primitiva. A bright streak in the long axis of the pellucid part of the area germinativa, after it presents a central pellucid and a peripheral opaque part, and passes from the round to the pear shape.

GROOVED. Same etymon. Sulcatus, Striatatus, Canaliculatus, (F.) Cannelé ou Canulé ou Canaliculé; Canaliculated. Having a small channel or gutter.

GROWTH, from Dutch groyen, 'to grow,' Incrementum, Crescentia, Anaplo'sis, Anaptyx'is, (F.) Croissance, Crue. The development of the body; particularly in the direction of its height. Also, any adventitious tissue; thus, we speak of a morbid growth or formation. See Development.

GROZET-EYED, Goggle-eyed.

GRUAU, Groats.

GRUB, Larve, see Ectozoa.

GRUBS, Aene punctata.

GRUEL, GRIT, see Grits—g. Water, see Avena, and Grits.

GRUFF, from Teutonic ge, and ruh, 'rough.' In pharmacy, the coarse residue, which will not pass through the sieve in pulverization.

GRUMEAU, Coagulum.

GRUMOUS, Grumus'sus, (F.) Grummel, Grumelenz, from grumus, 'a clot.' Clotted.

GRUMUS, Coagulum.

GRUTUM. 'Groats.' Grutum Mil'ium, Mil'ium. A hard white tubercle of the skin, resembling, in size and appearance, a millet-seed. It is confined to the face. See, also, Groats.

GRYPHIUS PES. The Griffon's foot, (F.)

Pied de Griffon. An instrument of which Ambrose Paré speaks, which was used for extracting moles from the uterus.

GRYPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRYPHOSIS, from γρυπῶσις, 'I incurvate.' Incurvatio. Curvature or crookedness in general. Crookedness or incurvation of the nails. See Onychogryphosis.

GRYPOTES, see Grypus.

GRYPUS. One who has a crooked or aquiline nose. The condition is termed Grypotes.

GUACO, Hua'co. The name of a plant, Eupatorium Guaco, described by Humboldt and Bonpland under the name Mikania Guaco, Ord. Composite, which grows in the valleys of Madalena, Rio-Cauca, &c., in South America. The negroes use the juice against the bites of poisonous reptiles;—both in the way of prevention and cure. It has been, of late, brought forward as a remedy in cholera.

GUAIAC, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACI LIGNUM, see Guaiacum—g. Resina, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACINE, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACUM, G. Officinale seu Americannum, Lignum vitæ seu sanctum seu benedictum seu Indicum, Palmas sanctus, Hagioxylinum, (F.) Gayac, Gaïac, Ord. Zygophyllæ. The resin—Guaiacaci Resina, Guai'ac, (F.) Résine ou Gomme de Gaïac—and the wood—Guaiaci lignum—are both used in medicine. Their odour is slightly fragrant; taste warm and bitter, of the resin more so than of the wood. The resin is concrete, brittle; colour, externally, greenish; internally grayish. Water dissolves about one-tenth; alcohol 95 parts. It is soluble, also, in liquor potassæ 15 parts, liquor ammoniæ 38 parts. The powder is whitish, but changes green in the air. The base of the guaiacum is a peculiar resin, called Guaiacine.

Guaiacum is stimulant and diaphoretic; and in large doses, purgative. It is administered in chronic rheumatism, gout, cutaneous diseases, and the sequelæ of syphilis. Dose of resin, gr. v to xx:—to purge, gr. xx to xl.

Guaiacum sanctum, and G. angustifolium have the same virtues as G. officinale.

GUALTHERIA, Gaultheria.

GUANO,—according to Tschudi, properly Huano,—is formed of the excrements of different kinds of marine birds—mews, divers, sheerbreaks, &c., but especially of the Sula variegata. It is found in enormous layers in the South American islands of the Pacific, and is used as manure.

GUARANA, Paullinia.

GUARANHEM, Monesia.

GUARANIN, see Coffea Arabica.

GUARAPO. A fermented liquor made, in Peru, of sugar-cane pulp and water. It is a very favourite beverage of the negroes.—Tschudi.

GUARD (for a bed), Alène.

GUARERBA ORBA, Momordia elaterium.

GUAVA APPLE, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAYAVA, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAZA, see Bangue.

GUBERNACULUM DENTIS, (gubernaculum, 'a rudder.') A cord, which passes from the follicle of the permanent tooth along a small long canal behind the alveolus of the milk tooth, and becomes continuous with the gum. The gubernaculum has been supposed to direct the permanent tooth outwards. The canal has been termed Iter dentis.

GUBERNACULUM TESTIS, Gubernaculum testis, Hunteri, G. Hunteri, Hunteri Ligamentum suspensorium Testis, (F.) Gouvernail du testicule. A triangular, fibro-cellular cord; which, in the fœtus, arises from the ramus of the ischium and the skin of the scrotum, and proceeds to the posterior part of the testicle, before this organ issues from the abdomen. It has been supposed to be a continuation of the fascia superficialis with muscular fibres from the internal oblique muscle, which pass upwards to the testis when in the abdomen; and by their contraction draw the testis down, and ultimately form the cremaster muscle.

GUÊPE, Wasp.

GUÉRISON, Cure.

GUÉRISSABLE, Curable.

GUI, Viscum album—g. de Chêne, Viscum album.

GUIDER, Tendon.

GUILANDINA MORIN'GA, Hyperanthe'ra moringa. A plant, Ord. Leguminosæ, which affords the Bea nut, and the lignum nephriticum. It is also called Morin'ga Oleifera seu Zeylanica seu Nax ben. Under the name Guilandina moringa, Linnæus is said to have confounded Moringa pterygosperma and M. ap'tera. Hyperanthe'ra moringa is a synonyme of the former species. The nut Bea, Ben nux, Glans unguenta'ria, Bal'anus Myrpes'ica, San'dalum cæru'leum, Oily Acorn or Ben nut, is a West India nut which furnishes an oil, O'leum Balawi'nam. Oil of Ben, that does not become rancid by age, and is hence used by perfumers. It is purgative.

The wood of the Guilandina is called Lignum Nephriticum, and has been used in decoction, in affections of the urinary organs.

GUM TREE, BROWN, see Kino.

GUM, WHITE, Liquidambar styraciflua, Strophulus—g. Yellow, Icterus infantum.

GUMMA, (F.) Gomme. An elastic tumour formed in the periosteum occupying particularly the cranium and sternum, and produced by the syphilitic virus, when it has been long in the constitution. It is so called, because, when opened, it contains a matter like gum.

GUMMI, Gummi, κομμι, (F.) Gomme. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is a solid, uncrystallizable, inodorous substance, of a mawkish taste, unchangeable in the air, insoluble in alcohol, but soluble in water, with which it forms a mucilage. It is obtained from various species of minosa and prunus; and consequently there are many varieties of gum. They are used in medicines as demulcents, emollients, and relaxants, particularly in catarrh, intestinal irritations, &c.: and in Pharmacy, they are employed in the formation of emulsions, pills, &c.

GUMMI NOSTRAS, (F.) Gomme du Pays; Indig'neum Gum. These generic names are given to several species of gum, which flow spontaneously from certain indigenous fruit trees, — such as the almond, cherry, peach, apricot, &c. The indigenous gums have nearly the same properties as gum Arabic; but they are inferior to it.

GUMMI ORENBURGENSE, see Pinus larix—g. Panacis, see Pastinacæ opoponax—g. ad Podagram, Cambogia.

GUMMI-RESINA, Gum-resin. A milky juice, obtained by making incisions into the branches, stalks and roots of certain vegetables. Gum-resins are compounds of resin, gum, often with essential oil, and different other vegetable matters. They are solid, opaque, brittle, of a strong odour, acrid taste, variable colour, and are heavier than water. Water dissolves a part of them, and alcohol another; hence proof spirit is the proper menstruum. The generality of the gum-resins are powerful stimulants to the whole or to parts of the economy. The chief are ansafatida, gum ammoniacæ, euphorbium, galbanum, camboge, myrrh, olibanum, opoponax, scammony, aloes, &c.

GUN-COTTON, see Collodion—g. e. Ethereal solution of Collodion.

GUNJAH, see Bangue.

GUNNERA PERPENSA, A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Urticaceæ; the decoction of which is taken as a domestic remedy by the farmers, as a tonic in dyspepsia. A tincture has been used in gravel. An infusion of the leaves is demulcent, and is employed in pulmonary affections. The leaves are applied fresh, to cure wounds and ulcers.

GURGES, Pharynx.

GURGITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temp. at its source, 176° Fah. It contains carbonic acid, carbonates of lime, magnesia, iron and soda, sulphates of lime and soda, chloride of sodium and silica.

GURGLING. 'Gushing with noise,' as water from a bottle. (F.) Gargouillement, same etymon as gargle. The rhonchus or râle heard on auscultation when there is a cavity in the lungs containing pus. It is the 'cavernous rattle or rhonchus,' Râle caverneux. The size of the bubbles heard varies, and hence the rhonchus has been called cavernous and cavernulous, (F.) Râle cavernuleux. If the cavern be large, this râle will nearly resemble the gurgling of a bottle (gloglou d'une bouteille); if, on the contrary, the cavern be small, it will not differ from the râle muqueux.

GURGULIO, Penis, Uvula.

GUSTATIF, (Nerf) see Lingual Nerve.

GUSTATION, Degustation, Taste.

GUTS, SLIPPERINESS OF THE, Lientery.

GUTTA, Apoplexy, Cambogia, Gout.

GUTTA. A Drop, Stalagma, Almusel, Stilla (F.) Goutte. A quantity of liquid, generally valued, in pharmacy, at the weight of a grain. The weight, however, varies according to different circumstances, as the degree of tenacity of the fluid, and the extent of moist surface to which the suspended drop is attached before it falls; and it was found by Mr. Alsop to be influenced by the size of the bottle, and the angle of inclination at which it was held during the operation of dropping. The following are some of his results as to the number of drops required to measure a fluidrachm, when dropped from a large and a small bottle.

	From a large bottle.	From a small bottle.
(fz) Diluted sulphuric acid	24 drops	84 drops
Scheele's hydrocyanic acid	35	70
Distilled water	31	54
Solution of ammonia	40	48
Tincture of opium	84	135
Rectified spirits	100	130
Tincture of chloride of iron	100	150

GUTTA GAMANDRÆ, Cambogia—g. Gamba, Cambogia—g. Opaca, Cataract.

GUTTA PERCHA, Gutta tuban, Gomme getta'nia. The concrete juice of a tree—Isoua'dra gutta—which is indigenous in Singapore and its vicinity, and belongs to the Natural Order Sapotaceæ. Plunged in boiling water it softens, when it may be moulded like caoutchouc to any form, which it retains on cooling. Splints and other instruments have been made of it.

A solution of gutta percha in chloroform—Traumat'icæ—has been used with advantage, topically, in various cutaneous affections, scrofulous and indolent ulcers, and as an ecrotic in small-pox.

GUTTA ROSACEA SYPHILITICA, Crown of Venus.

GUTTA RO'SEA, G. Rosa'cea, Iou'thus corymbifer, Crusta serpigino'sa seu prurigino'sa, Acnè rosacea, Rose'ola acnè'sa, Thylaci'itia, Bacchia, Butiga, Car'bauced Face, Rosy Drop or Whelk, Copper-nose, Bottle-nose, Grey blossoms, Grog-roses, Brandy-face, (F.) Coppernose, Goatle Rose, Bourgeois, Dartre pustulense conpervæ. An eruption of small, suppurating tubercles, with shining redness, and an irregular granular appearance of the skin of the part of the face which is affected. The redness commonly appears first at the end of the nose, and then spreads on both sides. It is often produced by hard drinking. Its cure must be attempted by regular regimen, and cooling means internally: weak spirituous or saturnine lotions externally. The affection is usually very obstinate.

GUTTA SERENA, Amaurosis—g. Tuban, Gutta percha.

GUTTÆ ABBATIS ROUSSEAU, Ladanum abbatis Rousseau—g. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gum—g. Acidæ tonicæ, Elixir Acidum Halleri—g. Nervina, Alcohol sulfurico-æthereus ferri.

GUTTÆ NIGRÆ, Ae'tum o'pii, Common Black Drop. (Opii ζ viii, acetî destillat. Bij. Infuse.)

The celebrated Black Drop, Lan'caster or Quaker's Black Drop may be made as follows. Take half a pound of opium sliced; three pints of good verjuice, (juice of the wild crab,) one and a half ounce of nutmegs, and half an ounce of saffron. Boil to a proper thickness, and add a quarter of a pound of sugar, and two spoonfuls of yeast. Set the whole in a warm place, near the fire, for six or eight weeks; then place it in the open air until it becomes a syrup. Lastly, decant, filter, and bottle it up, adding a little sugar to each bottle. One drop is equal to three of laudanum; and it is nearly devoid of all the unpleasant exciting effects of the latter. An analogous formula is contained in the Pharmacopœia of the United States under the name Ae'tum opii, Vinegar of Opium.

GUTTALIS CARTILAGO, Arytenoid Cartilage.

GUTTERIA, Bronechoele.

GUTTUR, The throat; the larynx; the trachea.

GUTTUR GLOBOSUM, Bronechoele—g. Tumidum, Bronchocele.

GUTTURAL, Gutturalis, from guttur, 'the throat.' Relating or belonging to the throat.

The Superior Thyroideal Artery is sometimes called Guttural Artery.

A Guttural Cough is one occasioned by irritation of the larynx or trachea.

A Guttural Sound is one produced, as it were, in the throat.

GUTTURIS OS, Hyoïdes os.

GUTTURIA, Arytenoid cartilages.

GYMNA, Genital Organs.

GYMNASTION, Exercise.

GYMNASIUM, from γυμνος, 'naked.' Palæstra. An establishment amongst the ancients, intended for bodily exercises, as wrestling, running, &c.; a term now used, in Germany more especially, for an academy or higher school.

GYMNASIUM, Gymnas'ies, Gymnas'ta; same etymon. The manager of a gymnasium. One, whose profession it is to prevent or cure diseases by gymnastics.

GYMNASTICS, Gymnas'tica, Medici'na gymnast'ica seu enect'ica, Somascet'ies, (F.) Gymnastique, Somascétique. Same etymon. That part of hygienic medicine which treats of bodily exercises. It is called Medical Gymnastics. The ancients had also Athlet'ic Gymnastics, and Military Gymnastics. Herodotus, of Selivrea, first proposed gymnastics for the cure of disease.

GYMNASTIQUE, Gymnastics.

GYMNEURA LACTIFERUM, Ceylon cow-tree, Kiriaghnum. A tree, of the Family Apocynaceæ, the juice of which is used by the Cingaleses as milk.

GYMNOC'LADUS CANADENSIS, Coffee Tree, Kentucky Coffee-bean Tree, Mahogany, Nickar Tree, Bondue. Order, Leguminosæ; from γυμνος, 'naked,' and κλαδος, 'a branch.' An indigenous tree, which grows from Ohio to Louisiana. The leaves are eathartic, and said to contain cytisin. The seeds are a good substitute for coffee.

GYMNOGRAMME CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOPTERIS CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOSIS, Denudation.

GYNE'CANER, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and ανηρ, 'a man.' Vir effemina'tus. An effeminate man.

GYNECANTHE, Tamus communis.

GYNECATOP'TRON, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and κατοπτρον, 'a speculum.' A speculum for investigating the female organs of generation.

GYNECEA, Gynæceia.

GYNECEIA, Gynæci'a, Gynæce'a, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman.' The catamenia;—the lochia. The diseases of women in general.—Hippocrates, Galen, Foësius.

GYNECEUM, Antimonium, Vulva.

GYNECE'US, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman.' Belonging to women. Female. Feminine.

GYNECIA, Gynæceia, Menses.

GYNECOLOG'IA, Gynecol'ogy, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of the nature, diseases, &c. of women.

GYNECOMA'NIA, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μανια, 'mania,' 'rage.' That species of insanity, which arises from love for women. Some have used the word synonymously with nymphomania.

GYNECOMAZIA, see Gynæcomastus.

GYNECOMAS'TUS, Gynæcomas'tus, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μαστος, 'a breast.' A man whose breasts are as large as those of a woman.—Galen, Ingrassias. The condition is called Gynæcomaz'ia.

A considerable enlargement of the breasts of a female was formerly called Gynæcomas'tion.

GYNECOMYS'TAX, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μυσταξ, 'the beard.' The hair on the pubes of women.—Rolfink.

GYNECOPHO'NUS, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and φωνή, 'voice.' A man who has an effeminate voice.

GYNANDRIA, Hermaphroditus.

GYNANDROP'SIS PENTAPHYL'LA, Cleo'nē pentaphyll'la. Ord. Capparidaceæ; an indigenous plant, is possessed of diaphoretic properties. The juice alone, or mixed with oil, has been used in earache.

GYNANDRUS, Gynanthropus.

GYNANTHROP'US, Gynan'drus. An hermaphrodite who belongs more to the male than to the female sex.

GYNATRE'SIA, from γυνή, 'a woman,' and σπητος, 'imperforate.' Closure or imperforation of the external parts of generation of the female.

GYNE, Female, Woman.

GYNECOLOGY, Gynæcologia.

GYNIDA, Hermaphrodite.

GYNOARIUM, Ovarium.

GYNOCARDIA ODORATA, Chaulmoogra.

GYNOPLAS'TIC, Gynoplas'ticus, from γυνή, 'a woman,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The gynoplastic operation is employed for opening or dilating the closed or contracted genital openings of the female.

GYPSY-WEED, Lycopus sinuatus, and L. Virginicus.

GYRI CEREBRI, Convolutions (cerebral,)—g. Cochleæ. Sealæ of the Cochlea—g. Intestinales, see Anse.

GYROMIA VIRGINICA, Medeola Virginica.

GYROPHLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GYROPHORA, see Tripe de Roche.

GYRUS, Convolution—g. Intestinalis, Anse intestinale.

GYRUS FORNICA'TUS, 'Arched convolution.' Fillet of the corpus callosum. A large convolution of the brain, which lies horizontally on the corpus callosum, and may be traced forwards and backwards to the base of the brain, terminating by each extremity at the fissure of Sylvius. The surface of the hemisphere, where it comes in contact with the corpus callosum, is bounded by it.

GYTLING, Infans.

H.

HABBERING, Balbuties.

HAB-EL-KALIMBAT, Pistacia terebinthus.

HABBI, Hagenia Abyssinica.

HABBLING, Balbuties.

HABE'NA. A Bridle, Tel'amon. A bandage for uniting the lips of wounds; which, in many instances, replaced the suture.—Galen.

HABENÆ OF THE PINEAL GLAND, see Pineal Gland.

HABENULÆ OF THE PINEAL GLAND, see Pineal Gland.

HABIL'LA DE CARTHAGE'NA, Bojuio, Carthage'na Bean, (F.) Fève de Corthagène. A kind of bean of South America, famed as an effectual antidote for the poison of all serpents, if a small quantity be eaten immediately.

HABIT, Habitu'do, from habere, habitum, 'to have or to hold'; Assuetu'do, Mos, Usus, Consuetu'do, Ethos, 'ε̄θις, Hexis, Ethnos'ynē, (F.) Habitude, Accoutumance. Habit is the aptitude for repeating certain acts:—or, a facility, which results from the frequent repetition of the same act. It is, according to vulgar expression, 'a second nature.' Habit may predispose to certain diseases, or it may protect against them. It ought not to be lost sight of, in attending to the progress of disease, or of its treatment.

HABIT OF BODY, Constitu'tio, Hab'itus, H. Cor'poris, Cutas'tasis, Hexis, Epiphani'a, (F.) Habitude exterieure, Habitude du corps. The aggregate of the physical qualities of the human body.

HABITU'DE, Habit—h. du Corps, Habit of body—h. Exterieur, Habit of body.

HABITUDO, Habit.

HABITUS, Habit of body—h. Apoplecticus, Apoplectic habit—h. Corporis, Habit of body—h. Quadratus, see Apoplectic—h. Torosus, see Apoplectic.

HABROMA'NIA, from ἄβροσ, 'gay, and μανια, 'mania. Insanity in which the delusions are of a gay character.

HACHICHI, see Bangue.

HACHISCH, Bangue.

HACKBERRY, Celtis occidentalis, Prunus padus.

HADDOCK, see Oleum jeecoris aselli.

HÆMA, 'αιμα, 'αιματος, 'blood.

HÆMACHROINE, Hæmatine.

HÆMACHRO'SES, (G.) Hæmachrosen, from hæma, and χρωσις, 'oloration. A family of diseases in which the blood has its colour different from usual, as in purpura and cyanosis.—Fuchs.

HÆMACY'ANIN, from hæma, and κυανος, 'blue. A blue colouring matter, detected by Sanson in healthy blood, and in bile by some chemists, but not by others.

HÆMADON'OSUS, from hæma, and νοσος, 'a disease. Hæmatangion'osis, Hæmatangiou'nosis, Hæmatangiō'nin. Disease of the blood-vessels.

HÆMADOSTO'SIS, from hæma, and οστωσις, 'a bony tumour. Ossification of the blood-vessels.

HÆMADROMOMETER, Hæmodromometer.

HÆMADYNAMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMADYNAM'ICS, (F.) Hæmodynamique, from hæma, and δυναμις, 'power. The mechanical theory of the circulation of the blood.

HÆMADYNAMOMETER, Hæmatodynamometer, Hæmadynam'eter, Hæmon'eter, Hæmatom'eter, (F.) Hæmadynamètre, Hæmonètre; from hæma, δυναμις, 'power, and μετρον, 'a measure. An instrument for measuring the force of the blood in the vessels. It consists of a bent glass tube, the lower bent part of which is filled with mercury. A brass head is fitted into the artery, and a solution of carbonate of soda is interposed between the mercury and the blood, which is allowed to enter the tube for the purpose of preventing its coagulation. The pressure of the blood on the mercury in the descending portion of the bent tube causes the metal to rise in the ascending portion; and the degree to which it rises indicates the pressure under which the blood moves.

HÆMAGASTER, Hæmatogaster.

HÆMAGASTRIC PESTILENCE, Fever, yellow.

HÆMAGOGUM, Præonia.

HÆMAGO'GUS, from hæma, and αγω, 'I drive off. A medicine which promotes the menstrual and hemorrhoidal discharges.

HÆMAL, from hæma. Relating to the blood or blood-vessels.

HÆMAL ARCH. The arch formed by the projections anteriorly of the ribs and sternum from the bodies of the vertebræ. It encloses the great blood-vessels.—Owen.

HÆMAL AXIS, Aorta—h. Spine, Sternum.

HÆMALOPIA, Hæmophthalmia, Hæmalopis.

HÆMALOPIS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMALOPS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMAN'THUS COCCIN'EUS. A beautiful South African plant, Nat. Ord. Anaryllideæ, the bulb of which is employed as a diuretic. It is given as an oxyæle in asthma and dropsy. The fresh leaves are antiseptic, and applied to foul, flabby ulcers, and in anthrax.

HÆMAPERITONIRRHAG'IA, (F.) Hæmaperitonorrhagie; from hæma, περιτοναιον, 'peritoneum, and ραγη, 'a violent rupture. An exhalation of blood into the peritoneum.

HÆMAPHLE'IN, Hæmatophæ'um, Hæmoph'um, from hæma, and φαιος, 'of a dusky colour. A term applied by Simon to the brown colouring matter of the blood, supposed by some to be nothing more than hæmatin modified by an alkali.

HÆMAPH'OBUS, Hæmoph'obus, from hæma, and φοβος, 'dread. One who has a dread of blood:—who cannot look at it without fainting.

HÆMAPOPHYSES, Costal cartilages, see Costa.

HÆMAPOR'IA, Hæmatopor'ia, Hæmatopor'ia, Oligohæ'mia, Oligæ'mia, from hæma, and απορος, 'poor. Paucity of blood. See Anæmia.

HÆMAPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMAS, 'αιμας, gen. 'αιματος. A blood-vessel

HÆMASTATICA, Hæmatostatica.

HÆMASTAT'ICS, Hæmastat'icæ, from hæma, and στατικη, 'statives. The statives of the blood and blood-vessels; Hæmastat'ics.

HÆMATANAGOGÆ, Hæmatemesis.

HÆMATAL'LOS COPY, Hæmatulloscop'ia, from hæma, αλλοις, 'different, and σκοπειν, 'to view. The mode of distinguishing different kinds of blood from each other.—Toddei.

HÆMATANGIONOSUS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATANGIOSIS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATAPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATAPORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATAPOSTEMA, from hæma, and αποσθημα, 'an abscess.' An abscess which contains blood.

HÆMATAULICA, Vascular system.

HÆMATEC'LYSIS, Hæmotex'ia, Hæmotex'is, Hæmatol'ysis, Hæmatosep'isis, Sau'gninis dissolu'tio; from hæma, and εκλυσις, 'loosening.' Dissolution of the blood.

HÆMATELEUM, see Blood.

HÆMATEMESIS, from hæma, and εμω, 'I vomit.' Hæmorrhô'gia Hæmatem'esis, Vom'itus cruent'us, Vom'itus seu Vomit'io Sau'gninis, Gastro'rro'hag'ia, Gastro-hæmorrhag'ia, Hæmorrhag'ia ventric'uli, Hæmorrhœ'a ventric'uli, Hæmatem'og'gê, Vomiting of Blood, (F.) Hématémèse, Vomissement de sang. Hæmatemesis is generally preceded by a feeling of oppression, weight, and dull or pungent pain in the epigastric and in the hypochondriac regions; by anxiety, and, occasionally, by syncope. Blood is then passed by vomiting, and sometimes, also, by stool,—the blood being generally of a grumous aspect. Hæmatemesis may be active or passive, acute or chronic. The blood effused proceeds from rupture of vessel, or from a sanguineous exhalation at the surface of the mucous membrane of the stomach. It is often observed in females whose menstrual secretion is irregularly performed. It is not of much danger, except when connected with disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen. On dissection of those who have died from protracted hæmatemesis,—for the acute kind is comparatively devoid of danger,—the mucous membrane of the stomach is found red and inflamed, or black, and the vessels considerably dilated. Complete abstinence from food; rest; the horizontal posture; bleeding, if the hemorrhage be active; cold, acidulous drinks, &c., constitute the usual treatment.

HÆMATENCEPHALUM, Apoplexy.

HÆMATEPAGOGUE, Congestion.

HÆMATERA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÆMATERUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMATEXOSTOSIS, Osteosarcoma.

HÆMATHIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATHORAX, Hæmatothorax.

HÆMATIC, Sanguine—h. Crystals, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATIASIS, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATICA, from hæma. Diseases of the sanguineous function:—the third class in the nosology of Good. Also, medicines that act on the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATICA DOCTRINA, Hæmatology.

HÆMATICUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATHIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATIN, Hæmat'ina, Hæmat'ine, Hæmat'oin, Hem'atoin, Hæmater'ythrnm, Hæmer'ythrnm, Zöôhen'atin, Hemachro'in, Hematocro'ine, Gl'adine, Phœ'nodine, Phœ'nicine, Hæmatocro'nite, Cru'orin, Rubrin, Glob'ulin of some; Rouge du Sang; from hæma. The red colouring matter of the blood. It resides in distinct particles or globules, and, in the opinion of some observers, in the envelope of the globules. It appears to be of a peculiar character, and one that has not yet been determined by the chemist. That the colour of the blood is not owing to the peroxide of iron which it contains is shown by the fact mentioned by Scherer, that he removed the iron by acids, and yet a deep red tincture was formed when alcohol was added to the residuum.

HÆMATIN'IC, Hæmatin'icus: from hæmatin, 'the red colouring matter of the blood.' An agent that augments the number of red corpuscles of the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATINIC CRYSTALS, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATINUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATIS'CHESIS, Hæmis'chesis, Hæmocr'iph'ia, from hæma, and σχειν, 'to suppress.' The retention or suppression of a natural or artificial flow of blood.

HÆMATISMUS, Epistaxis, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATISTH'MUS, from hæma, and σθημος, 'pharynx.' Hemorrhage into the pharynx.

HÆMATI'TES, Hæmati'tis, from αιμα, 'blood,' Resembling blood. Lapis Hæmati'tes. A beautiful ore of iron, called also, Bloodstone, O'chrea rubra, Oxy'dum fer'ricum crystallizatum nativum, Ferrum Hæmatites. When finely levigated, and freed from the grosser parts, by frequent washings with water, it has been long recommended in hemorrhage, fluxes, uterine obstructions, &c., in doses of from one scruple to three or four. Also, a vessel that contains blood, αιματις φλεψ.

HÆMATMUS, Gaz sanguinis.

HÆMATOCATHAR'TICA, from hæma, and καθαρσις, 'purification or purgation.' Remedies for purifying the blood.

HÆMATOCE'LE, from αιμα, αιματος, 'blood,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' A tumour formed by blood. By some, this term has been applied to a tumour formed by blood, effused into the areolar texture of the serotum. Others have used it for tumours arising from effusion of blood into the tunica vaginalis:—hæmatocœle, according to them, differing from hydrocœle, only in the character of the effusion.—Heister. Others, again, have applied it to effusions of blood into the interior of the tunica albuginea itself.—Richter. The first is the usual acceptation. It is most commonly caused by wounds or contusions; and requires the use of antiphlogistics, discutients, &c. Sometimes it is necessary to evacuate the effused blood.

HÆMATOCELE ARTERIOSA, Aneurism.

HÆMATOCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hématocéphale. A monster in which an effusion of blood on the brain has given occasion to more or less singular deformities.

HÆMATO-CEREBRIFORM DISEASE, Encephaloid.

HÆMATOCHE'ZIA, from hæma, and χειζω, 'I go to stool.' Sedes cruentæ, Caturrhe'is tero, Enterorrhag'ia simplex, Diarrhœ'a cruenta seu sanguinolenta, Hæmato-diarrhœ'a, Hæmorrhag'ia intestino'rnm, Entero-hæmorrhug'ia, (F.) Hæmorrhagie des intestins, Écoulement de sang par l'Intestin. Discharge of blood by stool. See Melæna.

HÆMATOCHROÏTE, Hæmatin.

HÆMATOCHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOCE'LIA, from hæma, and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen.' Effusion of blood into the abdomen.

HÆMATOCOL'PUS, from hæma, and κολπος, 'vagina.' Effusion of blood into the vagina. Accumulation of blood, owing to occlusion of the vagina.

HÆMATOCRYSTALLIN, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATOCYANOPATHIA, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYSTE, Hæmatoma saccatum.

HÆMATOCYST'IS, from hæma, and κυστις, 'bladder.' Hemorrhage into the bladder.

HÆMATO'DES, Hæmatoï'des, Sanguin'eus, Hæ'matoid, Hem'atoid, from hæma, and ειδος, 'appearance.' That which contains blood, or has the character of blood.

HÆMATODES FUNGUS, Hæmatomyces, Fungus cancerosus hæmatodes, Melaemia fungosa carcinoides, Angidiosporus, Angiomycetes, Hæmatosporus, Tumor fungosus sanguineus seu anomalus, Carcinoma hæmatodes, Carcinoma Spongiosum, Spongoid inflammation, Pulpy or Medullary Sarcoma, Bleeding Fungus, Soft Cancer, (F.) Carcinome unglant, Hématoncje fongoidé. An extremely alarming carcinomatous affection, which was first described, with accuracy, by Mr. John Burns, of Glasgow. It consists in the development of cancerous tumours, in which the inflammation is accompanied with violent heat and pain, and with fungus and bleeding excrescences. Even when the diseased part is extirpated at a very early period, recovery rarely follows; other organs being generally implicated at the same time. Fungus hæmatodes was the term first applied to the disease by Mr. Hey of Leeds. Mr. J. Burns called it Spongoid inflammation, from the spongy, elastic feel, which peculiarly characterizes it, and continues even after ulceration has taken place. The disease has, most frequently, been met with in the eyeball, the upper and lower extremities, testicle and mamma; but it occurs in the uterus, ovary, liver, spleen, brain, lungs, thyroid gland, and in the hip and shoulder-joint.

Some French surgeons designate, by this name, those tumours which were formerly termed anormales, carernenses, variqueuses, called Erectiles by Dupuytren, Hématoncies, by Alibert, and Telangiectasia by Gräfe.

HÆMATODIARRHŒA, Hæmatochezia.

HÆMATODYNAMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMATOGASTER, from hæma, and γαστήρ, 'stomach.' Effusion of blood into the stomach.

HÆMATOGENETICA, Hæmatopoetica.

HÆMATOGLOBULIN, see Globules of the blood.

HÆMATOGRAPHIA, Hæmatography, from hæma, and γραφία, 'a description.' A description of the blood.

HÆMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÆMATOID'IN, Hæmatocry'stallin, Hæmatidic, hæmatie, hæmin or blood crystals, (F.) Hématidine, Crystaux d'Hématine. A substance found in the midst, or in the vicinity, of effusions of blood, which is either in amorphous masses, or, more frequently, in minute rhomboidal crystals, or in fine needles. It is considered to be hæmatosin separated from the globules of the blood, and passed from the state of a non-crystallizable organic substance to one of a crystalline chemical compound.

HÆMATOL'OGY, Hæmatology, Hæmatolog'ia, Hæmatologia doctri'na, (F.) Hématologie, from hæma, and λογία, 'a discourse.' That part of medicine which treats of the blood.

HÆMATOLOGY, PATHOLOG'ICAL, (F.) Hématologie pathologique. Observation of the blood to detect its varying characters in disease.

HÆMATOL'YSES, (G.) Hæmatoly'sen, from hæma, and λυσις, 'solution.' An order of diseases in which there is diminished coagulability of the blood.—Fuchs.

HÆMATOLYSIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanæmicum.

HÆMATOMA, Thrombus, Tumor sanguineus. A bloody tumour, especially of the scalp of the new-born.

HÆMATOMA SACCA'TUM. An encysted tumour containing blood—Hæmatocyst'itè.

HÆMATOMANT'IA, from hæma, and μαντεια, 'divination.' Judgment of disease from the appearance of the blood.

HÆMATOMATRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMETACHYSIS, Transfusio sanguinis.

HÆMATOMETRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOMPHALOC'E'LE, Hæmatom'phalium, Hæmatomph'elus, from hæma, ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which encloses a bloody serum, or which has, at its surface, a number of varicose veins; constituting Varicom'phalus.

HÆMATOMPHALUM, Hæmatomphaloc'ele.

HÆMATOMYCES, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATON'YCUS, (F.) Hématoncje, from hæma, and υγκος, 'a tumour.' Alibert has given this name to Navic' mater'ni, Varicose tumours. He admits three varieties:—the H. fungoidè, H. frambœicè, and H. tuberc'ense.

HÆMATON'OSUS, Hæmat'osis, Hæmatopath'ia, Hæmopath'ia, from hæma, and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the blood. A hæmie or blood-disease.

HÆMATOPATHIA, Hæmatonosis.

HÆMATOPEDESIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMATOPERICA'R'DIUM, from hæma, and περικαρ'ειον, 'pericardium.' Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMATOPHLEUM, Hæmaphæin.

HÆMATOPHIL'IA, Hæmophil'ia, Hæmorrhophil'ia, Idiosyncr'asia hæmorrhag'ica, from hæma, and φιλεω, 'I love.' A hemorrhagic diathesis.

HÆMATOPHLEBES'TASIS. Sudden suppression of a hemorrhage;—from στασις 'αίματος φλεβ'ων', 'suppression of the blood of the veins.'—Galen.

HÆMATOPHOB'IA, Hæmophob'ia, from hæma, and φοβος, 'dread.' Dread or horror at the sight of blood, producing syncope, &c.

HÆMATOPHTHALMIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPH'THORES, (G.) Hæmatoph'thor'en; from hæma, and φθορα, 'corruption.' An order of diseases in the classification of Fuchs, in which the blood is materially altered in composition, as in typhus.

HÆMATOP'ISIS, (F.) Hématopisie. M. Capuron, of Paris, has applied the term Hématopisie utérine, from analogy with Hydropisie utérine, to a collection of blood which sometimes takes place in the uterus, when, owing to faulty conformation, the exit of the menstrual flux is prevented.

HÆMATOPLA'NIA, Hæmatoplanc'is, from hæma, and πλανη, 'wandering.' A vicarious hemorrhage.

HÆMATOPLANIA MENSTRUALIS, Menstruation, vicarious.

HÆMATOPLASMA, Liquor sanguinis.

HÆMATOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HÆMATOPŒA, Hæmatopoetica.

HÆMATOPOESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPOËT'ICA, Hæmatopœ'a, Hæmatogenet'ica, 'bloodmakers,' from hæmi, and ποιεω, 'I make.' Agents that favour hæmatosis. Iron was called by the ancients meta'lum hæmatopœt'icum.

HÆMATOPOIESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATOPS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOP'SIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATOPTYSIA, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HÆMATORRHAGIA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHŒA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOSCHEOELE, Hæmoscheocelē, Hæmatoscheum, from hæma, σχῆλον, 'serotum,' and κλήν, 'rupture.' Effusion of blood into the serotum.

HÆMATOSCHIEUM, Hæmatoscheocele.

HÆMATOSCOP'IA, Hæmoscop'ia, (F.) Hæmorhæscopie, from hæma, and σκοπεῖν, 'I view.' An examination of blood drawn.

HÆMATOSEPSIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HÆMATOSIS, Exhæmato'sis, Enhæmato'sis, Hæmatopoi'sis, Hæmatopoe'sis, Procreatio sanguinis, Decarbonization or Atmospherization of the blood, Sanguification; from hæma. The transformation of the venous blood and chyle into arterial blood by respiration. Called, also, Aëration, and Arterialization, of the blood. Formation of blood in general.

HÆMATOSPILIA, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

HÆMATOSPONGUS, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATOSTATICA, from hæma, and στατική, 'statics.' Ischæmia, Hæmastat'ica, Hæmotostat'ics, Hæmostat'ics, Hematostat'ics, Hemostat'ics, Enæ'ma, (F.) Hématostatiques, Hématistiques, Hémostatiques. The doctrine of the motion of the blood in living bodies. Also, remedies for stopping blood. Styptics.

HÆMATOSTEON, from hæma, and στέον, 'a bone.' Effusion of blood into the bones or joints.

HÆMATOSYMPHORESIS, Congestion.

HÆMATOSYNAGOGÉ, Congestion.

HÆMATOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMATOTHOR'RAX, Hæmatho'rax, Hæmatho'rax, Hæmoptysis inter'na, Pleurorrhœ'a sanguin'ea, Pleurorrhag'ia, Pæumorrhag'ia inter'na, Hæmorrhug'ic Pleur'isy, Pleural hæmorrhage, from hæma, and θώραξ, 'the chest.' Extravasation of blood into the chest.

HÆMATOXYLON, H. Campechianum.

HÆMATOXYLON CAMPECHIANUM, from hæma, and ξύλον, 'wood.' Ac'cia Zeylon'ica, Logwood. The part of the tree used in medicine is the wood, Hæmatox'ylī Lignum, Lignum Campechen'sē seu Campechia'num seu Compescad'num seu In'dicūm seu Sappan seu Brasilia'num rubrum seu cæru'lenū, Hæmatox'ylon (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Bois de Campeche. Family, Leguminosæ. Ser. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. Logwood is almost inodorous; of a sweetish, substringent taste; and deep red colour. Its virtues are extracted both by water and alcohol. It is astrigent and tonic, and is used in the protracted stage of diarrhœa and dysentery.

HÆMATOZO'A, (F.) Hématozoaires, from hæma, and ζῶον, 'animal.' Entozoa in the blood.

HÆMATURESIS, Hæmaturia.

HÆMATURIA, Hæmatur'e'sis, from hæma, and ουρῶν, 'I make urine.' Voiding of blood by urine. Hæmorrhag'ia hæmat'ria, H. ex viis urinariis, Hæmure'sis, Hæmu'ria, Mictio Cruen'ta seu Sanguin'ea, Mictus Cruen'tis seu Sanguineus, Hæmorrhœ'a viarum urinariarum, Sanguis in Uri'na, Bloody urine, (F.) Pissement de Sang, Hématurie. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages. Like other hemorrhages, it may be active or passive. It may proceed from the kidneys, Nephrohæmorrhag'ia, bladder, or urethra. The essential symptoms are:—blood, evacuated by the urethra; preceded by pain in the region of the bladder or kidneys, and accompanied by faintness. Whencsoever it proceeds, hæmaturia usually takes place by exhalation. Rupture of vessels is by no means common in the mucous membranes. Active hæmaturia requires general or local blood-letting; diluent and cooling drinks; absolute rest; and the horizontal posture. The chronic kind is more troublesome. It requires acidulated or aluminous drinks; chalybeates and tonics in general. When hæmaturia is excessive, cold injections may be thrown into the rectum or into the vagina of women, and topical applications be made to the perinæum.

HÆMATURIA CYSTICA, Cystorrhagia—h. Ejaculatoria, Spermatocystidorrhagia—h. Seminalis, Spermatocystidorrhagia—h. Stillititia, Urethrorrhagia.

HÆMATUS, from hæma, and οὖς, gen. ωτός, 'the ear.' Effusion of blood into the ear.

HÆMAXIS, Blood-letting.

HÆMENCEPHALUS, Apoplexy.

HÆMENDOCARDIUM, (F.) Hémendocarde, from hæma, and 'endocardium,' the lining membrane of the heart. Inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

HÆMERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMIC, Hæ'micus, from hæma, 'blood.' Relating or appertaining to blood; as a "hæmic disease,"—a blood disease.

HÆMIDROSIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMIN CRYSTALS, see Hæmatoïdin.

HÆMISCHESIS, Hæmatischesis.

HÆMITIS, from αἷμα, 'blood,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the blood. (F.) Hémite. The alteration of the blood that occurs in inflammatory diseases.—Piorry.

HÆMO-ARTHRITIS, Rheumatism (acnte).

HÆMOCARDIORRHAG'IA, Hæmocard'ium, Apoplex'ia cordis, Apoplexy of the heart, (F.) Hémorrhagie ou Apoplexie du Cœur, Hémocarde, from hæma, καρδία, 'the heart,' and ρῆγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Effusion of blood into the substance of the heart.

HÆMOCARDIUM, Hæmocardiorrhagia.

HÆMOCERCH'NOS. This term has received two acceptations, owing to the different senses in which κερχως is employed; signifying, sometimes, hissing; at others, dry. Consequently, the Hellenists have translated the compound word, at times, by spitting of blood, with hissing in the throat; at others, by evacuation of dry matters.

HÆMOCRYPHIA, Hæmatischesis.

HÆMODES, Sanguine.

HÆMODIA, Hæmodias'mus, Hæmo'dia, Hæbetn'do seu Stupor Dent'ium, from αἷμα, 'blood,' and ὀδούς, 'tooth,' 'I have pain in the teeth.' Pain in the teeth, and more especially Agacement, or the setting on edge of those bodies by acid or acerb substances. It is also called Odont'ia Stupo'ris, Odontal'gia hæmo'dia, Dolor dent'ium à strido'rē, Cataplex'is, Odontamblyog'mus, Odonthyperæsthes'is, Tooth-edge.

HÆMODIASMUS, Hæmodia.

HÆMODROMOM'ETER, Hæmadromom'eter, from hæma, δρομος, 'course,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring the rate of the blood's movement. It consists of a glass tube, 52 inches long, containing water, bent into the form of a hair-pin, which is substituted for a segment of the bloodvessel, the velocity of the blood in which it is required to measure. The column of blood, which comes from the heart, pushes the column of water before it, and thus enables the velocity of the blood to be estimated.

HÆMOIDES, Sanguine.

HÆMOMETRECTA'SIA, from hæma, μητρα, of a florid red. In such active hemorrhages, the great indications of treatment will be, to diminish plethora where it exists, and to lessen the heart's action. Bleeding, purgatives, and cold, will be the chief agents.

Passive Hemorrhage, Hæmorrhag'ia passiva seu veno'sa, Profu'sio, P. hæmorrhag'ica, occurs in those of weak constitution; or who have been debilitated by protracted disease, poor diet, long watching, excessive evacuations, &c.

The direct causes may be:—previous active hemorrhage; scorbutus, or any thing capable of inducing atony or asthenic hyperæmia of the small vessels. These hemorrhages are not preceded by excitement or by any signs of local determination. They are usually accompanied by paleness of the countenance; feeble pulse; fainting, &c. The indications of treatment will be:—to restore the action of the small vessels and the general tone of the system: hence the utility of styptics and cold externally; and of tonics and astringents, creasote, mineral acids, &c., internally. Hemorrhage also occurs from mechanical hyperæmia, as when hæmoptysis is produced by tubercles in the lungs: hæmatemesis by disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen, &c.

In Traumatic Hemorrhages, or those which are the consequences of wounds of arterial or venous trunks, the blood is of a florid red colour, and issues by jets and pulses, if it proceed from an artery; whilst it is of a deeper red, issues slowly and by a continuous flow, if from a vein. If the capillary vessels be alone divided, the blood is merely effused at the surface of the wound. Of the means used for arresting these traumatic hemorrhages, some act mechanically as absorbents, ligature, and compression; others chymically, as fire, caustics, creasote, astringents, &c.

HÆMORRHŒDAL, HæmorrhŒdal, HæmorrhŒdal'is, HæmorrhŒdeus. Relating to hæmorrhoids; as hæmorrhoidal flux, hæmorrhoidal tumours, &c.

HÆMORRHŒDAL ARTERIES have been distinguished into superior, middle, and inferior. 1. The first is the termination of the inferior mesenteric artery, which assumes the name superior hæmorrhoidal, when it reaches the upper and posterior part of the rectum. 2. The middle hæmorrhoidal is furnished by the hypogastric or internal pudic. It ramifies on the inferior and anterior part of the rectum. 3. The inferior hæmor- rhoidal arteries are branches of the internal pudic, furnished to the inferior part of the rectum and to the muscles of the anus.

HÆMORRHŒDAL NERVES. These emanate from the sciatic and hypogastric plexuses; and cover the rectum with their numerous filaments.

HÆMORRHŒDAL VEINS follow the same distribution, and generally empty themselves into the lesser mesenteric. Some of them assist in the formation of the hypogastric vein.

HÆMORRHŒDAL VESSELS, Vasa sæd'ia, are those vessels which are distributed to the rectum—the seat of hæmorrhoids.

HÆMORRHŒDALES NODI, Hæmorrhoids.

HÆMORRHŒDALES, see Hæmorrhoids—h. Cæcæ, see Hæmorrhoids—h. Fluentes, Hæmorrhoids—h. Furentes, see Hæmorrhoids—h. Mariscosæ, Hæmorrhoids—h. non Fluentes, Hæmorrhoids—h. Oris, Stomatorrhagia.

HÆMORRHŒDRO'SIS, from αἰμορροῖς, 'hemorrhoids,' and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating.' Sweating of hæmorrhoidal blood. [?]—Bock.

HÆMOR'RHOIS, Aimor'rhoîs, Asclepias'mus, from hæma, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Aimor'roîs, Proct'ica Maris'ca, Maris'ca, Proct'al'gia HæmorrhŒdal'is, Morbus Hæmorrhoidal'is, Piles, Em'ero'ds, (F.) HæmorrhŒdes. The essential symptoms of this affection are:—Livid and painful tubercles or excrescences, (HæmorrhŒdal Tumours), usually attended with a discharge of mucus or blood, (HæmorrhŒdal flux, Proctorrhœ'a, Hæmoproct'ia, Hæmorrhœ'a vasorum hæmorrhŒdal'ium, (F.) Hæmoproct'ic.) The most common causes of piles are a sedentary life; accumulation of feces in the rectum; violent efforts at stool; pregnancy, &c. The precursory symptoms are:—pains in the loins; stupor of the lower limbs; and uneasiness in the abdomen and rectum, with more or less gastric, cerebral, and indeed general disorder;—constituting the Diath'esis HæmorrhŒdal'is, Motus seu Tarba HæmorrhŒdal'is, and Mol'i'men HæmorrhŒdal'e, of most of the writers of Continental Europe. To these symptoms follow one or more round, smooth, renitent, painful, pulsating, and erectile tumours, around the margin of the anus, or within the anus; some pouring out blood occasionally. After having remained, for a time, tense and painful, they gradually shrink and disappear. The chief symptoms, occasioned by hæmorrhoidal tumours, when much inflamed, are;—constant pain, liable, however, to exacerbations, and to become augmented by the least pressure, or by the passage of the feces, and obliging the patient to preserve the horizontal posture.

Hæmorrhoids have generally been distinguished into—HæmorrhŒdes Fluen'tes seu Mariscosæ, Proct'ica Maris'ca cruen'ta, Bleeding or Open Piles; and into H. non fluen'tes, Proct'ica Maris'ca cæca, HæmorrhŒdes cæcæ seu furen'tes, HæmorrhŒdal'es nodi, Shut or blind piles. They have, also, been divided into internal or occult, and external, according to their situation; and into accidental or constitutional.

Hæmorrhoidal Tumours are extremely troublesome, by their disposition to frequent recurrence; and they are apt to induce fistula; otherwise, they are devoid of danger. When anatomically examined, they are found not to consist in a varicose dilatation of the veins of the rectum; but to be formed of a very close, spongy, texture; similar to that which surrounds the orifice of the vagina; and to be erectile, like it. They are surrounded by a delicate membrane, and have no internal cavity. The treatment, in mild cases of hæmorrhoidal tumours, is simple. Rest; the horizontal posture; the use of mild laxatives, as sulphur, castor oil, and emollient glysters, will be sufficient. If they be much inflamed, leeches may be applied; and warm cataplasms or cold lotions, according to circumstances, be prescribed, with abstinence, and cooling drinks. Afterwards, an ointment, composed of powdered galls and opium, may afford relief. It is in the relaxed kind, that such ointment, and the internal use of Ward's Paste, can alone be expected to afford much benefit. If, after repeated attacks, the tumours remain hard and painful, and threaten fistula, they may be removed.

By Hæmorrhoidal Flux, Fluxus hæmorrhoidal'is, Proctorrhag'ia, is meant the hæmorrhage which takes place from the rectum, owing to hæmorrhoids. It is a common affection. The quantity of blood discharged is various: at times, it is very trifling; at others, sufficient to induce great debility, and even death. It is announced and accompanied by the same symptoms as precede and attend hæmorrhoidal tumours. Like other hæmorrhages it may be active or passive; accidental or constitutional. The prognosis is rarely unfavourable. The affection may, almost always, be relieved by properly adapted means. These resemble such as are necessary in hæmorrhages in general. Perfect quietude, — mental and corporeal; light diet; cooling drinks; bleeding if the symptoms indicate it; astringents, (if the disease be protracted and passive,) such as the Tinctura Ferri Chloridi; aspersions of cold water on the anus; astringent injections; plugging and compression. Such will be the principal remedial agents. When the hæmorrhage has become habitual, or is vicarious, some caution may be required in checking it; and, if inconvenience arise from a sudden suppression, its return may be solicited by the semicupium, sitting over warm water, aloetic purgatives, glysters, irritating suppositories, &c.; or leeches may be applied to the anus.

To the internal bleeding pile, a soft, red, strawberry-like elevation of the mucous membrane, Dr. Houston, of Dublin, gives the name vascular tumour. For its removal he recommends the application of nitric acid, so as to produce sloughing of its surface.

Some authors have described a species of Leucorrhœa Anal'is or whitish discharge from the anus, which often attends ordinary hæmorrhoids. This they have called Proctœa maris'ca mucosa, Hæmor'chois alba, Hæmorrhag'ia mucosa, Leucorrhœis, &c. It requires no special mention.

The term Hæmorrhoid is applied at times to varicose veins developed elsewhere, as at the orifice of the uterus. See Metæmorrhœides.

HÆMORRHOIS AB EXANIÁ, Proctocœle — h. Proccedens, Proctocœle.

HÆMORRHOÏSCHESIS, from ἄσφορσις, hæmorrhôis'is, ῥεω, 'I flow,' and ἰσχω, 'I restrain.' Reten'tio fluxus hæmorrhoidal'is. Suppression or retention of the hæmorrhoidal flux.

HÆMORRHOPHËSIS, Absorptio sanguinis, from ἅμα, and ρῶσας, 'I sip up.' Absorption of blood.

HÆMORRHOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HÆMORRHOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMOSCHEOCELE, Hæmatoschoecœle.

HÆMOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMOSPASIA, see Hæmospastic.

HÆMOSPAS'TIC, (F.) Hæmospastique, from ἅμα, and σπασ, 'I draw.' An agent which draws or attracts blood to a part; as a cupping-glass. The operation is termed Hæmospas'tia, (F.) Hæmospas'tic. It is generally applied to a process by which the air is exhausted over a considerable surface, as over one or more of the extremities, by an appropriate pneumatic apparatus.

HÆMOSTA'SIA, Hæmostasis, Epid'exis, Son'guinis stagnat'io, (F.) Hæmostasie, from ἅμα, and στασις, 'stagnation.' Stagnation of blood. This name has, also, been given to any operation, the object of which is to arrest the flow of blood.

HÆMOSTAT'IC, PAGLIA'RI'S, Pagliari's Styptic, (F.) Eau de Pagliari. A styptic liquor, said to be of great power, discovered by M. Pagliari, a pharmacien at Rome. It is composed as follows: — Eight ounces of tincture of benzoin, one pound of alum, and ten pounds of water are boiled together for six hours in a glazed earthen vessel, the vaporized water being constantly replaced by hot water, so as not to interrupt the ebullition, and the resinous mass being kept stirred round. The fluid is then filtered, and kept in stoppered bottles. A drop of the fluid, poured into a glass containing human blood, produces an instantaneous magma.

HAG, Abdomen.

HAGARD, Haggard.

HAGBERRY, Prunus padus.

HAGE'NIA ABYSSIN'ICA, Bray'era anthelmintica, Bank'sia Abyssin'ica. An Abyssinian tree; Order, Rosaceæ; Sexual System, Icosandria Digynia, which the natives plant round their habitations, as an ornament. The infusion or decoction of its flowers, Flores casso, is employed by them as an anthelmintic, especially in cases of tape-worm. It is called, there, Синко or Сонско, Кассо, Колесо, Косо, Coiz, Cabotz, and Habbî.

HAGGARD, (F.) Hagard. The French use the term Air hagard, Œil hagard, Haggard air, 'Haggard eye,' for a physiognomy, in which there is at once an expression of madness and terror.

HAGIOSPERMUM, Artemisia santonica.

HAGIOXYLUM, Guaiacum.

HAINEMANNISM, Hæmæopathy.

HAIL, Chalaza.

HAIR, Sax. hær, Crinis, Pilus, Thrix, Pile, (F.) Poil. A conical, corneous substance, the free portion or shaft, scapus, of which issues to a greater or less distance from the skin, to the tissue of which it adheres by a bulb, Bulbus pili, seated in a hair follicle — folliculus pili — made by an inversion of the integument, the epidermis of which forms a "root sheath," vagi'na pili. At the base of the hair follicle, there is a small papilla, well supplied with bloodvessels and nerves, Papilla pili; at times called, but improperly, Pulpa seu Blastema pili. The hair receives various names in different parts — as Beard, Cilia, Eye-browes, Hair of the head, (Capilli), &c.

HAIR DYE, TWIGGS'S. A preparation much used to give colour to the hair. It may be formed of precipitated sulphur and acetate of lead, each \mathfrak{v} ; rose water, \mathfrak{z} iv; triturated together in a mortar. It should be applied twice a day, until the desired effect is produced.

 HAKE, see Oleum jecoris aselli.
 HAL, Salt.
 HALA'TION, Hala'tium; diminutive of 'αλς, 'salt.' A pungent remedy, with the ancients, which contained salts.

HALCHEMIA. The alchemists so called the art of fusing salts: from 'αλς, 'salt,' and χρω, 'I pour out.' — Libavus.

HALCYON, Aleyon.
 HALCYONIUM ROTUNDUM, Pila marina.
 HALE, Ephelides.
 HALEINE, Breath — h. Courte, Dyspnoea.

HALELE'ON, Halele'um, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' Oleum Sali mixtum. A mixture of oil and salt, for removing swellings of the joints. — Galen.

HALÉTÉRATION, Alteration.
 HALF-CASTE, Half-Cast, see Caste. A term applied, in India, to the offspring of a Hindoo and a European. Since, extended to the offspring of mixed races. The subjoined list from Tschudi's Travels in Peru, 1838 — 1842, shows the parentage of the different varieties of half-casts, and also the proper designations of the latter, as observed in South America.

Negro Father and Mulatta Mother	Zambo-negro.
Negro Father and Meztiza Mother.	Mulatto oscuro.
Negro Father and China Mother,	Zambo chino.
Negro Father and Zamba Mother.	Zambo-negro (perfectly black.)
Negro Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother	Mulatto (rather dark.)
Indian Father and Mulatta Mother	China-oscuro.
Indian Father and Meztiza Mother	Mestizo-claro (frequently very beautiful.)
Indian Father and China Mother.	Chino-cholo.
Indian Father and Zamba Mother	Zambo-claro.
Indian Father with China-chola Mother	Indian (with rather short frizzy hair.)
Indian Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother	Mestizo (rather brown.)
Mulatto Father and Zamba Mother	Zambo (a miserable race.)
Mulatto Father and Meztiza Mother	Chino (of rather clear complexion.)
Mulatto Father and China Mother,	Chino, rather dark.)

 HALICA, Alicia.
 HALICACALUM, Physalis.
 HALICES, Pandiculus.
 HALIDRYS VESICULOSA, Fucus vesiculosus.
 HALINA'TRUM, Halini'trum, Haloni'trum; from 'αλς, 'salt,' and natrum or natron. A name given by the ancients to subcarbonate of soda, containing a little subcarbonate of ammonia, which is found, ready-formed, on the plaster of damp walls, in places inhabited by man or animals. Also, Potassæ nitrus.

HALINITRUM, Halinatrum.
 HALINUS, Saline.
 HALITUOUS, Halitno'sus, from halitus, 'vapour.' (E.) Halitueus. The skin is said to be halitueuse, when covered with a gentle moisture. The vapour, exhaled in all the cavities of the body, so long as the blood is warm, is called Hal'itus. The odorous vapour, exhaled by the blood itself whilst warm, is called Hal'itus Sanguinis.

HALITUS, Breath — h. Oris Fœtidus, Breath, offensive — h. Sanguinis, Gaz sanguinis. See Halituous.

HALL, MINERAL WATERS OF. The springs of Hall, in Upper Austria, contain iodine.

HALLUCINATIO HYPOCHONDRIASIS, Hypochondriasis — h. Vertigo, Vertigo.

HALLUCINATION, Hallucina'tio, Hallucina'tio, Falla'cia, Illu'sio, I. sensûs, Socor'dia, Alu'sia, Allucina'tio, Parora'sis, Somnia'tio in statu vig'ili, Ido'lum, Waking dream, Phantasm, from allucinari or hallucinari, allucinatus, 'to be deceived.' A morbid error in one or more of the senses. Perception of objects, which do not in fact exert any impression on the external senses. Hallucination or delusion almost always, if not always, depends on disorder of the brain, but is not an index of insanity, unless the patient believes in the existence of the subject of the hallucination.

HALLUS, Pollex pedis.
 HALLUX, Pollex pedis.
 HALME, Muria.
 HALMYRIS, see Muria.
 HALMYR O'DES, Salsugino'sus, Salsu'gi-uosus, from 'αλμυρις, ('αλμη, 'sea-water,' 'αλς, 'salt,') 'a salt liquor,' saltish. An epithet given to any affection, in which the heat feels pungent under the finger of the physician. — Hippocrates.

HALMYRUS, Saline.
 HALO, Areola.

HALO SIGNA'TUS. The impression made by the ciliary processes on the anterior surface of the vitreous humour. So called from its consisting of a circle of indentations. — Sir C. Bell. Called by Haller, Striæ retinae subjectæ ligamento ciliar'i; by Winslow, Sulci ciliar'es.

HALODERÆUM, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and δεραιον, 'a collar,' (δερν, 'neck,') Colla'rium sali'num. A collar of salt applied to the neck, as in cases of croup.

HALOGENE, Chlorine.
 HALOIDUM OXYGENATUM, Potassæ murias hyperoxygenatus.

HALONIITIS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HALONITRUM, Halinatrum.

HALOPE'GÆE, from 'αλς, 'αλος, 'salt,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters whose chief ingredient is common salt — chloride of sodium.

HALOS, Areola.

HALOT'YLÊ, Coll'cita sali'na, from 'αλς, 'salt,' and τυλη, 'a bolster.' A bolster or pillow of salt, recommended in croup.

HALSBANE, Clavicle.
 HALS, 'αλς, 'salt,' hence Halogene, Haloid, &c.
 HALSE, Throat.

HALTE'RES. Pieces of lead held in the hands by the ancients to assist them in leaping.

HALUCINATIO, Hallucination.
 HALYCODES, Saline.

HALYSIS LATA, Bothriocephalus latus — h. Membranacea, Bothriocephalus latus — h. Solium, Tœnia solium.

HAM, Poples.

HAMAMELIS VIRGINIANA, H. Virgin'ica seu macrophylla, Witch hazel, Winter witch hazel, Snapping hazelnut, Winter bloom. Ord. Hamamelacæ. The bark of this tree, which is a native of the United States, is somewhat bitter and sensibly astringent; but it has not been much used. A cataplasm of the inner rind of the bark is said to have been found efficacious in painful inflammation of the eyes.

HAMARTHRTIS, Holarthritis, Catholarthritis, Arthritia universalis, from 'αμα, 'at once,' and αρθριτις, 'gout.' Gout in all the joints. Universal gout.

HAMCHI, Coxofemoral articulation.

HAM'MA, Nodus, 'a tie.' A knot, used for retaining bandages on any part. — Hippocrates. A truss.

HAMMERING, Balbuties.

HAMPS TEAD, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, situate in the neighbourhood of London, are a good chalybeate.

HAMSTRING, To, see Hamstrings.

HAMSTRINGS, (F.) Jarretiers. The strings or tendons of the ham.

The HAMSTRING MUSCLES are the biceps femoris, whose tendon forms the outer hamstring; and the semimembranosus, semitendinosus, gracilis and sartorius, whose tendons form the inner hamstring.

'To hamstring' means to cut the strings or tendons of the ham.

HAMULAR PROCESS, see Hamulus.

HAM'ULUS. Diminutive of hamus, 'a hook.' A hook or crook: Ancistrum. Also, any hook-like process; as the hamulus or hamular process of the pterygoid process of the sphenoid bone, which projects from the termination of the internal pterygoid plate.

HAMULUS LAMINÆ SPIRALIS, see Lamina spiralis.

HAMUS, see Hamulus.

HANCHE, Haunch.

HANCLETH, Malleolus.

HAND, Manns.

HANDWOMAN, Midwife.

HANDS, DROPPED, Hand-drop, Wrist-drop. A popular term for the paralysis of the hand, induced by the action of lead.

HANDWRIST, Carpus.

HANGERS, Crusta genu equinae.

HANGNAIL, (old Eng.) Aquail, (Prov.) Ang-nail, Stepmother's blessing, Wirt-springs, Nail-spring, Nag-nail, (F.) Envie. A portion of epidermis, detached so as to tear the integument in the vicinity of the finger nails.

HANNEBANE, Hyoxygamus.

HAPANTIS'MUS. Badly formed from πας, or πας, 'all.' Obliteratio completa. The mating or growing together of organic parts.

HAPHĒ, 'αφή, 'feeling, touch.' Hence:

HAPHON'OSI, Haphon'osi, from 'αφή, 'the touch.' Morbi tactūs. Diseases of the sense of touch.

HAPLOACNE, Aene simplex.

HAPLOPATHIA, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and παθος, 'disease.' Morbus simplex. A simple or uncomplicated affection.

HAPLOTOM'IA, Simplex sectio, Incisio simplex, Operatio simplex, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and τομή, 'incision.' A simple incision.

HAPSIS, Touch.

HAPTODYSPHOR'IA, Tactus dolerificus; from 'αφή, 'touch,' and δυσφορος, 'difficult to be borne.' Painful to the touch.

HAPTOGEN, Haptogenous.

HAPTOGÈNE, Haptogenous.

HAPTOG'ENOUS, Haptog'enus, Hap'togen, (F.) Haptogène, from 'απτω, 'I attach,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' Ascherson calls the pellicle, which forms around fatty matter when albumen is brought in contact with it, Haptogen membrane, (F.) Membrane haptogène.

HAPTOT'ICA, Haptot'icē, from 'αφή, 'touch.' The doctrine of the phenomena of touch.

HARD, (G.) hart, Durms, Scleros. (F.) Dur. That which offers much resistance. In anatomy, the hard parts are those which compose the osseous basis of the body; in other words, the skeleton. See Pulse, hard.

HARD'S FARINACEOUS FOOD, see Farinaceous.

HARDESIA, Hibernicus lapis.

HARDHACK, Spiraea tomentosa.

HARE-LIP, Lagochi'lus, Lagos'toma, Lagon'tomum, Lagon'tomum, La'bium Lepori'num, Olo-pho'nia Labii Lobo'ta, Lepori'num rostrum, (Sc.) Hares'lip, (Prov.) Hays'cale, (F.) Bec de Lièvre. A fissure or perpendicular division of one or both lips. It has been so called, in consequence of the upper lip of the hare being thus divided. Hare-lip is generally congenital; at other times it is accidental, or produced by a wound, the edges of which have not been brought into contact, and have healed separately. It is simple, when there is but one division; double, when there are two; and complicated, when there is, at the same time, a division or cleft of the superior maxillary bone and of the palate — Cleft or fissured palate, Wolf's jaw, Palatum fissum, Rictus lupi'num; or a projection of the teeth into the separation of the lip.

In the Hare-lip operation, there are two indications to be fulfilled. First, to pare, with the knife or scissors, the edges of the cleft, and, afterwards, to preserve them in contact; in order to cause adhesion. This last object is accomplished by means of pins, passed through the edges of the division; in other words, by the twisted suture. The projecting teeth must, of course, be previously removed. If there be separation of the palate, it will become less and less after the union of the lip, or the operation of staphyloraphy may be performed upon it.

HARE'S EAR, Bupleurum rotundifolium — h. Eye, Lagophthalmia.

HARESHAW, Harelip.

HARGNE, Hernia — h. Anévrysmale, Cirsomphalus.

HARICOT, Phaseolus vulgaris — h. Grand de Peron, Jatropha curcas.

HARMALIA, Aliment.

HARMONY, Harmo'nia, Harmos, primarily from αρω, 'I adjust.' Anatomists have called Suture by Harmony, or simply Harmony. False or superficial suture, Sutura os sinu sp'ria, Compa'ges os sinu per lin'eam simpliciem, an immovable articulation, in which the depressions and eminences, presented by the bony surfaces, are but slightly marked; so that it might be presumed that the junction of the bones took place by simple apposition of their surfaces. An instance of harmony occurs in the union of the superior maxillary bones with each other.

HARMUS, Articulation, Harmony.

HARNPAN, Cranium.

HARRODSBURG SPRINGS, see Kentucky, Mineral Waters of.

HAR'ROWGATE, MINERAL WATERS OF.

The villages of High and Low Harrowgate are situate in the centre of the county of York, near Knaresborough, twenty miles from York, and fifteen from Leeds. Here are several valuable sulphurous and chalybeate springs. The sulphureous springs contain chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, bicarbonate of soda, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid, carbonated hydrogen, and azote. The chalybeate springs contain protoxide of iron, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonic acid, azote, and oxy-

Here are several valuable sulphurous and chalybeate springs. The sulphureous springs contain chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, bicarbonate of soda, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid, carbonated hydrogen, and azote. The chalybeate springs contain protoxide of iron, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonic acid, azote, and oxygen. For the former, Harrowgate is celebrated and frequented.

HARROWGATE SALTS, ARTIFICIAL, are much employed, and not unfrequently by those who drink the genuine water, for the purpose of increasing its aperient power. They may be made as follows:—Sulph. Potass. cum Sulph. ℥vj; Potass. bitart. ℥i; Magnes. Sulph. in pulv. ℥vj. M. The usual dose is a teaspoonful, in a small tumblerful of tepid water, early in the morning.

HARROWGATE WATER, ARTIFICIAL, may be formed of common salt, ℥v; water, Oijj; impregnated with the gas from sulphuret of potass, and sulphuric acid, aa ℥iv. The following form has also been recommended. R. Sulphat. Potass. cum sulph. (Ph. Ed.) ℥j; Potass. bitart. ℥ss; Magnes. sulphat. ℥vj; Aquæ destillat. Oij. One-half to be taken for a dose.

HARTFELL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hartfell Spa is about five miles from Moffat, in Scotland. The water is a chalybeate, and is much used.

HARTSHORN, Cervus, Cornu cervi, Liquor cornu cervi—h. Red, Spiritus lavandulæ compositus—h. and Oil, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

HARTS' TONGUE, Asplenium scolopendrium.
HARTS' TRUFFLES, Elaphomyces granulatus.
HARTWORT OF MARSEILLES, Seseli tortuosum.

HASCHE, Pain.

HASCHISCH, see Bangué.

HASCHISCHINE, see Bangué.

HASTA, Penis—h. Nuptialis, Penis—h. Virilis, Penis.

HASTELLA, Splint.

HASTINGS, CLIMATE OF. This place has the reputation of being one of the mildest and most sheltered winter residences on the south coast of England. Owing to its low situation, and the height of the neighbouring cliffs, it is protected in a great degree from all northerly winds; and hence is found a favourable residence generally for invalids labouring under diseases of the chest.

HASTULA REGIS, Asphodelus ramosus.

HATFIELD'S TINCTURE, see Tinctura Guaiaci ammoniata.

HATTREL, Abscess.

HAUNCH, Coxæ, Coxen'dix, of the Latins; αυχν, or ισχιον, of the Greeks; Ancha, Ischiou, Oshpys, Hip, Cossa, (Prov.) Habbou, Shoup, (F.) Hauche. The region of the trunk which is formed by the lateral parts of the pelvis and the hip-joint, including the soft parts. In women, on account of the greater width of the pelvis, the haunches are more marked and prominent than in men.

HAUSE, Collum. Throat.

HAUSTEL/LATE, Haustella'tus, from haurio, haustum, 'I drink up.' An epithet for the structure of mouth, which is adapted for drinking or pumping up liquids. Insects, which possess that kind of mouth, are so named. Ehrenberg refers the fancied spermatozoon to the haustellate entozoa.

HAUSTRA COLI, see Colon.

HAUSTUS, Pot'io, Potium'cula. A Draught. A liquid medicine, which can be taken at a draught.

HAUSTUS NIGER, see Infusum sennæ.

HAUT MAL, Epilepsy.

HAVAN'A or HAVAN'NAH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Cuba is often selected for the phthisical invalid during the winter months, and so far as regards elevation and comparative equality of temperature, it is more favourable for those of weak lungs than that of the United States. The mean annual temperature is high (78°), but the difference between the mean temperature of the warmest and coldest months is twice as great as at Madeira.

HAVERSIAN CANALS, Canals, nutritive, of Bones.

HAW, Hungry.

HAW, BLACK, Viburnum prunifolium.

HAWKNUT, Bunion bulbocastanum.

HAZEL, WITCH, Hamamelis Virginiana, Sorbus aucuparia.

HAZELRAW, Lichen pulmonarius.

HEAD, Sax. hearon, hearo, heaved; the past participle of hearān, 'to heave up.' Caput, Cephalē, Cy'bē, Poll, (Prov.) Hede, Pow, Scop, (F.) Tête. The head forms the upper extremity of the body, and tops the skeleton. It consists of the cranium and face. The first, which comprises all the superior and posterior part, has the encephalon in its cavity: the latter forms only the anterior part, and serves as the receptacle for the greater part of the organs of the senses.

HEAD, WATER IN THE, Hydrocephalus.

HEAD-ACHE, Cephalæa, Cephalalgia—h. Ache, intermittent, Cephalalgia periodica—h. Ache, sick, Cephalæa spasmodica.

HEADSWOMAN, Midwife.

HEADY, same etymon as Head. (F.) Capiteux. That which inebriates readily. An epithet, applied to wines which possess this quality.

HEAL, Sanitas.

HEAL-ALL, Collinsonia Canadensis, Prunella vulgaris, Scrophularia nodosa.

HEALING, Curative—h. Art, Medicine.

HEALTH, Sanitas.

HEALTHY, Salutary.

HEARING, HARDNESS OF, Deafness—h. Perverse, Paracusis perversa.

HEART, Sax. hearot, Germ. Herz, Cor, Cear, Cer, Car'dia, καρ, καρ, καρδία, (F.) Cœur. An azygous muscle, of an irregularly pyramidal shape; situate obliquely and a little to the left side, in the chest;—resting on the diaphragm by one of its surfaces:—suspended by its base from the great vessels; free and movable in the rest of its extent, and surrounded by the pericardium. The right side of the body of the heart is thin and sharp, and is called Margo acutus: the left is thick and round, and termed Margo obtusus. It is hollow within, and contains four cavities: two of which, with thinner and less fleshy walls, receive the blood from the lungs and the rest of the body, and pour it into two others, with thick and very fleshy parietes, which send it to the lungs and to every part of the body. Of these cavities, the former are called auricles, the latter ventricles. The right auricle and right ventricle form the Pulmonic or right or anterior heart. Cor venosum seu pulmonale, (F.) Cœur du pommou, C. du sang noir, C. droit, C. antérieur: and the left auricle and ventricle, the systemic, corporeal, left, or aortic heart, Cor arteriosum seu aorticum, (F.) Cœur du corps, C. gauche, C. aortique ou C. rouge. In the latter, the two are totally distinct from each other, being separated by a partition;—the septum cordis. Into the right auricle, the venæ cavæ,—superior and inferior,—and the coronary vein, open. The pulmonary artery arises from the right ventricle; the four pulmo-

The mean weight of the heart, in the adult, from the twenty-fifth to the sixtieth year, is, according to Bouillaud, from eight to nine ounces. The dimensions, according to Lobstein and Bouillaud, are as follows:—Length, from base to apex, five inches six lines; breadth, at the base, three inches; thickness of the walls of the left ventricle, seven lines; at a finger's breadth above the apex, four lines; thickness of the walls of the right ventricle, two and a quarter lines; at the apex, half a line; thickness of right auricle, one line; of the left auricle, half a line. The heart is covered, externally, by a very thin, membranous reflection from the pericardium. The muscular structure of which it is constituted is much thicker in the parietes of the ventricle than in those of the auricles. Its cavities are lined by a very delicate membrane, the endocardium, which is continuous with the inner membrane of the arteries, as regards the left cavities, and with that of the veins, as regards the right. Its arteries—the coronary—arise from the commencement of the aorta. Its nerves proceed, chiefly, from the pneumogastric and the cervical ganglions of the great sympathetic. The heart is the great agent in the circulation. By its contraction, the blood is sent over every part of the body. Its action does not seem to be directly owing to nervous influence received from the brain or spinal marrow, or from both. The circulation may, indeed, be kept up, for some time, if both brain and spinal marrow be destroyed.

When the ear is applied to the chest, a dull, lengthened sound is heard, which is synchronous with the arterial pulse. This is instantly succeeded by a sharp, quick sound, like that of the valve of a bellows or the lapping of a dog, and this is followed by a period of repose. The first sound appears to be mainly produced by the contraction of the ventricles; the second, by the reflux of the blood against the semilunar valves. These are what are called the Sounds of the Heart, (F.) Bruits du Cœur. Dr. C. J. B. Williams thinks that the word lub-dup conveys a notion of the two sounds. The Beating or Impulse of the heart, Heart-stroke, Pulsus seu Ictus cordis, (F.) Impulsion du Cœur, against the parietes of the chest, is mainly caused, perhaps, by the systole of the heart, which tends to project it forwards. It is doubted, however, by some, whether the impulsion be produced by the dilatation or the contraction of the ventricles.

The following table exhibits the different actions of the heart, and their coincidence with its sounds and impulse. It presumes, that the period from the commencement of one pulsation to that of another is divided into eight parts; and if the case of a person, whose pulse beats sixty times in a minute, be taken, each of these parts will represent the eighth of a second.

EIGHTHS OF A SECOND.

Last part of the pause....1...	Auricles contracting; ventricles distended.
First sound and impulse..4...	Ventricles contracting; auricles dilating.
Second sound.....2...	Ventricles dilating; auricles dilating.
Pause.....1...	Ventricles dilating; auricles distended.

The heart is subject to different organic diseases: the chief of which are aneurism, contraction of the apertures, and rupture of its parietes.

HEART, AT'ROPHY OF THE, Atroph'ia seu Ari- du'ra seu Phthisis Cordis, Cardi-atroph'ia, Acar-diatroph'ia. A condition of the organ in which there is diminution in the thickness of the parietes of the whole organ.

HEART, BEATING OF THE, see Heart—h. Dilatation of the, see Aneurism—h. Displacement of the. Eetopia Cordis—h. Fatty, Steatosis cordis.

HEART, HYPERTROPHY OF THE, Hypertroph'ia Cordis, Hyperecord'ia, Hypersarco'sis Cordis, Hyperecardi-atroph'ia, Cardian'e, Aneurys'mu cordis act'ivum (Corvisart), Cor bovi'num seu taur'inum, Enor'mitas cordis, (F.) Hypertrophie du Cœur. Supernutrition of the muscular parietes of the heart, which are thicker than usual; the cavities being generally diminished. The physical signs which indicate it are the following. In cases of long standing, the præcordial region is generally prominent; the pulsations of the heart are visible over a greater extent than natural; and a marked vibration is communicated to the hand when placed on the cardiac region. The dull sound on percussion is more extensive than natural; and on auscultation there is a permanent increase of the force and extent of the heart's action; there is no increase, however, of frequency, and the rhythm is regular. The pulse is generally strong, full, and hard.

HEART, HYPERTROPHY WITH DILATATION OF THE, Active an'eurism, Eccentric hypertrophy. In this affection, the pulsations can be seen and felt over a larger space, and the apex is more to the left and lower down than natural. The impulse is less steady, but at times more violent than that which accompanies simple hypertrophy. Percussion gives more distinct evidence of the enlargement, the sound being more extensively dull. On auscultation, the impulse is often violent, but irregular: in extreme cases, it produces the sensation of a large mass of flesh rolling or revolving beneath the ear. The pulse is strong, full, and vibratory. The shock of the heart's action is often transmitted to the whole person, and to the bed on which the patient is lying.

HEART, CONCENTRIC HYPERTROPHY OF THE, (F.) Hypertrophie concentrique, Hypertrophie centripète du Cœur, Retrait ventriculaire, Cardi-artie, is when the parietes augment at the expense of the cavities.

HEART-SCIRTS, Diaphragm.

HEARTWORT, Laserpitium album.

HEAT, past participle of Sax. hætan, 'to make warm.' Calor, Therma, Σεση. (F.) Chaleur. The material cause, which produces the sensation—or the particular sensation itself—produced by a body of an elevated temperature, on our organs, especially on the organs of touch. Modern chymists have given the name Caloric to the principle, whatever may be its nature, which is the cause of heat. When we touch a body of a temperature superior to our own, a portion of caloric passes from the body to the hand, and produces the sensation of heat. If, on the contrary, we touch a body of a temperature inferior to our own, we communicate a portion of our caloric to it, and experience the sensation of cold. Our own sensations are but imperfect indexes of temperature. Two men meeting at the middle of a mountain,—the one ascending, the other de-ascending, — will experience different sensations. The one ascending, passes from a warmer to a colder atmosphere; — the one descending from a colder to a warmer.

The chief instrument for measuring heat, used in medicine, is the thermometer. Of this there are three kinds: — that of Fahrenheit, that of Réaumur, and that of Celsius or the Centigrade. The following Table exhibits the correspondence of these different thermometric scales.

To reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 5, and add 32: thus, 40° Cent. $\times 9 \div 5 + 32 = 104^\circ$ Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Centigrade, subtract 32, multiply by 5, and divide by 9: thus, 104° Fahr. — $32 \times 5 \div 9 = 40^\circ$ Cent. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 4, and add 32: thus, 32° Réaumur. $\times 9 \div 4 + 32 = 104^\circ$ Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Réaumur, subtract 32, multiply by 4, and divide by 9: thus, 104° Fahr. — $32 \times 4 \div 9 = 32$ Réaum. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Centigrade, multiply by 5, and divide by 4: thus 32° Réaum. $\times 5 \div 4 = 40^{\circ}$ Cent.; and, lastly, to reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Réaumur, multiply by 4, and divide by 5: thus, 40° Cent. $\times 4 \div 5 = 32^{\circ}$ Réaum.

Thermometers.

The human body can bear a high degree of heat diffused in the atmosphere. There are cases on record, where air of 400° and upwards, of Fahrenheit's scale, has been breathed with impunity for a short time. It can likewise withstand very severe cold. In the expedition of Capt. Back to the Arctic regions, the thermometer was as low as -70° of Fahr., and Sir George Simpson affirms, that it has fallen in Siberia to -83° , or 115° below the freezing point. Dr. Kane, in the Arctic regions, in 1853-54, observed the range of eleven spirit thermometers, selected as standards, to vary from -60° to -75° . The mean annual temperature was $5^{\circ}.2$ — the lowest ever registered.

Excessive heat disposes the body to gastric and intestinal diseases, and particularly to inflammation and enlargement of the liver; hence, the frequency of such affections within the torrid zone. Heat is often used therapeutically: the actual cautery, at a white heat, disorganizes the parts to which it is applied: a lesser degree occasions violent inflammation. Heat higher than that of the human body is excitant; of a lower degree, sedative. Excessive cold acts as a powerful sedative — inducing sleep, the tendency to which, after long exposure, becomes irresistible. See Cold. Many of the topical applications — as cataplasms — act wholly by virtue of their warmth and moisture.

HEAT, Ardor venereus, Pruritus, (F.) Chaleurs, Chaleurs des Animaux, Rut, is the periodical sexual desire experienced by animals, — (Estruation). It is supposed by some to be owing to the periodical maturation and discharge of ova, — (Ovulation).

HEAT, ACRID, see Acrid — h. Animal, see Animal Heat.

HEAT APOPLEXY, see Comp-de-soleil.

HEAT, INTERNAL, (F.) Chaleur interne, is a sensation of heat felt by the patient, but not sensible to the touch. External heat, (F.) Chaleur extérieure, that which can be felt by others. Heat, Ardor, is called moist, (P.) halitense, when accompanied with moisture, like that felt after bathing; dry, (F.) sèche, when the skin has not its ordinary softness. It is called acrid and pungent, (F.) âcre et mordicante, when it conveys a disagreeable tingling to the fingers. The French employ the terms nerveous heat and erratic heat, Chaleur nerveuse and Chaleur erratique, for that which comes by flushes, alternating with chills, and which moves rapidly from one part to another. M. Double has used the term septic heat, (F.) Chaleur septique, for that which produces a pungent sensation on the hand, similar to that of the acrid heat, but milder and more uniform, and which is accompanied with feebleness and frequency of pulse, &c.

HEAT, PRICKLY, Lichen tropicus.

HEATH, COMMON, Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER, Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER-CLU, Malleolus.

HEAUTOPHONICS, see Autophonia.

HEAVINESS, Somnolency.

HEAVING, Vomiturion.

HEAVY, Gravis, (F.) Gravatif, from Sux. heapan, 'to heave.' An epithet given to any pain which consists in a sensation of weight or heaviness, or is accompanied by such sensation.

HEBDOMADARIA, Octana.

HEBE, ἠβη, Juventa, Juventus, Juventus, Hora. In antiquity, the goddess of puberty. The word has been employed to designate, 1. The first hair that grows on the pubes, 2. The pubic region, and 3. Puberty.

HEBETES, Adolescens.

HEBETOR, Adolescens.

HEBETUDO ANIMI, Imbecillity — h. Dentium, Hæmodia — h. Visus, Amblyopia, Asthænoopia, Caligo.

HEBRADENDRON CAMBOGIOIDES, see Cambogia.

HEBREWS, MED'ICINE OF THE. Medicine seems to have been at a very low ebb with the ancient Hebrews. Of anatomy they knew nothing. Their physiology was imperfect and filled with superstitions; and their therapeutics unsatisfactory. Hygiene appears to have been most attended to. Of the other departments of medicine we cannot judge of their knowledge.

HECATOMA PALUSTRIS, Ranunculus sceleratus.

HECATOMPHYLLUM, Rosa centifolia

HECH, Anhelatio.

HECKBERRY, Prunus padus.

HECTEUS, ἑκτεος. A Greek measure, containing about 72 chopines or pints.

HECTIC FEVER, Febris hæctica seu phthisica seu marasmus des seu tab'ida seu lenta seu amphimer'ina hæctica seu amato'ria, Hæcticopy'gra, Hæcticopy'r'tos, Hæctica, Amphimer'ina hæctica, Sytecop'gra, Syntecticop'gra, Marasmus'gra, Leucop'ria, Epya'etus hæctica, Chloro'sia amato'ria, Etick, (Sc.) Ethik, Etick, (F.) Fèvre Hectique ou Étique, from ἕξις, 'habit of body;' because in this disease every part of the body is emaciated; or, perhaps, from ἐσθκω, 'I consume,' 'I am exhausted.' The name of a slow, continued, or remittent fever, which generally accompanies the end of organic affections, and has been esteemed idiopathic, although it is probably always symptomatic. It is the fever of irritation and debility; and is characterized by progressive emaciation, frequent pulse, hot skin, — especially of the palms of the hands and soles of the feet, — and, towards the end, colligative sweats and diarrhæa. Being symptomatic, it can only be removed by getting rid of the original affection. This is generally difficult, and almost hopeless in the disease which it most commonly accompanies, — consumption.

HECTICA, Hectic Fever—h. Infantilis, Fever, infantile remittent.

HECTICOPYRA, Hectic fever.

HECTICOPYRETOS, Hectic fever.

HEC'TISIS, (F.) Étisie. Same etymon. The state of those who have hectic fever.

HEC'TOGRAMME, and γραμμα, from 'εκατον, 'a hundred,' and γραμμα. A measure of 100 grammes, i. e., 3 ounces, 1 drachm, and 44 grains, Troy.

HECTOLITRE. A measure containing 100 litres or 26.42 wine pints.

HECUSIUS, Voluntary.

HEDEO'MA, Hedeo'ma pulegiō'idēs, Cuni'la pulegiō'idēs, Meli'ssa pulegioidēs, Pennyroyal, Tickweed, Stinking Balm, Squawmint. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Labiateæ. From 'ἡδύς, 'agreeable.' An indigenous plant, common in all parts of the United States, and which, where it is abundant, perfumes the air for a considerable distance. It is employed in the same cases as the mints and the English pennyroyal. In popular practice it is used as an emmenagogue.

The O'leum Hedeo'mæ (Ph. U. S.) or Oil of Pennyroyal is used as a stimulating carminative, dropped on sugar. Dose, 2 to 6 drops.

HERERA ARBOREA, H. Helix.

HER'ERA HELIX, Hed'era arbo'rea, Bac'chica, Cissos, κισσος, Cittos, καρτος, Ed'era, Corymbe'tra, Corym'bos, (Sc.) Bindweed, Ivy, (F.) Lierre, L. Commun ou grimpeant. Ord. Araliaceæ. The taste of ivy leaves is bitter, styptic, and nauseous. They are not used in medicine. According to Haller, they were recommended in Germany against the atrophy of children; and the common people of England sometimes apply them to running sores and to keep issues open. The berries were supposed, by the ancients, to have an emetic and purgative quality; and a watery extract was made from them, called by Quercetanus Extractum purgans. From the stalk of the tree a resinous juice exudes, in warm climates, called Gummi Hed'erae, Ivy Gum, (F.) Gomme de lierre, Résine de lierre. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, but is not used.

HERERA TERRESTRIS, Glechoma hederacea.

HERERULA, Glechoma hederacea.

HEDE, Head.

HEDEVERK, Cephalalgia.

HEDEWARK, Cephalalgia.

HEDISARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HEDRA, 'ἔδρα, 'ἔδρη, 'a vestige,' 'a seat.' A seat. A fracture of the bones of the cranium, in which the trace of the fracturing instrument is still perceptible. It was, also, used by the ancients, for the anus, the breech, excrement, a privy, a night-chair, and for the bottom of an abscess.

HEDEROCELE, Proctocele.

HEDYCH'ROUM, from 'ἡδύς, 'agreeable,' and χρῶμα, 'colour.' A remedy of a pleasant colour. Applied to certain trochs, the chief constituent of which was theriac.

HEDYPHO'NIA, from 'ἡδύς, 'sweet,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Sweetness of voice.

HEDYPNEUSTUS, Hedyp'neous, from 'ἡδύς, 'sweet,' and πνεω, 'I breathe.' Breathing sweetly or softly. Smelling sweetly.

HEDYPTNOIS TARAXACUM, Leontodon taraxacum.

HEDYSARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HEDYSMA, Condiment.

HEEL, see Calcaneum—h. Clubfoot, see Kylosis.

HEGH, Anhelatio.

HEIL, Sanitas.

HELCENTERITIS, Dothinteritis.

HELCOC'ACĒ, Cachelco'ma, from 'ελκος,

'ulcer,' and κακη, 'badness.' A malignant ulcer.

HELCODES, Ulcerated, Ulcerous.

HELCOLOGY, Helcolog'ia, from 'ελκος, 'ulcer, and λογος, 'discourse.' The doctrine of, or a treatise on, ulcers.

HELCOMA, Ulcer.

HELCOMENTA, Menelaeosis.

HELCOPI'THAL'MIA, Ophthalm'ia ulcero'sa. Ophthalmia with ulceration.

HELCOPLASTY, Hell'koplasy, Ev'koplasy, Ele'oplasty; from 'ελκος, 'an ulcer,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' An operation which consists in grafting on an ulcer a piece of skin from the opposite limb, or from the limb of another person, when the destruction of skin is too great to permit the healing process.

HEL'COS, from 'ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Hence:

HELCOISIS, Eleosis, Ulceration—h. Cerebri, Encephalopyosis—h. Laryngis, Phthisis laryngea—h. Pulmonalis, Phthisis pulmonalis—h. Renalis, Nephreleosis—h. Uteri, see Metrophthisis—h. Vesicæ, Cystophthisis.

HELCOSTAPHYLO'MA, from 'ελκος, 'ulcer,' and σταφυλωμα, 'staphyloma.' Staphyloma ending in ulceration.

HELCOXERO'SIS, from 'ελκος, 'ulcer,' and ξηρωσις, 'dryness.' The drying of an ulcer.

HELCTICA, Epispastics.

HELCUS, Ulcer.

HELICYD'RION, Helcyd'rium, 'ελκιδριον, Πικυ'sculum, a small ulcer, a superficial ulceration of the cornea.—Galen, Paulus, Foësius.

HELCOY'STER, 'ελκυστηρ, from 'ελκω, 'I draw.' An iron hook or crotchet for extracting the foetus. See Crotchet.

HELENIUM, Inula helenium.

HELEN'IUM AUTUMNA'LE, False Sunflower, Sneezewort, Sneezeweed, Swamp Sunflower, Yellow star, Ox-eye. Ord. Compositæ. An indigenous herb, with large golden-yellow compound flowers, which appear in August. All its parts are bitter and somewhat acrid, and when snuffed up the nostrils in powder are powerful sternutatories.

HELIAN'THEMUM CANADEN'SĒ, Cistus Canaden'sis, Frostwort, Frostweed, Frost plant, Rock rose. Ord. Cistaceæ. An herbaceous plant, Helianthemum (Ph. U. S.), having large yellow flowers, which grows in all parts of the United States, and flowers, in the Middle States, in June. It has an astringent, slightly aromatic, and bitterish taste. It has been prescribed in serofula, but probably is nothing more than an aromatic tonic.

HELIAN'THEMUM CORYMBO'SUM, Rock rose, an indigenous plant, is used in the same cases.

HELIASIS, Astrabollismus, Insolation.

HELICH'RYSUM NUDIFO'LIIUM, Caffer-tea. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is demulcent, and, in the form of infusion, is recommended in catarrh, phthisis, and other pulmonary affections.

HELICH'RYSUM SERPYLLIFO'LIIUM, Hottentot's tea, and HELICH'RYSUM AURICULA'TUM have similar virtues.

HELICIA, Age.

HEL'ICINE, Helic'inus, Helicoi'des, Helico'idēs, from helix, heli'cis, 'the tendril of the vine.' Resembling in form the tendril of the vine.

HELICINE ARTERIES of the penis, as described by J. Müller, are short vessels given off from the larger branches, as well as from the finest twigs of the artery of the organ: most of those come off at a right angle, and project into the cavity of the spongy substance, either terminating abruptly or swelling out into a club-like process without again subdividing. Almost all these vessels are bent like a horn, so that the end describes half a circle or somewhat more. They have a great resemblance to the tendrils of the vine, whence their name. A minute examination of them, either with the lens or the microscope, shows that, although they at all times project into the venous cavities of the corpora cavernosa, they are not entirely naked, but are covered with a delicate membrane, which, under the microscope, appears granular.

HELICIS MAJOR. A muscle of the ear, which originates from the anterior, acute part of the helix, upon which it ascends and is inserted into the helix. It pulls the part into which it is inserted a little downwards and forwards.

HELICIS MINOR. This muscle originates from the under and fore part of the helix, and is inserted into the helix, near the fissure in the cartilage, opposite the concha. Its use is to contract the fissure.

HELICOIDES, Helicie,

HELICOTREMA, from ἑλιξ, 'helix, cochlea,' and τρομα, 'a foramen.' The hole by which the two scales of the cochlea communicate at the apex.

HELICENCEPHALITIS, see Comp de Soleil.

HELIGMUS, Convolution.

HELIKIA, Age.

HELIONOSIS, Insolation.

HELIOSCIADIUM NODIFLORUM, Sium nodiflorum.

HELIOSIS, Astrabulismus, Insolation.

HELIOTROPE, Heliotropium Europæum.

HELIOTROPION, Cichorium intybus.

HELIOTROPIMUM EUROPEÛM, H. erectum seu cones'cens seu sapi'nam, Verncea'ria. The Heliotrope, (F.) Tournefol, Herbe aux vermes. Ord. Boraginacæ. This plant is considered to possess aperient properties; and to be capable of destroying cutaneous excrescences; hence one of its names.

HELIOTROPIMUM INDICUM, an East India plant, naturalized in some of the Western and Southern States, probably has similar virtues.

HELIX, ἑλιξ, Capre'olus, from εἰλεν, 'to envelop,' 'to roll.' The fold is thus called, which forms the outer circumference or ring of the external ear.

HELIX, Limax.

HELIX POMATIA, (F.) Limaçon, Colimaçon, Escargot. A large kind of snail, transported from the south of Europe to England by Sir Kenelme Digby, for his lady when in a decline. It was considered highly restorative.

HELLA, Incubus.

HELLEBORASTER, Helleborus foetidus—h. Fœtidus, Helleborus foetidus.

HELLEBORE, Dracontium fœtidum—h. American, Veratrum viride—h. Black, Helleborus niger—h. Blanc, Veratrum album—h. Green, Helleborus viridis—h. Noir, Helleborus niger—h. Stinking, Helleborus foetidus—h. Swamp, Veratrum viride—h. White, Veratrum album.

HELLEBORIS'MUS, Elleboris'mus. The method of treating disease, amongst the ancients, by hellebore. This comprised not only the choice, preparation, and administration of the medicine, but, likewise, the knowledge and employment of preliminary precautions and remedies proper for aiding its action, and preventing the pernicious effects which it might occasion.

HELLEBORUS. H. niger—h. Albus, Veratrum album—h. Grandiflorus, H. niger—h. Trifolius, Coptis.

HELLEBORUS FŒTIDUS, Helleborus'ter, Elleboraster, Stinking Hellebore or Bear's foot, Setterwort, (F.) Hellebore ou Ellébore fétide, Pied de Griffon. Ord. Ranunculacæ. The leaves of this plant are said to be anthelmintic. The smell of the fresh plant is extremely fetid, and the taste bitter and acrid. It usually acts as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS NIGER, H. grandiflorus, Elleborus niger, Melampodium, Melanorrhizon, Ectomon, Black Hellebore, Melampode, Christmas Rose, Clave-tongue, (F.) Hellebore noir. The root of this European plant—Helleborus, (Ph. U. S.)—has a disagreeable odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is possessed of cathartic properties, and has been recommended as an emmenagogue. It has been given in mania, melancholia, dropsy, suppressed menses, &c. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS VIRIDIS, Green Hellebore. A European plant, naturalized on Long Island, has similar properties to the last.

HELLECEBRA, Sedum.

HELLENIA GRANDIFLORA, Costus.

HELMET-FLOWER, YELLOW, Aconitum Anthora.

HELMET POD, Jeffersonia Bartoni.

HELMINS, genitive, Helminthos, plur. Helminthes seu Elmin'thes, from ἑλμινς, 'a worm.' A worm; an entozoon:—hence:

HELMINTHAGOGUE, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHI, Worms.

HELMINTHIA, Helminthiasis—h. Alvi, Worms.

HELMINTHIA ERRAT'ICA. Worms, introduced by accident and without finding a proper habitation in the stomach or intestines; producing spasmodic colic, with severe tormina, and occasionally vomiting or ejections of blood; the 12th genus of the order Enterica, class Caliaco, of Good.

HELMINTHIA PODICIS, Worms.

HELMINTH'ASIS, Helminthogen'esis. A generic name for the condition which gives occasion to the presence of intestinal worms. It is, also, called Helmin'thia, Vermina'tio, Morbis verminosus, Status verminosus, Sabnis'ra verminosa, Scolec'osis, Scolec'osis, Entozöogen'esis, Parasitism'us intestinalis; Worm disease, Invermin'tion. See Worms.

HELMINTHIC, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHOCHORTUM, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOCOLICA, Colica verminosa.

HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOGENESIS, Helminthiasis.

HELMINTHOL'OGY, Helmintholog'ia, from helmins, helminthos, and logos, 'a description.' A treatise on worms.

HELMINTHONCUS, Malis—h. Medinensis, Draeunculus.

HELMINTHOP'YRA, Helminthopyr'etos, Febbris verminos'a, from helmins, helminthos, and πυρ, 'a fever.' Fever occasioned by worms. See Fever, verminous.

HELMINTHOPYRETOS, Helminthopyra.

HELMINTHUS GORDII, Seta equina.

HELODES, Elodes.

HELODIAS DIOICA, Chamaerium luteum—h. Erythrosperna, Amianthum muscætoxicum—h. Lutea, Chamaerium luteum—h. Officialis, see Veratrum.

HELOPYRA, Elodes (febris).

HELOPYRETUS, Elodes (febris).

HELOS, Clavus, Marsh.

HELO'SIS, Helot'is: from ἄλω, 'I turn.' Eversion of the eyelids, and convulsions of the muscles of the eyes. Plica Polonica, Strabismus.

HELOTIS, Helosis, Plica.

HELUS, Clavus, Helos.

HELVELLA ESCULENTA, Morchella esculenta.

HELVINE, Parietaria.

HEMACHROIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMADYNAMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.
 HÉMADYNAMIQUE Hæmadynamics.
 HÉMAPÉRITONIRRHAGIE, Hæmoperitonirrhag'ia; from αἷμα, 'blood,' περιτῶν, and ρηγνύμι, 'I break forth.' Hemorrhage into the peritoneum.

HÉMAPROCTIE, Hæmorrhoids.
 HÉMASTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.
 HEMATIDROSE, Sudor eruentus.
 HEMATIN, Hæmatin.
 HÉMATO-ENCÉPHALIE, Apoplexy.
 HEMATOID, Hæmatodes.
 HÉMATOÏDINE, Hæmatoidin.
 HÉMATOLOGIE, Hæmatology.
 HÉMATOLOGÏ, Hæmatology.
 HÉMATOMYÉLIE, Hæmorrhagie de la Moëlle Épinière.

HÉMATONCIE, Hæmatoncus, see Hæmatodes fungus—h. Fongóide, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÉMATOPIISIE, Hæmatops.
 HEMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.
 HEMATOSIN, Hæmatin.
 HEMATOSTATICS, Hæmatostatica.
 HÉMATOSTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.
 HÉMATOZOAIRES, Hæmatozoa.
 HÉMENDOCARDE, Hæmendocardium.
 HEMERA, 'ἡμέρα, 'a day.' Dies. Hence:
 HEMERALOPIA, see Nyctalopia.

HEMERALOPIA, from ἡμέρα, 'the day,' and ὀπτομαι, 'I see.' Hæmeralops, Dysop'ia seu Cal'igo tenebrat'um, Parop'is Noctif'uga, Visus diurnus, Nyctalop'ia (of some), Nyctotyphlo'sis, Aublyop'ia crepuscula'ris, Cæcitus crepuscula'ris seu nocturna, A'cies diurna, Day-sight, Day-vision, Hen blindness, Night blindness, Nocturnal Amauro'sis, (F.) Vue diurne, Aveuglement de Nuit. A disease, in which the eyes enjoy the faculty of seeing, whilst the sun is above the horizon, but are incapable of seeing by the aid of artificial light. Its causes are not evident. The eye, when carefully examined, presents no alteration, either in its membranes or humours.

HEMERALOPS, Do'cea. One labouring under hemeralopia. Also, Hemeralopia.

HEMERATYPHLOSIS, Nyctalopia.
 HEMERODROMA, Ephemera.
 HEMEROPATHIA; from ἡμέρα, 'a day,' and παθος, 'an affection.' A disease, which continues only a day; or, which is only observed during the day.

HEMEROTYPHLOSIS, Nyctalopia
 HEMI, ἡμι, 'hæmivus,' 'half,' 'semi.' Hence:
 HEMIACEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hémiacéphale, from hemi, a, privative, and κεφαλή, 'head.' A monster whose head is represented by a shapeless tumour, with some appendages or cutaneous folds anteriorly, the thoracic extremities existing.

HEMIAMAUROSIS, Hemioopia.
 HEMIANDRUS, Eunuch.
 HEMIANOR, Eunuch.
 HEMIANTHROPIA, Mania.
 HEMIANTHROPUS, Eunuch, Maniac.
 HEMIAZYGA (Vena), see Azygos vein.
 HEMICEPHALÆA, Hemierania.
 HEMICEPHALÆUM, Sinciput.
 HEMICEPHALUM, Sinciput.
 HEMICEPHALUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPH'ALUS, Hemiceph'alus, Semi-cep'h'alus, from hemi, 'half,' and κεφαλή, 'head.' One who has half a head.

HEMICRA'NIA, Hemicephalæ'a, Migr'na, Graua, Hemip'gia, Hemip'gia, Heterocera'nia, Monopa'gia, Monope'gia, Cephalæ'a Hemiera'nia, Hemipath'ia, Neural'gia cerebra'lis, Megrim, from hemi, 'half,' and κράνιον, 'cranium.' (F.) Migraine. Pain, confined to one half the head.

It is almost always of an intermittent character;—at times, continuing only as long as the sun is above the horizon; and hence sometimes called Sun-pain,—and is cured by cinchona, arsenic, and the remedies adapted for intermittents.

HEMICRANIA IDIOPATHICA, Neuralgia, facial.

HEMIDESMUS IN'DICUS, Perip'loca In'dica, Ascle'pius Pseudosac'ea, Sarsaparilla In'dica, Nannari, Indian Sarsaparilla. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. A Hindooence plant, the root of which, Hemidesm'us (Ph. D.), has a peculiar aromatic odour, and a bitterish taste. It is used in India as a substitute for sarsaparilla.

HEMIDIALYSIS, Hemiplegia.

HEMIDIAPHORE'SIS, Transpira'tio Unilat'era; from hemi, 'half,' and ἀποφῶσις, 'perspiration.' Perspiration of one half the body.

HEMIEC'TON, Hemiec'teon, Hemisex'tum. A vessel capable of containing 36 chopines or pints, and in which fumigations were made in diseases of the uterus and vagina.—Hippocrates.

HEMICEPHE'ALUS, (F.) Hémiacéphale, from hemi, 'one half,' and εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon.' A monster, which has no trace of the organs of the senses, and yet has a brain nearly natural. See Hemicephalus.

HEMIME'LES, (F.) Hémièmele, from hemi, 'one half,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A genus of monsters, in which the upper or lower extremities are very defective—mere stumps,—and the fingers and toes are entirely wanting or very imperfect.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

HEMIME'RION, from hemi, and μετρα, 'a part.' 'One half.'—Foësius. Also, half a drachm.—Erotian.

HEM'INA, A Greek measure, answering to the Cotyle, κοτυλη, i. e. one half the sextarius, or about half a pint, English.

HEMIOBOL'ION, Hemiob'olon. Half the obolus. A weight of about five grains.—Gorræus.

HEMIO'LION, A weight of 12 drachms, or oz. 1½.—Galen. See Sescuncia.

HEMIOPIA, Hemiop'is, Hemiop'iasis, Suffusio dimid'ia, Visus dimidia'tus, Marmor'ygê Hippoc'ratis, Hemiamauro'sis, Amauro'sis dimidia'ta, (F.) Hémiopie, from hemi, 'one half,' and ὀπτομαι, 'I see.' Depraved vision, in which the person sees only one half of an object.

HEMIOPIASIS, Hemioopia.

HEMIOPSIS, Hemioopia.

HEMIPA'GES, Dico'ryphus dihyppogast'rus, Oc'topus gyarphoceph'alus, from hemi, 'half,' and πηγνυμι, 'I fasten.' A monstrosity, in which twins are united from the navel to the vertex.—I. G. Saint Hilaire.

HEMIPAGIA, Hemierania.

HEMIPATHIA, Hemierania.

HEMIEGIA, Hemierania.

HEMIPHON'IA, from ἡμι, 'half,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Great weakness of voice. The husky voice of those affected with cholera.

HEMIPLE'GIA, Hemiple'gia, Hemidial'ysis, Paral'ysis Hemiplegia, Semiple'gia, Semi-side-ral'tio, from hemi, 'one half,' and πλησσω, or πληττω, 'I strike.' Paralysis of one side of the body. See Paralysis. One so palsied is said to be hemipleg'ic, semi-side'ral'tus.

HEMIPLEGIA FACIALIS, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMIPLEXIA, Hemiplegia.

HEMIPROSOPLEGIA, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMISPHERÆ CEREBRI, Hemispheres of the brain.

HEMISPHERE, Hemisphæ'ra, Hemisphæ'rium, from hemi, 'one half,' and σφαῖρα, 'a sphere.' One half of a sphere or of a body having a spheroidal shape.

HEMISPHERES OF THE BRAIN, Hemisphæ'ræ cer'ebri, Hemispher'ical gan'glia, are the upper spheroidal portions of the brain, separated from each other by the falx cerebri.

HEMISPHERICAL GANGLIA, Hemispheres of the brain.

HÉMITE, Hæmitis.

HEMITRITE'A (FEBRIS.) Febris semi-tertiana seu æsequial'tera, (F.) Demi-tierce, Fièvre demitierce, from semi, 'half,' and tertiana, 'tertian.' A semi-tertian fever, so called because it seems to possess both the characters of the tertian and quotidian intermittent. — Galen, Spigelius.

HEMIUNCIA, Hemiuncion.

HEMIUN'CION, Hemiu'cia, Semu'cia, Semiu'cia. Half an ounce.

HEMLOCK, Pinus Canadensis, Conium maculatum — h. American, Cicuta maculata — h. Bastard, Chærophylum sylvestre — h. Common, Conium maculatum.

HEMLOCK DROPWORT, Œnanthe.

HEMLOCK GROUND, Taxus Canadensis.

HEMLOCK GUM, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Pitch, see Pinus Canadensis — h. Poison, Conium — h. Spruce, Pinus Canadensis.

HEMLOCK, WATER, AMERICAN, Cicuta maculata, Cicuta aquatica — h. Water, fine-leaved, Phellandrium aquaticum — h. Wild, Cicuta maculata.

HÉMO-ANGIAIRRHAGIE, Hæmoptysis.

HÉMOCARDE, Hæmocardiorrhagia.

HÉMOCARDIOPLASTIES, see Polypus.

HEMODIA, Hæmodia.

HÉMO-ENCÉPHALORRHAGIE, Apoplexy.

HEMOHÉPATORRHAGIE, Hæpatorrhagia.

HÉMONÈTRE, Hæmodynamometer.

HÉMOMYÉLORRHAGIE, Apoplexy, spinal.

HÉMOPÉRICARDE, Hæmopericardium.

HÉMOPTYSIE. Hæmoptysis — h. Foudroyante, see Hæmoptysis.

HEMORRHAGE, Hæmorrhagia — h. Accidental, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Active, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Bladder, Cystirrhagia — h. Constitutional, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Critical, see Hæmorrhagia — h. by Exhalation, see Hæmorrhagia — h. External, see Hæmorrhagia — h. General, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Intestines, Melæna — h. Internal, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Interstitial, Apoplexy — h. Local, see Hæmorrhagia — h. of the Mucous Membranes, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Passive, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Pituitary Membrane, Epistaxis — h. Pleural, Hæmatothorax — h. Secondary, see Hæmorrhagia — h. from the Skin, Sudor cruentus — h. Spinal, Apoplexy, spinal — h. Spontaneous, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Supplementary, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Symptomatic, see Hæmorrhagia — h. of the Tissues, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Traumatic, see Hæmorrhagia — h. Uterine, Metrorrhagia.

HEMORRHAGIC PLEURISY, Hæmatothorax.

HÉMORRHAGIE BUCCALE, Stomatorrhagia — h. Cérébrale, Apoplexy — h. du Cœur, Hæmocardiorrhagia — h. du Foie, Hæpatorrhagia — h. Interstitielle, Apoplexy — h. Intestinelle du Poumon, Hæmoptysis — h. des Intestins, Hæmatochezia — h. de la Matrice, Metrorrhagia — h. Méningée, Apoplexy meningeal — h. de la Moëlle épinière, Apoplexia myelitica — h. Nasale, Epistaxis — h. de la Vessie, Cystirrhagia.

HEMORRHAGIP'AROUS, (F.) Hæmorrhagipare, from hæmorrhagia, 'hemorrhage,' and pare, 'to bring forth.' That which gives occasion to hemorrhage: thus, softening of the neurine may be hæmorrhagiparous.

HÉMORRHINIE, Epistaxis.

HÉMORRHOÏDAIRE (F.). One who is subject to hemorrhoids.

HÉMORRHOÏDES, Hæmorrhoids — h. Acuægles, Cæcæ hæmorrhoides. See Hæmorrhoids.

HÉMORRHOSCOPIE, Hæmatoscopia.

HÉMOSPASIE, Hæmospasia.

HÉMOSPASIQUE, Hæmospastic.

HÉMOSTASIE, Hæmostasia.

HEMOSTATICS, Hæmostatica.

HÉMOSTATIQUES, Hæmostatica.

HEMP, INDIAN, Apocynum cannabinum, Bangue — h. Wild, Ambrosia trifida.

HEMPWEED, AROMATIC, Eupatorium aromaticum — h. Roundleaved, Eupatorium rotundifolium.

HEMPSEED, see Cannabis sativa.

HENBANE, Hyoscyamus.

HENBIT, Lamium amplexicaule.

HEN-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.

HENNÉ, Lawsonia inermis.

HENRICEA PHARMACEARCHA, Gentiana chirayita.

HENRICUS RUBENS, Colcothar.

HEPAR, 'παρ,' genitive, 'ἥπατος,' 'liver.' A name for substances resembling liver in appearance. The ancient name for the liver of sulphur, Hepar sulphuris; which is sometimes a compound of sulphur and potassium; at others, of sulphur and potassa. See Potassæ sulphuretum.

HEPAR ADIPOSUM, Adiposis hepatica — h. Adulterinum, Spleen.

HEPAR ANTIMONIA'TUM is a compound of a sulphuret of antimony and an alkali. See Oxydum stibii sulphuratum.

HEPAR MARTIA'LE. A compound of sulphuret of potass and an oxide of iron.

HEPAR SANGUINIS, see Blood — h. Sinistrum, Spleen.

HEPAR SUCCENTURIA'TUM. An additional liver or liver lobe; a case of malformation.

HEPAR SULPHURIS SALINUM, Potassæ sulphuretum — h. Sulphuris volatile, Ammoniæ sulphuretum — h. Uterinum, Placenta — h. Variegatum, Liver, nutmeg.

HEPATAL'GIA, Hepatodyn'ia, Neural'gia hepatis, Collic'ia hepatica, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' 'liver,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the liver. Neuralgia of the liver, (F.) Néuralgie du Foie.

HEPATALGIA CALCULOSA, Colica hepatica — h. Petitiana, Turgescencia vesiculæ felleæ — h. Phlegmonoides, Hepatitis.

HEPATAPOSTE'MA, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and αποστήμα, 'an abscess.' Abscess of the liver.

HEPATARIUS, Hepaticus.

HEPATATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia seu Aridu'ra hepatis, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and atroph'ia, 'atrophy.' Atrophy of the liver: — a general concomitant of Cirrho'sis hepatis.

HEPATAUXE, Hyperatroph'ia hepatis, (F.) Hyperhépatotrophie, Hypertrophie du foie. Hypertrophy of the liver.

HEPATECHE'MA, Son'itus hepaticus, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and 'ἤχημα,' 'sound.' Sound rendered by the liver on percussion.

HEPATEMPHRAX'IS, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Emphrax'is hepatis. Hepatic obstruction. — Plouquet.

HEPATENCEPHALO'MA, Hepatomyelo'ma, Fungus hepatis medulla'ris, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' Encephaloid of the liver.

HEPATER'US, Hepaticus, Jecora'trius. A variety of diarrhœa, Fluvus hepaticus. — Gorræus.

HEPATHÆMORRHAG'IA, Hæmorrhag'ia hepatica, Hæpatorrhag'ia, Apoplex'ia hepatica, (F.) Hémorrhagie du foie, Hémohépatorrhagie, from 'παρ,' 'ἥπατος,' and αἱμορραγία, 'hemorrhage.' Hemorrhage from the liver.

HEPATIC, Hepat'icus, Hepat'icus, Hepate'rus, Hepato'ides, Hepato'des, Jecora'rius, Jec'oral, (F.) Hépatique Jécoraire, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος. Belonging or relating to or resembling liver.

HEPATIC ARTERY, Arte'ria Hepat'ica. One of the three branches given off by the cœliac. It passes towards the inferior surface of the liver; where it divides into two branches, a right and a left, which proceed towards the corresponding parts of that organ. The right branch gives off the cystic artery. Before dividing, the hepatic artery sends off two considerable branches, the A. pylorica and Gastro-epiploica dextra.

HEPATIC DUCT, Ductus hepaticus, (F.) Canal hépatique, is about three fingers' breadth in length, and of the size of a quill. It is formed by the union of the biliary ducts, and joins the cystic duct at a very acute angle, to form the ductus choledochus. Its function is to convey the bile from the liver towards the duodenum.

HEPATIC ISLETS, see Liver—h. Lobules, see Liver.

HEPATIC PLEXUS, Plexus hepaticus, consists of nervous filaments, sent by the cœliac plexus to the liver, which accompany the hepatic artery.

HEPATIC VEINS, Supra-hepatic Veins, Venæ cavæ hepaticæ, (F.) Veines sus-hépatiques, Intra-lobular veins, do not follow the course of the arteries of the same name. They arise in the substance of the liver; converge towards the posterior margin of that viscus, and open into the vena cava inferior. They convey away the blood carried to the liver by the hepatic artery and vena porta.

HEPATICÆ. Medicines believed to be capable of affecting the liver.

HEPATICÆ, H. triloba—h. Americana, H. triloba—h. Fontana, Marchantia polymorpha—h. Nobilis, H. triloba—h. Stellata, Asperula odorata.

HEPATICÆ TRILŒBA, H. Americana, Anemone hepatica seu nobilis, Herba trinitatis, Hepatica, Hepaticus flos, Trifolium hepaticum seu an'reum, Liverwort, Liverced, Trefoil, Noble Liverwort, Herb Trinit'y, (F.) Hépatique des jardins. The leaves of this plant—Hepatica (Ph. U. S.)—are a gentle astringent, but not possessed of much virtue.

HEPATICULA, Hepatitis, chronic.

HEPATICUS, Hepateros—h. Flos, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIFICATIO, Hepatization.

HÉPATIQUE, Hepatic—h. Étoilée, Asperula odorata—h. des Fontaines, Marchantia polymorpha—h. des Jardins, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIRRHŒA, Fluxus hepaticus, Dysenteria hepatica, Diarrhœa hepatica, Hepatorrhœa, Hepatocholorrhœa, Hepatodysenteria, Hepatorrhag'ia, Hæmate'ra, Aimate'ra, (F.) Flux hépatique, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ῥέω, 'I flow.' A species of diarrhœa in which the excreted matters seem to come from the liver, or are much mixed with bile.

HEPATIC EMUNCTORIA, Inguen—h. Suspensorium, Ligament, suspensory, of the liver.

HEPATISATIO, Hepatization—h. Pulmonum. Hepatization of the Lungs.

HÉPATISATION, Hepatization—h. Grise, see Hepatization—h. Rouge, see Hepatization.

HEPATITES VENA, Cava vena.

HEPATITIS, Empres'na hepatis, Cauma seu Inflammat'io hepatis, I. Jecin'oris, Febris hepatica inflammatoria, Hepat'gia phlegmonoides, Morbus jecin'oris, Hepatophlegmoné, Inflammation of the liver, (F.) Hépatite, inflammation du foie, Pîdece. (Provincial); from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, 'liver,' and itis, denoting inflammation.

It may be seated either in the peritoneal covering, Sero-hepatitis, Hepatitis velamento'sa seu externa, Peritonitis hepatica, Perilephatitis, or in the substance of the liver, Hepatitis parenchymato'sa, or in both, Puro-hepatitis, and may be acute or chronic. The peculiar symptoms are:—pain in the right hypochondrium, shooting to the back and right shoulder, and increased on pressure; difficulty of lying on the left side; sometimes jaundice with cough, and synocha. Its termination is generally by resolution:—in tropical climates it often runs on to suppuration, Jecin'oris vomica, Hepatitis apostematosa, the abscess breaking either externally, or forming a communication with the intestines or chest, or breaking into the cavity of the abdomen. The causes are those of inflammation in general. Heat predisposes to it; hence its greater frequency in hot climates. On dissection of those who have died of it, the liver has been found hard and enlarged; colour of a deep purple; or the membranes have been more or less vascular; or adhesions, or tubercles, or hydatids, or abscesses, or biliary calculi may be met with. The treatment must be bold. Bleeding, general and local, fomentations, blisters, purgatives, and the antiphlogistic regimen. In hot climates especially, a new action must be excited by mercury as early as possible.

HEPATITIS APOSTEMATOSA, see Hepatitis.

HEPATITIS, CHRONIC, Hepatitis chronica, Inflammat'io hepatis lenta, Hepatitis occulta, Hepatic'ula, Subinflammatio hepatis, (F.) Chrono-hépatite, Chronic liver disease, is not as common as is believed. It may be suspected from the existence of the symptoms above mentioned, when in a minor degree; enlargement, constant dull pain in the region of the liver; sallow countenance; high-coloured urine; clay-coloured fæces, &c. The great object of treatment is to excite a new action by mercury and counter-irritants, and to keep the liver free by cathartics.

HEPATITIS CYSTICA, Cholecystitis—h. Externa, see Hepatitis—h. Occulta, H. chronic—h. Vela-mentosa, see Hepatitis—h. Parenchymatosa, see Hepatitis.

HEPATIZATIO, Hepatisatio, Hepatificatio, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος. Conversion into a liver-like substance. Applied to the lungs when gorged with effused matters, so that they are no longer pervious to the air—Hepatisatio pulmonum, Carnificatio pulmonum. In such state, they are said to be hepatized.

HEPATIZATION, RED. (F.) Hépatisation rouge, Endurcissement rouge, Ramollissement rouge, characterizes the first stage of consolidation of the lungs in pneumonia.

HEPATIZATION, GRAY, (F.) Hépatisation grise, Induration grise, Ramollissement gris, Infiltration purulente, characterizes the third stage, or stage of purulent infiltration.

HEPATIZON, Chloasma.

HEPATO'CACĒ, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κακος, 'evil.' Gangrene of the liver.

HEPATOCE'LE, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κηλη, 'a tumour,' Hernia hepatica; Hernia of the liver. (F.) Hernie du foie. The liver has never been found entirely out of the abdominal cavity. Increase of its bulk, or injuries of the parietes of the abdomen, have been the sole cause of the protrusions which have been occasionally met with, especially in infants, in whom the upper part of the linea alba is very weak, and indeed scarcely seems to exist. Sauvages has distinguished two species of hepatocœle:—the ventral (in the linea alba), and the umbilical or hepatomphalum.

HEPATOCHOLORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOCO'LICUM. A ligament of the liver, described by Haller, as passing from the gall-bladder and contiguous sinus portarum, across the duodenum, to the colon. Another, termed Hepato-renal, descends from the root of the liver to the kidney. They are both peritoneal.

HEPATOCYSTIC, Hepato cysticns, Cystide-ropal'icns, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κυστις, 'bladder.' Relating to the liver and gall-bladder.

HEPATOCYSTIC DUCT, Ductns hepato cystic'icns. The choledoch duct.

HEPATODYME, Hepato d'yimus, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and δίδυμος, 'a twin.' A monster united at the liver, and double above.

HEPATODYNIA, Hepatalgia.

HEPATODYSENTERIA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOGASTRIC, Gastrohepatic.

HEPATOGASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, bilious, Fever, gastric.

HEPATOGRAPHY, Hepatographia; from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the liver.

HEPATOLEMIA, Hyperæmia hepatis, Hepatic Engorgement, (F.) Hyperémie du Foie, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and αἷμα, 'blood.' Sanguineous engorgement of the liver.

HEPATODES, Hepatic.

HEPATOÏDES, Hepatic.

HEPATOLITHIASIS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and λίθιασις, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, Hepato lithi, in the liver.

HEPATOL'OGY, Hepatology, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and λογος, 'a discourse,' 'treatise.' A treatise on the liver.

HEPATOMALACIA, Malaco'sis hepatis, (F.) Ramollissement du Foie. Softening of the liver.

HEPATOM'PHALUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, 'liver,' and μφαλος, 'navel.' Hernia of the liver at the umbilicus.

HEPATOMYELOMA, Hepatencephaloma.

HEPATON'CUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the liver.

HEPATOPAREC'TAMA, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and παρεκταμα, 'considerable extension.' Excessive enlargement of the liver.

HEPATOPATHI'A, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and παθος, 'suffering.' Liver-disease. Disease of the liver.

HÉPATOPATHIE CANCÉREUSE, Hepato-cirrhus—h. Tuberculeuse, Hépatotuberculose.

HEPATOPHLEGMONE, Hepatitis.

HEPATOPHTHUSIS, Phthisis hepatic'a, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and φθιω, 'I consume.' Consumption from suppuration of the liver.

HEPATORRHAGIA, Hepatirrhœa, Hepathæ-morrhagia.

HEPATORRHÆX'IS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of the liver.

HEPATORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÉPATOSARCOMIE, Hepato-cirrhus.

HEPATOSCIR'RHUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and σκιρρος, 'cancerous induration.' Scirrhus hepatic'a, Enecephalo'sis or Carcinoma of the liver, (F.) Hépatosarcomie, Hépatopathie cancéreuse, Cancer du Foie. Scirrhus or Cancer of the liver.

HÉPATOSTRUMOSIE, Tuber'cula hepatis, (F.) Tubercules du Foie, Hépatopathie tuberculeuse; from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and stroma, 'a tumour,' 'a scrofulous tumour.' Tubercle of the liver.

HEPATOT'OMY, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Dissection of the liver.

HEPIALOS, Epialos.

HEPS, see Rosa canina.

HEPSEMA, Decoction.

HEPSEISIS, Decoction.

HEPTA'LON GRAV'EOLENS, Hogwort, Bears' fright. An indigenous plant, which has a fetid porcine smell; and is said to be used by the Indians as a diaphoretic, cathartic, &c.

HEPTAPHARMACUM, from ἑπτα, 'seven,' and φάρμακον, 'a remedy.' A medicine composed of seven substances; cerusse, litharge, pitch, wax, colophony, frankincense, and bullock's fat. It was regarded as laxative, suppurating and healing.

HEPTAPHYLLUM, Tormentilla.

HEPTAPLEURON, Plantago major.

HERACLEUM, see H. lanatum—h. Branca, H. spondylium.

HERACLE'UM SPONDYL'IUM, H. Branca, Branca urvi'na seu German'ica, Spondyl'ium, Spondyl'ium, Cow Parsnep, All-heal, Cow-mumble, (Sc.) Buneward, (Prov.) Cushia, (F.) Berce, Bruncursine bâtarde, Fausse Acaithe. Order, Umbelliferae. See Syst. Pentandria Digynia. Dedicated to Ἡρακλῆς, Hercules. The root of this plant has a strong, rank smell; and a pungent, almost caustic taste. It has been given as a tonic, stomachic and carminative; both in powder and in decoction. The Russians, Lithuanians, and Poles obtain from its seeds and leaves, by fermentation, a very intoxicating spirituous liquor, which they call Porst.

The root of Heracle'um Lanatum, Masterwort, Cow parsnep,—Heracle'um (Ph. U. S.)—is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

HERACLEUM MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HERB, Herba, Bot'anē. Any ligneous plant, which loses its stalk during the winter.

HERB, BLESSED, Geum urbanum—h. Christopher, Actea spicata.

HERB-DOCTOR, Botanical doctor or physic'ian. One who treats diseases altogether by herbs; as the—so called—"Thompsonians."

HERB OF GRACE, Gratiola officinalis—h. Mastich, common, Thymus mastichina—h. Mastich, Syrian, Teucrium marum—h. Peter, Primula veris—h. Robert, Geranium Robertianum—h. of Saint Cunegonde, Eupatorium cannabinum—h. Sophia, Sisymbrium sophia—h. Trinity, Hepatica triloba.

HERBIER, Herbarium, Ingluvies.

HERBIVOROUS, Herbiv'orns, from herba, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat.' An epithet applied to animals which feed on herbs.

HERBORIST, Herba'rius. One who deals in useful plants. An Herb'alist or Herb'arist.

HERBORIZATION, Herba'rum inquisit'io. An excursion, made with the view of collecting plants. Such excursions are directed by the Apothecaries' Company of London, for the use of their apprentices, &c.

HERBS, FIVE CAPILLARY, Quinque herbæ capilla'res, were, anciently, hart's tongue; black, white, and golden maiden-hair, and spleenwort.

HERBS, FIVE EMOLLIENT, Quinque herbæ emollientes, were, anciently, beet, mallow, marsh-mallow, French mercury, and violet.

HERCULES ALLHEAL, Pastinaca opopanax.

HERCULES MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HÉRÉDITAIRE, Hereditary.

HEREDITARY, Hæredita'rius, Heredita'rius, Gentilit'ius, Syn'phytos, Syn'genes, (F.) Héréditaire, from hæris, hæredis, 'an heir.' An epithet given to diseases, communicated from progenitors. Such diseases may exist at birth; or they may supervene at a more or less advanced period of existence. Hereditary diseases, Morbi hereditarii, (F.) Maladies héréditaires, often prevail amongst several members of a family, or are family diseases or complaints.

HERMAPHRODITE, Hermaphrodis'ia, Hermaphroditis'mus, Hermaphrodis'mus, Fob'rica androg'yua, Androg'yua, Gynan'dria, Hermaph- rodism, Hermoph'roditism; from 'Ερμης 'Mercury,' and Αφροδιτη, 'Venus.' Appertaining to Mercury and Venus. Union of the two sexes in the same individual.

HERMAPHRODITE, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPHRODITE. Same etymon. Hermaphroditus, Gy'nida, Androg'yua, (Sc.) Searcht, (Prov.) Scrat. One who possesses the attributes of male and female: who unites in himself the two sexes. A term, applied to an animal or plant which is, at the same time, both male and female. True hermaphrodites are only met with in the lower degrees of the animal scale, amongst the zoophytes, mollusca, or gasteropoda. The individuals of the human species, regarded as hermaphrodites, owe this appearance to a vicious conformation of the genital organs: a kind of monstrosity, which renders them unfit for generation, although an attentive examination may exhibit the true sex. Hermaphrodites have, likewise, been described, which, instead of uniting the attributes of both sexes, cannot be considered male or female. These have been called neutral hermaphrodites.

HERMAPHRODITISMUS, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPHRODITUS, Hermaphroditæ.

HERMETICA DOCTRINA, Hermetica ars, (F.) Hernétique. The doctrine of Hermes, a celebrated Egyptian philosopher, who is considered the father of alchemy. That part of chymistry, whose object was the pretended transmutation of the metals.

HERMODACTYLUS, Dactyle'tus, An'ima articulo'rum, from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a finger;' or rather from Hermus, a river in Asia, upon whose banks it grows, and δακτυλος, 'a date;' or from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτυλος, 'a date;' (F.) Hermodactyle, Hermadacte ou Hermodate. The root of the Hermodactyl was formerly used as a cathartic. By some, it is supposed to be identical with the Iris tuberosa. The best testimony seems to be in favour of its being a variety of the colchicum.—Col'chicum Illy'ricum. Under the name Hermodactyls, roots or bulbs of an unknown plant, growing in the countries about the eastern extremity of the Mediterranean, are sold in the shops of Europe.

HERMODATE, Hermodactylus.

HERMOPHILUS, from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and φιλος, 'a lover.' One who is fond of mercury as a medicine.

HERNIA, Ramez, Ruptu'ra, R. herni'osa, Crepant'ra, Etopo'ria herni'osa, Celè, Rupture, Burst, (F.) Hargue, Descente, Effort, Grevenre, Rompene. From ερως, 'a shoot' [?]. Any tumour, formed by the displacement of a viscus or a portion of a viscus, which has escaped from its natural cavity by some aperture, and projects externally. Herniæ have been divided into,—1. Hernia of the Brain; Encephalocele; 2. Hernia of the Thorax; Pneumocele; 3. Hernia of the Abdomen.

Abdominal Herniæ are remarkable for their frequency, variety, and the danger attending them. They are produced by the protrusion of the viscera, contained in the abdomen, through the natural or accidental apertures in the parietes of that cavity. The organs, which form them most frequently, are the intestines and the epiploon. These herniæ have been divided, according to the apertures by which they escape, into:

1. In'guinal or Supra-Pu'bian Herniæ. These issue by the inguinal canal: they are called Bubocele, when small; and Scrotal Hernia or Oscheoce'le, in man, when they descend into the scrotum:—Vulvar Hernia or Puden'dal or Lab'ial Hernia, Episiocele, in women, when they extend to the labia majora. 2. Crural or Fem'oral Hernia, Me'rocele, when they issue by the crural canal. 3. Infra-Pubian Hernia, (F.) Hernie sous-pubienne, Ovideuce'le, Opence'le, Opolence'le, Hernia foraminis ovalis, when the viscera escape through the opening, which gives passage to the infra-pubian vessels. 4. Ischiatic Hernia; when it takes place through the sacro-sciatic notch. 5. Umbilical Hernia, Exomphalos, Ompholoe'le; when it occurs at the umbilicus or near it. 6. Epigastric Hernia;—occurring through the linea alba, above the umbilicus. 7. Hypogastric or Infra-umbilical Hernia, Calioce'le, Hypogastrice'le.—when it occurs through the linea alba below the umbilicus. 8. Perina'al Hernia, Mesocoele'le, Hernia perina'i, Perina'oe'le, Perineoce'le—when it takes place through the levator ani, and appears at the perineum. 9. Vag'inal Hernia, Coleoce'le sen Elytroce'le—through the parieties of the vagina. 10. Diaphragmatic Hernia, Diaphragmatoce'le; when it passes through the diaphragm.

Hernia are likewise distinguished,—according to the viscera forming them,—into Enteroce'le, Epiploce'le, Entero-epiploce'le, Gastroce'le, Cystocele'le, Hepatoce'le, Splenoe'le, &c.

When a hernia can be restored to its natural cavity, by the aid of pressure, &c., properly applied, it is said to be reducible. It is, on the contrary, irreducible, when adhesion, bulk, &c., oppose its return. When the aperture, which has given passage to the hernia, occasions more or less constriction on the protruded portion, the hernia is said to be incarcerated or strangulated; and, if the constriction be not removed, constipation, hicough, vomiting, and all the signs of violent inflammation, followed by gangrene, supervene, with alteration of the features, small pulse, cold extremities, and death.

The therapeutical indications are,—1. As regards reducible hernia:—to replace the viscera in the abdomen by the taxis; and to retain them there by the use of a truss, which, if properly adapted, may effect a radical cure. 2. As regards irreducible hernia:—to support the tumour by an appropriate suspensory bandage. 3. As regards strangulated hernia:—to have recourse to the taxis; blood-letting; warm bath; tobacco gylsters; ice to the tumour; and, if these should not succeed, to perform an operation, which consists in dividing the covering of the hernia, and cutting the aponeurotic ring, which causes the strangulation;—reducing the displaced viscera, unless their diseased condition should require them to be retained without;—dressing the wound appropriately:—restoring the course of the fæces by means of gentle gylsters—preventing or combating inflammation of the abdominal viscera;—conducting the wound to cicatrization, by appropriate means; and afterwards supporting the cicatrix by a bandage.

The word hernia was also used, of old, for the scrotum, and, not infrequently, for the testicle.

HERNIA, ANEURISMAL, Circomphalus—h. Arteriarum, see Aneurism—h. of the Bladder, Cystocele—h. Bronchialis, Bronchocele—h. Carnosa, Sarcocele—h. of the Cerebellum, Paracephaloe'le—h. Cerebri, Encephaloe'le.

HERNIA, CONGENITAL, Hernia congenita, is a protrusion of some of the contents of the abdomen into the Tunica vaginalis testis, owing to a want of adhesion between its sides, after the descent of the testicle.

HERNIA CORNEÆ, Ceratocele—h. Crural, Merocele—h. Epiploic, Epiplocele—h. Femoral, Merocele—h. Foraminis Ovalis, see Hernia—h. Gutturis, Bronchocele—h. Hepatica, Hepatocele.

HERNIA HUMORALIS, Empress'na Orchit'is, Didymit'is, Orchit'is, Orchidit'is, Inflammatio testiculi, Inflammation of the Testicle, Swelled Testi- cle, Hernia Ven'eria, Orchioce'le, Orchidoce'le, Orchidon'eus, (F.) Inflammation du testicule, Orchite. Swelling and inflammation of the testicle is a common symptom of gonorrhœa, (F.) Chandepisse tombée dans les Bourres; but it may arise from external injuries, or from other causes. It is a disease which cannot be mistaken, and the treatment must obviously be strongly antiphlogistic, supporting the testicle during the treatment, and for some time afterwards; methodical compression has also been found useful. The disease is not generally of a serious character, going off as suddenly as it comes on. As it affects the epididymis more especially, when supervening on gonorrhœa or blennorrhœa, it is sometimes termed blennorrhag'ic epididymit'is.

HERNIA INCARCERATA, Entero-peristole—h. Inguinalis, Bubonoe'le—h. Intestinalis, Enterocele—h. Intestinalis omentalis, Entero-epiplocele—h. Iridis, Ptoxis Iridis—h. Ischiatica, Ischiocele—h. Liencalis, Splenoe'le.

HERNIA LITT'ERICA, H. e Diverticulo Intestini, Hernia first described by Litre, in which the intestinal canal proper is not included in the hernial sac, the protruded portion of intestine consisting of a digital prolongation of the ileum, which Litre concluded was formed by the gradual extension of a knuckle of the bowel, that had been engaged in the inguinal canal.

HERNIA OF THE LIVER, Hepatocele—h. of the Lung, Pneumocele.

HERNIA, MESOCOLIC, Hernia Mesocolica, Hernia, caused by the bowels gliding between the layers of the mesocolon.—Sir A. Cooper.

HERNIA, OMENTAL, Epiplocele—h. Parorchidoenterica, Parorchido-enterocele—h. Perina'i, see Hernia—h. Pharyngis, Pharyngocele—h. Phrenic, Diaphragmatic hernia—h. Pinguedinoso Seroti, Liparocele—h. of the Pleura, Pleurocele—h. Pleurica et pulmonalis, Pleurocele—h. Podendal, Podendal hernia—h. Sacci lacrymalis, Lachrymal hernia, Mucocele—h. Scrotalis, Scrotocoele—h. Seminalis seroti, Spermatocoele—h. of the Stomach, Gastrocele—h. Suprapubian, H. inguinal—h. of the Tongue, Glossocoele—h. Umbilicalis, Epiplomphalon, Exomphalos—h. Umbilici Aquosa, Hydromphalon—h. Uraehi, Uromphalos—h. Uteri, Hysterocele—h. Varicose, Cirsocele—h. Varicosa, Varicocele—h. Venarum, Varix—h. Veneris, Hernia humoralis—h. Ventosa, Physocoele—h. Ventral, see Ventral—h. Ventriculi, Gastrocele—h. Vesicae Uriariae, Cystocele—h. Zirbalis, Epiplocele.

HERNIAIRE, Hernial, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIAL, Hernia'rius, (F.) Herniaire. Belonging to, or concerning hernia:—as Hernial Bandage, Hernial Sac, &c.

The (F.) Hernié, is applied to a part enveloped in a hernial sac. (F.) Herniens, Ce'le'ta, Ce'lot'es, Ruptured, Burst, Bursten, means one affected with hernia; and Chirurgien herniaire, one who devotes himself to the treatment of hernia.

HERNIA'RIA GLABRA, H. vulgaris seu hirvuta seu alpestris seu an'na seu cine'rea seu fruticosa, Milligr'na, Emp'etrum, Rupturewort, from hernia, 'rupture' (F.) Herniaire, Turquette, Herniale, Herbe Turque. Ord. Paronychieæ. This plant, which as its name imports, was formerly considered efficacious in the cure of hernia, seems destitute of all virtues.

HERNIARIUS, Hernial.

HERNIE CHARNUÉ, Sarcocele—h. de l'Épiploon, Epiplocele—h. de l'Estomac, Gastrocele—h. du Foie, Hepatocele—h. Inguinale, Bubonoe'le—h. du Nombri, Exomphalos—h. Ombilicale, Exomphalos—h. du Pannou, Pneumocele—h. de la Vessie, Cystocele.

HERNIÉ, Hernial.

HERNIEMPHRAGMUS, Herniemphrax's, from hernia, and επφραγμος, 'obstruction.' The mechanical obstruction of a hernial canal for the radical cure of the hernia.

HERNIEUX, Hernial.

HERNIOLE, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIOTOMY, Celotomia.

HERO'IC, Hero'icus, Hero'ius, Hero'us, from ερος, 'a hero.' An epithet applied to remedies or practice of a violent character.

HERPEDON, Herpes.

HERPEN, Herpes.

HERPES, Erpes, Herpe'don, Herpen, Serpens, from ερω, 'I creep;' because it creeps and spreads about the skin; Echphyl'sis Herpes, Cytis'sima Herpes, Tetter, Fret, (F.) Dartre, Olophlyctide. A vesicular disease, which, in most of its forms, passes through a regular course of increase, maturation, decline, and termination, in from 10 to 14 days. The vesicles arise in distinct, but irregular clusters, which commonly appear in quick succession, and near together, on an inflamed base; generally attended with heat, pain, and considerable constitutional disorder. The term, like all others which refer to cutaneous diseases, has not been accurately defined. The ancients had three varieties: the miliary, κεχχαιαιος; vesicular, φλυκταινωδης, and eroding, εσθιομοιος. Bateman has the following varieties: 1. HERPES PHLYCTENODES, Herpes militaris, Echphyl'sis Herpes Militaris, Nirles, (F.) Dartre phlyctemide, in which the vesicles are millet-sized; pellucid; clusters commencing on an uncertain part of the body, and being progressively strewed over the rest of the surface; succeeded by fresh crops. 2. HERPES ZOSTER, Zoster, Zona ty'nea seu verpiginosa, Ignis Per'sicinus, Cinzill'a, Cin'gulum, Sacer ignis, Echphyl'sis Herpes zoster, Herpes peris'celis, Erysip'elas zoster seu phlyctenoides seu pustulosa, Zona, Circ'eius, Perizo'ma, (F.) Ceinture, C. dartreus, Fen Persique, Erysip'ele pustulenz, Shingles, (Prov.) Cruels, in which the vesicles are pearl-sized; the clusters spreading round the body like a girdle; at times confluent, and occasionally preceded by constitutional irritation. 3. HERPES CIRCINATUS, Formicu ambulato'ria, An'ulus re'pens, Herpes Serp'i'go, Serp'i'go, Echphyl'sis Herpes Circinatus, Ringworm, Vesic'ular Ringworm, consisting of vesicles with a reddish base, uniting in rings; the area of the rings slightly discoloured, often followed by fresh crops. 4. HERPES LABIALIS, and 5. HERPES PRÆPUTIALIS, Aphtha præputii, Ulcus'cula præputii, appearing, respectively, on the lips and prepuce. 6. HERPES IDIS, Iris, Rain-bow-worm, occurring in small circular patches, each of which is composed of concentric rings of different colours. To these may be added, HERPES EX'EDENS, H. esthiom'enus seu depascens seu ferus seu estiom'enus seu ferox, Echphyl'sis Herpes ex'edens, Darta excoriati'ca seu mal'igna, Lupus non exedens, Formicu corrosi'va, Formiz, Pup'ula fera, U'lcerative Ringworm, A'gria, (F.) Dartre rougeante, in which the vesicles are hard; clusters thronged; fluid dense, yellow or reddish, hot, arid, corroding the subjacent skin, and spreading in serpentine trails.

All the varieties demand simply an antiphlogistic treatment, when attended with febrile irritation. The herpes circinatus, alone, requires the use of astringent applications which have the power of repressing the eruption.

HERPES DEPASCENS, H. exedens — h. Esthiomennus. H. exedens — h. Esthiomennus. H. exedens — h. Farinosus, Pityriasis — h. Ferox. H. exedens — h. Ferus. H. exedens — h. Furfuraceus, Pityriasis — h. Furfuraceus circinatus, Lepra. H. exedens — h. Miliaris, H. phlyctenoides — h. Periscellis, H. zoster — h. Serpigo, H. circinatus — h. Tomurans, Porrigo decalvans.

HERPET'IC, Herpet'icus, (F.) Herpétique, Dartreus. Possessing the nature of herpes.

HERPETOG'RAPHY, Herpetograph'ia, from ερος, 'herpes,' and γραφειν, 'a description.' A description of the different forms of herpes, as Herpetology, Herpetolog'ia, is a treatise on the same, and also on reptiles, from ερεπτον, 'a reptile.'

HERPETON, Herpet'ion, from ερεπτον, 'to creep.' A creeping eruption or ulcer. — Hippocrates.

HERPYLOS, Thymus serpyllum.

HERRENSCHWAND'S SPECIFIC, see Specific of Herrenschiwand.

HERRIN, Urine.

HERSKET, Ardor ventriculi.

HESPERIS ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

HETERADELPH'IA, Heterodidym'ia, Heterodym'ia, from ετερος, 'other,' and αδελφος, 'a brother.' A double monstrosity, in which the components of the double bodies are very unequal, and of which one portion may be regarded as the stem or trunk, to which another organized part, or even a whole body, less developed than itself, is affixed like a parasite.

HETERADEN'IC, Heteraden'icus, (F.) Hétéradénique, from ετερος, 'other,' and αδην, 'a gland.' An accidental tissue is so termed, which has a glandular structure, but occurs in parts devoid of glands.

HETEROCHRON'ICUS, Heteroch'ronus, from ετερος, and χρονος, 'time.' Relating to difference of time.

Pulsus heterochron'icus. A pulse of varying rhythm. An irregular or intermittent pulse.

HETEROCHYMEU'SIS, from ετερος, and χυμοσις, 'mixture.' A state of the blood in which it contains other matters than in health, as uræa, bile, &c.

HETEROCLITE, see Homology, and Tissues.

HETEROCRANIA, Hemisrania.

HETEROCRIN'IA, from ετερος, and κρινω, 'I separate.' Modification in the situation of secretions. — Andral.

HETERODIDY'MIA, Heteradelphia.

HETERODY'MIA, Heteradelphia.

HETEROGENESIS, see Generation. Also, any anomaly in organic formation.

HETEROLALIA, Heterophonia.

HETEROLOGOUS TISSUES, see Tissues.

HETEROMORPH'ISM, Heteromorphi'smus, from ετερος, and μορφη, 'shape.' A deviation from the natural shape of parts.

HETEROMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HETEROPAG'IA: from ετερος, and παγω, 'I unite together.' A double monstrosity, in which the accessory subject, which is very small and imperfect, but provided with a distinct head, and at least rudimental lower limbs, has its body implanted on the anterior surface of the body of the principal subject.

HETEROPATHIC, Allopathic.

HETEROPHON'IA, from ετερος, and φωνη, 'voice.' A cracked or broken voice. A change of the voice or speech — Heterolalia.

HETEROPTHAL'MIA, from ετερος, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' A difference in the two eyes, — as when one squints, or is of a different colour.

HETEROPLAS'MUS, from ετερος, and πλασμα, 'formation.' A morbid formation foreign to the economy, and which is composed of elements different from those that are found in it in the normal condition.

HETEROPLAS'TY, Heteroplasi'ticē, Heteroplas'tia, from ετερος, and πλασσω, 'I form.' Irregular plastic or formative actions or operations, that do not admit of exact classification.

HETEROPROSOP'US, from ετερος, and προ- αὐτοῦ, 'countenance.' A monster having two faces.—Gurlt.

HETEROPUS, from 'ερεπος, and ποῦς, 'foot.' One who has one foot different from the other.

HETEROREXIA, Malacia.

HETERORRHYTHMUS, from 'ερεπος, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Having another rhythm. An epithet given to the pulse, when it is such, in any individual, as is usually felt at a different age.

HETEROSARCOSES, from 'ερεπος, and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A class of diseases which consist in the formation of accidental tissues.—Gendrin.

HETEROTAXIA, (F.) Hétérotaxie, from 'ερεπος, and ταξις, 'order.' A malformation, which consists in the general transposition of organs. A change in the relation of organs.

HETEROTOP'IA, (F.) Hétérotopie, from 'ερεπος, and τοπος, 'place.' A deviation from the natural position of parts.

HÊTRE, Fagus sylvatica.

HEUCHERA, see H. cortusa—h. Acerifolia, H. cortusa.

HEUCHERA CORTUSA, H. America'na seu Acerifolia seu Viscida, Cortusa America'na, Alum Root, American Sandicle, Ground-nut, Cliff-weed, Split-root. Ord. Saxifragaceae. The root—Heuchera (Ph. U. S.)—is a powerful astringent, and is the basis of a cancer powder. The American Indians apply the powdered root to wounds, ulcers, and cancers. It is said to have been sold for colchicum.

HEUCHERA RICHARDSONII, which abounds on the rocks of Churchill River, is used medicinally by the Cree Indians, who chew its astringent root, and apply it as a vulnerary to wounds and sores.

HEUCHERA VISCIDA, H. cortusa.

HEUCHE-BANE, Ischion.

HEUDELOTIA AFRICANA, see Ebellium.

HEUKS, Singultus.

HEVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.

HEXAGIUM, Sextula.

HEXAGONE ARTÉRIELLE, see Circulus Willisii.

HEXATHYRIDIIUM VENARUM, see Worms.

HEXIS, ἕξις. Habit, habit of body, constitution. Hence, hectic, cachectic, &c.

HEYLE, Sanitas.

HIA TSAO TONG TCHONG, Sphæria Sinensis.

HIA'TUS, from hiare, hiatum, 'to gape,' 'to open.' A foramen or aperture. Mouth. The valva. Also, yawning.

HIATUS CANALIS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii.

HIATUS DIAPHRAGMATICUS AÖRTICUS, Semicirculus exsusp'ctus. The opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the abdominal aorta.

HIATUS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii—h. Occipito-pétreus, Lacerum posterius foramen—h. Sphéno-pétreus, Lacerum anterius foramen.

HIATUS OF WINSLOW, Foramen Winslowii, Foramen of Winslow. An opening—situate behind the lesser omentum, and behind the vessels and nerves of the liver—which forms a communication between the peritoneal cavity and that of the omenta.

HIBERNICUS LAPIS, Tegula seu Arde'isia Hibernica, Harle'nia, Irish Slate. A kind of slate or very hard stone, found in different parts of Ireland, in masses of a bluish-black colour, which stains the hands. It has been taken, powdered, in spruce-beer, against inward con-tusions.

HIBISCUS, Althæa.

HIBISCUS ABELMOSCHUS, Abelmoschus moscha'tus. Ord. Malvaceae. The name of the plant, whose seeds are called Grana Moschi or Muskseed. It is the Belmoschus, Abelmoschus, Granon Moschi, Kel'mia Egyptiaca, Moschus Arabum, Egyptia moscha'ta, Bomia moscha'ta, Al'cea, A. India'ca seu Egyptiaca Villa'sa, Abelmosch, Abelmosk, Muskwallouc, (F.) Graine de Musc, Herbe à la poudre de Chypre, Ambrette, Guimauve veloutée. It is indigenous in Egypt and the Indies. The seeds are chiefly used as perfumes; and especially in the formation of Cyprus Powder.

HIBISCUS ESCULENTUS, Okra, Okro, Gombo. A plant, the green pods of which abound in mucilage, and are much used in the West Indies for soups.

HIBISCUS POPULEUS, Balimba'go. A small Mollucea tree. The fruit is full of a juice similar to camboge. The root is emetic. It is used in chronic diarrhœa, colic, dyspepsia, &c.

HIBRIDA, Hybrid.

HICCOUGH, Singultus.

HICCUP, Singultus.

HICK'ORY. The name of several American trees of the genus Carya; Order, Juglandaceae. The leaves are usually aromatic; and are reputed to be antispasmodic [?]. The bark of those species that have bitter nuts, as Carya amara and C. porci'na, is somewhat astringent. Some of them bear fruit that is much esteemed, as Carya oliviformis, Pecan' or Pecan' nut, and C. sulcata, Shellbark.

HIDDEN SEIZURES. An expression employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for obscure encephalic and spinal attacks, of an epileptoid character for example, which may be immediately owing to trachelismus.

HIDE-BOUND, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HIDRISCHESES, Hidroschesis.

HIDROA, Desudatio, Échauboultures, Hydra, Sudamina.

HIDRON'OSUS, Hidrom'nis, from ἵδρωσ, 'sweat,' and νόσος, 'a disease.' A disease accompanied by violent sweats. Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRONUSUS, Hidronus.

HIDROPEDESIS, Ephidrosis.

HIDROPHOROS, Sudoriferous.

HIDROPOETICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROPYRA, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDROPYRETOS, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRORRHŒA, Ephidrosis.

HIDROS, ἵδρωσ, ἰδρωσος, Sudor, 'sweat.' Hence—Hidropyra, Hidromis, &c.

HIDROSCHESIS, Hidrischesis, Retentio sudor'is, from hidros, and σχesis, 'retention.' Suppression of perspiration.

HIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HIDROTERION, Achieolum.

HIDROTERICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROTICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROT'ITIUM, Diminutive of hidros. A gentle sweat or perspiration.

HIDROTOPEUM, Sudorific.

HIEBLE, Sambucus ebulus.

HIERA DIACOLOCYNTHIDOS, from ἱερος, 'holy.' Hiera of Colocyth. An electuary, composed of 10 parts of colocyth, as much aguric, germander, white horehound, starchas:—5 parts of opopanax, as much sagapenum, parsley, round birchroot root, and white pepper:—4 parts of spikenard, cinnamon, myrrh, and saffron; and 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and 5 drachms of honey.

HIERA OF COLOCYNTH, H. Diacolocynthidos—h. Logadii, Hiera piera.

HIERA PIERA, from ἱερος, 'holy,' and πικρος, 'bitter.' Holy bitter, Pulvis aloë'icus, formerly called Hiera logadii when made into an electuary with honey. It is now kept in the form of dry powder;—prepared by mixing socotrine aloes, one pound, with 3 ounces of canella alba. See Pulvis aloes cum canella.

HIERA SRYNX, Vertebral column, Epilepsy.

HIERACITES, ἱερακίτης, from ἱεραξ, ἱερακος, 'a hawk,' Lapis Accipitrum. The ancient name of a precious stone, believed to be capable of arresting the hemorrhoidal flux.—Pliny, Galen, Pausan.

HIERACIUM LACHENALII, H. murorum.

HIERACIUM MURO'RUM, H. Lachena'lii, Pulmonaria Gall'ica, Auricula mur'is major, (F.) Épervière des murailles, Pulmonaire des Français. Ord. Compositæ. A European plant, which is a slight tonic.

HIERACIUM OLERACEUM, Sonchus oleraceus.

HIERACIUM PILOSEL'LA. The systematic name of the Auricula Muris, Pilosel'la, P. Alpina, Myosotis, Mouse-ear, (F.) Piloselle, Oreille de Souris. This plant contains a bitter, lactescent juice, which has a slight degree of astringency. The roots are more powerful than the leaves.

HIERACIUM VENO'SUM, Rattlesnakeweed, Veiny Hawkweed, Bloodwort, indigenous, has similar properties.

HIERANOSUS, Chorea, Convulsion, Epilepsy.

HIERAX, Accipiter.

HIEROBOTANE, Verbena officinalis.

HIEROGLYPHICA, from ἱερος, 'holy,' and γλυφω, 'I carve.' A name given to the signs employed in medicine; and, also, to the folds in the hands, feet, and forehead, which afford chiromancy its pretended oracles.

HIEROPYR, Erysipelas.

HIKRY PIKRY, Pulvis aloes et Canellæ.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY, see Balsam of Honey, Hill's—h. Essence of Bardana, Tinctura guaiacæ.

HILLBERRY, Gaultheria.

HILL FEVER, see Fever, hill.

HILON (F.), Hilum, improperly Hilus, 'the black spot on the top of a bean.' A name given by some writers to a small blackish tumour, formed by the protrusion of the iris through an opening in the transparent cornea, so called from its comparison with the hile or black mark presented by the vicia faba at one of its extremities. In Botany, the Hile or Hilum is the cicatricula of a seed, which indicates the place by which it was attached in the cavity of the pericarp. It is the umbilicus of the seed. The fissure of the spleen, kidney, lung, ovary, &c., is, also, called Hilus. See Porta.

HILUS, Hilon.

HILUS LIENA'LIS, Incisura lienal'is. The concave part of the spleen.

HILUS RENA'LIS, Incisura renal'is, Hilus of the kidney. The concave part of the kidney.

HILWORT, Mentha pulegium.

HIMANTOMA, see Himas.

HIMANTOSIS, Himas.

HIMAS, ἵμας, ἱμαντος, 'a thong of leather.' The vulva; likewise, elongation, and extenuation of the vulva. It is also called Himantosis, Himantoma. See Staphyloedema.

HIMEROS, Libido.

HINDBERRIES, see Rubus idæus.

HINDHEEL, Tanacetum.

HIP, Haunch, Hypochondriasis—h. Bone, Ischium—h. Disease, Coxarum morbus—h. Joint, Coxofemoral articulation—h. Tree, Rosa canina.

HIP'PACE, ἱππική, from ἵππος, 'a horse.' Cæsus Equinus. A cheese prepared from mare's milk.

HIPPANTHROPIA, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ἀνθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy, in which the patient believes himself changed to a horse. The Greek word ἵππανθρωπος, means the fabulous Centaur.

HIPPASIA, Equitation.

HIPPED, Hypochondriac.

HIPPEIA, Equitation.

HIPPEUSIS, Equitation.

HIPPIA'TER, Hippiätros, Med'icus equar'ius, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ἴατρος, 'a physician.' A farrier. A horse doctor. Used also for one who treats the diseases of other domestic animals; Veterinar'ius, Malomed'icus, Med'icus Veterinar'ius, Zoïätros.

HIPPIATRIA, Hippiat'rica, Hippiat'ricæ, Medic'ina equar'ia, (F.) Hippin'rique. A science, whose object is the knowledge of the diseases of the horse. It is sometimes made to include other domestic animals. See Veterinary art.

HIPPIATR'IQUE, Hippiatria.

HIPPIATRUS, Hippiater.

HIPPO, Ipecacuanha. A corruption, in Ireland, of Ipecacuanha; and hence applied, at times, in the United States, to the American plant, Euphorbia Corollata, which is, also, called Ipecacuanha.

HIPPO, INDIAN, Gillenia trifoliata.

HIPPOCAMPE GRANDE, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAMPUS MAJOR, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAM'PUS MINOR, Pes hippocam'pi minor, (ἵπποκαμπος, 'the sea horse.') Unguis. U. Acis seu Halleri, O'crea, Coll'iculus cævæ posterior'is ventricul'rum later'alium, Calcæar'is, Uu'ciforme Em'vence, (F.) Ergot, Éperon. A medullary tubercle or projection, observed in the posterior cornu of the lateral ventricle of the brain.

HIPPOCENTAUREA CENTAURIUM, Chironia centaurium.

HIPPOCRAS, Claret.

HIPPOCRATES, CAP OF, Bonnet d'Hippocrate—h. Sleeve, Chausse.

HIPPOCRAT'IC, Hippocrat'icus. Relating to Hippocrates, or concerning his doctrine,—as Hippocratic doctrine, Hippocratic face, &c.

HIPPOCRATISM, Hippocratism'us. The doctrine of Hippocrates, which consisted in observing and following nature, as indicated by her presumed efforts, and the crises set up by her.

HIPPOCRATIST. A partisan of the Hippocratic doctrine.

HIPPOGONYOLEPUS, Crusta genu equinæ.

HIPPOLATHIUM, Rumex patientia.

HIPPOLITHUS, Bezoard of the horse.

HIPPOMANÉ MANCINEL'LA, (ἵππος, 'a horse,' and manía, 'madness,' 'horse, or violent madness,') Manchineel, (F.) Maucaillier. Family, Euphorbiacæ. See Syst. Monœcia Monadelphica. A poisonous tree of South America, with the milky juice of which the Indians poison their arrows. The fruit, also, is highly poisonous.

HIPPOMARATHRUM, Peucedanum silaus.

HIPPOPATHOL'O'GY, Hippopatholog'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' παθος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of the diseases of the horse. Pathology of the horse.

HIPPOPHAGOUS, Equivorous.

HIPPOPUS, see Kyllosis.

HIPPOS, Equus.

HIPPOSELINUM, Smyrniolum olusatrum.

HIPPOSTEOL'OGY, Hippostenolog'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' οστέον, 'a bone,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' Osteology of the horse.

HIPPOT'OMY, Hippotom'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and τέμνειν, 'to cut.' Anatomy of the horse.

HIPPU'RIA, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ουρον, 'urine,' because the urine contains hippuric acid, which is found in the urine of the horse. A pathological condition, in which there is an excess of hippuric acid in the urine.

HIPPURIC ACID, see Acid, hippuric.

HIPPURIS VULGARIS, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and oupa, 'a tail.' The systematic name of the Horse's Tail, Mare's Tail, Equisetum minus, Equisetum, (F.) Prêle, Preele, Asprêle, Queue de cheval. It is an astringent, and frequently used, as tea, by the vulgar, in diarrhœa and hemorrhage. The same virtues are attributed to the Equisetum arvense, floridifolium, limosum, &c.

HIPPUS, Equus, Nictalia, from ἵππος, 'a horse.' A disease of the eyes, in which, from birth, they perpetually twinkle, like those of a man on horseback. [?] Also, a tremulous condition of the iris, which occasions repeated alternations of contraction and dilatation of the pupil; Iridotromus, Iridodone'sis, Iridoplasia, Tremor Iridis.

HIPS, Sax. heopa. The fruit of the dog-rose, Rosa canina: chiefly used as a confection. See Confectio Rosæ Caninæ.

HIRCIS'MUS, Hircus, Hirquus, from hircus, 'a goat.' Stinking like a goat:—applied especially to the odour of the secretions of the axilla.

HIRCUS, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus—h. Alarum, Cinabra.

HIRPLING, Claudication.

HIRQUITALITAS, from hircus, 'a goat,' Parophonia puberum. Goat's voice. See Egophony.

HIRQUUS, Hircus, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus.

HIRSUTIES, Dasya, Dasytes, Trichosis, Hirsuties, Hairiness. Growth of hairs on extraneous parts, or, superfluous growth on parts; as in cases of bearded women.—Good. When congenital, it is termed Hirsuties adan'ta.

HIRUDO, The Leech, Sanguisuga, Bdella: from haurio, 'I draw out,' or from hæreo, 'I stick.' [?] In medicine, Hirudo Medicinalis, Bdella Medicinalis or Medicinal Leech, (F.) Sanguis, is employed. In the United States, H. decora is used. The leech lives in fresh water, and feeds on the blood of animals, which it sucks, after having pierced the skin with its three sharp teeth. This habit has been taken advantage of, to produce local blood-letting. In applying the leech, the part must be wiped dry; and if there be difficulty in making it suck, a little milk or cream may be applied. When satiated, it will drop off, and by applying a little salt or vinegar to its head it will disgorge the blood. A good English leech will take about half an ounce of blood, including that which flows by fomenting the part subsequently. The American takes less.

HIRUDO ARTIFICIALIS, Antlia sanguisuga—h. Decora, see Hirudo—h. Medicinalis, Hirudo.

HIRUNDINARIA, Asclepias vincetoxicum, Lysimachia nummularia.

HIRUN'DO, Chelidon, from hærendo, 'sticking;' because it sticks its nests against the houses [?]. The Swallow. The nests of the swallow were once employed as rubefacients, boiled in vinegar.

HISpanicum Viride, Cupri subacetatis.

HISTOCHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

HISTODIALYSIS, from ἵστος, 'organic texture,' and διαλυσις, 'dissolution.' A morbid dissolution of the tissues.

HISTOGENETIC, Histogeneticus, 'Tissue making.' Same etymon as the next. Relating, or appertaining to histogeny or the formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOGENETIC ELEMENTS OF NUTRITION, see Plastic Element.

HISTOGENY, Histogenia, Histogenesis,

Tissue formation, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and γενσις, 'generation.' The formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOLOGIA, Histology.

HISTOLOGICAL, Histologicus, Histologicus, Histologicus. Same etymon as the next. Relating to histology. Applied, also, at times, to the natural transformations that occur in the tissues in the embryo, in contradistinction to morphological, which applies to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo.

HISTOL'OGY, Histology, Histology, Histology, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and λογος, 'a description.' Anatomy (general). The term is, also, more particularly appropriated to the minute anatomy of the tissues. See Anatomy.

Pathological Histology, Microscopic pathological Anatomy, is the morbid anatomy of the tissues.

HISTOLYSIS, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and λυσις, 'solution.' The decay and dissolution of the organic tissues, and of the blood. It includes the various forms of retrograde metamorphosis and degeneration.

HISTON'OMY, Histonomy, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and νομος, 'law.' The aggregate of laws, which preside over the formation and arrangement of the organic tissues.

HISTORY, MEDICAL, Historia Medicinæ. A narration of the chief circumstances, and the persons connected with them, in the progress of medicine.

HIST'OS, ἵστος, 'a web or tissue,' 'the organic texture;' Textura seu Tela organica.

HISTOT'OMY, Histotomy, from ἵστος, 'organic texture,' and τομή, 'incision.' Dissection of the tissues.

HIVE, Hives.

HIVE SYRUP, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HIVES, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria, Vari-cella. In Scotland, according to Dr. Jameson, Hives or Ilyves means any eruption of the skin, proceeding from an internal cause; and, in Lothian, it is used to denote both the red and the yellow gum. In the United States, it is vaguely employed: most frequently, perhaps, for Urticaria.

HOM'INY. A word of Indian derivation. Maize or Indian corn hulled and coarsely broken. It is prepared for food by being mixed with water and boiled.

HOMINY, WHEATEN, see Groats.

HOMIOISIS, Homoiosis.

HOMME, Homo.

HOMO, (F.) Homme, Man,—the chief and most perfect of the mammalia; in Greek, ανθρωπος, Anthro'pos, from ana, 'upwards,' and τρεπω, 'I turn;' because man, alone, of all animals, possesses the natural power of standing erect. He is, also, the only animal whose incisor teeth, wedged in a projecting jaw, are absolutely vertical. Man is especially distinguished from other mammalia by the faculty, which he possesses, of classing his ideas; comparing them with each other; and connecting, representing, and transmitting them by signs and articulate sounds. He possesses, in the highest degree, all the attributes of intelligence,—memory, judgment, and imagination. He inhabits all countries,—the burning regions of the torrid zone, and the chilling atmosphere of the polar climes. In different situations, he presents, in his figure, colour, and stature, differences which have caused mankind to be divided by naturalists into races or varieties. The number of such races can only be approximated. Blumenbach admits five, the Caucasian, Ethiopian, Mongolian, Malay, and American. Every division must necessarily be arbitrary, and the individuals composing each variety are far from being alike.

HOMO ALATUS, see Alatus.

HOMO CAUDA'TES, 'Tailed man.' A fabulous, tailed variety of the human species, 'incola orbis antarctici,' admitted by Linnæus, although he is uncertain whether to rank them with men or apes!

HOMO FATUUS, Idiot.

HOMOËD'RUS, from δμου, 'together,' and 'εδρα,' 'seat.' Having the same seat. Morbi homœdri:—diseases that have the same seat.

HOMÆOMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HOMŒOPATH, Homæopathist.

HOMŒOPATH'IC, Homæopath'icus, Homæop'athes. Relating to homæopathy.

HOMŒOPATH'IE, Homæopathy.

HOMŒOPATHIST, Ho'mæopathy, Homæopath'icus, Homæopathis'ta, Homæopathis'tes. One who believes in homæopathy.

HOMŒOPATHY, Homæopath'ia, Arx homæopath'ica, Homæop'athy, Hahn'emannism, Dynamop'athy, (F.) Homæopathie, Homæothérapeutique, Homæosympathie, Doctrinæ homæo-organique, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and παθος, 'affection.'

A fanciful doctrine, which maintains, that disordered actions in the human body are to be cured by inducing other disordered actions of a like kind, and this to be accomplished by infinitesimally small doses, often of apparently inert agents; the decillionth part of a grain of charcoal, for example, is an authorized dose. It has also been called Glob'ulism.

HOMŒOSIS, Homoiosis.

HOMŒOSYMPATHIE, Homæopathy.

HOMŒOTHERAPEUTIQUE, Homæopathy.

HOMŒOZ'YGY, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and ζυγωω, 'I join together.' (F.) Soi-pour-soi. The law of association of organs, by which like parts adhere to like parts.—Serres.

HOMOETHNIA, Sympathy.

HOMOGENESIS, see Generation.

HOMOIOPATHIA, Sympathy.

HOMIO'SIS, Homæo'sis, Homio'sis, from 'ομοιος, 'I resemble,' 'I assimilate.' An elaboration of the nutritious juice, by which it becomes proper for assimilation.

HOMOLINON, see Apolinosis.

HOMOLOGOUS, see Homology.

HOMOLOGUE, Homol'ogue, same etymon as homology. A term applied to the same organ in different animals under every variety of form and function.—Owen.

HOMOL'OGY, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of similarity of structure. Thus, the two sides of the body are said to be 'homologous.' Homol'ogous, homomorph'ous, or homæomorph'ous tissues are those that resemble others; in opposition to heterol'ogous, heteroclitic, or heteromorph'ous, which are new formations. Homology seems now to be accepted as the designation of the doctrine or study, the subject of which is the relations of the parts of animal bodies.—Owen.

HOMOMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HOMONOPAGIA, Cephalalgia.

HOMOPI'AGUS, from 'ωμος, 'raw,' and φάγω, 'I eat.' One who eats raw flesh.

HOMOPLAS'TY, Homopl'asia, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The formation of homologous tissues.

HOMOPLATA, Scapula.

HOMOT'ONOS, Æqua'lis, from 'ομος, 'equal,' and τonos, 'tone.' That which has the same tone. A continued fever, whose symptoms have an equal intensity during the whole course of the disease, has been so called. See Acmastics, and Synocha.

HONESTY, Lunaria rediviva.

HONEWORT, FIELD, Sison amomum.

HONEY, Mel—h. Balsam of Hill's, see Mel—h. Bloom. Apocynum androsæmifolium — h. of Borax, Mel boracis — h. Clarified, Mel despumatum — h. Prepared, Mel preparatum — h. of Roses, Mel rose — h. of Squill, compound, Syrupus scilla compositus.

HONEYCOMB BAG, Reticulum.

HONEYSUCKLE, Lonicera periclymenum — h. Bush, Diervilla trifida — h. Scarlet, Lonicera sempervirens — h. Trumpet, Lonicera sempervirens.

HONEY SUGAR, Glucose.

HONGLANE, Coptis tecta.

HONOR CAPITIS, see Capillus.

HONORAIRE, Sostrum.

HONORARIUM, Sostrum.

HONTEUX, Pubis.

HOODWORT, Scutellaria lateriflora.

HOOK, Sax. hoco, hooe, Dutch, hooek, Un-cus, Unc'innus, Anc'gra, (F.) Érique, Airigue ou Érine. An instrument, consisting of a steel wire, flattened at the middle, and having the extremities crooked and pointed. Some hooks are furnished with a handle at one extremity—the other having one or two hooks;—constituting the single or double hook. The hook is used by anatomists and surgeons to lay hold of, and raise up, certain parts, the dissection of which is delicate, or which would slip from the fingers.

The Tenaculum is a variety of the hook.

HOOK, BLUNT, Ich'thya, Ich'thyē, Ouyr, Unguis ferr'eus. An instrument which is passed over the flexures of the joints to assist in bringing down the fetus in parturition.

HOOP TREE, Melia azadirach.

HOOPER'S PILLS, Pilule Aloes et Myrrhræ.

HOOPING-COUGH, Pertussis — h. Roche's Embrocation for, see Roche.

HÔPITAL, Hospital — h. des Fous, Morotrophiun.

HOPLOCHRIS'MA, from ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and χρῖσμα, 'salve.' Unguentum armarium, Armatory Unguent. A salve which was supposed to cure wounds by sympathy.—the instrument with which the wound was inflicted being anointed with it.

HOPLOMOCH'LION, ὀπλομαχλιον, from ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and μαχος, 'a lever.' The name of an iron machine or apparatus, which embraced the whole body like armour. A figure of it is given by Fabricius ab Aquapendente.

HOP, Humulus lupulus — h. Pillow, see Humulus lupulus — h. Plant, Humulus lupulus.

HOPS, see Humulus lupulus.

HOQUET, Singultus.

HORA, Hebe.

HORÆA, Menses.

HORÆOTES, Maturity.

HORDEI MALTUM, Malt.

HORDE'OLUM, diminutive of Hordeum, 'barley.' Orde'olum, Pos'thia, Sclerophthal'mia, Crithē, Crith'id'ion, Crythē, Stye, Styan, Stine, (F.) Orgelet, Orgolet. A small, inflammatory tumour, of the nature of a boil, which exhibits itself near the free edge of the eyelids, particularly near the inner angle of the eye.

HOR'DEUM, Or'deum, Crithē. The seeds of Hordeum vulg'arē or Scotch Barley, Ord. Gramineæ, are ranked amongst the Cerealia. (F.) Orge. They afford a mucilaginous decoction, which is employed as a diluent and antiphlogistic. The seeds of the Hordeum distichon seu æstivum, Zea'eriton distichum, and H. herostichon possess similar properties. Barley is freed from its shells in mills, forming the Hor'deum mundatum seu deortica'tum seu excortica'tum, Hor'deum of the Pharmacopœias: and, at times, is rubbed into small, round grains, somewhat like pearls, when it is called Hor'deum perl'atum, Pearl Barley, (F.) Orge perl', and forms the Hor'deum denudatum seu perl'atum, the Hordei sem'ina tr'uncis' nuda'ta, of the Pharmacopœias, — Hor'deum (Ph. U. S.)

HORDEUM CAUSTICUM, Veratrum sabadilla — h. Decorticated, see Hordeum — h. Denudatum, see Hordeum — h. Excortica'tum, see Hordeum — h. Galacticum, Oryza — h. Mundatum, see Hordeum — h. Perl'atum, see Hordeum.

HOREHOUND, Marrubium — h. Black, Bal-lota foetida — h. Germander-leaved, Eupatorium teucrifolium — h. Stinking, Ballota foetida — h. Water, Lycopus sinuatus, Lycopus Virginicus — h. Wild, Eupatorium rotundifolium, E. teucrifolium.

HORME, Instinct.

HORMINUM, Salvia horminum — h. Coloratum, Salvia horminum — h. Sativum, Salvia horminum.

HORMON, Enormon.

HORN, Coriu.

HORN POX, see Variella.

HORNSEED, Ergot.

HORNY, Corneous.

HORNY EXCRESCENCES, Lepido'sis, Ichthy'o-sis cornig'era, Cor'una cuta'nea, (F.) Cornes de la Peau. Certain excrescences, which occasionally form on some part of the skin, and resemble, in shape, the horns of an animal.

HORNY SUBSTANCE, see Tooth.

HORRENTIA, Horripilation.

HOR'RIDA CUTIS, Goose-skin, Cutis ascer'vina, Dermatospasmus, Sporismus peripher'icus. A state of the skin produced by cold or fear, and accompanying the rigor of an intermittent.

HORRIPILA'TION, Horripilatio, Horror, Horren'tio, Phricē, Phricos'mus, Phric'asis, Phri'cia, from horre, 'to bristle up,' and pilus, 'hair.' (F.) Horripilation, Fris'nement. General chilliness, preceding fever, and accompanied with bristling of the hairs over the body.

HORROR, Horripilation — h. Ciborum, Disgust for food.

HORSE BALM, Collinsonia Canadensis — h. Cane, Ambrosia trifida — h. Chestnut, Æsculus hippocastanum — h. Crust, Crusta genu equinae.

HORSEFLY WEED, Sophora tinctoria.

HORSEFOOT, see Kyllosis.

HORSEMINT, Ambrosia trifida, Monarda coe-cinea, M. fistulosa, and M. punctata — h. Sweet, Cunila mariana.

HORSE NETTLE, Solanum Carolinense.

HORSE RADISH, Cochlearia armoracia.

HORSE'S TAIL, Hippuris vulgaris.

HORSE WEED, Ambrosia trifida, Collinsonia Canadensis, Erigeron Canadense.

HORTULUS CUPIDINIS, Vulva.

HORTUS, Vulva — h. Siccus, Herbarium.

HOSE, Collum, Throat.

HOSEFISH, Sepia.

HOS'PITAL, primarily from hospes, hospitis, 'a guest.' Infir'mary. (Old Eng.) Farm'ery, Spit'al, Nosocomi'um, Adygnatocomi'um, Adygnatodoch'i'um, Xenodoc'um, Xenodoche'um, Infirma'rium, Infirmat'orium, Nosodoch'i'um, Volatidina'rium, (F.) Hôpital. An establishment for the reception of the sick, in which they are maintained and treated medically. Hospitals were first instituted about the end of the 4th century, a period at which the word νοσοκομειον was employed, for the first time, by St. Jerome. They may be general, receiving all cases; or special, admitting only the subjects of certain diseases.

HOS'PITAL GANGRENE, Phagedæ'na gangra'no'sa, Putrid or Malignant Ulcer, Gangræ'na Nosocomi'orum seu Nosocomia'lis seu Contagio'sa, Sphac'elus nosocomia'lis, Hos'pital Sore, Putre'do, (F.) Pourriture ou Gangrène d'hôpital. Gangrene, occurring in wounds or ulcers, in hospitals, the air of which has been vitiated by the accumulation of patients, or some other circumstance. Hospital gangrene — many different varieties of which are met with, and always accompanied or preceded by fever—commonly commences with suppression of the suppuration of the wound, which becomes covered with a grayish and tenacious sanies. The gangrene then manifests itself. It extends from the centre of the ulcerated surface towards the edges; these become swollen, painful, and everted; and the patient dies with all the signs of typhus. The treatment must be varied according to circumstances. Sometimes, it requires the use of stimulating, acid, caustic, and antiseptic applications; with, occasionally, the actual cautery, aided by the exhibition of tonics, internally:—at others, the antiphlogistic regimen and emollient applications may be necessary.

HOSPITAL, INSANE, Morotrophium—h. Leper, Ladrerie.

HOST, Tussis.

HOSTIARIUS, Pylorus.

HOT SPRINGS, see Virginia, mineral waters of.

HOUBLON, Humulus lupulus.

HOUGH, Poples, Sickly.

HOUNDS' TONGUE, Cynoglossum.

HOPPE NERVEUSE, see Papilla—h. du Menton, Depressor labii inferioris, Levator labii inferioris.

HOURLASS CONTRACTION OF THE UTERUS, see Chaton.

HOUSELEEK, Sempervivum tectorum—h. Small, Sedum.

HOUSEMAID'S KNEE, see Knee, housemaid's.

HOUSE-PUPIL, see House-Surgeon.

HOUSE-SURGEON, Res'ident Surgeon. Usually a senior house-pupil or graduate, who resides in an hospital, and attends to every accident and disease, in the absence of the attending physician or surgeon. It answers, in the British hospitals, to the Élève interne or Interne of the French. The Élève externe or Externe is a less advanced pupil; from whom Internes are chosen. In ordinary schools, Élève externe means a day-scholar; whilst Élève interne means a boarder.

HOUX, Ilex aquifolium—h. Apalachine, Ilex vomitoria—h. Petit, Ruscus.

HOWDY, Midwife.

HOWDY-WIFE, Midwife.

HUACACACHU, Datura sanguinea.

HUACO, Guaco.

HUANU, Guano.

HUBBON, Haunch.

HUCKLEBERRY, see Gaylussacia, and Vaccinium—h. Dwarf, Gaylussacia humosa.

HUCKLEBONE, Ischion.

HUCKSHOULDERED, see Hump.

KUDSON'S PRESERVATIVE FOR THE TEETH AND GUMS, see Tinctura Myrrhæ.

HUILE, Oil—h. d'Absinthe, Artemisia absinthium (oil of)—h. d'Acajou, see Anacardium occidentale.

HUILE ACOUSTIQUE (F.), O'leum acus'ticum, Acoustic Oil. An oil for deafness, prepared of olive oil, $\frac{3}{4}$ ij; garlic, oz-gall, and bay leaves, each $\frac{3}{4}$ ij; boiled for a quarter of an hour, and strained.

HUILE D'AMANDES, Oleum amygdalarum—h. d'Aneth, see Anethum graveolens—h. Animale, Oleum animale—h. Animale de Dippel, Oleum animale Dippelii—*h. HUIT DE CHIFFRE, Figure of 8. A bandage of which the turns are crossed in the form of the figure 8. Such is the bandage used after bleeding from the arm.

HUITO, Genipa oblongifolia.

HUITRE, Ostrea.

HUKEBANE, Ischion.

HULCUS, Ulcer.

HULGIE-BACKED, see Hump.

HULLUPING, Vomiting.

HUM, VENOUS, Bruit de diable.

HUMBLE, Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMECTANTIA, From humectare, 'to moisten'—A name formerly given to drinks, which appeared to possess the property of augmenting the fluidity of the blood.

HUMERAL, Humeralis. That which belongs to, or is connected with, the arm or humerus.

HUMERAL ARTERY, Arteria humeralis, see Brachial artery.

HUMÉRO-CUBITAL, Brachialis anterior—h. Sus-métacarpien, see Radialis—h. Sus-radial, Supinator radii longus.

HUMERUS, Scapula, Omo, Armus, (F.)

Épaule, Shoulder, (Prov.) Spand. The most elevated part of the arm. The bones, which concur in forming it, are—the scapula, head of the humerus, and the clavicle, united together by strong ligaments, and covered by numerous muscles.

HUMERUS, Os hu'neri seu bra'chii seu adju'torium seu bra'chia'le, Bra'chium, Lacer'tus, Shoulderbone, (Prov.) Spant-bone, Spaw-bone, Shullbone, is the cylindrical, irregular bone of the arm; the upper extremity of which has a hemispherical head connected with the scapula; and two tuberosities or tubercles, a greater and a lesser, for the attachment of muscles, between which is the Bicipital groove or Fossa. At the inferior extremity may be remarked—the inner condyle, the outer condyle; the small head, which is articulated with the radius; the trochlea articulated with the ulna, &c. The humerus is developed by seven points of ossification:—one for the body; one for the head; one for the greater tuberosity; one for the trochlea; one for the epitrochlea; one for the epicondyle; and another for the lesser head.

HUMERUS SUMMS, Acromion.

HUMEUR AQUEUSE, Aqueous humour—h. Crystalline, Crystalline—h. Hyaloïde, Corpus vitreum—h. de Morgagni, Morgagni, humour of.

HUMEURS FROIDES, Scrofula.

HUMIDE RADICALE, Humidum radicale.

HUMIDUM NATIVUM, H. radicale—h. Na- tivum Articularum, Synovia—h. Primigenium, H. radiale.

HUMIDUM RADICALE, Humidum primigenium seu nativum seu seminale, Radical Moisture, (F.) Humide radicale. Names formerly given to the liquid which was conceived to give flexibility and proper consistence to the different organic textures.

HUMIDUM SEMINALE, H. radiale.

HUMILIS, Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMLOIK, Conium.

HUMOR, Humour—h. Albugineous, Aqueous humour—h. Articularis, Synovia—h. Ceruminous, Cerumen—h. Doridis, Water, sea—h. Genitalis, Sperm—h. Glacialis, Crystalline, Corpus vitreum—h. Hyalinus seu Hyaloides, Corpus vitreum—h. Lacteus, Milk—h. Lacrymalis, Tear—h. Melancholicus, see Mercurialis—h. Mercurialis, see Mercurialis—h. Morgagnianus, Morgagni, humor of—h. Ovatus, Aqueous humour—h. Ovoides, Aqueous humour—h. Pericardii, see Pericardium—h. Purulentus, Pus—h. Seminalis, Sperm—h. Venericus, Sperm—h. Vitreus, Corpus vitreum.

HUMORAL, Humoralis, from humere, 'to moisten.' Proceeding from, or connected with, the humours.

HUMORES INQUILINI, Recremental Secretions.

HUMORIQUE, see Bruit humorique.

HUMORISM, Humoral Pathology, Pathologia humeralis. A medical theory, founded exclusively on the parts which the humours were considered to play in the production of disease. Although traces of this system may be found in the most remote antiquity, the creation, or, at all events, the arrangement of it may be attributed to Galen, who enveloped it in metaphysical subtleties relating to the union between the elements and the four cardinal humours.

HUMORISTS. The Galenic and other physicians, who attributed all diseases to the depraved state of the humours, or to vicious juices collected in the body.

HUMOUR, Humor, Hygrasia, Hygrædon, Hygnum. Every fluid substance of an organized body;—as the blood, chyle, lymph, &c. The Humours, χυμοί, Chymi, Humores, differ considerably as to number and quality in the different species of organized beings; and even in the same species, according to the state of health or disease. The ancients reduced them to four; which they called cardinal humours:—the blood, phlegm, yellow bile, and atrabilis or black bile. A modern classification of the humours is given under Fluid.

HUMP. Perhaps from umbo, 'the boss of a buckler.' Hunch, Gibber, Gibbus, Gibba, Tuber, (F.) Bosse. A prominence, formed by a deviation of the bones of the trunk. Commonly, it is formed by the spine or sternum, and is seated at the posterior or anterior part of the trunk. It may, also, be produced by deviation of the ribs or pelvis. The spine may be curved in three principal directions. 1. Backwards, the most common case; this the ancients called κωφωσις, Cyphosis, Gibbositas. 2. Forwards, λοφωσις, Lordosis, Recurvatio; and 3. Laterally, σκολιωσις, Scoliosis, Oblinatio. Most curvatures occur at a very early age, and are caused by serofula, rickets, &c.; and, not infrequently, they are accompanied by caries of the vertebrae. See Vertebral disease. One who is affected with a hump, or is humpbacked, Humpty, Hackshouldered, Shrimp-shouldered, (Sc.) Halgiebackel, Tendgebackel, (Prov.) Croopbacked, is called, by the French, bossu.

HUMPBACED, see Hump.

HUMPTY, see Hump.

HUMULUS, Humulus lupulus.

HUMULUS LUPELUS, Lu'pulus, L. scandens seu communis seu salictaricus, Humulus, (from humus, 'the ground on which it creeps,') Convolvulus perennis, the Hop-plant. Nat. Ord. Urticaceae. (F.) Houblon, Vigne du nord. Its cones or strobiles, Humuli strobili (Ph. L.), Humulus (Ph. U. S.), has a fragrant odour; and a bitter, aromatic taste, depending on a peculiar principle, named Lu'pulin, extractive and essential oil, which may be extracted, equally, by water and spirit, from the dried strobiles. The hop is employed as a tonic and hypnotic, and enters into the composition of ale and beer.

The Hop pillow, Pulv'nar Humuli, has long been used for producing sleep.

HUNCH, Hump.

HUNGARICA FEBRIS, Fever, Hungary.

HUNGER, Anglo-Saxon, hunger, Fames, Limos, Peinē, Peina, Esuriēs, Jejunium, Jejunitas, Esuri'tio, Esuri'go, (F.) Faim. The necessity for taking food. Hunger is an internal sensation, which some authors have attributed to the friction between the sides of the stomach in its empty state; others, to the compression of the nerves, when the organ is contracted; others, to the action of the gastric juice, &c. It is dictated by the wants of the system:—farther we know not. See Appetite.

HUNGER-CURE, Limotherapia.

HUNGRY, Famelicus, Limens, Limides; (Prov.) Hanc, (vulg.) Peckish; same etymon. Affected with hunger.

HURA BRASILIENSIS, Assacou, Assacou, Usacou. A Brazilian tree, of the Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceae, which, in form of the extract of the bark, is esteemed a specific in leprosy. It is, also, given in elephantiasis, and as an anthelmintic.

HURDIES, Nates.

HURTLEBERRY, Vaccinium myrtillus.

HYA-HYA, Tabernaemontana utilis.

HYACINTH WILD, Scilla esculenta.

HYACINTHUS MUSCARI, Bulbus vomitorius.

HYENAN'CHE GLOBOSA. An arborescent shrub of South Africa, Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceae, the fruit of which, pounded, is used to destroy hyenas and other beasts of prey, and seems to contain strychnia.

HYALEUS, Hyaline.

HY'ALINE, Hyalinus, Hyaleus, Vitreus, Vitreous, (F.) Vitreux, vitré. Glassy. Resembling glass.

HYALINE SUBSTANCE, Cytoblastema.

HYALITIS, Inflammatio tunicae hyaloideæ, Hyaloiditis, Vitreocapsulitis, from hyaloid, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the hyaloid membrane of the eye.

HY'ALOID, Hyaloides, Hyaloides, from 'υαλος, 'glass,' and αϊδος, 'resemblance.' Vitriform; resembling glass.

HYALOID CANAL, see Hyaloid membrane.

HYALOID FOSSA, Fossa Hyaloide'a, is a cup-like excavation in the vitreous humour, in which the crystalline is imbedded.

HY'ALOID MEMBRANE, Tunica Hyaloide'a seu Vitreæ, Membra'na Arachnoide'a, is the extremely delicate membrane, which forms the exterior covering of the vitreous humour, and transmits within it prolongations, which divide it into cells. Fallopius discovered this membrane, and gave it the name Hyaloid. On a level with the entrance of the optic nerve into the eye, the hyaloid membrane has been described as forming, by reflection, a cylindrical canal, which pierces the vitreous humour from behind to before, as far as the posterior part of the crystalline. See Canal, hyaloid. At its anterior part is a depression—

Fossa patellaris seu lenticularis for the reception of the crystalline lens.

HYALOIDITIS, Hyalitis.

HYALONIXIS, see Cataract.

HYALONYXIS, see Cataract.

HYALOS, Vitrum.

HYANCHE, Cynanche tonsillarum.

HYBOMA, Gibbositas.

HYBRID, Hybrida, Hybrida, (F.) Hybride, from the Greek ὑβρις, ὑβριδος, 'mongrel or mongrel.' (F.) Métis, Mulet. A being born of two different species,—as the mule. The term is applied to plants as well as to animals. The result is termed Hybridity. Hybrid is often, also, used to designate words which are formed from two different languages—as uter-itis, for inflammation of the uterus, in place of metritis.

HYBRIDITY, see Hybrid.

HYDARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDAS, Hydor.

HYDATID, Hydatid, Bulla, Aqu'ula, Hydro'a, Hydrocystis, Hyrocystis, Tænia hydatig'ena, Echinococcus hum'anus, from ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, 'water.' This name was long given to every encysted tumour which contained an aqueous and transparent fluid. Many pathologists subsequently applied it to vesicles, softer than the tissue of membranes, more or less transparent, which are developed within organs, but without adhering to their tissues. It is by no means clear that these formations are really entozoa. They have been found in various parts of the body; sometimes in the uterus, occasioning signs nearly similar to those of pregnancy, but being sooner or later expelled. The expulsion is generally attended with more or less hemorrhage. See Acephalocystis.

Hydatid, Aqu'ula, Phlyctæ'nula, Verru'ca Palpebrarum, Mil'ium, also, meant a small, transparent tumour of the eyelids.—Galen, C. Hoffmann.

HYDATIDES CERVICIS UTERI, Nabothi glandule.

HYDATIDOCE'LE, Hydatocel'e, from ὑδατις, 'hydatid,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Oscheocele containing hydatids; the Oscheocel'e hydatido'sa, Hydatidoscheocel'e of Sauvages.

HYDATIDOÏDES, Hydatoid.

HYDATIDO'MA, from ὑδατις, 'hydatid.' A tumour caused by hydatids.

HYDATIDOSCHEOCELE, Hydatidoccele.

HYDATIFORM, Hydatiform'is. A hybrid word from hydatid and forma, 'form.' Resembling an hydatid.

HYDATINUS, Hydatoid.

HYDATIS FINNA, Cysticereus cellulose.

HYDATIS'MUS, from ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, 'water.' The noise caused by the fluctuation of pus contained in an abscess.—Aurelian, Foësius.

HYDATOCELE, Hydatidoccele, Hydrocele.

HYDATOCH'OLOS, from ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, 'water,' and χολη, 'bile.' Aqu'oso-bil'ions. An epithet given to evacuated matters when mixed with water and bile.—Hippocrates, Foësius.

HYDATODES, Aqueous.

HY'DATOID, Hydatoid'es, A'queous, Aqu'us, Hydat'ides, Hydat'imus, Hydatido'es, Hydatido'id'es, from ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, 'water,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Watery. Resembling water. This name has been given to the membrane of the aqueous humour; and, also, to the aqueous humour itself. Vinum hydatoid'es; wine and water.

HYDATONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDATOPO'SIA, from ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, 'water,' and ποισις, 'drinking.' Water-drinking;—hence

HYDATOPO'TES. A water-drinker.

HYDATOTHERAPEIA, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDERICUS, Hydropic.

HYDERODES, Hydropic.

HYDERONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDEROS, Anasarca, Hydrops.

HYDOR, hyd'atos, ὑδωρ, ὑδατος, and Hydas, hyd'atos, ὑδας, ὑδατος, 'water.' Hence:

HYDRACHNIS, see Varicella.

HYDRADEN, Conglobate gland.

HYDRADENITIS, Inflam'mo'tio glandula'rum lymphatica'rum, from Hydraden, 'a lymphatic gland,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland.

HYDRÆ'DUS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αιδοια, 'genital organs.' Œdema of the female organs.

HYDRÆMIA, Hydroæmia.

HYDRAGOGA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGIA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGICA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGUES, Hydrago'ga, Hydrago'gia, Hydrago'gica, Hydro'p'ica, Hydro't'ica, Aquid'n'ca, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αγω, 'I expel.' Medicines believed to be capable of expelling serum effused into any part of the body. These are generally cathartics or diuretics.

HYDRAGOGUM BOYLEI, Argenti nitras.

HYDRALLANTE, False water.

HYDRAL'EAS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αλλας, 'a sausage,'—see Allantois. A morbid increase in the quantity of the fluid of the allantois.

HYDRALMÆ, Waters, mineral (saline).

HYDRAM'NIOS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and 'amnios. An excessive quantity of the liquor amnii.

HYDRAN'GEA ARBORES'CENS, H. vulga'ris, Serenbark, Wild Hydran'gea, Bissum. Ord. Hydrangeæ. An indigenous plant, which flowers in July. The leaves are said to be tonic, siagogue, cathartic, diuretic, and antilithic. [?]

HYDRANGEITIS, Angioloecitis.

HYDRANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

HYDRANGIOGRAPHIA, Angieohydrography.

HYDRANGIOTOMIA, Angieohydrotomy.

HYDRARGYRANATRIP'SIS, Hydrargyren'trip'sis, from ὑδραργυρος, 'quicksilver,' and ανατριβ'is, 'rubbing in.' The rubbing in of a preparation of quicksilver:—Hydrargyrotrip'sis.

HYDRARGYRENTRIP'SIS, Hydrargyranatripsis.

HYDRARGYRI ACETAS, Hydrargyrus acetatus—h. Bichloridum, II. oxymurias—h. Bicyanidum, H. cyanuretum—h. Biniodidum, H. iodium rubrum—h. Binoxidum, II. oxidum rubrum—h. Bisulphuretum, II. sulphuretum rubrum—h. Borussia, H. cyanuretum—h. Bromidum, see Bromine—h. Calx alba, Hydrargyrum precipitatum—h. Chloridum, H. submurias—h. Chloridum corrosivum, H. Oxymurias—h. Chloridum mite, H. submurias.

HYDRARGYRI CYANURE'TUM, H. Cyan'idum seu Borus'ias seu Bicyan'idum, Hydrar'gyrum Cyanogenat'm seu Hydrocyan'icm seu Borus'sicm seu Zoot'icm, Prussias Hydrar'gyri, Cyanuret or Prussiate of Mercury, (F.) Cyanure de Mercure. (Ferri Ferro-cyanuret. §iv; Hydrarg. oxid. rubr. §iij, vel q. s.; Aquæ destillat. Oijj. Put the ferro-cyanuret and three ounces of the oxide of mercury, previously powdered and thoroughly mixed together, into a glass vessel, and pour on two pints of the distilled water. Boil the mixture, stirring constantly; and if, at the end of half an hour, the blue colour remains, add small portions of the oxide of mercury, continuing the ebullition until the mixture becomes of a yellowish colour; then filter through paper. Wash the residue in a pint of the distilled water, and filter. Mix the solution and evaporate till a pellicle appears, and set the liquor aside, that crystals may form. To purify the crystals, subject it to resolution, evaporation, and crystallization.—Ph. U. S.) This preparation has been strongly recommended as a powerful antisyphilitic, and is admitted into the Parisian codex. Twelve to twenty-four grains may be dissolved in a quart of distilled water, and three or four spoonfuls of the solution be taken daily in a glass of any appropriate liquid.

HYDRARGYRI DEUTO-IODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Deuto-ioduretum, see Iodine—h. Deuto-nitras, see H. nitras—h. Dipernitras, see H. nitras—h. Hyperoxides, Hydrargyri nitricooxydum.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM, H. Protoiodidum seu Proto-iodoretum seu Subiodidum, Hydrargyrum Iodatum flavum seu Iodidulum, Iodidum seu Ioduretum hydrargyrosum, Protoioduretum mercurii, Iodide or Protoiodide of Mercury, (F.) Protoiodure ou Protoiodure de Mercure, (Hydrarg. \mathfrak{J} , Iodini, \mathfrak{V} , Alcohol q. s. Rub the mercury and iodine together, adding sufficient alcohol to form a soft paste, and continue the trituration till the globules disappear. Dry the iodide in the dark, with a gentle heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle, the light excluded.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one grain, gradually raised to three or four.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM CHLORIDI, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM RUBRUM, H. Binioididum seu Deuto-iodidum seu Deuto-iodoretum seu Periodidum, Hydrargyrum iodatum rubrum seu Binioidatum seu Periodatum, Iodetum seu Iodidum Hydrargyri cum, Deuto-iodidum mercurii, Red Iodide, Binioidide, Deutoiodide and Periodide of Mercury, (F.) Deutoiodure ou Binioidure ou Perioidure de Mercure. (Hydrarg. corros. chlorid. \mathfrak{J} , Potassii Iodid. $\mathfrak{3x}$, Aqua destillat. Oij. Dissolve the chloride in a pint and a half, and the iodide of potassium in half a pint of distilled water, and mix the solutions. Collect the precipitate on a filter, and, having washed it with distilled water, dry it with a moderate heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one-sixteenth to one-fourth of a grain.

HYDRARGYRI MURIAS BASI OXYDI IMPERFECTI, H. oxymurias—h. Murias corrosivum, H. oxymurias—h. Murias dulcis sublimatus, H. submurias—h. Oxygenatus, H. Oxymurias—h. Murias spirituosus liquidus, Liqueur hydrargyri oxymuriatis—h. Murias suboxygenatus precipitacione paratus, Hydrargyrum precipitatum.

HYDRARGYRI NITRAS, Nitras Hydrargyri in crystallis concretus, Hydrargyrum nitricum, Mercurius nitrosus frigore paratus, Nitras hydrargyrosum, Azotus hydrargyrosum, Nitrate of Mercury, (F.) Azotate de mercure, Protozotate de mercure, Nitrate mercurienx. It is employed in syphilis; and, externally, in fungous, obstinate ulcers.

It is used in the formation of the Soluble Mercury of Hahnemann.

An acid nitrate of mercury, Hydrargyri deuto-nitras seu dipernitras seu supernitras, Mercurius nitrosus calide paratus, Nitras hydrargyri cum, Azotus hydrargyri cum liq'idus, Liqueur Hydrargyri supernitratia, Hydrargyri pernitratia Liqueur, (Ph. D.) Solution of supernitrate of mercury, Solution of supernitrate of deutoxide of mercury, (F.) Deutozotate acide liquide de mercure, Nitrate acide de mercure, made by dissolving four parts of mercury in eight of nitric acid, and evaporating the solution to nine parts, has been used as a caustic in malignant ulcerations and cancerous affections.

Ward's White Drops,—a once celebrated antiscorbutic nostrum,—were prepared by dissolving mercury in nitric acid, and adding a solution of carbonate of ammonia; or, frequently, they consisted of a solution of sublimate with carbonate of ammonia.

HYDRARGYRI NITRICO-OXYDUM, Hydrargyri oxydum rubrum (Ph. U. S.), Hydrargyrum nitratum rubrum, Mercurius corrosivus ruber seu precipitatus corrosivus seu precipitatum rubrum seu corallinum, Arcatum corallinum, Pulvis principis, Præcipitatus ruber, Oxydum hydrargyri completum seu hydrargyricum, Panacea mercurii rubra, Pulvis Joannis de Vigo, Oxydes hydrargyri rubrum, Hyperoxides hydrargyri, Oxydum hydrargyri nitricum seu hydrargyri rubrum per ac'idum nitricum, Nitric oxide of mercury, Red precipitate, (F.) Oxide nitrique de mercure, Précipité rouge ou per se, Mercure corallin, Nitrate de mercure rouge. (Hydrarg. \mathfrak{J} xxxvj; Acid. nitric. f \mathfrak{J} xvij; Aqua Oij. Dissolve the mercury with a gentle heat, in the acid and water previously mixed, and evaporate to dryness. Rub into powder, and heat in a very shallow vessel till red vapours cease to rise.—Ph. U. S.) It is a stimulant and escharotic, and used as such in foul ulcers, being sprinkled on the part in fine powder, or united with lard into an ointment.

HYDRARGYRI OXIDES RUBRUM, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—h. Oxydi murias ammoniacalis, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Oxydulum nigrum, H. Oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM CINEREUM, Ethiops per se, Mercurius niger Moscati seu præcipitatus niger, Oxydum hydrargyri nigrum seu hydrargyrosum seu hydrargyricum præcipitatum, Oxydulum hydrargyri nigrum, Pulvis mercurialis cinereus, Mercurius cinereus, Turpe'ntium nigrum, Gray or Black oxide of Mercury, (F.) Oxide de mercure cendé, Oxide gris ou noir de mercure, Protoxide de mercure. This oxide is made in various ways. It may be formed by boiling submuriate of mercury in lime water. The dose of this Pulvis Hydrargyri cinereus is from two to ten grains. There are four other preparations of it in estimation, viz:—Pleuch's solution, made by rubbing mercury with mucilage. 2. By rubbing equal parts of sugar and mercury together. 3. A compound of honey or liquorice and purified mercury. 4. The blue pill, and ointment. All these possess the usual properties of mercury—

The Hydrargyri Oxidum Nigrum of the Ph. U. S. is made as follows:—Hydrarg. Chlorid. mit., Potassæ. \mathfrak{aa} \mathfrak{J} iv, Aqua Oj. Dissolve the potassa in the water, allow the dregs to subside, and pour off the clear solution. To this add the chloride, and stir constantly till the black oxide is formed. Pour off the supernatant liquor, wash the black oxide with distilled water, and dry with a gentle heat. Dose, one or two grains.

The Mercurius solubilis of Hahnemann is formed from a black oxide of mercury. It is the Mercurius solubilis Hahnemannii, Oxydum hydrargyri nigri mediæ et ammoniæ ex protonitratæ hydrargyri præcipitatum, Azotus hydrargyrosum-ammoniæ, (F.) Azotate de mercure et d'ammoniaque, Oxyde gris ou noir de Mercure, Précipité noir, Turbith noir, which has been esteemed, in Germany and France, as an antisyphilitic. Dose gr. 1-5th to gr. i. It is used in the same cases as the Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM NIGRUM, H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nigrum mediante ammoniæ et protonitrate hydrargyri præcipitatum, see H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nitricum, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM RUBRUM, H. Binooxydum, Mercurius calcinatus, Hydrargyrum calcinatus, (F.) Oxide de Mercure rouge, Red oxide of mercury. (Made by precipitation from a solution of bichloride of mercury by solution of potassa.) See Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

It is stimulant and escharotic; and, in large doses, emetic. Owing to the violence of its operation, it is seldom given internally.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM RUBRUM PER ACIDUM NITRICUM, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxylum—h. Oxylum saccharatum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Oxylum sulphuricum, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYMURIAS, H. Chloridum Corrosivum (Ph. U. S.), seu Bichloridum seu Permuriatis, Hydrargyrum muriatum, Muriatis hydrargyri corrosivus seu oxygenatus seu hydrargyri busi oxydi imperfecti seu hydrargyri corrosivum, Sublimatus corrosivus, Sublimatum corrosivum, Mercurius corrosivus seu corrosivus sublimatus, Supermuriatis hydrargyri, (F.) Deutochlorure ou Bichloride de mercure, Muriate oxygéné de mercure, Sublimé corrosif; Bichloride ou Oxymuriate or Corrosive muriate of mercury, Corrosive sublimate. (Hydrarg. ℥ij, Acid. Sulphur. ℥iij, Sodii Chlorid. ℔ss. Boil the mercury with the sulphuric acid until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the chloride of sodium, in an earthenware mortar; then sublime with a gradually increasing heat.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as an antisyphilitic euphoric in venereal complaints, old cutaneous affections, &c. Gr. ij to ℥j of water is a good gargle in venereal sore-throats, or an injection in gonorrhœa. Externally, it is applied in cases of tetter, and to destroy fungus, or stimulate old ulcers. Dose, gr. 1-16 to gr. 1-8, in pill, once in twenty-four hours. White of egg is the best antidote to it, when taken in an overdose.

The YELLOW WASH, Aqua phagedænica, Lo'tio Hydrargyri flava, Phagedæic Wash, is made by adding corrosive sublimate to lime-water, usually in the proportion of fifteen grains to half a pint. It is a common application to syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI PERIODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Permuriatis, Hydrargyri oxymuriatis—h. Protoiodidum, H. Iodidum—h. Protoioduretum, H. Iodidum—h. Proto-tartras, H. tartras—h. Prusias, H. cyanuretum—h. Saccharum vermifugum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Subchloridum, H. Submuriatis—h. Subiodidum, H. Iodidum.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS, H. Chloridum seu Subchloridum seu Chloridum vitæ (Ph. U. S.), Calomelas, Calomelanos Torqueti, Calomeli, Hydrargyrum muriatum mite, Draco mitigatus, Submuriatis hydrargyri mitis, Submuriatis Hydrargyri sublimatum, Mercurius dulcis seu dulcis sublimatus;—when precipitated, M. dulcis precipitatus, M. sublimatus dulcis, M. Zoticus Hartmanni,—Panaceæ Mercurialis (when nine times sublimed), Muriatis hydrargyri dulcis sublimatus, Aquila, Manna Metallorum, Pauchymagogum mineralæ, P. Quercetanus, mild Chloride, protochloride, submuriate, subchloride, or mild Muriate of Mercury, Calomel, (F.) Mercure doux, Protochlorure de mercure. Mild chloride of mercury is thus directed to be prepared in the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Mercury, ℥iv; Sulphuric Acid, ℥iij; Chloride of Sodium, ℔ss; Distilled water, a sufficient quantity. Boil two pounds of the mercury with the sulphuric acid, until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the remainder of the mercury, in an earthenware mortar, until they are thoroughly mixed. Then add the chloride of sodium, and rub it with the other ingredients till all the globules disappear: afterwards sublime. Reduce the sublimed matter to a very fine powder, and wash it frequently with boiling distilled water, till the washings afford no precipitate upon the addition of liquid ammonia; then dry it. Properties. Antisyphilitic and sialagogue: in large doses, purgative. Dose: one or two grains given at night gradually excite pyralism. Gr. v to xx, purge. Children bear larger doses than adults.

The BLACK WASH, Lo'tio Hydrargyri nigra, is formed of calomel, ℥ij; Lime-water, ℥j. Used for syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS AMMONIATUM, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Subsulphas flavus, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum—h. Subsulphas peroxidati, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum—h. Sulphas, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum, Hydrargyri sulphas flavus.

HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM NIGRUM, H. sulphuretum cum sulphuræ, Hydrargyrum seu Mercurius cum sulphuræ, H. e sulphuræ, Æthiops mineralis, Puleis hypnoticus, Æthiops narcoticus, Calomelas, (F.) Sulfure de mercure noir, Black sulphuret of mercury, Sulphuret of mercury with sulphur, Æthiops mineral. (Hydrarg., Sulphur, āā ℔j. Rub together till the globules disappear, Ph. U. S.) Used chiefly in serofulous and cutaneous affections. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM RUBRUM, H. Bisulphuretum, Hydrargyrum sulphuratum rubrum, Minium purum seu Græcorum, Magnes epilepsicæ, Ammon, Purpurissum, Mercurius Cinnabarinus, Cinnabaris, Cinabaris, Cinnabarinum, Bisulphuret or Red Sulphuret of Mercury, Cinnabar, Cinoper, Vermilion, (F.) Sulfure de Mercure rouge, Cinabre, Cinnabre. (Hydrarg. ℥xl; Sulphur, ℥vii. Mix the mercury with the sulphur melted over the fire; and as soon as the mass begins to swell remove the vessel from the fire, and cover it with considerable force to prevent combustion. Rub the mass into powder and sublime. (Ph. U. S.)

It is an antisyphilitic, but is chiefly used in fumigation against venereal ulcers of the nose, mouth, and throat;—℥ss being thrown on a red-hot iron. This preparation is the basis of a nostrum, called Boerhaave's Red Pill.

HYDRARGYRI SUPERMURIAS, H. oxymuriatis—h. Supernitras, see Hydrargyri nitras.

HYDRARGYRI TARTRAS, H. Proto-tartras, Tartrate of Mercury. Antisyphilitic. Dose, one or two grains twice a day.

HYDRARGYRI ET ARSENICI IODIDUM, Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of.

HYDRARGYRI ET QUINIE PROTO-CHLORIDUM, Protochloride of Mercury and Quinia. A combination of mild chloride of mercury and quinia, administered in obstinate cutaneous diseases.

HYDRARGYRIA, Eczema mercuriale.

HYDRARGYRIASIS, Hydrargyrosis, from ὑδραργυρος, 'mercury.' A disease induced by the use of mercury; Morbis Mercurialis, (F.) Maladie Mercurielle. Poisoning by mercury. Eczema mercuriale. Also, the phenomena produced by mercury on the organism, Mercurialism, Mercurialisimus.

HYDRARGYRICUM, Mercurial.

HYDRARGYRIUM, Mercurial.

HYDRARGYROSIS, Eczema mercuriale, Hydrargyriasis.

HYDRARGYRO-STOMATITIS, see Salivation, mercurial, and Stomatitis, mercurial.

HYDRARGYROTRIPSIS, Hydrargyranatripsis.

HYDRARGYRUM, Hydrargyrum, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ἀργυρος, 'silver;' Mercurius, Argentum vivum seu mobile seu fusum seu fugitivum seu liquidum, Missadan, Fumus albus, Lorus, Arca arcæorum, Dædalus, Mater metallorum, Mercury, Quicksilver, formerly Argent-vive, (F.) Mercure, M. cru, Vif Argent. A fluid, brilliant metal; of a slightly bluish white colour; fluid above—39° of Fahr. and under 656°. S. g., when liquid, 13.568 (Cavendish); easily oxidized. Metallic quicksilver does not act on the body, even when taken into the stomach. When oxidized, and combined with acids, it acts powerfully. It has been exhibited in cases of constriction of the bowels and in intussusception, from a notion that it must certainly pass through the bowels by its gravity. The water, in which mercury has been boiled, has been recommended as a vomitive; but it probably enjoys no such property, as chemical tests do not exhibit the presence of the metal. When the crude metal is distilled in an iron retort, it forms the Hydrargyrum purificatum.

HYDRARGYRUM AMMONIATO-MURIATICUM, H. precipitatum—h. Ammoniatum, H. precipitatum—h. Biiodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—h. Biiodatum cum kalio iodato, Potassii hydrargyriodidum—h. Borussicum, Hydrargyri cyanuretum—h. Cyanogenatum, Hydrargyri cyanuretum.

HYDRARGYRUM CUM CRETÆ (Ph. U. S.), Hydrargyrum cum cretæ, Mercurius alkalisatus, Mercury with chalk, Æthiops alcalisatus, Gray powder, (F.) Mercur avec la craie, (Hydrarg., §ij; Cretæ præparat., §v. Rub them together till the globules disappear. Ph. U. S.) A protoxide of mercury, formed by trituration with carbonate of lime. It is somewhat uncertain; and consequently not much employed as a mercurial. It possesses the properties of the black oxide of mercury, and may be advantageously exhibited in cases of diarrhœa in children, dependent upon acidity and vitiated secretions. Dose, gr. v to ʒss, twice a day, in any viscid substance.

HYDRARGYRUM CUM MAGNÆSIA of the Dublin Pharmacopœia resembles it in properties.

HYDRARGYRUM HYDROCYANICUM, Hydrargyri cyanuretum—h. Iodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Iodatum cum chlorido Mercurii, Mercury, iodide of chloride of—h. Iodatum flavum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Iodatum rubrum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—h. Iodidatum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Muriaticum Mite, Hydrargyri submuriatis—h. Nitricum, Hydrargyri nitras—h. Periodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

HYDRARGYRUM PRÆCIPITATUM, H. ammoniatum (Ph. U. S.), H. ammoniâ-to-muriaticum, Hydrargyri ammonio-chloridum, Mercurius cosmeticus, Murias oxidi hydrargyri ammoniacalis, M. hydrargyri sub-oxigenatum præcipitatio-næparatus, Submuriatis ammoniaco-hydrargyri-cus, S. Hydrargyri ammoniatum seu Præcipitatum, Calc hydrargyri alba, Præcipitatum album, Ammoniâ-chloride of Mercury, White precipitate of Mercury, White precipitate, Calcium murias Poterii, (F.) Sommuriate de mercure précipité ou Précipité blanc, (Hydrarg. chlorid. corros., §vj; acq. destillat. cong., Liquor ammoniæ, 1 §viij). Dissolve the chloride in the water, with the aid of heat, and to the solution, when cold, add the solution of ammonia, frequently stirring. Wash the precipitate till it is tasteless, and dry it—Ph. U. S.)

A peroxide, combined with muriatic acid and ammonia, forming a triple salt. It is used in powder, to destroy vermin; and, united with lard, for the same purpose, as well as in scabies and some other cutaneous affections.

HYDRARGYRUM SACCHARATUM, Æthiops saccharatus, Mercurius saccharatus, Oxidum hydrargyri saccharatum, Saccharum hydrargyri vermifugum. A mild mercurial formula in several of the Pharmacopœias of continental Europe; formed by triturating one part of mercury with two of white sugar. It is used in the venereal affections of children.

HYDRARGYRUM ZOOTICUM, Hydrargyri cyanuretum.

HYDRARGYRUS, Hydrargyrum.

HYDRARGYRUS ACETATUS, Sperma mercurii, Terra solida mercurii, Mercurius uctus, Hydrargyri Acetatus, Acetatus seu Proto-acetatus Hydrargyri, Ac'etate of mercury. This was the basis of Keyser's pills, and was once much celebrated in the cure of the venereal disease. The dose is from three to five grains, but it is not much used.

The formula for Keyser's anti-venereal pills was as follows:—Hydrarg. Acet. ʒiv; Munna. ʒxxx; Amyl. ʒij; Muc. G. Trag. q. s. To be made into pills of gr. vj each. Dose, two pills.

HYDRARGYRUS CALCINATUS, Hydrargyri oxidum rubrum—h. cum Cretâ, Hydrargyrum cum cretâ—h. Muriatus, Hydrargyri oxymerurias—h. Nitratu ruber, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxidum.

HYDRARGYRUS PHOSPHORATUS, Phosphuret'ed mercury. This preparation has been recommended in cases of inveterate venereal ulcers, but is now scarcely used.

HYDRARGYRUS SULPHURETUS RUBER, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum—h. cum Sulphure, Hydrargyri sulphuretum nigrum—h. e Sulphure, Hydrargyri sulphuretum nigrum.

HYDRARGYRUS VITRIOLATUS, Turpethum minérale, Mercurius emeticus flavus seu causticus flavus seu luteus, Hydrargyri sulphus seu sulphos flavus (Ph. U. S.), Subsulphas Hydrargyri flavus, Oxydum hydrargyri sulphuricum, Subsulphas hydrargyri peroxidati, Calc. meccurii vitriolata, Turbith min'eral, (F.) Sous-sulfate de mercure ou turbith minéral, (Hydrarg. §iv; Acid. Sulph. §vj. Mix in a glass vessel, and boil in a sand-bath till a dry, white mass remains. Rub this into powder, and throw it into boiling water. Pour off the liquor, and wash the yellow precipitated powder repeatedly with hot water: then dry it—Ph. U. S.) Two grains of this mercurial act on the stomach violently. It is sometimes recommended as an emetic in amaurosis.

HYDRARTHROX, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus, H. synovia-lis, Hydrops articulo-rum, Hydrarthron, Hydrarthron, Melice'ria, Spina rento'sa of Rhazes and Avicenna, Arthrit'is Hydrarthros, Hydrarthro'sis, Hydrarthro'sis, Enmyx'ium articulo-ræ, Tumor albus, White swelling; from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and αρθρον, 'a joint' (F.) Tumeur blanche, T. lymphatique des articulations. The French surgeons apply the term Hydrarthrus to dropsy of the articulations. White swelling is an extremely formidable disease. It may attack any one of the joints; but is most commonly met with in the knee, the haunch, the foot, the elbow, and generally occurs in scrofulous children. It consists, at times, in tumefaction, and softening of the soft parts and ligaments, which surround the joints; at others, in swelling and caries of the articular extremities of bones; or both these states may exist at the same time. The treatment consists in the employment of counter-irritants; the use of iodine internally and externally, &c. Also, Synovia.

HYDRAS'PIS EXPAN'SA, Great freshwater Tortoise. On the sandy banks of rivers in Peru this animal buries its eggs, from which the Indians extract oil. Its flesh supplies well-flavoured food.—Tschudi.

HYDRASTIS, H. Canadensis.

HYDRAS'TIS CANADEN'SIS, Hydrastis, (perhaps from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and δραω, 'I am active,') Warneria Canadensis, Hydrophyllum verum, Canadian Hydrastis, Yellow Root, Orange Root, Yellow Puccoon, Ground Raspberry, Yellow Paint, Golden Seal, Indian Paint, Eye-balm, Nat. Ord. Ranunculaceæ. It is used in Kentucky as a 'mouth water,' and as an outward application in wounds and local inflammations.

HYDRAT'ION, Hydratio, from 'υδωρ, 'water.' Impregnation or moistening with water: as Hydrat'ed means impregnated or moistened with water.

HYDRELE'ON, Hydrole'um, from 'υδωρ,

'water,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of water and oil.

HYDRELYTRON, see Hydrocele.

HYDREMA, Œdema.

HYDRENCEPHALITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENCEPHALOCÉLĒ, Hydrocephalocelē, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon,' and κηλη, 'rupture, protrusion.' A monstrosity in which there is a fissure of the cranium, the integument of the head being present, and forming a hernial sac in which the brain lies outside the skull—the sac containing a large quantity of serous fluid. Also, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRENCEPHALON, see Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRENCEPH'ALOID, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling hydrecephalus. Hydreceph'aloïd aïsease, Spir'itious hydroceph'alus, Pseudo-enceph'all'itis. Disorders of the bowels, and exhaustion in children, are at times attended with hydrecephaloid symptoms.

HYDRENCEPHALUS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRETEROCELĒ, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Intestinal hernia, the sac of which encloses fluid.

HYDRETEROMPHALOCÉLĒ, Hydrenteromphalocelē, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'intestine,' ομφαλος, 'umbilicus,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Umbilical hernia with intestine and water in the sac.

HYDRETEROMPHALUS, Hydrenteromphalocelē.

HYDREPIGASTRIUM, see Ascites.

HYDREPIPLOCELĒ, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Omental hernia, with water in the sac.

HYDREPIPLOMPHALUS, Hydrepiplomphalocelē, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, with omentum and water in the sac.

HYDRETRUM, Ascites.

HYDRIASIS, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDRIATER, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIATRIA, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDRIATRICA ARS, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDRIATRICUS, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIATRUS, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIODAS KALICUS, see Potassæ hydriodas.

HYDRIODIC ACID, see Acid, hydriodic.

HYDRO'A, Hidro'a, Aqu'ula, Boa, Planta noctis, from ὕδωρ, 'water.' An affection, which consists in an accumulation of water or serous fluid under the epidermis. Some have used hydro a synonymously with sudamina; others with penphigus. In the first case, it has generally, however, been written hidro'a, from ιδρως, 'sweat,' and in the latter hydro'a. See Hydatid.

HYDROÆ'MIA, Hydræ'mia, Hæmyd'ria; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Anæmia. The state of the blood in which the watery constituents are in excess.

HYDROAËROPLEURIE, Hydropneumothorax.

HYDROÄ'RION, Hydroöph'oron, Hydroöphor'ia, Hydroö'rium, Hydroöva'rium, Hy'drops ovar'i, Ascit'es ovar'i, A. sacca'tus, (F.) Hydro-pisie de l'ovaire, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and ωαριον, 'ovarium.' Dropsy of the ovary.

HYDROATA, Sudamina.

HYDROBLEPIARON, Hy'drops Pal'pebræ,

Blepharoced'ma aquo'sum, Œde'ma palpebra'rum. An œdema or watery swelling of the eyelids; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.'

HYDROCACHEXIA, Leucoplegmatia.

HYDROCARDIA, Hydropericardium, see Pericardium.

HYDROCATARRHOPHE'SIS, Hydrocatarrhoph'ia, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and καταρροφειν, 'to sip up.' Absorption of water from without.

HYDROCE'LĒ, Hydrops Scroti seu testiculo'rum, Hydroscroc'elē, Hydatoce'le, Hydrosc'hemis, Hydro'chis, Hydrosc'hœmic, (Alibert,) from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' A term generally applied to a collection of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum or in some of the coverings, either of the testicle or spermatic cord. To the first of these varieties the names — External Hydrocele, H. œdemato'ides, (F.) H. par infiltration have been given; and to the second, those of Hydroce'lē inter'na, H. tunica vaginal'is testis, Hydroc'lytron, (F.) H. par épanchement. When the collection occurs in the envelope of the testicle, it is called H. of the tunica vaginalis; and the epithet congenitalis is added, when the interior of the membrane, in which it is situate, still communicates freely with the cavity of the abdomen. When it exists in the spermatic chord, it is called encysted, or diffused Hydrocele of the spermatic cord, as the case may be. The tumour of the distended serotum is oblong; greater below than above; indolent and semi-transparent. When it becomes inconveniently large, the fluid may be evacuated by puncturing with a trocar, but, as it collects again, this operation can only be considered palliative. The radical cure consists, usually, in injecting, through the canula of the trocar, which has been left in, after puncturing, some irritating liquid, as wine. This is kept in the tunica vaginalis for a few minutes, and then withdrawn. The coat inflames; adhesion takes place, and the cavity is obliterated.

HYDROCELE OF THE NECK. A tumour, filled with a watery fluid, occupying some portion of the neck.

HYDROCELE PERITONÆI, Ascites — h. Spinalis, Hydrorachis.

HYDROCENO'SIS, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and κένωσις, 'evacuation.' The evacuation of water morbidly accumulated in the body.

HYDROCEPHALE, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCÉPHALE AIGUË, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCEPHALOCÉLĒ, Hydrencephalocelē.

HYDROCÉPHALOËCTASIE, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDROCEPH'ALUS, Hydroceph'alum, Hydrocera'nia, Hydrocera'nium, Hydroceph'allium, Hydroceph'alē, Hydrops Cap'itis seu Cer'ebri, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' Water in the head, Dropsy of the head, Dropsy of the brain. A collection of water within the head. It may be internal or external.

HYDROCEPHALUS ACUTUS, H. internus — h. Acutus senum, Apoplexy, serous — h. Adnatus, see H. chronicus — h. Congenitus, see H. chronicus — h. Externus, H. chronicus — h. Meningeus, H. internus.

HYDROCEPHALUS CHRON'ICUS, Hydrecephalocelē, Hydrops Cap'itis seu arachnoïdeæ. Hydrocephalus externus, (F.) Hydrocéphale, Hydrocéphaloëctasie of some, may exist at birth. Hydreceph'alon, Hydrocephalus congen'itus seu adna'tus commonly commences at an early period of existence, and the accumulation of fluid gradually produces distension of the brain, and of the skull, with separation of the sutures. It commonly proves fatal before puberty.

HYDROCEPHALUS EXTERNUS, Œdema capitis, Cephalœdema of some, is a mere infiltration into the subcutaneous cellular tissue of the cranium.

HYDROCEPHALUS INTERNUS, Hydrocephalus acutus seu meningitis, Hydrops cerebri, Encephalalgia hydroptica, Encephalitis exsudatoria, Encephalitis seu Meningitis Infantum seu hydrocephalus, Morbus cerebri, Whyttii, Enterocephalopygia Infantum, Hydrophlogosis Ventriculorum cerebri, Encephalochylisis, Phrenicula hydrocephalica, Hydrecephalus, Hydrecephalitis, Hydrecephalimus, Hydrocephalitis, Hydromeningitis, Febris seu Apoplexia hydrocephalica, Carnus hydrocephalus, Water Brain Fever, Whytt's Disease, (F.) Hydrocephale aiguë, Fièvre cérébrale des Enfants, is generally seated, according to modern observers, in the meninges and surface of the encephalon, and is a tubercular meningitis, Meningitis tuberculosa, Encephalostrumosis, Granular or Scrophulous meningitis, (F.) Méningite tuberculeuse ou granuleuse, Pœdencephalie.—Piorry. It is observed particularly in childhood. Its march is extremely acute and often very rapid; admitting, generally, however, of division into three stages. The symptoms of the first stage are those of general febrile irritation, with head-ache, intolerance of light and sound, delirium, &c. Those of the second, which generally denote that the inflammation has ended in effusion, are, great slowness of pulse, crying out as if in distress, moaning, dilated pupil, squinting, &c.; and lastly, in the third stage—profound stupor, paralysis, convulsions, involuntary evacuations, quick pulse, and frequently death. The disease is of uncertain duration; sometimes, destroying in two or three days; at others, extending to two or three weeks. The prognosis is unfavourable. The treatment must be active during the stage of excitement,—precisely that which is necessary in phrenitis. In the second stage, the indication is;—to promote the absorption of the effused fluid. This must be done by counter-irritants, and mercury, chiefly. On dissection, water is generally found in the ventricles, or at the base of the brain; or there are evidences of previous vascular excitement, as effusions of coagulable lymph, &c.

HYDROCEPHALUS SPURIUS, Hydrecephaloid, (disease.)

HYDROCHAMAIMELUM, Infusum anthemidis.

HYDROCHEZIA, Diarrhœa serosa.

HYDROCHLORATE D'OR, see Gold.

HYDROCHLORINAS NATRICUS, Soda, muriate of.

HYDROCHOLECYSTIS, Turgescencia vesiculae fellee.

HYDROCHYSES, (G.) Hydrochysen, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and χυσίς, 'effusion.' A family of diseases, according to the classification of Fuchs, in which there is a sudden effusion of serous fluid, as in serous apoplexy, hydrocephalus, &c.

HYDROCIROCELE, Hydrocirrocele, Hygrocele, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' κίρσος, 'varix,' and κύστης, 'tumour.' A tumour, formed by the varicose distension of the veins of the spermatic cord, and by the accumulation of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the serotum.

HYDROCELEA, Ascites.

HYDROCONIUM, Bath, shower.

HYDROCYTILE ASIATICA, Collagan, Penicillium, Asiat'ic Penicillium, Order, Umbelliferae. A plant of India, Cape of Good Hope, and Jamaica, where it is supposed to be possessed of astringent and diuretic properties. The leaves are applied to bruised parts to prevent inflammation. The Hydrocotyle has recently been extolled, in India, as a remedy for lepra.

HYDROCYTILE CENTELLA. A South African plant, the roots and stalks of which are astringent; and used in diarrhœa and dysentery.

HYDROCYTILE UMBELLATUM, Acaricoba.

HYDROCRANIA, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRANIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRITHÉ, Decoctum Hordei.

HYDROCYANIC ACID, Ac'idium Hydrocyanicum; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and κυανός, 'blue.' Prussic Acid, Ac'idium Prussicum seu Borussicum seu Zöbit'icum seu Zöötin'icum, Cyanohydric or Cyanhydric Acid, (F.) Acide Hydrocyanique ou Prussique. This acid exists in a great variety of native combinations in the vegetable kingdom, and imparts to them certain properties, which have been long known and esteemed; as in the bitter almond, cherry laurel, leaves of the peach tree, kernels of fruit, pips of apples, &c. When concentrated, it is liquid, colourless, of a strong smell and taste, at first cool, afterwards burning. Its s. g. at 7° Centigrade, is 0.7058. It is very volatile, and enters into ebullition at 80° Fahr. It speedily undergoes decomposition, sometimes in less than an hour, and consists of a peculiar gaseous and highly inflammable compound of carbon and azote, to which the name Cyanogen has been assigned; and of hydrogen, which acts as the acidifying principle: hence its name Hydrocyanic acid. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1851.) two formulæ for the preparation of the Ac'idium hydrocyanicum dilutum—Ac'idium hydrocyanicum, Ph. U. S. of 1842—arc given; the one from the Ferro-cyanuret of Potassium; the other from the Cyanuret of Silver. According to Magendie, the acid, prepared after Scheele's method—the one in common use—is of irregular medicinal power: he, therefore, recommends Gay Lussac's acid, diluted with 6 times its volume, or 8.5 times its weight of distilled water, for medicinal purposes, and this he calls Medic'inal Prussic Acid. Dr. Ure has proposed, that the specific gravity should indicate that which is proper for medicinal exhibition; and, after comparative experiments of the gravity of the acids, obtained by different processes, he states, that the acid, usually prescribed, is of s. g. 0.996 or 0.997. Great caution is, however, necessary. One drop of pure prussic acid may instantly destroy, and the animal show hardly any traces of irritability, a few moments after death. It has been advised in laryngeal phthisis, in pulmonary phthisis, pulmonary inflammation and irritation, dyspepsia, uterine affections, hectic cough, cancer, chronic rheumatism, and mania, and as a local remedy in impetiginous affections; but, although possessed of powerful sedative properties, it is so unmanageable and the preparation so uncertain, that it is not much used. The Dose of Scheele's Acid, or of the Medic'inal Prussic Acid, is from a quarter of a drop to two drops.

HYDROCYSTIS, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and κύστις, 'a bladder.' A cyst containing a watery or serous fluid. An hydatid. Also, saccated ascites.

HYDRODERMA, Anasarca.

HYDRODES, Aqueous.

HYDRODIARRHŒA, Diarrhœa, serous.

HYDROEDEMA, Œdema.

HYDRO-ENCÉPHALORRHÉE, Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPLOCELE, Hydro-epiplo-enterocele; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εντέρον, 'intestine,' and επιπλουν, 'omentum.' Enteroepiplocele, the sac of which contains a serous fluid.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPILOM'PHALUM, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' επιπλον, 'the caul,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains intestine, epiploon, and serum.

HYDRO-ENTEROM'PHALUM, Hydrenterom'phalum, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Hernia umbilicalis, the sac of which contains intestine and serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLOCE'LE, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' επιπλον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, formed by omentum, the sac of which contains serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLO ENTEROCELE, Hydro-entero-epiplocele.

HYDRO-EPILOMPH'ALUM, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' επιπλον, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains epiploon and serum.

HYDROG'ALA, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and γαλα, 'milk.' A mixture of water and milk.

HYDROGASTER, Ascites.

HYDROGEN, Hydrogen'ium, Inflam't mable air, Phlogis'ton, Princip'ium hydrogen'e'icum seu hydrog'e'icum, Mephi'tis inflammabilis, (F.) Hydrogène, Air inflammable, Gaz des ballons, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and γεννω, 'I produce.' This gas, when breathed, proves fatal from containing no oxygen. When diluted with two-thirds of atmospheric air, it occasions some diminution of muscular power and sensibility, and a reduction of the force of the circulation. It has been respired in catarrh, hæmoptysis, and phthisis.

HYDROGEN, CARBURET'ED, Inflam't mable air, Fire damp, of miners. (F.) Hydrogène carboné ou proto-carboné, Grisou—obtained by passing the vapour of water over charcoal, at the temperature of ignition, in an iron tube—has been found possessed of similar properties, when diluted, and has been used in like cases.

HYDROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF. Water.

HYDROGEN, SULPHURET'ED, Hydrosulph'uric, Sulphhy'dric, Sulphohydric or Hydrothion'ic acid, Hydrothion, Gaz hepat'icum seu hydrogène sulphuratum, Mephi'tis hepat'ica, (F.) Hydrogène sulfuré, Acide hydrosulphurique, Air purant ou hépatique, may be disengaged from any of the sulphurets by the addition of a strong acid. It is a violent poison, but has been recommended to be inhaled, diluted, to allay the increased irritability which occasionally exists after diseases of the lungs. See Hydro-sulphuretted Water.

HYDROGENATION, see Hydrogèneses.

HYDROGÈNE, Hydrogen—h. Carboné ou proto-carboné, Hydrogen, carburetted—h. Sulfuré, Hydrogen, sulphuretted.

HYDROGÈNESÈS. Baumes gives this name to diseases which he fancifully considers to depend upon disturbed hydrogenation. In it he includes intermittent and remittent fevers.

HYDROGENO-SULPHURETUM AMMONIACÆ LIQUIDUM, Ammoniacæ sulphuretum.

HYDROGLOSSA, Ranula.

HYDROGRAPHY, see Hydrology.

HYDROHÉMIE, Anæmia, Hydroæmia.

HYDROHYMENITIS, Orrhohymenitis, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' υμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a serous membrane.

HYDROHYSTERA, Hydrometra.

HYDROLÆUM, Hydrelæon.

HYDROLAPATHIUM, Rûnex hydrolapathum.

HYDROLATA, Aquæ destillatæ.

HYDROLATS, Aquæ destillatæ, Water, distilled.

HYDROLÉ, Decoction, Fomentation, Lotion, Mucilage, Potion, Tisane. See Hydrolica.

HYDROLICA, (F.) Hydroliques, from 'υδωρ, 'water.' Watery solutions of the active principles of medicinal agents. Those prepared by solution or admixture are termed, by some of the modern French pharmaciens, Hydrolés; those by distillation, Hydrolots.

HYDROLIQUES, Hydrolica.

HYDROLITE, Decoction, Mucilage, Potion.

HYDROLOG'Y, Hydrolog'ia, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A treatise on water. By the term Medical Hydrology is meant that part of physics, whose object is the study of water, considered as it respects medicine; and, consequently, embracing that of mineral waters. Medical Hydrography comprises the study of the influence exerted by the sea or by navigation on the health of man.

HYDROLOTIF, Fomentation, Lotion.

HYDROMA'NIA, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and μανια, 'mania.' A name given by Strambi to pellagra, in which the patient has a strong propensity to drown himself.

HYDRO-MEDIASTI'NUM, Hydrops mediastini. Effusion of serous fluid into the mediastinum.

HYDROMEL, Hydrom'eli, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and μελι, 'honey.' Aqua mellea, Melitis, Melism, Melic'ratum, Mellie'ratum, Braggart, Medo. A liquid medicine, prepared with an ounce and a half of honey and a pint of tepid water. It is used as a demulcent and laxative, and is generally known under the names Simple hydromel, Vinosum hydromel, Mead, Hydrom'eli vinosum, Cenomel, is a drink made by fermenting honey and water, and is much used in some countries. As a common drink, mead is often made of honey and some alcoholic liquor well beaten together. See Mahogany.

HYDROMELLÉ. A preparation formed like the syrups, using hydromel in place of sugar.—Béral.

HYDROMENINGITIS, Aquo-membranitis, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROMETER, Areometer.

HYDROMETRA, Hydrom'etria, Hydrohys'tera, Hydrometrectasia, Hysterites, Hysterad'ema, Hydrops uteri, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and μετρα, 'the womb.' Dropsy of the womb. A disease characterized by circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrium,—with obscure fluctuation, progressively enlarging, without ischury or pregnancy. If it ever occur, it must be a rare disease.

HYDROMETRECTASIA, Hydrometra.

HYDROM'PHALUM, Hydrops umbilic'ica, Exom'phalus aquosus, Per'nia umbilic'ei aquosa, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' A tumour, formed by the accumulation of serum in the sac of umbilical hernia; or simply by distension of the navel in cases of ascites.

HYDROMYRIN'GA, Hydromyrix, Hydrops tym'pani, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and μυριγγα or μυριγγα, 'the membrana tympani.' Dropsy of the drum of the ear; giving rise to difficulty of hearing.—Dyseca'a hydro'ica.

HYDROMYRIX, Hydromyriinga.

HYDRONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDRONEPHROSIS, (F.) Hydronephrose, Hydroneale distension, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and νεφρος, 'kidney.' An accumulation in the kidney, owing to the obstruction of the tubes of the papillæ.—Rayer.

HYDRONOSUS, Hydrops.

HYDRONUSUS, Hydrops.

HYDROOARION, Hydroarion.

HYDROOPHORON, Hydroarion.

HYDROOVARIUM, Hydroarion.

HYDROPATHIC, Hydropath'icus, Hydr'iat'icus, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and παθος, 'disease.'

Relating to hydrophathy or the water-cure,—as a hydrophathic physician. Hydriäter, Hydriätens.

HYDROPATHY, Hydrosulotherapia.

HYDROPEDESIS, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and πέδω, 'I break out.' Ephrosis. Excessive sweating.

HYDROPEGE, Water, spring.

HYDROPELTIS PURPUREA, Brasenia hydropeletis.

HYDROPERICARDIA, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDITIS, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDIUM, Hydropericardium, Hydropericarditis, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and pericardium; Hydrops Pericardii, Hydrocardia, Dropsy of the pericardium, (F.) Hydropisie du Péricarde. This is not a common disease. Palpitations; irregular or intermitting pulse; excessive dyspnoea, amounting often to orthopnoea, and dullness over a large space on percussion, will cause the pericardium to be suspected. The treatment is that of dropsies in general. It is, usually, however, of the active kind.

HYDROPERIONE, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' περι, 'around,' and ων, 'an egg, or ovum.' The sero-albuminous substance, secreted by the lining of the uterus prior to the arrival of the impregnated ovum in that cavity.—Breschet.

HYDROPERITONEUM, Aseites.

HYDROPERITONIE, Aseites.

HYDROPHALLUS, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' Œdema of the male organ.

HYDROPHLEGMASIA TEXTÛS CELLULARIS, Phlegmasia alba.

HYDROPHLOGOSIS VENTRICULORUM CEREBRI, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROPHOBIA, Paraphobia, Paraphobia, Phobodipson, Phendydron, Phengophobia, Cynolyssa, Cynolyssum, Morbus hydrophobicus seu hydrophobus, Lycan'chê, Lycan'chis, Aërophobia, Phœnit'is latrans, Lytta, Lyssa, L. canina, Panto-phobia, Rabies canina, Erythrasmus hydrophobia, Clonus hydrophobia, Hygrophobia, Apsa metus, Canine madness, Water fright, (F.) Rage; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and φοβος, 'dread.'

The term Rabies is more appropriate for the aggregate of symptoms resulting from the bite of rabid animals. Hydrophobia literally signifies a 'dread of water;' and, consequently, ought to be applied to one of the symptoms of rabies, rather than to the disease itself. It is a symptom which appears occasionally in other nervous affections. Rabies is susceptible of spontaneous development in the dog, wolf, cat, and fox, which can thence transmit it to other quadrupeds or to man; but it has not been proved that it can supervene,—without their having been previously bitten,—in animals of other species; or that the latter can, when bitten, communicate it to others. Many facts induce the belief, that the saliva and bronchial mucus are the sole vehicles of the rabid virus; the effects of which upon the economy sometimes appear almost immediately after the bite, and are, at others, apparently dormant for a considerable period. The chief symptoms are— a sense of dryness and constriction of the throat; excessive thirst; difficult deglutition; aversion for, and horror at, the sight of liquids as well as of brilliant objects; red, animated countenance; great nervous irritability; frothy saliva; grinding of the teeth, &c. Death most commonly happens before the fifth day. Hydrophobia has hitherto resisted all therapeutical means. Those which allay irritation are obviously most called for. In the way of prevention, the bitten part should always be excised, where practicable; and eun-

In some cases, symptoms like those which follow the bite of a rabid animal are said to have come on spontaneously. This affection has been termed nervous or spontaneous hydrophobia.

HYDROPHOLUS, Lyssoductus.

HYDROPHTHALMIA, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'the eye.' Hydrophthal'mus, Dropsy of the eye, Hydrops Oculi, Buphthalmus, Zoophthalmus, Œculus Bovinus seu Bubulus seu Elophan'tium, Ophthalmop'tosis, Parop'tosis Staphylo'ma simplex, (F.) Hydrophthalmie, Hydropsie de l'œil. This affection is caused, at times, by an increase in the quantity of the aqueous, at others, of the vitreous, humour. In the former case, the iris is concave anteriorly, and pushed backwards;—in the latter, it is convex, and pushed forwards. Most commonly, the disease seems to depend on both humours at the same time. Hydrophthalmia sometimes affects both eyes; at others, only one. Children are more exposed to it than adults or old persons. The treatment must vary according to the cause; its longer or shorter duration; greater or less extent, &c. Hence, according to circumstances, hydragogue medicines, purgatives, general and local blood-letting, blisters, setons, moxa, cupping-glasses, fomentations, collyria, and fumigations of different kinds, have been employed. When all means fail, and the disease continues to make progress, the fluid may be evacuated, by a puncture made with a cataract needle at the lower part of the transparent cornea.

HYDROPHTHALMIA, CONICAL, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYDROPHTHALMION, Sane etymon. An œdematous swelling of the conjunctiva in hydroptic persons.

HYDROPHTHALMUS, Hydrophthalmia—h. Cruentus, Hæmophthalmia.

HYDROPHYLLUM VERUM, Hydrastis Canadensis.

HYDROPHYSOCELĒ, Hydropneumatocele, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' φύσα, 'wind,' and κύλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, which contains a serous fluid and gas.

HYDROPHYSOMETRA, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' φύσαω, 'I inflate,' and μητρα, 'the womb.' A morbid condition of the womb, in which both fluid and air are contained in it.

HYDROPIC, Hydropicus, Hy'phyllus, Hydrodesicus, Hydrodes, Dropsical, (Sc.) Edropsit, (F.) Hydropique. One labouring under dropsy. Dropsical. Relating to dropsy. Also, an anti-hydroptic, and a hydragogue.

HYDROPSISIA, Hydrops.

HYDROPSISIE, Hydrops—h. du Bas-ventre, Ascites—h. Cordiaque, Dropsy, cardiac—h. Cérébrale anévriq., Apoplexy, serous—h. Hépatique, Dropsy, hepatic—h. de l'Œil, Hydrophthalmia—h. de l'Oraire, Hydroaion—h. du Péricarde, Hydropericardium—h. du Péritoine, Ascites—h. des Plèvres, Hydrothorax—h. de Poitrine, Hydrothorax—h. Rénale, Dropsy, renal—h. de la Vésicule du Fiel, Turgescentia vesicæ felleæ.

HYDROPSIS, Hydrops—h. Vern, Anasarca.

HYDROPSMUS, Hydrops.

HYDROPLEURIE, Hydrothorax.

HYDROPNEMATOCĒLE, Hydropsyocle.

HYDROPNEMON, Hydropneumonia.

HYDROPNEMO'NIA, Hydropneumon, Œle'ma pulmonum chronicum, Hydrops pulmonum seu pulmonum cellulosus, Anasar'ca pulmonum, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and πνεύμων, 'the lung.' Dropsical infiltration of the lungs. See Œdema of the lungs.

HYDROPNEMOSAR'CA, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' πνεύμα, 'wind, air,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' An ab-cess, containing water, air, and matters similar to flesh.—M. A. Severinus.

HYDROPNEUMOTHORAX, Hydroæropleuric, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' πνευμων, 'the lung,' and θωραξ, 'the chest.' Pneumothorax with effusion of blood into the chest. See Pneumothorax.

HYDROPOΪDES, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποιω, 'I make.' An epithet for watery excretions, such as sometimes take place in hydrocyses.

HYDROPOΪTA, Hydropotes, Pota'tor Aquæ, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποτης, 'a drinker.' A water drinker. One who drinks only water, or drinks it in an extraordinary quantity.

HYDROPS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' Phlegma'tia, Hy'deros, Affectus hydero'des, Hydrop'isis, Hydrop'is'ia, Hydrop'ismus, Hydrop'sia, Hydro'r'ho'ea, Hydro'r'hoë, Hydro'r'hoëis, Polyhy'dria, Hydro'n'osus, Hydro'n'us, Dropsy, Hy'dropsy, (Old Eng.) Dropyk, (F.) Hydropisie. A preternatural collection of a serous fluid in any cavity of the body, or in the areolar texture. When the areolar texture of the whole body is more or less filled with fluid, the disease is called Anasar'ca or Leucophlegma'tia;—and when this variety is local or partial, it is called Edē'ma. The chief dropsies, designated from their seat, are:—Anasar'ca, Hydrocephalus, Hydro'rachitis, Hydrothorax, Hydropericardium, Ascites, Hydrometra, Hydrocele, &c.

Eucy'el Dropsy, Hydrops sacca'tus, incarcera'tus seu cysticus, is that variety in which the fluid is enclosed in a sac or cyst; so that it has no communication with the surrounding parts. Dropsy of the Ovarium, Hydrops seu Ascites Ovari'i, Ascites sacca'tus, is an instance of this variety.

Dropsy may be active or passive. The former consists in an increased action of the exhalants, so that those vessels pour out much more fluid than is absorbed: the latter arises from a state of atony of the absorbent vessels, which allows of an accumulation of fluid. It may also be mechanical, or produced by obstructions to the circulation, as in cases of diseased liver. Active dropsy, occurring accidentally in a sound individual, generally ends favourably. That which supervenes on other diseases, or is symptomatic of some internal affection, is rarely curable.

The treatment consists in the use of all those remedies which act on the various secretions: so that the demand being increased, the supply will have to be increased accordingly; and in this manner some of the collected fluid may be taken up by the absorbents. To this end bleeding, if the dropsy be very active: purgatives, diuretics, sudorifics, sialogogues, &c., are the remedies chiefly depended upon.

HYDROPSIA, Hydrops.

HYDROPSY, Hydrops.

HYDROPSYRETOS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πυρετος, 'fever;' Febris sudato'ria. Fever with sweating. Hydropsyretos would be more proper; from ὑδωρ, 'sweat.' See Sudor Anglicus.

HYDRORA'CHIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ραχis, 'the spine.' Hydro'r'rachis, Hydro'r'achit'is, Hydro'r'ra'chia, Myeloch'ysis, Hydrops Carita'tis Columnæ Vertebralis seu Spinæ vertebralis seu medullæ spinæ seu spinæ, Hydroce'te spinæ seu Hydro'rachit'is spinæ. An effusion of serum, often owing to inflammation of the spinal membranes—myel'itis ex'udati'va—and forming a soft, frequently transparent, tumour, constituted of the membranes of the spinal marrow, which are distended and projecting backwards from the vertebral canal, the posterior paries of which, when the affection is congenital, is wanting to a certain extent—Spina bif'ida, Ate'l'orachid'ia, Hydro'rachis dehis'cens seu congen'ita, Schist'or'ra'chis, Sp'inalis. The disease is often accompanied with paralysis of the lower extremities. It is congenital, and situate in the lumbar or sacral regions. It is almost always fatal:—the tumour rupturing, and death occurring instantaneously. On dissection, a simple separation or complete absence of the spinous processes of the vertebrae is perceived, with, at times, destruction or absence of spinal marrow. The treatment is the same as in hydrocephalus chronicus; and, as in it, advantage seems occasionally to have been derived by puncturing with a fine needle.

HYDRORRHAGIE, Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRORRHŌE, Hydrops.

HYDRORRHŌEA, Hydrops. Also, a copious watery discharge,—as from the vagina.

HYDRORRHŌUS, Hydrops.

HYDRORTHOPNŌEA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing, except in the erect posture.' Orthopnœa, owing to a collection of water in the chest.

HYDROSACCHARUM, Aqua saccharata, (F.) Eau sucrée. Sugared water.

HYDROSALP'INX, Hydrops tuba'rum Fallo'pii; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαλπιγξ, 'a tube.' Dropsy of the Fallopiian tube.

HYDROSAR'CA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A tumour containing a fluid, as well as portions of flesh. Also, Anasarca.

HYDROSARCOCELE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Sarcohydrocele. A tumour, formed by a sarcocele, complicated with dropsy of the tunica vaginalis.

HYGROM'ETRY, Hygromet'ria, Hygroscop'ia; from ὑγρός, 'humid,' and μετρον, 'measure.' The part of physics which concerns the measurement of the dryness or humidity of the atmosphere. It is probable, that diseases are as frequently caused by the varying moisture of the atmosphere or by changes in its weight or temperature. The hygrometer ought, consequently, to form part of every apparatus for medical meteorological observations.

HYGRON, Liqueur.

HYGROPHOBIA, Hydrophobia.

HYGROPTHAL'MIA, from ὑγρός, 'humid,' and οφθαλμία, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia with much lachrymation.

HYGROPTHALMICI, Hygroblepharici.

HYGROPISSOS, see Pinus sylvestris.

HYGROSCOPIA, Hygrometry.

HYGROTES, Humour, Liqueur.

HYGRUM, Humour.

HY'LÉ, ὕλη, Mater'ia, 'Matter. Wood.' Materia Medica; also, the Philosopher's stone.

HYLE IATRICE, Materia Medica.

HYLISIS, Colatio.

HYLISMUS, Colatio.

HYLISTER, Colatorium.

HYLOPH'AGOUS, from ὕλη, 'wood,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One that feeds upon the young shoots of trees, roots, &c. Hylophagous tribes yet exist in some parts of Africa.

HYMEN, ὑμην, which signifies 'marriage,' 'nuptial song,' 'membrane or pellicle.' Claustrum seu Flos seu Sigill'um seu Custodia seu Column'na seu Zona virginita'tis, Flos virgin'a'lis, Virgin'ia, Circ'ulus membrano'sus, Buclon, Intersept'ium virgin'a'lé, Cento virgin'a'lis, Argumentum Integrit'a'tis, Munimen'tum seu Zona Castita'tis, Pannic'ulus hymenæ'us seu virgin'a'lis, Eugion, Val'cula seu Membran'ula lunata vagina, Vir'ginal membrane. The semilunar, parabolic, or circular fold, situate at the outer orifice of the vagina in virgins, especially during youth, and prior to menstruation. This membrane is ordinarily ruptured by the first venereal act, and is effaced by accouchement; some irregular flaps remaining, to which the name Caruncula Myrtifor'mes has been given by reason of their resemblance to the leaves of the myrtle. Many circumstances of an innocent character may occasion a rupture or destruction of this membrane. It is often, indeed, found absent in children soon after birth; whilst it may remain entire after copulation. Hence the presence of the hymen does not absolutely prove virginity; nor does its absence prove incontinence; although its presence would be primâ facie evidence of continence.

HYMEN, Membrane—h. Diaphragmaton, Mediastinum.

HYMENÆA, see Copal—h. Courbaril, see Anime.

HYMEN'ICA AMENORRHŒ'A. Amenorrhœa occasioned by closure of the hymen.

HYMEN'ICUS, Hymenæ'des, from ὑμην, 'hymen,' &c. Relating to the hymen. Also, membranous.

HYMENITIS, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Membranous inflammation. Inflammation of an internal membrane.

HYMENIUM, Membran'ula, diminutive of ὑμην, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane.

HYMENOGUS, Hymenicus.

HYMENOGANGLIITIS, Cholera.

HYMENOG'ENY, Hymenogen'ia. (F.) Hyménogénie, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' The production of membranes by the effect of simple contact of two liquids, as albumen and fat, when the former gives a coating to the globules of the latter.—Ascherson.

HYMENOG'RAPHY, Hymenogra'phia, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' That part of anatomy whose object is the description of the different membranes.

HYMENOL'OGY, Hymenolog'ia, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the membranes.

HYMENOPHTHALMIA, Ophthalmia membranarum.

HYMENOR'RHAPHY, Hymenorrhô'phia; from ὑμην, 'the hymen,' and ραφή, 'a suture.' A form of elytrorrhaphy, in which the operation is performed in the natural situation of the hymen.

HYMENOT'OMY, Hymenotom'ia, from ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' The part of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the membranes. The term has also been applied to the incision of the hymen, practised in certain cases of imperforation of the vagina, in order to give exit to the blood retained and accumulated in the cavity of the uterus.

HYMNIUM, Amnios.

HYO: in composition, an abridgment of Hyoides os.

HYOBASIOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYOCHONDROGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYODEOTHYREOÏDES, Thyreo-hyoides.

HYODES, Hyoides.

HYODEPIGLOTTICUS, Hyo-epiglotticus.

HYO-EPIGLOT'TICUS, Hyodepiglot'ticus.

Belonging to the os hyoides and epiglottis. Some anatomists have given the name Hyo-epiglottic ligament to a bundle of condensed areolar tissue, which passes from the posterior part of the body of the hyoid bone to the base of the epiglottic fibro-cartilage.

HYO-GLOSSO-BASI-PHARYNGIEN, Constrictor pharyngis.

HYOGLOS'SUS, Hyo'deo-glossus, Hyo-chondro-glossus, Hypsiloglossus, Cer'ato-glossus of Douglass and Cowper: Basio-Cerato-Chondro-glossus. A large, thin, quadrilateral muscle, situate at the anterior and superior part of the neck. Its insertions at three different points of the os hyoides permit it to be divided into three portions:—the first, (Cerato-glossus of Albinus) is attached to the great cornu of the os hyoides: the second, (Basio-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the superior part of the body of the same bone; and the third, (Chondro-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the lesser cornu and the cartilage, situate between the body and the greater cornu. The fibres of these three bundles are inserted into the lateral and inferior parts of the tongue. This muscle depresses the base of the tongue, or raises the os hyoides, when the tongue is fixed.

HYO-THYREOÏDEUS, Thyreo-hyoides.

HYO-THYROID, Thyreo-hyoid.

HYOID BONE, Hyoides, os.

HYOÏ'DES OS, Os Bico'r'nè seu hypsiloï'des seu Lamdoï'des seu Gut'turis seu Guttura'lè seu Lingua seu Lingua'lè. Upsilonoï'des, Ypsiloï'des. The Hyoid Bone; from the Greek υ, and ειδος, 'shape.' Hyô'dens, Hyô'des. The hyoid bone is a very movable, osseous arch; of a parabolic shape; convex before, and suspended horizontally in the substance of the soft parts of the neck, between the base of the tongue and the larynx. This bone, separated entirely from the rest of the skeleton, is composed of five distinct portions, susceptible of motion on each other. The first, and most central, is the body of the hyoid, Ossic'ulum me'dium Hyô'dia, which affords attachment to several muscles; the two others are lateral, and bear the name of branches or greater cornua. The last two are smaller, situate above the other, and are known under the name lesser cornua and styloid cornua, the Ossa p'isiformia lingua'lia of Sömmering, Ossa seu Grana seu Ossicula seu Corpora seu Corpuscula triticæ. The os hyoides is ossified from five points.

HYOÏDES PRIMUS, Sterneo-hyoïdeus.

HYOÏDEUS, Hyoïdes.

HYOÏDIS QUARTUS MUSCULUS, Omo-hyoïdeus.

HYOSCY'AMUS, from 'vs, 'a swine,' and κνῆμος, 'a bean.' Faba suilla, Bengi, Jusqui'aminis, Hyoscyamus niger seu agrestis, Apollinariis, Alter'emm, Ag'omē, Attercaugenon, Henbane, Poison Tobacco, Stinking nightshade, (F.) Jusquiname, Fève a Cochon, Hannebane, Patelée, Porcelet. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves, Hyoscyami Folia (Ph. U. S.), and seeds, Hyoscyami Semen (Ph. U. S.), are the parts used in medicine. Their odour is narcotic and peculiar; taste insipid and mucilaginous. The virtues are yielded to proof spirit. Hyoscyamus is narcotic, anodyne, antispasmodic, and slightly stimulant. It is used as a substitute for opium, where the latter disagrees; and is applied, externally, as a cataplasm in cancer and glandular swellings. Dose, gr. iij to x of the powder. An alkaloid was obtained from it by Brandes, Hyoscyamine, Jusquinamine.

HYOSCYAMUS AGRESTIS, Hyoscyamus.

HYOSCYAMUS ALBUS, White Henbane, possesses similar virtues.

HYOSCYAMUS LUTEUS, Nicotiana rustica — h. Niger. Hyoscyamus — h. Peruvianus, Nicotiana tabacum.

HYOSCYAMUS SCOPOLIA, Scopolina atropodes. The herb and root of this plant, which grows in Illyria, Hungary, Croatia, Gallizia, and Bavaria, are used in the same cases as belladonna. Dose of the powder, half a grain.

HYPACTICUS, Cathartic.

HYPÆMIA, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Hypæmia, Hypæhæmia, Oligæmia, Oligohæmia, Anæmia. Deficiency of blood. — Andral. Also, extravasation of blood.

HYPÆMIA OCULI, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPAGOGÆ, Dejection.

HYPAGOGUS, Laxative.

HYPALEIM'MA, Hypalim'ma, Hypaleip'tum, Hypalip'tum, from 'υπαλειψω, 'I anoint.' An ointment or liniment to be rubbed or spread on a part.

HYPALEIPTRIS, Hypaleiptrum.

HYPALEIP'TRON, Hypaleip'trum, Hypaleip'tria, Hypalip'trum, Spicil'tum, Spatula. A sort of spatula for spreading ointments. — Hippocrates.

HYPALEIP'TRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPALEIPTUM, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIMMA, Hypaleimma.

HYPALIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPAMAURO'SIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αμαυρωσις; Αμαυρωσις imperfecta. Imperfect amaurosis; Meramauro'sis.

HYPANCONIUM, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and αγκων, 'the elbow.' A pillow for supporting the elbow in surgical cases.

HYPAOPLEX'IA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σπληνεια. An incomplete attack of apoplexy.

HYPATMISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPATMUS, Fumigation.

HYPAUCHE'NIUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αυχνη, 'the neck.' A pillow or cushion for the neck.

HYPECCHORESIS, Dejection.

HYPECCHORETICUS, Laxative.

HYPELATUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

HYPENANTIOMA, Allopathy.

HYPENANTIOSIS, Allopathy.

HYPENE, 'υπηνη. The beard which grows under the chin, according to some. Also, the upper lip. — Vesalius. See Mystax.

HYPENETES, Adolescents.

HYPER, 'υπερ, 'above,' 'in excess.' Hence; HYPERAC'US'IS, Oxycoïtia, Hyperac'us, Phthongodysp'horis, from hyper, and ακη, 'audition.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of hearing.

HYPERADENO'SIS, Hyperadeno'ma, Hyper-troph'ia glandularum, from hyper, and αδην, 'a gland.' Hypertrophy of a gland.

HYPERÆ'MIA, Hyperhæ'mia, Hæmormæ'sis, (F.) Hyperhæ'mie, Angiohæ'mie, from hyper, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Preternatural accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels, more especially local plethora — pletho'ra parti'alis; congestion. — Andral. Various forms of hyperæmia are admitted by pathologists. — for example, the active or stenic; as in the phlegmasiæ; — the asthenic or passive, from weakness of vessels; the cadaveric, or that which forms immediately before or after death; and the hypostatic, which occurs in depending parts.

HYPERÆMIA ABDOMINIS, Cœliæmia — h. Activa, Inflammation — h. Capitis, Cephalæmia — h. of the Brain, Stethæmia — h. Cerebri, Cephalæmia — h. Pectoris, Stethæmia — h. Pulmonum, Stethæmia — h. of the Lungs, Stethæmia — h. Hepatic, Hepatohæ'mia.

HYPERÆMIC, Hyperæ'micus, Hyperæ'miol, Congested, Bloodshot. Affected with hyperæmia.

HYPERÆSTHESIA, Hyperæsthesis — h. Lingvæ, Hypergeusia — h. Olfactoria, Hyperosphresia — h. Plexus cardiaci, Angina pectoris.

HYPERÆSTHÈ'SIS, Hyperæsthæ'sia, Oxy-æsthè'sia, (F.) Hypæsthè'sie, from hyper, and αισθησις, 'the faculty of feeling.' Excessive sensibility, impressibility, or passibility.

HYPERÆSTHET'ICA, same etymon. Agents that are conceived to augment general sensibility — as strychnia, brucia, &c. Peiræia.

HYPERANARRHOPHÈ'SIS, from hyper, and αυρορροπισις, 'absorption.' Excessive absorption.

HYPERANTHERA MORINGA, Guilandina moringa.

HYPERANTHRAXIS, see Cholera.

HYPERAPIH'IA, Oxyph'ie, Oxyph'ia, from hyper, and 'αψη, 'touch.' Excessive acuteness of touch.

HYPERAPIHRODIS'IA, from hyper, and Αφροδιτη, 'Venus.' Excessive venereal desire.

HYPERASTHENI'IA, from hyper, and ασθενεια, 'weakness.' Excessive debility.

HYPERAUXE'SIS, from hyper, and αυξησις, 'augmentation.' Hyperæpid'osis. Excessive increase or enlargement of a part, as Hyperauxe'sis P'ridis, an excessive enlargement of the iris, so as to stop up the pupil.

HYPERBOL'IC (attitude), from hyper, and βαλλω, 'I throw.' 'Excessive.' Galen, by this term, designates certain extraordinary attitudes, in which the limbs and vertebral column are in a state of complete extension or flexion.

HYPERBO'REAN, from hyper, and βορειας, 'the north wind.' A race of men found at the extreme north of the two continents, in the vicinity of the polar circle. It includes the Tibetans, Ostiaks, Kamtschadales, Laplanders, Samoïedes, Esquimaux, &c.

HYPERBU'LIA, from hyper, and βουλη, 'will.' Ungovernable will or volition.

HYPERCARDIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCARDIOTROPHIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCATAPINO'SIS, from hyper, and καταπινω, 'to sip up.' Excessive activity of absorption.

HYPERCATHAR'SIS, Hyperine'sis, Hyperionis, Superpurgatio, Effrenatio, from hyper, and καθαρσις, 'purgation.' Superpurgation.

HYPERCENO'SIS, from hyper, and κεινωσις,

'evacuation.' Excessive evacuation, as of blood, bile, &c.

HYPERCERASIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCERATOSIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCHOLIA, Polycholia.

HYPERCHROMA, from hyper, and χρῶμα, 'colour.' A red fleshy excrescence at the inner angle of the eye, near the caruncula lacrymalis, which sometimes grows very large, so as to separate the eyelids and interfere with their movements.

HYPERCHROMATOPSIA, Hyperchromatopsia, from hyper, χρῶμα, χρωματος, 'colour,' and οψις, 'vision.' A defect of vision, owing to which ideas of colour are attached to objects, which convey no such coloured impressions to a healthy eye. It is the antithesis to achromatopsia.

HYPERCINE'SIA, Hypercine'sis, from hyper, and κίνησις (κινῶ, 'I move,') 'motion. Excessive motion.' Under the term hypercinesis, Romberg includes the spasmodic neuroses.

HYPERCINISIA NERVOSA, see Irritable — h. Uterina, Hysteria.

HYPERCINESIS GASTRICA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPERCONJUNCTIVITE, see Ophthalmia.

HYPERCORYPHOSIS, from hyper, and κορυφή, 'the vertex;' the extreme point of anything. The lobes of the liver and lungs. — Hippocrates.

HYPERCRINIA, Hyperdiac'risis, Chymoze'mia, from hyper, and κρίνω, 'I separate.' A morbid increase in the quantity of the secretions.

HYPERCRISIS, same etymon. Supere'cere'tio, Superevacuatio. An excessive crisis, or evacuation; a flux. — A very violent, critical effort, or too copious critical evacuations. — Galen.

HYPERCYEMA, Superfetation.

HYPERCYESIS, Superfetation.

HYPERDERMATOSIS, Hyperdermatoma, Hyperdermo'sis, Hyperdermo'ma, from hyper, and δέρμα, 'skin.' Hypertrophy of the skin.

HYPERDIACRISIS, Hypercrinia.

HYPERDIURESIS, Diabetes.

HYPERDYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPERDYNAMIC, Hyperdynam'iens, from hyper, and δύναμις, 'strength.' Appertaining to or having the characters of hyperdynamia, or excessive strength — of the vital powers more especially.

HYPERECHEMA, see Exaggerated.

HYPERECHESIS, see Exaggerated.

HYPEREMESIS, Hyperemes'ia, Tom'itus p'ofus'us; from hyper, and εμεῶ, 'I vomit.' Excessive vomiting.

HYPERÉMIE, Hyperæmia — h. du Cerveau, Cephaloæmia — h. Cérébrale, Cephaloæmia — h. du Foie, Hepatoæmia — h. de la Moëlle épinière, Hypermyeloæmia — h. des Poumons, Ste-thæmia.

HYPERENCÉPHALOTROPHIE; from hyper, εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the encephalon. — Piory.

HYPERENCEPHALUS, (F.) Hyperencephale, from hyper, and κεφαλή, 'the head.' A monster whose excessive brain is situate in the skull.

HYPERENDOSMOSE, Inflammation.

HYPERENERGIA, from hyper, and ενεργεια, 'activity.' Excessive activity, as of the nervous system.

HYPEREPHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPEREPIDROSIS, Hyperauresis.

HYPERERETHISIA, from hyper, and ερεθίζω, 'I excite.' Excessive irritability.

HYPERESIA, ὑπερῆσια, 'a ministry.' This word is sometimes applied to the organs; — when it means function.

HYPERESTHÉSIE, Hyperæsthesis.

HYPERETRIA, Midwife.

HYPERFIBRINATION, Hyperinosis.

HYPERGENESIS, from hyper, and γενεσις, 'generation,' (F.) Hypergénésie. The excess of formative power, which gives occasion to monstrosities by excess of parts. See Mouser.

HYPERGEUS'TIA, Hypergeu'sis, Hyperæsthe'sia linguæ, Oxygen'sia, from hyper, and γεω-της, 'taste.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of taste.

HYPERHÆMATOSIS, Inflammation.

HYPERHÆMIA, Hyperæmia.

HYPERHÉPATOTROPHIE, Hepatauxæ.

HYPERHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERHORA, from hyper, and ώρα, 'time.' Premature development of the body, or of some part.

HYPERICUM BACCIFERUM, Arbuscula gummifera Brazilien'sis, Caa-opia. Ord. Hypericaceæ. A Brazilian tree, whose bark emits a juice, when wounded, which resembles gamboge. Hypericum is considered by Linnæus to be derived from ὑπερ, 'over,' and εἰκων, 'an image or spectre;' from its having been fancied to possess the power of driving away evil spirits.

HYPERICUM OFFICINALE, H. perforatum — h. officinarum, H. perforatum.

HYPERICUM PERFORATUM, Hypericum. H. officinal'e seu officinarum seu vulgare seu Virgin'icum, Fuga Dæmonum, Androsæmma, Co'ri'on, Perforated or Common St. John's Wort, (F.) Millepertuis ordinaire. It is aromatic and astringent; and enters into a number of aromatic preparations; and, amongst others, into the *Fall-tranck*s. It was, at one time, much used in dysentery, hemorrhages, &c. The juice is acrid. The Oil of St. John's Wort, Red oil, Linimentum seu Oleum hyperici, Balsamum hyperici simplex, is made by infusing $\frac{3}{4}$ iv. of the flowers in a quart of olive oil. It is applied to recent bruises.

HYPERICUM SAROTIIRA, Orange grass, Pine-need, indigenous, is applied in domestic practice, boiled, to contusions and sprains.

HYPERICUM VIRGINICUM, H. perforatum — h. Vulgare, H. perforatum.

HYPERIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERINESIS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOSIS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOSIS, Ino'sis, Hyperplas'ma, from hyper, and ις, ωσις, 'fibre.' The condition of the blood in which it contains an increase in the proportion of fibrin, Hyper-fibrin'ation, Super-fibrin'ation, a decrease of the corpuscles in proportion to the excess of fibrin, and an increase of the fat, — as in inflammation. In proportion to the increase of the fibrin and fat, and the decrease of the corpuscles, the whole solid residue will be diminished. Also, morbidly-increased muscular activity. — Siebenhaar.

HYPERLYMPHIA, (F.) Hyperlymphie; from hyper and lymphæ. Excessive formation or accumulation of lymph.

HYPERMÉTROHÉMIE, Metrobæmia.

HYPERMNE'SIA, from hyper, and μνασται, 'I recollect.' Excessive memory.

HYPERMYELOHÆMIA, (F.) Hyperémie de la Moëlle Épinère, Congestion sanguine rachidienne, from hyper, μυελος, 'marrow,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia of the spinal marrow.

HYPERNÉPHROTROPHIE, from hyper, νεφρός, 'kidney,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the kidney.

HYPERNEURIA, from hyper, and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Excessive nervous activity.

HYPERNEURO'MA, same etymon. Morbid development of the neurine or nervous masses.

HYPERO-PHARYNGEUS, Palato-pharyngeus.

HYPERO'IA, from hyper, and ων, 'a high place.' The palatine arch,—the base of the cranium: the palate.

HYPERO'ITIS, Inflammati'o palati, Angi'na Palati'na, (F.) Inflammation du Palais; from hyperoia, 'the palate,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the velum palati.

HYPERO'CHAS'MA, from υπερωα, 'the palate,' and χασμα, 'an opening;' Lycost'oma, Palatum fissum. Fissure of the palate.

HYPEROPSIA, Oxyopia.

HYPEROS, Pilon.

HYPEROSMIA, Hyposphresia.

HYPEROSPHRE'SIA, Hyperos'mia, Hyperos'phia, Hyperos'phia olfacto'ria, Olfac'tus ucutus, from hyper, and σφρησις, 'smell.' Excessive acuteness of smell.

HYPEROSTOSIS, Exostosis.

HYPERPATHI'A, from hyper, and παθος, 'suffering.' Excessive sensibility in disease.

HYPERPHLEBO'SIS, from hyper, and φλεβ, 'a vein.' Too great development of the venous system: predominant venosity.

HYPERPHLEGMASIA, Hyperphlogosis.

HYPERPHLOGO'SIS, Eriphlogo'nia, Hyperphlegma'nia, Inflammati'o peracuta; from hyper, and φλογωσις, 'inflammation.' A high degree of inflammation.

HYPERPHRE'NIE, Mania.

HYPERPIMELE, see Polysarcia.

HYPERPLASMA, Hyperinosis.

HYPERPLEXIE, Ecstasis.

HYPERPNEUSTIA, Flatulence.

HYPERPRESBYTIA, Presbytia.

HYPERSARCHIDIOS, Physconia.

HYPER SARCO'MA, Hyper'archo'nia, Hyper'archo'nia, from hyper, and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A soft fungous excrescence, especially such as appears upon ulcerated parts.—A fungusity.

HYPERSARCOSIS, Excrescence, Fungosity, —h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPER SARXIS, Hypersarcoma.

HYPERSPADIAS, Epispadias.

HYPERSPASMA, Convulsion.

HYPERSPLE'NOTROPHIE, Splenoncus.

HYPERSPONGIA, Spina ventosa.

HYPERSTHENIA, Hyper'dyna'mia, Hyper'zo'dyna'mia, Status inflammati'rius verus; from hyper, and σθενος, 'strength.' Super-excitement. A morbid condition, characterized by over-excitement of all the vital phenomena.

HYPERSTHENIC, Stimulant.

HYPERSTHENICUS, Active, Stimulant.

HYPERTON'IA, hyper, and τονος, 'tone.' Excess of tone in parts. It is opposed to atony.

HYPERTRICHOSIS: from hyper, and τριξ, τριχος, 'hair.' Excessive production of hair.

HYPERTROPHLE'MIA, from hyper, τροφη, 'nourishment,' and αιμα, 'blood.' A state in which the plastic powers of the blood are increased.

HYPERTROPHIA, Hypertrophy—h. Cerebri, Phrenauxe—h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Glandularum, Hyperadenosis—h. Hepatis, Hepatauxe—h. Intestinorum, Enterhypertrophia—h. Lienis, Splenoncus—h. Splenis, Splenoncus—h. Uteri, Metrauxe—h. Unguinum, Onychauxe—h. Vesicæ urinarie, Cystauxe.

HYPERTROPHIÆ, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIE DU CŒUR, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Centripète du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Concetricque du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. du Foie, Hepatauxe—h. de la Rate, Splenoncus—h. du Corps Thyroïde, Bronchocele.

HYPERTROPHIËD, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIËN, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHOUS, see Hypertrophy.

HY'PERTROPHY, Hypertroph'ia, from hyper, and τροφη, 'nourishment.' The state of a part in which the nutrition is performed with greater activity; and which, on that account, at length acquires unusual bulk. The part thus affected is said to be hyper'trophied or hyper'trophous. Hypertrophia is used by Neligan, as Hypertrophien is by Simon, for an order of cutaneous diseases, characterized by hypertrophy of the derma, or epidermis, or both, or of the hair follicles.

HYPERURESIS, Enuresis—h. Aquosa, Diabets.

HYPERURORRHÉE, Diabetes—h. Saccharine, Diabetes (mellitus.)

HYPERZOODYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPEX'ODOS, υπεξοδος, from υπο, 'beneath,' and οδος, 'passing out.' An alvine discharge or flux.—Hippocrates.

HYPEZOCUS, Diaphragm, Pleura. See Hypozoma.

HYPIA, Texture.

HYPIEMA, Eechymoma.

HYPIEMATO'SIS, Hypo'hæmato'sis, from υπο, 'under,' and αιματωσις, 'sanguification.' Morbidly diminished hæmatisis.—Sanguifica'tio debilior.

HYPIEMOS, Suberuentus.

HYPIE, Texture.

HYPIHDROS, Hydropie.

HYPIHO'SIS, Hypo'plas'ma, from υπο, 'under,' and ισ, ινος, 'fibre.' The condition of the blood in which the quantity of fibrin is frequently less than in health, or if it amounts to the usual quantity, its proportion to the blood corpuscles is less than in health: the quantity of corpuscles is either absolutely increased or their proportion to the fibrin is larger than in healthy blood; the quantity of solid constituents is also frequently larger than in health. Such is the condition of the blood in fevers, hemorrhages, and polyæmia.—Simon.

HYPNÆSTHESIS, Somnolency.

HYPNAGO'GIC, Hypnago'gicus, from υπνος, 'sleep,' and αγωγος, 'a leader.' Leading to sleep. Hypnagogic hallucinations are those visions which occur when we are half asleep.

HYPNIA'TER, (F.) Hypniatre, from υπνος, 'sleep,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' A name given to deluded or designing persons who have affirmed that they were able, during their 'magnetic sleep,' to diagnosticate disease and its appropriate treatment.

HYPNIC, Hyp'nicus, from υπνος, 'sleep.' An agent that affects sleep.—Percira.

HYPNOBATES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBADISIS, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATASIS, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATESIS, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATIA, Somnambulist.

HYPNO'DES, υπνωδης, from υπο, 'under,' and υπνος, 'sleep.' One in a state of slumber or somnolency.

HYPNODIA, Somnolency.

HYPNOLOG'ICA, Hypnolog'icæ. The part of hygiene which treats of sleep.

HYPNOL'OGY, Hypnolog'ia, from υπνος, and λογος, 'a discourse.' Same etymon. A treatise on sleep. The doctrine of sleep.

HYPNONERGIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNOPHOBIA, from ὑπνος, 'sleep,' and φόβος, 'dread.' Dread of sleep. Incubus.

HYPNOPŒUS, Somniferous.

HYPNOS, Sleep.

HYPNOSIS, from ὑπνος, 'sleep.' The super-vention or production of sleep.

HYPNOSIS BIOMAGNETICA, Sleep, magnetic.

HYPNOTIC, Somniferous.

HYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

HYPNOTIZED, see Mesmerized.

HYPO, ὑπο, 'sub,' 'under,' in composition.

HYPO, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOÆMA, Eechymoma.

HYPOÆMIA, Eechymoma, Hypæmia.

HYPOBLEPH'ARUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.' Tumefaction under one or both eyelids. Also, an artificial eye, placed under the eyelids.

HYPOCAPNISMA, Suffimentum.

HYPOCAPNISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPOCARODES, Subsopora'tus, from ὑπο, 'under,' and καρος, 'a heavy sleep.' One who is in a state approaching carus.—Hippocrates.

HYPOCATHAR'SIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and καθαρσις, 'purgation.' Too feeble purgation. A word opposed to hypercatharsis.

HYPOCATHARTICUS, Laxative.

HYPOCAUSTUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and καω, 'I burn.' A name given to a stove, or any such contrivance, to sweat in. Also, a furnace in any subterraneous place, used for heating baths:—ὑποκαυστον, Balnea'rinn, Vapora'rinn.

HYPOCEPHALÆUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A pillow for the head.

HYPOCERCHA'LEON, from ὑπο, and κερχαλεος, 'hoarse.' Roughness of the fauces affecting the voice.—Hippocrates.

HYPOCHLORETUM SULPHUROSUM, Sulphur, chloride of.

HYPOCHLOROM'ELAS, sub-pallidè n'gricans, from ὑπο, χλωρος, 'green,' and μελας, 'black.' A term applied to one whose skin is pale, with a blackish hue.—Hippocrates, Galen.

HYPOCHOILION, Abdomen.

HYPOCHONDRE, Hypochondrium, Subcartilagin'enn, Re'gio Hypochondri'aca, Hypochondriac'ue Region, from ὑπο, 'under,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' Each lateral and superior region of the abdomen is so called, because it is bounded by the cartilaginous margin of the false ribs, which forms the base of the chest. There is a right and a left hypochondrium.

HYPOCHONDRIAC, Hypochondri'acus, Hypochondri'acal, Va'poury, Va'pourish, (F.) Hypochondriaque. Same etymon. Belonging to hypochondriasis. One labouring under hypochondriasis—hipped.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIALGIA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRI'IQUE, Hypochondriac.

HYPOCHONDRI'ASIS. Same etymon. Alu'sia seu Hallucina'tio hypochondriasis, Morbus hypochondri'acus seu Resiccato'rins seu Ructuo'sus, Malum hypochondri'acum, Hypochondriacis'mus, Hypochondriacis'mus, Dyspe'rsia hypochondriacis, Pas'sio seu Affect'io hypochondri'aca, Anathym'iasis, Hyperic'ne'sis gastrica, Splenex, Melanchol'ia nervæ seu flatuo'sa seu hypochondri'aca, Suffoca'tio hypochondri'aca, Morbus flatuo'sus seu erudito'rinn, Fomes ventric'ni, Hypochondrism, Hypo, Hip, Spleen, Vapours English, Malady, Low Spirits, (F.) Hypochondrie, Maladie imagine'aire ou Anglaise, Affect'ion vaporeuse, Vapours. This disease is probably so called, from the circumstance of some hypochondriacs having felt an uneasy sensation in the hypochondriac regions. The disease seems really to be, as Pinel has classed it, a species of neurosis, and of mental alienation, which is observed in persons who in other respects are of sound judgment, but who reason erroneously on whatever concerns their own health. Hypochondriasis is characterized by disordered digestion, without fever or local lesion: flatulence; borborygmi; extreme increase of sensibility; palpitations; illusions of the senses; a succession of morbid feelings, which appear to simulate the greater part of diseases; panics; exaggerated uneasiness of various kinds; chiefly in what regards the health, &c. Indigestion has usually been considered the cause of hypochondriasis. They are, unquestionably, much connected with each other: but there is every reason to believe, that the seat of the affection is really, though functionally, in the brain. The disease almost always appears at the adult age, most commonly in irritable individuals; and in those exhausted, or rather in the habit of being exhausted by mental labour, overwhelmed with domestic or public affairs, &c.

The treatment is almost entirely moral. The condition of the digestive function must, however, be accurately attended to.

HYPOCHONDRICISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRISM, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHOREMA, Excrement.

HYPOCHORESIS, Dejection, Defecation, Excrement.

HYPOCHORETICUS, Cathartic.

HYPOCHYMA, Cataract.

HYPOCHYROSIS, Baryecœia.

HYPOCHYSIS HÆMATODES, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPOCISTIS, Cytinus.

HYPOCLEP'TICUM, from ὑπο, 'beneath,' and κλεπτω, 'I steal.' A chymical vessel, formerly used for separating oil from water.

HYPOCÆLIS, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCÆLIUM, Abdomen.

HYPOCÆLUM, Hypocœilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCOI'LO'N, Hypocœ'lon, Hypocœ'lyum, Hypocœ'lyum, from ὑπο, 'under,' and κοιλον, 'a cavity.' A cavity situate under the lower eyelid. The lower eyelid itself.

HYPOCOPHOSIS, Baryecœia, Deafness.

HYPOCRANIUM (APOSTEMA), from ὑπο, 'under,' and κρανιον, 'the cranium.' A collection of pus between the cranium and dura mater.

HYPOCRATES, Infirm.

HYPOCYLUM, Hypocœilon, Palpebra inferior.

HYPOCYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

HYPODERIS, Epideris.

HYPODERMAT'OMY, Hypodermatom'ia, from ὑπο, 'under,' δερμα, 'the skin,' and τομη, 'incision.' The section of subcutaneous parts, as of tendons and muscles.

HYPODERMIC, Hypoder'micus, (F.) Hypodermique, from ὑπο, 'under,' and δερμα, 'skin.' That which is under the skin,—as 'hypodermic medication,' (F.) Médication hypodermique; that which consists in the application of remedies—as morphia—under the skin.

HYPODERMIS, Clitoris, Epideris.

HYPODERRHIS, Epideris.

HYPODESMA, Bandage.

HYPODYNAMIC, Adynamic.

HYPODYN'IA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and δύνη, 'pain.' Dolor mitis seu lenis. A slight pain.

HYPOGALA, Hypopyon.

HYPOGASTRAL'GIA, from ὑπογαστριον, 'the hypogastrum,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the hypogastrum.

HYPOGAS'TRIC, Hypogas'tricus. Relating or belonging to the hypogastrum.

HYPOGASTRIC ARTERY, A. Ili'aca inter'na, A. Ili'aca poste'rior, A. pelvienne—(Ch.), is the more internal of the two branches into which the primary iliac divides. It descends into the cavity of the pelvis, and gives off a considerable number of branches, which arise, at times, separately; at others, by common trunks. These branches are, 1. The posterior, i. e. the ilio-lumbar arteries, lateral, sacral, and gluteal. 2. The anterior, i. e. the umbilical, vesical, and obturator. 3. The internal,—the middle hemorrhoidal arteries, uterine, and vaginal in women. 4. The inferior, i. e. the ischiatric arteries, and internal pudic.

HYPOGASTRIC GANGLION. A large nervous ganglion, described by Dr. Robt. Lee as seated on each side of the cervix uteri, immediately behind the ureter; which receives the greater number of the nerves of the hypogastric and sacral plexuses, and distributes branches to the uterus, vagina, bladder, and rectum.

HYPOGASTRIC OPERATION OF LITHOTOMY, (F.) Taille hypogastrique. The high operation, or that practised above the pubes.

HYPOGASTRIC PLEXUS, Plexus sous-mésentérique of Winslow, is situate at the lateral and posterior parts of the rectum and the bas fond of the bladder. It is formed by the sacral nerves and the inferior mesenteric plexus, and gives off numerous filaments, which accompany the arteries that pass to the rectum and genital organs.

HYPOGASTRIC VEIN furnishes nearly the same branches.

HYPOGASTRION, Abdomen, Hypogastrium.
HYPOGASTRIUM, Hypogastrium, from ὑπο, 'under,' and γαστήρ, 'the stomach or belly;' Etron, ητρον, Venter imus, V. puerus, Aqualiculus, Sumen, Rumen; the lower part of the abdomen. The Hypogastric region, Regio hypogastrica seu hypogastria, which extends as high as three fingers' breadth beneath the umbilicus, is divided into three secondary regions—one middle or pubic, and two lateral or inguinal.

HYPOGASTROCELĒ, from ὑπο, 'under,' γαστήρ, 'the stomach or belly,' and κῆλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia in the hypogastric region, occurring through the separated fibres of the lower part of the linea alba. See Hernia hypogastric.

HYPOGASTRODIDYMUS, Didymus Symphyohypogastricus, Ischiopages, from ὑπο, 'under,' γαστήρ, 'the belly,' and δίδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the hypogastrium.—Gurlt.

HYPOGASTRORIXIS, Eversion.

HYPOGLOSSA, Hypoglossides.

HYPOGLOSSAL NERVE, Hypoglossus.

HYPOGLOSSIA, Hypoglossides.

HYPOGLOSSIADENITIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' γλῶσσα, 'tongue,' ἀδην, 'a gland,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammatio glandularum sublingualium. Inflammation of the sublingual gland.

HYPOGLOSSIDIA, Hypoglossides.

HYPOGLOSSIS, Hypoglossium, Hypoglossis, Hypoglossia, from ὑπο, 'under,' and γλῶσσα, 'tongue.' The under surface of the tongue; anything under the tongue; and hence, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSIUM, Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSUM, Ruscus hypoglossum, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSUS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and γλῶσσα, 'the tongue.' That which is under the tongue.

HYPOGLOSSUS, Lingua'lis Me'diana, Hypoglossal or Lingual or Gustatory Nerve, (F.) Nerv Hypoglossus or Grand Hypoglossae, Hypoglossien (Ch.), is the ninth pair of nerves, Pars nonum, Nervus hypoglossus seu loquax, of many anatomists. It arises by ten or twelve very fine filaments from the grooves, which separate the corpora pyramidalia from the C. olivaria; issues from the cranium by the foramen condyloideum anterius; and divides, near the angle of the jaw, into two branches; the one, the cervicalis descendens or descendens noni. It forms, with the cervical plexus, a large anastomotic arch, and furnishes branches to several of the muscles of the neck. The other, the lingual branch, is the continuation of the principal trunk, and gives its numerous filaments to the muscles of the tongue and pharynx. The ninth pair communicates motion to the muscles to which it is distributed.

HYPOGLOTTIA, Hypoglossis, Hypoglossides.

HYPOGLOTTIDES, (PILULÆ,) Hypoglossisia, Hypoglossitia, Hypoglossia, Hypoglossita, Hypoglossidia, Pilulæ sublinguales. Pills placed under the tongue to dissolve there.

HYPOGLOTTIS, Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLUTIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and γλοῦτος, 'the nates.' The lower and projecting part of the nates.—Gorræus.

HYPOGNATHADEN, Submaxillary gland.

HYPOGNATHADENITIS, Hypoglossadenitis, from hypognathaden, the submaxillary gland, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the submaxillary gland.

HYPOHÆMA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Effusion of blood into the chambers of the eye. It is generally absorbed in time.

HYPOHÆMATOSIS, Hypæmatisos.

HYPOHÆMIA, Hypæmia.

HYPOLEPSIOMANIA, Melancholy.

HYPO'MIA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ωμος, 'the shoulder.' That which lies under the shoulder, as the axilla.

HYPOMORIA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and μορία, 'folly.' Slight imbecility of mind, or slight delirium.

HYPONARTHÉCIE, Hyponarthécia, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ναρθήξ, 'a splint.' A term used by M. Mayor for his mode of treating fractures by position only,—the limb resting upon a properly cushioned board or splint.

HYPONEURIA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and νεῦρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly diminished nervous energy.

HYPONOMOS, Ulcus subtile depressens, from ὑπο, 'under,' and νεμω, 'I feed.' A deep fistula or ulcer.

HYPONŪCHON, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ονυξ, 'the nail.' Ecchymoma Hyponychon. Effusion of blood under a nail.

HYPOPATHIA, Subaffectio, from ὑπο, 'under,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of a slight character.

HYPOPATUS, Dejectio.

HYPOPE'DIUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' A cataplasm for the sole of the foot.

HYPOPH'ASIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and φαίω, 'I appear.' The state of the eyes in which the white only is seen through the opening of the eyelids.—Hippocrates.

HYPOPHLEGMASIA, Subinflammatio.

HYPOPHORA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and φερω, 'I carry;' Ulcus sinuatum seu fistulosum. A fistulous ulcer.—Galen. A dejection.

HYPOPHIPALMIA, Hypopyon.

HYPOPHthalmion, from ὑπο, 'under,' and οφθαλμος, 'the eye.' That part under the eye where œdema generally commences in chronic diseases and in cachexia.—Hippocrates.

HYPOPHYSIS, Cataract, Epigone—h. Cerebri. Pituitary gland.

HYPOPITYS LANUGINOSA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and πίτυς, 'a pine tree,' from the place of its growth. American Pine-sap, False Beech-drops, Birds' Nest. Indigenous; flowering from June to August. Order, Ericaceæ. Used as a nervine in the form of the powdered root.

HYPOPIUM, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ωπ,

'eye.' The part of the face under the eye:—a black eye.

HYPORINUM OS, Mala os.

HYOPLASMA, Hypinosis.

HYOPLASTEMA, from 'υπο, 'under,' πλαστικός, 'formative,' and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Diminished plasticity of the blood.

HYPOPLEURIUS, Pleura.

HYPOPODIA, Supplautalia, Suppedanea, from 'υπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' Remedies, as sinapisms, which are applied under the foot.

HYPOPYON, Hypopyum, Hypophthalmia, Pypophthalmia, Empyriae seu Diaryriae seu Abscessus Oculi, Oculus purulentus, Lunella, Hypopyolo, Hypopyum lacteum, Pyposis, Paropysis, Staphyloma purulentum; from 'υπο, 'under,' and πους, 'pus,' because the pus is under the cornea. This name has been given to small abscesses between the laminae of the cornea, as well as to different purulent collections in the chambers of the eye; hence, some pathologists have distinguished Hypopyon of the chambers from Hypopyon of the cornea. In abscesses of the chambers, the purulent matter is mixed with the aqueous humour, which it renders turbid; and is deposited particularly at the lower part of the eye; forming behind the cornea a kind of whitish crescent, that rises more or less before the pupil, and closes it entirely or in part. It requires the use of local and general antiphlogistics, and sorbificients. At times, it is necessary to puncture the cornea and evacuate the pus.

Hypopion was used by Galen to signify "an effusion of blood under the eyelids and tunica conjunctiva, or under the lower eyelid."—Blancard.

HYOPYUM LACTEUM, Hypopyon.

HYPORINION, Hyporrhinium, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ριν, 'the nose.' That part of the beard which grows beneath the nose. The mustaches. Also, the upper lip.

HYPORRHYSIS, Defluxion, Prolapsus.

HYPOSAPRUS, Subputris, Putrescens. Growing putrid; slightly putrid. Game, of various kinds, (F.) Viandes foissaudées, is, at times, preferred in an incipient state of decomposition, which certainly renders it more digestible.

HYOSARCA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σαξ, 'flesh;' Hyposarcidius, Anasarca. In the Nosologies of Linnaeus and Cullen, it is synonymous with Physconia.

HYOSARCIDIUS, Anasarca, Hyposarca.

HYOSARCOISIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σαρκωσις, 'a fleshy growth.' A small, fleshy growth:—a wart.

HYOSIAGON, Maxillary bone, inferior.

HYOSIAGONARTHRIITIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' σιαγων, 'the jawbone,' ('lower jawbone,') αρθρον, 'a joint,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation; Inflammatio articuli maxillae inferioris. Inflammation of the joint of the lower jaw.

HYOSIALADEN, Submaxillary gland.

HYOSIALADENTIS, Hypognathadenitis.

HYOSPA'DIA, Hypospadiasis, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σπασ, 'I draw.' A malformation, in which the canal of the urethra, instead of opening at the apex of the glans, terminates at its base, or beneath the penis, at a greater or less distance from the symphysis pubis. When the orifice of the urethra is very near the root of the penis, the scrotum is divided, as it were, into two great labia; and this malformation has often been taken for a case of hermaphroditism. Hypospadias is ordinarily incurable; and an idea has been entertained that it is the cause of impotence. It is not exactly so; but it renders impregnation less probable.

HYOSPA'DIAS, Hypospadia, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σπασ, 'I draw.' One affected with hypospadias.

HYOSPADIASIS, Hypospadia.

HYOSPATHISMUS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and παθιον, 'a ladle or spatula.' A surgical operation, with the ancients, in cases of severe 'defluxion to the eyes,' which consisted in incisions made in the scalp down to the bone, and the insertion of an instrument called a spathion or hypospathister to enable the intermediate parts to be divided. The precise character of the operation is not well described, and it is no longer known.—Paulus of Aegina.

HYOSPATHISTER, see Hypospathismus.

HYOSPAGMA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and σφασ, 'I kill.' The coagulated blood, which is collected when an animal is killed and used for food. Also, an effusion of blood, especially under the conjunctiva.

HYOSPAGMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HYOSTAPHYLE, Staphylædema.

HYOSTAPHYLITIS, see Staphylitis.

HYOSTASIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and στας, 'the act of placing.' A morbid deposition in the body. Sediment.

HYOSTATIC, Hypostaticus, from 'υπο, 'under,' and στας, 'stagnation.' Relating to hypostases, sediments or depositions.

HYOSTATIC HYPEREMIA. A congestion of blood in the vessels of a part, caused by its depending position.

HYOSTEMA, Sediment.

HYOSTHENIA, Debility.

HYOSTHENIC, Contrastimulant.

HYOSTROPHE, υποστροφή, 'change of position,' from 'υπο, and στροφή, 'I turn.' Act of a patient turning himself. Also, a relapse or return of a disease.—Hippocrates, Foësius.

HYOSTYPTIC, Hypostypticus, from 'υπο, 'under,' and στυψις, 'constriction.' A feeble astringent.

HYOSYPHILIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and Syphilis. A mild form of syphilis.

HYOTHENAR, Subtola, from 'υπο, 'under,' and εναρ, 'the palm of the hand or sole of the foot.' Hypothénar Eminence. The fleshy projection of the palmar surface of the hand, which corresponds with the little finger, and is supported by the fifth metacarpal bone. This eminence is formed of four muscles: the Palmaris brevis, Adductor seu Flexor brevis minimi digiti, and Opponens minimi digiti. The name Hypothénar has also been given to different muscles of the hand. The Hypothénar minimi digiti of Riolan comprehended the Abductor, Flexor brevis and Opponens minimi digiti; and his muscle. Hypothénar pollicis, corresponded to the Abductor and a portion of the Flexor brevis pollicis. Winslow called the Adductor minimi digiti, muscle petit hypothénar ou hypothénar du petit doigt.

HYOTHENAR MINIMI DIGITI, Flexor parvus minimi digiti—h. Minor metacarpus, Abductor minimi digiti—h. Riolani, Flexor parvus minimi digiti.

HYOTHETON, Suppository.

HYOTHYMIAMA, Fumigation.

HYOTHYMIASIS, Fumigation.

HYOTIUM, (Emplastrum;) from 'υπο, 'under,' and ος, 'the ear.' Emplastrum auricularē; a plaster applied behind or under the ear.

HYOTROPHE, Relapse.

HYOTROPHIA, Hypotrophy, from 'υπο, 'under,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Scanty nourishment or nutrition. Atrophy.

HYOTROPIASMUS, Relapse.

HYOTRYGUS, Feculent.

HYOUCANNA, Ipecacuanha.

HYPOUTRION, Abdomen.

HYPOXĒMIE, Asphyxia.

• HYPOXYS ERECTA, Stargrass; from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and ερεος, 'sharp,' because the pod is acute at the base [?]; indigenous; Order, Amarillidaceæ. The root is eaten, and has been used as a vulnerary; and in chronic ulcers and agues.

HYPOZO'MA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ζωννυμι, 'I bind round;' Membrana succinigena. A membrane or septum, as the mediastinum, diaphragm, &c.

HYPOCRAS, Claret.

HYPELOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYPSILODES, OS. Hypoïdes os.

HYPSILOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYPSONOSUS, Puna.

HYPSOPHONUS, from 'υψος, 'high,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a clear high voice.

HYPSOSIS, Sublimation.

HYPTIASMA, Supination.

HYPTIAS'MOS, from 'υπτιαζω, 'I lie with the face upwards.' Lying in a supine posture. Also, inversion of the stomach, as in nausea, regurgitation, or vomiting.—Hippocrates, Galen.

HYPU'LUS, from 'υπο, and οληη, 'cicatrix.' Imperfectly cicatrized.

Ulcera hypu'la. Ulcers healed at the top, but not at the bottom.

HYRACEUM. A substance found in the Cape Colony, which Thunberg and other travellers mistook for a kind of bitumen; but, according to Dr. Pape, it is obtained from the urine of the Klipdas or Hyrac Capensis, which, when passed, is thick and of a glutinous nature. The animal is in the habit of evacuating the urine at one spot, where its aqueous parts evaporate in the sun—the more tenacious adhering to the rock and hardening.

In smell, and medical properties, it most resembles castor, which, according to Dr. Pape, it may replace. It is used by the Cape farmers in nervous and spasmodic affections.

HYRAX CAPENSIS, see Hyracum.

HYRTOCHEILIDES, Labia pudendi.

HYSOPE, Hyssopus.

HYSSOP, Hyssopus—h. Hedge, Gratiola officinalis.

HYSSOPITES. Ancient name of a wine, of which hyssop was the chief ingredient, and which Dioscorides extolled in chronic inflammation of the chest. It was regarded as diuretic and emmenagogue.

HYSSOPUS, from the Hebr. Azob, Cassia'ala, Hyssopus officinalis, Communi hyssop, (F.) Hyssope. It has been chiefly used as an aromatic, stimulant, and pectoral, in the form of infusion.

HYSTERA, 'υστερα, 'υστερη, 'the uterus.' Hence:

HYSTERA, Secundines.

HYSTERAL'GIA, Hysterodynia, (F.) Fortraiture, from 'υστερα, 'the uterus,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus. Irritable uterus, (F.) Névrologie de l'utérus. Hippocrates uses the epithet Hyster'al'ges, υστεραλγης, for any thing that excites uterine pain; and, especially, [?] for vinegar.

HYSTERALGIA CATARRHALIS, Metrorrhœua—h. Galactica, Phlegmatia alba dolens—h. Lochialis, Dyslochia—h. Rheumatica, Metrorrhœua.

HYSTERAPOPNIXIS, Angone.

HYSTERATRE'SIA, Atrometria, from 'υστερα, 'the uterus,' and απρητος, 'imperfurate.' Imperforation of the os uteri.

HYSTERELCO'SIS, from 'υστρα, 'uterus,' and ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Uteri exulceratio, Uteri ulcus. Ulceration of the uterus.

HYSTERELOSIS, Hysteroloxia.

HYSTEREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTERIA, H. vaga, Hystericalismus, Hysteria-

mus, Hysteria, Hysteri'asis, Hysteropathi'a, Hypercine'cia uteri'ua seu hyste'ria, Uteri adscen'sus, Suffocatio hyste'rica seu uteri'ua seu mulie'rinn, Asthma u'teri, Præfocatio matricis seu uteri'ua, Synp'sia hyste'ria, Mulien hyste'ricum seu hyste'rica-hypocondri'acum, Vapores uteri'ni, Affectio seu Passio hyste'rica, Morbus hyste'ricus, Strangulatio uteri'ua seu Vulvæ, Vapours, Hyste'rica, Hysteric fit, Mother, (F.) Hystérie, Mal de Mère, Maladie imaginaire, Passion hystérique, Suffocation utérine, Étranglement, Épilepsie utérine, Vapeurs, Mane de Nerfs, from 'υστερα, 'the uterus.' A species of neurosis, classed amongst the spasmi by Sauvages and Cullen, and in the Névroses de la génération, by Pinel. It received the name of hysteria, because it was reputed to have its seat in the uterus. It generally occurs in paroxysms; the principal characters of which consist in alternate fits of laughing and crying, with a sensation as if a ball set out from the uterus and ascended towards the stomach, chest, and neck, producing a sense of strangulation. If the attack be violent, there is, sometimes, loss of consciousness (although the presence of consciousness generally distinguishes it from epilepsy) and convulsions. The duration of the attacks is very variable. It appears to be dependent upon irregularity of nervous distribution in very impressible persons, and is not confined to the female; for well-marked cases of hysteria are occasionally met with in men. During the fit,—dashing cold water on the face, stimulants applied to the nose, or exhibited internally, and antispasmodics, form the therapeutical agents. Exercise, tranquillity of mind, amusing and agreeable occupations constitute the prophylactics. See Mania, dancing.

HYSTERIA CATALEPTICA, Catalepsy—h. Vaga, Hysteria.

HYSTERIAS, Hysteria.

HYSTERIASIS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICA, see Hysterical.

HYSTERIC'AL, Hystericus, Vapourish, Vapouring, (F.) Hystérique. Same etymon as hysterical. Relating to or affected with hysteria.

The word hysterica was used by Martial for a female affected with nymphomania or with strong sexual desires.

HYSTEROCARCINOMA, Metrocarcinoma.

HYSTEROCELĒ, from 'υστερα, 'the womb,' and κληη, 'hernia.' Metrocelē, Hernia uteri, Hernia of the womb. This is a rare disease. The womb may protrude through the inguinal or the crural canal, or through the lower part of the linea alba.

HYSTEROCELE NUDA, Prolapsus uteri.

HYSTEROCOLICA, Colica uterina.

HYSTEROCNEMUS, from 'υστερα, 'uterus,' and κνημος, 'itching.' Pruritus of the uterus or genitals.

HYSTEROCRANIUM, Occiput.

HYSTEROCYESIS, Pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTIC, Hystero-cysticus, from 'υστερα, 'the uterus,' and κυστις, 'the bladder.' Relating to the uterus and bladder. Some authors have called Hystero-cystic Retention of urine, that which is caused by the compression of the bladder by the uterus, during pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTOCELĒ, from 'υστερα, 'the womb,' κυστις, 'the bladder,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the uterus complicated with displacement of the bladder.

HYSTERODYNIA, Hysteralgia.
 HYSTERŌDEMA, Hydrometra.
 HYS'TERŌID, Hysteroïdes, Hysteroï'des, from 'hysteria,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling hysteria;—as a hysteroid disease, symptom, &c.

HYS'TEROL'OGY, Hysterolox'ia, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the sound and morbid uterus.

HYSTEROLOX'IA, Hysterelox'is, Obliquitas seu Situs obliquus uteri, Flexio seu Versio incompleta seu Inclinatio uteri, Metrolox'ia, Metrocamp'is, Metroscolio'ma, Uterus obliquus seu Inclinatus; from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and λοξος, 'oblique.' An oblique position of the uterus, occurring during pregnancy. Anteversio of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia anterior, Anteversio seu Pronatio uteri, Venter propendens; and Retroversio of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia posterior, Retroversio uteri, Reflexio uteri completa, are varieties.

HYSTEROMALA'CIA, Hysteromalaco'sis, Hysteromalaco'ma, Metromalaco'sis, Metromalaco'ma, Malaco'sis uteri, Emollit'ies uteri morbosa, Pu-trescentia uteri gravidi, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and μαλακία, 'softness.' Softness of the uterus during pregnancy, which renders it liable to rupture in labour.

HYSTEROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.

HYSTEROMANIA, Nymphomania.

HYSTEROMETER, see Sound, uterine.

HYSTEROMOCHLIUM, Lever.

HYSTERON'CUS, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and ογκος, 'tumour.' Mctron'cus, Hysterophy'ma, Metrophy'ma, Tumor uteri. A tumour of the uterus.

HYSTERO-PARAL'YSIS, Hysterople'gia, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and παραλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.

HYSTEROPATHIA', from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and παθος, 'suffering.' Disease or suffering in the uterus. Also, hysteria, and deutero-pathia.

HYSTEROPHYMA, Hysteroncus.

HYSTEROPHYSE, Physometra.

HYSTEROPHYYSIS, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and φση, 'wind.' Distension of the uterus with air; Emphyse'ma uteri.

HYSTEROPLÉGIA, Hysteroparalysis.

HYSTERNIX, Angone.

HYSTEROPLYPUS, Metropolypus.

HYSTERSOPHIA, Physometra.

HYSTEROPTO'SIS, from 'υστερα,' 'the womb,' and πτωσις, 'fall'; Prolapsus uteri. Also, Inversio uteri, Anas'trophē uteri. In a general sense, a protrusion of any part of the genital organs or of excrescences from them into the genital passages; Ædopto'sis.

HYSTERTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri—h. Vaginæ prolapsus, Prolapsus vaginæ.

HYSTERRRHAGIA SANGUINEA, Metrorrhagia.

HYSTERRRHEXIS, Uterus, rupture of the.

HYSTERRRHEA, Metrorrhagia—h. Mucosa, Leucorrhœa.

HYSTERSALPINX, Tube, Fallopian.

HYSTERSCIRRHUS, Metroscirrhus.

HYSTERSCOPE, from 'υστερα,' 'the uterus,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' A metallic mirror, used in inspecting the state of the os uteri for throwing the rays of a taper to the bottom of the speculum uteri.—Colombat de l'Isère.

HYSTERSPASM'US, from 'υστερα,' 'the womb,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm of the uterus. Also, hysterical spasm.

HYSTERTOSTOMA, Os uteri.

HYSTERTOSTOMAT'OMUS, from 'υστερα,' 'the womb,' στομα, 'orifice,' and τερμειν, 'to cut.' An instrument invented by Coutouly for dividing the os uteri, when it is important to deliver immediately, as in cases of convulsions.

HYSTERTOSTMIUM, Os uteri.

HYSTERTOSYNZESIS, Metrosynzesis.

HYSTERTOME, Hysterotomus.

HYSTERTOM'IA, Hysterot'omy. Same etymon as Hysterotomus. Cæsarean section. Also, dissection of the uterus.

HYSTERTOMOTOCIA, Cæsarean section.

HYSTERTOM'OMUS, Hysterotome, Metrot'omus, Me'trotome, from 'υστερα,' 'the womb,' and τερμειν, 'to cut.' An instrument for dividing the womb through the vagina. It is a kind of Bistouri caché, and is intended to divide the cervix and os uteri.—Hysterostomat'omus.

HYSTERTRISM'US, from 'υστερα,' 'the womb,' and τριζω, 'I gnash.' Spasmodic contraction of the uterus, especially of its mouth.

HYSTREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTRIASIS, Hystriciasis.

HYSTRIC'ASIS, Hystric'asis, Hys'trix, Hystricis'mus, Cerostro'sis, Tricho'sis setosa, from 'υστριξ,' 'υστριχος,' 'a hedgehog or porcupine.' A disease of the hairs, in which they stand erect like the quills of the porcupine.

HYSTRICISMUS, Hystriciasis.

HYSTRIX, Hystriciasis.

HYVES, Hives.

IATROCHYMIA, Chymiat'ria.

IATROGNOMICA, Iatrognom'icé; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and γινωσκω, 'I know.' A knowledge of medical objects.—Hufeland.

IATROLEPTES, Iatroleptes.

IATROLOG'IA, Iatrol'ogy, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on physic and physicians.

IATROMAN'TIS, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and μαντις, 'divination.' A physician who is a soothsayer.

IATRO-MATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iatromathemat'ici. Mechanical physicians.

IATROMECHANICI, Mechanical physicians.

IATRON, Iat'ron.

IATROPHYSICS, Physic, medical.

IATROS, Iat'ros.

IATROSOPHIS'TA, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and σοφιστης, 'one skilled in an art or science.' A learned, or thoroughly educated physician.

IATROTECH'NA, Iatrotech'nes; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and τεχνη, 'art.' A practical physician or surgeon.

IATROTECHNICE, Medicina, Therapeutics.

IATRUS, Iat'ros, Physician; also, a surgeon.

IBERIS, Lepidium iberis.

IBERIS AMA'RA, Bitter caudynst, (F.) Passerage, from Iberia, where it is indigenous. A small herbaceous plant, Ord. Cruciferae, indigenous in Europe, which was employed, of old, in gout, rheumatism, &c. The seeds have been used, in the dose of one to three grains, in asthma, bronchitis, dropsy, and hypertrophy of the heart. It is said to possess acro-narcotic properties; but it is not much used.

IBERIS BURSA PASTORIS, Thlaspi bursa—i. Campestris, Thlaspi campestre—i. Sophia, Cardamine pratensis.

IBICUBA, Becniba, Becniba nux. A species of nut from Brazil, the emulsive kernel of which is ranked amongst balsamic remedies.

IBIS, ibis. A bird held sacred by the Egyptians. When sick, it is asserted that it was wont to inject the water of the Nile into its fundament; whence, according to Langius, was learned the use of glysters.

IBISCHA MISMALVA, Althæa.

IBISCUS, Althæa.

IBIXUMA, Saponaria.

ICE, Sax. ip, Gla'cies, Frozen water, (F.) Glacc. Ice water is much used internally, as the best refrigerant in fever. It is, also, applied externally, in cases of external inflammation, as well as in phrenitic and hernial affections, &c., in the form of the ice-cup and ice-cataplasm or ice-poultice; formed by half filling a bladder with pounded ice.

ICE-CAP, see Ice.

ICE-COLD, Icy cold, (F.) Froid glacial. A very strong morbid sensation of cold, compared by the patient to that which would be produced by the application of pieces of ice.

ICE-POULTICE, see Ice.

ICELAND, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hot springs are found in every part of Iceland. The most noted of these is one called Geyser, two days' journey from Hecla, and near Skalholt. The diameter of the basin is 59 feet; and the height to which the water is thrown is often more than 100. The heat of the water is 212°.

ICE PLANT, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum, Monotropa uniflora.

ICHNOS, ιχθος. The foot. The sole of the foot. The heel.

ICHOR, ιχωρ, Ichos. The serum of the blood, Sarax, Sordes, Virus, Pus malignum, Tabum. A thin, aqueous, and acrid discharge.

ICHOROIDES, Ichorous.

ICH'OROUS, Ichoro'sius, Ichoroï'des, Savio'sus, Sa'niosus, (F.) Ichorens, Sauieux. Belonging to or resembling ichor.

ICHOS, Ichor.

ICHTHYA, Hook, blunt.

ICHTHYOCOL'LA, from ιχθυσ, ιχθυος, 'a fish,' and κωλλα, 'glue.' Colla Piscium, Pisnglass, Fish-gluce, (F.) Ichthyocolle, Colle de Poisson. A name given to the dried swimming bladder or sound of Acipenser humo, and other species of acipenser, which is almost wholly composed of gelatin, and is employed in medicine in the formation of nutritive jellies. It is, also, occasionally used in anatomical injections. The English Court Plaster is made with it. In Russia, the Acipenser is not the only genus from which isinglass is procured; it is also obtained from Silurus Glanis, which Dr. Royle suggests to be the source of the Samory or Somory isinglass of commerce. The sounds of the cod, ling, hake, &c., yield it. From these it is made in New England; and, in England, is termed New York Isinglass.

ICHTHYOPH'AGISTS, Ichthyoph'agi, from ιχθυσ, ιχθυος, 'a fish,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' People who feed habitually on fish;—generally the most uncivilized of mankind.

ICHTHYOPHAGOUS, Piscivorous.

ICHTHYOSE, Ichthyosis.

ICHTHYO'SIS, from ιχθυσ ιχθυος, 'a fish,' from the resemblance of the scales to those of a fish. Lepido'sis, Ichthy'asis, L. Ichthy'osis, Lep'ra Ichthy'osis, Alvarus nigra (Arab.), Impet'igo excoertic'vra, (F.) Ichthyose; Fishskin, Porcupine Disease. A permanently harsh, dry, scaly, and, in some cases, almost horny texture of the integuments of the body, unconnected with internal disorder. Willan and Bateman have two varieties, I. simplex and I. cornua. Alibert has three, the I. uacrée or pearly, the I. cornée, and the I. pellagre or Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS PELLAGRA, Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS SEBA'CEA, Sebaceous Ichthy'osis. A morbid incrustation of a concrete subaceous substance upon the surface of the epidermis, confounded, according to Mr. E. Wilson, with ichthyosis, to which it bears a close resemblance. In many cases there is neither redness nor heat, nor is the affection often accompanied by constitutional symptoms.

ICHTHYOTOX'ICUM, from ιχθυσ, ιχθυος, 'a fish,' and τοξικον, 'a poison;' Ich'thyus, fish poison.

ICHTHYUS, Ichthyotoxicum.

ICICA ARACOUCHI'NL, Aracanchini is a balsam, extracted by incision from this tree in Guyana. The Galibis use it for healing wounds.

ICICA ICICARIBA, see Amyris elemifera.

ICTÉRICIE, Icterus.

ICTERICUS, Antiicteric. Also, relating to, or resembling Icterus; Ic'teric, Icteroï'des, Ictero'des, (F.) Ictérique.

ICTERITIA ALBA, Chlorosis—i. Flava, Icterus—i. Rubea, Erysipelas—i. Rubra, Erysipelas.

ICTERODES, Ictericus.

IC'TERUS, I. fluvius seu vernus, from ικτις, a species of weasel, whose eyes are yellow [?]. (Ικτερος meant, with the ancients, a yellow bird, perhaps the Oriole;) Morbns arcuat'us seu aquat'us, Lesc- oli morbus (Paracelsus), Aurn'go, Aur'go, Morbis regius seu lute'olus, Cholelith'ia icterus, Cholithæ'mia, Cholæ'mia, Cholopla'nia, Cholo'sis, Der-matocholo'sis, Suffu'sio aurigino'sa seu fellis seu bilis, Icteritia flava, l'cus flavus seu icteroides, Chechæ'ia icter'ica, Fellis suffu'sio seu obstruct'io seu Superf'u'sio, Bil'ious Dys'crasy, Jaundice, Yellow's, Jauders, Jaunders, (Sc.) Gulschoch, (Prov.) Jonus, (F.) Ictere, Ictérie, Jannisse, Bile répandue. A disease, the principal symptom of which is yellowness of the skin and eyes, with white fæces and high-coloured urine. It admits of various causes; in fact, anything which can directly or indirectly obstruct the course of the bile, so that it is taken into the mass of blood and produces the yellowness of surface; — the bile being separated by the kidneys, causes yellowness of urine, and its being prevented from reaching the intestine occasions the pale-coloured fæces. The prognosis, in ordinary cases, is favourable; — when complicated with hepatic disease, unfavourable. The treatment is simple: — an emetic or purgative, given occasionally so as to elicit the return of the bile to its ordinary channels; light tonics; unirritating diet; cheerful company, &c.

ICTERUS ALBUS, Chlorosis.

ICTERUS INFAN'TUM, I. Neonatorum, Neotœict'erus, Pædict'erus, Aur'go neophyto'rum, Yellow gum, Yellow gown, (F.) Ictère des nouveau-nés, is a common affection, and frequently dependent upon obstruction of the choledoch duct by the meconium. It requires time; and castor oil, occasionally.

ICTERUS MELAS, Melæna — i. Neonatorum, I. infantum — i. Niger, Melæna.

ICTERUS SATURNI'NUS, Lead jaundice. The earthy-yellow hue in saturnine cachexy.

ICTERUS VIR'IDIS, Green jaundice. Icterus when the skin is of a green or olive hue.

ICTODES FŒTIDUS, Dracontium fœtidum.

ICTUS. 'A stroke or blow;' Plegê, Plaga. Ictus solis, a stroke of the sun. See Comp de soleil. Ictus, also, means the pulsation of an artery, and the sting of a bee or other insect.

ICTUS, Blow — i. Cordis, see Heart — i. Cordis et arteriarum, Pulse — i. Sanguinis, Apoplexy — i. Solis, Comp de soleil.

IDE'A, Id'ea, Ido'lum, Ideach [? Paracelsus], (F.) Idée, from εἶδω, 'I see.' The image or representation of an object in the mind.

IDEA, FIXED or PREDOMINANT, Id'ea fixa, Ideopeg'ma. Tension of the mind on one notion; often observed in insanity.

IDE'A MORBI. Knowledge or idea of a disease.

IDEACH, Idea.

IDEAGENOUS, Sentiment.

IDE'AL, Ide'al'is. Mental, notional, fancied.

Morbi ideale's. Ideal diseases. Diseases of the imagination.

IDEA'TION, Ide'a'tio, from 'idea.' The establishment of a distinct mental representation or idea of an object.

IDÉE, Idea.

IDEN'TITY (PERSONAL), Iden'titas, from idem, 'the same.' Sameness. It is sometimes a question in legal medicine to decide upon personal identity: that is, whether an individual be the same he represents himself to be. Physical marks form the great criteria.

IDEOL'OGY, Ideolog'ia, from εἶδω, 'I see,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of ideas. Intellectual philosophy.

I'DEO-MOTOR. A name given by Dr. Carpenter to muscular movements, the result of complete engrossment by an idea, which he regards as automatic, although originating in the cerebrum.

IDEOPEGMA, Idea, fixed.

IDÉOSYNCHYSIE, Delirium.

IDIANGEA, Idiotism.

IDIOPATH'IC, Pro'prio hab'itu seu Constitutio'nē pro'pria' pendens, Idiopath'icus, Idiopath'etes. Primary affections and their symptoms are so denominated.

IDIOPTCY, Achromatopsia.

IDIOPTS, see Achromatopsia.

IDIOSYNCRASIA, Idiosyncrasy — i. Hæmorrhagia, Hæmatophilia — i. Olfactoria, Parosmia.

IDIOSYN'CRASY, Idio'crasy, Idiosyncrasis, Idiosyncrasia, Idiotrop'ia, Idio'crasis, Idiosyncrasi'a, from idios, 'peculiar,' συν, 'with,' and κρasis, 'temperament.' A peculiarity of constitution, in which one person is affected by an agent which, in numerous others, would produce no effect. Thus, shell-fish, bitter almonds, produce urticaria in some, by virtue of their idiosyncrasies. Others faint at the sight of blood, &c.

ID'IOT, Idio'ta, 'foolish, stupid, ignorant.' Now used for one who is fatuous, or who does not possess sufficient intellectual faculties for the social condition, and for preserving himself from danger, — Homo fat'uus, (Prov.) Daleop, Fondling, Hobbit. In law, one who has been without understanding from his birth, and whom the law presumes to be never likely to attain any.

IDIOTIA, Idiotism — i. Endermica, Cretinism.

IDIOTIE, Idiotism.

ID'IOTISM, Idioti'smus, Idioti'a, Idiance'a, Imbecil'itas mentis; Mo'ria demens, Ano'a, Mo'ria, Moro'sis, Meio'sis, Fatu'itas, Amen'tia, Dementia natural'is, Stupid'itas, Veco'dia, Imbecill'itas Ingen'ii, Id'iotcy, Id'iotcy, Fatu'ity. (F.) Démence innée, Idiotisme, Idiotie, Apsychisme. — Piorry. Same etymon. A species of unsound mind, characterized by more or less complete obliteration of the intellectual and moral faculties. It may supervene on mania and melancholia, when it is termed Dementia, but more commonly it depends upon original conformation. It may also, be symptomatic of organic disease of the brain, which has come on after birth. Idiotism exists in various degrees. Some idiots are mere automata, exhibiting scarcely any sensibility to external impressions; others are capable of articulating a few words, and possess certain mental emotions to a limited extent. The physiognomy is usually vacant, step unsteady, and articulation imperfect or broken. The affection is almost always incurable; but it may often be palliated.

IGNA'TIA AMA'RA, Strychnos Ignat'ii, Ignat'ia Philippin'ica. Ord. Apocynaceæ. The systematic name of the plant which affords St. Ignatius's Bean, Faba In'dica seu Sancti Ignat'ii seu febrif'uga, (F.) Ignatie, Fève de Saint Ignæe, Noix d'Ignour. The seeds are bitter and poisonous, containing strychnia, and only appear to differ from nux vomica in containing a larger proportion of that alkaloid.

IGNAVIA, Inertia—i. seu Ignavitas partium genitalium, Impotentie.

IGNIS, 'fire.' Hence:

IGNIS ACTUALIS, Cauterium—i. Animalis, Animal heat.

IGNIS CALIDUS, 'A hot fire.' A violent inflammation, about to degenerate into gangrene.

IGNIS COLUMELLE, Erysipelas.

IGNIS FRIGIDUS, 'A cold fire.' Sphacelus.

IGNIS NATURALIS, Animal heat—i. Persicus, Anthrax, Herpes zoster—i. Philosophicus, Phosphorus—i. Potentialis, see Cauterium—i. Sacer, Erysipelas, Herpes zoster—i. Sancti Antonii, Erysipelas.

IGNIS SAPIENTUM. The ancient name for the heat of horses' dung.

IGNIS SYLVATICUS, I. sylvæstris seu volat'icus seu volat'grinus, Strophulus sylvæstris seu volat'icens, Wildfire rash, (F.) Fen sauvage ou volage, Flamboise. Probably, the Porri'ga larva'lis or Crusta lactea of infants. Also, a transient redness of the face and neck, sometimes observed in hysterical and chlorotic females.

IGNIS SYLVESTRIS, I. sylvaticus—i. Vitalis, Animal heat—i. Volagrius, I. sylvaticus—i. Volaticus, I. sylvaticus.

IGNIVOROUS, Pyrophagus.

IGNYE, Poples.

IGNYS, Poples.

ILAPHS, Aretium lappa.

ILEA, Flanks.

ILEAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILEADELPHIUS, from ileum, 'the ileon,' and ἀδελφος, 'brother.' A double monster, united at the pelvis, and below.

ILECH, Y'lech, Ile'as, Ilias'ter, Ylias'ter, Eli-as'ter, Ilias'trum, Ile'ados, Ile'idos, Ile'adam, Ile'odus. Terms used by Paracelsus to designate the first matter:—the beginning of every thing.

ILEIADOS, Ilech.

ILEIADUM, Ilech.

ILEIAS, Ilech.

ILEIDOS, Ilech.

ILEITIS, from ileum, 'the intestine ileum,' and tis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ileum.

ILEO. In composition, relating or appertaining to the ileum.

ILEO-CHOLOSIS, Diarrhœa, bilions.

ILEO-COLIC, Ileo-colicæ. Relating to the ileum and colon:—as the ileo-colic valve or valve of Bauhin.

ILEO-COLITIS, Enteritis.

ILEO DICLIDITE, see Typhus.

ILEO-LUMBAR, Ileo-lumbalis, Ilio-lumbaris. Belonging to the ileum and lumbar region.

ILEO-LUMBAR ARTERY, Ilio-lumbar artery, Iliaco-muscular, (Ch.) is given off by the hypogastric, opposite the base of the sacrum. It ascends behind the psoas muscle, and divides into two branches:—an ascending and a transverse, which give off numerous ramifications to the neighbouring parts.

ILEO-LUMBAR LIGAMENT, Ilio-lumbar or Ilio-lumbo-vertebral ligament, Vertebro-iliac ligament, is a broad, membraniform, triangular ligament, extending horizontally from the transverse process of the 5th lumbar vertebrae to the upper and posterior part of the iliac crest. It unites the vertebral column with the pelvis.

ILEON, Ileum, E'leon, I'ium, Intesti'num circumcolatum, from ελεω, 'to turn,' 'to twist.'

Anatomists have given this name to the longest portion of the small intestine, which extends from the jejunum to the cæcum. It was so called from its forming a considerable number of convolutions.

ILEOPYRA, see Typhus.

ILEOSIS, Ileus.

ILEO-TYPHUS, see Typhus.

ILES, Flanks.

ILEUS, E'ileos, from ελεω, 'I twist or contract.' Colica Ileus seu spasmod'ica, Enterel'esia, Enterel'esia, Ileus spasmod'icus, Chordap'nia, Passio Il'aca, Iliac or Ileac Passio, Vol'ulus, Ile'osis, Miseric'or' mei, Convul'sulus, Tormentum, Interceptio Intestini'rum, Enterosten'osis volulus, (F.) Colique de Misericorde, C. de Miseric'oré. A disease, characterized by deep-seated pain of the abdomen, stercoraceous vomiting, and obstinate constipation. It is occasioned by hernia or other obstruction to the passage of the faeces through a part of the intestinal canal, Enterosten'osis. The term Ileus has been applied to various affections—to simple nervous colic, intussusception, and to strangulation of the small intestine, &c. Various remedies have been employed;—the majority for the purpose of procuring alvine evacuations,—as purgatives, in draught, pill, or glyster; suppositories, tobacco glysters; pure mercury; leaden bullets; antispasmodics and narcotics; blisters to the epigastrium; ice by the mouth, or injected into the rectum. Some of these have, occasionally, succeeded,—especially the tobacco glyster, and ice to the tumour, where the disease has been occasioned by strangulated hernia. It is very dangerous.

ILEUS FLAVUS, Icterus—i. Icteroides, Icterus—i. Inflammatorius, Enteritis.

ILEX AQUIFOOLIUM. The systematic name of the Common Holly, Aquifolium, Agrifolium, ποικυς of the ancients [?], (Prov.) Hollen, (Sc.) Holly, Holene, (F.) Honr, H. commun ou Chêne vert. Ord. Aquifoliacæ. The leaves of this plant have been recommended as tonic, astringent, and antiseptic, and have been prescribed in atonic gout, intermittents, dyspepsia, &c. Rhicine, the active principle, has also been advised. It is obtained by dissolving the alcoholic extract of the leaves of the holly in water, and successively treating it with the subacetate of lead, sulphuric acid, and carbonate of lime. The filtered and evaporated product is then dissolved in alcohol; and the mixture filtered and evaporated in shallow vessels.

ILEX CASSINE, Ilex vomitoria.

ILEX MAJOR. From the berries of this tree, called by the Spaniards Bellotas, a juice may be expressed, which forms a slightly astringent emulsion with water, and has been recommended by some Spanish physicians in humid cough, hæmoptysis, &c.

ILEX MATE, Ilex paraguensis.

ILEX OPA'CA, American Holly, grows throughout the Atlantic portion of the United States. It is said to possess the same properties as the European variety.

ILEX PARAGUENSIS, Viburnum laevigatum seu Cassina' des, Cassin'ne Perou'gu seu Carolinia'na, I. Maté; a native of Paraguay. It affords the celebrated Mattee, or Maté, Folio Apalachinæ seu Perou'gæ, which is drunk in place of the Chinese tea by the people of Paraguay. By M. Lenoble, of Montevideo, the maté is referred to Psora'lea glandulosa.

ILEX VOMITORIA, I. Cass'ne, Cassi'na, Daboon holly, Apalachin' Gallis, South-Sea Tea, Evergreen Cassin'ne, Cassac'na, Yupun, Yupun, (F.) Thé des Apalaches, Honr Apalachine, Apalachine, Thé de la Mer du Sud. A tree, indigenous in the southern parts of the United States.

The leaves, when dried, are aromatic, stimulant, stomachic, and expectorant, and are used as a tea. When fresh, they are emetic and cathartic.

ILIA, Flanks.

ILIAC, Il'acus, Il'ial, (F.) Iliaque, from Iliac, 'the flanks.' Relating to, or connected with, the flanks.

ILIAC ARTERIES, Arte'ria Il'iacæ. This term has been given to several arteries. The Primary Iliacs, (F.) A. Iliques primitives,—Pelvicurales, (Ch.) arise from the bifurcation of the aorta, opposite the body of the 4th lumbar vertebra, and descend, in a divergent manner; until, opposite the sacro-iliac symphysis, they divide into two considerable trunks,—the internal Iliac or hypogastric (which see), and the external Iliac—Portion Iliaque de la crurale, (Ch.) This proceeds from the sacro-iliac juncture as far as the crural arch, when it assumes the name Femoral Artery. Before passing under the arch it gives off two pretty considerable branches,—the Epigastric, and the Circumflexa Ilii. This last, which is called, also, anterior Iliac by some anatomists,—Circonflexe de l'Ilium (Ch.); leaves the external iliac at the crural arch. It ascends along the outer edge of the iliacus muscle, and divides into two branches—an internal and an external.

The Iliaca Inter'na Minor seu Ilio lumbalis is a small artery, which sometimes arises from the hypogastric; at others, from the beginning of the gluteal. It is sent, chiefly, to the psoas and iliacus internus muscles.

ILIAC CREST, Crista Il'ii, is the upper margin of the ilium. (F.) Crête Iliaque. It is very thick, and curved like the Italic S. It affords attachment to the broad muscles of the abdomen.

ILIAC FOSSEÆ are two in number; the internal, the depression presented by the ilium on its interior, and at the upper part in which the Iliacus internus is lodged:—and the external, an excavation on the outer surface of the same bone, occupied by the Glutei muscles.

ILIAC MUSCLE, INTERNAL, Il'iacus internus Muscle, Iliacus, Iliaco-trochantérien (Ch.); Femur mœventium septimum, Iliac muscle, is situate in the fossa iliaca, and at the anterior and superior part of the thigh. It is broad, radiated, triangular; and is attached, above, to the two upper thirds of the fossa iliaca, and to the internal part of the iliac crest:—below, it terminates by a tendon, which is common to it and the psoas magnus, and is fixed into the lesser trochanter. When this muscle contracts, it bends the pelvis on the thigh, and conversely. It is also a rotator of the thigh outwards, and prevents the trunk from falling backwards.

ILIAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILIAC REGIONS, Regio'nes il'iacæ, Iuan'ia, are the sides of the abdomen between the ribs and the hips.

ILIAC SPINES, Spinous Proc'esses of the Ilium, are four in number. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. Of the anterior, one is superior. It bounds the crista ilii anteriorly, and affords origin to the sartorius muscle. The other is inferior, and receives the tendinous origin of the rectus femoris.

The two Posterior Iliac Spines are divided, like the anterior, into superior and inferior. They afford insertion to strong ligaments, which unite the ilium with the sacrum.

ILIAO-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Iliacus internus.

ILIACUS, I. internus—i. Externus, Pyramidalis.

ILIADUS, Ilech.

ILIAL, Iliac.

ILIASTER, Ilech.

ILIASTRUM, Ilech.

ILINGOS, Vertigo.

ILIO. In composition, relating or appertaining to the ilium.

ILIO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Aponévrosi-fémoral, Fascia lata musculo—i. Costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Cresti-tibial, Sartorius—i. Femoral, Coxo-femoral—i. Hypogastricus (nervus), Musculo-cutaneous nerve, superior—i. Inguinal, Musculo-cutaneous nerve, inferior—i. Ischii-trochantérien, Gluteus minimus—i. Lombo-costo-abdominal, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Lumbalis, Ileo-lumbar, see Iliac arteries—i. Lumbi-costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Lumbo-vertebral ligament, Ileo-lumbar-ligament.

ILIO-PECTINE'A, Ileo-pectineal, belonging to the ilium and to the pecten or pubis.

ILIO-PECTINEAL EMINENCE is so called from being formed by the junction of the ramus of the ilium with that of the pubis. It affords attachment to the psoas minor.

ILIO-PECTINEA LIN'E'A, Linea innominata, is the projecting line or ridge of the ilium and pubis, which forms part of the brim of the pelvis.

ILIO-PRÉTIBIAL, Sartorius.

ILIO-PSOÏ'TIS, from Ilium, 'the ilium,' ψοα, 'the loins,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ilium and psoas muscle.

ILIO-PUBO-COSTO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus externus abdominis—i. Rotundus, Rectus femoris—i. Sacral, Sacro-iliac—i. Sacral articulation, Sacro-iliac articulation—i. Sacro-fémoral, Gluteus major—i. Scrotal nerve, Musculo-cutaneous, superior—i. Trochantérien, Gluteus medius—i. Trochantérien petit, Gluteus minimus.

IL'ION, Il'ium, Il'enn, Hunch bone. The largest of the three bones which constitute the os innominatum in the fœtus and child. It was probably so called from its seeming to support the intestine ilion; or, perhaps, because its crest is curved upon itself, from ελειω, 'I twist,' 'I roll.' This portion of the os innominatum is usually so called in the adult. The posterior surface is called Dorsum, the internal Venter. The upper semicircular edge is the Crista or Spine, at the anterior part of which is the anterior and superior spinous process; and, below, the anterior and inferior spinous process. At the back part of the spine are two spinous processes, the posterior and superior, and posterior and inferior. See Iliac.

ILITHY'IA, Ειλιθια, Luc'ina, Juno Lucina. The goddess who presided over parturient females, with the Greeks and Romans.

ILLUM, Ileum, Ilium.

IL'KESTON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Ilkeston is in Derbyshire, England, about eight miles from Nottingham. The water contains carbonates of lime and soda, chloride of calcium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of soda, carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid, and a little iron.

ILL, Sick.

ILLACRYMATIO, Epiphora.

ILLECEBRUM, Sedum—i. Major, Sedum telephium.

ILLECEBRUM POLYGONOIDES, Achyrantes repens—i. Vermicularis, Sedum.

ILLEGITIMATE, Illegit'imus, from il, in, 'negation or opposition,' and legitimus, 'legitimate;' from lex, legis, 'law.' Bastard. That which is contrary to law; which has not the conditions required by law, as an illegitimate birth—one out of wedlock; base-born, love-begot, love-child.

ILLEGITIMATE or BASTARD is also applied to diseases—as fevers, whose progress is anomalous. See False.

ILLI, see Strabismus.

ILLIC'IUM ANISA'TUM, from illicere, 'to allure.' Yellow-flowered Anise, Aniseed Tree, Star Anise, Anisum stellatum seu Sinen'se, Semen Budian, (F.) Anis de la Chine, A. étoilé, Badraue. Ord. Magnoliaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The seeds are used like the aniseed. The same tree is supposed to furnish the aromatic bark, called Cortex Ani'si Stellati, Cortex Lavala.

Illicium Anisatum is said to furnish much of the so called Oil of Anise, used in the United States.

ILLIC'IUM FLORIDA'NUM, Florida Anise Tree, Star Anise, Sweet Laurel. An evergreen shrub, the bark, leaves, &c., of which have a spicy odour like anise, and might be used for it.

ILLIC'IUM PARVIFLO'RUM, a shrub of the hilly regions of Georgia and Carolina, has a flavour closely resembling that of saffras root.

ILLIDES, see Strabismus.

ILLINIPIO, Inunction.

ILLISIO, Entblasis.

ILLITIO, Inunction.

ILLITUS, Inunction.

ILLNESS, Disease—i. Monthly, see Menses.

ILLOS, Eye, see Strabismus.

ILLO'SIS, Il'o'is, from λλας, 'squinting.' Distortion of the eyes. Strabismus.

ILLUSIO SENSUS, Hallucination.

ILLUSION, Hallucination.

ILLUTAMENTUM, see Illutatio.

ILLUTA'TIO, from il, in, 'upon,' and lutum, 'mud.' A word used, by the ancients, for the act of covering any part of the body with mud,—illutamentum—with therapeutical views.

ILOSIS, Illosis.

IM, in composition, generally means the same as in; occasionally, however, it has the privative sense of un.

IMAGINA'TION, Imaginat'io, Figura'tio, Phantasia, Diama'ma, from imago, imaginis, 'image.' The faculty of forming in the mind an assemblage of images and combinations of ideas which are not always in connexion with external objects.

IMBALSAMATIO, Embalming.

IMBECILITY, Imbecillitas, Stupiditas, Hebetudo animi, Oligopsychia, (F.) Imbecillité. Weakness, especially of the intellect; incoherency; Imbecillitas mentis.

IMBECILLIS, Infirm.

IMBECILLITAS INGENI, Idiocy, Imbecility—i. Mentis, Idiocy, Imbecility—i. Venetriculi, Gasterasthenia.

IMBELLIS AD VENEREM, Frigid.

IMBERBIS, Imberbus, Agene'us, Apogon, from im, in, 'negation,' and barba, 'beard.' One devoid of beard.

IMBITIO, Absorption, Imbibition.

IMBIT'IION, Imbit'io, Emp'osis, Aspirat'io, from imbibere (in, and bibere), 'to drink, to imbibe.' The action, by which a body becomes penetrated by a liquid. See Endosmose. Many of the phenomena of absorption are owing to imbibition.

IMBITION, DOUBLE, Endosmose.

IMBOWELLING, Exenterismus.

IMBREX NARIUM, Septum narium.

IMBRICARIA SAXATILIS, Lichen saxatilis.

IMMERSUS, Subscapularis muscle.

IMMINENCE, Imminet'ia, from immineo (im, and mineo), 'to hang over.' Staying over, or upon; impending. Some authors have designated, by this term, the period which precedes the invasion of a disease; when certain indications foretell its approach.

IMMINENCE MORBIDE, Diathesis, Predisposition.

IMMISSIO CATHETERIS, Catheterismus.

IMMISSOR, Catheter.

IMMOBILITAS, Acinesia—i. Pupillæ, Amaurosis.

IMMODERANTIA, Intemperance.

IMMODERATIO, Intemperance.

IMMOVABLE APPARATUS, see Apparatus, immovable.

IMMUTANS, Alterative.

IMPACTED, Wedged.

IMPACT'ION, Impact'io, from impingere (in, and pangere, pectum, 'to drive in'), 'to strike against,' 'a collision.' A fracture of the cranium, ribs, or sternum, with depression of some of the fragments and projection of others externally. See Ecipiesma.

IMPATIENS BALSAMI'NA, Balsam weed, Touch-me-not. Ord. Balsaminaceæ. This probably resembles the other species in its properties.

IMPATIENS FULVA and I. PAL'LIDA, Touch-me-not, Jewel weed, Balsam weed, Slippers, Callandine, Quick-in-the-hand, Wealth'ereocks, Snipe-weed; called from the sudden bursting of the pods when touched. Indigenous plants, having tender, juicy, almost transparent stems, and yellow flowers, which appear in July and August. It is found in low, moist ground, in every part of the Union. The properties are probably the same as those of IMPATIENS NOLI-ME-TAN'GERE of Europe, which has an acrid taste, and acts as an emetic, cathartic, and diuretic.

IMPATIENTIA VESICÆ, Cysterethismus.

IMPEDIMENTUM, Emphragma.

IMPÉRATOIRE, Imperatoria.

IMPERATORIA, I. Ostruthium, Selinum ostruthium seu Imperatoria, Angelica officinalis, Astruthium, Ostruthium, Astrantia, Magistron'tia, Masterwort, (old F.) Austruche, Impétoire. Ord. Umbelliferae. The roots of this plant were formerly considered divinum remedium. They are merely aromatic and bitter, and are not used.

IMPERATORIA SYLVESTRIS, Angelica sylvestris.

IMPERFORATE, Atretus.

IMPERFORATIO, Imperforation—i. Ani, Atresia ani adnata, Proctatresia—i. Pupillæ, Synezisis—i. Uteri, Metratria.

IMPERFORATIO, from im, 'privative,' per, 'through,' and forare, 'to bore.' Imperforatio, Atresia, Atretismus, Capetus. Absence of a natural aperture; as, of the mouth, anus, vulva, nostrils, &c. It is congenital, being dependent upon faulty conformation.

IMPERFORATION DE L'ANUS, Atresia ani adnata.

IMPERIAL. A pleasant, cooling drink, formed of bitartrate of potassa, ℥ss; one lemon, cut into slices; white sugar, ℥ss; and water, Oij. Let the mixture stand for half an hour, and strain.

IMPETIGINOSITAS, Impetigo.

IMPETIG'INOUS, Impetiginosus, (F.) Impetiginæus. Same etymon as the next. Having the nature of, or relating to, impetigo.

IMPETIGO, from impeto, 'I invade.' Impetiginositas, Dart, Dermis, Impetio, Petigo, Ecpye'sis seu Phlysis impetigo, Lepra Squammosa, Running Scall or Tetter, Crusted, Pustular or Humid Tetter or Scall, Concrap, (F.) Dartre, D. crustacæ on croûteuse, Lèpre humide, Mélite. A word used in various acceptations. With some writers it is synonymous with itch. In others, it means a variety of herpes. Sauvages employs it as a generic term, under which he comprises syphilis, scorbuts, rachitis, elephantiasis, the itch, tinea, scrofula, &c. It forms, also, a genus in the class Cachexiæ of Cullen. In Bateman, it is the first genus of the 5th order, Pustula, and is defined—the humid or running tetter; consisting of small pustules, denominated Psyrdracia. It is unaccompanied by fever; not contagious, or communicable by inoculation. He has five species:—the I. figurata, I. sparsa, I. erysipelatoïdes, I. scabida, and I. rodens. See Psoriasis.

IMPETIGO EXCORTICATIVA, Ichthyosis—i. Figuratâ, Porrigo lupinosa—i. Pellagra, Pellagra—i. Ulcerata, Zerna.

IMPETUM FACIENS, Enormon.

IMPETUS, Impetigo, Paroxysm.

IMPLACENTAL, see Placenta.

IMPLICATIONES RETICULARES NERVORUM, Plexus nervorum.

IMPLICITI MORBI, Implicati seu complecti Morbi, from im, 'in,' and plico, 'to fold.' Diseases, which exist in an organ; and produce, concurrently, disorders in other organs.

IMPLUVIUM, Embrocation, Bath, shower.

IMPOSTHUME, Abscess.

IMPOTENCE, Acrati'a, Impotentia, I. generandi, Agene'sia, Agene'sis, Ign'e'cia seu Ignor'itas partium genitalium, (F.) Impuissance; from im, 'privative,' and potens, 'able.' Loss of power over one or more of the members. Commonly, it means want of sexual vigour; incapacity for copulation; and chiefly on the part of the male. Astys'ia, Astyp'h'ia, Asyno'dia, Adynamia viri'lis. It has, also, been used synonymously with sterility. Impotence may be absolute or relative, constitutional or local, direct or indirect, permanent or temporary.

IMPOTENTIA, Adynamia, Impotence—i. Generandi, Impotence.

IMPOVERISHED, Effe'tus, Depauper'dia, (F.) Appaurri. 'Having become poor;' originally from (L.) pauper, (F.) paovere, 'poor.' The Humorists applied this epithet to a humour, deprived of a part of its constituents, and particularly to the blood. This fluid was considered to be impoverished when it was pale, without the proper consistence, and abounding in serum. It was, on the contrary, rich, in their opinion, when of a scarlet colour; possessing consistence; when it coagulated promptly, and the quantity of serum, compared with that of the clot, was by no means considerable.

IMPRÆGNATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPREGNATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPRESSIBILITY, see Sensibility—i. Great, Hyperæsthesis.

IMPRES'SION, Impres'sio (in, and premere, pressum, 'to press'), Pros'bolê, (F.) Empreinte. A more or less deep indentation which certain organs seem to make on others. Inequalities observable on the bones, which appear to be made by the subjacent organs.

IMPRES'SIONS DIGITAL, Impressio'nes digita'tæ cranii, Fossæ digita'les, are the depressions of various forms, observable at the inner surface of the cranium, which look, at first view, as if they were made with the fingers.

IMPRESSIONABILITÉ, see Sensibility.

IMPU'BER, Impu'bes, Impu'bis, Ane'bus, Cappilla'tus, from im, 'negation,' and puber, 'at the age of puberty.' (F.) Impubere. One who has not attained the age of puberty.

IMPUBES, Impuber.

IMPUDICUS, see Digitus.

IMPUISSANCE, Impotence.

IMPULSE, DIAS'TOLIC, Impuls'us diastol'icus, Back stroke of the heart. A jog or stroke which has been termed the 'back stroke,' felt at the end of each pulsation, and which would seem to be owing to the refilling of the ventricles.

IMPULSE OF THE HEART, see Heart.

IMPULSION DU CŒUR, see Heart.

IMPURITATES ALVINÆ, Fæces.

INANIA, Iliac regions.

INANITIATED, see Inanitation.

INANITIA'TION, Inanitia'tio, same etymon as the next. The act of being exhausted for want of nourishment. One so exhausted is said to be inanit'iated.

INANIT'I'ON, Inanit'io, Inan'itas, from inavire, inanitum, 'to empty.' Cen'sis. Exhaustion for want of nourishment. To die from inanition is to die from exhaustion.

INAPPETENTIA, Anorexia, Dysorexia.

INARTICULATIO, Enarthrosis.

INAURA'TION, Inaura'tio, from in, and aurum, 'gold.' The gilding of pills or boluses.

INCANTAMENTUM, Charm.

INCANTA'TION, Incanta'tio, Incantamen'tum, Ep'ode, from in, and cantare, cantatum, 'to sing,'—for example, a magical song. A mode of curing diseases by charms, &c., defended by Paracelsus, Van Helmont, and others.

INCARCERA'TIO, Chatonnement, Incarceration—i. Intestinorum interna, Enterenphraxis—i. Intestinorum, Enteropristole.

INCARCERA'TION, Incarcera'tio, from in, 'in,' and carcer, 'prison.' Hernia is said to be 'incarcerated,' Hernia incarcerata, when, owing to constriction about the neck of the hernial sac or elsewhere, it cannot be reduced with facility. Incarceration is sometimes used in the same sense as strangulation.

INCARNA'NS, Incaruati'vus, Sarco'ticus, Stoll'ticus, Plero'ticus, Anaplero'ticus, Sarco'tic, from in, and caro, carnis, 'flesh.' Medicines, which were fancied to promote the regeneration of the flesh. Certain bandages and sutures have, also, been so called.

INCARNA'TIO, Incarnation—i. Unguim, Onychogryphosis.

INCARNA'TION, Incarna'tio, same etymon. Growth of flesh or granulations.

INCARNATUS, Carneous.

INCEN'DIUM, from incendere (in, and candere), 'to burn.' Pyrcæ'a, πυρκαϊα, Cousis, Phlogosis. A burning fever or any burning heat.—Incendium febrile, Incensio.—Willis. Inflammation, Phlegmon.

INCENDIUM SPONTANEUM, Combustion, human.

INCENSIO, Incendium.

INCENTIVUM, Stimulant.

INCERA'TION, Incera'tio, Encero'sis, from in, and cera, 'wax.' The act of incorporating wax with some other body; or, rather, the operation whose object is to communicate to a dry substance the consistence of wax.

INCERNIC'ULUM, from incernere (in, and cernere), 'to sift.' A strainer or sieve.

INCESSIO, Bath, half, Semicupium.

INCESSUS, Walking.

INCIDENT'IA, from incidere, incisum (in, and cædere), 'to cut.' (F.) Incisifs. This name was formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the property of cutting thick or coagulated humours. The fixed alkalies, hydrosulphurets of alkalies, sulphurous water, &c., were considered to belong to this class.

INCINERATION, Incinera'tio, Cinera'tion, Cinefactio, from in, and cinis, cineris, 'ashes.' In pharmacy, a process by which animal or vegetable substances are reduced to ashes.

INCINCTA, Pregnant.

INCISIFS, Incidentia.

INCISIO, Cut, Incision—i. Simplex, Haplotomia.

INCIS'ION, Incis'io, En'copê, Incis'ura, Incisus, Tomê, (F.) Taillade. Same etymon as Incidentia. A methodical division of soft parts with a cutting instrument.

INCIS'IVE, Incis'ivus, Inciso'rius, Fossa incisiva seu myrtifor'mis, is a depression in the superior maxillary bone, above the incisor teeth.

INCISIVE BONE, Intermaxillary bone—i. Canal, see Palatine canals.

INCISIVE NERVE, Nervus incisivus. A branch of the inferior dental nerve, which supplies the inferior teeth.

INCISIVE TEETH, Incisor Teeth, Dentis incisores seu tomici seu ctenes seu dichastres seu gelasivi seu primores seu rasorii. The teeth which occupy the anterior part of the upper and lower jaws are so called, because they are used for cutting the food in the manner of cutting instruments. The two middle incisors of the upper jaw are, at times, called Butter teeth.

INCISIVUS (MUSCULUS), Levator labii superioris proprius — i. Inferior, Levator labii inferioris — i. Lateralis et pyramidalis, Levator labii superioris alaeque nasi — i. Medius, Depressor alae nasi.

INCISOR TEETH, Incisive teeth.

INCISORIUM, Tomion. An operating table. A scalpel.

INCISORIA, Incisive.

INCISURA, Echancure, Incision — i. Crucialis, Crucial Incision — i. Ichiadica Major, Sciatic notch, greater — i. Ichiadica Minor, Sciatic notch, lesser — i. Lienalis, Hilus lienalis — i. Renalis, Hilus renalis — i. Scapularis, Notch, scapular — i. Septi, see Ventricles of the brain.

INCISURA TRAGICA, Notch of the Concha. A wide, deep and rounded notch, which separates the tragus from the antitragus.

INCISURES DE SANTORINI, Santorini, fissures of.

INCISUS, Incision.

INCITABILITAS, Irritability.

INCITAMENTUM, Stimulus.

INCITANS, Stimulant.

INCITATIO, Stimulation.

INCITO-MOTOR, (F.) Incito-moteur. An epithet, applied to an action the reverse of excitomotor: as in the ease of muscular motion, which commences in the nervous centres and excites the muscles to contraction.

INCLAVATIO, Gomphosis, see Wedged.

INCLINATIO, Decline — i. Cæli, Climate.

INCLUSION, MONSTROSITY BY, Emboîtement.

INCLUSUS, see Wedged.

INCOCTUS, see Crudity.

INCOHERENCE, Incohérence, (F.) Anacoluthie, Récusserie; from in, 'negation, co, con, cum, 'with,' and hærecere, 'to stick.' Want of dependence of one part on another. The condition of the mental manifestations in dementia, &c.

INCOMPATIBLE, from in, 'negation,' and competere, 'to agree.' A substance, which cannot be prescribed with another, without interfering with its chemical composition or medicinal activity.

INCONTINENTIA, from in, 'negation,' and continere, 'I contain;' Anepischesis. 'Incontinence.' 'Inability to retain the natural evacuation.' Abuse of the pleasures of love.

INCONTINENTIA ALVI, Diarrhoea — i. Urinae, Enuresis, Scorærasia.

INCORPORATION, Incorporatio, Corporatio, Emomatosis, Metemomatosis, from in, and corpus, corporis, 'a body.' An operation, by which medicines are mixed with soft or liquid bodies, in order to give them a certain consistence. Also, the thorough admixture of various substances.

INCRASSANTIA, Incrassantia, Inviscantia, Spissantia, Eryptica, Condensantia, Pachyptica, Pycnotica, Pycnicantia, from in, and crassus, 'thick.' Medicines which were formerly believed to possess the power of thickening the humours, when too thin. All mucilaginous substances were so regarded.

INCRASSATIVA, Inerassantia.

INCREASE, Incrementum, Auctio, Auxesis, from in, and crecere, 'to grow.' (F.) Accroissement. Augmentation of the size or weight of a body, by the application of new molecules around those which already exist.

INCREMENTUM, Augmentation, Growth, Increase.

INCRUCIATIO, Deenssation.

INCRUSTATION, Incrustatio, from in, and crusta, 'a crust;' Com'osis. The act of forming a crust on the surface of a body, as well as the crust itself. Also, the calcareous deposits or cartilaginous plates, which sometimes form in organs.

INCUBATIO, Incubation.

INCUBATION, Incubatio, Incubitio, Incubitum, from in, and incubare, (in, and incubare,) 'to lie upon.' This word, which is used in natural history for the sitting of birds upon their eggs, is employed, figuratively, in medicine, for the period that elapses between the introduction of a morbid principle into the animal economy and the invasion of the disease.

INCUBITIO, Incubation.

INCUBITUS, Incubation.

INCUBO, Incubus.

INCUBUS. Same etymon. In'cubo, Epialtes, Epialtes, I. nocturnus, Hypnophobia, Epilepsia nocturna, Asthma nocturnum, Paignion, Suecibus, Oneirodymia græca, Erethismus oneirodymia, Nocturna oppressio, Epibole, Babuziaris, Nightmare, Willware, Riding-hug, (Prov.) Bitch-daughter, Hella, (F.) Cauchemar, Cauchevieille, Cochemar, Oneirodymic gravitate. Same etymon. A sensation of a distressing weight at the epigastrium during sleep, and of impossibility of motion, speech, or respiration; the patient at length awaking in terror, after extreme anxiety. Nightmare is often the effect of difficult digestion or of an uneasy position of the body. At other times, it occurs in consequence of severe emotions. The sensation of suffocation was formerly ascribed to the person's being possessed, and the male spirits were called incubus—the female succubus. The disease requires no particular treatment. The causes must be avoided.

INCUBUS VIGILANTUM, Epialtes rigilantium, E. hypochondriacum, Daymare. This is produced during wakefulness; the sense of pressure being severe and extending over the abdomen; respiration frequent, laborious, and constricted; eyes fixed; sighing, deep and violent; intellect undisturbed.

INCUNABULA, Swathing clothes.

INCUNEATIO, Gomphosis, see Wedged.

INCURABLE, Incurabilis, Remediless, Irremediabile, Insanabilis, Analthes, Anacesus, Atherapeutus, from in, negative, and curo, euro. Not susceptible of cure;—applied to both patients and diseases.

INCURIA, Aecidia.

INCURSUS ARTERIARUM, Pulse.

INCURVATIO, Gryposis.

INCUS, genitive, Incudis, (in, and culo, 'I hammer,') 'an anvil.' Amou, Os incudis sin'ile, Ossiculum Incudi seu molaris denti comparatum, (F.) Enclume. One of the small bones of the ear, so called from its fancied resemblance to a smith's anvil. It is situate in the cavity of the tympanum, between the malleus and orbicular. Its body is articulated with the malleus; its horizontal ramus, which is the shortest, corresponds with the entrance of the mastoid cells; and its vertical ramus is articulated with the os orbicular. The incus is composed of a compact tissue, and is developed from a single point of ossification.

INDEX, Dig'itus index seu secundus seu salu- tator'ins, Demonstrator, Indicator, Indicator'ins, L'chanois, Deic'ticos, from indicare, 'to point out.' The forefinger, index finger. See Digitus.

INDIAN ARROW WOOD, see Euonymus—i. Paint, Hydrastis Canadensis—i. Physic, Gillenia trifoliata—i. Physic, small-flowered, Gillenia stipulacea.

INDIAN SPRINGS, see Georgia, Mineral waters of.

INDIA'NA, MINERAL WATERS OF. A medicinal spring, near Jeffersonville, is much frequented. Its waters are strongly impregnated with sulphur and iron.

INDICANT, Indicans, Endeic'ticos, (F.) Indicatif. Same etymon as index. Any thing which, in the course of a disease or in what precedes or accompanies it, concurs in pointing out the means to be used for its cure.

INDICATIF, Indicant.

INDICATING DAYS, Dies Indices seu Indicato'rii seu Indican'tes seu Contemplan'tes, (F.) Jours indicateurs. Hippocrates and others have thus called the middle day of the septenary; because they imagined, that indications were sometimes given then of the crisis which would occur in the last day of the septenary.

INDICATION, Indicatio, Accusatio, Dela'tio, Endeix'is, Endex'is, Bo'themat'icm Seme'lon. The object proposed in the employment of any means which are had recourse to for the cure of disease. It may also be defined—the manifestation afforded by the disease itself of what is proper to be done for its removal.

INDICATOR, Extensor proprius indicis, see Digitus, and Index.

INDICUM, Indigo.

INDIGEN COLOR, Indigo.

INDIGENCE, Want.

INDIG'ENOUS, Indig'ena, 'Inborn.' From indu, obsolete for 'in,' and geno, obsolete for gigno, 'I generate.' Whatever is native in a country, in opposition to exotic; as an indigenous remedy, indigenous disease, &c.

INDIGESTION, Dyspepsia—i. Alkaline, see Dyspepsia—i. Neutral, see Dyspepsia.

INDIGITATIO, Intussusceptio.

INDIGNABUNDUS, Rectus externus oculi.

INDIGNATORIUS, Rectus externus oculi.

INDIGO, Indignum, Indicium, Indicens color, Pigmentum Indicium. A dye-stuff, in small solid masses, of a deep azure blue colour, and devoid of smell and taste. It is obtained, by a fermentative process, from Indigo'fera anil, (I. suffruticosa), I. argentea, (I. arctencl'ta seu tinctoria seu glau'ca seu colorata), and I. tinctoria seu Indicum, and is sometimes used by the apothecary for colouring certain preparations. It has likewise been administered internally, of late, in spasmodic diseases, especially in epilepsy. The dose may be at first grains, but it may be elevated to drachms.

INDIGO, FALSE, (TALL WHITE), see Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGO, FAUX, Galega officinalis—i. Weed, Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGO, WILD, Sophora tinctoria—i. Yellow, Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGOFFERA, see Indigo, Sophora tinctoria.

INDIGUM, Indigo.

INDISPOSIT'ION, Mala dispositio, Dysphor'ia, (F.) Malaise. From in, 'negation,' and disponere, dispositum, 'to put in order.' A slight functional disturbance, which may scarcely bear the name of disease. A feeling of sickness—sensus agri'tudinis; vulgarly an all-overish feeling.

INDOLENT, Indolens, from in, privative, and dolere, 'to be in pain.' Exhibiting little or no pain. An epithet particularly applied to certain tumours.

INDOLENTIA, Anodynia.

INDOLES. A natural disposition or character.

INDOLES AN'IMI. The natural disposition or character of mind.

INDOLES MORBI. The nature or character of a disease.

INDOSYNCLONUS, Beriberi.

INDUC'TIO, Ap'og'gē, from inducere, (in, and ducere, ductum, 'to lead.') A word used especially for the action of extending a plaster upon linen.

INDUCULA, Waistcoat, strait.

INDUMENTUM CORDIS, Pericardium—i. Nervorum, Neurilemma—i. Ventriculorum, Ependyma ventriculorum.

INDURANS, (in and durus, 'herd.') Scleroticens, Scleroticens, Sclerog'nicens. A medicine which hardens the parts to which is applied.

INDURATIO, Induration—i. Intestinorum, Enteropathia cancerosa—i. Maligna, Scirrhus—i. Renum, Nephrosclerosia—i. Tela cellulosa neonatorum, see Induration—i. Ventriculi scirrhosa, Gastroscirrhus.

INDURATIO, Induratio, Sclerog'nia, Sclerog'nisus, Callositas, Indurescentia, Porog'nia, Porosis, (F.) Endurissement. The hardness which supervenes, occasionally, in an inflamed part. It is one of the terminations of inflammation, and is owing to a change in the nutrition of the part.

INDURATION OF THE ARE'OLAR OR CELLULAR TISSUE, Induratio cellulosa, Induratio seu Oppilatio tela cellulosa neonatorum, Ethmophytosis, Ede'ma neonatorum, Compact Ede'ma of Infants, Cat'ochus Infantum, Sclerog'nia, Sclerog'nia, Sclerog'nia, Scleroder'ma, Cutis tensa chronica, Dermatoprisclerosia, Dermatoprisclerog'nisus, Halonit'is, Phlegmasia cellularis, Scirrhus'ca neonatorum, Sclerog'nia neonatorum, Sclerog'nia, Stipatio tela cellulosa Infantum, Skin-bound Disease, Skin-bound, Skin-tight, Hidebound, (F.) Endurissement du tissu cellulaire; (Ede'me du tissu cellulaire des nouveau-nés, Asphyxie lente des nouveau-nés, is a disease which attacks infants a few days after birth, and which Chaussier proposed to call Sclerème, from σκληρος, 'hard.'

The Induration of the areolar tissue of the adult, Sclerostenosia cutanea, has been regarded as the result of inflammation of the corium, Chorionit'is.

INDURATION OF THE BRAIN, Sclerencephalia—i. Grise, see Hepaticization.

INDURESCENTIA, Induration.

INDU'SIUM, Chitonis'cos. Strictly, 'a shirt,' 'a small tunic.' Some have so called the amnion.

INE'BRIANT, Inebrians, Phantas'ticus; from in and ebrio, 'I intoxicate.' Intoxicating. An agent that intoxicates.

INEBRIATION, Temulentia.

INE'BRIATION QUINIQUE, Quinism.

INEDIA, Fasting.

INER'TIA, from in, 'negation,' and ars, artis, 'art,' Ignavia, Ener'citas. Sluggishness, inactivity.

INER'TIA OF THE WOMB, (F.) Inertie de la matrice. The diminution and even total cessation of the contractions of the uterus during labour; as well as the species of languor into which it sometimes falls after the expulsion of the foetus.

INERTIE PAR ÉPUISEMENT, see Parturition—i. de la Matrice, Inertia of the womb.

INESIS, Cenosis.

INETHMOS, Cenosis.

IN EXTREMIS, Psychorages.

IN'FANCY, Infantia, from in, 'negation,' and fans, from fari, 'to speak.' Early childhood. Childhood; Ne'potes, Paid'ia. (F.) Eufancia. It generally includes the age from birth till the seventh year. See Age.

INFANS, Paid'ion, Ne'pios, (Sc.) Gaitling,

Gytling. (Old Eng. and Prov.) Baru; (Sc.) Bairn, (F.) Enfant. An infant, a baby, a child, one in infancy. In law, one who has not attained the age of legal capacity; which is, in general, fixed at twenty-one years.

INFANS REGENS NATUS, Nonveau-né.

INFANTIA, Infancy.

INFANTICIDE, Infanticidium, Tecuocton'ia, Child-murder, from infans, 'a child,' and cadere, 'to kill.' The murder of a child newly born, or on the point of being born. It may be perpetrated by the mother, or by some other person, either by commission, that is, in consequence of a direct voluntary act;—or by omission of those cares which are necessary for the preservation of the new-born.

INFARCTIO, Emphraxis.

INFARCTION, Emphraxis.

INFARCTUS, from in, and farcere, farctum, 'to stuff.' Emphraxis.

INFARCTUS INTESTINORUM, Enteremphraxis—i. Hæmopticus Laennecii, see Hæmoptysis—i. Lactei extremitatum, Phlegmatia dolens—i. Lienis, Splenoncus.

INFARCTUS MAMMÆ LACTEUS, Lactis concretiones, Nodi seu Thrombi lactei, Trichi'asis lactea. Knotty tumours of the female mammae, owing to the accumulation and arrest of milk in the galactophorous ducts.

INFARCTUS UTERI, Metremphraxis.

INFECTIO PURULENTA, see Pyohæmia.

INFECTION, see Contagion.

INFECTIOUS, see Contagious.

INFECUNDITY, Sterility.

INFECUNDUS, Sterile.

INFERNAL, Infer'nus; 'relating to hell.' A name applied to caustic—Lapis Infernalis—on account of its strong burning properties.

INFIBULATIO, Fibulatio, Infibulatio, Ancer'ias'anus; from fibula, 'a clasp.' (F.) Bowlement. An operation, formerly practised, which consisted in passing a ring through the prepuce, after having drawn it over the glans;—in order to prevent coition. The ancients employed infibulation with their gladiators to preserve all their strength by depriving them of venery. In the women, to preserve their chastity, the ring was passed through the labia majora.

INFILTRATION, Infiltratio, from filtrare, 'to filter.' Effusion. The passage or effusion of a fluid into the areolæ of any texture, and particularly of the areolæ membrane. The fluid effused is ordinarily the Liquor sanguinis, sound or altered—sometimes blood or pus, fæces, or urine. When infiltration of a serous fluid is general, it constitutes anasarca; when local, œdema.

INFILTRATION PURULENTE, see Hepatisation.

INFINITESIMAL, Infinitesim'us, from in, and finitus, 'limited.' Unlimited. An epithet employed by the homœopaths for their endless subdivisions of drugs;—the decillionth of a grain, for example, is "an infinitesimal dose."

INFIRM, Infirm'us, Imbecillus, Debilis, Asthænes, Hypoc'rates, from in, negative, and firmus, 'firm.' Not firm or sound; weak; feeble.

INFIRMARIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMARY, Hospital.

INFIRMATORIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMIER (F.), from infirmus, (in, negative, and firmus.) Infirma'ria, Novoc'onna, Cura'tor infirm'orum. One employed in an hospital or infirmary to take care of the sick.

INFIRMITY, Infirm'itas, Asthæ'ia, Arrhos'ia, Invale'tudo. Any disease which has become habitual, either owing to its chronic character, or its numerous relapses.

INFLAMED, (Old Eng.) Flamed, Inflamma-

tus, (F.) Enflammé, Phlogosé,—Phlogos'ed, according to some. Same etymon as inflammation. Affected with inflammation.

INFLAMMABLE AIR, Hydrogen, carburated.

INFLAMMAT'ION, Inflamma'tio, from in, and flamma, 'flame.' 'fire'; Phleg'monê, Phlog'osis, Œphlog'osis, Epi'phleg'ia, Œcap'osis, Phleg'm'asia, Canso'mia, Empres'ma, Phlog'ia, Hyperendommose (Dutrochet), Incen'dium, Hyperhæmatis'osis, Hyperæ'mia acti'va, Phlebotom'osis ephrac'tica, (F.) Angi'te, is so called in consequence of the acute or burning pain felt in a part affected with it. An irritation in a part of the body is occasioned by some stimulus;—owing to which the blood flows into the capillary vessels in greater abundance than natural, and those vessels become over-dilated and enfeebled; whence result pain, redness, heat, tension, and swelling; symptoms which appear in greater or less severity, according to the structure, vital properties, and functions of the part affected, and its connexion with other parts, as well as according to the constitution of the individual.

Simple accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the part is hyperæmia, not inflammation. The latter requires, in addition, altered nutrition either of the vessels themselves, or of the surrounding tissues, or of both.

The inflammations of the areolar and serous membranes greatly agree;—and those of the mucous and skin; the former being more active, and constituting the phlegmonous variety;—the latter, the erythematic or erysipelutous. Of this variety is the diffusive inflammation produced by morbid poisons,—as during dissection, where solutions of continuity exist on the fingers of the operator. It is seen, too, in workers in bone, and hence has been called bone fever. Preparatory to the turning of bones, it is customary to macerate them in water. The fluid soon becomes putrid, and if the hands be kept in it diffusive inflammation results. Inflammation may end by resolution, suppuration, gangrene, adhesion, effusion, or induration. Each of the inflammations of internal organs has received a name according to the organ affected;—as, gastritis, cephalitis, enteritis, hepatitis, &c. Besides the above inflammations, it has been considered, that there is an instinctive kind established for the union of parts which have been divided, whether the union takes place immediately, or by the aid of an intermediate body. This is the adhesive inflammation of some; but it may well be questioned whether inflammation is ever desirable in such cases. See Adhesion, Callus, Cicatrix. Broussais considered that the term inflammation should include every local exaltation of the organic movements which is sufficiently great to disturb the harmony of the functions, and disorganize the texture in which it is situate. He farther extended the name inflammation to irritations which do not induce disorganization of the textures, and which had been previously, and are still, called fevers.

Examination of the blood drawn always exhibits an increase of the fibrinous elements—the average proportion of which, in healthy blood, is about three in the thousand. In inflammation, it at times rises as high as ten. In fevers unaccompanied with inflammation, the proportion is natural, or below the average; but whenever inflammation supervenes, it immediately rises.

External inflammation is easily detected by the characters already mentioned:—internal, by disturbance of function and pain upon pressure; but the last sign is often not available. Both forms require the removal of all irritation, and the reduction of vascular excitement and nervous irritability; hence, blood-letting—local and general—sedatives, refrigerants, and counter-irritants become valuable remedies in almost all cases of inflammation.

Inflammation is not always of the active kind. There is a form, Inflammat'io deb'ilis, which occurs in low conditions of the system, and in broken down constitutions, which, like many forms of chronic inflammation, requires a stimulant, rather than a sedative, mode of treatment.

INFLUENZA, The Italian for 'Influence.' Influenza Europæa, Influentia, Catar'rhus epidem'icus, C. a contagio, Feb'ris catarrh'alis epidem'ica, Rheuma epidem'icum, Morbus Vervec'imus seu Catar'rh'alis seu Ariet'is, Syn'ochus seu Dest'ux'io catarrh'alis, Cephalal'gia contagio'su (epidemics of the 16th and 17th centuries): (F.) Tac, Quinte, Florion, Coqueluche, Baroquette, Générale, Grippe, Follette, Grenade, Coquette, Cocote, Petite Paste, Petit Convri, Allure, Ludendo, Fièvre catarrhale épidémique; Influence, Epidémic catarrh. A severe form of catarrh occurring epidemically, and generally affecting a number of persons in a community. See Catarrh, epidemic. Gluge, from his investigations considers that the following is the chronological order of the return of the influenza:—14th century, 1323, 1326—15th century, 1410, 1411, 1414—16th century, 1510, 1557, 1562, 1574, 1580, and 1593—17th century, 1658, 1669, 1675, 1693—18th century, 1708, 1712, 1729, 1732, 1733, 1742, 1743, 1761, 1762, and 1775—19th century, 1800, 1803, 1831, and 1833. To these may be added 1837, and 1843.

INFLUENZA EUROPEA, Influenza.

INFLUENZOID, Influenzoides. An expressive but hybridous compound: from influenza, and oides, 'resemblance.' Resembling influenza.—Dr. T. Thompson.

INFORMITAS, Deformation.

INFORTUNUM, Contraffissura.

INFRA-ATLOIDÆUS, Sub-atloïdæus.

INFRA-AXOIDÆUS, Sub-axoidæus.

INFRA-COSTALES, see Intercostal museles.

INFRA-MAXILLARIS, Sub-maxillary.

INFRAMAXILLOSTERNODYMIA, Cephalosomatodymia.

INFRA-ORBITAR, Sub-orbitar.

INFRAPUBIAN LIGAMENT, Triangular ligament.

INFRA-SCAPULARIS, Subscapularis.

INFRA-SPINALIS, Infra-spinatus.

INFRA-SPINATUS, Infra-spinatus, from infra, 'beneath,' and spina, 'spine.' Situate beneath the spine of the scapula.

INFRA-SPINA'TA FOSSA, (F.) Fosse sous-épineuse. A large excavation on the posterior surface of the scapula, beneath its spine. It is filled by the INFRA-SPINATUS Muscle, Grand Scapulo trachitèrien, Suprascapularis inferior (Ch.), (F.) Sous-épineux, which is broad, flat, and triangular. It is attached, by its base, to the three inner quarters of the fossa; and is inserted, by a long tendon, into the middle part of the great tuberosity of the os humeri (Trochitèr). It turns the arm outwards, and, when the arm is elevated, carries it backwards.

INFRINGENS, Corrigent.

INFUNDIBULUM, (in, and fundere, fundum, 'to pour out.') A Funnel, Tritatorium, Chonac, Chomac, (F.) Entonnoir,—of which various kinds are employed in pharmaceutical operations. A name, given to many parts which, more or less, resemble a funnel. See Proventriculus. It is particularly appropriated to the following organs:—

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE BRAIN, Infundibulum seu Pelvis seu Chonac seu Cyathus seu Scyphus seu Concha seu Lacina seu Embolium seu Aquaductus seu Labium seu Concauitas conchularis seu Processus orbicularis Cer'ebri, (F.) Entonnoir du ventricule moyen du cerveau, Tige Pituitaire, Tige sub-sphénoïdale. A depression in the inferior paries of the middle ventricle, above the pituitary gland. It was, anciently, regarded as a canal by which the fluid, collected in the ventricles of the brain, was evacuated, and poured into the nasal fosse.

INFUNDIBULUM CEREBRI, I. of the Brain.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE COCHLEA, I. Coch'leæ, Scyphus Vienssen'ii seu auditorius, Cucullus, Cannalis Scala'rum communis. This, with the modiolus, forms the nucleus around which the gyri of the cochlea pass. It is an imperfect funnel, the apex of which is common with that of the modiolus; and the base is covered with the apex of the cochlea, termed Cu'pola.

In Surgery, infundibula or funnels are used to direct steam or vapours; to conduct the actual cautery to certain morbid parts, &c.

INFUNDIBLEM OF THE ETHMOID BONE, OR OF THE NASAL FOSSE. One of the anterior cells of that bone, which is broad and expanded above, and narrow below; opening, above, into the frontal sinus; below, into the anterior part of the middle meatus of the nasal fosse.

INFUNDIBLEM OF THE HEART, Conus arteriosus—i. of the Kidney, see Calix—i. Lacrymale, Lachrymal Sac—i. Tubarium Fallopii, see Tubc, Falloppian—i. Ventriculi, Cesophagus.

INFUSE, Infusion.

INFUSION, Infusio, Eu'chymia, from infundere (in, and fundere, fundum), 'to pour in,' 'to introduce.' A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in pouring a hot or cold fluid upon a substance whose medical virtues it is desired to extract. Infusio is, also, used for the product of this operation. (F.) Infusio, Infusel. In Surgery, infusion—Chirurgia infusoria, Art clymatica nova—is the act of introducing into the veins medicinal substances, by aid of an instrument called Infusor. See Infusoir. This mode of introducing medicines was called Art infusoria.

INFUSION OF ANGUSTURA, Infusum Cuspariæ—i. of Bark, Infusum cinchonæ—i. of Buchu, Infusum Diosmæ—i. of Calumba, Infusum calumbæ—i. of Cascarilla, Infusum cascarillæ—i. of Catechu, Infusum catechu compositum—i. of Cayenne pepper, Infusum capsici—i. of Chamomile, Infusum anthemidis—i. of Cinchona, Infusum cinchonæ—i. of Cloves, Infusum caryophyllorum—i. of Cusparia, Infusum cuspariæ—i. of Dandelion, Infusum Taraxaci—i. of Foxglove, Infusum digitalis—i. of Gentian, compound, Infusum gentianæ compositum—i. of Ginger, Infusum Zingiberis—i. of Hops, Infusum humuli—i. of Horseradish, compound, Infusum armoraciæ compositum—i. of Linseed, Infusum lini compositum—i. of Matico, Infusum matico—i. of Mint, compound, Infusum menthæ compositum—i. of Orange-peel, compound, Infusum aurantii compositum—i. of Parcira Brava, Infusum Pareiræ—i. of Pinkroot, Infusum spigeliæ—i. of Quassia, Infusum quassiæ—i. of Rhatany, Infusum Krameriæ—i. of Rhubarb, Infusum rhei—i. of the Rose, Infusum rosæ compositum—i. of Sarsaparilla, Infusum sarsaparillæ—i. of Sassafras pith, Infusum sassafras medullæ—i. of Seneca, Infusum Senegæ—i. of Senna, Infusum sennæ compositum—i. of Simaruba, Infusum simarubæ—i. of Slippery elm, Infusum ulmi—i. of Thoroughwort, Infusum eupatorii—i. of Tobacco, Infusum tabaci—i. of Valerian, Infusum valerianæ—i. of Virginia snakeroot, Infusum serpentariæ—i. of Wild cherry, Infusum pruni Virginianæ.

INFUSOIR (F.), Infusor. An instrument for injecting medicinal substances into the veins. It was a kind of funnel, the elongated apex of which was stopped by a metallic rod, which could be withdrawn when the apex was introduced into a vein.

INFUSUM, Eu'chyma. The product of an infusion.

INFUSUM ACACIÆ CATECHU, I. catechu compositum—i. Amarum vinosum, Vinum gentianæ compositum—i. of Angustura, I. cuspariæ.

INFUSUM ANTHEMIDIS, Hydrochomaimellum, Infusio of Chamomile. (Anthemid. flor. \mathfrak{z} ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for ten minutes in a covered vessel, and strain.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ j to $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ iss.

INFUSUM ARMORACIÆ COMPOSITUM, I. Armoraciæ (Ph. U. S.), Compound Infusion of Horseradish. (Armorac. concis., sinapis cont., sing. \mathfrak{z} j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ j to $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ ij.

INFUSUM AURANTII COMPOSITUM, Compound Infusion of Orange Peel. (Aurant. cort. sicc. \mathfrak{z} ij; limon. cort. recent. \mathfrak{z} j; caryoph. cont. \mathfrak{z} ss; aq. fervent. Oss. Macerate for fifteen minutes, and strain.—Ph. L.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ iss to $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ ij.

INFUSUM BRASH, Wort—i. Buchu, Infusum Diosmæ—i. Bynes, Wort.

INFUSUM CALUMBÆ, I. Calombæ seu Colombæ, Infusio of Calumba. (Calumb. rad. concis. \mathfrak{z} ss; aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ iss to \mathfrak{z} ij.

INFUSUM CAPSICI, Infusio of Cayenne Pepper. (Capsic. in. pulv. crass. \mathfrak{z} ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ iss.

INFUSUM CARYOPHYLLI, Infusio of Cloves. (Caryoph. contus. \mathfrak{z} ij; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ iss to $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}$ ij.

INFUSUM CASCARILLÆ, Infusio of Cascarilla. (Cascarill. contus. \mathfrak{z} j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM CASSIÆ SENNÆ, I. sennæ compositum.

INFUSUM CAT'ECU COMPOSITUM, I. Catechu seu Acacia Catechu, Infusion of Catechu. (Catechu, in pulv. $\overline{3}$ ss; cinnam. cont. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM CINCHONÆ, I. Cinchonæ lancifolia, Infusion of Cinchona. (Cinch. contus. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) This infusion may also be made from the same quantity of bark in coarse powder by the process of displacement with hot or cold water. Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij. The Pharmacopœia of the United States has an Infusum Cinchonæ flavæ, Infusion of yellow bark, and an Infusum Cinchonæ rubræ, Infusion of red bark, which are prepared in the same manner. It has also an Infusum Cinchonæ Compositum, which is made as follows: (Cinchon. rubr. in pulv. $\overline{3}$ j; Acid. Sulph. aromat. f $\overline{3}$ j; aq. aquæ, Oj. Macerate for twelve hours, occasionally shaking, and strain.) Dose, same as the last.

INFUSUM CINCHONÆ COMPOSITUM, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Cinchonæ flavæ, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Colombæ, I. calumbæ.

INFUSUM CUSPARIÆ, I. Angustura, Infusion of Cusparia. (Cuspar. cort. contus. $\overline{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM DIGITALIS, I. Digitalis purpurea, Infusion of Foxglove. (Digital. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oss; tinct. cinnamomi, f $\overline{3}$ j. Macerate for two hours, and add sp. cinnam. f $\overline{3}$ j.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j.

INFUSUM DIOSMÆ, Ph. U. S., 1842, I. Buchu, Ph. U. S., 1851, Infusion of Buchu. (Diosm. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for four hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose f $\overline{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM EUPATORII, Infusion of Thoroughwort. (Eupator. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM GENTIANÆ COMPOSITUM, Compound Infusion of Gentian. (Gentian. cont. $\overline{3}$ ss; Aurant. cort., Coriandr. contus. $\overline{3}$ ss; alcohol. dilut. f $\overline{3}$ iv; aq. aquæ, f $\overline{3}$ xij. First pour on the alcohol, and three hours afterwards, the water; then macerate for twelve hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

Marsden's Antiscorbutic Drops, an empirical preparation, consist of a solution of corrosive sublimate in an infusion of gentian.

INFUSUM HUMULI, I. Lupuli, Infusion of Hops. (Humul. $\overline{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM JUNIPERI, Infusion of Juniper. The common mode of making this infusion is by an ounce of Juniper Berries to a pint of boiling water. The whole may be taken in the twenty-four hours.

INFUSUM KRAMERIÆ, Infusion of Rhatany. (Kramer. contus. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for four hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM LINI, I. L. compositum.

INFUSUM LINI COMPOSITUM (Ph. U. S., 1851), I. Lini (Ph. U. S., 1842), I. Lini usitatis-simi, Infusion of Linseed, Flaxseed Tea. (Lini sem. cont. $\overline{3}$ ss; glycyrrh. rad. cont. $\overline{3}$ ij; aq. aquæ bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, a teaspoonful, ad libitum.

INFUSUM LUPULI, Infusum Humuli—i. Malti, Wort.

INFUSUM MATICO, Infusion of Matico. (Matico, $\overline{3}$ ss (avoirdupois); aq. bullient. Oss (Imp. meas.). Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM MENTHÆ VIRIDIS, Infusion of Spearmint, Mint Tea. (Mentha virid. $\overline{3}$ ij; aq. bullient. Oss. Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM PAREIRÆ, Infusion of Pareira Brava. (Pareir. $\overline{3}$ vj; aq. bullient. Oj (Imp. meas.). Infuse for two hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j or f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM PICIS EMPYREUMATICÆ LIQUIDÆ, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Picis liquidum, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Polygalæ, Infusum Senegæ.

INFUSUM PRUNI VIRGINIANÆ, Infusion of Wild Cherry Bark. (Prun. Virginian. cont. $\overline{3}$ ss; aq. aquæ, Oj. Macerate for 24 hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM QUASSIÆ, I. Quassia excel'sa, Infusion of Quassia. (Quassia lign. cont. $\overline{3}$ ij; aq. (frigid.) Oj. Macerate for twelve hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM RHEI, An'ima Rhei, Infusion of Rhubarb. (Rhei. cont. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. ferv. Oss. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM ROSÆ COMPOSITUM, I. Rosæ Gallicæ, Infusion of the Rose. (Ros. Gallic. $\overline{3}$ vj; aq. bullient. Oj. acid. sulph. d. f $\overline{3}$ ij; sacch. purif. $\overline{3}$ iss. Add the water, and afterwards the acid;—macerate for half an hour; strain, and add the sugar.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss to Oss.

INFUSUM SARSAPARILLÆ, Infusion of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. contus. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. aquæ bullient. Oj. Digest for two hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It may also be prepared by displacement. Dose, f $\overline{3}$ ij to f $\overline{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM SASSAFRAS, I. Sassafras medullæ, Infusion of Sassafras Pith, Mucilage of Sassafras Pith. (Sassafras medull. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. aquæ (frigid.) Oj. Macerate for three hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) An emollient collyrium, and a demulcent drink.

INFUSUM SENEGÆ, Infusum Polygalæ, Infusion of Senega. (Seneg. $\overline{3}$ x; aq. bullient. (Imp. meas.). Infuse for four hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM SENNÆ, I. S. Compositum, I. Cassia Sennæ seu Sennæ simplex, Infusion of Senna. (Sennæ, $\overline{3}$ j; coriandr. cont. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ iv.

The Black Draught, Black Dose. Black bottle, Havustus niger, is usually formed of this infusion. It may be made of infus. sennæ, f $\overline{3}$ v; aq. cinnam. f $\overline{3}$ j; manuæ, $\overline{3}$ v; magnes. sulph. $\overline{3}$ vj. Dose, a wineglassful.

Schwartz's Prepared Essence of Senna is a concentrated infusion of the leaves in combination with an alkali.

INFUSUM SENNÆ COMPOSITUM, I. sennæ.

INFUSUM SERPENTARIÆ, Infusion of Virginia Snake-root. (Serpentar. $\overline{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM SIMARUBÆ, Infusion of Simaruba. (Simarub. cort. cont. $\overline{3}$ ij; aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ j to f $\overline{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM SPIGELIÆ, Infusion of Pinkroot. (Spigel. $\overline{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\overline{3}$ iv to Oss.

INFUSUM TABACI, Infusion of Tobacco. (Tabaci fol. $\overline{3}$ j; aq. ferv. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Half of this per anum in strangulated hernia.

INFUSUM TARAXACI, Infusion of Dan'delion.

(Taraxac. contus. ℥ij; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iiss, as a diuretic, &c.

INFUSUM ULMI, Infusion of Slippery Elm, Slippery Elm Tea. This preparation, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, is made by infusing one ounce of slippery elm bark in a pint of boiling water.

INFUSUM VALERIANÆ, Infusion of Valerian. (Rad. valerian. in crass. pulv. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iiss to ℥ij.

INFUSUM ZINGIBERIS, Infusion of Ginger, Ginger Tea. (Zingib. contus. ℥ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥iiss to f℥ij, as a carminative.

INGA. A genus of plants, Ord. Leguminosæ, belonging to South America, many of the species of which are possessed of astringent properties. Inga bark is used in South America as a tonic astringent in diarrhœa, gonorrhœa, &c. An extract, prepared from it, possesses all the properties of rhatany.

INGENTUM (Morbi). The nature or genius of a disease, from in, and geno, for gigno, 'to generate.' This word is employed, especially by the French, synonymously with nature. They speak, for instance, of Génie inflammatoire, bilieux, &c. Some, also, use gênie in the place of type of an intermittent.

INGESTA, from in, and gerere, gestum, 'to bear or carry into.' Substances, introduced into the body by the digestive passages; as food, condiments, drinks, &c.

INGLUVIES, Aples'tia, Victis intemperantia:—Gluttony, Insatiableness; also, the Crop or Gorge of Birds, (F.) Jabot; and the first stomach or paunch of ruminant animals—Pen'ulo, Rumeu, Venter magnus, (F.) Pause, Herbier, Double. Also, the Pharynx.

INGRASIAS, APOPHYSES OF. The lesser æta of the sphenoid bone.

INGRAVIDATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRAVIDATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRESSUS SUPERIOR, Cardia.

INGUEN, Bubou, Bubo, 'the groin,' (Prov.) Lauk, Last, Lisk, Lesk; Edo'on, He'patis emancto'ria, (F.) Aine. The oblique fold or depression which separates the abdomen from the thigh. It is only, properly speaking, a line that extends from the anterior and superior spinous process of the ilium to the middle part of the horizontal ramus of the pubis. Also, the genital organs.

INGUINAL, Inguinal'is, from inguen, inguinis, 'the groin.' Belonging or relating to the groin. This epithet has been given to various parts met with in the region of the groin or inguinal region.

INGUINAL ARTERY is that portion of the femoral artery situate immediately beneath the crural arch in the inguinal region.

INGUINAL CANAL is a canal, about two inches in length, proceeding obliquely downwards, inwards and forwards at the lower part of the abdomen; through which passes the spermatic cord, in men, and the round ligament of the uterus in women. This canal is formed, inferiorly and anteriorly, by the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle; posteriorly by the fascia transversalis, which is joined to the preceding aponeurosis, and forms with it a deep channel, into which are received the lesser oblique and transversalis muscles. The inguinal canal has two apertures: the one, the læcer and inter, is called the inguinal or abdominal ring. It is bounded by two strong tendinous pillars which fix it—the innermost to the symphysis, the outermost to the spine of the pubis. The upper and outer aperture is formed by the fascia transversalis. From the edge of this aperture arises a membranous funnel,—a prolongation of the fascia transversalis,—which receives the spermatic vessels; forms their proper sheath, and accompanies them as far as the testicle. On its inside lies the epigastric artery. Above it, is the lower edge of the transversalis muscle: and, below, it is bounded by the channel of the greater oblique. By following the oblique direction of this canal, and passing, consequently, on the outside of the epigastric artery, the viscera are displaced, so as to constitute internal inguinal hernia.

INGUINAL RE'GION, Re'gio inguinal'is, Bubo, Inguen. The region of the groin.

INGUINAL RING, Abdominal Ring, An'ulus abdominal'is, (F.) Anneau Inguinal, is the inferior aperture of the inguinal canal.

INGUINO-CUTA'NEUS. A name given by Professor Chaussier to the middle ramus of the anterior branch of the first lumbar nerve, because it sends its numerous filaments to the groin, serotum, and to the skin of the superior part of the thigh.

INHÆRENS, Inherent.

INHALATIO, Absorption, Inhalation.—i. Cutis, see Absorption.

INHALATION, Inhalatio; from in, and halare, 'to breathe.' The act of drawing air or vapour into the lungs—Inhalatio pulmonal'is. Also, absorption.

INHALER. Same etymon. An apparatus for inhalation. Mudge's Inhaler is an apparatus for inhaling the steam of hot water, in affections of the air-passages. It consists of a pewter tankard provided with a lid, into which a flexible tube is inserted. Through this the vapour is inhaled.

INHÆRENT, Inhærens, (in, and hæreo, 'I stick.') That which adheres, or which is joined or united to any thing.

INHERENT CAUTERY, (F.) Cautère inhérent, is the actual cautery, left in contact with a part until it is reduced to the state of a deep eschar.

INHUMATION, Inhumatio, from inhumo, inhumatus, (in, and humus), 'I put into the ground.' The sepulture of the dead. This belongs to the subject of medical police. Also, digestion of substances in earth or dung. See Arenatio.

INIAD, see Inial.

INIAL, from iniov, 'the nape of the neck.' An epithet, proposed by Dr. Barclay, for an aspect towards the plane of the ridge of the occiput. Inial is employed by him adverbially to signify 'towards the inial aspect.'

INIEENCEPHALUS, (F.) Inieencephale, from iniov, 'occiput,' and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' A monster whose encephalon is in great part in the cranium, and in part out of it, behind, and a little beneath the cranium, which is open in its occipital portion.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

INIODYMUS, Diprosopus.

INION, iniov. Some of the Greek physicians give this name to the occiput, or the ridge of the occiput; others to the back part of the neck, and the muscles of the occiput. Blancard says it is the commencement of the spinal marrow.

INIOPS, Iniope, from iniov, 'occiput,' and ὄψ, 'the eye, face.' A monster, double above the umbilicus, which has two ears very near each other, or only one median ear, and above it, at a greater or less distance, a median orbit and eye, more or less imperfect. The rudimental face appearing to be directly opposite the principal face suggested the name.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

INITIS, Inohymen'itis, from is, gen. iov, 'a fibre,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Fibrous inflammation.

INITIUM, Arche—i. Asperæ arteriæ, Larynx —i. Extuberans Coli, Cæcum.

INIUM, ivon. The nucha. Also, the muscles at the back of the neck. See Inion.

INJACULA'TIO, (in, and jaculor, jaculatus, 'to shoot.') A term employed by Van Helmont to designate an acute pain of the stomach, with rigidity and immobility of the body.

INJECT'ED, Injectus, from injicere, injectum, (in, and jacere, 'to throw into.') The face and other parts are said to be injected, when the accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels gives them an evident red colour. A subject or part of a subject is also said to be injected, when its vessels have been filled, by the anatomist, with an appropriate composition.

INJEC'TION, Injectio, Eis'bolē: same etymon. The act of introducing, by means of a syringe or other instrument, a liquid into a cavity of the body. The liquid injected is also called an injection. Anatomists use injections—Injectiones anatom'icæ—for filling the cavities of vessels, in order that they may be rendered more apparent, and their dissection be facilitated. For this purpose, they employ syringes of different dimensions, and various materials. The most common injections are made of soot, wax, and turpentine, coloured with lamp-black, vermilion, &c. There are three kinds chiefly used by anatomists,—the coarse, the fine, and the minute. The following are formulæ for each.

COARSE INJECTION.

No. 1.

Pure yellow wax, oz. xvj.
Bleached rosin, oz. viij.
Turpentine varnish, by measure, oz. vj.

No. 2.

Yellow rosin, lb. ij.
Yellow wax, lb. j.
Turpentine varnish, a sufficient quantity to make the mixture flexible when cold.

No. 3.

Tallow, lb. ij.
White wax, oz. x.
Common oil, oz. vj.
Venice turpentine, oz. iv.

Mix and liquefy over a slow fire or over boiling water.

To make any of these mixtures.

Red—add vermillion, oz. iij.
Yellow—King's yellow, oz. iiss.
White—best flake white, oz. vss.
Pale-blue { best flake white, oz. iiiss.
 { fine blue smalt, oz. iiiss.
Dark-blue—blue verditer, oz. xss.
Black—lamp-black, oz. j.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. ivss.
 { best flake white, oz. iss.
 { powdered gamboge, oz. j.

FINE INJECTION.

Brown spirit varnish, oz. iv.
White spirit varnish, oz. iv.
Turpentine varnish, oz. j.

To make this mixture,

Red—add vermillion, oz. j.
Yellow—King's yellow, oz. j½.
White—best flake white, oz. ij.
Light-blue { fine blue smalt, oz. iss.
 { best flake white, oz. j½.
Dark blue—blue verditer, oz. iv.
Black—lamp-black, oz. ss.

MINUTE INJECTION.

Take of transparent size, broken to pieces, or isinglass, oz. viij.
Water, lb. iss. Dissolve.

To make this mixture,

Red—add vermillion, oz. v.
Yellow—King's yellow, oz. iv.
White—best flake white, oz. v.
Blue—fine blue smalt, oz. viij.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. iij.
 { best flake white, dr. ij.
 { powdered gamboge, dr. j.
Black—lamp-black, oz. j.

Beautiful injections, are made with ether as the menstruum.

COLD INJECTION.

White lead and red lead, each, oz. iv; linseed oil, enough to form a thick paste when they are rubbed well together. Liquefy this paste with turpentine varnish, oz. viij.

The advantage of this mixture is, that the subject need not be heated.

In order to inject the arteries, the injection must be forced from the great trunks towards their ultimate ramifications. To inject the veins, on the contrary, it is indispensable, on account of their valves, to send the injection from the smaller divisions towards the greater. The lymphatics are usually injected with mercury. The practitioner injects, by forcing with a syringe, liquids, such as emollient, narcotic, stimulant, and other decoctions or infusions, into different hollow organs, as the rectum, vagina, nasal fossæ, urethra, tunica vaginalis, auditory canal, &c., to fulfil various therapeutical indications.

The following injection has been strongly recommended by Dr. Horner to preserve the dead body.

Take of Liverpool, St. Ubes, or Turk's Island Salt, oz. 36 avoird.
Nitrate of potassa, " 19
Carbonate of Soda, " 8
Molasses (Sugar-house,) " 4 by meas.
Water, six pints.

The saline constituents to be dissolved first of all in boiling hot water; the molasses to be afterwards stirred in; the starch to be mixed well with half a pint of cold water, and then to be stirred in with the other articles. As soon as it begins to boil, the whole mass swells up, when it must be removed from the fire. On the proper reduction of temperature it is fit for use.

INJECTION, MATTHEWS'S, see Tinctura cantharidis.

INJECTIONES ANATOMICÆ, see Injection.

INK, Atramentum.

INKBERRY, Prinos glaber.

IN-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

IN'NATE, from in, and nascor, natus, 'I am born.' Inborn.

INNATE DISEASES, Morbi connati seu congeniti, (F.) Maladies innées. Diseases with which the infant is born. They are not always hereditary, as hereditary diseases are not always innate.

INNERLEITH'EN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, situate near the Tweed, and supposed to be the scene of "St. Ronan's Well," contain chlorides of sodium and calcium, and carbonate of magnesia.

INNERVA'TION, Innervatio, from in, 'in,' and nervus, 'a nerve.' By this term is meant—the nervous influence, necessary for the maintenance of life and the functions of the various organs;—an influence of whose character and source we are ignorant. It seems to resemble the galvanic or electric agencies. See Nerves.

INNOMINATUM, Anonymum, from in, 'negation,' and nomen, 'a name.' (F.) Anonyme. Having no name.

INNOMINATA ARTERIA, Brachio-cephalic artery, Arteria anonyma, Right Subclavian, (F.) Artère innominée, Artère brachio-céphalique (Ch.), is the trunk common to the right primitive carotid and to the subclavian. It arises from the anterior part of the arch of the aorta, ascends obliquely to the right, along the trachea; and after a course of about an inch in length, divides into two trunks, which go off at right angles. The one is external—the right subclavian proper; the other superior—the primitive carotid, of the same side.

INNOMINATA CARTILAGO, Cricoid.

INNOMINATA CAVITAS. A cavity of the outer ear, between the helix and anthelix.

INNOMINATUM FORAMEN. A foramen, near the middle of the anterior surface of the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, leading backwards for the passage of the Vidian nerve, reflected from the 2d branch of the 5th to the portio dura of the 7th pair.

INNOMINATA FOSSA, see Fossa—i. Linea, see Ilio-pectinea Linea.

INNOMINATI seu ANONYMI NERVI. Some anatomists have thus called the nerves of the fifth pair.

INNOMINATUM OS, Os Coxen'dicis seu Coxæ seu anonymum seu pelvis laterale, (F.) Os innominé, Os Coxal, Os anonyme. A very large, flat bone, which forms the anterior and lateral paries of the pelvis. It is curved upon itself in two opposite directions. In the first periods of life, it is composed of three portions:—the ilium, ischium, and pubis, which join each other in the acetabulum. It is articulated before with its fellow, — behind with the sacrum; and laterally with the femur.

INNOMINATA MINORA OSSA, Lesser Ossa innominata, Ossicula innominata. Some anatomists have given this name to the three cuneiform bones of the tarsus.

INNOMINATA OSSICULA, Innominata minora ossa—i. Tunica Oculi, Sclerotic.

INNOMINATÆ VENÆ, of VIÉSSENS. Viéssens has given this name to two or three veins, which arise on the anterior surface and right margin of the heart, and open into the auricle towards its right margin. The term VENÆ INNOMINATÆ of MECKEL is given to the brachiocephalic veins, which are generally included in the description of the subclavian vein, and correspond to the arteria innominata, being formed by the union of the internal jugular vein and the subclavian properly so called, which correspond to the common carotid and subclavian arteries.

INNOMINATUS, Anonymous.

INNUTRITIO OSSIIUM, Ruehitis.

INOCULABLE. Same etymon as the next. Capable of inoculation, or of being communicated by inoculation.

INOCULATTON, Inoculatio, Instit'io, Instit'io variolarum, from inoculare, (in, and oculus, 'an eye,') 'to ingraft.' Any operation by which small-pox, for example, may be artificially communicated, by introducing the virus of the particular disease into the economy, by means of a puncture or scratch made in the skin. When the word inoculation is used alone, it usually means that for the small-pox, — Variolatio. See Syphilization.

INOCULATION, Cowpox, Vaccination—i. Jennerian, Vaccination.

INOCULATOR, same etymon. In'sitor. One who practises inoculation.

INODULAR TISSUE, see Tissue, inodular.

INODULE, Tissue, inodular.

INOHYLOMA, Tumour, fibrous.

INOHYMENITIS: from is, gen. ivos, 'a fibre,' 'membr,' 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammatio telæ fibrosæ. Inflammation of the fibrous tissue.

INOMA, Tumour, fibrous.

INONCTION, Inunction.

INOPOLYPUS, see Polypus.

INORGANIC, Inorganicus, Unorganized, (F.) Inorganique; from in, 'negation,' and organum, 'an organ.' A term applied to bodies which have no organs;—such as minerals. At the present day, naturalists admit of but two classes of bodies,—the organized and inorganic. Parts of the body which, like the epidermis, are devoid of blood-vessels and nerves, have been called anorganic.

INOSCLEROMA, from is, gen. ivos, 'a fibre,' and σκληρωμα, 'induration.' Induration of the fibrous tissue.

INOSCULATIO, Anastomosis.

INOSIS, Hyperinosis.

INOSITE, In'osit, Muscle sugar; from is, ivos, 'a fibre.' An fermentable sugar, found only in the juice of the cardiac muscle.—Lehmann.

INOSTEATOMA, from is, ivos, 'a fibre,' and steatoma. A tumour of a mixed fibrous and steatomatous character.

INQUIES, Inquietude.

INQUIETATIO, Inquietude.

INQUIETUDE, Inquietudo, In'quies, Inquietatio, Jactitatio, from in, 'negation,' and quies, 'rest.' Agitation or trouble, caused by indisposition. Restlessness.

INQUINAMENTUM, Miasm.

INQUISITIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSALIVATION, Insalivatio, from in, and saliva. The mixture of the food with the saliva, and other secretions of the mouth.

INSALUBRIOUS, Insalubris, Nose'ros, Noso'des. That which is unhealthy,—which injures the health.

INSANABILIS, Incurable.

INSANE, Insanus; from in, 'negation,' and sanus, 'sound;' Alienatus, Crazy, Mad, Nonsane, Dementel, Deranged, Bedlamite, (Sc.) Dofft, Wod, (F.) Aliéné, Fou, Insensé. One affected with mental aberration, or of unsound mind.

INSANIA, Mania—i. Cadiva, Epilepsy—i. Lupina, Lycanthropia—i. Puerperarum, Mania, puerperal.

INSANITAS, Insanity.

INSANITY, Insania, Insan'itas. Same etymon. Mental alienation, Abalienatio seu Alienatio Mentis, Arreptio, Unsound Mind, Derangement, Deranged intellect, Craziness, (Sc.) Daffin, Daffing, Wodnes; Aphros'yné, Ephros'nia, Ephros'yné, Paro'lagé, Parallax'is, Delir'ia, Vesania, Delir'ium (Crichton), Insipien'tia, (F.) Folie, Égarement d'Esprit, Paraphrénie. This term includes all the varieties of unsound mind. — Mania, Melancholia, Moral Insanity, Dementia, and Idiocy. A slight degree of insanity is sometimes popularly called "a kink in the head;" in Scotland, "a bee in the bonnet."

INSANITY, HOMICIDAL, see Homicidal—i. Incoherent, Dementia—i. Moral, Pathomania—i. Puerperal, Mania, puerperal—i. Religious, Sebastianomania—i. Senile, Delirium senile—i. Suicidal, see Suicide.

INSANUS, Insane.

INSCRIPTION, see Matriculate.

INSCRIPTIONES TENDINÆ MUSCULORUM, Intersectio'nes seu Enervatio'nes tendin'æ musculorum, Intermedia ligamentalia seu ner'va. The tendinous portions which cross several muscles, and especially the straight muscles of the abdomen.

INSEMINATION, see Ejaculation.

INSENESCENTIA, Agerasia.

INSENSE, Insana.

INSENSIBILITY, Anæsthesia, Insensibilitas. Loss or absence of sensibility. It is very common in cerebral affections, and may extend to every part, or be limited to one or more. Some organs are much more sensible than others. The bones, cartilages, ligaments, &c., are insensible in health, but acutely sensible in disease.

INSENSIBLE, Sensibilitatē carens. That which is devoid of sensibility. This word is applied, also, to phenomena which cease to be appreciable to the senses. Thus, we say, the pulse becomes insensible.

INSERTION, Insertio, Symphysis, Enosis, from inserere, insertum, (in, and serere, 'to join or knit,') 'to ingraft.' (F.) Attache. The attachment of one part to another. Insertions occur chiefly on bones, cartilages, and fibrous organs; thus, we speak of the insertion of muscular fibres into a tendon or aponeurosis; the insertion of a tendon, aponeurosis, or ligament, into a cartilage or bone. The word insertion has likewise been used by pathologists for the act of inoculating or introducing a virus into the body.

INSES'SIO, from insidere, inessum, (in, and sedere,) 'to sit in.' This term is, sometimes, applied to a vapour bath, the person being seated in a perforated chair, beneath which a vessel, filled with hot water, or the hot decoction of some plant, is placed. See Semicupium.

INSESSUS, Bath, half.

INSCIUM, Iscium.

INSIDENTIA, Epistasis. Any thing which swims on or in—the urine, for example. It is opposed to the Hypostasis or subsidentia.

INSIPIENTIA, Insanity.

INSITIO, Inoculation—i. Ciliorum. Blepharoplastice—i. Dentis, Transplantatio Dentis—i. Variolarum, Inoculation.

INSOLATION, Insolatio, from in, and sol, the sun; Apricatio, Heliosis, Heliæsis, Helioæsis, Siroæsis. Exposure to the sun. Exposure of a patient to the rays of the sun is, sometimes, had recourse to, with the view of rousing the vital forces when languishing, or of producing irritation of the skin. Insolation is occasionally used in the same sense as coup de soleil.

In Pharmacy, insolation means the drying of chemical and pharmaceutical substances.

INSOLAZIONE DE PRIMIVERA, Pelagra.

INSOMNIA, Insomnitas, Sahara, Zaara, Pervigillum, Pernoctatio, Aippnia, Agrypnia, Ahyppnia, Anypnia, Typhomania, Sleeplessness, Vigilance, from in, 'negation,' and somnus, 'sleep,' 'absence of sleep.' This may exist alone, and constitute a true disease; or it may be connected with another affection. It is an unequivocal sign of suffering in some organ; even when the patient experiences no pain.

INSOMNIUM, Somnium.

INSPECTIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSPIRATEUR, Inspiratory.

INSPIRATION, Inspiratio, Empneumatosis, Eispnoë, Adspiratio, Aspiratio, from in, 'in,' and spiro, 'I breathe,' The action by which the air penetrates into the interior of the lungs. A movement opposed to that of expiration. As regards the average quantity of air received into the lungs at each inspiration, there is much discrepancy amongst observers. The following table sufficiently exhibits this:—

Cubic inches at each inspiration.

INSPIRATION OF VENOUS BLOOD. By this is meant the aspiration of blood towards the heart, occasioned by the approach to a vacuum produced by the dilatation of the thorax during inspiration.

INSPIRATORY. Same etymon. Inspiratio ni inser'vius, (F.) Inspirateur. A name given to muscles, which, by their contraction, augment the size of the chest, and thus produce inspiration. The diaphragm and intercostal muscles are the chief agents of inspiration. In cases where deep inspirations are necessary, the action of these muscles is aided by the contraction of the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, subclavius, serratus major anticus, scaleni, serratus posticus superior, &c. Most of these muscles become inspiratory, by taking their fixed point at the part which they ordinarily move, and elevating the ribs.

INSPISANT, Inspisans. Same etymon as the next. Any remedial agent, that renders the blood thicker, directly, or indirectly. The opposite to diluent.

INSPISSATIO, Pycnosis, from in, and spissare, spissatum, 'to thicken.' The act of rendering thick; as in the formation of an extract—Succus Inspissatus.

INSTEP, Callum pedis, Neck-of-the-foot, (F.) Coude-pied, Con-de-pied. The projection at the upper part of the foot, near its articulation with the leg—the tarsus.

INSTILLATIO, Instillation.

INSTILLATION, Eustalaxis, Instillatio, from in, 'into,' and stilla, 'a drop.' The act of pouring a liquid drop by drop.

INSTINCT, (L.) Instinctus, (in, and stingere, stinctum, 'to sting,') 'inwardly moved.' Bru'tus, Hormë. The action of the living principle, whenever manifestly directing its operations to the health, preservation, or reproduction of a living frame or any part of such frame—Molimen nature salutarium. The law of instinct is, consequently, the law of the living principle, and instinctive actions are the actions of the living principle. Instinct is natural. Reason is acquired.

INSTINCTIVE, Instinctus. Same etymon. Relating to or caused by instinct; as instinctive actions. See Emotional. Those instinctive actions of animals which are owing to impressions made on the sensory ganglia, exciting respondent motor influences that are propagated to the various muscles of the body, are termed consensual.

Consensual movements which accompany voluntary efforts without our consciousness are termed associated, (F.) Associés.

INSTITUTES OF MEDICINE, see Theory of medicine.

INSTITUTUM ORTHOPÆDICUM, Orthopedic institution.

INSTRUMENT, Instrumentum, Organnum. A tool, an agent.

INSTRUMENTA. Pudibilia.

INSTRUMENTUM CHIRURGICUM. A surgical tool or instrument.

INSTRUMENTUM DIGESTIONIS. The digestive apparatus.

INSTRUMENTUM INSTRUMENTORUM, Manus.

INSUFFICIENCY, (F.) Insuffisance; from in, and sufficiens. Inadequateness to any end or purpose.—as Insufficiency of the valves of the heart, (F.) Insuffisance des valvules du Cœur;—a condition in which they are not adapted, as in health, to properly close the apertures.

INSUFFISANCE, Insufficiency.

INSUFFISANCE DES VALVULES DU CŒUR, Insufficiency of the valves of the heart.

INSUFFLATION, Insufflatio, from in, sub, and flare, 'to blow.' The act of blowing a gas or vapour into some cavity of the body; as when tobacco smoke is injected into the rectum; or when air is blown into the mouths of new-born children to excite the respiratory functions.

INSULA, Insula cerebri.

INSULA CEREBRI, Island or Insula of Reil. The intermediate lobe of the brain, Lobus intermedius cerebri. A remarkable group of convolutions within the fissure of Sylvius. It is called, by Cruveilhier, Lobule of the Fissure of Sylvius, Lobule of the corpus striatum. The 'island' of Reil, with the substantia perforata, forms the base of the corpus striatum.

INSULA SANGUINIS, see Blood.

INSULÆ, Maculæ albæ—i. Pulmonales, see Pulmo.

INSULTUS, Attack, Paroxysm.

INSURANCE OF LIFE, see Life Insurance.

INTEGRITAS, Sanitas, Virginity.

INTEGUMENT, Integumentum, Tegumentum, Tegumen, Tegumen, Involucrum seu Velamentum corporis communis; Vela seu Velamentum nativum, from in, and tegere, tectum, 'to cover.' (F.) Tégument. Any thing which serves to cover, to envelop. The skin, including the cuticle, rete mucosum, and cutis vera, is the common integument or tegument of the body.

INTEGUMENTA FŒTUS. Membranes of the fœtus.

INTEGUMENTUM, Integument—i. Common, Integument.

INTELLECT, Intellectus, Nous, Meus, Guonië, Nous, Nūs, Noë'sis, Syn'esis, from intelligere, intellectum, (inter, 'between,' and legere, 'to choose;') 'to understand,' 'conceive,' 'know.' (F.) Entendement, Intelligence. The aggregate of the intellectual faculties—perception, formation of ideas, memory, and judgment.

INTELLECT, DERANGED, Insanity.

INTELLIGENCE, Intellect.

INTEMPERANCE, Intemperantia; Immoderatio, Immoderatio, Acras'ia, Acolas'ia, Ples'mousë, Amet'ria, Aplet'ia, from in, 'negation,' and temperare, 'to temper.' Immoderate use of food and drink, especially the latter;—a fruitful source of disease.

INTEMPERIES. Same etymon. Dyscras'ia. Derangement in the constitution of the atmosphere and of the seasons; bad constitution; derangement or disorder in the humours of the body.

INTENSIVUS, Entaticus.

INTENTION, Intentio, from in, and tendere, tensum seu tentum, 'to stretch.' Propositum. The object which one proposes. In surgery, a wound is said to heal by the first intention, Reunio per primam intentio'nem, when cicatrization occurs without suppuration; union by the second intention, Reunio per secundam intentio'nem, being that which does not occur until the surfaces have suppurated. To obtain union by the first intention, the edges of a recent wound must be brought in apposition and kept together by means of adhesive plasters and a proper bandage. Delpech has substituted for those expressions, Réunion primitive, and Réunion secondaire.

INTERANEÆ, Entrails.

INTERARTICULAR, Interarticula'ris; from inter, 'between,' and articulus, 'a joint.' Parts situate between the articulations are so called; as interarticular cartilages, interarticular ligaments, &c.

INTERCADENCE, Intercaden'tia, Interciden'tia, from inter, 'between,' and cadere, 'to fall.' Disorder of the arterial pulsations, so that, every now and then, a supernumerary pulsation occurs. The pulse, in such case, is said to be intercurrent.

INTERCALARY, Intercala'ris, Inter'cidens, from intercalare, 'to insert.' Embol'imus, Interpol'atus, Provocato'rius. The days which occur between those that are critical. The term has, also, been applied to the days of apyrexia in intermittent fevers.

INTERCELLULAR, Intercellula'ris, (F.) Intercellulaire; from inter, 'between,' and cellula, 'a small cell, a cellule.' That which is between cells or cellulæ.

INTERCELLULAR FLUID, Liquor Sanguinis.

INTERCELLULAR PASSAGES. A term given by Mr. Rainey to irregular passages through the substance of the lung, which form the terminations of the bronchial tubes, are clustered with air-cells, and not lined by mucous membrane.

INTERCELLULAR SUBSTANCE, see Cytoblastema.

INTERCEPTIO, from inter, 'between,' and capere, 'to take.' A bandage, by the aid of which the ancients proposed to arrest the progress of the material cause of gout and rheumatism; and which consisted in covering the affected limbs with carded wool; surrounding them, afterwards, with broad bandages, applied from the fingers to the axilla, or from the toes to the groin.

INTERCEPTIO INTESTINORUM, Ileus.

INTERCERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERCIDENS, Intercalary.

INTERCIDENTIA, Intercadence.

INTERCILIIUM, Mesophryon.

INTERCLAVICULAR, Interclavica'ris, from inter, 'between,' and claviculus, 'a clavicle.' That which is placed between the clavicles.

INTERCLAVICULAR LIGAMENT is a fibrous bundle, placed transversely above the extremity of the sternum, between the heads of the two clavicles. This ligament is flat. Its fibres, which are always longer above than below, are separated by small apertures, which are traversed by vessels. It prevents the separation of the two clavicles in the forced depression of the shoulder.

INTERCOSTAL, Intercosta'lis, from inter, 'between,' and costa, 'a rib.' Mesopleu'rus, Mesopleu'rus. That which is situate between the ribs. (F.) Sous-costal.

INTERCOSTAL ARTERIES vary in number. There is constantly, however, a superior, Arte'ria, Intercosta'lis superior seu Intercosta'lis umbilica'ris, which is given off from the posterior part of the subelavian, and which sends branches into the first two or three intercostal spaces; and, generally, eight or nine inferior or aortic intercostals. These arise from the lateral and posterior parts of the pectoral aorta, and ascend obliquely in front of the vertebral column, to gain the intercostal spaces, where they divide into a dorsal branch and an intercostal, properly so called.

INTERCOSTAL MUSCLES are distinguished into internal, — inter-plérocostaux of Dumas, — and external. The former are inserted into the inner lip, the latter into the outer lip of the edge of the ribs. The fibres of the external intercostals are directed obliquely downwards and forwards; and those of the internal downwards and backwards. Both are inspiratory or expiratory muscles, according as they take their origin on the upper or lower rib. Some small, fleshy fibres, seen occasionally at the inner surface of the thorax, descending obliquely from one rib to another, have been called Infra-costales.

INTERCOSTAL NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve.

INTERCOSTAL NERVES, Branches souscostales (Ch.), Costal or Dorsal nerves, proceed from the anterior branches of the dorsal nerves. They are twelve in number, and are distributed especially to the muscles of the parietes of the chest and abdomen.

INTERCOSTAL SPACE, Interval'um seu Interstitium intercostal'e, Mesopleurum, Mesopleurium, is the interval which separates one rib from that immediately above or below it.

INTERCOSTAL VEINS are distinguished like the arteries. The right superior intercostal vein is often wanting. When it exists, it opens into the back part of the subclavian. The same vein of the left side is very large. It communicates with the demi-azygos, receives the left bronchial vein, and opens into the corresponding subclavian. The right inferior intercostal veins open into the vena azygos; and those of the left into the demiazygos.

INTERCOSTO-HUMERAL NERVES. So called from their origin and distribution. They are the cutaneous branches of the second and third intercostal nerves.

INTERCUR'RENT, Intercur'rens, from inter, 'between,' and currere, 'to run.' Diseases are so called which supervene at different seasons of the year, or which cannot be considered as belonging to any particular season. — Sydenham. A disease is likewise so termed which occurs in the course of another disease, as Intercurrent Pneumonia.

INTERCUTANEOUS, Subcutaneous.

INTERDEN'TIUM, from inter, 'between,' and dens, dentis, 'a tooth.' The interval between teeth of the same order. — Linden.

INTERDIGITAIRE, Interdigital.

INTERDIGIT'AL, Interdigitalis, (F.) Interdigitaire; from inter, 'between,' and digitus, 'a finger.' That which relates to the spaces between the fingers. Interdigital space, (F.) Espace interdigitaire, is used, also, for the commissure between the fingers.

INTERDIGIT'IUM. Same etymon as the last. A corn or wart, which grows between the fingers and toes, especially between the latter. — Pliny.

INTERÉPINEUX CERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERFEMINEUM, Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFŒNIUM NARIUM, Septum narium.

INTERFEMIN'EUM, (inter, 'between,' and femina, feminis, the inner part of the thigh,) Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFORAMINEUM, Perinæum.

INTERGANGLION'IC, Interganglion'icus, from inter, 'between,' and ganglion, 'a knot.' An oethor for nervous cords, placed between ganglia, which they connect together.

INTERITUS, Death.

INTERLOB'AR, Interloba'ris, (F.) Interlobaire, from inter, 'between,' and lobus, 'a lobe.' That which is between lobes,—as of the lungs.

INTERLOB'ULAR, Interlobula'ris, from inter, 'between,' and lobulus, 'a small lobe.' That which is between lobules,—as of the lungs.

INTERLOBULAR FISSURES. The intervals between the lobules of the liver. The narrower spaces are called Fissuræ interlobulares, the wider spatia interlobulares. — Kölliker. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR PLEXUS OF THE BILIARY DUCTS. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR SPACES. The angular interstices formed in the liver by the apposition of several lobules.

INTERLOB'ULAR TISSUE, Textum interlobula're, Ligamenta interlobularia pulmonum. The cellular tissue between the pulmonary lobules.

INTERLOBULAR VEINS, see Liver.

INTERMAX'ILLARY, Intermaxilla'ris, from inter, 'between,' and maxilla, 'a jaw.' That which is situate between the maxillary bones.

INTERMAXILLARY BONE, Incisive, Palatine, or Labial bone, is a bony portion, wedged in between the two superior maxillary bones, which supports the upper incisors. This bone is found in the mammalia; and, also, in the human fœtus.

INTERMÈDE, Excipient.

INTERMEDIA LIGAMENTALIA seu NERVEA, Inscriptiones tendinæ musculorum.

INTERMÉDIAIRE DE WRISBERG, Portio Wisbergii.

INTERMEDIATE VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

INTERMENT, Premature, Zoothapsis.

INTERMISSION, Intermissio, Dialepsis, Diadipsis, Tempus intercalare, Interval'um, from inter, 'between,' and mittere, missum, 'to put or send.' (F.) Intermittence. The interval which occurs between two paroxysms of an intermittent or other disease—during which the patient is almost in his natural state. There is said to be intermission of the pulse, when, in a given number of pulsations, one or more may be wanting.

INTERMITTENCE, Intermission.

INTERMITTENT, Intermittens. Same etymon. That which has intermissions.

INTERMITTENT FEVER, Febris intermittens, Dialepsyria, Intermittens, Au'ctus, Pyretotypo'sis, Ague, Ague and Fever, Fever and Ague, Paludal or Periodic Fever, (Prov.) Agah, Cold-chill, Shaking, Shakes, (Old Eng.) Aksis, Anggere, Axes, (F.) Fièvre intermittente, F. d'Accès, F. des marais, F. Périodique, is a fever consisting of paroxysms, with a complete state of apyrexia in the intervals. The chief types are the Quotidian, Tertian, and Quartan. The symptoms of intermittents are those of a decided and completely marked cold stage: (F.) Stade de froid, attended with paleness; collapse; impaired sensibility; and coldness, more or less diffused, followed by general rigors. After this occurs the hot stage; Stade de la Chaleur, the heat returning partially and irregularly, and at length becoming universal, and much above the standard of health. The pulse is now hard and strong; tongue white; urine high-coloured; thirst considerable. At length, the sweating stage, (F.) Stade de Sueur, makes its appearance; the moisture usually beginning on the forehead, face, and neck, and soon extending universally; the heat abating; thirst ceasing; the urine throwing down a sediment, and the functions being gradually restored to their wonted state. The tertian type is the most common, and the quartan the most severe. The quotidian more readily changes into a remittent and continued fever. The quartan has, generally, the longest cold stage, the tertian the longest hot. The chief exciting cause is marsh miasmata. Ague, also, occurs in districts where there are no marshy emanations. Such districts are, generally, of a volcanic nature; further we know not. When the disease has once attacked an individual, it is apt to recur. The prognosis is, in general, favourable, as far as regards life; but long protracted intermittents are apt to induce visceral obstructions, and engorgements, which may end in dropsy. In some countries, the disease is of a very pernicious character. The indications of treatment are, 1. To abate the violence of the paroxysm; and, 2. To prevent its return. The first indication demands the adoption of the general principles and remedies required in ordinary fever. The second is the most important. The period of apyrexia is that for action. The means for fulfilling this indication are:—the use of emetics, purgatives, cinchona, quinia, &c., arsenic, and forcible impressions made on the mind of the patient.

INTERMUSCULAR, Intermuscularis, from inter, 'between,' and musculus, 'a muscle.' That which is placed between muscles.

INTERMUSCULAR APONEUROSES are aponeurotic laminae or septa, situate between muscles, to which they often give attachment.

INTERNAL, Inner, Inter'nus. That which is placed on the inside. This epithet is given to parts that look towards an imaginary central plane, which divides the body into two equal and symmetrical portions, as well as to those which correspond with a cavity. Thus, we say—the internal or inner surface of the arm or thigh, skull, &c.

INTERNAL DISEASES, Morbi inter'ni, are those which occupy the inner parts of the body. Their investigation belongs to the physician; external diseases falling under the management of the surgeon.

INTERNAT. The post or office of an interne.

INTERNE, see House-Surgeon.

INTERNODIA DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers—i. Digitorum pedis, Phalanges of the toes.

INTERNO'DIUM, from inter, 'between,' and nodus, 'a knot.' The part of the fingers between the joints. A phalanx.

INTERNUN'CIAL, Internuncialis, from inter, 'between,' and nuncius, 'a messenger.' Relating or belonging to a messenger between parties. A term applied by Mr. Hunter to the functions of the nervous system.

INTERNUNTII DIES, Critical days.

INTERNUN'CIUS AURIS, Tensor tympani—i. Mallei, Tensor tympani.

INTEROSSEOUS, Interosseus. That which is situate between the bones; from inter, 'between,' and os, 'a bone.'

INTEROSSEOUS ARTERIES OF THE FOREARM AND HAND. Of these there are several. The common interosseous artery arises from the posterior part of the ulnar, a little below the bicipital tuberosity of the radius; passes backwards and divides into two branches: the one called anterior interosseous descends vertically, anterior to the interosseous ligament; the other, called posterior interosseous, passes above the ligament, appears at its posterior part and divides into two great branches,—the posterior recurrent radial and the posterior interosseous, properly so called. In the hand,—1. The dorsal metacarpal interosseous arteries are given off by the dorsalis carpi, a division of the radial artery. 2. The palmar interosseous arteries, which arise from the convexity of the deep palmar arch, and give off the middle interosseous arteries. 3. The dorsal interosseous of the index, proceeding directly from the radial artery. In the foot, are distinguished:—1. The dorsal interosseous arteries, three in number, which arise from the artery of the metatarsus, a branch of the dorsalis tarsi. 2. The plantar interosseous arteries, which are, also, three in number, and arise from the plantar arch.

INTEROSSEOUS LIG'AMENTS. Ligaments seated between certain bones, which they unite; such are the ligaments between the radius and ulna, and between the tibia and fibula.

INTEROSSEOUS MUSCLES. These occupy the spaces between the bones of the metacarpus and metatarsus; and, consequently, belong,—some to the hand, others to the foot.

INTEROSSEOUS NERVE is a branch, given off by the median nerve, which descends before the interosseous ligament, accompanying the artery of the same name.

INTEROSSEOUS VEINS have the same arrangement as the arteries.

INTEROSSEUS MANÛS, (F.) Muscle interosseus de la main.—Métacarpo-phalangien-latéral sus-palmaire et métacarpo-phalangien latéral, (Ch.) These muscles are seven in number; two for each of the three middle fingers, and one for the little finger. Four are situate on the back of the hand, and three only in the palm. They are inserted into the metacarpal bones, and send a tendon to the tendon of the extensor communis. According to their office, they are, to each finger, an adductor and an abductor. The index has a dorsal abductor and a palmar one. The middle finger has two dorsal muscles for adductor and abductor; the ring finger has a dorsal adductor and a palmar abductor; and the little finger has only one interosseous abductor, which is palmar. These muscles produce abduction and adduction of the fingers, which they can also extend, owing to their connexion with the extensor tendons.

INTEROSSEUS PEDIS, Métatarso-phalangien-latéral, (Ch.) The number, arrangement, shape, and uses of these are the same as in the case of the preceding muscles. Four are dorsal, and three plantar: six belong to the three middle toes and one to the little toe. The great toe is devoid of them. As in the hand, they are distinguished, in each toe, into abductor and adductor.

INTEROSSEUS SECUNDES, Prior medii digiti—i. Quartus, Prior annularis.

INTEROSSEUS DE LA MAIN, Interosseus manus.

INTERPARI'ETAL BONE, Os Interparietale. A bone found in the skulls of the children of the Peruvian races. It lies in the situation of the upper angle of the occipital bone, where the parietal bones separate from each other; and is the analogue of the interparietal bone of ruminants and carnivora.—Tschudi.

INTERPEDUN'ULAR, Interpeduncularis; from inter, 'between,' and pedunculi, 'peduncles.' A term, applied to that which is placed between the peduncles of the encephalon,—as Interpeduncular space; a lozenge-shaped interval, behind the diverging peduncles or crura of the cerebrum, in which are found the posterior perforated space, corpora albicantia, tuber cinereum, or infundibulum, and pituitary body.

INTERPELLA'TUS, (Morbns.) from interpello, (inter, and pello.) 'I interrupt.' A term, by which Paracelsus designated those diseases whose progress is unequal, and paroxysms irregular.

INTERPLEVRO-COSTAUX, Intercostal muscles.

INTERPOLATUS, Intercalary.

INTERRUPTIO MENSTRUATIONIS, Amenorrhœa.

INTERSCAP'ULAR, Interscapularis, (inter, and scapula.) That which is between the shoulders; as the interscapular region. The interscapular cavities, Cavitates interscapulares, are the depressions between the scapulae and the spinous processes of the vertebrae.

INTERSCAPULIUM. The spine of the scapula.

INTERSECTIO, Decussation, Intersection.

INTERSECTION, Intersec'tio, Diac'opē, from inter, 'between,' and seco, sectum, 'to cut.' The point where two lines meet and cut each other. The name aponeurotic intersection is given to fibrous bands, which certain muscles present in their length, and by which they seem interrupted. Aponeurotic intersections are found in the recti muscles of the abdomen; in the semi-membranosus, complexus, sterno-thyroides, &c.

INTERSECTIONS TENDINEÆ MUSCULORUM, Inscriptiones tendineæ musculorum.

INTERSEPIMENTUM THORACIS, Mediastinum.

INTERSEPTA HORIZONTALIA PACCHIONI, Tentorium.

INTERSEPTUM, from inter, 'between,' and septum, 'a partition.' Cion, κίον. The uvula; also, the septum narium. The diaphragm.

INTERSEPTUM NARIUM, Septum narium—i. Virginale, Hymen.

INTERSPINAL, Interspinalis, from inter, 'between,' and spina, 'the spine.' That which is seated between the spinous processes.

INTERSPINAL LIGAMENT, Membrana interspinalis, (F.) Ligament interépineux. These occupy the intervals between the spinous processes in the back and loins. In the neck, they are replaced by the muscles of the same name. They prevent the too great flexion of the spine, and keep the spinous processes in situ. The outermost thickened portions of these are, sometimes, termed Ligament'a d'apicium.

INTERSPINALES COLLI, Spinales Colli minores, Spinal'ti, (F.) Interépineux-cervicaux, Intercervicaux, (Ch.) These are twelve in number, and occupy, in two parallel rows, the intervals between the spinous processes of the cervical vertebrae, from that of the atlas and vertebra dentata, to that between the last cervical and first dorsal vertebra. They are flat, thin, and quadrilateral. These muscles contribute to the extension of the neck and to throwing the head backwards.

INTERSPINALES DORSI ET LUMBORUM; portions of the Transversaire-épineux of Boyer, and the sacro-spinal of Chaussier. These muscles are of two kinds. The one (Muscle grand épineux du dos, of Winslow) representing fleshy bundles of different lengths, applied upon the lateral surfaces of the spinous processes, from the third dorsal vertebra to the second lumbar. The other (Muscle petit épineux du dos, Winslow) covered by the preceding. They are situate on each side of the interspinal ligament, in the form of small, short flat bundles, which pass from one spinous process to the second, third or fourth above it. These muscles aid in extending the vertebral column; and incline it a little to one side, when they act on one side only.

INTERSTICE, Interstitium, Aræ'oma, from inter, 'between,' and sto, 'I stand.' Diaste'ma, Intervallum. Anatomists have given this name to the intervals between organs. The iliac crest, crista ilii, for example, has two lips and an interstice between them, which affords attachment to the lesser oblique muscle of the abdomen.

INTERSTICE, Pore.

INTERSTITIAL, Interstitia'lis, same etymon. Applied to that which occurs in the interstices of an organ, — as 'interstitial absorption,' 'interstitial pregnancy,' &c.

INTERSTITIUM, Interstice — i. Ciliare, Ciliary ligament — i. Intercostale, Intercostal space — i. Jugulare, Throat.

INTERTINCTUS, Discreet.

INTERTRACHÉLIENS, Intertransversales colli.

INTERTRANSVERSAIRES DES LOMBES, Intertransversales lumborum.

INTERTRANSVERSALIS, Intertransversairins. That which is placed between the transverse processes of the vertebrae.

INTERTRANSVERSALES COLLI, (F.) Intertransversaires cervicaux, Intertrachéliens, (Ch.) These are small, muscular bundles; quadrilateral; thin and flat; situate, in pairs, in the intervals between the transverse processes of the neck, except between the first and second, where there is only one. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former are six in number; the latter five. These muscles bring the transverse processes of the neck nearer each other, and contribute to the lateral flexion of the neck.

INTERTRANSVERSALES LUMBORUM, Musculi intertransversi lumborum, (F.) Intertransversaires des lombes. These are almost entirely fleshy, and ten in number; five on each side. They are similar to the preceding in general arrangement; except that they are more marked, and not placed in two rows. Each intertransverse space contains only one. They are quadrilateral, and flat. The first occupies the space between the transverse processes of the first lumbar and the last dorsal vertebra; and the last is between that of the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebrae. These muscles incline the lumbar regions laterally; and straighten it when inclined to one side.

INTERTRIGO, Chafing — i. Podicis, Chafing.

INTERVAL, LUCID, see Lucid.

INTERVALLUM, Intermission, Interstice — i. Intercostale, Intercostal space.

INTERVENIUM, Mesophlebium.

INTERVERTEBRAL, Intervertebra'lis, (inter, and vertebra.) That which is situate between the vertebrae.

INTERVERTEBRAL CARTILAGES, Fibro-cartilages or discs, Ligament'a intervertebra'lia, Fibro-cartilagin'ines intervertebra'les. These organs are of a fibro-cartilaginous nature; sections of a cylinder; flexible; whitish; resisting; and situate between the bodies of the vertebrae, — from the space between the second and third as far as that between the last vertebra and sacrum. Their form is accommodated to that of the vertebra with which they are in connexion; so that, in the neck and loins, they are oval, whilst in the dorsal region they are nearly circular.

INTERVERTEBRAL DISCS, Intervertebral cartilages — i. Fibro-cartilages, Intervertebral cartilages.

INTESTABILIS, Castratus.

INTESTATUS, Castratus.

INTESTIN, Intestine.

INTESTINAL, Intestina'lis, Enter'icus, Enter'ic, (F.) Entérique, from intus, 'within.' That which belongs to the intestines, — as intestinal canal, &c. Bordeu uses the term Pouls intestinal for a pulse, which he conceived to announce an approaching crisis by the intestines.

INTESTINAL JUICE, Succus entericus.

INTESTINAL TUBE or TRACT, Cana'lis seu Tractus intestino'rum. The canal formed by the intestines from the pyloric orifice of the stomach to the anus.

INTESTINE, Intesti'num, Ent'eron, Chorda, Gut, Nedyia (pl.), Pan'tices (pl.), Buel'i (pl.), Bowel, (F.) Intestin, Boyau. Same etymon. A musculo-membranous canal, variously convoluted, which extends from the stomach to the anus, and is situate in the abdominal cavity; the greater part of which it fills. In man, its length is six or eight times that of the body. It is divided into two principal portions, called small intestine and large intestine. The former, Intesti'num *ten'ue, I. grac'ile, (F.) Intestin grêle, constituting nearly four-fifths of the whole length, begins at the stomach and terminates in the right iliac region. It is divided into duodenum, jejunum and ileum. Some anatomists give the name small intestine to the last two only; which are kept in place by the mesentery, and form a large paquet, occupying the umbilical and hypogastric regions, a part of the flanks, of the iliac regions, and of the cavity of the pelvis. It is composed of, 1. A serous membrane, which is peritoneal. 2. Of a muscular coat, whose fibres are very pale, and are placed, in part, longitudinally; but the greater part transversely. 3. Of a whitish, mucous membrane; villous, and forming folds or valves—valvulae conniventes—at its inner surface, and furnished with a number of mucous follicles, called glands of Lieberkühn, (Crypts or Follicles of Lieberkühn.) and in the duodenum with the glands of Brunner. The arteries of the small intestine proceed from the superior mesenteric; its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves proceed from the superior mesenteric plexus. The large intestine, Intestin crassum, Megalocolia, (F.) Gros intestin, forms a sequence to the small. It is much shorter, and is solidly attached in the regions of the abdomen which it occupies. It begins in the right iliac region; ascends along the right flank, till beneath the liver, when it crosses the upper part of the abdomen, descends into the left iliac fossa, and plunges into the pelvic cavity, to gain the anus. The great intestine is usually divided into three portions,—the cæcum, colon and rectum. It receives its arteries from the superior and inferior mesenterics. Its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves are furnished by the mesenteric plexuses. Its lymphatic vessels, which are much less numerous than those of the small intestine, pass into the ganglions or glands seated between the different reflections of the peritoneum, which fix it to the abdominal parietes. The use of the intestines is,—in the upper part, to effect the chylification of the food and the absorption of the chyle;—in the lower, to serve as a reservoir, where the excrementitious portion of the food collects; and, also, as an excretory duct, which effects its expulsion.*

INTESTINORUM LEVITAS, Lientery.

INTESTINULA CEREBRI, Convulsions (cerebral)—i. Meibomii, Meibomius, glands of.

INTESTINULUM, Funiculus umbilicalis.

INTOXICATION, Poisoning, Temulentia—i. Antimoniale, Stibialism—i. des Marais, see Miasm.

INTOXICATION SATURNINE. Lead poisoning; saturnine cachexy. The aggregate of symptoms which present themselves prior to an attack of lead colic.—Tanquerel des Planches.

INTRALINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

INTRALOBULAR, Intralobularis; from intra, 'within,' and lobulus, 'a lobule.' Relating to the space within a lobule:—as the "intralobular veins," venæ seu venulæ intralobulares seu centrales, of the liver:—veins which communicate with the interlobular veins, and are the radicles of the hepatic veins.

INTRA-PELVIO TROCHANTÉRIEN, Ob-turator internus.

INTRA-U'TERINE, Intrauterinus; from intra, 'within,' and uterus, 'the womb.' That which takes place within the womb—as 'intra-uterine life.'

INTRICATURA, Decussation.

INTRIN'SIC, Intrinsecus; from intra, 'within,' and secus, 'towards.' Applied to the internal muscles of certain organs; as those of the ear, tongue, and larynx. Linnæus gave the name Intrinseci to internal diseases.

INTROTUS PVLVIS, see Pelvis—i. Vagina, Rima vulvæ.

INTROMIS'SION, Intromissio; from intro, 'within,' and mitto, missum, 'I send.' The act of introducing one body into another, as Intromissio Penis, (F.) Intromission de la Verge.

INTROSUSCEPTIO, Intussusceptio—i. Entropium, Entropion.

INTUBUM, Cichorium endivia—i. Erraticum, Cichorium intybus.

INTUMES'CENTE, Intumescen'tia, Onco'sis, Diouco'sis, from intumescere, (in, and tumescere, 'to swell.') Augmentation of size in a part or in the whole of the body. Sauvages uses the word Intumescen'tiæ for an order of diseases, in which he comprehends polysarcia, pneumatosis, anasarca, œdema, physconia, and pregnancy.

INTUMESCENTIA GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser, see Facial nerve—i. Lactea Mammæ, Sparganosis—i. Lienis, Splenoncus—i. Semilunaris, Ganglion of Gasser.

INTUS INVER'SUS, Transposition of the viscera.

INTUSSUSCEPT'IO, from intus, 'within,' and suscipio, susceptum, 'I receive.' Intussuscept'io. In physiology:—the mode of increase peculiar to organized bodies. In pathology, like Convolut'entulus, Volvulus seu Suscept'io seu Parityoga'gê intestinorum, Chordop'sus, Enteroparisisag'yê, Indigita'tio, Tormentum, and Invaginat'io, it means the introduction of one part of the intestinal canal—intussuscept'ionem—into another, which serves it as a sort of vagina or sheath. Generally, it is the upper part of the small intestine, which is received into the lower—intussuscept'ionem—when the intussusception is said to be progressive. At times, however, it is retrograde. As the disease cannot be positively detected by the symptoms, it must be treated upon general principles. At times, the invaginated portion has separated and been voided per anum,—the patient recovering. The disease is, however, of a very dangerous character.

INTUSSUSCEPTUM, see Intussusceptio.

INTUSSUSCIP'ENS, see Intussusceptio.

INTYBUM, Cichorium endivia.

INTYBUS HORTENSIS, Cichorium endivia.

INULA, see Inula helenium—i. Britannica, I. dysenterica—i. Common, I. helenium—i. Conyzæ, I. dysenterica.

IS'ULA DYSENTERICA. The systematic name of the Lesser Inula, I. Britannica seu Coryzæ, Aster dysentericus seu undulatus, Pulicaria dysenterica, Conyzæ, C. media, Ar'nica Suedon'sis seu spuriæ, Cumi'la mus'cula seu media, Cuni'la'go, (Prov.) Mare's fat, (F.) Ance antidysenterique, Herbe de Saint Roch. Nat. Ord. Composite. This plant was once considered to possess great antidysenteric virtues. The whole plant is ueric and somewhat aromatic.

IS'ULA HELEN'UM. The systematic name of the El'campane, En'ula, E. camp'ana, Eleu'ium, Nect'arian, Helenium, Aster helenium seu affictu'alis, Caricac'tia helenium, Common Inula, (F.) Année ou Année officinale. The root In'ula

(Ph. U. S.) was formerly in high esteem in dyspepsia, cachexia, pulmonary affections, &c. It is now scarcely used.

INULA, LESSER, Inula dysenterica—i. Squarrosa, Conyza squarrosa.

INUNCTIO, Inunction, Liniment.

INUNCT'ION, Inunctio, Perunctio, Illit'io, Illitus, Illinit'io, Oblinit'io, Chrisis, Cutach'risis, Diach'risis, Epich'risis, Unctio, from inungere, inunctum, (in, and ungere, unctum), 'to anoint.' The act of rubbing in an ointment or a liniment, unctio, (F.) Oction, Inunction. Inunction of the whole body with a piece of bacon, lard, or with oil, has been recommended in scarlatina, measles, and in serofulous or tuberculous cachexia.

INUNDATIO, Depuration.

INUSTIO, Cauterization, Cauterium.

INUSTORIUM, Cauterium.

INVAGINATED, Invaginat'us, from in, and vagina, 'a sheath.' Applied to a part which is received into another, as into a sheath.

The invaginated or slit and tail bandage is one in which strips or tails pass through appropriate slits or button-holes.

INVAGINATIO, Intussusceptio.

INVAGINATION, Invaginat'io. Intussusceptio. Also, an operation, which consists in introducing one end of a divided intestine into the other, with the view of restoring the continuity of the intestinal canal.

The name Invagination is, likewise, given to an operation for the radical cure of crural hernia, which consists in introducing into the crural canal a thick tent of charpie, the effect of which is, by compression and adhesive inflammation, to obliterate the neck of the hernial sac.—Nysten.

INVALETUDO, Infirmary.

INVALID, Valetudinary.

INVALIDING, (F.) Réforme. The removal from the army of a soldier, who has become, from infirmity, unfit for service.

INVALIDUS, Valetudinary.

IODE, Iodine.

ODES, Æruginous.

IODETUM HYDRARGYRICUM, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

IODHYDRARGYRITE DE CHLORURE MERCUREUX, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

IOD'IC, Iod'icens, (F.) Iodique. Same etymon as Iodine. Containing iodine.

IODIDUM HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDI,

Mercury, iodide of chloride of—i. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—i. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri iodidum.

IODINE, Iod'ina, Iod'dinum (Ph. U. S., 1842), Iodini'mum (Ph. U. S., 1851), Iodini'eum, Iod'dum, Iod'dium, Iod'ium, Iod'num, (F.) Iode; from ιωδης, viol'icens, 'of a violet colour,' so called from the violet vapour it exhales when volatilized. It is contained in the mother waters of certain fuci, and is obtained by pouring an excess of concentrated sulphuric acid on the water obtained by burning different fuci, lixiviating the ashes and concentrating the liquor. The mixture is placed in a retort to which a receiver is attached, and is boiled. The iodine passes over and is condensed. It is solid, in the form of plates; of a bluish gray colour, of a metallic brightness, and smell similar to that of the chloride of sulphur. Its s. g. is 4.946. When heated, it becomes volatilized, and affords the vapour which characterizes it. With oxygen it forms Iodic acid, and with hydrogen Hydriodic acid. The tincture of iodine and the iodides have been employed with great success in the treatment of goitre and of some serofulous affections. It must be administered in a very small dose and for a long period. It is said to be apt, however, to induce cholera morbus, signs of great nervous irritability, Iodome'thē, (F.) Ivresse iodique, and enaciation of the mammae. When these symptoms, collectively termed Iodism, Jodo'sis, and Iodini'a, (F.) Cachexie iodée, are urgent, the dose may be diminished, or it may be wholly discontinued, and afterwards resumed.

Various preparations of iodine are employed in medicine.

IODINED, Iodized.

I'ODIZED, Iodined; Iodisa'tus. Impregnated, or affected with, iodine, or its preparations.

IODINIA, see Iodine.

IODIQUE, Iodic.

IODISM, see Iodine.

IODIUM, Iodine.

I'ODOFORM, Iodoformum, (F.) Iodoforme, Iodure de formyle; so called from its analogy to chloroform. It is obtained by the reaction on each other of iodine, bicarbonate of potassa, water, and alcohol. It is in crystalline plates, of a beautiful citrine colour; and may be given in the same cases as the other preparations of iodine. Dose, one grain, three times a day. It is the sesqui-iodide of carbon. See Carbonis sesqui-iodidum.

IOGNO'SIS, Iodognosis.

IOGNO'SIS, (F.) Iodognosie: from iodine, and γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A knowledge of iodine in its various relations.—Dorvault.

IODOHYDRARGYRATE OF POTASSIUM, see Iodine.

IODOMETHE, see Iodine.

IODOPE'GÆ, from iodum, 'iodine,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters containing iodine.

IODOPHTHISIE, from iodine, and φθισις, 'phthisis.' Loss of flesh and strength produced by iodine.

IODOSIS, see Iodine.

IODUM, Iodine.

IONIA, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IONIDIUM MARCUCCI, Cinchonchilli — a South American plant. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Violariæ; said to be extremely efficacious in the Mal de San Lazaro, of Colombia.

IONIUM, Iodine.

IONTA, see Excretion.

ION'THUS, Varus, Violet Eruption, from ion, 'the violet,' and athos, 'a flower,' or ovthos, 'foulness' [?]. An unsuppurative, tubercular tumour; stationary; chiefly on the face. A genus in the class Hæmatica, order Phlogistica of Good.

IONTHUS CORYMBIFER, Gutta rosea — i. Varus, Acne.

IONUM, Iodine.

IOTACIS'MUS, from the Greek letter Iota. Defective articulation, — the patient not being able to pronounce the palatals j and g soft.

IPECAC, Apocynum androsemfifolium. Euphorbia corollata, Gillenia trifoliata, Ipecacuanha, Triosteum — i. American. Apocynum androsemfifolium — i. Wild, Euphorbia ipecacuanha.

IPECACUANHA. In common parlance, often abridged to Ipecac, and in Ireland to Hippo. The pharmacopœial name of the root of Cephaelis seu Callicocca ipecacuanha, Ipecacuanha, Cagnosauga, Hypocuanha, Hippocuanha, (F.) Ipecacuanha amelé. Nat. Ord. Cinchonaceæ. It is also obtained from the Psychotria emetica of Peru. The odour of the root, Ipecacuanha root, Ipecacuanhæ radix, Radix Brazilian'sis, — Ipecacuanha (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Racine Brésilienne ou de Brésil, — is faint and peculiar; taste bitter, subacid, and mucilaginous; both water and alcohol extracts its virtues, which depend on a peculiar principle, called Emetia. It is emetic in large doses; sudorific in smaller. Dose, as an emetic, gr. xx to xxx, — alone, or united with gr. i. to ij of tartarized antimony.

IPECACUANHA, Euphorbia corollata, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — i. Amelé, Ipecacuanha — i. Bastard, Asclepias curassavica, Triosteum perforiatum — i. Blanc de l'Île de France, Tylophora asthmatica — i. Blanc de St. Domingue, Asclepias curassavica — i. of the Isle of France, Tylophora asthmatica.

IPECACUANHA, WHITE, is obtained from different species of Richardsonia and Ionidium. Vitola ipecacuanha seu Solea ipecacuanha seu Pombalea ipecacuanha also affords it. It is weaker than the gray.

IPO, Upas.

IPOMŒA BATATOÏDES, see Convolvulus jalapa — i. Jalapa, Convolvulus jalapa — i. Macrorrhiza, Convolvulus jalapa — i. Mestitanica, see Convolvulus jalapa — i. Nil, Convolvulus nil — i. Operculata, see Batata de purga — i. Orizabensis, see Convolvulus jalapa — i. Purga, see Convolvulus jalapa — i. Schiedeana, see Convolvulus jalapa.

IRA, Rage.

IRACUNDUS, Rectus externus oculi.

IRAL'GIA; Ireal'gia, Iridall'gia, from iris, 'the iris,' and alghos, 'pain.' Pain in the iris.

IRASCIBLE, Rectus externus oculi.

IREALGIA, Irealgia.

IREONCION, Iriancistron.

IRIAN, Iria'nus, (F.) Irien. Belonging to the iris.

IRIANCIS'TRON, Iridancistron, Ireon'eion, from iris, and αγκιστρον, 'a hook.' A hooked instrument, used by Schlagintweit in the formation of an artificial pupil.

IRIDÆA EDU'LIS. One of the Algae, eaten in Scotland and the Southwest of England.

IRIDALGIA, Irealgia.

IRIDANCISTRON, Iriancistron.

IRIDAUXE'SIS, from iris, iridia, and αυξησις, 'augmentation;' Staphylo'ma Iridis, S. U'vææ, Iridocœ'cis, Lymphom'cus Iridis. Exudation of fibrin into the tissue of the iris.

IRIDECTOMIALYSIS, see Coretomia.

IRIDECTOMIA, see Coretomia.

IRIDENCELEISIS, see Coretomia.

IRIDENCEISMUS, see Coretomia.

IRIDERE'MIA, from iris, iridia, and ερημος, 'deprived of;' Iridostere'sis. Absence of iris, either apparent or real.

IRIDITIS, Iritis.

IRIDOCELE, Ptosis Iridis.

IRIDOCOLOBOMA, Coloboma iridis.

IRIDODIALYSIS, Coretomia.

IRIDODONE'SIS, from iris, and δονω, 'I shake.' Tremulousness of the Iris. See Hippus.

IRIDOMALA'CIA, from iris, iridia, and μαλακία, 'softness.' Mollescence or softening of the iris.

IRIDOMELANO'MA, Iridomelanosis, from iris, and μελανειν, 'to colour black.' The deposition of black matter on the tissue of the iris.

IRIDONCO'SIS, Iridon'cus, Ironco'sis, Hyperronco'sis Iridis, from iris, and ογκος, 'a swelling.' Tumefaction or thickening of the iris. Also Iridauxesis.

IRIDONCUS, Iridoneosis.

IRIDOPERIPHACITIS, Iridoperiphaki'tis, from iris, περι, 'around,' and φαικίτις, inflammation of the lens. Inflammation of the anterior hemisphere of the capsule of the lens.

IRIDOPLANIA, Hippus.

IRIDOPTOSIS, Ptosis iridis.

IRIDORRHAGAS, Iridorrhog'gæ, Iridor'rhoæ, Iridoschia'sma, Fissur'a Iridis, from iris, and ρῥαγας, 'a fissure.' Fissure of the iris. See Coloboma.

IRIDORRRHOGE, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDORRHIX, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDORRHISMA, Coloboma Iridis, Iridorrhagas.

IRIDOSTERESIS, Irideremia.

IRIDOTENCELEISIS, Coretomia.

IRIDOTOMEDIALYSIS, see Coretomia.

IRIDOTOMIA, see Coretomia.

IRIDOTROMUS, Hippus.

IRIEN, Irian.

IRIS, (gen. Iridis) Grammè. So called from its resembling the rainbow in a variety of colours. A membrane, stretched vertically at the anterior part of the eye, in the midst of the aqueous humour, in which it forms a kind of circular, flat partition, separating the anterior from the posterior chamber. It is perforated by a circular opening called the pupil, which is constantly varying its dimensions, owing to the varying contractions of the fibres of the iris. Its posterior surface has been called uvea, from the thick, black varnish which covers it. The pigmentary stratum, on its free surface, appears to be bounded by a delicate, but sharply defined, line, which has been described as a special membrane — Membrana pigmenti seu limitans seu limitans Pacini seu Jacob'i Arnold. The greater circumference of the iris is adherent to the ciliary processes and circle. It has an external plane of radiated fibres and an internal one of circular fibres, which serve — the one to dilate, the other to contract the aperture of the pupil. The iris receives the irian nerves. Its arteries are furnished by the long ciliary arteries, which form two circles by their anastomoses; the one very broad, near the great circumference; the other, smaller, and seated around the circumference of the pupil. The veins of the iris empty themselves into the Vasa vorticiosa, and into the long ciliary veins. The use of the iris seems to be, — to regulate by its dilatation or contraction, the quantity of luminous rays necessary for distinct vision. The different colours of the iris occasion the variety in the colours of the human eye.

IRIS, see Herpes Iris — i. Common, I. Germanica — i. Commun, I. Germanica — i. de Floreuce, I. Florentina.

IRIS FLORENTINA, Florentine iris or orris, (F.) Iris de Floreuce. Order, Iridaceæ. The rhizoma of this plant is extremely acrid in its recent state; and, when chewed, excites a pungent heat in the mouth, that continues for several hours. When dried, the acrimony is lost, or nearly so, and the smell is very agreeable. It is indebted to its agreeable flavour for its retention in the pharmacopœias, although it is ranked as an expectorant. The orris root of the shops is said to consist of the rhizomes of three species—I. Florentina, I. palida, and I. Germanica.

IRIS FÆTIDIS'SIMA, I. fœtida, Spathula fœtida, Xyris, Stinking iris, (F.) Iris puant, Glayent puant. The root has been esteemed antispasmodic and narcotic.

IRIS GERMANICA. The systematic name of the Flower-de-Luce, Iris nostras sen vulgaris, Aier'sa, Common iris or orris, Gladiolus carniolens, (F.) Iris commun, Flambe. The fresh roots have a disagreeable smell, and an acrid, nauseous taste. They are powerfully cathartic, and are given in dropsies, where such remedies are indicated.

IRIS HEXAGONA, I. versicolor.

IRIS LACUS'TRIS, Dwarf-flag, Dwarf lake-iris; has the properties of I. versicolor.

IRIS, LAKE, DWARF, I. leucostri — i. Lutea, I. pseudacorus — i. des Marais, I. pseudacorus — i. Nostras, I. Germanica — i. Palustris, I. pseudacorus.

IRIS PSEUDACORUS. The systematic name of the Yellow water-flag, Iris palustris sen lutæa, Gladiolus luteus, Acorn vulgaris seu adulterinus seu palustris, Pseudacorus, Bntomon, (F.) Iris des marais, Faux acore, Flambe bâlard, Acore bâlard. The root has an acrid, styptic taste. It is an errhine, sialogogue, and acrid astringent. The expressed juice is diuretic, and said to be a useful application to serpiginous and other cutaneous affections. Rubbed on the gums, or chewed, it is said to cure toothache.

IRIS PUANT, I. fœtidissima — i. Stinking, I. fœtidissima.

IRIS VERSICOLOR, I. hexagona, Blue flag. The rhizoma of this is an active cathartic, and has been much used, as such, by the American Indians. It is reputed to be diuretic.

IRIS VIRGINICA, Slender Blue flag; and Iris verna, are said to have virtues like those of I. versicolor.

IRIS VULGARIS, I. Germanica.

IRITIS, Iritis.

IRITIS, Inflammation of the iris, Inflammatio Pridis, Irisitis, Iriditis, from Iris, and itis, denoting inflammation, Uveitis of some. The chief symptoms are;—change in the colour of the iris; fibres less movable; tooth-like processes shooting into the pupil; pupil irregularly contracted, with the ordinary signs of inflammation of the eye. If the inflammation does not yield, suppuration takes place; and although the matter may be absorbed, the iris remains immovable. It is often caused by syphilis. The general principles of treatment are, to deplete largely and exhibit mercury freely; along with attention to other means advisable in ophthalmia. The free use of quinia is sometimes serviceable. When the inflammation is seated in the serous covering of the iris, it is termed Iritis serosa.

IRONCOSIS, Iridoneosis.

IRRADIATION, Irradiatio (ir and radins). Shooting or proceeding from a centre—as an 'irradiating pain.'

IRREDUCIBLE, (F.) Irréductible. An epithet given to fractures, luxations, herniæ, &c., when they cannot be reduced.

IRREDUCTIBLE, Irreducible.

IRREGULAR, Irregularis, Anomalous; from ir, negation, and regula, 'a rule.' A term chiefly applied to the types of a disease; and also, to the pulse when its beats are separated by unequal intervals.

IRREGULAR PRACTITIONER. One who does not practise his profession according to rules sanctioned by law or custom.

IRREMEDIABLE, Incurable.

IRREPTIO, Attack.

IRRIGATION, Irrigatio, Embrocatio, Irro-ratio: 'the act of watering or moistening,' from ir, and rigo, 'I water.' The methodical application of water to an affected part, to keep it constantly wet.

IRRITABILITAS, Irritability—i. Halleriana, Irritability—i. Morbosa, see Subsultus tendinum — i. Vesicæ, Cysterethismus.

IRRITABILITY, Irritabilitas, from irrito, (in, 'negation,' and ritus, 'the usual manner,') 'I provoke.' Vis irritabilitatis, V. Vita, V. insita of Haller, V. vitalis of Gorter, Oscillatio of Boerhaave, Tonic power of Stahl, Vita propria, Irritabilitas Halleriana, Inherent power, Con- tractivity, Excitability, &c. (F.) Ieritabilité, I. Hallérienne. A power, possessed by all living, organized bodies of being acted upon by certain stimuli, and of moving responsive to stimulation. It is the ultimate vital property.

IRRITABLE, irritabilis. That which is endowed with irritability. Every living organized tissue is irritable; that is, capable of feeling an appropriate stimulus, and of moving responsive to such stimulus. Irritable is often used in the same sense as impressible, as when we speak of an irritable person, or habit, or temper. This last condition has been variously termed—Debil'itas nervosa, D. Erethis'io, Hypercine'sia nervosa, Neurotheu'ia, Neurosthen'ia, Sensibil'itas anom'ala, S. Morbosa, S. acuta.

IRRITAMEN, Irritant, Stimulus.

IRRITAMENTUM, Erethism, Irritant, Stimulus—i. Metallicum, Galvanism.

IRRITANT, Irritans, Irritamea, Irritamentum. Same etymon. That which causes irritation or pain, heat and tension; either mechanically, as puncture, acupuncture, or scarification; chemically, as the alkalies and acids; or in a specific manner, as cantharides.

Irritants are of great use in the treatment of disease.

IRRITATING POISON, see Poison.

IRRITATIO, Erethism, Gargale, Irritation.

IRRITATION, Irritatio, Erethis'io. Same etymon. The state of a tissue or organ, in which there is excess of vital movement; commonly manifested by increase of the circulation and sensibility. Broussais defines irritation to be:—the condition of an organ, the excitation of which is carried to so high a degree, that the equilibrium resulting from the balance of all the functions is broken. In this signification, he also uses the word surirritation, which he considered as a higher degree, and as the essential cause of fever. Irritation is the precursor of inflammation.

IRRITATION, MORBID, Constitutional irritation, Irritative fever, Pseudo-fever, is that excitement which occurs after injuries done to the body, or to any part thereof;—constituting cases of disease-sympathy.

IRRITATIVE FEVER, Irritation, morbid.

IRRORATIO, Irrigation.

IS. Fibre.

ISADELPH'IA, from ισος, 'equal,' and ἀδελφος, 'brother.' A double monstrosity, in which both bodies are equally and perfectly developed, and possessed of independent vital organs; and which are united by parts of little significance.—Gurl.

ISATIS TINCTORIA, Woad, Pastel. Ord. Cappariadaceæ. A European plant, whose leaves have a fugitive pungent smell, and an acrid durable taste. They are not used, however, in medicine at the present day, but are the source of the dye-stuff, isoad.

ISCA, Boletus igniarius.

ISCHÆMIA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Morbid retention or suppression of an habitual flux of blood, as of the hemorrhoidal or menstrual flux or of epistaxis. See Hæmatostasia.

ISCHÆMON, Ischæmonum. Same etymon. A medicine which restrains or stops bleeding.

ISMIESIS, from ισχω, 'to retain.' Suppression or retention of a discharge or secretion.

ISCHIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. In this volcanic isle, five miles from Naples, there are several thermal waters, one of which—that of Gurgitello—raises the thermometer of Fahr. to 167°.

ISCHIACUS, Ischiatic.

ISCHIADELPHUS, Ischiopages.

ISCHIADICUS MORBUS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervus, Sciatic nerve.

ISCHIAOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCH'IAGRA, Is'chias, Ischul'gia, from ισχιον, 'the haunch,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A name given to ischiatic gout. Nervo-popliteal neuralgia has, also, been so called.

ISCH'IAL, Isch'ialis. Relating or belonging to the ischium.

ISCHIALGIA, Ischiagra, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHIAS, Ischiagra—i. Nervosa Antica, Neuralgia femoro-prætibialis—i. Nervosa Cœmii, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervosa digitalis, Neuralgia cubito-digitalis—i. Nervosa postica, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. à Sparganosi, Phlegmatica dolens.

ISCHIATIC, Ischiol'ic, Ischiatic'us, Ischiol'icus, Isch'icus, Sciatic'ic, (F.) Ischiatique, from ισχιον, 'the haunch;' whence the word Sciatic. An epithet given to parts connected with the ischium. The SCIATIC NOTCHES, (F.) Échancrures Ischiatiques, are formed by this bone; the ISCHIATIC SPINE belongs to it, and gives attachment to the small sacro-sciatic ligament. The TUBEROSITY OF THE ISCHIUM, Os sedentarium, Tuber Is'chii, (F.) Tubérosité sciatique, is formed by it. It receives the insertions of different muscles of the thigh, and forms the projection on which the body rests when seated.

ISCHIATIC ARTERY, Sciatic Ar'tery, (F.) Artère Fémoro-Poplitée (Ch.) arises singly from the hypogastric, or with the gluteal; and seems to be really a continuation of the trunk of the hypogastric. It issues from the pelvis, at the lower part of the great sciatic notch; and, afterwards, divides into a considerable number of branches, which are distributed particularly to the posterior and superior region of the thigh.

ISCHIATIC REGION, Sciatic region; Regio ischiad'ica. The region of the hip.

ISCHIATIC VEIN presents the same arrangement as the artery.

ISCHIATICUS, Sciatic.

ISCHIATOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCHIDROS'IS, Sud'ris suppressio, Oligid'ria, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and ἰδρωσ, 'sweat.' Suppression of perspiration.

ISCHIO. In composition, belonging or relating to the ischium.

ISCHIOBLEN'NIA, Ischoblen'nia, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and βλενω, 'mucus.' The suppression of a morbid but habitual discharge of mucus.

ISCHIO-CAVERNO'SUS. Belonging to the ischium and corpus cavernosum.

ISCHIO-CAVERNOSUS muscle, Collat'ca'lis, Director seu Erector seu Sustentator Penis, (F.) Érecteur du Pénis, Ischio-uréthral, (Ch.) is a small, long, flat muscle, which surrounds the origin of the corpus cavernosum. It is fixed below to the inner side of the tuberosity of the ischium, and above to the root of the penis, where it is confounded with the fibrous membrane of the corpus cavernosum. It draws the root of the penis downwards and backwards.

ISCHIO-CAVERNOSUS of the female, Erector seu Sustentator seu Superior rotundus clitoridis, (F.) Ischio-clitorid'icæ, Ischio-sous-clitorien, (Ch.) is arranged nearly as in the male, but is less bulky. It arises, by aponeurosis, from the tuberosity of the ischium, and terminates by embracing the corpus cavernosum of the clitoris, to the erection of which it appears to contribute.

ISCHIOCE'LE, Ischiatoce'le, Ischiol'ic'le, Hernia ischiol'ica; from ισχιον, 'the ischium,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Ischiatic hernia. One in which the viscera issue by the great sciatic notch. It is a rare disease. The protruded parts must be reduced—the patient being placed in a favourable position, and they must be retained by a bandage.

ISCHIO-CLITORIANUS. That which is connected with the ischium and clitoris.

ISCHIO-CLITORIAN ARTERY of Chaussier is a division of the internal pudic, which furnishes the two arteries of the clitoris—the superficial and deep-seated.

ISCHIO-CLITORIAN NERVE, of the same professor, is the superior branch of the pudic nerve, which is distributed to the clitoris.

ISCHIO-CLITORIDIEN, Ischio-cavernosus—i. Coceygeus, Coceygeus—i. Crèti-tibial, Semitendinosus—i. Femoralis, Adductor magnus—i. Fémoro-péronier, Biceps flexor cruris—i. Périnéal, Transversus perinæi—i. Popliti-fémoral, Semi-membranosus—i. Popliti-tibial, Semi-membranosus—i. Prétibial, Semi-tendinosus—i. Sous-clitorien, Ischio-cavernosus—i. Sous-trochantérien, Quadratus femoris—i. Spino-trochantérien, Ischio-trochanterianus—i. Uréthral, Ischio-cavernosus.

ISCHIODYMIA, see Somatodymia.

ISCHION, Ischium, Os ischii, Os coxæ indivisum, Hip-bone, Huckle-bone, Seat-bone, (Sc.) Heck-bone, Hukebane, Lunyebane, (Prov.) Chancebone, Pindone, (F.) Os de l'assiette. The lowermost of the three portions which compose the os innominatum in the fœtus and young individual. The inferior region of the same bone has, also, been called ischium, in the adult. According to Hesi-chius, the ancients designated by the word ischion the capsular ligament of the coxo-femoral articulation, as well as the articulation itself. Some derive the word from ισχίς, the lumbar region; others from the verb ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain';—because that bone serves as a base or support for the trunk, when we are seated.

ISCHION, Haunch.

ISCHIO-NEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro poplitea.

ISCHIOPAGES, Ischiadelphus, from Ischion, and παγω, 'I fasten.' A monstrous union of two fœtuses, in which they are attached to each other by the ischia.—Geoffroy St. Hilaire. See Hypogastrodidymus.

ISCHIOPHTHISIS, Tubes coxæ ria seu ischi-adica, Phthisis ischiadica, from ισχίον, 'ischium,' and phthisis. Phthisis in consequence of suppuration of the hip-joint. See Coxarum morbus.

ISCHIO-PRŌSTATICUS. Winslow, Sancto-rini, Albinus, and Sömmerring, have given this name to the fibres of the transversus perinæi muscle, which go towards the prostate.

ISCHIO-RECTAL FOSSA, Perineal fossa.

ISCHIOSIS, Neuralgia femoro poplitea.

ISCHIO-TROCHANTERIANUS, Gem'ini, Gemelli. Part of the Marsupial'is of Cowper; Car'neum Marsupium, Ischio-spini-trochantérien, Secundus et tertius quadrigeninus, (F.) Muscle cannelé, Accessoire à l'obturateur interne. Two small, fleshy bundles, long and flat, which arise,—the superior on the outside of the sciatic spine; the inferior behind the tuberosity of the ischium. Both pass horizontally outwards, and are attached to the tendon of the obturator internus, which they accompany into the fossa of the trochanter. These muscles are rotators of the lower limb outwards. They can, also, turn the pelvis on the femur, in standing on one foot.

ISCHIUM, Ischion.

ISCHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, which are in Upper Austria, contain iodine and bromine.

ISCHINOPIŌNIA, from ισχυος, 'slender,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Slenderness of voice.—Hippocrates, Galen.

ISCHNOTES, Emaciation.

ISCHO, ισχω, 'I keep back,' 'I restrain,' 'I hold firm.' Hence:

ISCHOBLENNIA, Ischioblennia.

ISCHOCENO'SIS, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and κένωσις, 'evacuation.' Retention or suppression of a natural evacuation—as of the menses.

ISCHOCOL'IA, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and χολη, 'bile.' Retentio bilis. Retention or suppression of the biliary secretion.

ISCHOCOL'IA, Constipation.

ISCHOCOL'IA, Constipation.

ISCHOGALAC'TIA, Retentio lactis, from ισχω, and γαλα, 'milk.' Want of milk in the mammae.

ISCHOLOCH'IA or Ischolochi'a, Lochios'chesis, Suppressio lochiorum, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and λοχεια, 'the lochial discharge.' Retentio lochiorum. Suppression of the lochial discharge.

ISCHOMENIA, Amenorrhœa.

ISCHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHOPHONIA, Balbuties.

ISCHOSPERM'IA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and σπέρμα, 'sperm'; Sem'inis retentio. Retention or suppression of the spermatie secretion.

ISCHURET'IC, Ischuret'icum. Same etymon as the next. A medicine for relieving suppression of urine. A diuretic.

ISCHUR'IA, Ur'inæ suppressio, Stoppage of urine, Suppressio lotii, Pard'ria retentio'nis; from ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Retention of, or impossibility of discharging, the urine, Anuro'rhée—Piorry. Often restricted to suppression of the secretion, Renal Ischuria, An'uria, Anuro'sis, Nephra'uria, Anuroer'nie.—Piorry.

Ischuria Vera is that in which the urine, having accumulated in the bladder, the patient is unable to pass it, notwithstanding the inclination which constantly distresses him. In false ischuria, Pard'ria inops, P. retentio'nis renal'is, Ischuria notha seu spu'ria, of some, (F.) Suppressio d'Urine, owing to some disease of the kidney or ureters, the urine cannot reach the bladder.

Ischuria has likewise received various other names, according to the seat and character of the obstacle which opposes the exit of the urine: hence the expressions—Renal, Ureteric, Vesical, Uréthral, and Calculous Ischuria. Vesical Ischuria is generally used synonymously with Retention of Urine, which see.

ISCHURIA CYSTO-PHLEGMATICA, Cystirrhœa—i. Phimosia, see Phimosicus—i. Spasmodic, Cystospasmus—i. Spuria, see Ischuria—i. Uréthralis à phimosi, see Phimosicus—i. Vera, see Ischuria—i. Vesicalis, Retention of urine.

ISIC'IUM, Psicos, Isic'ium, Tomac'ulum, Tom'aculum, Tomac'inum. A kind of sausage, formed of mixed meat and spices.

ISINGLASS, Ichthyocolla.

ISIR, Elixir.

ISIS NOBILIS, see Coral.

ISLAND OF REIL, Insula cerebri.

ISLE OF WIGHT, CLIMATE OF. This beautiful island is a favourable summer retreat for invalids. Undercliff is the situation chosen as a winter residence for phthisical valetudinarians. Cowes, Niton, Sandown, Shanklin, and Ryde, are delightful summer residences.

ISNARDIA PALUSTRIS, Ludwigia palustris.

ISCH'RONOUS, Isch'ronus, Isch'ron'us, Isod'romus, from ισος, 'equal,' and χρονος, 'time.' That which takes place in the same time, or in equal times. The pulsations of the arteries, in various parts of the body, are nearly isochronous.

ISCH'RYSON, Anro compar: from ισος, 'equal,' and χρυσος, 'gold.' A collyrium, described by Galen as worth its weight in gold. Libavius has also given this name to an amalgam, made with equal parts of antimony and mercury.

ISOC'RATES, from ισος, 'equal,' and κρατος, 'strength.' A mixture of equal parts of wine and water.—Hippocrates.

ISODROMUS, Isochronous.

ISOLUSINE, see Polygala senega.

ISOMERIC, Isomer'icus, Isom'er'icus, Isom'e'r'icus, Isom'or'icus, from isos, 'equal,' and μερος, 'part.' An epithet applied to different bodies which agree in composition, but differ in properties. The condition is termed Isomer'ism.

ISOMERISM, see Isomeric.

ISOMORPHISM, see Isomorphous.

ISOMORPHOUS, Isomor'phus, Isomor'phicus, from isos, 'equal,' and μορφη, 'form.' An epithet applied to different bodies which have the same crystalline form. The condition is called Isomorph'ism.

ISONANDRA GUTTA, see Gutta percha.

ISOPATHIA, Isop'athy, from isos, 'equal,' and παθος, 'disease.' This term has been used by some of the German writers to signify the cure of diseases by the disease itself, or its products;—under the hypothesis, that every contagious disease contains in its contagious matter the means for its cure;—thus, that variola may be cured by homoeopathic doses of variolous matter; syphilis, with venereal matter, &c., &c. Others have given to isopathy another form;—maintaining, that every diseased organ has its remedy in the same organ,—that eating liver, for example, will remove disease of the liver!

Isopathia has been used by an American writer—Dr. J. M. B. Harden, of Georgia—to mean "Parallelism of Diseases;" "the disposition of diseases to 'anastomose with each other,' or to wear each other's livery."

ISSUE, Fonticulus—i. Peas, Aurantia curasaventia, see Fonticulus.

ISTHME DU GOSIER, Isthmus of the fauces.

ISTHMIUM, Isthmus, Pharynx.

ISTHMITIS, Inflammat'io Fau'cium seu Palati, Aug'ina simplex seu mitis seu fau'cium, Augur fau'cium, Cynan'che simplex, (F.) Augine simple, from isthmus, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the isthmus faucium, and of the fauces. See Cynanche pharyngea, and Angina.

ISTHMIUM, Isthmus.

ISTHMOCATAR'RHUS; from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and καταρρους, 'catarrh.' Catarrh of the fauces.

ISTHMODYN'IA, from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and δύνη, 'pain.' Pain in the fauces.

ISTHMOPL'EGIA; from ισθμος, 'the fauces,' and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the fauces.

ISTHMOS, Pharynx.

ISTHMO'TYPHUS, Cynanche maligna.

ISTHMUS, Isth'mion, Isth'mium, (F.) Isthme. A tongue of land joining a peninsula to a continent, or which separates two seas. Anatomists have given the name Isthmus of the Fauces, I. Fau'cium, Claustrum Gut'turis, (F.) Isthme du gosier, to the strait which separates the mouth from the pharynx. It is formed above by the velum palati and uvula; at the sides, by the pillars of the fauces and the tonsils; and below, by the base of the tongue. Also, the Fauces.

ISTHMUS OF THE ENCEPHALON. The narrowed and constricted portion of the encephalic mass, situate between the cerebrum, the cerebellum and the medulla oblongata, which corresponds to the free margin of the tentorium cerebelli, and comprises the pons varolii, and middle peduncles of the cerebellum, the peduncles of the cerebrum, the tubercula quadrigemina, the superior peduncles of the cerebellum, and the valve of Vienssens.—Cruveilhier.

ISTHMUS OF THE FOSSA OVA'LIS: Isthmus Vienssen'ii, Striga cartilaginea cordis, is the prominent arch formed above the fossa ovalis by the union of the two pillars which bound the cavity.

ISTHMUS OF THE THYROID GLAND is a narrow band that unites the two chief lobules composing the thyroid gland.

ITHYPHAL'LUS, from ίθης, 'straight,' and φαλλος, 'penis.' An amulet, in the form of an erect penis, anciently worn round the neck, to which were attributed alexiterial properties.

ITINERARIUM, Conductor, Director.

ITIS, from ίτης, 'bold,' 'rash,' [?]. A suffix denoting inflammation;—as encephalitis, inflammation of the encephalon;—Pleuritis, inflammation of the pleura. According to some, as Kraus, encephalitis, for example, was, with the ancients, the adjective agreeing with ίσος, 'a disease,' understood to express a disease of the encephalon, and it was only in modern times, that the suffix was used to denote inflammation.

IVA, Teucrium iva—i. Arthritica, Teucrium chamæpitys—i. Moschata Monspeliensium, Teucrium iva—i. Pecanga, Smilax sarsaparilla.

IVETTE MUSQUÉE, Teucrium iva—i. Pelite, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IVOIRE, Ivory.

IVORY, Ebur, El'ephas, (F.) Ivoire. The tusk of the elephant. It is chiefly composed of phosphate of lime, and is used for the fabrication of pessaries, artificial teeth, handles of instruments, &c. Formerly, when calcined to whiteness, it entered into some pharmaceutical preparations. It was regarded as astringent and anthelmintic, and was called Spodium.

The dentine is the ivory of the human tooth. See Tooth.

 JARRET, Poples.
 JARRETIER, Poplitæus musclæ, Hamstring.
 JARRETIÈRE (F.), Peris'celis, a garter, from garretum or garretum, in low Latin, the ham. A kind of furfuraceous herpes, which occupies the part of the leg where the garter is worn.
 JASMIN, Jasminum officinale.
 JASMINUM ARABICUM, Coffea Arabum.
 JASMINUM OFFICINALE, Jasminum, Jesem'inum, the Jes'samine. (F.) Jasmin. Ord. Jasmineæ. The flowers of this beautiful plant have a very fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They afford, by distillation, an essential oil; which is much esteemed in Italy, for rubbing paralytic limbs, and in the cure of rheumatic pains.
 JASPER, Jaspis.
 JASPIS, Jasper. A precious stone, supposed by the ancients to be capable of arresting hemorrhage when worn as an amulet.
 JATAMANSI, Sumbul.
 JATROPHA CURCAS, (from ἰατρον, 'I heal,' and τροφω, 'I nourish.') Ric'innus major, Ric'innoides, P'innus seu Circas purgans, Pinh'ones Indici, Faba cathar'tica, Avella'na cathar'tica, Nux cathar'tica America'na seu Barbaden'sis, Physic Nut, (F.) Pignon d'Inde, Médecinier cathar'tique, Grand haricot de Péron, Pignon de Barbarie, Noix cathar'tique, N. Américaine ou des Barbades. Nat. Order, Euphorbiacææ. The seeds of this plant afford a quantity of oil, given, in many places, like the castor oil; to which, indeed, it is nearly allied. They contain a peculiar acid, the Jatrophic or Igasuric.
 The seeds of JATROPHA MULTIFIDA are called Purging Nuts, and give out a similar oil.
 JATROPHA ELASTICA, see Caoutchouc.
 JATROPHA MANIHOT, Jan'ipha Man'ihot, Man'ihot utilis'sima, Bitter Cassa'va. The plant affording the Cassa'da or Cassa'va Root, Cuca'vi, Cassa'vè, Cazabi, Pain de Madagascar, Ric'innus Minor, Man'ioc, Mandioc, Magnoc, Man'iot, Yucca, Man'ibar, Aipi, Aipina cozeva, Aipipoca, Jan'ipha. The juice of the root is extremely acrid and poisonous. What remains, after expressing it, is made into cakes or meal; of which the cassada or cassava bread is formed. This bread constitutes a principal food of the inhabitants of those parts where it grows.
 The fecula of the root forms Tapioca, Cipipa, Fec'ula Tapio'ka, An'ytlum manihot'icium, which is very nutritious. It may be prepared in the same manner as sago.

A factitious Tapioca is met with in the shops, which is in very small, smooth, spherical grains, and is supposed to be prepared from potato starch. It is sold under the name pearl tapioca.

JATROPHA URENS, A most deadly plant. The touch of its five bristly stings had nearly cost Mr. Smith, the curator of Kew gardens, his life.

JUCATO CALLELOE, Phytolacca decandra.

JUDÆUS, Judaicus seu Phœnicites Lapis, Tecol'ithos, (F.) Pierre Judœique. A stone, found in Judea, Palestine, &c. Called, also, Lapis Syriacus. It was formerly esteemed to be diuretic and lithontriptic.

JUDGMENT, Judic'ium, (F.) Jugement. The faculty of the intellect, by which ideas are compared with each other, and their relative worth appreciated.

JUDICATORII DIES, Critical days.

JUDICIUM, Judgment.

JUGA ALVEOLARIA, see Alveolar arches.

JUGA CEREBRALIA. Prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, between the digital impressions.

JUGAL, Zygomatic—j. Process, Zygomatic process.

JUGAL REGION, Re'gio Jugalis. The region of the cheek-bone.

JUGALE OS, Mala os.

JUGALIS, Zygomatic.

JUGALIS SUTURA, from ζυγοσ, jugum, (from jungere, junctum, 'to join,') 'a yoke.' The suture which unites the Os Mala or Os Jugalè with the superior maxillary bone. Also, the sagittal suture.

JUGEMENT. Judgment.

JUGEOLINE. Sesamum orientale.

JUGLANS, BLACK. J. nigra.

JUGLANS CINEREA (Ju-glans, quasi Jovis glans), Butter or Oil Nut, White Walnut. Ord. Juglandaceæ. The inner bark of the root of this tree, Juglans (Ph. U. S.), which is abundant in the United States, is used in medicine, in the form of extract, as an efficacious and mild laxative, in doses of from 10 to 20 grains. It is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUGLANS NIGRA, Black Juglans, Black Walnut; indigenous. The rind of the unripe fruit is said to remove ringworm and tetter. A decoction has been given as an anthelmintic.

JUGLANS RE'GIA, Juglans, Nux Juglans, Carya basilica, карга, Carya. The Walnut, French nut, (F.) Noyer, the tree; Noix, the nut, капов, Кар'гон. The unripe fruit, in the state in which it is pickled, was formerly esteemed to be anthelmintic. The putamen or green rind of the walnut has been celebrated as a powerful antisyphilitic, and used as a sort of diet drink. The kernel is an agreeable article of dessert; but, like all nuts, is difficult of digestion. The expressed oil, Huile de Noix, is used in France as an aliment, and, like other fixed oils, is laxative.

Various preparations of the leaves have been recommended in scrofulous affections.

JUG'ULAR, Jugula'ris, from jugulum, (itself from jugum, because the 'yoke' was attached there,) 'the throat.' Relating to the throat.

JUGULAR FOSSA, Fossa Jugula'ris, is a cavity in the petro-occipital suture. It is formed by the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and by the occipital bone, and lodges the origin of the internal jugular vein. It is, sometimes, called thimble-like cavity.

JUGULAR VEINS, Venæ Jugula'res seu sphagittides seu apoplec'ticæ seu sopora'les. These are situate at the lateral and anterior parts of the neck. They are two on each side; one external, the other internal. 1. The External Jugular Vein, Trachélo-sous-cutanéé, (Ch.) is of less size than the internal. It descends, almost vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the cervix of the lower jaw to the subclavian vein, into which it opens, a little above the internal jugular. It is formed by the internal maxillary, superficial temporal, and posterior auricular veins. It is this vein which is commonly opened in bleeding in the neck. 2. The Internal Jugular Vein, V. Céphalique (Ch.), Vena apoplec'tica, is much larger, and more deeply seated than the preceding. It descends, vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the posterior part of the foramen lacerum posterius as far as the subclavian vein. It commences at the sinus of the jugular vein, (F.) Golfe de la veine jugulaire, and receives the blood, which returns by the sinus of the dura mater, and that of the facial, lingual, pharyngeal, superior thyroid, occipital, and diploic veins.

JUGULUM, Clavicle, Throat—j. Uteri, Collum uteri.

JUGUM PENIS, Presse-urèthre.

JUICE, EXPRESSED, see Succus.

JU'JUBE, Ju'juba, Ziz'yphum, Baccæ jujubæ, B. Ziz'yphi. A word of Arabic origin. The fruit of Rhamnus Ziz'yphus seu Ziz'yphus vulgari's. Ord. Rhamnææ. A native of the south of Europe. It was formerly ranked amongst the pectoral fruits. It has an agreeable sweet taste. The fruits of two other species of Zizyphus—Z. jujuba, Rhamnus jujuba, Mansana orbo'rea, a native of the East Indies, and Z. lotus, Rhamnus lotus, Zizyphus nit'ida seu sati'va seu sylyves'tris, growing in North Africa, possess properties similar to those of Zizyphus vulgaris.

JUJUBE PASTE, Paste of jujubes.

JULAPIUM, Julep—j. Camphoræ, Mistura Camphoræ.

JULEB, Julep.

JULEP, Jula'pium, Jule'pus, Zula'pium, Juleb of the Persians. A sweet drink. A demulcent, acidulous or mucilaginous mixture.

JUMPERS, see Convulsivonaire.

JUNCTURA, Articulation.

JUNCUS ODORATUS, from jungere, junctum, 'to join,' in allusion to the use of rushes for bands. [J. Andropogon schœnan'thus seu bicor'nis seu citra'tus seu citrioda'rus, Cymbopogon schœnan'thus, Fœnum camelo'rum, Juncus aromat'icus, Camel's hay, Sweet rnh, Schœnan'thus, Schœnan'thum, Scœnan'thum, Cal'amus odora'tus, Squinan'thus, Gramen orienta'lè. (F.) Junc odorant, Foin de chameau. Ord. Graminææ. The dried plant, which is generally procured from Turkey and Arabia, has an agreeable smell, and a warm, bitterish taste. It was formerly used as a stomachic and deobstruent.

JUNGLE FEVER. A variety of remittent occurring in the jungle districts of India.

JUNIPER TREE, Juniperus communis.

JUNIPERUM VINUM. Wine impregnated with juniper berries.

JUNIPERUS COMMUNIS, J. Snee'ica, Arceuthos, Ju'niper tree; Akat'alis, Akat'era. (Sc.) Jenepere. Family. Coniferae. Scz. Syst. Diœcia Monadelphica. The berries, Juniperus (Ph. U. S.), (Sc.) Eatin-berries, Etwaigh-berries, are ordered in the pharmacopœias. Their odour is strong, but not unpleasant. Taste warm, pungent. Properties dependent upon essential oil, which they yield to both water and alcohol. Dose, ℞j to ℥ss, rubbed with sugar. In Holland, juniper berries are used for flavouring gin. The oil, O'leum juniperi, possesses the virtues of the plant. It is called, by Ruland, Targar. (F.) Genévrier (the plant), Genièvre (the berry).

JUNIPERUS LYCIA. This plant—Thu'rea, Th. virgo, Arbor thurifera—has been supposed to afford the true frankincense, Cedros Olib'amm, Thus Libano'tos, Libano'tum, Lib'anos, Thus mas'enlum, Thus verum, (F.) Encens. By some, however, it is supposed to be the produce of an Am'yris, and by others of Bosice'llia serro'ta, or B. thurifera. The odour of oilibanum is peculiar and aromatic; taste bitterish and slightly pungent; partly soluble in alcohol, and forming a milky emulsion, when triturated with water. It was formerly used in dysentery and hæmoptysis, but is now never employed except as a perfume in a sick room.

JUNIPERUS OXYCEDRUS. (F.) Genévrier Oxycèdre, Cade, Oxicèdre, Oxycèdre, grows in the south of Europe, Siberia, &c. By combustion of the wood, a liquid tar, O'leum ca'dinum, Juniperi o'leum empyrenmat'icum, Oil of Cade, (F.) Huile de Cade ou de Genévrier, is obtained, which is employed externally in various chronic cutaneous and other diseases.

JUNIPERUS SABINA, Sabi'na, S. ster'ilis, Savi'

na, Bruta, Cedrus baccifera, Common or barrea sarria; Brathu, Brathys, Bo'ratheru, Bo'athrou, (F.) Solina, Soriater. The odour of savin tops, Sabi'na of the pharmacopœias, is strong and disagreeable. Taste hot, acrid, and bitter, depending on an essential oil. Their operation is stimulant, emmenagogue, anthelmintic, and abortive; externally, escharotic. Dose, internally, gr. v to x of the powder. As an escharotic, they are applied in powder or formed into a cerate. The essential oil, O'leum Sabi'næ (Ph. U. S.), has the virtues of the savine. Dose, two to five drops.

JUSPERIS SPECICA, J. communis.

JUSPERIS VIRGINIANA, Red cedar. This tree is known throughout the United States by the name of arvine, and is often used for the same purposes. The tops and leaves are officinal in the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUNK, Pad.

JUNO LUCINA, Ilithyia.

JUNO'S TEARS, Verbena officinalis.

JUPITER, Tiu.

JUPITER'S BEARD, Sempervivum tectorum.

JURIBALI, Enribali. A tree in the forests of Pomeroun. Fam. Meliaceæ. Class, Octandria. Nat. Order, Monogynia. The bark is febrifuge, and may be given in powder or infusion. (5j ad aq. bullient. Oij.)

JURISPRUDENCE, MEDICAL, from jus, juris, 'law,' and prudentia, 'knowledge.' Jurisprudentia Medica. This word is often used synonymously with Legal Medicine. It is at times employed for the embodied laws and regulations that relate to the teaching and practice of medicine.

JURY OF MATRONS. A jury formed of women empanelled under a writ de ventre inspiciendo, to try the question, whether a woman is with child or not.

JUS, Zoozon, Zomid'ium, Sacbit'io, Sor'bitum. Soup, broth, Jus'calum or bouillon.

JUS BOVINUM, Beef-tea—J. Coagulatum, Gelly.
JUS D'HERBES (F.). The juice of certain vegetables administered as depuratives; as that of fumitory, burdock, water trefoil, &c.

KENTUCKY, MINERAL WATERS OF. The Olympian Springs, Mudlick, in this State, are near the sources of Licking river. There are three different kinds, in the space of half a mile. One of them is saline, impregnated with sulphur;—another is chalybeate, and a third a sulphureous spring. In various parts of Kentucky, there are saline waters, which are frequented by invalids. The Solines at Bigbone, formerly employed in the manufacture of salt, are now resorted to. A spring, near Harrodsburg, in Mercer County, is strongly impregnated with sulphate of magnesia, and is much visited. At the Blue Licks on both banks of the Licking river, there are sulphureous saline waters.

KERMES, Chermes, Alkerm'es. One of the species of the genus kermes lives on a green oak, and is called Coccus ilicis, Kermes animal, Cocci granum, Coccum, C. baph'icum seu infect'orium seu tinctorium seu scarlatinum, &c. The oak, to which allusion has been made, is known by botanists under the name Quercus coccifera, and grows abundantly in the uncultivated lands of southern France, Spain, and in the islands of the Grecian Archipelago. The kermes inhabiting it has the appearance of a small, spherical, inanimate shell. Its colour is reddish-brown, and it is covered with a slightly ash-coloured dust. This is the kermes of the shops. It is now only used in dyeing; but was formerly reputed to possess aphrodisiac, analeptic, anti-abortive, and other virtues.

KETMIA ÆGYPTIACA, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

KEY, Sax. cæg, Clavis, Clois, Clavis Anglica, (F.) Clef; Clef de Garangeot. An instrument, used for extracting teeth. It consists of a firm handle, with a claw at right angles to it, and moving upon a pivot. This claw embraces the tooth. It has undergone several modifications, and hence various instruments are used under this denomination. The French have the Clef à pompe, Clef à pivot, and Clef à noix.

KEYRI CHEIRI, Cheiranthus cheiri.

KHALA MINUC, Bit noben.

KHAYA SENEGALENSIS, Swietenia Senegalensis.

KHUS-KHUS, Andropogon muricatus.

KIAS'TER, Chiaster, from χιαζεν, to cross.

A species of bandage, having the form of the Greek letter χ , which the ancients used for approximating, and maintaining in contact, the fragments of the patella, in cases of fracture of that bone. It was applied in the form of the figure 8.

KIBE, Chilblain.

KIBISTITOME, Cystitome.

KIDNEY. Its etymology is uncertain. Serenius derives it fancifully from Su. Goth. qued, the belly; and nigh, (quasi, quidney.) Ren, Nephros, Protne'sis, (Sc.) Neir, Nere, (F.) Rein. The kidneys or reins are the secretory organs of the urine. They are two glands, situate deeply,—the one on the right, and the other on the left side—in the hypocondres: at the sides of the lumbar vertebræ; behind the peritoneum; and in the midst of an abundant, fatty areolar tissue, Th'nicæ seu Cap'sula adiposa. The kidney is of a reddish-brown colour; oval form; and flattened on two surfaces. It has, at its internal margin, a deep fissure, by which the renal vessels and nerves enter or quit the organ, and the ureter issues. It resembles, pretty accurately, the haricot or kidney-bean. Two substances are readily distinguishable in it;—the outer, secerning, cortical, glandular or vascular, Substantia corticalis seu glandulosa, which secretes the urine; and the inner, tubular, medullary, uriferous, conoidal or radiated, Substantia Medullaris seu Tubulosa seu Fibrosa, which appears under the form of small cones or unequal papillæ or mammillæ, each resulting from the union of small capillary tubes, adherent by one of their extremities to the cortical substance; and opening, by the other, at the summit of the cone, into calices, a species of membranous tubes, more or less numerous, which transmit the urine of the papillæ to the pelvis. By the pelvis is meant a small, membranous sac, of an irregularly oval shape, at the base of which are the orifices of the calices, and the other extremity of which is continuous with the ureter. The kidney is surrounded by a fibrous membrane proper to it, Perinephrus, Tunica propria seu albuginea. It has been shown by Mr. Bowman and others that the renal artery is distributed to the corpora Malpighiana, forming a pellet of convolutions, which is received into a flask-like dilatation of the ureter—Bowman's Capsule, and through which—it is conceived—the watery portion of the urine is separated. The blood then becomes venous, and is distributed by different veins—portal veins of the kidney—to the convoluted tubes through which the proper urine is secreted. Hence the blood passes into the renal vein. The intermediate vessels between the Malpighian bodies and the convoluted tubes have been termed the Portal System of the Kidney.

KIDNEY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE, Morbus Brightii seu albuminosa seu granulosa Renum, Nephritis albuminosa seu sociata, Nephritis, Nephrocalculus, Nephrococcosis, Uroemia albuminosa, Cachectic or Associated nephritis, Inflammation of the Malpighian corpuscles, Disease of Bright, Granular Degeneration or Disorganization of the Kidney, Granular Kidney of Bright, Cachectic nephritis, Chalazonephritis, (F.) Maladie de Bright, Néphrite albuminense, État Granuleux ou Dégénérescence granulée du Rein, Albuminorrhée. A granular disease of the cortical part of the kidney, which gives occasion to the secretion of urine that contains albumen, and is of less specific gravity than natural, and which destroys by inducing other diseases. It was first described by Dr. Bright, of London.

KIDNEY, GRANULAR, OF BRIGHT, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

KIESTEINE, K'estein, properly Ky'esteine, Ky'estein, Kystein, Cy'esteine or Cy'estein, Kiestein,—(Lehmann), from κειν, 'to be pregnant,' and σθηξ, 'a garment or pellicle.' A peculiar albuminoid pellicle, which forms on the urine of a pregnant female when allowed to stand for a few days. It is whitish, opalescent, slightly granular, and may be compared to the fatty substance that swims on the surface of soups, after they have been allowed to cool. When taken in conjunction with other phenomena, it is a valuable aid in the diagnosis of early pregnancy.

KIESTIN'IC, K'estin'icous; same etymon. Relating or appertaining to kiesteine; as 'kiestinic urine.'

KILBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs contain carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid; carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron; sulphates of soda, lime, and magnesia, and chloride of sodium.

KILE, Uleer.

KILL LAMB, Andromeda mariana.

KILOGRAMME, Chiliogram'ma, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.' The weight of a thousand grammes;—two pounds, eight ounces, one drachm, and twenty-four grains, Troy.

KILOLITRE, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and λιτρον, 'a litre.' A measure containing a thousand litres.

KINO, Gummi Gambien'se seu rubrum adstrin'gens Gambien'se seu adstrin'gens Fothergilli, Africain, East India or Amboyna kino, (F.) Gomme, sine ou extract de kino. The trees, whence one variety of this resin is obtained, are not botanically ascertained. The London college ascribe it to Pterocarpus erinacea; the Edinburgh to Encalyptus resinifera seu gummi'fera, Iron bark; and the Dublin to Butea fronds'sa. The Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1842 and 1851), defines it to be "an extract obtained from an uncertain plant;" that of 1851 states it to be the inspissated juice of Pterocarpus marsipium (De Candolle) and of other plants. On wooding the bark, the kino flows drop by drop. A West India variety is said to be derived from Coccoloba wrightera or Sea-side Grape; and a Botany Bay kino is said to be the concrete juice of Encalyptus resinifera or broicu gum-tree of New Holland. Sex. Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. Not. Ord. Myrtaceæ. Kino consists chiefly of tannic and gallic acids, oxide of iron, and colouring matter. It is inodorous; the taste a sweetish bitter; and it is sometimes gritty between the teeth. It comes to us in fragments of a dark ruby red colour, and is easily pulverized. Its properties are powerfully astringent. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx in powder.

KIONORRIAPHIA, Staphyloraphy.

KI'OTOME, Kio'tomus, from κίω, 'a pillar,' 'support,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' (F.) Concebride. An instrument invented by Desault to cut any accidental brides or filaments in the rectum and bladder; and which he afterwards used for the removal of the tonsils. It is composed of a flat, silver sheath, open at one edge. This sheath is provided with a cutting blade, which can be forced through the opening, and thus all the parts can be divided with which it comes in contact.

KIPPERNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

KNEE, Genu.

KNEE, HOUSEMAID'S. An inflammation of the bursa, which in most individuals is in front of the patella, and is apt to inflame and enlarge from effusion in those in whom it is subjected to much pressure. Hence its name. It is a form of capsular rheumatism.

KNEE-HOLLY, Ruscus.

KNEE-JOINT, Genu.

KNEE SCAB, Crusta genu equinæ—k. Encircled hoof, Crusta genu equine.

KNIFE, Sax. cniF. Swed. Knif. Dan. Kniv. (F.) Cuif. Culter, Smilæ, Cutellus, Tomeion, Tomeus, Machæra, Machæriou, Machæris, (F.) Couteau. A cutting instrument, used in surgery to divide the soft parts, and which only differs from the bistouri or scalpel in being usually larger.

The most common knives are the following:

KNIFE, AMPUTATION, (F.) Couteau à amputation, C. droit, Culter rectus. This is the largest of the knives used in surgery. Formerly, they were curved; now they are straight, and provided with one or two edges.

KNIFE, CATARACT, Ceratotomus, Keratotomus, (F.) Couteau à cataracte. The cataract knives of Richter, Wenzel, Ward, and others, being intended to perform the section of the transparent cornea, are so shaped as to exactly fill the small wound made by them; and thus to prevent the discharge of the aqueous humour, until the section is completed. The blade of the knives of Wenzel and Ward resembles a very narrow lancet, blunt in the posterior five-sixths of one of its edges. The blade of that of Richter is pyramidal, cutting through the whole length of its inferior edge, and also blunt in the five-sixths of the upper.

KNIFE, CHES'ELDEN'S. A knife with a fixed handle; very convex on its edge, concave on the back, which was used by Cheselden in lithotomy.

KNIFE, CROOKED, Culter falcatus, Culter curvus, (F.) Couteau courbe. A knife, which is crooked and concave on its cutting edge. It was formerly employed in amputation of the limbs.

KNIFE, CROCHET, Cutellus uncus, (F.) Couteau à crochet. A steel instrument, composed of a round staff, furnished with a handle at one extremity, and at the other with a curved knife. It was formerly used to cut to pieces monstrous fœtus in utero, and to open the head when necessary.

KNIFE, DOUBLE-EDGED, Anceps cutellus, Amphis-mela, Amphis-milæ, Cutling, (F.) Couteau à deux tranchans ou désarticulateur ou interosseux. A knife, the blade of which is straight and sharp on both sides. It is used for disarticulating bones; and for cutting the soft parts situate between the bones, in amputation of the leg and forearm.

KNIFE EN SERPETTE. (F.) Couteau en serpette. A sort of knife, of the shape of a serpette or pruning-knife, invented by Desault for dividing the bony paries of the maxillary sinus, for the purpose of extracting fungi from it.

KNIFE, LENTICULAR, Culter lenticularis, (F.) Couteau lenticulaire. An instrument, used in the operation of trepanning, for removing inequalities in the inner table of the skull, which may have been left by the crown of the trephine around the opening made by it. It is formed of a lenticular button, fixed at the extremity of an iron staff, which is convex on one side, flat on the other; sharp at both edges, and mounted on an ebony handle.

KNIFE, LITHOTOMY, (F.) Couteau lithotome. A name, given by Foubert to a large knife, the narrow blade of which, four and a half inches in length, was sharp in its whole extent, and made an obtuse angle with the handle. He used it in the lateral operation.

KNIFE, POLYPUS, Polypotome.

KNIFE, ROOT-CUTTING. In Pharmacy, a knife moving on a joint at its pointed extremity, by which roots and other ligneous matters are divided in pharmaceutical processes.

KNIFE'SMAN, see Surgery, salvation.

KNIT-BACK, Symphytum.

KNOBWEED, Collinsonia.

KNOCK-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

KNOT, Tubercle.

KNOT, PACKER'S, (F.) Nœud d'emballeur. A compressive bandage, used for arresting hemorrhage from the temporal artery or its branches. The nœud d'emballeur is made with a double-headed roller, five ells long. A graduated compress is placed over the opening in the artery, and the bandage is applied over it; the balls of the roller being carried horizontally round to the opposite temple, where they are crossed obliquely and carried back to the part where the compress is situate. The hands are then changed with the rollers, crossing them so as to form a knot, and taking one above the head; the other beneath the chin. They are then crossed again, so as to form several knots, one above the other. This bandage is called, by some surgeons, solar or oblique chevestre or capistrum.

KNOT, SURGEON'S, Nodus chirurgicus, (F.) Nœud du chirurgien. A double knot made by passing the thread twice through the same noose. This knot is used frequently in the ligature of arteries, the umbilical cord, &c.

KNOTBERRIES, Rubus chamæmorus.

KNOTGRASS, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOTROOT, Collinsonia Canadensis.

KNOTWEED, Collinsonia Canadensis, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOWLTONIA VESICATORIA. Nat. Order, Ranunculaceæ. An acrid plant of South Africa, used by the Cape colonists as a blister in rheumatism.

KOINO-MIASMATA, see Miasm.

KOKUM, Garcinia purpurea—k. Butter, see Garcinia purpurea.

KUA KAHHA, Curcuma longa.

KUMYSS, Κουμυς, Κομμία. A beverage used in families by the people of Yakutz. It resembles sour buttermilk, without being greasy. According to Sir George Simpson, it is prepared in a very simple way from mare's milk, which is merely allowed to stand for some days in a leather churn till it becomes sour. It is then bottled for use. This drink is rather nutritious than exhilarating; but from the same material the Burats and the Kirghez prepare an intoxicating spirit in which they indulge to excess.

KUSSAUDEK, Convolvulus panduratus.

KUTKULEJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTOOKURUNJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTUBUTH. An Arabic name for a species of melancholy in which the patient is never quiet at any one place, but wanders about here and there, see Cuttubuth. Also, the name of an insect, which lives at the surface of stagnant waters, and is in a constant state of agitation. Some lexicographers imagine that it is on account of this last circumstance, that the name of the insect has been given to the disease.

KWOSO, Hagenia Abyssinica.

KYLLOPODIA, Kyllosis

KYLLO'SIS, from κυλλος, 'crooked, 'lame.' Cyλλo'ia, Kyλλo'pod'ia. Professor Chaussier so calls congenital distortion of the feet, Clubfoot, Pufffoot, Stumpfoot, (Prov.) Pummel-foot, Tal'ipea, (F.) Pied bot. Of this there are many varieties. In one, the foot, instead of resting on the soil, by the whole plantar surface, touches it only with the metatarso-phalagian articulations. It seems as if turned backwards and broken upon the leg. (Pes seu Tal'ipea Equi'nus, Hip'porus, Oxy'pod'ia, Tip-foot, Horae-foot.) In other cases the foot is twisted inwards, (Varus, Tal'ipes varus, Βλα'σπο'δες, Βλα'σπο'ρια, Cyllo'eria, Cyλλo'pod'ia, Cyλλo'pod'ion, Lo'ripes, Croas-foot, (F.) Cug-neux;) so that it rests only on the ground on its outer edge; or it may be twisted outwards, (Valgus, Tal'ipes Valgus, Out-hoo-foot), or rest only on its inner edge, or on the back part of the heel, Talipes calcaneus, Heel clubfoot. In the flatfoot or splayfoot, Duck-foot, Splat-foot, Sar'apus, Plat'ypus, Platypod'ia, (F.) Pied plat, the plantar surface of the foot is flattened instead of being concave.

These deformities are rarely accidental. They are almost always congenital, and may be rectified, at an early period, by proper mechanical means to strengthen the foot gradually and restore it to its proper shape and direction; and if these means fail, the tendons and muscles concerned in the deformity may be divided.

KYMOGRAPH'ION, Cymograph'ion; from κυμα, 'wave, and γραφω, 'I describe.' A wave describer or measurer.' An instrument invented by Ludwig, which is self-registering, and exhibits the relation between the waves of the pulse and the undulations produced by respiration.

KYNA, Pastinaca opoponax.

KYPHOSIS, see Cyphosis—k. Inflammatoria, Vertebral disease—k. Paralytica, Vertebral disease.

KYST, Cyst, Kystis, Cystis, from κυστις, 'a bladder, 'pouch.' (F.) Kyste. This term is generally applied to a pouch or sac, — Cysto'ma, — without opening, and commonly of a membranous nature, which is accidentally developed in one of the natural cavities, or in the substance of organs. Many theories have been successively emitted to explain the formation of cysts, but none are entirely satisfactory. Some are formed by a thin, translucent membrane, having scarcely the thickness of the arachnoid; others of a whitish, fibro-cellular membrane, more or less thick. Some contain cartilaginous or bony flakes. The greater part have but one cavity; others, on the contrary, have several, separated by complete or imperfect septa, as is frequently seen in those developed in the ovaries. The matter contained in cysts is sometimes limpid, serous, yellowish white, reddish, and, at others, more or less thick, albuminous, adipous, or caseous. The tumour, formed by them, is called Encysted.

KYSTE, Kyst — k. Anévrysma, Aneurismal sac.

KYSTEIN, Kiesteine.

KYSTHITIS, Cysti'tis, from κυσθος, 'the vagina.' Inflammation of the vulva and of the mucous membrane of the vagina.

KYSTITOME, Cystitome.

KYSTHOPTOSIS, from κυσθος, 'the vagina,' and πτω, 'I fall.' Prolapsus or inversion of the vagina.

KYTE, Abdomen, Stomach.

KYTARRHAG'IA, from κυτταριον, 'an alveolus,' and γαγο, or ρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Discharge of blood from an alveolus.

L.

LABARTIUM, from labi, 'to fall.' Looseness of the teeth.

LABBACISMUS, Lallation.

LABDAMEN, Cistus creticus.

LABDANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LABE, from λαβω, λαβωνω, 'I seize, 'I take,' 'the act of grasping.' Invasion. Also, employed to denote the first paroxysm of fevers. — Galen, Hippocrates.

LABEO, Chilon.

LABES, Chilon, Maena.

LABIA CUNNI, Lips of the vulva—l. Interna sen Minora, Nymphæ—l. Majora, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi minora, Nymphæ.

LABIAL, Labia'lis, from labium, 'a lip.'

LABIAL, Orbicularis oris.

LABIAL ARTERY. Haller and Sabatier call thus the facial artery of the majority of anatomists. The labial arteries, properly so called, coronary arteries of the lips, (F.) Coronaires des lèvres, are two in number. The superior arises from the facial, above, and very close to, the commissure of the lips. It is large and tortuous, and is distributed to the upper lip. The lower arises from the facial, at a considerable distance from the commissure, and proceeds, in a serpentine course, into the substance of the lower lip, to which it is distributed.

LABIAL GLANDS. This name is given to a multitude of muciparous follicles, of some size, round, prominent, and separate from each other, which are found on the inner surface of the lips, below the mucous membrane.

LABIAL VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into superior and inferior. They open into the facial vein:—a division of the internal jugular.

LABIALIS, Orbicularis oris.

LABIDOMETER, Labimeter.

LABIMETER, (F.) Labimètre ou Labidomètre, from λαβίς, λαβίδος, 'forceps,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A scale adapted to the handles of the forceps, which indicates the distance of the blades from each other, when applied to the head of the child in utero.

LABIS, Forceps.

LABIUM, Lip—I. Leporinum, Harelip—I. Uteri, Aphidæum.

LABLAB, Dolichos lablab.

LABORANS, Sick.

LABORATOIRE, Laboratory.

LABORATORIUM, Laboratory—I. Chymicum seu pharmacæuticum, see Pharmacopœia.

LABORATORY, Laborato'rium, Ergast'rium, (F.) Laboratoire, from laborare, laboratum, 'to work.' A work-shop. A place for preparing chemical or pharmaceutical products, &c.

LABORIOSUS, Sick.

LABORIOUS, Delivery is said to be laborious, Partus laborio'sus, Mogostoc'ia, (F.) Accouchement laborieux, when attended with more difficulty and suffering than usual. With some, laborious labour means one that requires the use of instruments. See Dystocia.

LABOUR, Parturition.

LABOUR CHAIR, Obstet'ric chair. A chair, in which a parturient woman is placed during delivery.

LABOUR, COMPLICATED, see Parturition—I. Difficult, Dystocia—I. Dry, Partus siccus—I. Forced, see Parturition—I. Impracticable, see Parturition—I. Morbid, Dystocia.

LABOUR PAINS, see Pains.

LABOUR, POWERLESS, see Parturition—I. Premature, Parturition, (premature)—I. Preternatural, Metatocia, see Parturition.

LABOUR SHOW, see Parturition.

LABRISULCIUM, Cheilocæce, Stomacæce.

LABRUM, Lip—I. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain.

LABRUSCA, Bryonia alba.

LABYRINTH, Labyrinth'us, Antrum bucci'no'sum. A place, full of turnings, the exit of which is not easily discoverable. Anatomists have given this name to the aggregate of parts, constituting the internal ear, Labyrinth'us auris int'ime, Int'ima pars organi aud'it'us, Labyrinth'ic cavity of the ear. The Labyrinth is situate between the tympanum and meatus auditorius internus. It is composed of several cavities, which communicate with each other in the dried bone; as the vestibule, cochlea, semicircular canals, &c. It is lined by periosteum, and also by a pulpy membrane, constituting the membra- na labyrinth, on which the auditory nerve is regularly dispersed. This membrane forms two sacs in the vestibule, called sac'culus vestib'uli and sac'culus, respectively, which resemble in shape that of the bony cavities containing them. Each sac contains calcareous matter, constituting the Otoliths and Otoconies. When the sac is laid open, upon the upper and outer part, a partition appears, partaking of the nature of the sac, and called by Meckel, Septum vestib'uli nervo'so-membrana'ccum.

Labyrinth is also applied to the lateral portions of the ethmoid bone, which are formed of large irregular cells.

LABYRINTH, MEMBRANOUS, see Labyrinth.

LABYRINTH'IC, Labyrinth'icus, (F.) Labyrinth'ique. Relating or appertaining to the labyrinth.

LABYRINTHIC CAVITY OF THE EAR, Labyrinth.

LABYRINTHUS, Labyrinth—I. Auris Int'ime, see Labyrinth.

LAC, Lacca, Laqueus, Milk—I. Ammoniaci, Mistura ammoniaci—I. Amygdalæ, Emulsio amygdalæ—I. Asafœtidæ, Mistura asafœtidæ—I. Avis, Albumen ovi—I. Guaiaci, Mistura Guaiaci.

LAC, GUM, Lacca.

LAC LUNÆ, Marga candida—I. Maris, Sperm—I. Pressum, Curd—I. Primum Puerperæ, Colostrum.

LAC, SEED, Lacca—I. Shell, Lacca—I. Stick, Lacca.

LAC SULPHURIS, Sulphur præcipitatum—I. Terræ, Magnesia carbonas—I. Virginis, Virgin's milk.

LACAPHTHION. Supposed to be the bark of some fir or other tree. It entered into the composition of the Cyphi, used in fumigations—Paulus of Ægina. Supposed to be the Narcaph'thum or Nasecaph'thum.—Ruellius.

LACCA, from lakah, Arab. Gummi lacæ, Stick, Gum, Seed, or Shell, lac, (F.) Laque, Gomme Laque. Lac is a substance formed by an insect, and deposited on different species of trees, chiefly in the East Indies, for example, on Croton lac'cif'erum, and two species of Ficus,—Ficus relig'iosa, and F. Indica. The various kinds, distinguished in commerce, are stick-lac, which is the substance in its natural state, investing the small twigs of the tree; and seed-lac, which is the same broken off. When melted, it is called shell-lac.

Lac was, at one time, used in the form of tincture, as a tonic and astringent; and it still forms part of particular dentifrices.

LACERATION, Lacera'tio, Rhegō, Rheg'mus, Rhegma, Ruptu'ra, Rupture, from lacerare, laceratum, 'to tear':—Dilacera'tio, Sparag'ma, (F.) Arrachement, Déchirement, Dilacération, Broiement. The act of tearing or rending. The breach made by tearing or rending; as a lacerated wound, Tresis vulnus lacera'tion, Laceratu'ra, Vulnus lacera'tum.

LACERATURA, see Laceration.

LACERTA, Lizard—I. Aquatica, see Ectozaa.

LACERTI CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ—I. Musculorum, see Muscular fibre.

LACERTOSUS, Muscular.

LACERTULI CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ.

LACERTUS, Brachium, Muscle, see Muscular fibre.

LAC'ERUM. Same etymon as Laceration. Any thing torn, or appearing as if torn.

LAC'ERUM FORAMEN ANTE'RIS, (F.) Trou déchiré antérieur, Hiatus sphéno-pétreux, (Ch.) is an irregular opening, formed by the sphenoid, occipital and petrous portion of the temporal bone. It is closed by cartilage, and forms a kind of fontanelle, situated at the termination of the petro-occipital suture.

LACERUM FORAMEN POSTE'RIS, Foramen jugula'rè, F. lacerum in Basi Cra'nii, (F.) Trou

déchiré postérieur, Hiatus occipito-pétreux, (Ch.) is formed by the occipital bone, and the inferior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone. Through it, the internal jugular vein, the eighth pair of nerves, and accessory nerve pass out of the cranium.

LACERUM FORAMEN SUPERIUS, Sphenoidal fissure.

LACH'ANON, from λαχανον, 'I dig.' A pot herb: Oler. pl. Olera, a vegetable used as food.

LACHESIS PICTA, see Arrow-poison.

LACHESIS RHOMBEATA, Flammion. A poisonous serpent common in the lower forests of Peru.

LACHNANTHES TINCTO'RIA, Dilat'ris tinctoria, Redroot; indigenous. Ord. Hamodoraæ, (from λαχν, 'wool,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' owing to its woolly flowers.) The root is astringent and tonic.

LACHRYMA, Tear; see Vitis vinifera.

LACHRYMAL, Lacrymalis, from lacryma, 'a tear.' Belonging to the tears. This epithet is given to various parts.

LACHRYMAL APPARATUS, see Lacrymal Passages.

LACHRYMAL ARTERY proceeds from the ophthalmic; and distributes its principal branches to the lacrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL CANAL OR DUCT, Nasal Canal or duct, Canalis lacrymalis seu orbitæ nasalis seu Sacci lacrymalis, Ductus ad Nasum seu Nasalis orbitæ, is formed by the superior maxillary bone, os unguis, and os turbinatum inferius; and is seated in the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. It is lined by a prolongation of the mucous membrane of the lacrymal sac; and its inferior orifice is furnished with a valvular duplicature. This duct transmits the tears, which have been absorbed at the great angle of the eye by the puncta lacrymalia, into the nasal fossæ.

LACHRYMAL CARUNCLE, see Caruncula lacrymalis.

LACHRYMAL DUCT, Lacrymal Canal.

LACHRYMAL FOSSA, Fossa seu Fovea lacrymalis, is a slight depression at the upper part of the orbit, which lodges the lacrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL GLAND, Glandula lacrymalis seu innominata Galeati, is seated in a depression of the frontal bone at the upper, anterior, and outer part of the orbit. It is of about the size of an almond; and of an oval shape, flattened above and below:—its great diameter being the antero-posterior. It is composed of several small lobules, united by areolar tissue, and separated by it as well as by vessels and nerves which creep in the intervals. This gland has seven or eight excretory ducts, which open behind the upper eyelid. Its use is to secrete the tears, and pour them on the globe of the eye by the excretory ducts.

LACHRYMAL GROOVE, (F.) Gonitière lacrymale, is the bony channel, which lodges the lacrymal sac. It is seated at the anterior and inner part of the orbit, and is formed by the os unguis and the ascending process of the upper jaw bone.

LACHRYMAL HERNIA, Lacrymal Tumour, Hernia Sacci Lacrymalis, is when the tears enter the puncta, but cannot pass to the nose, and accumulate. By Anel, this was called Dropsy of the Lacrymal sac.

LACHRYMAL NERVE is the smallest of the three branches formed by the ophthalmic nerve. It is distributed, particularly, to the lacrymal gland and to the upper eyelid. In its course it gives off a spheno-maxillary and a malar filament.

LACHRYMAL PAPILLA, see Lacrymal Puncta.

LACHRYMAL PASSAGES, Via lacrymalis, (F.) Via lacrymalis. The organs concerned in the secretion of tears, in spreading them over the eye, and taking them up again to transmit them into the nasal fossæ. The lacrymal passages are composed of the lacrymal gland, caruncle, puncta, ducts, lacrymal sac, and nasal duct, which, together, form the lacrymal apparatus, (F.) Appareil lacrymal.

LACHRYMAL PUNCTA, Puncta Lacrymalia, Spiran'ia Palpebrarum, (F.) Points lacrymaux, are two small, round, and contractile openings, situate in the centre of a tubercle or pupilla, Pupilla lacrymalis, Tuberculum lacrymalè, about a line and a half distant from the inner commissure of the eyelids, and continuous with the lacrymal ducts. These ducts, Lacrymales Canaliculi, Canal'es seu Ductus lacrymales, Ductus lacrymales laterales seu punctorum lacrymalium, Cor'una lacrymalia seu limacium, Collic'ia punctorum lacrymalium, Canaliculi limacium, (F.) Conduits lacrymaux, are two in number—a superior and an inferior—which extend from the puncta to the lacrymal sac. They seem formed by a very delicate prolongation of the conjunctiva, which is continuous with the mucous membrane of the lacrymal sac, (F.) Reservoir des larmes:—the Saccus seu Sinus seu Lacus lacrymalis, Lacryocystis, Infundibulum lacrymalè.

LACHRYMAL TUBERCLE, see Lacrymal puncta.

LACHRYMAL VEINS accompany the artery of the same name, and open into the ophthalmic and palpebral veins.

LACHRYMATIO, Lacrymatio—1. Sanguineous. Dacryhemorrhysis.

LACINIA, 'a hem or fringe.'

LACINLE TUBARUM FALLOPII, see Tube Fallopiæ.

LACIS, Plexus.

LACMUS, Lichen roccella.

LACMUS TRICORIUS, Lichen roccella.

LACONICUM, Vaporarium, see Stove.

LACQ, Laqueus.

LACRIMA, Tear.

LACRUMA, Tear.

LACRYMA, Tear.

LACRYMALIS, Lacrymal.

LACRYMATIO, Lacrymation, Epiphora.

Also, a profuse secretion of tears from any cause:—weeping, Flatus, Ploratio, Ploratus.

LACRYMINE, see Tears.

LACTALBUMEN, Casein.

LACTANS, Nurse.

LACTARIUM, Lacticinum; from lac, 'milk.' Food prepared from milk. Milk diet or food.

LACTATE DE FER, Ferri lactas—1. de Quinine, Quinæ lactas.

LACTATION, Lactatio, Thelasis, Thelasmus, from lacto, lactatum, (lac, 'milk,') 'I suckle.' 'I give milk.' Suckling:—the giving of suck, (F.) Allaitement. The French make four varieties of lactation. 1. Allaitement maternal—Maternal Lactation, when the mother suckles the child. 2. A. étranger mercenaire,—when another suckles it. 3. A. artificiel, when the child is brought up by hand. 4. A. animal, when the child is suckled by an animal.

LACTÉ, Lactic.

LACTEAL, Laetic—1. Sac, see Lactiferous vessels.

LACTEALS, Chyliferous vessels.

LACTEIN, Milk, solidified.

LACTENS, Sucking child.

LACTES, Mesentery, Pancreas.

LACTEUS, Lactic.

LACTIC, Lacteus, Galacticus, Galactium, lacteal, milky, (F.) Lacté, Laitéux, from lac, lactis, 'milk.' Appertaining to, or resembling milk.

LACTIC ACID, Acidum Lacticum seu Lacticum seu Lactium, Acid of milk, Galactic, Lactic, Lactic Acid, (F.) Acide Lactique. This has been recommended as a therapeutical agent in atonic dyspepsia, owing to its being presumed to be one of the gastric acids secreted in health. It is given either in the form of lemonade or of lozenges. The acid is obtained either from milk or from the juice of the red beet.

LACTICA, Typhoid.

LACTICANS, Nurse.

LACTICINIA, Parotid.

LACTICINIUM, Lactarium.

LACTIFÈRE, Lactiferous.

LACTIFÉROUS, Galactoph'orons, Lac'tifer, (F.) Lactifère, from lac, lactis, 'milk,' and fero, 'I carry.' Milk-conveying.

LACTIFEROUS VESSELS, Lactiferous or Galactoph'orons Ducts, Tu'buli lactiferi, Ductus lactiferi seu lac'tei, (F.) Vaisseaux ou conduits lactifères, are the excretory ducts of the mammary gland, each of which, running towards the nipple, dilates beneath the areola into an elongated sacculus—the lacteal or galactophorous sac, receptacle or sinus—sac'culus seu sinus lactiferus.

LACTIFEROUS OR LACTEAL SWELLING. A tumefaction of the breast, supposed by Sir Astley Cooper to arise from a large collection of milk in one of the lactiferous tubes, the result of chronic inflammation of the tube near the nipple, with closure of its aperture, and obliteration of the canal for an inch or more. The tube requires to be punctured.

LACTIFUGA, Lac'tifuge, from lac, lactis, 'milk,' and fugo, 'I drive away.' Medicines which dispel milk.

LACTIGO, Porrigo larvalis.

LACTINE, Sugar of milk.

LACTIN'IA, from lac, lactis, 'milk.' Food prepared with milk.

LACTIPOTOR, Galactopotes.

LACTIS CONCRETIONES, Infarctus Mam-mæ lacteus.

LACTIS REDUNDANTIA, Galactia—1. Retentio, Galactischesis—1. Sanguinolenti Excretio, Galactohæmia.

LACTISUGIUM, Antlia lactea.

LACTIVORUS, Galactophagous.

LACTOCELE, Galactocele.

LACTOLINE, Milk, solidified.

LACTOMETER, Galactometer.

LACTOSE, Sugar of milk.

LACTU'CA, from lac, lactis, 'milk;' so called, from its milky juice. Lactuca Sati'va, Lettuce, Garden Lettuce, Ennu'chiua Meco'nis, Thridax, Cherbas, (F.) Laitue ordinaire. Ord. Compositæ, is used as a wholesome salad. The seeds possess a quantity of oil, which, when formed into an emulsion, has been advised in ardor urinæ, &c.

The inspissated juice, Lactuca'rium, Thrid'acè, Lettuce opium, resembles, in odour and appearance, that of opium, and is, like it, narcotic, but uncertain. Dose, gr. j to x, and more.

LACTUCA ELONGATA, see L. virosa—1. Graveolens, L. virosa—1. Floridana, Mulgedium Floridanum.

LACTUCA SCARI'OLA, L. Sylvestris, Scariola, (F.) Laitue Scariole ou Sauvage, possesses a stronger degree of bitterness than L. sativa. It has similar virtues with Z. virosa.

LACTUCA SYLVESTRIS, L. scariola—1. Villosa, Mulgedium acuminatum.

LACTUCA VIRO'SA, L. grav'colens, Strong-scented Lettuce, (F.) Laitue vireuse. The odour of this plant, the leaves of which are used in medicine, is strongly narcotic, and the taste bitter. They are narcotic, diuretic, and aperient; and have been used in dropsies. Lactuca elong'ata, Wild Lettuce of the United States, has been employed for L. virosa.

LACTUCARIUM, see Lactuca.

LACTUCIMEN, Aphthæ.

LACTUCIMINA, Aphthæ.

LACTUMEN, Porrigo larvalis.

LACTUMINA, Aphthæ.

LACU'NA, Cavali'culus, diminutive of lacus, 'a lake or deep ditch.' A Fossa or Ditch. A small cavity in a mucous membrane, the parietes of which secrete a viscid humour. It is used synonymously with crypt. Also, the external opening of such cavity.

LACUNA, Crypta, Fontanella—1. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain, Pituitary gland.

LACUNA seu SULCUS seu SUI'culus LA'BIT SUPERIO'RIS, Amab'ile, Amato'rium, Philtrum, Phile'trum. The hollow of the upper lip under the nose.

LACUNA MAGNA, see Urethra.

LACUNE, see Urethra.

LACUNE OF BONE. Certain dark stellate spots, with thread-like lines radiating from them, seen under a high magnifying power. These were at first believed to be solid osseous or bone corpuscles or cells, Corpus'cula os'sium, Corpuscles of Parku'je, (F.) Cellules des os ou osseuses, Corpuscules des os ou noirs or ramifiés ou calcaires, Ostéo-plastes; but are now regarded as excavations in the bone—Sac'culi chalicoph'ori—with minute tubes or canaliculi proceeding from them, and communicating with the Haversian canals. The lacunæ and canaliculi are fibres concentrated in the transit of nutrient fluid through the osseous tissue.

LACUNE GRAAFIA'NÆ, L. muco'sæ vulvæ. The mucous follicles of the vagina.

LACUNE MUCOSE VULVÆ, L. Graafianæ—1. Palpebrarum, Meibomius, glands of.

LACUNAR, La'quear, 'an arched roof.' The roof of a chamber. Hence,

LACUNAR OR'BITÆ. The roof of the orbit.

LACUNAR VENTRICULI QUARTI SUPERIOR, Valvula Viuesenii.

LACUNE DE LA LANGUE, Cæcum foramen.

LACUS LACRYMALIS, Lachrymal sac.

LACUS LACRYMA'RUM. A small space in the inner angle of the eye between the lids, towards which the tears flow, and at which the triangular canal formed between the closed lids terminates.

LADA, Piper nigrum.

LADANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LADENDO, Influenza.

LADIES MANTLE, Alchemilla.

LADIES' SLIPPER, SHOWY, Cypripedium spectabile—1. Slipper, stemless, Cypripedium acule—1. Slipper, yellow, Cypripedium luteum.

LADIES' SMOCK, Cardamine prætensis.

LADRE, Leprous.

LADRERIE (F.), from ladre, 'a leper.' (F.) Léproserie, Maladerie. A vulgar name for elephantiasis, or lepra. Also, an hospital for the reception of the leprous, Leprosu'rium, Domus leprosa'ria, Leper hospital.

LADYBIRD, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYBUG, Coccinella septempunctata.

LADYCOW, Coccinella septempunctata.

LÆDENS, pl. Læd'entia, from lædo, 'to hurt.' Any thing hurtful or injurious, as to the economy.

LÆMOPARALYSIS, Œsophagoplegia.

LÆMOS, Pharynx.

LÆMOSCIR'RHUS, Cancer pharyng'is et œsoph'agi, Læmosteno'sis seu Dysph'agia scirr'ho'sa; from læmos, 'the pharynx or œsophagus.' Cancer of the pharynx or œsophagus.

LÆMOSTENOSIS, Dysphagia constricta—1. Scirrhus, Læmoscirrhus.

LESIO, Lesion—l. Continui, see Continuity, solution of.

LETIFICANTIA, from letifico (letus, and facio). 'I make glad.' Medicines formerly used as cordials, in depression of spirits, &c.

LEVIGATIO, Levigation.

LEVITAS INTESTINORUM, Lientery.

LAGENTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGNEA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNEIA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNESIS, Furor Femininus, Nymphomania—l. Furor masculinus, Satyriasis—l. Salacitas, Satyriasis.

LAGNIA, Satyriasis.

LAGNOSIS, Satyriasis.

LAGOCHEILUS, Harelip.

LAGONES, Flanks.

LAGONOPONOS, Pleurodynia.

LAGONTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGOPHTHALMIA, from lagos, 'a hare,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'an eye.' Lagophthalmus, Leporinus Oculinus, Hare's Eye; (F.) Œil de Lièvre. A vicious arrangement of the upper eyelid, which is so retracted that it cannot cover the globe of the eye during sleep. It has been asserted that this condition of the eye is natural in the hare when asleep.

LAGOPHTHALMUS, Lagophthalmia, Geum urbanum.

LAGOSTOMA, Harelip.

LAG TEETH, Molar teeth.

LAIÇHE, Sarsaparilla Germanica—l. des Saibles, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

LAIT, Milk—l. Adoucissant, Looch ex ovo—l. d'Anesse, Milk, asses'—l. d'Anandes, Emulsion amygdalæ—l. d'Asafetida, Mistura asafetide—l. de Beurre, Buttermilk—l. de Brebis, Milk, ewes'—*l. LAIT RÉPANDU, (F.) L. épanché. A popular expression in France, under which is comprehended every kind of disease (and particularly vague pains) occurring after delivery; all being ascribed to diffusion or deposition of milk.

LAIT DE TERRE, Magnesiæ carbonas—l. de Vache, Milk of the cow—l. Virginat, Virgin's milk.

LAITEUX, Lactic.

LAITERON DOUX, Sonehus oleracens.

LAIÏAT, (F.) Sour whey, in which different wild fruits have been macerated. Said to be much used in the Jura as a refreshing drink.

LAITY, Laïci; from λαος, 'the people.' Formerly, and generally at the present day, the people as distinguished from the clergy. Frequently, however, employed in the sense of the people as distinguished from those of the other learned professions. A layman is one of the laity.

LAKEWEEED, Polygoum hydropiper.

LALIA, Voice, articulated.

LALLATION, Lallatio, Lambdacismus, Lubdacismus, Lall'labi speech. Sauvages uses this term for a vicious pronunciation, in which the letter L is improperly doubled, or softened, or substituted for R.

LAMAC, Acaciæ gummi.

LAMBACISMUS, Lallation.

LAMBDROID, Lambdoid'al, Lambdoi'des, Lambdoi'des, Lambdoi'dens, from the Greek letter Λ, λαμβάνω, and εἶδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' Anatomists have given the name LAMBDROIDAL SUTURE, Sutura Lambdoid'al'is seu lambdoides seu lamb- doidea seu Proræ, to the suture, formed by the parietal bones and the occipital, because it resembles the letter Λ, lambda, of the Greeks. It is the Occipito-parietal suture, Suture occipitale, (Ch.) In this suture, the ossa Wormiana are most frequently met with; and the denticulations are most distinctly marked.

LAMBEAU, Flap.

LAMBITIVUM, Electos.

LAMBKILL, Kalmia latifolia.

LAMBKILLER, Andromeda mariana.

LAME, Lamina—l. Cornée, Tænia semicircularis—l. Ruyschiense, Ruyschiana tunica.

LAMELLA, Lamina—l. Plana, Planum os.

LAMELLAR, Lamellosus, Lam'inated, (F.) Lamellets, Laminæ, composed of thin laminae or leaves—as the Lamellar or laminated tissue; i. e. the areolar tissue.

LAMELLEUX, Lamellar.

LAMENESS, Claudication.

LAMIER, Laminum album.

LAMINA, Lamel'la, (F.) Lame. A thin, flat part of a bone, a plate or table, as the cribriform lamina or plate of the ethmoid bone. Lamina and Lamella are generally used synonymously; although the latter is properly a diminutive of the former.

LAMINA CILIARIS, Ciliary zone.

LAMINA CINEREA. A thin layer of gray substance, which forms the anterior part of the inferior boundary of the third ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA COR'NEA, Tæ'nia Tori'ni. A yellowish band or a thickening of the lining membrane of the ventricle, by which the vena corporis striati is overlaid in the lateral ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA PERITONÆI EXTERNA. The outer lamina or fold of the peritonæum.

LAMINA PRIMA CUTIS, Epidermis.

LAMINA SPIRALIS, Septum scalæ seu coch'leæ audit'riæ. A partition between the scalæ of the cochlea. The largest part of this, next the modiolus, is formed of bone. The remainder, or that part next the opposite side of the scalæ, is composed of a cartilaginous membrane, called, by Valsalva, Zona seu Zo'nula Coch'leæ. By some anatomists, the lamina is divided into a Zona os'sea and Z. mollis. By others, it is considered to consist of four laminae, when examined with a strong glass: a Zona os'sea, next to the modiolus—a Zona cori'acea, on the outer side of this: a Zona vesicul'ris—and a Zona membran'cea, which is, perhaps, the lining membrane of the cochlea. At the apex of the cochlea, the lamina spiralis terminates by a pointed hook-shaped process, ham'ulus lam'inæ spir'al'is.

LAMINA OF A VERTEBRA, see Vertebra.

LAMINÆ DORSAL'ES, Dorsal laminae. Two oval masses on each side of the primitive groove of the embryo, which approach so as to form a groove, in which are lodged the future brain and spinal marrow.

LAMINÆ SPONGIOSÆ NASI, Turbinated bones.

LAMINÆ VENTRAL'ES, L. viscera'les. Thickened prolongations of the serous layer of the germinal membrane, which, by their union, form the anterior wall of the trunk of the new being.

LAMINARIA DIGITATA, Tangle. One of the Algæ eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets with the Pepper-dulse.

The leaf of a sea-weed—a species of Laminaria—is employed in the Himalayas under the name of goître leaf; so called because chewed by the inhabitants, where goître prevails.

LAMINATED, Lamellar.

LAMINEUX, Lamellar.

LAMMIUM ALBUM, L. foliosum, Urtica moritana, Galeopsis Archangelica, Dead or White Archangel Nettle, (F.) Ortie blanche ou morte, (S.) Daynettle, Lamier. Ord. Labiateæ. Infusions of this plant have been recommended in uterine hemorrhage, and leucorrhœa. It is not used.

LAMMIUM AMPLEXICAULÈ, Dead Nettle, Henbit; naturalized; flowering from May to October; is regarded as tonic, diaphoretic, and laxative.

LAMIUM FOLIOSUM, L. album—L. Montanum, Melittis melissophyllum—L. Plinii, Melittis melissophyllum—L. Rubrum, Galeopsis.

LAMOTTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These thermal springs are in the department of Isère, France. Temperature, 184°.

LAMPOURDE, Xanthium.

LAMPROPHONUS, from λαμπος, 'clear,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a clear voice.

LAMPSONA, Lapsana.

LAMPYRIS NOCTILUCA, Cicindela.

LANA PHILOSOPHORUM, Zinci oxydum.

LANARIA, Saponaria, Verbascum nigrum.

LANCE DE MAURICEAU, (F.) An instrument invented by Mauriceau for perforating the head of the fœtus. A perforator.

LANCELET, Lancet.

LANCEOLA, Lancet.

LANCET, Lance'ola, Lancet'ta, Schaste'riou, Scalpm chirurgicum, Lancet'let, (Prov.) Fame, (F.) Lancette,—diminutive of lancea, 'a lance.' A surgical instrument, used in the operation of phlebotomy. It is composed of two parts, the handle, (F.) Chasse, and the blade, (F.) Lame. The former is made of two small plates of ivory, bone, or shell, movable on the blade for whose preservation they are intended. The blade is formed of well-polished steel. Lancets are made of different shapes; some being broad-shouldered—others, spear-pointed. The French distinguished three kinds: 1. Lancette à grain d'orge, which, on account of the almost oval shape of its point, makes a large opening. 2. The L. à langue de serpent, which is very narrow towards the point; and, 3. L. à grain d'avoine, which holds a medium station between the two former, and is generally preferred.

The Abscess Lancet is merely a large lancet for the purpose of opening abscesses.

The employment of a lancet, for opening abscesses, &c., is called Lancing.

LANCETTA, Lancet.

LANCETTE, Lancet.

LANCETTIER, (F.) A lancet-case.

LANCINANT, Lancing.

LANCINATING, Lancinans, from lancinare, lancination (lancea, 'a lance,'), 'to strike or thrust through.' (F.) Lancinant, (substantive, Élancement.) A species of pain, which consists in lacerations or shootings, similar to those that would be produced by the introduction of a sharp instrument into the suffering part. It is especially in cancer that this kind of pain is felt.

LANCING, see Lancet—L. the Gums, Dé-lançement.

LAND'S END, CLIMATE OF. The climate of the Land's End, in England, resembles that of the south of Devonshire, but is more relaxing. It is considered to be most likely to prove beneficial in consumptive cases, in which the disease is accompanied by an irritated state of the pulmonary mucous membrane, producing a dry cough. Where the system is relaxed, and the secretion from the lungs considerable, the climate, it is conceived, will generally prove injurious.

As a brumal retreat, the southern coast of Devonshire would seem to be preferable to it.

LANGÉAC, MINERAL WATERS OF. Acidulous, mineral waters at Langeac, in the department of Haute-Loire, France. They are employed as refrigerant, aperient, and diuretic. They contain carbonic acid, carbonates of soda and magnesia, and a little iron.

LANGDEBEB, Anchusa officinalis.

LANGENSCHWALBACH, Schwabach.

LANGUI AQUA EPILEPTICA, Epileptic Water of Langius, formerly employed against epilepsy. It was composed of the flowers of convallaria and lavender, Spanish wine, cinnamon, nutmeg, mistletoe, peony and dittovy roots, long pepper, enhebs, and rosemary flowers.

LANGUE, Tongue—L. Abaisseur de la, Glossocotcheus—L. de Carpe, Fish-tongue, see Lever—L. de Cérif, Asplenium scolopendrium—L. de Cheval, Ruscus hypoglossum—L. de Chien, Cynoglossum—L. de Serpent, Ophioglossum vulgatum.

LANGUEUR, Langour.

LANGUOR, Aph'esis, Faintness, (F.) Langneur. A species of atony, depression, or debility, which generally comes on slowly.

LANGWORT, Veratrum album.

LANK, Ingen.

LAN'TANA, Sage Tree, Blueberry, (F.) Caillean. The leaves of this indigenous plant form a fine-scented tea, like L. Camara or Bohama Tea, and L. Pseudothe'a or Brazil Tea. The tea is used as a diaphoretic.

LANU'GO, Pili cutis, Pluma, from lana, 'wool.' The soft, fine hair on different parts of the body, especially of the young.

LANUGO PRIMA, Genetas—L. Pudendorum, Pubes—L. Siliquæ hirsuta, see Dolichos pruriens.

LANUVIUM, Vulva.

LAÏON'ICA CURA'TIO seu CURA, from λαός, 'the people.' A popular mode of treating the gout in the middle ages, which consisted in the employment of local applications, proper for evacuating the morbid matter. [?]

LAOS, Tin.

LAPACTICUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

LAPARA, Abdomen, Flanks, Lumbi.

LAPARENTEROTOMIA, Laparo enterotomy.

LAPAROCE'LE, from λαπαρά, 'the lumbar region,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Lumbar Hernia, through a separation of the fibres of the quadratus lumborum, and a protrusion of the aponeurosis of the transverse muscle on the outside of the mass common to the sacro-lumbalis and longissimus dorsi.—Cloquet.

LAPAROCYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

LAPARO-ELYTROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

LAPARO-ENTEROTOMY, Lap'aro-enterotomy'ia, Laparenterotomy'ia, from λαπαρά, 'the lumbar region,' the 'abdomen,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and τομή, 'incision.' The operation of opening the abdomen and intestinal canal, for the removal of disease.

LAPAROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

LAPAROTOMY. Gastrotony, especially when executed in the lumbar region. See Gastrotony.

LAPATHOS, Rumex acutus—L. Aquaticum, Rumex hydrolapathum—L. Chinense, Rheum—L. Orientale, Rheum—L. Sanguineum, Rumex sanguineus—L. Unectuosum, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

LAPAXIS, Evacuation.

LAPE, Mucus.

LAPIDIL'LUM, from lapis, 'a stone.' Blasius has given this name to a kind of scoop, used for extracting stone from the bladder.

LAPILLATIO, Lithia.

LAPILLI GLANDULÆ PINEALIS, see Pineal gland.

LAPILLUS, diminutive of lapis, 'a stone.' A small stone; gravel; a grain of sand.

LAPIS, Calculus — l. Accipitrum, Hieracites — l. Aërosus, Calamina — l. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gum — l. Animalis, Blood — l. Armenius, Melocheites — l. Aureus, Urine — l. Bezoardiens, Bezoar — l. Cæruleus, Cupri sulphas — l. Calaminaris, Calamina — l. Carneolus, Cornelian — l. Causticus, Potassa cum calce, Potassa fusa — l. Collymus, Ætites — l. Contrayervæ, Pulvis contrayervæ compositus — l. Cyanus, l. lazuli.

LAPIS DIVINUS, l. Ophthalmicus seu Ophthalmicus St. Ivesii, Coprum aluminatum, (F.) Pierre divine, (Cupri sulphat., Alumin., Potass., nitrat. 5j. 5j. Melt together, adding at the end Camphor. ʒjss.) Employed to make an eye-water, ʒij ad aqua ʒiv.

LAPIS FULMINEUS, Ceraunium — l. Hematites, Hematites — l. Hercules, Magnet — l. Infernalis, Argenti nitras — l. Infernalis alkalinus, Potassa fusa — l. Infernalis sive septicus, Potassa cum calce — l. Judaicus, Judæus (lapis).

LAPIS LAZULI, l. Cyaneus, Azulci, Lazulite, (F.) Pierre d'azur, Outremer. A stone, of a beautiful blue colour; opaque; and close-grained; fracture, dull. It is composed of silic; alumina; carbonate and sulphate of lime; oxide of iron, and water. It was formerly looked upon as a purgative and emetic, and given in epilepsy.

LAPIS MALCENSIS, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine — l. Nauticus, Magnet — l. Ophthalmicus, l. Divinus — l. Ophthalmicus St. Ivesii, l. Divinus — l. Phœnicites, Judæus (lapis) — l. Porcinus, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine — l. Prunellæ, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis pancillo mixtus — l. Sardius, Cornelian — l. Septicus, Causticum commune, Potassa fusa — l. Specularis, S. lucidum — l. Syderitis, Magnet — l. Syriacus, Judæus (lapis) — l. Vini, Potassæ superpartas impurus.

LAPPA, Aretium lappa. Galium aparine, Lip-pitudo — l. Minor, Xanthium.

LAPPELLA HEPATICA, Agrimony.

LAPISANA, Lampisana, Nalpinum, Papillaris herba, Dock-creases, Nipple-Wort, (So.) Bol-gan leaves, (F.) Lampans, Herbe aux Mamelles. This plant is a lactescent bitter. It has been chiefly employed, however, as an external application to sore nipples, &c.

LAPSUS PILORUM, Alopecia.

LAQ, Laqueus.

LAQUE, Læca.

LAQUEAR, Læcannar.

LAQUEAR VAGINÆ, Fundus Vaginae (laquear, 'the inward roof of a house'). The part of the vagina in which the cervix uteri terminates.

LAQUEUS, Funic. A cord, ligature or bandage, with running knots; — a Noose, a loop. A fillet, Bezoar, Pachydon, (F.) Lac, Laq on Laq. The term is applied to a bandage or fillet of any kind, attached by means of a loop upon any part, with the view of fixing it; as in certain cases of labour, where a hand or foot presents; or to facilitate extension in luxations and fractures.

Also: — A prominent band in the brain, Leminiscus, behind the brachium posterius of the corpora quadrigemina, which marks the course of the superior division of the fasciculus olivaris.

LAQUEUS GUTTURIS, 'Noose of the throat.' Violent inflammation of the tonsils, in which the patient appears as if suffocated by a noose. According to some, gangrenous cyanache.

LARCH, Pinus larix.

LARD, Adeps.

LARDACE, Lardaceous.

LARDA'CEOUS, Larda'ceus, Lar'deus, Lard'iform, Lard'iformis, (F.) Lardacé; from lardum, 'lard,' the fat of bacon. An epithet given to certain organic alterations in the textures, whose aspect and consistence resemble lard. (F.) Tissus lardacés. They constitute what has been termed the Larda'ceous or Chol'esterine Disease. From their waxy appearance the pathological condition has been called Cero'na.

LARDEUS, Lardaceous.

LARDIFORM, Lardaceous.

LARDUM, Adeps.

LARGE, Broad.

LARIDUM, Adeps.

LARKSPUR, BRANCHING, Delphinium consolida.

LARME, Tear.

LARMOIEMENT, Epiphora.

LAROCHE POSAY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Simple sulphurous waters in the department of Vienne, France.

LAR'REA MEXICANA, l. glutinosum, Crescote plant, Order, Zygophyllacæ. A shrub, growing in Arkansas, Southern Texas, New Mexico, and Northern Mexico, which abounds in a strong-scented resinous matter; and is used, externally and internally, in rheumatism, and in syphilitic, and other pains.

LARVA, Mask. Also the larve, grub, or vermiform condition of an insect: the first change it experiences after leaving the ovum. Larves of insects are occasionally developed in the intestinal canal from ova swallowed. See Ectozoa.

LARVE, Mask.

LARVÉ, Masked.

LARYNGÉ, Laryngeal.

LARYNGE'AL, Laryngéus, (F.) Laryngé, Laryngien. Same etymon as Larynx. That which belongs to the larynx.

LARYNGEAL ARTERIES are given off from the thyroid arteries.

LARYNGEAL NERVES, (F.) Nerfs Laryngés, are two in number: — a superior and an inferior. The superior laryngeal nerve is given off from the trunk of the pneumogastric, at the upper and deep part of the neck. It passes downwards and inwards, behind the internal carotid artery, and divides into two secondary branches; the one, external, which distributes its filaments, on the outside of the larynx, to the sterno-thyroid, hyo-thyroid, constrictor inferior, crico-thyroid muscles, &c. The other, the internal, which crosses the thyro-hyoid membrane, and gives filaments to the epiglottis, the mucous membranes of the pharynx and larynx, to the arytenoid gland, the arytenoid and crico-thyroid muscles, and ultimately anastomoses with the inferior laryngeal nerve. The inferior laryngeal nerve or recur'vent, Nervi recur'veri, Rameaux Trachéaux (Chaus.) arise from the trunk of the pneumogastric within the thorax. They ascend in the furrow, which separates the trachea from the œsophagus, to be distributed on the neck, after having been reflected; — the left around the arch of the aorta; the right, around the corresponding subclavian. They send off filaments to the cardiac plexuses; to the parietes of the œsophagus, and trachea; to the thyroid gland; to the inferior constrictor of the pharynx; the posterior and lateral crico-arytenoid and thyro-arytenoid muscles; and to the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx.

LARYNGEAL PHTHISIS, Phthisis, laryngeal.

LARYNGEAL POUCHES. Small culs-de-sac, which lead from the anterior part of each ventricle of the larynx upwards, for the space of half an inch, between the superior ligaments on the inner side, and the thyroid cartilage on the outer, reaching as high as the upper border of that cartilage at the sides of the epiglottis. Numerous small glands open into them.

LARYNGEAL SOUND, Laryngeche.

LARYNGEAL VEINS open into the internal jugular. Winslow gives the name laryngeal to the superior thyroid artery.

LARYNGEAL VOICE, see Voice.

LARYNGE'CHÉ, from larynx, and ηχη, or ηχος, 'sound.' The laryngeal sound heard by the stethoscope during breathing and speaking.

LARYNGEMPIRAX'IS, from larynx, and εμπραξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction of the larynx from any cause.

LARYNGIEN, Laryngeal.

LARYNGISM'US, from larynx. Spasm of glottis, giving occasion to contraction or closure of the opening.

LARYNGISMUS STRIDULUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGITIS, from larynx, and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation; Inflammatio Laryngis, Cynanchè seu Angina laryngea, (F.) Laryngite, Catarrhe laryngien, Angine laryngé, Inflammation of the Larynx. This disease, in some measure, resembles croup; but is usually devoid of that peculiar sonorous inspiration, which attends the latter. There is, also, pain upon pressing the larynx; and, whilst laryngitis is a disease of more advanced life, croup attacks children. The membraniform exudation is, also, absent; probably, because the inflammation, being seated above the glottis, the coagulable lymph is readily expectorated. It requires the most active treatment.

Simple Laryngitis is called by some mucous Laryngitis, Laryngitis acuta seu mucosa acuta, (F.) Laryngite muqueuse, to distinguish it from submucous Laryngitis or Edema of the glottis.

Chronic Laryngitis is generally regarded as synonymous with laryngeal phthisis; but it may exist independently.

LARYNGOCACE, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGO-CATARRHUS, Cotarrhus Laryngeus et trachealis. Catarrh affecting the larynx and trachea more especially, as indicated by alteration of the voice—hoarseness—itching and sensation of burning in those parts; short cough and expectoration, &c.

LARYNGO-ET-TRACHEO-PHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOGRAPHY, Laryngographia; from larynx, and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the larynx.

LARYNGOL'OGY, from larynx, and λογος, 'treatise.' A treatise on the larynx.

LARYNGOPARALYSIS, see Aphonia.

LARYNGOPH'ONY, Laryngophonia, Tracheophony, Laryngeal voice, Tracheal voice: from larynx, and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound heard in health, when the stethoscope is placed over the larynx or trachea at the time a person speaks. The voice appears to pass immediately up to the ear of the auscultator. A similar physical sign exists when there is a cavity in the lungs, and the instrument is placed over it whilst the patient speaks. See Pectoriloquy.

LARYNGOPHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOSPASMUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGOSTASIS, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGOSTENOSIS, from larynx, and στενωσις, 'contraction.' Contraction or narrowing of the larynx.

LARYNGOT'OMY, Laryngotomia, from larynx, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' A surgical operation, which consists in opening the larynx, either to extract a foreign body, or to remedy an obstruction of the glottis. The operation is, sometimes, erroneously called Bronchotomy, and Trachetomy.

LARYNGO-TRACHEITIS, Cynanche trachealis—l. Tracheitis with Diphtheritic exudation. Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNX, (gen. Laryngis), λαρυγγίς, λαρυγγος, Caput seu Operculum seu Initium seu Finitis superior seu Terminus superior seu Pars prima aëtoperæ arteriæ. The apparatus of voice is situate at the superior and anterior part of the neck; and at the top of the trachea, with which it communicates. It is composed of four cartilages,—the thyroid, cricoid, and two arytenoid; is moved by a number of muscles, and lined by a mucous membrane, having certain membranous reflections, constituting the superior ligaments of the glottis, &c.

The vessels and nerves of the larynx are called Laryngeal.

The larynx is destined to give passage to the air, in the act of respiration, and to impress upon it certain modifications, which constitute voice. Its dimensions vary in different individuals. In men, it is always larger, and situate lower, than in women.

LARYNX, PELLICULAR OR PLASTIC INFLAMMATION OF THE, Cynanche trachealis.

LAS'ANUM, Sella familiar'ica, (F.) Chaise percée. A close stool.

LASCIVIA, Satyriasis.

LASCIVITAS, Satyriasis.

LASCIVUS, Libidinous.

LASER, Laserpitium—L. à larges feuilles, Laserpitium latifolium.

LASERPIT'IUM, Laser, Sil'phium, στος γιλ-φiov. A term applied, anciently, both to a plant and its juice, regarding the nature of neither of which we possess any precise information. Bentley, Laurence, Geoffroi, &c., regard it to have been the same as asafetida:—Theophrastus, Dioscorides, and the ancient scholiast of Aristophanes, however, by assigning a sweet and agreeable flavour to the laserpitium, discountenance the idea. From whatever plant obtained, it was so rare, and consequently so costly, that the Romans deposited it in the public treasury. It was obtained from Cyrene—Saccus Cyrenu'icus—and likewise from Persia—the latter being the most valuable. The Laserpitium is called by Avicenna, Althit.

LASERPIT'IUM ASPERUM, L. latifolium.

LASERPIT'IUM LATIFOLIUM, L. asperum, Gen'tiana alba, White Gentian, Cervaria alba; (F.) Laser à larges feuilles. The root of this plant is bitter and tonic.

LASERPIT'IUM MONTANUM, L. siler.

LASERPIT'IUM SILER, L. trifoliatum seu montanum, Ses'eli, Seselis, Siler montanum seu laucifolium, Heart-wort, Sermountain. The seeds and roots are possessed of aromatic properties.

LASERPIT'IUM TRIFOLIATUM, L. siler.

LASSITUDE OCULAIRE, Copyopia.

LASSITUDO, Copos.

LAST, Iuguen.

LATENS IN ORE, Pterygoideus internus.

LATENT, Latens, from latere, 'to lie hid.' 'Lying hid,' 'concealed.' An epithet applied to certain diseases or states of disease, in which the symptoms are so concealed and obscure, morbi occulti, as to escape the observation of the physician. Thus, we say latent inflammation, latent period of small-pox.

LATERAD, from latus, lateris, 'the side.' A term used adverbially by Dr. Barclay to signify 'towards the lateral aspect.'

LATERAL ASPECT, see Mesial.

LATERIT'IOUS, Laterit'ius, Lateric'ius, (F.) Briqueté, from later, lateris, 'a brick.' An epithet applied to the brick-like sediment, occasionally deposited in the urine of people afflicted with fever: Sedimentum urinae lateric'ium;—(F.) Urine briqueté.

LATEROFLEX'ION, Lateral'flex'io. A bending to one side,—as of the uterus.

LATÉRO-VÉRSION, Lateral'vers'io. A turning or version to one side,—as of the uterus.

LATESCENTIS CHORDÆ (Musculus), Palmaris longus.

LATEX NIVEUS, Milk.

LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris.

LATIB'ULUM, from latus, 'I lie hid.' The foyer of a febrile poison; whence it spreads to every part to induce a paroxysm. See Clapier.

LAT'ICA. Same etymon. Amphimer'ina lat'ica of Sauvages. A species of quotidian remittent, whose paroxysms are very long, and which is accompanied with latent or slightly developed fever, whence its name.

LATICES LACTEI, Receptaculum chyli.

LATISSIMUS COLLI, Platysma myoides.

LATISSIMUS DORSI, (superlative of latus, 'broad.') Aniscalyptor, Brachium movens quartus, (F.) Lombo-humeral (Ch.), Dorsi-lombo-sacro-humeral, Muscle grand dorsal, M. très large du dos. A flat muscle; broad, especially below; thin; quadrilateral; and situate at the posterior, lateral, and inferior region of the trunk. It is attached to the posterior half of the outer lip of the crest of the ilium; to the posterior surface of the sacrum: to the spinous processes of the six or seven last dorsal vertebrae, to all those of the loins, and to the last four false ribs, and is inserted by a strong tendon at the posterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. Its upper fibres are almost horizontal; the middle very long and oblique upwards and outwards; and the anterior almost vertical. This muscle carries the arm backwards, depressing it, and making it turn on its axis. It also draws backwards and downwards the prominence of the shoulder. When, suspended by an arm, we make an effort to raise ourselves, it draws the trunk towards the arm. It can, also, raise the ribs by assuming its fixed point on the humerus, and become an inspiratory muscle.

LATITUDO HUMERI, Scapula.

LATTICE WORK, Cancelli.

LATUS, Broad—L. Ani, Levator ani.

LAU, see Spirit.

LAUCA'NIA, Leuca'nia, Lau'chané. The fauces and œsophagus. Also, the chin.—Gorræus.

LAUCHANE, Laucania.

LAUD'ANUM or LAUDA'NUM. Perhaps, from laus, laudis, 'praise'; laudatum, 'praised.' Every preparation of opium, solid or liquid, but more particularly the extract and tincture, and especially the latter.

LAUDANUM ABBATIS ROUSSEAU, Guttæ Abbatis Rousseau, Vinum opium fermentat'um paratum, Abbe Rousseau's Drops. (Jel. Norbonneux, $\text{f}\overline{\text{xxij}}$; aquæ calidæ, Oij. Set in a warm place, and, as soon as the mixture ferments, add opium, $\text{f}\overline{\text{iv}}$, dissolved in water, $\text{f}\overline{\text{xxij}}$. Let it ferment for a month, and evaporate to $\text{f}\overline{\text{xx}}$: strain, and add rectified spirit of wine, $\text{f}\overline{\text{viss}}$.

LAUDANUM, FORB'S, Vinum opii—L. Liquid, Tinctura opii—L. Liquidum Hoffmanni, Vinum opii—L. Liquidum Sydenhami, Vinum opii—L. Opiatum, Extractum opii—L. Simplex, Extractum opii—L. Sydenham's, Vinum opii.

LAUGH, Risus—L. Sardonic, Canine laugh.

LAUGHING, Risus.

LAURO-CERASUS, Prunus lauro-cerasus.

LAUROSE, Nerium oleander.

LAURUS, Laurus nobilis, Daphne, Sweet Bay. Nat. Ord. Lauracæ. (F.) Laurier, L. noble ou des cuisines ou commun ou d'Apollon. The leaves and berries, Laurus (Ph. L.), have a sweet, fragrant smell, and an aromatic, astringent taste. Sweet bay has been advised as a stomachic and carminative, but is now rarely used. It is, sometimes, employed as a fomentation and in glisters; and the berries are an ingredient in the Euplastrum Cuminum.

LAURUS ÆSTIVALIS, L. benzoin—L. Alexandrina angustifolia, Ruscus hypoglossum.

LAURUS BENZOÏN, Benzoin odoriferum, Laurus Pseudo-benzoin seu æstivalis, Spice wood, Spice bush, Benjamin bush, Allspice bush, Wild allspice, Spice berry, Fever wood, Fever bush. An indigenous shrub, growing in moist, shady places, in all parts of the United States; flowering early in spring. All parts of the shrub have a spicy, agreeable flavour, which is strongest in the bark and berries. An infusion or decoction of the small branches is used in popular practice as a vernifuge, and an agreeable drink in low fevers. The bark has been used in intermittents; the berries, dried and powdered, for allspice. The oil of the berries is used as an excitant.

LAURUS CAMPHORA, see Camphor—L. Canella, L. Cassia.

LAURUS CAS'SIA, L. Canella, Per'sea cassia. The species of Laurus which yields the Cassia, Cassia, Canella, Cassia lignea seu cinnamomea, C. lignea Malabarica, Cortex Canellæ Malabarica, Cortex cras'sior, Xylo-cassia, Canella Malabarica et Javen'sis, C. Cnaba'na, Arbor Judæica, Canellifera Malabarica, Cinnamomum Malabaricum seu Indicum seu Sinen'se, Cathac'ha canella, Wild Cinnamon, Malabar Cinnamon, Cassia, (F.) Cannelle de Malabar ou de Java ou de la Chine ou des Indes ou de Coromandel, C. fuisse, C. matte, Casse en bois ou aromatique. The bark and leaves abound with the flavour of cinnamon, for which they may be substituted; but they are much weaker. The unopened flower-buds are used in the same manner. AQUA CASSIA, Water of Cassia, prepared by distillation, is officinal in the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia.

LAURUS CINNAMOMOIDES, Nectandra cinnamomoides.

LAURUS CINNAMOMUM, Per'sea cinnamomum, Cinnamomum, C. Zeylanicum, Darse'ni, Darsi'ni, Cinnamon, Xylo-cinnamomum, Cuadro Canella, (Sc.) Cannel, (F.) Cannelle, Baume de Cannelle, Cannelle officinale ou de Ceylon. Cinnamon bark, which is obtained, also, from the Cinnamomum aromatizans, is stimulant and carminative, and is employed, chiefly, as a grateful aromatic, to cover the taste of nauseous remedies. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. The Flowers, called Cassia Flores in the shops, possess aromatic and astringent virtues, and may be used wherever cinnamon is required. The volatile oil of the bark—Oleum Cinnamomi—Oil of Cinnamon, is officinal in the Pharm. U. S.

LAURUS CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—L. Culilaban, L. Culilawan.

LAURUS CULILAWAN, L. Culilaban seu Caryophyllus, Cinnamomum Culilawan. The tree that affords the Cortex Culilawan seu Culilaban, Culilawan, Cortex caryophylloides seu Caryophyllodes Amboinensis. This bark resembles the sassafras in appearance and properties, and is used in Java as a condiment.

LAURUS SASSAFRAS, Per'sea sassafras, Sassafras, Cornus mas odorata, Anhiba, Ague-free, Ague-tree, (F.) Pavaoue. Indigenous in the United States. Sassafras wood and root, and especially the bark of the root, Sassafras Radicis Cortex (Ph. U. S.), have been considered stimulant, sudorific, and diuretic. The virtues depend upon essential oil, Oleum Sassafras, the odour of which is not unlike that of fennel. It has been used in cutaneous diseases, chronic rheumatism, &c.

The pith of the stems, Sassafras medulla (Ph. U. S.), abounds in gummy matter, which it readily imparts to water, forming a limpid mucilage, which is much employed as a collyrium in ophthalmia, and as a drink in dysentery, catarrh, &c. (one drachm of the pith to a pint of boiling water).

LAUTIS'SIMA VINA. (Superlative of laurus, 'elegant.') Wines were formerly so called, which were strongly impregnated with myrrh.

LAVAMENTUM, Clyster, Enema.

LAVANDE, Lavandula—L. de Mer, Stactice limonium—L. Triste, Stactice limonium.

LAVAN'DULA, Laven'dula, from lavo, 'I wash'; so called from being used in baths. Lavandula spica (Linnaeus) seu angustifolia seu officinalis seu vera, Common Lavender, (F.) Lavande. Ord. Labiate. The odour of lavender flowers, Lavandula (Ph. U. S.), is fragrant and agreeable; taste warm and bitterish—depending upon an essential oil. It has been used as a stimulant; particularly in the form of the oil,—Oleum lavandulæ. The dried leaves have been employed as an erhrine.

The French use, also, LAVANDULA STÆCHAS, Stachas et Stichas Arabica, French Lavender, of which they have a compound syrup, Syrupus de stæchadæ compositus: given as a pectoral.

LAVANDULA LATIFOLIA, Lavandula.

LAVANDULA SPICA (Linnaeus), L. Latifolia Spica, French Lavender, (F.) Lavande, Spice, yields the Oil of Spike, Oleum spicæ, (F.) Huile d'Aspic ou de Spic, which is used to make varnishes, and as a liniment in paralysis.

LAVEMENT, Clyster, Enema—L. Antispasmodique, Enema fetidum.

LAVENDER, COMMON, Lavandula—L. French, Lavandula spica—L. Sea, Stactice limonium, Stactice Caroliniana.

LAVENDULA, Lavandula.

LAVIPEDIUM, Pedilavium.

LAW MEDICINE, Medicine, legal.

LAWSONIA ALBA, L. Inermis.

LAWSONIA INERMIS, L. alba, Alican'na vera seu Orientalis, Cyperus antiquorum, Lignstrum Egyptiacum, Smooth Lawsonia, (F.) Henné, Alhanna. An East Indian and African plant, the root of which is slightly astringent.

In India, the root of the Lawsonia spinosa is employed in lepra and other cutaneous affections.

LAX, Diarrhœa.

LAXANS, Laxative, Relaxant.

LAXATIVE, Laxativus, Laxans, Le'niens, from laxare, laxatum, 'to loosen'; Minorativus, Solutivus, Alviducus, Hypochorelicus, Hypago'gus, Hypell'atus, Hypocuthar'ticus, Lapac'ticus. A medicine which gently opens the bowels; such as tamarinds, manna, &c.

LAXATIVUS INDICUS, Cambogia.

LAXATOR AURIS INTERNUS, L. tympani.

LAXATOR TYMPANI, L. major tympani, Ecternus seu Anterior mall'ei, Obl'iquus seu Externus auris, Laxator auris internus, Eustachii muscululus, (F.) Antérieur du martean, Acustico-malléen, Sphéni-salpingo-mallien. A muscle which arises from the spine of the sphenoid bone and from the cartilage of the Eustachian tube, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the apophysis of Rau. It relaxes the membrana tympani.

LAXATOR TYMPANI MINOR. A very small muscle which extends from the upper part of the external auditory canal, and is inserted at the inferior part of the process of the handle of the malleus. Its existence is denied by most anatomists.

LAX'ITY, Lax'itas, Laxness. Same etymon. Condition of a tissue when loose or relaxed; or of one which wants tone. We say laxity of fibre, laxity of skin, to express that those parts have lost some of the tenseness proper to them.

LAYER, ANIMAL, see Tache embryonnaire—l. Mucous, see Tache embryonnaire—l. Serous, see Tache embryonnaire—l. Vascular, see Tache embryonnaire—l. Vegetative, see Tache embryonnaire.

LEAD WATER, Liquor Plumbi subacetatis dilutus.

LEAD, WHITE, Plumbi subcarbonas.

LEADER, Tendon.

LEADWORT, Plumbago Europæa.

LEAF, SOUR, Andromeda arborea.

LEAMINGTON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters at Leamington, about two miles east of Warwick, England, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, and chlorides of calcium and magnesium.

LEANNESS, Emaciation,

LEAP, Sax. hlæpan, Saltus, Salit'io, Exaltis, (F.) Saut; Bound, Jump,—the act of leaping. Muscular movement or movements, by which the body is detached from the soil by the forcible and sudden extension of the lower limbs, previously flexed upon the pelvis.

LEAPERY, Lepros.

LEAPING AGUE. This disease is said by the Scotch writers to be characterized by increased efficiency, but depraved direction, of the will, producing an irresistible propensity to dance, tumble, and move about in a fantastic manner, and often with far more than the natural vigour, activity, and precision! See Mania, dancing.

LEATHER FLOWER, Clematis viorna—l. Wood, Dicra palustris.

LEBANON, MINERAL WATERS OF. The spring at Lebanon, 26 miles east of Albany, New York, is a simple thermal; temperature 73° Fahr.

LECANE, Pelvis.

LECHE, Physician.

LECHENEION, Torcular Hierophilii.

LECHEROUS, Libidinous.

LE CRAN, Cochlearia armoræia.

LECO, Penis.

LECONTIA VIRGINICA, Peltandra Virginica.

LECTISTERNIUM, from lectus, 'a bed,' and sternere, 'to spread.' The arrangement of a bed so as to adapt it to a particular disease. Also, a supplication, with the Romans, in times of public danger, when beds or couches were spread for the gods, as if they were about to feast, and their images were taken down from their pedestals and placed upon these couches around the altars. The lectisternium was first introduced in the time of a pestilence.—Livy.

LECTUALIS, from lectus, 'a bed.' An epithet applied to a protracted disease.

LECTULUS MEDICATUS, see Fomentation—l. Stramineus, Favon.

LEDE SAUVAGE, Ledum sylvestre.

LEDOYEN'S DISINFECTING LIQUID OR FLUID. A solution of nitrate of lead, (Plumb. nitrat. ʒj ad aquæ fʒj.) used as an antiseptic and antitrouic.

LEDUM LATIFOLIUM, Labrador' Tea, Ord. Ericacæ, grows in damp places, in Canada and the United States. The leaves have a pleasant odour and taste, and have been used as tea. They have also been esteemed pectoral and tonic.

LEDUM PALUSTRE, Rosari'nis seu Anthos sylvestris, Marsh Tea, (F.) Lède ou Rosariu sauvage, Olivier de Bohême. Nat. Ord. Ericinæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. This plant has a bitter, substringent taste, and was formerly used in Switzerland in place of hops: the virtues are equivocal. The leaves are chewed by the Cree Indians, and applied to burns, which are said to heal rapidly under their influence. The cake of chewed leaves is left adhering to the sore until it falls off.—Sir J. Richardson.

LEEK, Allium porrum.

LEES, SOAP, Liquor potassæ.

LEG, (Da. Læg.) Crus, Scelos, Cnemē. The portion of the lower extremity, which extends from the knee to the foot. It consists of three bones, Tibia, Fibula, and Patella, and also of a great number of muscles, vessels, and nerves. The projection, formed by the muscles at the back part of the leg, has received the name of Calf of the leg. It is the special attribute of man, and proves that he is destined to be biped.

LEG, SWELLED, Phlegmatia dolens—l. Cochin, see Elephantiasis.

LEGITIMATE, Legit'imus, from lex, legis, 'law;' Genu'nis, Gue'sios. An epithet applied to things which are according to rule. A legitimate child, (F.) Enfant légitime, is one conceived or born during marriage Legitimate diseases, (F.) Maladies légitimes, are those which follow a regular march.

LEGNA, from λεγνν, λεγνον, 'a fringed edge,' 'the border of a garment.' The orifice of the pudendum muliebre, or of the uterus.

LEGUME, Legumen.

LEGUMEN, from lego, 'I gather,' (?) akin to λαχανον, 'pulse,' (F.) Légume, Gousse. So called because it is usually gathered by the hand, instead of being reaped. All kinds of pulse, as peas, beans, &c., are thus termed.

LEGUMIN, Casein.

LEICHEN, Lichen.

LEIMANTHIUM VIRGINICUM, Melanthium Virginicum.

LEIMAX, Limax.

LEI'OPUS, L'opus, Plancus, Plantus, Plotus, from λεως, 'smooth,' and πους, 'a foot.' One who is affected with flat-footedness, splay-footedness, Leiopod'ia, Liopod'ia. One, the soles of whose feet are flat, instead of having the concavity which they commonly present.

LEIOSIS, Communion.

LEIPIHÆ'MIA, Liphæ'mia: same etymon as Leiphæmos. Poverty or paucity of blood.

LEIPHÆMOI, Achroi.

LEIPHÆ'MOS, Liphæ'mos, (F.) Leiphème, from λεπω, 'I want,' and αιμα, 'blood.' A word sometimes used adjectively; at others, substantively, either for a vicious state of the blood—or rather for a sort of anæmia—or for the patient who labours under this condition. See Achroi.

LEIPHÈME, Leiphæmos.

LEIPO, Lipo.

LEIPODERMIA, Aposthia.

LEIPODER'MOS, Lipoder'mos, Leipoderm'atus, from λεπω, 'I want,' and δερμα, 'skin.' One who wants a part of his skin. It is especially applied to one who wants the prepuce. See Apella, and Aposthia.

LEI POMERIA, Lipomeria.

LEIPOPSYCHIA, Syncope.

LEIPTHYMIA, Syncope.

LEIPYR'IAS, from λεπω, 'I want,' and πυρ, 'fire,' or 'heat.' A species of continued fever, referred to by the Greek physicians, in which there is burning heat of the internal parts and coldness of the extremities. Avicenna described, under this name, a kind of hemitritæa.

LEMA, Chassie.

LEME, Lippitudo.

LEMITHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

LEMMA, Cortex, Feculence, Furfur, Sedimentum.

LEMNISCUS, Pessary. Tent. See Laqueus.

LEMON WILD, Podophyllum montanum.

LEMONADE', Limonada, (F.) Limonade, Citronnade. Lemon juice diluted with water and sweetened. See Citrus medica.

LEMONADE, DRY, (F.) Limonade sèche. Citric or tartaric acid reduced to powder and mixed with sugar. Lemonade powders may be made as follows:—Pound $\frac{3}{4}$ of citric acid with a few drops of essence of lemon-peel and $\frac{3}{4}$ or more of lump sugar. Divide into six papers, each of which will make a glass of lemonade. See Citric acid.

Limonade Gazeuse (F.), is an agreeable drink prepared by adding syrup of lemons, raspberry, &c., to water saturated with carbonic acid.

LEMONADE, MAGNESIAN, Magnesiæ citras.

LEMONADE, NITRIC. Nitric acid considerably diluted with water, and sweetened.

LEMONADE, SULPHURIC, and LEMONADE, TARTARIC, are made with the sulphuric and tartaric acids.

LEMOSITAS, Chassie, Lippitudo.

LENDE, Lumbi.

LENDIS, Lumbi, Nates.

LENIENS, Laxative, Lenitive.

LENIS, Lenitive.

LENITIVE, Lenitivus, Lenis, Leniens, Epia'ma, Mitigans, from lenio, lenitum, 'to assuage.' A medicine, which allays irritation or palliates disease; also, a laxative medicine. A lenitive electuary is one that purges gently.

LENOS, Torcular Herophilii.

LENS, Ervum lens—l. Crystalline, Crystalline—l. Esculentia, Ervum lens.

LENTIC'ULA. Dim. of lens, lentis, 'a lentil.' A freckle. Also, the eruption of lenticular fever. See Ephelides.

LENTICULAR GANGLION, Ophthalmic G. LENTICULARES GLAN'DULÆ, Lenticular glands. Mucous follicles, having the shape of a lentil, which are observed especially towards the base of the tongue.

LENTIGO, Ephelides.

LENTITIA, Lencor.

LENTITIS, Phacitis.

LENTITUDO, Lencor.

LENTOR, Lentiv'ia, Lentiv'ido, from lentus, 'clammy.' A viscosity or siziness of any fluid. See Gluten.

LENT ROSE, Narcissus pseudonarcissus.

LENUM, Torcular Herophilii.

LEONOTIS LEONURUS. Ord. Labiata, A South African plant, which has a peculiar smell and nauseous taste, and is said to produce narcotic effects if incautiously used. It is employed in decoction in chronic cutaneous diseases. The Hottentots smoke it like tobacco, and take a decoction of its leaves as a strong cathartic. It is also given as an emenagogue. In the eastern districts of the Cape Colony, Leonotis ovata, (Prov.) Crociarsnep, Male, is used for the same purpose.

LEONOTIS OVATA, see Leonotis leonurus.

LEONTI'ASIS, Leont'ion, from λεων, λεοντος, 'a lion.' A name given to lepra of the face, from some fancied resemblance between the countenance of those labouring under it and that of the lion. To this kind of lepra the epithets le'onine and le'ontine have been given.

LEON'TICE THALICTROIDES, Caulophyllum thalictroides.

LEONTION, Leontiasis.

LEON'TODON TARAX'ACUM, L. officina'le seu vulga'rè, Tarax'acum officina'le, Dens Leo'nis, Hedyp'nois tarax'acum, Urina'ria, Caput Mon'achi, Dan'delion, Piss-a-bed, (Prov.) Shitabed, Puffball, (Sc.) Dentilium, (F.) Pissenlit, Lion-dent, Dent de lion, Couronne de Moine, from λεων, λεωντος, 'a lion,' and οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth.'

Order, Composite. The young leaves are sometimes eaten as salad. The roots are, also, roasted and used as a substitute for coffee. The root, Tarax'acum, (Ph. U. S.) is, moreover, reputed to be aperient and diuretic; hence its vulgar names. Its efficacy is doubtful.

LEONTOPIDIUM, Alchemilla.

LEONURUS, from λεων, 'a lion,' and ουρα, 'a tail.' Lion's Tail.

LEONURUS CARDI'ACA, Agripal'ma Gallis, Marrubium, Cardi'aca crispata seu triloba'ta seu vulga'ris, Herba cardi'aca seu Patæ lapi'næ, Motherwort, Throatwort, (F.) Agripaume. Ord. Labiata. Its properties are those of a nauseous bitter; and hence it has been used in hysteria and other nervous affections.

LEONURUS LANATUS, Ballota lanata.

LEOPARD'S BANE, ROMAN, Arnica montana, Doronicum pardalianches.

LEPAS, Lepis, λεπας, gen. λεπαδος; λεπης, gen. λεπαδος, 'a scale.'

LEPER, see Leprons.

LEPER HOSPITAL, Ladrerie.

LEPIA CAMPESTRIS, Thlaspi campestre—l. Sativa, Lepidium Iberis.

LEPID'IUM, from λεπης, λεπιδος, 'a scale;' so called from its supposed usefulness in cleansing the skin from scales and impurities. Pepper-wort. Ord. Crucifere.

LEPIDIUM CAMPESTRE, Thlaspi campestre.

LEPIDIUM IBERICIS, Iberis, Cardaman'tica, Scitall'ica cresses. This plant possesses a warm, penetrating, pungent taste, like other cresses, and is recommended as an antiscorbutic, anti-septic, and stomachic.

LEPIDIUM SATIVUM, Lep'ia sativ'ea, Thlaspi nasturt'ium seu sativum, Nasturt'ium hortens'e seu sativum, Garden cress, Dittander, Green mustard, (F.) Cresson alénois, Cresson des Jardins. This plant possesses warm, stimulating properties, and is used like the last.

LEPIDIUM SQUAMATUM, Cochlearia coronopus.

LEPIDODES, Squamous.

LEPIDOIDES, Squamous.

LEPIDOSA RCO'MA, Tumor squamiform'is carnosus. A fleshy tumour, covered with scales; from λεπίς, lepidos, 'a scale,' and σαρκωμα, 'a fleshy tumour.' Marcus Aurelius Severinus describes tumours of this kind in the interior of the mouth.

LEPIDOSIS, Scaly disease.

LEPIDOSIS ICHTHYIASIS, Ichthyosis—1. Ichthyiasis eornigera, Horny excrescences—1. Lepriasis, Lepra—1. Pityriasis, Pityriasis—1. Psoriasis, Psoriasis.

LEPIDOTIS CLAVATA, Lycopodium clavatum.

LEPIRA, Lepra.

LEPIS, Scale.

LEPISMA, Squamous portion.

LEPORINUM LABIUM, Harelip—1. Rostrum, Harelip.

LEPORINUS OCLUS, Lagophthalmia.

LEPOSTEOPHYTON; from λεπίς, 'a scale,' σστων, 'a bone,' and φυτον, 'a plant or growth.' A thin scale of bone, the result of a morbid growth.

LEPRA, Lep'ira, from λεπρος, 'scaly.' Lepid'osis Lepri'asis, Lepro'is, Lepri'asis, Vitili'go, Lepra Græcorum, Herpes furfuraceus circin'atus, Leprosy, Lep'ery, (Sc.) Lepyr, Lipper, (F.) Lèpre, Mal Saint-Main, Dartre furfuracée arrondie. This term has been applied to various affections, very different in character. 1. To the Leprosy of the Jews, Lencè, Lepido'is Lepri'asis canes'cens, Lepra Mosai'ca seu Hebræorum,—a variety of the Alphos or Lepra alphoides. The leuce was, generally, not scaly, but consisted of smooth, shining patches, on which the hair turned white and silky, and the skin, with the muscular flesh, lost its sensibility. It was incurable. 2. To the Elephantiasis or Lepra of the Arabs, see Elephantiasis; and 3. To the Lepra of the Greeks, which includes all the varieties met with at the present day. It is characterized by scaly patches of different sizes, but having always nearly a circular form. Bateman and Willan describe three chief varieties of this lepra.

1. Lepra alphoides, Lepido'is Lepri'asis al'bida, Alphos, Morphæ'a alba, Vitili'go albus, Albaras alba, Albaras, Albaras, Lèpre écailluse of Alibert, White leprosy. An affection, characterized by white patches, surrounded by a rose-coloured areola, which appears here and there on the surface; depressed in the middle.

2. Lepra nigricans seu melas seu maculosa nigra, Vitili'go melas seu nigra, Morphæ'a seu Albaras nigra, Melas, Lepido'is Lepri'asis nigricans, Black leprosy; in which the scales are livid; the size of half a dollar; and diffused over the body, but less widely than in the Alphoides. The French pathologists usually admit three species of lepra, to which they give the epithets scaly, (squamæuse), crustaceous, (crustacée), and tubercular, (tuberculense.) according as the skin may be covered with scales, crusts, or tubercles.

3. Lepra vulgaris, Lepido'is Lepri'asis vulgaris, Dartre furfuracée arrondie, of Alibert, characterized as follows: scales glabrous, whitish, size of a crown piece; preceded by smaller reddish and glossy elevations of the skin, encircled by a dry, red, and slightly elevated border; often confluent; sometimes covering the whole of the body except the face.

Lepra appears to be endemic in Egypt, in Java, and certain parts of Norway and Sweden. Imperfect and faulty nutriment appears to contribute to its development. The means, best adapted for its removal, are:—a mild, unirritating diet, emollient fomentations—sulphureous baths, fumigations, &c; but, often, all remedial agents will be found ineffectual.

LEPROUS, Leprosus, Leprot'icus, Lep'ricus, Lepro'des, (Sc.) Lipper, (F.) Lépreux, Ladre, same etymon. Relating to or resembling or affected with leprosy; a leper.

LEPSIS, Attack.

LEPTAN'DRA VIRGIN'ICA, Veroni'ca seu Pædero'ta Virgin'ica, Culver's physic. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ. An indigenous plant, which grows throughout the United States, and flowers in August. The flowers are white, and terminate the stem in a long spike. A variety with purple flowers has been described, as LEPTANDRA PURPU'REA, Physic root, Black root, Whorlywort, Culver's root, Brinton root, Dowman root. The root is bitter and nauseous, and when fresh is emetic and cathartic. In the dried state it is more uncertain. Dose of the powder, gr. xx to ʒi.

LEPTO, LEPTOS, λεπτος, 'thin,' 'light.' Hence:

LEPTOCEPHA'LIA, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and κεφαλή, 'head.' Monstrosity, in which the head is abnormally small.

LEPTOCHRO'A, Leptochros, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and χροα, χροα, 'the colour of the skin: the skin.' Fineness, thinness of skin.

LEPTOCHYM'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and χυμος, 'a juice.' Morbid thinness of the juices.

LEPTOHYME'NIA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and ὑμην, 'a membranc.' Thinness, delicacy of membrane.

LEPTOMER'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and μέρος, 'a part.' Fineness, delicacy of bodily formation.

LEPTONTIQUES, Attenuants.

LEPTOPHONIA, Oxyphonia.

LEPTOSPERMUM LEUCADENDRUM, Melanena eajantni.

LEPTOTHRIX, Leptotrichus.

LEPTOTRICH'IA; same etymon as the next. Fineness of hair.

LEPTOTRICHUS, Leptothrix, from λεπτος,

'fine,' and σφιξ, τριχος, 'hair.' One who has fine hair.

LEPTOTROPHIA, Microtroph'ia, Microtrapez'ia, from λεπτος, 'light,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Light nutrition.

LEPTYNSIS, Emaciation.

LEPTYNTICA, Attenuants.

LERESIS, see Dementia.

LERUS, Delirium, see Dementia.

LESEOLI MORBUS, Icterus.

LESE'OLUS. According to Paracelsus, a perfectly transparent salt, which cured jaundice: hence Leseoli morbus.

LE'SION, Le'sio, from lædere, læsum, 'to injure.' Derangement, disorder; any morbid change, either in the exercise of functions or in the texture of organs. Organic lesion is synonymous with organic disease.

LESION OF CONTINUITY, see Continuity, solution of.

LESK, Inguen.

LESSIVE, Lixivium.

LESSIVE DES SAVONNIERS, Liquor potassæ. Also, a solution of caustic soda in water, containing about 3 parts of soda to 8 of water.

LESSIVE DE TARTRE, Liquor potassæ subcarbonatis.

LETALITAS, Mortality.

LETHALIS, Lethiferous, Mortal.

LETHALITAS, Mortality.

LETHAR'GIC, Lethar'gicus, Veterno'sus, (F.) Léthargique. Relating to lethargy; affected with lethargy.

LÉTHARGIQUE, Lethargic.

LETHARGY, Lethar'gia, Lethar'gus, Carus lethargus, Veter'nus, Obliv'io iners, from ληθη, 'oblivion,' and αργος, 'active.' A constant state of stupor from which it is almost impossible to arouse the individual; and, if aroused, he speedily relapses into his former condition.

LETHEA, Papaver.

LE'THEON, from ληθη, 'oblivion.' A name given by some to sulphuric ether, when inhaled as an anæsthetic agent.

LETHIF'EROUS, Le'thifer, Letha'lis, Lethif'icus, Mort'ifer, Mortif'erosus, from ληθη, 'death,' and ερω, 'I bear.' Death-bearing; deadly.

LETHUM, Death.

LEUCITIS, Sclerotitis.

LEUCOCYTE, see Globules of the blood.

LEUCOCYTH'EMIA, 'white cell blood,' from λευκος, 'white,' κυτος, 'cell,' and αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood, which consists in a su-perabundant development of the white corpuscles, a disease which has been observed at times to be accompanied by enlargement of the spleen and liver, and at others by increased size of the lymphatic glands. See Leucæmia.

LEUCODENDRON, Melaleuca cajuputi.

LEUCOLEIN, Leukoleinum.

LEUCO'MA, from λευκος, 'white.' Oculo'rum albu'go, Leucom'ma, Leuco'sis, Albu'go, Al'bulu, Ceratoleuco'ma, Ephel'otes, Leucoma and Al'bugo are often used synonymously to denote a white opacity of the cornea. Both are essentially different from nebula of the cornea; nebula being usually the result of chronic ophthalmia and an effusion of a milky serum into the texture of the delicate continuation of the conjunctiva over the cornea;—the others are the result of violent, acute ophthalmia. In this state, a thick, coagulable lymph is extravasated from the arteries, sometimes superficially, at other times deeply into the substance of the cornea. On other occasions, the disease consists of a firm, callous cicatrix on this membrane,—the effect of a wound or ulcer with loss of substance. The affection is more difficult of cure in proportion to its duration and to the age of the individual; the activity of the absorbents being greater in youth. If inflammation still exist, antiphlogistics must be persevered in, and, afterwards, gentle stimulants be used to excite absorption; along with the internal use of mercury or iodine.

LEUCOMA, Albumen—1. Gerontotoxon, Gerontotoxon—1. Margaritaceum, see Margaritaceus.

LEUCOMARIA, Leucoma.

LEUCOMORIA, Cuttubuth.

LEUCONECRO'SIS, from λευκος, 'white,' and νεκρωσις, 'death.' A form of dry gangrene,—the opposite in appearance to anthraxonecrosis.

LEUCONYMPH'ÆA, Nymphæa alba.

LEUCOPHLEGMA'TIA, Leucophlegmasia, Hydrops leucophlegmatia, Tumescen'tia pituitosa, from λευκος, 'white,' and φλεγμα, φλεγματος, 'phlegm.' A dropsical habit, Hydrocæchex'ia. Some writers use the word synonymously with anasarca and œdema; others with emphysema.

LEUCOPHLEGMATIA ÆTHIOPUM, Chtonophagia.

LEUCOPIPER, Piper album.

LEUCOPYRIA, Hectic fever.

LEUCORRHÉE, Leucorrhœa.

LEUCORRH'EA, Fluxus seu Fluor mulie'bris, Proflu'vium mulie'brè, Cursus mat'ricis, Fluxus mat'ricis, Elytri'tis, Coleositi'tis, Colpi'tis, Destilla'tio n'teri, Fluxio alba seu vul'væ, Ulcus n'teri, Catam'rhus genita'lium, Hysterorrh'ea mucos'a, Catame'nia alba, Menses albi, Men'strua alba, Menorrhag'ia alba, Fluor mulie'bris non Gal'licus, Blennely'ria, Gonorrh'ea benigna notha invetera'ta, Purga'tio mulie'bris alba, Alba purgamenta, Cæchex'ia n'ter'na, Rhenma n'teri, U'teri Cory'za, Medorrh'ea femina'rum insons, Menorrh'ea seu Blennorrhag'ia genita'lium, Ædæcoblennorrh'ea seu Medoblennorrh'ea femina'rum; The whites; (F.) Fleurs ou Fleurs blanches, Pertes blanches, Écoulement blanc, Catarrhe utérin, Perte utérine blanche, from λευκος, 'white,' and ρρω, 'I flow.' A more or less abundant discharge of a white, yellowish, or greenish mucus; resulting from acute or chronic inflammation, or from irritation of the membrane lining the genital organs of the female. Vag'inal Leucorrhœa has been termed Blennorrhœa seu Fluor albus vag'inae. Leucorrhœa, Medorrhœa vaginæ, Vaginitis, Elythroblennorrhœa, Culparrhœa.—Uterine Leucorrhœa has received the names Fluor albus uteri, Leucorrhœa seu Medorrhœa uteri, Metrablennorrhœa, Blennometri'is, Metrablennorrhœa, Metrocetar'rhœa, Metrалеucorrhœa. (F.) Leucorrhœa uterine, Catarrhe utérin. It is often attended with pain and a sense of heaviness in the loins, abdomen and thighs; disordered digestive functions, &c., so that, at times, the health suffers largely, although there are few females who are not occasionally subject to moderate leucorrhœa. Attention to the general health, change of air, keeping up a perspirable state of the surface by flannel worn next the skin, the horizontal posture, &c., do more than pharmaceutical agents; which are almost entirely confined to astringent injections. These may be employed, when the discharge is so great as to require them.

LEUCORRHOEA ANALIS, see Hæmorrhœis — I. Nabothi, see Parturition.

LEUCORRHOIS, see Hæmorrhœis.

LEUCOSES; from λευκος, 'white.' In the nosology of M. Alibert, all the diseases of the lymphatic apparatus. The 7th family in his Nosologie. In that of Fuchs, it is a family of diseases, (G.) Leukosen, which includes the various forms of anæmia.

LEUCOSIS, Leucoma, Paleness. See Albino.

LEUK or LOCHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline, chalybeate waters, about six leagues distant from Sion. They contain chloride of sodium, with a little sulphate of magnesia; sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonic acid, and protoxide of iron.

LEUKEMIA, Leucæmia.

LEUKOLEIN'UM, Chinolein'um, Leukol, Leucoleine, Leucolein, Chinolein, Chinolin. This substance is the product of the dry distillation of coal; mixed with picolin, anilin and other substances, in mineral tar. It is procured, also, by heating quinia, cinchonia and strychnia, with as concentrated a ley of potassa as can be made. Its specific gravity is 1.081; and it is slightly soluble in water, and miscible in all proportions with alcohol, ether and essential oils.

LEVAÏN, Ferment.

LEVATOR, Elevator.

LEVATOR AN'GULI ORIS, Abdu'cens labio'rum, Elevat'or labiorum communi's, Cani'nus, (F.) Sus maxillo-labial, Petit sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.), Muscle canin. A small, flat, long, quadrilateral muscle, which arises from the fossa canina, and is inserted at the commissure of the lips, where it is confounded with the triangularis. It raises the corner of the mouth, and draws it towards the ear.

LEVATOR ANI, Levator magnus seu internus, Latus ani, Elevat'or ani, Sedem attollens, (F.) Pubio-coecygi'en annulaire, Sous pubio-coecygi'en (Ch.), Releveur de l'anus. A muscle, situate at the lower part of the pelvis. It is broad, flat, quadrilateral, and broader above than below. It represents a kind of membranous partition, which closes the outlet of the pelvis, and the upper concavity of which is opposed to that of the diaphragm. It is attached, above, to the posterior surface of the body of the pubis, to the upper part of the obdurator foramen, and to the spine of the ischium; and is inserted into the coecyx, into an aponeurotic line common to it and its fellow, and into the lateral parts of the rectum. This muscle supports the rectum; raises it, and carries it upwards during the evacuation of the excrement. It can, also, compress the bladder and vesiculæ seminales, and thus favour the expulsion of the urine and sperm.

LEVATOR ANI PARVUS, Transversus perinæi — I. Auris, Attollens aurem — I. Coecygis, Coecygeus.

LEVATOR GLAN'DULÆ THYROIDÆÆ. A muscle occasionally found connected with the upper border or isthmus of the thyroid gland; and attached superiorly to the body of the os hyoides, or to the thyroid cartilage.

LEVATOR MENTI, Levator labii inferioris — I. Oculi, Rectus superior oculi — I. Proprius scapulae, L. scapulae.

LEVATOR LABII INFERIORIS, L. menti, Elevator labii inferioris seu labii inferioris proprius, Incisivi'cus inferior, Musculus penicillatus, (F.) Houppementon, Releveur de la lèvre inférieure ou du menton. A portion of the mento-labial of Chaussier. A small muscle situate before the symphysis menti. It is thick, conical; and attached by its apex to a fossette at the side of the symphysis in the inferior maxillary bone. Its fibres proceed diverging and vanishing in the manner of a tuft, (F.) Houppes, on the skin of the chin. This muscle raises the chin, and pushes upwards the lower lip.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIORIS ALÆQUE NASI, Incisivi'cus lateralis et pyramidalis, (F.) Grand sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.), Élévateur commun de la Paile du nez et de la lèvre supérieure. This muscle is a fleshy, thin, triangular bundle, situate at the sides of the nose. It arises from the ascending process of the superior maxillary bone; thence its fibres descend in a diverging manner, a part being inserted into the ala of the nose, and a part losing themselves in the upper lip. This muscle raises the upper lip and ala nasi, which it draws a little outwards.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIORIS PROPRIUS, Musculus incisivi'cus, Elevator labii superioris proprius, (F.) Moyen sus-maxillo-labial. (Ch.), Orbito-maxillo-labial. This thin, flat, quadrilateral muscle is situate at the middle and inner part of the face. It arises from the os malæ and the os maxillare superius, and is inserted into the upper lip, which it raises, at the same time carrying it a little outwards.

LEVATOR PALA'TI, L. Palati Mollis, Petrosalpin'go-staphyli'nus, Salpin'go-staphyli'nus inter'nus, Salpin'go-staphyli'nus, Pter'ypo-staphyli'nus externus, Sphenostaphylinus, Sphenopalati'nus, Peristaphylinus internus superior, Pétra-staphylin, (Ch.). This muscle is long, narrow, and almost round above; broader and flatter inferiorly. It arises from the lower surface of the pars petrosa; from the cartilage of the Eustachian-tube; and is inserted into the substance of the velum palati. Its use is to raise the velum palati.

LEVATOR PAL'PEBRÆ SUPERIORIS, Palpebræ superioris primus, Apertor Oculi, Apertivus Palpebrarum rectus, Reclin'or palpebrarum, (F.) Orbito-palpebræ (Ch.), Orbito-sus-palpebræ, Élévateur de la paupière supérieure. A long, small, thin muscle, situate at the upper part of the orbital cavity. By its posterior extremity it is inserted into the little ala of the sphenoid bone, immediately in front of the foramen opticum, and, by its anterior extremity, which is expanded, it terminates at the upper margin of the tarsal cartilage of the eyelid. This muscle raises the upper eyelid, draws it backwards, and sinks it into the orbit.

LEVATOR PROSTATÆ. (F.) Releveur de la prostate. Santorini has given this name to the anterior fibres of the levator ani, which embrace the prostate.

LEVATOR SCAP'ULÆ, Elevat'or scapulae, E. seu Musculus Patien'tiæ, Angula'ris, Levator pa'pularum scapulae.—(F.) Trachelo-scapulaire (Ch.), Angulaire de l'omoplate, Releveur de l'omoplate.

This muscle is so called, because it is attached to the upper and internal angle of the scapula. It is situate at the posterior and lateral part of the neck, and at the upper part of the back. It is long, flat, and broader above than below. In this latter direction, it is inserted into the superior internal angle of the scapula; and, in the former, into the tops of the transverse processes of the first four cervical vertebrae. It depresses the prominence of the shoulder, by raising the posterior angle of the scapula, on which it impresses a kind of rotary motion. It can, also, draw the head to one side.

LEVATOR URETHRAE, (F.) Releveur de l'Urethre. Santorini describes under this name a portion of the transversus perinaei muscle.

LEVATORES COSTARUM, Supracostales.

LEVEN, Ferment.

LEVER, from levare, 'to lift up.' Vectis, Mochlus, Porre'ctum. An inflexible rod, turning round a fixed point, and used for moving bodies, bearing burdens, or raising them. The point on which the lever moves is called the Fulcrum, Hypomochlion. The force which moves the lever is called the power; and the weight to be moved, the resistance. There are three kinds of levers. A lever of the first kind has the fulcrum between the power and resistance. A lever of the second kind has the resistance between the fulcrum and power; whilst a lever of the third kind has the power between the fulcrum and resistance. In the locomotive system of the human body, we have examples of all the three kinds. The bones represent levers; the muscles of locomotion are powers; the weight of parts to be moved constitutes the resistance. The fulcra, are, at times, the joints; at others, the ground, &c. The head moves on the neck, as a lever of the first kind; the first cervical vertebra forming the fulcrum. We rise on tiptoe by a lever of the second kind, the fulcrum being the ground under the toes; and we have examples of a lever of the third kind in the flexion of the fore-arm on the arm, in the elevation of the arm, &c.

LEVER, Hystero-mochlium, Mochlis'ens, Vectis obstetric'ins, Vectis. (F.) Levier, is an instrument curbed at the extremity, and having a fenestra. It is used to assist the extraction of the child's head, when instrumental aid is necessary. Levers are, also, used by the dentist for extracting stumps, &c. The Lavier de l'Écluse, Langue de Corpe, Trivelin or Punch, is employed for extracting the molar teeth.

LEVYATHAN PENIS, Pria'pus Ceti, Bale'nus. The penis of the whale. This singular medicine was, at one time, given in powder, in cases of dysentery and leucorrhœa.

LEVIER, Lever—l. de l'Écluse, see Lever.

LEVIGATION, Lævigation, from lævigare, lævig'atum, (lævis, 'smooth,') 'to polish.' Porphyzation. An operation, by which bodies are reduced to very fine powder. It is performed by putting substances, already pulverized, into water; the coarser parts are not long in being deposited, whilst the finer molecules remain suspended in the water. The liquor is decanted into another vessel, and suffered to remain at rest, until the fine particles are collected at the bottom. The fluid part is then separated by decantation.

LEVISTICUM, Ligusticum levisticum.

LÈVRE, Lip.

LÈVRES GRANDES, Labia pudendi—l. Petites, Nymphæ—l. de la Vulve, Labia pudendi.

LEVURE, Yest—l. de la Bière, Yest.

LEXIPHARMACUS, Alexipharmic.

LEXIPYRETICUS, Pebrifuge.

LEY, Lixivium, Lye—l. Soap, Liquor potassæ.

LEYS'SERA GNAPHALOIDES. A South

African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is emollient, and highly recommended at the Cape, in catarrh, cough, and even in pthisis.

LÉZARD, Lizard.

LIAN À RÉGLISSE, Abrus precatorius.

LIA'TRIS SPICATA, Gayfeather, Button snake-root. Ord. Compositæ. An indigenous plant, growing in meadows and moist grounds in the Middle and Southern States. Its beautiful purple compound flowers are in a spike. They appear in August. The root has been considered diuretic.

LIA'TRIS SCARIO'SA and L. SQUARRO'SA, Throatwort, Sow-wort, Backache root, Devilsbite, Blazing star, Prairie pines, Rough root, are called from their reputed powers in bites from the rattlesnake, Rattlesnake's master. The roots, bruised, are applied to the wound, and the decoction, in milk, is given internally.

LIBANOTUS, see Juniperus lycia.

LIBANUS, Juniperus lycia.

LIBER PHARMACEUTICUS, Dispensatorium.

LIBIDINIS SEDES, Clitoris.

LIBIDINOSUS, Libidinous.

LIBIDINOUS, Libidinosus, Lascivus, Veneriv'agus; from libido, 'lust,' Lecherous, Lick'orons. Lewd; lustful.

LIBIDO, Desire, necessity. Authors speak of Libido urinæ, Libido intest'ni. Some employ it synonymously with Prurigo; others, with Salic'itas, Lubi'do, Himeros.

LIBOS, from λεῖβω, 'to drop.' A defluxion from the eyes.—Galen.

LIBRA, Pound.

LICHANOS, Index, see Digitus.

LICHE, Body.

LICHEN, λεῖχην or λιχην, (pronounced li'ken.) Exor'wia Lichen, Leichen, Serpi'go, Volat'ica, Pap'ulæ, P. sicca, Peti'go, Pustulæ sicca, Scab'ies sicca seu a'gria, Licheni'asis adultorum, Lichenous rash, (F.) Gale sèche, Dartre furfuracée volante, Poussée. The cutaneous affection described under this name by the Greek writers, is not clearly defined. Some have believed it to be Impetigo, but this is doubtful. The name is, now, generally applied to a diffuse eruption of red pimples, accompanied by a troublesome sense of tingling or pricking. Drs. Willan and Bateman define it,—“an extensive eruption of papulæ affecting adults, connected with internal disorder, usually terminating in scurf; recurrent, not contagious.” One of their varieties, however, the Lichen Tropicus, does not accord well with this definition; for it affects children as well as adults, and is unconnected with internal disorder.

LICHEN A'GRIVUS, L. A'gria, Exor'wia Lichen ferns, Lichen ferns, Pap'ulæ a'gria, Wild Lichen, is distinguished by pimples in clusters or patches, surrounded by a red halo; the cuticle growing gradually harsh, thickened, and chappy, often preceded by general irritation. In addition to antiphlogistics, a cooling ointment may be used, to allay itching.

LICHEN BARBATUS Plicatus, L. plicatus.

LICHEN CIRCUMSCRIP'TUS is characterized by clusters or patches of papulæ, having a well defined margin, and an irregularly circular form; continuing for six or eight weeks. These varieties require but little medical treatment. The antiphlogistic plan is all that is necessary.

LICHEN FERUS, Lichen agrius.

LICHEN LIVIDUS. The papulæ have a dark red or livid hue, without any fever. They are more permanent in this variety. It requires the mineral acids and bark.

LICHEN PILARIS, Ecor'mia Lichen pilaris, is merely a modification of the preceding; the papule appearing at the roots of the hair.

LICHEN SIMPLEX, Ecor'mia Lichen simplex, consists of an eruption of red papule, appearing first on the face or arms, and afterwards extending over the body; preceded for a few days by slight febrile irritation, which usually ceases when the eruption appears,—with an unpleasant sense of tingling during the night. It generally dies away in ten days or a fortnight.

LICHEN TROPICUS, Ecor'mia Lichen tropicus, Exces'mia, Exsura [?], Sudam'ina [?], Prickly Heat, Sommer Rash. The pimples are bright red, and of the size of a small pin's head; with heat, itching, and pricking, as if by needles. It is local; produced by excessive heat; and disappears when the weather becomes cooler, or the individual is inured to the climate.

LICHEN URTICATUS, L. Urticatus, Ecor'mia Lichen urticatus, is another variety. The Nettle Lichen consists of papule, accompanied by wheals like those of nettle rash. A variety of this is said to be called, in America, blights.

LICHEN, WILD, Lichen agrius.

LICHEN APHTHOSES, Pelti'dea aphthosa; Ord. Lichenaceæ; is said to be cathartic and antelmintic.

LICHEN ARBORUM, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Barbatus plicatus, Lichen plicatus—l. Blanc de Neige, L. caninus—l. Boitier, L. pyxidatus.

LICHEN CANINUS seu spurius seu terrest'is seu venosus seu ciner'eus terrestris, Muscus caninus, Phys'cia nivalis, Peltig'era canina, Pelti'dea canina seu leucorrhiza seu malacea seu amplissima seu spuria, Ash-colored Grand Liverwort, (F.) Lichen contre-raje, Lichen blanc de neige. This cryptogamous plant was, for a long time, considered capable of preventing and curing Rabies canina. It has, also, been used in mania and in spasmodic asthma.

LICHEN CINEREUS TERRESTRIS, L. caninus—l. Carrageen, Fucus crispus—l. Cocceiferus, L. pyxidatus—l. contre Raje, L. caninus—l. Entomnoir, L. pyxidatus—l. Eryngifolius, L. islandicus—l. Floridus hirtus, L. plicatus—l. Hirtus, L. plicatus.

LICHEN ISLANDICUS, L. eryngifolius, Lichenoides Islandicum, Lobaria Islandica, Muscus Islandicus seu catharticus, Cladonia seu Phys'cia seu Cetraria seu Parmelin Islandica, Ice-land Lichen or Liverwort or Moss, (F.) Lichen d'Islande, Mousse marine perlée, Mousse d'Islande. This plant is inodorous, with a bitter and mucilaginous taste. It is esteemed to be tonic, demulcent, and nutrient. Dose, \mathfrak{z} to $\mathfrak{z}\text{ij}$, being first steeped in water holding in solution some carbonate of potassa to extract the bitter, and then boiled in milk. A bitter principle has been extracted from it, termed Cetrarin, Cetrarinum, Cetrarinum, which has been given in intermittents.

LICHEN LACINIATUS, L. saxatilis—l. Parietinus, Parmelia parietina.

LICHEN PLICATUS, L. hirtus seu barbatus plicatus seu Floridus hirtus, Parmelia plicata, Usnea plicata, U. Florida hirta seu hirta, Muscus arborescens seu albus seu queruus, Querc'ni Herba. This plant is applied, by the Laplanders, as an astringent, to bleeding vessels; and to parts which are excoriated after long journeys.

LICHEN PULMONARIUS, L. arborum seu reticulatus, Parmelia pulmonaria, Retienlaria officinalis, Muscus pulmonarius querc'ni, Pulmonaria arborescens, Lobaria pulmonaria, Sticta pulmonacea, Oak Lungw, Tree Lungwort, Hazel Crotch, Hazelw, (F.) Lichen pulmonaire, Pulmonaire en arbre ou de chêne. This plant is sub-astringent, and rather acid. It was once in high repute for curing diseases of the lungs.

LICHEN PYXIDATUS, Muscus Pyxidatus, Seyphophorum pyxidatus, Musculus pyxidatus terrestris, Lichen pyxidatus major seu cocceiferus, Herba Ignis, Cup Moss, (F.) Lichen entomnoir, Lichen Boitier, L. Pyxidé. This plant is sub-astringent, and has been used in decoction in whooping-cough.

LICHEN RETICULATUS, L. pulmonarius.

LICHEN ROCCELLA, Parmelia roccella, Roccella, R. tinctoria, Setaria roccella, Litmus, Lacmus, L. tinctorius, Orchill, Cambr'y Archell, Chimney Weed, Herb Archell, (F.) Orseille. The chief use of this plant is as a blue dye. It has been employed to allay cough in phthisis, &c.

LICHEN SAXATILIS, L. tinctorius seu locinellatus, Parmelin saxatilis, Imbricaria saxatilis, Lobaria saxatilis, Muscus Crad'ni humani, Usnea. This moss, when found growing on a human skull, was formerly in high estimation against head affections, &c.

LICHEN SPURIUS, L. caninus—l. Stellatus, Marchantia polymorpha—l. Tinctorius, L. Saxatilis—l. Wall, yellow, Parmelia parietina.

LICHENIASIS ADULTORUM, Lichen—l. Strophulus, Strophulus.

LICHENOIDES ISLANDICUM, Lichen Islandicus.

LICKOROUS, Libidinous.

LICINIUM, Tent.

LICORICE, Glycyrrhiza.

LICULMEN, Garum.

LIEBENSTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, situated in the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen, are amongst the strongest acidulous chalybeates in Germany. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, sulphate of lime, chloride of calcium, carbonate of lime, chloride of magnesium, and carbonate of iron.

LIEBERKÜHN'S GLANDS or FOLLICLES, Glandula seu Crypta Lieberkuhni'na, so called from their first describer, are fine, capillary, blind sacs, the openings of which are from 1-20th to 1-30th of a line in diameter, so closely placed over the whole of the small intestine as to give the mucous membrane a general sieve-like or perforated appearance. They secrete the succus entericus.

LIEBERSCHÉ AUSZEHRUNG'S KRAUTER, see Galeopsis grandiflora—l. Brustkrauter, see Galeopsis grandiflora.

LIEBWERDA, MINERAL WATERS OF. Liebwerda is a Bohemian village, near the Silesian frontier. The springs are much frequented. There are four, all of which are rich in carbonic acid, and contain but little saline matter.

LIÈGE, Suber.

LIEN (F.), Vin'calum. A band, strap or garter, used in certain operations; as to tie patients during the operation of lithotomy; to fix the apparatus in fracture, &c. Also, the spleen.

LIEN ACCESSORIUS, Lienculus—l. Ingens, Splenoncus—l. Succenturiatus, Lienculus.

LIEN'CLUSUS, diminutive of lien, 'spleen,' Lien succenturiatus seu accessorius. A supernumerary spleen.

LIENITIS, Splenitis.

LIENOSUS, Splenic.

LI'ENTERY, Lienteria, from laeos, 'smooth,' 'slippery,' and εντερον, 'intestine' Lentitas seu Laxitas intestinalium, Diarrhœa lienteria, Fluxus lientericus, Chymorrhœa seu Laxitas ingestorum, Beomatorrhœia, Diarrhœa Dyspeptica seu cum Apepsia seu Ingestorum, Slip'periness of the Guts. Frequent liquid evacuations, the food only half digested. This condition is always symptomatic of great irritation in the intestinal canal, the sensibility of which is so much augmented that it cannot bear the sojourn of the food in it.

LIERRE, Hedera helix—l. Grimpant, Hedera helix—l. Terrestris, Glechoma hederacea.

LIFE, Sax. lir, lyr, Vita, Bios, B'otē, B'otos, Zoē, Pneuma, Spir'itus, (F.) Vie. The state of organized beings, during which, owing to the union of an unknown force with matter, they are capable of performing functions different from those that regulate other natural bodies; all of which functions, however numerous and diversified, work to one end. Life has only a limited duration; beyond which,—the organic functions ceasing to be executed,—the body is given up to the agency of chemical affinity. Hence Bichat has defined life to be—the aggregate of the functions which resist death. On account of the difference that exists among the vital functions, he applied the term Organic Life to the functions inservient to composition and decomposition;—as digestion, respiration, circulation, calorification, absorption, secretion, and nutrition; and Animal Life, to the functions which connect man and animals with external bodies; as the understanding, sensations, locomotion and voice.

LIFE-BLOOD. A term, commonly used for a twitching or quivering of the eyelids—a kind of involuntary or muscular tic. See Cillo.

LIFE, DURATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE EVERLASTING, Gnaphalium margaritaceum—l. Everlasting, plantain, Antennaria plantaginifolia—l. Everlasting, sweet-scented, Gnaphalium polycephalum.

LIFE, EXPECTATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE-INSURANCE. A contract entered into, usually by an insurance company, to pay a certain sum of money on a person's death, on the condition of his paying an annual premium during his life. The medical practitioner may be applied to to certify that the life of the insured is one that is insurable according to the rules of the company.

LIFE ROOT, Senecio aureus.

LIFE, VALUE OF, see Longevity, and Mortality.

LIFE'S BLOOD, Life-blood, Cillo.

LIG'AMENT, Ligamentum; from ligare, ligatum, 'to bind;' Desmos, Syndes'mos, Collig'amen, Cop'ula. A name given to fibrous structures, which serve to unite bones, and to form articulations; hence the division into interosseous and articular ligaments. They are of a white, close texture; are but little extensible, and difficult to break. The name ligament has, also, been given to any membranous fold, which retains an organ in its situation.

TABLE OF THE PRINCIPAL LIGAMENTS.

1. Of the Lower Jaw. { Capsular ligament.
Suspensory ligament of the stylo-glossus.
Lateral ligament.
2. Connecting the Head with the first and second Vertebrae, and these with each other. { Two capsular ligaments between atlas and head.
Circular ligament.
Two circular between atlas and axis.
Perpendicular ligament.
Two lateral or moderator ligaments.
Transverse ligament and its appendices.
3. Of the other Vertebrae. { Anterior common.
Crucial intervertebral.
Ligaments running from the edge of the bony arch and spinous process of one vertebra to that of the next.
Interspinal ligament.
Ligamentum nuchæ.
Intertransverse.
Capsular.
Posterior or internal common.

4. Of the Ribs, Sternum, &c. { Capsular of the head of ribs.
Capsular of the tubercles.
Ligamenta transversaria interna.
Ligamenta transversaria externa.
Ligamenta cervicis costarum externa.
Ligamentous fibres running from the margins of the extremities of the ribs to the corresponding cartilages.
Radiated ligaments from cartilage of ribs to the sternum.
Capsular ligaments of the cartilages of the ribs.
Proper membrane of sternum.
L. of cartilago-eusiformis.
Tendinous expansions over the intercostales, &c.
5. Of the Pelvis..... { Two transverse,—one superior, one inferior.
Ilio-sacral.
Capsular of the sacro-iliac synchondrosis.
Two sacro-ischiatric,—posterior and anterior, with the superior and inferior appendices.
Longitudinal of os coccygis.
Inguinal ligament.
Capsular of symphysis pubis.
Ligament of foramen thyroideum.
6. Of the Clavicle..... { Radiated ligament.
Capsular.
Interclavicular.
Ligamentum rhomboideum.
Claviculo-acromial.
Conoid.
Trapezoid.
7. Of the Scapula..... { Anterior triangular.
Proper posterior.
8. Of the Shoulder-Joint. { Capsular.
9. Of the Elbow-Joint. { Capsular.
Brachio-ularnar.
Brachio-radial.
Coronary of the radius.
Anterior and posterior accessory.
Intermuscular of the os humeri.
10. Carpal Extremity of Radius and Ulna, and between those bones. { Interosseous ligament.
Oblique or chorda transversalis cubiti.
Capsular.
11. Between Fore-arm and Wrist. { Capsular.
Two lateral.
Mucous.
12. Of the Carpus..... { Annular.
Capsular.
Short ligaments.—oblique, transverse, capsular, and proper.
13. Between Carpal and Metacarpal bones. { Articular lateral.
Straight, perpendicular, &c.
14. Between the extremities of the Metacarpal bones. { Interosseous, at the bases and heads,—dorsal, lateral, palmar.
15. At the base of the Metacarpal bone of the Thumb, and at the first joint of the Fingers. { Capsular.
Lateral.
16. Of the first and second joints of the Thumb, and second and third joints of the Fingers. { Capsular.
Lateral.
17. Retaining the Tendons of the Hand and Fingers in situ. { Annular.
Vaginal or flexor tendons.
Vaginal or crucial of the phalanges.
Accessory of the flexor tendons.
Posterior annular.
Vaginal of extensors.
Transverse of extensors.

18. Connecting the Os Femoris with the Os innominatum. { Capsular and accessory slips.
Round or teres ligament.
Cartilaginous ligament.
Double cartilaginous ligament.
Ligamentum mucosum.
19. Of the Knee-Joint. { Lateral,—internal and external.
External short lateral ligament.
Posterior ligament.
Ligament of the patella.
Capsular.
Ligamentum alare,—majus et minus.
Ligamentum mucosum.
Two crucial,—anterior and posterior.
Transverse.
20. Connecting Fibula and Tibia. { Capsular.
Interosseous.
Anterior superior.
Posterior superior.
21. Connecting the Tarsal with the Leg Bones. { Anterior ligament of the fibula.
Posterior of fibula.
Deltoïdes of tibia.
Capsular.
Short ligaments.
Capsular, broad superior, and lateral ligaments, connecting astragalus and navicular.
Superior, lateral, and inferior, fixing os calcis to os cuboides.
Long, oblique, and rhomboid, forming the inferior ligaments.
Superior superficial, interosseous and inferior transverse ligaments, fixing the os naviculare and os cuboides.
Superior lateral, and plantar, which fix the os naviculare and cuneiform.
Superior superficial and plantar, connecting the os cuboides, and os cuneiforme externum.
Dorsal and plantar, uniting the ossa cuneiformia.
The proper capsular of each bone.
22. Of the Tarsus..... { Capsular.
Dorsal, plantar, lateral, straight, oblique, and transverse.
23. Between Tarsus and Metatarsus. { Dorsal, plantar, and lateral, connecting the metatarsal bones.
Transverse ligaments.
24. Connecting the Metatarsal Bones. { Capsular.
Lateral.
Annular.
Vaginal of the tendons of the peronei.
Lacinated.
25. Of the Phalanges of the Toes. { Vaginal of the tendon of the flexor longus pollicis.
Vaginal and crucial of the tendons of the flexors of the toes.
Accessory of the flexor tendons of the toes.
Transverse of the extensor tendons.
26. Retaining the Tendons of the Muscles of the Foot and Toes in situ. {

LIGATE, see Ligature.

LIGATIO, Fascia, Ligature—1. Linguae, Aphonia.

LIGATION, see Ligature.

LIGATURA, Ligature, Fascia—1. Glandis, Phimosis.

LIG'ATURE, Ligatura, Ligatio, Alligatura, Deligatio, Vinctura, Fascia, Epidæsis. This word has various acceptations. It means, 1. The thread with which an artery or vein is tied, to prevent or arrest hemorrhage. 2. The cord, or thread, or wire, used for removing tumours, &c. 3. The bandage used for phlebotomy. Ligature is, also, sometimes applied to the act of tying an artery or considerable vessel—Ligation, and occasionally we meet with the terms ligature and ligate, used unnecessarily in this sense, in place of to take up or tie a vessel. When the artery alone is tied, the ligature is said to be immediate; when any of the surrounding parts are included, it is said to be mediate. The ligature occasions obliteration or adhesion of the arterial parietes, by cutting through the middle and internal coats; the adhesion being favoured by the formation of a coagulum, which acts, in some degree, as a barrier against the impulse of the blood, and subsequently disappears by absorption.

LIGHT, Sax. leoht, liht, (G.) Licht, Lux, Lumen, Phos, (P) Lumière. An extremely rare fluid; diffused over the universe; emanating from the sun and fixed stars; traversing more than four millions of leagues in a minute; passing through transparent bodies, which refract it ac-

LIGAMENT, ANTERIOR, OF THE BLADDER. A name given by the older anatomists to a portion of the superior pelvic aponeurosis, which becomes attached to the front of the neck of the bladder.

LIGAMENT ARTÉRIEL, Arterial ligament—1. Camper's, Perineal fascia—1. Cervical supraspinal, see Supraspinosa ligamenta—1. Ciliaire, Ciliary ligament.

LIGAMENT, CORONARY, OF THE LIVER, is a reflection formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior margin of the liver, and the lower surface of the diaphragm. See Falx.

LIGAMENT, COSTO-XIPHOID, Xiphoid ligament—1. Denticulé, Denticulatum ligamentum—1. Denticulé, Denticulatum ligamentum—1. Dorsocording to their density and combustibility; and arrested by opaque bodies, by which it is reflected at an angle equal to the angle of incidence. It is the cause of colour in all bodies, being entirely reflected by white surfaces and absorbed by black. It is decomposed in passing through a transparent prism into seven rays—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, and violet.

Light acts upon the body as a gentle and salutary stimulus. It urges to exercise, whilst privation of it induces sleep and inactivity, and disposes to obesity. Hence it is, that, in rural economy, animals which are undergoing the process of fattening are kept in obscurity. When vegetables are deprived of light, their nutrition is interfered with, and they become etiolated. To a certain extent this applies to animals, and there is every reason to believe, that want of light prevents the due development of organized bodies. It has been found that, when tadpoles were deprived of light, they did not undergo the perfect metamorphosis into the frog, but that monstrosities from arrest of development were induced.

LIGHTNING, Astrape.

LIGHTS, Pulmo—1. Rising of the, Cynanche trachealis.

LIGNE, Line—1. Apré, Linea aspera—1. Blanche, Linea alba—1. Courbe, Curved line—1. Médiane de l'abdomen, Linea alba—1. Sous-trochantérienne, Linea aspera.

LIG'NEOUS, Ligno'sns, (F.) Ligneux. Woody. Having the character or appearance of wood; as 'Ligneous Scirrhus,' or S. of the mamma, which has for its principal characteristics, hardness, the inextensibility of wood, and no defined limits.—Velpéau. A form of this, in plates, or diffused over the mammary integuments, is termed, by M. Velpéau, Squirre en cuirasse.

LIGNIN, from lignum, 'wood.' Ligneous or woody fibre; the fibrous structure of vegetable substances.

LIGNUM ALOES, Agallochum—1. Aspalathi, Agallochum—1. Benedictum, Guaiacum—1. Brasilianum rubrum, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Cæruleum, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Campechense, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Campechianum, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Campeceanum, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Colubrinum, see Strychnos—1. Febrifugum, Quassia—1. Hæmatoxyli, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Indicum, Guaiacum, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Infelix, Sambucus—1. Nephriticum, Guilandina Moringa (the wood)—1. Pavanae, Croton tiglium, 1. Quassia, see Quassia—1. Sanctum, Guaiacum—1. Sandalinum, see Pterocarpus santalinus—1. Sappan, Hæmatoxylo campechianum—1. Serpentum, Ophioxylum serpentinum—1. Vitæ, Guaiacum.

LIGNYODES, Fuliginous.

LIGNYS, Fuligo.

LIG'ULA, Lin'gula, 'a small tongue, a tongue of land; the tongue of a shoe.' The clavicle; also, the glottis and epiglottis. A measure containing 3 drachms and a scruple, or about half an ounce. Also, a species of bandage or ligature.—Seribonius.

LIGUSTICUM, L. Levisticum.

LIGUSTICUM ACTÆIFO'LIIUM, Thas'pinum actæifo'lium, Angel'ica lucida, Angel'ica Nendo, White root, indigenous; Ord. Umbelliferæ. The root is aromatic and carminative.

LIGUSTICUM CAPILLACEUM, Æthusa meum—1. Carvi, Carum—1. Fœniculum, Anethum.

LIGUSTICUM LEVIS'TICUM, from Λιγυστικός, pertaining to Liguria. Levis'ticum, Laserpitium Germanicum, Ligusticum, Angel'ica levis'ticum seu paludapifo'lia, Lovage, (F.) Liveche, Ache des montagnes. Ord. Umbelliferæ. The properties of this plant are said to be stimulant, carminative, emmenagogue, &c.

LIGUSTICUM MEUM, Æthusa meum—1. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum.

LIGUSTICUM PODAGRA'RIA, Podagra'ria ægopodinum, Ægopodinum seu Sison podagra'ria, Pimpinella angelicifo'lia, Sium vulgare, Tragoselinum angel'ica, Ses'eli ægopodinum, Angel'ica sylvestris, Gout-weed. A British plant, once considered useful in cases of gout.

LIGUSTICUM SILAUS, Peucedanum silaus.

LIGUSTRUM ÆGYPTIACUM, Lawsonia inermis.

LIGUSTRUM VULGA'RE, Privet, Privy, Prim, (F.) Troëne. Ord. Oleaceæ. A shrub, which grows wild both in Europe and in the United States, usually in hedges. The leaves are astringent and bitter; and the flowers, which are snow-white, and of an agreeable odour, have been employed in decoction, in sore throat, and ulcerous stomatitis. The berries are said to be cathartic.

LIGYSMA, Distortion.

LILAC, COMMON, Syringa vulgaris—1. Vulgaris, Syringa vulgaris.

LILI, Lilium Paracelsi.

LILIA'GO. Dim. of Lil'ium, the lily; Spiroderwort; Lilias'trum. This plant was formerly said to be alexipharmic and carminative.

LILIASTRUM, Liliago.

LILIUM CAN'DIDUM, L. album, Crinon. The white lily. (F.) Lis blanc. Ord. Liliacæ. The infusion of the flowers of the lily in olive oil is emollient, and often applied externally, under the name of Lily oil, (F.) Huile de lis. The scales of the bulb, roasted, are sometimes employed as maturatives.

LILIUM CONVALLIUM, Convallaria maialis.

LILIUM PARACEL'SI, Tinctura Metallorum, Lili. A medicine employed by Paracelsus. It was prepared by melting in a crucible four ounces of each of the following alloys: Antimony and iron, antimony and tin, antimony and copper, previously mixed with eighteen ounces of nitrate of potassa and as much salt of tartar. The melted mass, when pulverized, was treated with rectified alcohol, which really dissolved only the potassa set at liberty by the decomposition experienced by the nitre and salt of tartar. The Lilium Paracelsi was used as a cordial. It entered into the composition of the theriacal elixir, &c.

LILY, GROUND, Trillium latifolium—1. May, Convallaria maialis—1. Pond, Nelumbium luteum—1. Pond, White, Nymphæa odorata—1. Pond, yellow, Nuphar advena—1. Toad, Nymphæa odorata—1. of the Valley, Convallaria maialis—1. Water, little, Brasenia hypopeltis—1. Water, sweet, Nymphæa odorata—1. Water, sweet-scented, Nymphæa odorata—1. Water, white, Nymphæa alba—1. Water, yellow, Nymphæa lutea—1. White, Lilium candidum, Nelumbium luteum.

LIMA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Peru does not appear to be favourable to the generation of consumption: and Lima would seem to be a good residence for the phthisical valetudinarian. Many have been benefited by a residence there; but when they have gone farther south, as to Chili, the effect, according to Dr. M. Burroughs, has generally been fatal.

LIMA DENTARIA, Scalprum dentarium.

LIMACIEN (F.), from limacon, (limax, limacis, 'the snail,') 'the cochlea of the ear.' A branch of the acoustic or labyrinthic nerve sent to the cochlea.

LIMACON, Cochlea, Helix pomatia, Limax—1. Rampex du, see Cochlea.

LIMACON CORNUA, see Lachrymal puncta.

LIMANCHIA, Abstinence.

LIMA'TIO, from limo, limatum, 'to file.' Filing: an operation employed by the dentist more especially to prevent immediate contact of the teeth with each other.

LIMATURA FERRI, Ferri Limatura.

LIMAX, λιμαξ, λιμακος, Helix, Slug or Snail. (F.) Limacum, Colimacum, Escargot. A syrup has been prepared from these animals, which has been given in phthisis, &c. The raw snails have also been taken in consumption. They have been used as food.

LIMB, Membrum.

LIMBUS ALVEOLARIS, Alveolar border—l. Fossæ Ovalis, see Ovalis fossa—l. Luteus retinæ, see Foramen centrale—l. Posterior corporis striati, Tenia semicircularis.

LIME. A fruit like a small lemon, the juice of which is strongly acid, and is much used for making punch. It is, also, used in long voyages as an antiseorbatic, &c. It is a species of lemon, the fruit of Citrus acida.

LIME, Calx—l. Carbonate of, Creta—l. Chloride of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chlorite of, Calcis chloridum—l. Chloruret of, Calcis chloridum—l. Hydrate of, see Calx—*l. LIMNE, Marsh.

LIMNE'MIC, Limnæ'mic, Limnæ'mic, Limnæ'micus, Limnæ'micus, from λιμνη, 'a marsh,' and 'αίμα,' 'blood.' An epithet given to affections induced by paludal emanations; (F.) Affections limnæ'miques.

LIMOTON'IA, Abstinence. Abstinence to death. Death from hunger; from λιμος, 'hunger,' and κρονος, 'death.' Suicide by hunger.

LIMODES, Hungry.

LIMON, see Citrus medica.

LIMONADA, Lemonade.

LIMONADE, Lemonade—l. Gazeuse, see Lemonade—l. Sèche, Lemonade, dry; see Citric acid.

LIMONIUM, Stictis limonium—l. Malum, see Citrus medica.

LIMONUM BACCA, see Citrus medica.

LIMO-PHTHISIS, from λιμος, 'hunger,' and φθισις, 'wasting.' Wasting from privation of food.

LIMOS, λιμος, 'hunger.' Hence:

LIMOSIS, Stomach disease, Morbid appetite. A genus in the class Celiaca, order Enterica, of Good.

LIMOTHERAPEÏA, Nestitherapeïa, Nestitherapeïa, Nestiatrïa, Peinotherapeïa, Cura'tio morbi per inedia'm, from λιμος, and θεραπεια, 'treatment.' Hunger-cure. Cure by fasting.

LINDEN TREE, Tilia, Tilia Americana.

LINE, Lin'ea, Grammê, (F.) Ligne. Extent in length, considered without regard to breadth or thickness. As a measure, it means the 12th part of an inch.

MEDIAN LINE OF THE BODY is an imaginary line supposed to set out from the top of the head and to fall between the feet, so as to divide the body vertically into two equal and symmetrical parts.

LINEA, Line.

LINEA ALBA, Linea alba Abdominis, (F.) Ligne blanche ou médiane de l'abdomen (Ch.), Candidula abdominis lin'ea, Lin'ea centralis. A tendinous, strong, and highly resisting cord; extending from the ensiform cartilage of the sternum to the symphysis pubis, with the umbilicus near its middle. The linea alba is formed by the decussation of the aponeurosis of the abdominal muscles; and its use is to limit the movement of the chest backwards; to prevent it from separating too far from the pelvis, and to furnish a fixed point for the muscles of the abdomen in their contraction.

LINEA ASPERA, Ragged ridge, (F.) Ligne âpre, Ligne sous-trochantérienne, (Ch.) A rough projection at the posterior surface of the femur, which gives attachment to muscles.

LINEÆ SEMILUNARES are the lines, which bound the outer margin of the recti muscles of the abdomen. They are formed by the union of the abdominal tendons. The lines which cross these muscles are called Lineæ transversæ.

LINEÆ TIBIÆ, An'guli tib'ia. Sharp lines on the tibia.

LINEÆ TRANSVERSÆ, see L. semilunares, and Processus teretes.

LINÉAIRE, Linear.

LIN'EAMENT, Lineamentum, from linea, 'a line,' lineare, 'to mark by lines.' A delicate trait observed on the countenance, which constitutes its special character, enables us to preserve its image, and is the cause of resemblance to others. A feature.

Bonnet gave the name Lin'eament to the first traces of organization in the embryo of man and animals.

LIN'EAR, Linea'ris, Linea'ria, from linea, 'a line.' (F.) Linéaire. Pathologists apply the epithet linear to fractures which are very narrow, and in which the fragments are scarcely separated.

LIN'EOLA; a diminutive of linea, 'a line.' A small line.

LIN'OLE MAMMA'RUM. The white lines on the breasts.

LINGISM, Kinesipathy.

LIN'GUAL, Lingua'lis, from lingua, 'the tongue.' Relating or belonging to the tongue.

LINGUAL ARTERY, Arteria lingua'lis, arises from the external carotid; and, after several tortuosities, reaches the base of the tongue, becomes horizontal, and, under the name Ranina, advances to the tip, where it anastomoses with its fellow. In its course, it gives off the Dorsalis linguæ and sublingual.

LINGUAL MUSCLE, Lingualis, Basio-glossus (Cowper). Glossoid'us, is a small, long, fasciculus of fibres, hidden beneath the sides of the tongue, between the hyoglossus and styloglossus muscles, which are on the outside, and the genioglossus, within. This muscle passes from the base to the tip of the tongue; and, at its sides, is confounded with the muscles just referred to. It shortens the tongue, depresses its point, and can carry it to the right or left side.

LINGUAL NERVE is a name which has been given to the ninth pair or hypoglossus. It is, also, a term applied to a branch given off from the Inferior maxillary, or third branch of the fifth pair. Near its origin it anastomoses with, or simply runs close to, the chorda tympani. It afterwards gives off a considerable number of filaments, which are distributed to the tongue, and some of which are said to have been even traced as far as the papillæ;—a distribution which has occasioned it to be regarded as the Gustatory nerve, (F.) Nerf gustatif.

LINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

LINGUAL VEIN follows nearly the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal jugular.

LINGUALIS, Lingual muscle.

LINGUETTA LAMINOSA, Lingula.

LINGULA, Ligula.

LINGULA, Linguet'la lamino'sa. A thin, transversely grooved lobule of gray substance, derived from the anterior border of the cerebellum, which, for a short distance, lies over the velum medullare arterium.

LINGULA FISTULÆ, Epiglottis.

LINI USITATISSIMI SEMINA, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINIMENT, Linimentum, Litus, Enchris'ton, Catachris'ton, Perich'risis, Perichris'ton, Aleiph'la, Aleim'ma, Enchris'ta, Fric'tum, Fricato'rium, Inunctio, from linire, linitum, 'to anoint gently,' 'to anoint.' An unctuous medicine, containing usually oil or lard, which is used externally in the form of friction.

LINIMENT OF AMMONIA, COMPOUND, see Lotion, Granville's.

LINIMENT AMMONIACAL, Linimentum ammoniacæ—l. de Carbonate d'Ammoniaque, Linimentum ammoniacæ carbonatis.

LINIMENT ANODYNE, Linimentum opii.

LINIMENT ANTIHÉMORRHOÏDALE DE SIEUR ANDRY, (F.) This is formed of Narbonne honey, Olive oil, and Turpentine.

LINIMENT ANTIPARALYTIQUE, (F.) Composed of subcarbonate of ammonia, alcoholized oil, black soap, and oil of rosemary.

LINIMENT ANTISCROFULOUS, of HUFELAND. Composed of fresh ox-gall, White soap, Unguentum althæ'æ, Volatile oil of petroleum, Carbonate of ammonia, and Camphor.

LINIMENT CALCAIRE, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. Camphor, Linimentum camphoræ—l. Camphré, Linimentum camphoræ—l. of Cantharides, camphorated, Linimentum e cantharidibus camphoratum—l. Cantharide camphré, Linimentum e cantharidibus camphoratum—l. Croton oil, Linimentum crotonis—l. d'Eau de chaux, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. of Limewater, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. de Mercure, Linimentum hydrargyri—l. Mercurial, Linimentum hydrargyri—l. Oléo-calcaire, Linimentum aquæ calcis—l. of Opium, Linimentum opii.

LINIMENT RÉSOLUTIF DE POTT, composed of oil of turpentine and muratic acid. Used in rheumatism, swellings, &c.

LINIMENT, SAINT JOHN LONG'S. A liniment used by a celebrated empiric at the commencement of the second quarter of the 19th century. It is said to have consisted of oil of turpentine and acetic acid, held in suspension by yolk of egg. It was a powerful counter-irritant.

LINIMENT DE SAVON, Linimentum saponis compositum—l. de Savon opiacé, Linimentum saponis et opii.

LINIMENT SAVONNEUX HYDROSULFURÉ DE JADELLOT. Composed of sulphuret of potass, \mathfrak{z} vj; white soap, ℥ij; oil of puppy, ℥iv; oil of thyme, \mathfrak{z} ij. Used in itch.

LINIMENTUM, Liniment.

LINIMENTUM ÆRUGINIS, Ocymel Æruginis, Unguentum Ægyptiacum, Mellitum de acetat'e cupri, Liniment of verdigris, (F.) Liniment de Vert-de-gris, Miel d'acétate de cuivre. (Ærugin, cont. \mathfrak{z} ij; acet. \mathfrak{z} vij; mellis despum. pond. \mathfrak{z} xiv. Liquefied, strained, and inspissated by boiling—Ph. L.) It is used as an escharotic and detergent;—diluted, as a gargle in venereal ulcerations and in foul ulcers.

LINIMENTUM ALBUM, Ceratum cetacei, Unguentum cetacei—l. ad Ambustiones, L. aquæ calcis.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ, Sapo ammoniacalis, Linimentum ammoniacum seu ammoniacum seu Anglicanum, Sapo ammoniacæ oleat'us, Unguentum album resolut'us, Oleum ammoniacum, Strong liniment of ammonia, (F.) Liniment volatil ou ammoniacal, Savon ammoniacal. (Liq. ammon. f \mathfrak{z} ij; olei olivæ, f \mathfrak{z} ij. Mix.—Ph. U. S.) A stimulating and rubefacient soap.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ CARBONATIS, Liniment of subcarbonate of ammonia, Linimentum ammoniacæ sesquicarbonatis, L. volatil'e, Hartshorn and oil, (F.) Liniment de carbonate d'ammoniaque. (Solut. subcarb. ammon. f \mathfrak{z} ij; olei olivæ, f \mathfrak{z} ij. Shake till they unite.—Ph. L.) A stimulating liniment, mostly used to relieve rheumatic pains, bruises, &c.

LINIMENTUM AQUÆ CALCIS, L. Calcis (Ph. U. S.), L. ad ambustiones, Oleum lini cum calc'e, Sapo calcarius, Liniment of limewater, Carron oil, (because much used in the Carron iron works in Scotland), (F.) Liniment d'eau de chaux, Savon calcaire, Liniment calcaire ou oléo-calcaire. (Olei lini, aquæ calcis, $\mathfrak{a}\mathfrak{a}$ f \mathfrak{z} ij. Misc.) A cooling and emollient application to burns and scalds.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ, Oleum Camphoratum, Solutio camphoræ oleosa, Camphor liniment, (F.) Liniment Camphré, (Camphoræ, \mathfrak{z} iv; olei olivæ, f \mathfrak{z} ij. Dissolve.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ COMPOSITUM, Ward's essence for the headache, Compound camphor liniment. (Camphor. \mathfrak{z} iiss; ol. Lavand. f \mathfrak{z} ij; Sp. rectificat. f \mathfrak{z} xvij; Liquor ammon. fortior. f \mathfrak{z} ij. Dissolve the camphor and oil in the spirit; add the ammonia, and shake till they are mixed. Ph. L.) It is stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CANTHARIDIS, Liniment of Spanish Flies. (Cantharid. in pulv. ℥j; Ol. Terebinth. Oss. Digest for three hours by means of a water-bath, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Used as an excitant liniment in typhus, &c.

LINIMENTUM E CANTHARIDIBUS CAMPHORATUM, Camphorated liniment of cantharidides, (F.) L. cantharid. camphré. (Tinct. cantharid. ℥ss; ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iv; sapon. amygd. ℥j; camphor. ℥ss. Dissolve the camphor in the oil, and add the mixture to the tincture and soap.—Ph. P.) Rubefacient, and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CROTONIS, Croton oil Liniment, (Ol. Croton, f ℥j; Ol. Terebinth. f ℥vij, M. Ph. D.) Rubefacient, causing an eruption when continued.

LINIMENTUM HYDRARGYRI, L. Hydragryri composatum, Mercurial liniment, (F.) L. de Mercure. (Ung. Hyd. fort. adip. præp. āā. ℥iv; camphora, ℥j; sp. rect. git. xv; liquor ammon. f ℥iv. Rub the camphor with the spirit: add the ointment and lard: and, lastly, gradually add the solution.—Ph. L.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient to venereal swellings, &c.

LINIMENTUM HYPERICI, see Hypericum perforatum.

LINIMENTUM OPII, Liniment of Opium, Anodyne Liniment. (Sapon. ℥vj; Opii. ℥ss; Camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f ℥vj; Spir. rectificat. Oij. (Imp. meas.) Macerate the soap and opium in the spirit for three hours; filter, and add the oil and camphor.—Ph. L.) Anodyne and slightly rubefacient.

LINIMENTUM PLUMBATEM, Unguentum plumbi superacetatis—l. Saponaceum opiatum, L. Saponis et opii.

LINIMENTUM SAPONACEUM HYDROSULPHURATUM, (Common Soap, 500 p. Liquefy in a water bath in an earthen vessel: and add white poppy oil, 250 p. Mix intimately, and add dry sulphuret of potass, 100 p. Beat together, and add oil of poppy seed, 750 p.—Ph. P.) In cutaneous affections, as psora, herpes, &c.

LINIMENTUM SAPONATO-CAMPHORATUM, L. Saponis camphoratum.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS, Tinctura saponis camphorata (Ph. U. S.), Camphorated Tincture of Soap, Soap Liniment. (Saponis concis. ℥iv; camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f ℥ss; alcohol. Oij. Digest the soap and alcohol in a water-bath, until the former is dissolved: filter, and add the camphor and oil.—Ph. U. S.) Used in sprains, bruises, and as an embrocation.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS CAMPHORATUM, L. S. compositum, L. Saponato-camphoratum, Balsamum opodeldoch, Tinctura saponis camphorata (Ph. U. S.), Opodeldoch, Steer's opodelloch, Compound Soap Liniment, (F.) L. de Savon. (Sapon. rasur. ℥iv; Camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f ℥ss; Aqua. f ℥iv; Alcohol. Oij. Mix the alcohol and water; digest the soap in the mixture by means of a water-bath, until it is dissolved: filter, and add the camphor and oil.—(Ph. U. S.) Stimulant and anodyne: in bruises, local pains, &c.

Freeman's Bathing Spirits consist of lin. sapon comp. coloured with Daffy's elixir.

Jackson's Bathing Spirits differ from Freeman's in the addition of some essential oils.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS ET OPII, L. saponaceum opiatum, Soap and opium liniment, Bates's anodyne balsam, Balsamum anodynum, Tinctura saponis et opii, (F.) L. de Savon opiacé. (Saponis dur. ℥iv; opii. ℥j; camphora, ℥ij; olei rosmarin. f ℥ss; alcohol. Oij.—Ph. E.) Anodyne: in chronic rheumatism and local pains in general.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Simple Liniment. (Ol. oliv. 4 p.; ceræ albæ, 1 p. fiat linimentum.—Ph. E.) Emollient; used in chaps, &c.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Unguentum cereæ.

LINIMENTUM TEREBINTHINÆ, L. Terebinthinum, Turpentine liniment. (Cerat. resinæ, ℔j; ol. terebinth. Oss. Melt the cerate and stir in the oil.) A stimulant; applied to burns, &c.

LINIMENTUM VOLATILE, L. ammoniæ carbonatis.

LINX, Tilia Americæna.

LINNÆA, L. Borealis. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ.

This plant, called after Linnæus, has a bitter, sub-astringent taste; and is used, in some places, in the form of fomentation, in rheumatic pains. An infusion in milk is used in Switzerland for the cure of sciatia.

LINOSPERMUM, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINSEED, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINT, Carbasus, Linteum.

LINTEAMEN, Linteum, Pledget.

LINTEUM, 'a linen cloth,' from linum, 'flax, linen,' L. carptum seu rasum, Linteamen, Oth'onê, Othon'ion, Car'basus, Car'bosa, Car'pia, Motos, Mo'te, Motum, Lincen'tum, Tilma, Xystos, Xysta, Achuë, Lint, (F.) Charpie. A soft, flocculent substance, made by scraping old linen cloth, (F.) Charpie râpée, or by unraveling old linen cut into small pieces—(F.) Charpie bente; and employed in surgery as a dressing to wounds, ulcers, &c., either simply or covered with ointment.

LINTEUM CARPTUM, see Linteum—l. Rasum, see Linteum—l. Scissum, Splitcloth (bandage.)

LINUM, see Linum usitatissimum—l. Arvense, L. usitatissimum.

LINUM CATHARTICUM, L. minimum, Chamælinum, Purging flax, Mill mountain, (F.) Lin purgatif. Ord. Linaceæ. This plant is possessed of cathartic properties, and has a bitterish, disagreeable taste. Dose, ℥j, in substance.

LINUM CRUDUM, see Apolinosis—l. Minimum, L. Catharticum.

LINUM USITATISSIMUM, L. arven'se, Common flax, (F.) Lin. The seed, Linum, (Ph. U. S.), Sem'ina lini usitatissimi, Linospermum, Linseed, Flaxseed, (F.) Grains de lin, are inodorous, and almost tasteless: yielding mucilage to warm water, and oil by expression. They are demulcent and emollient. Linsed, when ground into powder, forms a good emollient poultice. It is only necessary to stir the powder into boiling water. The oil, Oleum lini, Flaxseed oil, (F.) Huile de Lin, is emollient and demulcent.

LIONDENT, Leontodon taraxacum.

LION'S FOOT, Nabalus albus, Prenanthes—l. Tail, Leonorus.

LIOPODIA, see Leopius.

LIOPUS, Leopius.

LIP, Sax. and Germ. Lippe, Cheilos, La'bium, Labrum, (F.) Lèvre. [In Entomology, labium means the lower lip, — labrum, the upper.] The lips are composed of different muscular fasciæ, nerves, and vessels, covered by the skin and mucous membrane of the mouth. They circumscribe the anterior aperture of that cavity; and are inservient to mastication, pronunciation, &c. They are distinguished into upper and lower—Anocheilon; and Catacheilon, (Prov.) Fipple—and are placed in front of each jaw, forming between them the anterior aperture of the mouth. They unite at each side, and form what are called the angles or commissures of the mouth—Chol'ini. Their free edge is covered with a mucous membrane, of a more or less livid red, according to the individual. They receive their arteries from the external carotid. Their veins open into the two jugulars. Their lymphatic vessels descend into the ganglions situate beneath the chin. Their nerves are derived from the infra-orbital, mental, and facial.

LIPS, La'bia, (F.) Lèvres de la vulvæ, are folds belonging to the genital organs of the female, and distinguished into—1. Labia pudendi seu Cinni seu majo'ra, Epis'i'a, Alæ pudendi mulie'bris, Hydrocheilides, Rupes, Alæ majo'res, Crem'noi, (F.) Grandes Lèvres. These are two membranous folds, thicker above than below, which limit the vulva laterally, and extend from the inferior part of the mons veneris to the perinæum. They unite anteriorly and posteriorly, forming commissures; the posterior of which is called Fourchette. Their outer surface is convex; formed of skin and covered with hair. The inner surface is white, and covered by a mucous membrane, continuous with that lining the other parts of the vulva. The space between the skin and mucous membrane is filled with a fatty tissue and fibrous bands, some fibres of the constrictor vaginæ muscle, vessels, and nerves.

We speak, also, of the lips of a wound, ulcer, &c., when alluding to the edges of these solutions of continuity.

LIPA, λιπα, fat; also, Lippitudo.

LIPARA, from λιπαρος, 'fatty.' Plasters, containing much oil or fat.

LIPARIA, see Polysarcia.

LIPAROCE'LE, Lipoc'e'le, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Lipo'ma, or fatty tumour of the scrotum, Her'nia pinguedinis'æ scroti.

LIPARODES, Fatty.

LIPAROIDÉ, Cerate.

LIPAROLÉ, Pomatum, Pommade.

LIPAROTES, see Polysarcia.

LIPAROTRICH'IA, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and σριξ, τριχος, 'hair.' Too great oiliness of the hair.

LIPARUS, Fatty.

LIPASMA, see Polysarcia.

LIPEMANIA, Melancholy, see Lypemania.

LIPHEMIA, Leiphæmia.

LIPHÆMOS, Leiphæmos.

LIPO or LEIPO, λειπω, 'I leave,' 'I forsake.' Hence, Leipopsychia, Leipothymia.

LIPOCELE, Liparocœle.

LIPODERMIA, Aposthia.

LIPODERMOS, Leipodermos.

LIPOMA, Lypo'ma, from λιπα, 'fat.' A fatty tumour of an encysted or other character.

LIPOMATODES, Lipomatous.

LIPOM'ATOUS, Lipomato'sus, Lipomato'des, (F.) Lipomateux. Having the nature of lipoma—as a 'lipomatous mass.'

LIPOME'RIA, Leipome'ria, from λειπω, 'I leave,' and μέρος, a 'part.' Monstrosity from arrest of development, or from defect. Deficiency of one or more of the parts of the body; for example, in one who has only four fingers.

LIPOPSYCHIA, Syncope.

LIPOS, Fat.

LIPOSIS, see Polysarcia.

LIPOSPHYXIA, Syncope.

LIPOTHYMIA, Syncope.

LIPPA, Chassie.

LIPPER, Lepra, Leprous.

LIPPIA, Adali.

LIPPITUDO, Ophthalm'ia chron'ica of some, Lippitide, Blear-eye, Blear-eyedness, Blear'edness, Lappa, Lipa, Xerophthal'mia, Lema, Lemē, Lemos'itas, Glemē, Glama, Gra'mia. A copious secretion of the sebaceous humour of the eyelids, which renders them gummy. It is owing to a state of chronic inflammation of the tarsal margins; the eyelids being generally red, tumefied, and painful.

LIPPITUDO NEONATORUM, see Ophthalmia.

LIPPUS, one affected with blear eye; blear-eyed; (F.) Chassieux.

LIPSIS ANIMI, Syncope.

LIPSOTRICHIA, Alopecia, Calvities.

LIQUAMEN, Garum.

LIQUAMU'MIA, Adeps huma'nus. Human fat.—Ruland and Johnson.

LIQUARIUM, Syrupus simplex.

LIQUATIO, Liquefaction.

LIQUEFA'CIENT, Liquefac'iens, from liquidus, 'liquid,' and facere, 'to make.' A medicinal agent, which seems to have the power of liquefying solid depositions. To this class mercury, iodine, &c. have been referred by some.

LIQUEFAC'TION, Liqua'tio, Liquefac'tio; same etymon. Transformation of a solid substance into a liquid. It is used particularly in speaking of metals and fatty bodies, see Fusion.

LIQUIDAM'BAR STYRACIF'LUA, Liquidam'bra, Sweet gum, White gum. Ord. Balsamineæ. The name of the tree which affords the Liquid amber and Storax liquida, Styrax liquida or Liquid storax. Liquid amber is a resinous juice of a yellow colour, inclining to red; at first of about the consistence of turpentine; by age, hardening into a solid, brittle mass. It is not used medicinally.

Styrax Liquida is obtained from this plant by boiling. There are two sorts,—one more pure than the other. It is used occasionally, as a stomachic, in the form of plaster.

LIQUIDE AMN'IOTIQUE, Liquor Amnii—l. Céphalo-rachidième, Cephalo-spinal fluid.

LIQUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid.

LIQUIRITIA, Glycyrrhiza.

LIQUOR. (liqueo. 'I am liquid,') Liqua'men, Hyggon, Hy'grotes, (F.) Liquenr. A name given to many compound liquids, and especially to those the bases of which are water and alcohol.

LIQUOR ACIDUS HALERI, Elixir acidum Halleri—l. Æthereus, Ether—l. Æthereus sulphuricus, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici.

LIQUOR ALU'MINIS COMPOS'ITUS, Aqua alu'minis compos'ita seu aluminosa Bateana, Bates's alum water, Compound solution of Alum, (F.) Liqueur d'alumine composée, (Aluminis, zinci sulphat. sing. ζ ss, aq'æ ferrent. Oij. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Detergent and stimulant. Used as a collyrium, when properly diluted, in ophthalmia; as an injection in gleet, leucorrhœa, &c.

LIQUOR EX AMMONIÀ ET OLEO SUCCINI, Spiritus ammonia succinatus

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ, L. ammonia puræ, Al'cali ammoniacum fluidum, Ammon'ia liquida seu caustica liquida seu pura liquida, Lixiv'um ammoniacal'e, Spiritus salis ammoniaci aquosus, Aqua ammonia seu ammonia caustica, Liquid ammonia, Solutio of ammonia, (F.) Ammoniaque liquide. Directed to be made in the Pharm. U. S. from muriate of Ammonia, in fine powder; and Lime, each a pound; distilled water a pint; water, nine fluid ounces. The water is employed to slake the lime; this is mixed with the muriate of ammonia and put into a glass retort in a sand-bath. Heat is applied so as to drive off the ammonia, which is made to pass into a quart bottle containing the distilled water. To every ounce of the product three and a half fluidrachms of distilled water are added, or as much as may be necessary to raise its s. g. to 0.96. This Liquor Ammoniac may also be made by mixing one part of liquor ammoniac fortior with two parts of distilled water. (Ph. U. S. 1842.) Its s. g. is 0.960. LIQUOR AMMONIÆ FORTIOR, Stronger solution of ammonia (Ph. U. S.) is an aqueous solution of ammonia of the s. g. 0.882. Liquor ammoniac is stimulant, antacid, and rubefacient. Dose, gtt. x to xx, in water or milk.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ ACETATIS, Alcali ammoniacum acetatum, A. volatilis acetatum, Aqua acetatis ammoniacæ seu ammoniacæ acetatæ, Solution of acetate of ammonia, Acetas ammoniacæ, Spiritus Mindererius, Sol ammoniacum vegetabilis, Spiritus ophthalmicus Mindererius, Sal acetosis ammoniacalis. (Acid. acetic. dilut. Oij, Ammon. carbonat. in pulv. Add the salt to the acid until it is saturated. Ph. U. S. 1851.) A sudorific; externally, cooling. Dose, fʒij to fʒiiss.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ SESQUICARBONATIS, Liquor Ammoniac Subcarbonatis.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ CITRATIS, Solution of Citrate of Ammonia. This preparation is officinal in the Dublin Pharmacopœia. It is made by saturating a solution of citric acid with sesquicarbonate of ammonia. It is given in cases of nervous fever.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ SUBCARBONATIS, Liquor Ammoniac Sesquicarbonatis, Solutio subcarbonatis ammoniacæ, Aqua carbonatis ammoniacæ, Solution of subcarbonate of ammonia, Water of carbonate of ammonia. (Ammoniac carbon. ʒiv, aquæ destillat. Oj. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Use;—the same as that of the carbonate of ammonia.

LIQUOR AMMONIÆ HYDROTHIODIS, Ammoniacæ sulphuretum—l. Ammonii vinosus, Spiritus ammoniac.

LIQUOR AMNII, Aqua amnii. The liquor of the amnios. (F.) Eau ou Liqueur de l'Amnios, Liquide amniotique. The fluid exhaled by the amnios, and which envelops the fœtus during the whole period of utero-gestation. It is often simply called the waters, (F.) Les Eaux. Its relative quantity diminishes as pregnancy advances, although its absolute quantity continues to increase till the period of delivery. In some women, only five or six ounces are met with: in others, it amounts to pints. It is limpid, yellowish, or whitish; exhales a faint smell, and has a slightly saline taste. It contains water in considerable quantity; albumen; chloride of sodium; phosphate of lime; an alkaline substance; and a particular acid. It facilitates the dilatation of the uterus, and aids delivery by acting as a soft wedge enclosed in its membranes, Bag of waters, Poche des Eaux, &c. It is probably inservient to useful purposes in the nutrition of the fœtus.

LIQUOR AMNII, FALSE. The fluid contained between the amnion and chorion in the early periods of foetal existence.

LIQUOR ANODYNE, HOFFMANN'S, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus—l. Anodynus martialis, Aleohol sulphurico-æthereus ferri.

LIQUOR ANODYNE TEREBINTHINATIS, A formula prescribed by Rademacher in cases of gall-stone, and of obstructions and indurations of the liver and spleen. It was composed of Hoffmann's anodyne liquor ʒj; rectified oil of turpentine ʒij. Dose, 5 to 10 drops. It resembles the Remède de Durande, Mixture lithontriptique de Durand, M. de Whitt, Éthérolé d'essence de térébenthine, which is formed of Sulphuric ether, 30 parts; Essence of turpentine, 15 parts. It is used in the same cases.

LIQUOR ARSENICALIS, L. Potassæ arsenitica (Ph. U. S.), Solutio arsenicalis seu arsenicata seu arsenitica kalica, Arsenical solution, Mineral solvent, Arsenic potassæ liquidus seu potassæ arsenatus, Fowler's solution of arsenic, Solvens mineralis, Italian poison, Acqua seu Aqua Truffantina, Acqua della Toffana, A. di Napoli, Acquetta [?], Tasteless aque drop, (F.) Liqueur arsenicale. (Acid. Arsenic. in frustulis, potassæ carbonatis pur., sing. gr. lxiv., aquæ destillat. q. s. Boil together the arsenious acid and carbonate of potassa with twelve fluidounces of distilled water, in a glass vessel, until the arsenic is dissolved. When the solution is cold, add Spirit. lavand. c. fʒiv, and as much distilled water as will make the whole one pint. Ph. U. S.) fʒij contains gr. ss of the arsenious acid. Dose, gtt. x.

For Pearson's Solution, see Arseniate of Soda.

LIQUOR ARSENICI CHLORIDI, Solution of Chloride of Arsenic, of the London Pharmacopœia of 1851, is made by boiling Arsenious acid ʒss, in hydrochloric acid fʒiiss (Imp. meas.) mixed with a fluidounce of distilled water, until it is dissolved: then adding water to make the quantity a pint (Imp. meas.) Each fluidounce contains a grain and a half of arsenious acid, or an equivalent quantity of trichloride. Properties the same as those of Liquor Arsenicalis. It is a substitute for, and imitation of De Valangin's Arsenical Solution, Solutio solvens mineralis, much used by many British practitioners. Dose, gtt. v-x.

LIQUOR ARSENICI ET HYDRARGYRI IODIDI, seu Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of—l. Barii chloridi, Baryta, muriate of, solution of—l. Bellotii, L. Hydrargyri nitrici—l. Calcii chloridi, see Calcis murias.

LIQUOR CALCIS, Solutio calcis, Aqua calcis seu benedicta seu Calcaria usta, Calcaria pura liquida, Solution of Lime, Lime Water, (F.) Eau de chaux. (Calcis ʒiv., aq. destill. cong. Pour the water on the lime, and stir. Let it stand in a covered vessel three hours; bottle the lime and water in stopped bottles, and use the clear solution.) It is astringent, tonic, and antacid; and is used in diarrhœa, diabetes, heartburn, &c., and as a lotion to foul and cancerous ulcers, &c. Dose, fʒij to Oss, in milk.

LIQUOR CALCIS CHLORINATÆ, Solution of Chlorinated Lime (Ph. D.), is made by triturating half a pound of chlorinated lime with half a gallon of water; shaking the mixture; filtering, and keeping in a well-stopped bottle. Used in the same cases as chlorinated lime. Dose, fʒss to fʒj.

LIQUOR CALCIS COMPOSITUS, Aqua Calcis composita seu benedicta composita, Compound lime water. (F.) Eau de chaux composée. (Liqu. quaiac. ras. liiss. rad. glycyrrh. ʒj, cort. kassiajras, ʒss; semin. coriand. ʒij, liquor calcis, Ovj. Macerate for two days, and filter.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and astringent, and is used in cutaneous affections.

LIQUOR CALCIS MURIATIS, see Calcis murias—l. Cereis, Cerevisia—l. Chloreti natri, l. sodæ chlorinata—l. Chlorini, see Chlorine—l. Chlorureti natri, l. Sodæ chlorinata—l. Chlorureti sodæ, l. sodæ chlorinata.

LIQUOR CHYLI, see Chyle.

LIQUOR CUPRI AMMONIATI, Liquor Cupri ammoniac-sulphatis, Aqua seu solutio cupri ammoniati seu sappharina, Blue eye-water, Solution of ammoniated copper: (F.) Liqueur ou Eau de cuivre ammoniacal. (Cupri ammoniat. ʒi, aquæ destill. Oj. Dissolve and filter the solution through paper. Ph. L.) Corrosive and detergent. Used externally to foul ulcers; and diluted with an equal part of distilled water, it is applied by means à a hair pencil to specks and films on the eye.

LIQUOR CUPRI AMMONIO-SULPHATIS, Liquor Cupri ammoniati.

LIQUOR CUPRI SULPHATIS COMPOSITUS, Aqua cupri vitriolati composita. (Cupri sulphat., alumin. sulphat. āā ℥ij, aquæ puræ Oij., acid sulph. ℥j.) Boil the salts in the water until they are dissolved; then filter the liquor, and add the acid.) Used as an astringent in epistaxis, &c. It was also called Aqua Styp'tica.

LIQUOR CYRENIACUS, Benjamin—l. Entericus, Succus entericus—l. Excitans, Spiritus ammoniæ succinatus.

LIQUOR FERRI ALKALINI, Solution of Alkaline Iron. (F.) Liqueur de fer alcaline. (Ferri ℥iiss, acid. nitric. ℥ij, aquæ destillat. f ℥vj. liq. potass. subcarb. f ℥vj.) To the acid and water mixed, add the iron; and, after the effervescence, add the clear solution, gradually, to the liq. potassæ subcarb.; shaking it occasionally till it assumes a deep brown-red colour, and the effervescence stops. After six hours' settling, pour off the clear solution. (Ph. L.) It is tonic like other preparations of iron. Dose, f ℥ss to f ℥iiss.

LIQUOR FERRI IOIDIDI, Solution of Iodide of Iron. (Syr'nopus Ferri iodidi, Symp of Iodide of Iron. (Iodin. ℥ij. Ferri roment. ℥j, Sacchar. pulv. ℥xij, Aquæ destillat. q. s. Mix the iodine with f ℥x of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, constantly stirring. Heat the mixture gently until the liquor acquires a light greenish colour; then, having added the sugar, continue the heat a short time, and filter. Lastly, pour distilled water upon the filter, and allow it to pass until the whole of the filtered liquor measures twenty fluidounces. Keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 20 or 30 drops.

LIQUOR FERRI MURIATIS, Tinctura ferri muriatis.

LIQUOR FERRI NITRATIS, L. Ferri Sesquinitrat'is seu ternitrat'is. Solutio Ferri nitrat'is. Solution of nitrate, of ternitrate of sesquioxide, or of sesquinitrate of iron, has been recommended in chronic diarrhœa and dysentery. Its virtues exactly resemble those of chloride of iron. It is prepared as follows:—Ferri filii, incisi. ℥j, Acid. nitric. f ℥ij, Aq. destillat. q. s. Mix the acid and a pint of distilled water, until gas ceases to be given off; filter, and add distilled water to make f ℥xxx.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 10 to 20 drops.

LIQUOR FOLLICULI, see Folliculi Graafiani.

LIQUOR FUMANS BOYLEI, Sulphuretum Ammoniacæ Hydrogenatum. Hydrosulphuretum Ammoniacæ, Tinctura Sulphuris Volatilis, Aqua Sulphureti Ammoniacæ. Boyle's Fuming liquor. (F.) Liqueur fumante de Boyle. It is possessed of nauseating and emetic properties, and has been given in diabetes and diseases of excitement as a dearygenizer!

LIQUOR HYDRARGYRI NITRICI, L. Bellosti. (F.) Eau mercurelle ou contre la gangrène, Remède du Duc d'Antin, R. du Capucin. (Hydrarg. 120 p., acid nitr. (33°) 150 p. Dissolve, and add to the solution distilled water, 900 p. Ph. P.) Dose, two or three drops in a glass of water. Not much used.

LIQUOR HYDRARGYRI OXYMURIATIS, L. Hydrargyri Chloridi corrosivi seu Hydrargyri bichloridi, Solution of Oxymuriate of Mercury,

Liquor Sicietensis seu Syphiliticus Turneri, Mercurio hydrargyri spirituosus liq'uidus, Solutio Mercurii hydrargyri oxygenati, Liquor or Solution of Corrosive Sublimate or of Van Sicieten. (Hyd. oxyg., ammon. muriat. āā gr. x, aquæ destill. Oj, (Imp. meas.) Dissolve in the water and add the spirit. Ph. P.) Dose, f ℥ss, or f ℥j.

Norton's Drops, Green's Drops, and Solomon's Anti-Impetiginous—all nostrums—seem to be disguised solutions of Corrosive Sublimate.

LIQUOR HYDRARGYRI PERNITRATIS, see Hydrargyri nitras—l. Hydrargyri Supernitratiss, see Hydrargyri nitras—l. Hydriodatis Arsenici et Hydrargyri, Arsenic and mercury, iodide of—l. Intestinalis, Succus entericus.

LIQUOR IOIDINI COMPOSITUS, (Ph. U. S. 1842,) L. Iodini compositus. (Ph. U. S. 1851.) Solutio Potassii Iodidi Iodure'to, Compound Solution of Iodine, Lugol's Solution. (Iodin. ℥vj, Potass. iodid. ℥iiss, Aquæ destillat. Oj. Dissolve the iodine and iodide of potassium in the water.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. vj. ad xij. in sugared water.

LIQUOR LITHARGYRI SUBACETATIS, L. plumbi subacetatis—l. Lithargyri subacetatis compositus, Liquor plumbi subacetatis dilutus.

LIQUOR LYMPHÆ, see Lymph.

LIQUOR OF MONRO, Solution of Monro. A solution, used by Monro for the preservation of anatomical preparations. It was composed of alcohol at 22° or 24°, with a drachm of nitric acid to each pint.

LIQUOR MORGAGNI, The small quantity of fluid contained within the capsule of the crystalline lens.

LIQUOR MORPHÆ ACETATIS, Solution of Acetate of Morphia, Anodyne Drops. (Acetate of morphia, ℥iv, distilled water, Oj. (Imp. meas.), Spirit. tennior. Oss. (Imp. meas.) Ph. L.), acetic acid, ℥xv. Dose, from six to twenty-four drops.

LIQUOR MORPHÆ MURIATIS, Solution of Muriate of Morphia. (Morphiæ muriat. ℥iv, aquæ destillat. Oj. (Imp. meas.) Sp. tennior, Oss. (Imp. meas.) Ph. L.) Dose, from 6 to 20 minims.

LIQUOR MORPHÆ SULPHATIS, Solution of Sulphate of Morphia. (Morphiæ sulphat. gr. viij, aquæ destillat. Oss. Dissolve the sulphate of morphia in the water.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f ℥j to f ℥ij—containing from an eighth to a quarter of a grain.

LIQUOR MUCI, see Mucus—l. Natri Oxymuriatici, l. Sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Nervinus Bangii, Tinctura ætherea camphorata—l. Oleosus Sylvii, Spiritus ammoniæ aromaticus—l. Opii sedativus, (Haden's), see Tinctura opii.

LIQUOR OPII SEDATIVUS. An empirical preparation by a London druggist of the name of Batley. It is said to be an aqueous solution of opium, evaporated to dryness to get rid of the acid resin, re-dissolved in water, and a small portion of alcohol added to give it permanence.—Redwood. It is devoid of many of the narcotic effects of opium.

LIQUOR OVI ALBUS. Albumen ovi—l. Pancreaticus, see Pancreas—l. Pericardii, see Pericardium—l. Plumbi acetatis, l. P. subacetatis—l. Plumbi diacetatis, Liquor Plumbi subacetatis.

LIQUOR PLUMBI SUBACETATIS. L. Subacetatis Lithargyri seu Plumbi Acetatis seu Plumbi Diacetatis, Goulard's Extractum Saturni, Lithargyri Acetatum, Acetum plumbicium seu saturninum, Solution of Subacetate of Lead. (F.) Liqueur de sous-acétate de Plomb. (Plumb. acet. ℥xxvj, Plumb. oxid. semivitr. in pulv. subtil. ℥iiss, aquæ destillat. Oiv. Boil together in a glass or porcelain vessel, for half an hour, occasionally adding distilled water, so as to preserve the measure. Filter through paper, and keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) It is used externally as a cooling astringent, and discussant, when diluted with distilled water.

LIQUOR PLUMBI SUBACETATIS DILUTUS, L. Subacetatis Lithargyri Compositus, L. Plumbi acetatis dilutus, L. Plumbi Diacetatis dilutus, Acetas Plumbi dilutum alcoholicum, Diluted Solution of Subacetate of Lead, Aqua Saturni seu veg'eto-mineralis seu Plumbi seu Goulardii seu Lithargyri Acetati composita, Tinctura plumbosa, Lead water, Goulard water, (F.) Eau blanche, Eau de Goulard, Eau végétominérale, White Wash, Royal Preventive. (Liq. plumbi subacet. f3ij, aquæ destillat. Oj. Ph. U. S.) Properties the same as the last, but feebler.

LIQUOR POTASSÆ, Aqua Potassæ seu Kali Cautici seu Kali puri, Solution of Potash or of Potassa, Lixivium magistralè seu Saponarium, Soap Lees, Soap Ley, Lixivium causticum, Potassa liquida, (F.) Eau, solution ou liqneur de Potasse, Potasse liquide, Lessive des Savonniers. (Potassæ carb. lbj, calcis. lss, aquæ destill. ferrent. congiun. Dissolve the alkali in Oij of the water, and add the remainder of the lime. Mix the whole: set aside in a close vessel, and, when cold, filter through calico.) It is antilithic in cases of uric acid calculi, and antacid. Externally, stimulant and escharotic. Dose, gtt. x to xx.

LIQUOR POTASSÆ ARSENITIS, L. arsenicalis — L. Potassæ Carbonatis, L. P. Subcarbonatis.

LIQUOR POTASSÆ CITRATIS, Solution of Citrate of Potassa, Neutral Mixture, Saline Mixture. (Succ. Limon. Oss, Potass. Bicarbonat. q. s.) saturate by the carbonate of potassa, and filter; or, Acid. Citric. ʒss; Ol. Limon. ℥. ij; Aquæ Oss, Potass. Bicarbonat. q. s.; dissolve, saturate by the carbonate of potassa, and filter. Ph. U. S.) Used in fever, but probably of little or no efficacy.

LIQUOR POTASSÆ SUBCARBONATIS, L. Potassæ Carbonatis (Ph. U. S.), Aqua Kali seu Kali preparati seu Subcarbonatis Kali, O'leum Tartari per deliquium, Lixivium Tartari, Oil of Tartar, Saline oil of Tartar, Solution of Subcarbonate of Potassa, (F.) Lixieur de sous-carbonate de Potasse, Lessive de Tartre, Huile de Tartre par défaillance. (Potass. subcar. ℥j, aquæ destillat. f3xij. Dissolve and filter. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gtt. x to xxx.

LIQUOR POTASSII IODIDI COMPOSITUS, Compound Solution of Iodide of Potassium. (Potassii sodid. gr. x, Iodin. gr. v, aquæ destillat. Oj. (Imp. meas.) Ph. L.) Dose, f3j.

LIQUOR PROPAGATORY, Sperm — L. Prostaticus, Prostatic liquor, see Prostate — L. Puris, see Pus.

LIQUOR SANGUINIS, Blood liquor, (F.) Lixieur du Sang. A term given by Dr. B. Babington to one of the constituents of the blood, the other being the red particles. It is the Hæmatoplasma, the Plasma, of Schultz, Lymph, Coagulable or plastic Lymph, the Mucago or Mucilage of Harvey, Hewson and others, and the intercellular fluid of Lehmann, (F.) Lymphé plastique ou coagulable, Suc nourricier, and is the effused material from which the cells obtain the constituents of the different tissues and secretions. See Blood.

LIQUOR OF SCARPA, Vitrine antidive.

LIQUOR SEMINIS, The homogeneous, transparent fluid, in which the spermatozooids and seminal granules are contained. See Sperm.

LIQUOR SODÆ, L. Sodæ Causticæ, Solution of Soda, Solution of Caustic Soda. (Prepared, like Liquor Potassæ, from Carbonate of Soda.)

LIQUOR SODÆ CARBONATIS, Solution of Carbonate of Soda. (Sodæ carbon. ʒiss, (avoirdupois); Aquæ destillat. Oj. (Imp. meas.) Ph. D.) Dose, as an antacid, one to two tablespoonfuls, diluted with water.

LIQUOR SODÆ CHLORIDI, L. sodæ chlorinatæ.

LIQUOR SODÆ CHLORINATÆ, L. sodæ chloridi

seu sodæ oxy muriat'icæ seu chlorati natri seu chlorati natri seu chlorati sodæ seu chlorati natri seu chlorati sodæ, seu natri oxy muriat'ici, Natrium chloratum liquidum, Aqua natri oxy muriat'ici, Labarraque's Disinfecting Liquid, Solution of Chlorinated Soda. (Calcis Chlorinat. ℥j; Sodæ Carbonat. ℥j; Aquæ cong. iss. Dissolve the carbonate of soda in three pints of the water, with the aid of heat. To the remainder of the water add, by small portions at a time, the chlorinated lime, previously well triturated, stirring the mixture after each addition. Set the mixture by for several hours, that the dregs may subside; decant the clear liquid, and mix it with the solution of carbonate of soda. Lastly, decant the clear liquor from the precipitated carbonate of lime, pass it through a linen cloth, and keep it in bottles secluded from the light.—Ph. U. S.) Used in the same cases as the chloride of lime. Internally, 10 drops to a fluidrachm. for a dose. Diluted with water, it is an excitant and disinfectant in various morbi externi.

LITHOECTASIA, Lithectasy.

LITHODIALYSIS, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and διαλυω, 'to dissolve.' The dissolving of a stone in the bladder.

LITHODRAS'SIC, Lithodras'sicus, (F.) Lithodras'sique, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and δρασσειν, 'to seize hold of.' An epithet given to a form of stone forceps—Pince lithodras'sique—used in the operation of lithotry, by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou.

LITHOGENIA, Lithia.

LITHOID, Litho'des, Lithoi'des; from λιθος, 'stone,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Of the nature of stone, or resembling stone: as LITHOIDES OS, see Temporal bone.

LITHOLABE (F.), Lithol'abum, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λαβω, λαβανω, 'I seize hold of.'

An instrument, employed for laying hold of a stone in the bladder, and keeping it fixed, so that lithotritic instruments can act upon it.

LITHOLABON, Forceps, (Lithotomy.)

LITHOL'ABUM, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λαβανω, 'I seize.' An instrument concerned in extracting stone from the bladder. It had various shapes.—Fabricius ab Aquapendente, Hildanus.

LITH'OLYTE, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λυω, 'I dissolve.' An instrument, of the catheter kind, for conveying solvents of calculi into the bladder.

LITHOLYTIC, Lithontripctic.

LITHOME'TRA, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and μητρα, 'the uterus.' Osseous, or other concretions of the uterus.

LITHONEPHRITIS, see Nephritis.

LITHONLYTIC, Lithontripctic.

LITHONTRYP'TIC, Lithontripctic.

LITHONTRIP'TIC, Lithontrip'ticus, Lithontryp'tic, Litholy'tic, Lithonly'tic, Calculif'ragus, Saricif'ragus, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and θρπτω, 'I break in pieces.' A remedy believed to be capable of dissolving calculi in the urinary passages. There is not much reliance to be placed upon such remedies. By antilithics, exhibited according to the chemical character of the calculus (see Calculi, urinary), the disease may be prevented from increasing; but most of the vaunted lithontripctics for dissolving the calculus already formed have been found unworthy of the high encomiums which have accompanied their introduction.

LITHOP'E'DION, Infans lapid'eus, Osteopa'dion, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and παις, παιδος, 'a child.' A fœtus, petrified in the body of the mother.

LITHOPII'AGUS, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and φάγω, 'I eat.' A stone-eater. Cases are on record of persons who have swallowed stones for purposes of exhibition.

LITHOPHTHISIS, see Calculi, pulmonary, and Lithiasis pulmonum.

LITHOPRINIE, Lithotry.

LITHOPRIONE, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and πριων, 'a saw.' An instrument proposed by M. Leroy for preventing the fragments of a calculus, when subjected to lithotry, from falling into the bladder. It is a variety of litholabe.

LITHOPRISIE, Lithotry.

LITHORINEUR, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and ουειν, 'to file.' An instrument, proposed by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou for filing down calculi in the bladder.

LITHOS, Calculus.

LITHOSPERMUM OFFICINA'LE, Mil'ium Solis, Ægon'yehon, Gromicell, Bastard Al'kanet, Little-wale, (F.) Grémil officinal, Herbe aux Perles. Ord. Boraginæ. The seeds of this plant were formerly supposed, from their stony hardness, (λιθος, 'a stone,' and σπερμα, 'seed,') to be efficacious in calculous affections. They have, also, been considered diuretic.

LITHOSPERMUM VILLOSUM, Anchusa tinctoria.

LITHOTERE'THRUM, from λιθος, 'stone,' and τερευ, 'to rub.' A lithotritor.

LITHOTHLIBIE (F.), from λιθος, 'stone,' and θλιβο, 'I crush.' The crushing of a friable calculus between a finger, passed by the rectum or vagina as far as the bis-fund of the bladder, and a catheter introduced into the bladder.

LITHOTHRYPsis, Lithotry.

LITHOTHRYPATORS, see Lithotripsy.

LITHOTOME, Lithotomus, from $\lambda\theta\omicron\varsigma$, 'a stone,' $\tau\epsilon\mu\omega$, 'I cut,' and $\tau\omicron\mu\eta$, 'an incision.' This name has been given to a number of instruments of different shapes and sizes, which are used in the operation for the stone, to cut the neck or body of the bladder. They ought, with more propriety, to be called Cystotomes.

The Lithotome Caché of Frère Côme is the most known, and is still occasionally used. It is composed of a handle, and a flattened sheath, slightly curved: in this there is a cutting blade, which can be forced out, by pressing upon a basecule or lever, to any extent that may be wished by the operator.

A Double Lithotome was used by Dupuytren in his bilateral operation. See Lithotomy.

LITHOTOMIST. Same etymon. Lithotomus. One who devotes himself entirely to operating for the stone. One who practises lithotomy.

LITHOTOMY, Lithotomia, Cystotomia, Urolithotomia, Scetia vesicalis, Lithocystotomy. Same etymon. (F.) Taille. The operation by which a stone is extracted from the bladder. The different methods, according to which this operation may be practised, are reducible to five principal; each of which has experienced numerous modifications.

1. The Method of Celsus, Methodus Celsiana, Cystotomia cum apparatu parvo, Apparatus Minor, Cutting on the Gripe. This consisted in cutting upon the stone, after having made it project at the perinæum by means of the fingers introduced into the rectum. This method was attended with several inconveniences; such as the difficulty of dividing the parts neatly, injury done to the bladder, as well as the impossibility of drawing down the stone in many persons. It is sometimes, also, called Methodus Gnytoniana; from Guy de Chauliac having endeavoured to remove from it the discredit into which it had fallen in his time. It was termed Apparatus Minor, (F.) Le petit appareil, from the small number of instruments required in it.

2. Apparatus Major. This method was invented, in 1520, by John de Romani, a surgeon of Cremona, and communicated by him to Mariano-Santo-di-Barletta, whence it was long called Mariano's Method, Scetia Mariana. It was called, also, Apparatus Major, and Cystotomia seu Methodus cum apparatu magno, (F.) Le grand appareil, from the number of instruments required in it. An incision was made on the median line; but the neck of the bladder was not comprehended in it. It was merely dilated. The greater apparatus was liable to many inconveniences, such as ecchymoses; contusion; inflammation of the neck of the bladder; abscesses; urinary fistulæ; incontinence of urine; impotence, &c.

3. The High Operation, Apparatus altus, Cystotomia cum apparatu alto, C. Hypogastrica, Episcytotomia, Laparocystotomia, Scetia seu Methodus Fraconiana, S. Hypogastrica seu alta, (F.) Haut appareil, Taille Hypogastrique, Taille ans-pubienne, was first practised by Peter Franco, about the middle of the 16th century. It consisted in pushing the stone above the pubis by the fingers introduced into the rectum. Rousset afterwards proposed to make the bladder rise above the pubis by injecting it. The method had fallen into discredit, when Frère Côme revived it. It is used when the calculus is very large. It was practised by opening first the membranous part of the urethra upon the catheter passed into the canal. Through this incision, the Sonde à dard—a species of catheter, having a spear-pointed stilet—was introduced into the bladder.

An incision was then made into the linea alba, above the symphysis pubis, of about four or five fingers' breadth, and the peritoneum detached to avoid wounding it. The stilet was pushed through the bladder, and used as a director for the knife, with which the bladder was divided anteriorly, as far as the neck; and the stone extracted. It was performed in England by Douglass, in 1710, and since by others, with various modifications.

4. The Lateral Operation, Hypocystotomia, Cystotomia lateralis, Cystanthenotomia, Cystotrachelotomia, Urethro-cystanthenotomia, Urethro-cystotrachelotomia, Scetia lateralis, Apparatus lateralis, (F.) Appareil lateralisé, so named from the prostate gland and neck of the bladder being cut laterally, was probably invented by Peter Franco. It was introduced into France by Frère Jacques de Beaulieu. He performed it with rude instruments, invented by himself, and improved by the suggestions of some of the Parisian surgeons. In England, it received its earliest and most important improvements from the celebrated Cheselden. It is the method practised at the present day, according to different modes of procedure. In this method, the patient is placed upon a table; his legs and thighs are bent and separated; the hands being tied to the feet. The perinæum is then shaved, and a staff is introduced into the bladder; the handle being turned towards the right groin of the patient. An oblique incision is now made from the raphe to the middle of a line drawn from the anus to the tuberosity of the ischium of the left side; and, taking the staff for a guide, the integuments, areolar tissue of the perinæum, membranous portion of the urethra, transversus perinæi muscle, bulbo-cavernosus, some fibres of the levator ani, the prostate and neck of the bladder, are successively divided. For this latter part of the operation, the knife, the beaked bistoury, Bistouri ou Lithotome Caché, cutting gorget, &c., is used, according to the particular preference. The forceps are now introduced into the bladder, and the stone extracted. In the operation, care must be taken not to injure the rectum, or the great arterial vessels, distributed to the perinæum.

A variety of the Lateral Apparatus, called by the French Appareil latéral, consisted in cutting into the bas-fond of the bladder, without touching the neck of that organ; but it was soon abandoned, on account of its inconveniences.

The method of Le Cat and of Pajola—Urethro-cysteo-aneurysmatotomia—consists in dividing the prostate in part only,—the enlargement of the wound being effected by a peculiar dilator.

The Bilateral Operation is founded on that of Celsus. It consists in making an incision posterior to the bulb of the urethra, and anterior to the anus, involving both sides of the perinæum by crossing the raphe at right angles: an incision is then made through the membranous part of the urethra, and the prostate may be cut bilaterally, either with the double lithotome of Dupuytren, or the prostatic bisector of Dr. Stevens, of New York.

5. Lithotomy by the Rectum, Proctocystotomia, Scetia recto-vesicalis, (F.) Taille par la Rectum, Taille postérieure, T. Recto-vesicale. This was proposed by Vegetius in the 16th century; but it was never noticed until M. Sanson, in the year 1817, attracted attention to it; since which time it has been successfully performed in many instances. It consists in penetrating the bladder through the paries corresponding with the rectum, by first cutting the sphincter ani and rectum about the root of the penis, and penetrating the bladder by the neck of that organ, dividing the prostate,—or by its bis-fund.

Lithotomy in women, from the shortness of the urethra, is a comparatively insignificant operation.

LITHOTOMY BY THE RECTUM, see Lithotomy—1. by the Vagina, see Lithotomy.

LITHOTRESIS, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSIS, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSY, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPTORS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITES, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITEURS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITOR, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITY, Lithotritia, Lithotryp'sy, Lithotripsy, Lithotrip'sy, Lithotriypsis, Lithotres'sis, Lithotripsis, Lithoceno'sis, Lithoclas'tia, Lithoprini'e, Lithoprisis, (F.) Broïement de la Pierre, from λίθος, 'a stone,' and τριβω, 'I break.' The operation of breaking, bruising or sawing the stone in the bladder. It has been performed, of late years, with success, by French, and, after them, by English and American surgeons. The instruments employed for this purpose are called, in the abstract, Lithotrites, Lithotriteurs, Lithotritors, Lithotriptors, Lithotryptors, Lithotrype'tæ and Lithoclats. The most celebrated are those of Civiale, Jacobson, Heurteloup and Weiss. See Brise-Pierre articulé; and Perceur à Marteau.

LITHOTRYPÆ, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOXIDURIA, from λίθος, 'a stone,' οξίς, and ουρον, 'urine.' The discharge of urine containing lithic or xanthic oxide.

LITHURIA, Lithin'ria, Lithure'sis, Lithourorrhée (Piorry); from λίθος, 'a stone,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Lithic, or Lithic Acid, Diathesis. The condition of the system and of the urine in which deposits of lithic acid and the lithates—Lithic sediments or concretions—take place in the urine. See Urine.

LITHUS, Calculus.

LITMUS, Lichen roccella.

LITRA, Pound.

LITRE, Litra. A measure containing a cubed decimètre, which is equal nearly to 2.1135 pints. The ancients gave the name litra, λίτρα, to a measure capable of containing 16 ounces of liquid.

LITSÆA CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—1. Piperita, Piper cubeba.

LITTLE-WALE, Lithospermum officinale.

LITUS, Liniment.

LIVÊCHE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LIVER, Sax. līpan, Hepar, Jecur, Jec'ivus, (F.) Foie. The liver is the largest gland in the body. It is an azygous organ; unsymmetrical; very heavy; and of a brownish-red colour; occupying the whole of the right hypochondrium, and a part of the epigastrium. Above, it corresponds to the diaphragm; below, to the stomach, transverse colon, and right kidney; behind, to the vertebral column, aorta, and vena cava; and before, to the base of the chest. Its upper surface is convex; the lower, irregularly convex and concave, so that anatomists have divided the organ into three lobes,—a large or right or colic lobe;—a lesser lobe, lobule, or inferior lobe, the Lob'ulus Spige'lii,—and a middle or left lobe. At its inferior surface, are observed:—1. A Sulcus or Furrow or Fissure, called horizontal or longitudinal or great fissure, Fossa Umbilic'al'is, (F.) Sillon horizontal, longitudinal ou de la veine ombilic'ale, Sulcus antero-posterior Jec'oris seu horizontal'is Jec'oris seu longitudinal'is Jecoris seu sinu'ster Jecoris seu Umbilic'al'is, which lodges, in the fetus, the umbilical vein and ductus venosus. 2. The Principal Fissure, termed Sulcus Transversus, Fossa transver'sa, Transverse fossa, Sinus Port'rum, Porta, F. seu Munus Jec'oris seu Hepatis Fossa or Fissure of the Vena porta, Portal

Fiss'ure or Fossa, (F.) Sillon transversal ou de la veine porte, which receives the sinus of the vena porta. 3. The Fissure of the Vena Cava inferior, Sillon de la veine cave inférieure, situate at the posterior margin of the organ, and lodging the vena cava inferior. 4. The Lobulus Spige'lii, or posterior portal eminence. 5. The anterior portal eminence, Aur'ga seu Lobulus anon'ymus. 6. Depressions corresponding to the upper surface of the stomach, gall-bladder, arch of the colon, right kidney, &c. Continued from the fossa umbilicalis is a small fossa, called Fossa Duct'is Venuosi, between the left lobe and Lobulus Spigelii. The posterior margin of the liver is very thick; much more so than the anterior. The liver is surrounded by a serous or peritoneal covering, which forms for it a suspensory or broad ligament and two lateral and triangular ligaments. See Falx. The blood-vessels of the liver are very numerous. The hepatic artery and vena porta furnish it with the blood necessary for its nutrition and the secretion of bile. The hepatic veins convey away the blood, which has served those purposes. The lymphatic vessels are very numerous; some being superficial; others deep-seated. The nerves are, also, numerous, and proceed from the pneumogastric, diaphragmatic, and from the hepatic plexuses.

The intimate structure of the parenchyma of the liver has been well studied. When cut, it presents a porous appearance, owing to the division of a multitude of small vessels. When torn, it seems formed of granulations:—the intimate structure of which has given rise to many hypotheses. In these granulations are contained the radicles of the excretory ducts of the bile; the union of which constitutes the hepatic duct. According to Mr. Kiernan, the intimate structure consists of a number of lobules—hepatic lobules, hepatic islets—composed of intralobular or hepatic veins, which convey the blood back that has been inservient to the secretion of bile. The interlobular plexus of veins is formed by branches of the vena porta, which contain both the blood of the vena porta and of the hepatic artery; both of which, according to Mr. Kiernan, furnish the pabulum of the biliary secretion. The biliary ducts form likewise an interlobular plexus, having an arrangement similar to that of the interlobular veins. Mr. Kiernan's views are embraced by many anatomists; but are denied by some.

The liver is the only organ, which, independently of the red blood carried to it by the hepatic artery, receives black blood by the vena porta. The general opinion is, that the vena porta is the fluid which furnishes bile, whilst that of the artery affords blood for the nutrition of the liver. It is probable, however, that bile is secreted from the blood of the latter vessel. Besides bile the liver forms sugar, and is a great assimilating organ.

The liver is liable to a number of diseases. The principal are—Hepati'tis or inflammation, cancer, biliary calculi, encysted and other tumours or tubercles, hydatids, &c.; and it has, at times, been the fashion to refer to it as the cause of symptoms with which it is no wise connected.

LIVER, Hepar. Under this name the ancients designated several substances, having a brownish colour analogous to that of the liver; and composed of sulphur and some other body. See Potassæ Sulphuretum, Liver of Sulphur.

LIVER of Antimony is the semi-vitreous sulphuret, &c.

LIVER DISEASE, Hepatopathia—1. Fatty, Adiposis hepatica—1. Gin, L. nutmeg—1. Gin-drinkers', L. nutmeg—1. Granulated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER-GROWN, Tu'mido jec'oræ præ'ditus. Having a large liver.

LIVER, HOBNAIL, Cirrhosis of the liver—l. Mammillated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER, NUTMEG, Hepar variegatum, Tu'beriform liver. An appearance of the liver when cut across, resembling that of the section of a nutmeg, Myristicatio hepatis, supposed by some to be the result of intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks; but occurring under other causes. The terms whisky liver, gin-drinkers' liver, and gin liver, occasionally applied to it, are, consequently, not distinctive.

LIVER SPOT, Chloasma.

LIVER, TUBERCULATED, Cirrhosis of the liver—l. Tuberiform, l. nutmeg.

LIVER WEED, Hepatica triloba.

LIVER, WHISKY, Liver, nutmeg.

LIVER WORT, Hepatica triloba, Marchantia polymorpha—l. Wort, ground, ash-coloured, Lichen caninus—l. Wort, Iceland, Lichen Islandicus—l. Wort, noble, Hepatica triloba.

LIVIDUS MUSCULUS, Pectinalis.

LIVOR, Sanguillation—l. Einortualis, see Sanguillation—l. Sanguineus, see Ecehymoma.

LIVRET, Omasum.

LIXIVIA TARTARIZATA, Potassæ tartras—l. Vitriolata, Potassæ sulphas—l. Vitriolata sulphurea, Potassæ sulphas cum sulphure.

LIXIVLE seu KALICUM ACETAS, Potassæ acetas.

LIXIVIAL, Lixivio'sus, from lixivium, 'lee.' (F.) Lixivial, Lixivieux. An ancient term for salts obtained by washing vegetable ashes,—such as the fixed alkalies.

LIXIVIA'TION, Elizivia'tion, Lixivia'tio, Same etymon. An operation which consists in washing wood-ashes with water, so as to dissolve the soluble parts. The filtered liquor is the lee.

LIXIVIUM, Liziv'io, Con'io, Lee, Ley, Lye, (F.) Lessive. Any solution containing potassa or soda—Sol lixivio'sum—in excess; from lix, 'lye.'

LIXIVUS CINIS, Potash of commerce.

LIZARD, Lacer'tis, Lacer'tus, said to be so called in consequence of its limbs resembling the arms (lacer'tis) of man [?]. Saura, Saurus, (F.) Lézard. Lizards were formerly employed in medicine as sudorifics; and were, at one time, extolled in syphilis, cutaneous affections, and in cancer.

LIZARD'S TAIL, Saururus cernuus.

LOADED, see Enduit.

LOADSTONE, Magnet.

LOATHING, Disgust.

LOBARIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus—l. Pulmonaria, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Saxatilis, Lichen Saxatilis.

LOBE, Lobus. A round, projecting part of an organ. The liver, lungs, and brain, for example, have lobes.

LOBE OF THE EAR, Lob'ule of the Ear, is a soft, rounded prominence, which terminates the circumference of the pavilion inferiorly, and which is pierced in those who wear rings.

The under surface of the brain is divided into two anterior, two lateral, two posterior, and two intermediate lobes or processes. These Chaussier calls lobules of the brain: the cerebral hemispheres he terms lobes.

LOBE, BIVENTRAL. A wedge-shaped lobe of the cerebellum, situate behind the amygdala.

LOBE DOUDÉNAL, Lobulus Spigelii—l. Pancréatique, Lobulus Spigelii—l. Petit du foie, Lobulus Spigelii—l. de Spigel, Lobulus Spigelii.

LOBELIA, BLUE, L. syphilitica.

LOBELIA CARDINALIS, Lobelia coccin'ea, Trachelium Americ'canum, Cardinal Plant, Cardinal Flower, Scarlet Lobelia. Ord. Lobeliaceæ. This species is indigenous in the United States. It blooms in autumn, having beautiful carmine flowers. The root is a reputed anthelmintic with the Indians.

LOBELIA COCCINEA, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA INFLATA, Indian or Wild Tobacco, Puke Weed, Asthma Weed, Eyebricht, Emetic Weed, Lobe'lia (Ph. U. S.). The prominent virtues of this American plant are those of an emetic. In smaller doses it is sedative, and has been given as a pectoral in croup, asthma, &c. It is, also, sudorific and cathartic, and is an acronarcotic poison. Twenty grains act as an emetic.

LOBELIA, PALESPIKED, L. spicata.

LOBELIA PINIFOLIA. A South African plant, the root of which is exciting and diaphoretic. A decoction of it is sometimes used in the Cape Colony as a domestic remedy in cutaneous affections, chronic rheumatism, and gout.

LOBELIA, SCARLET, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA SPICATA, Palespiked Lobelia; indigenous: is a diuretic.

LOBELIA SYPHILITICA, L. reflex'a, Ranunculus Virginia'nus, Ranuncium Syphiliticum, Blue Lobelia, Blue Cardinal Flower. The root of this plant, which is indigenous in the United States, is an emetic and drastic cathartic. It has been used in syphilis; hence its name. The mode of preparing it is to boil $\frac{3}{4}$ ss of the dried root in Oxij of water, until the fluid is reduced to Oviij. Dose, Oss.

LOBES BIJUMEAUX, Quadrigena tubercula—l. Cerebral, see Lobe.

LOBES OF THE LIVER, Pinnæ seu Lobi seu Pin'nulæ He'patia. See Lobule.

LOBES, OPTIC, Quadrigena tubercula—l. Optiques, Quadrigena tubercula.

LOBI HEPATIS, Lobes of the liver—l. Pulmonum, see Pulmo.

LOB'ULAR, Lobula'ris. Same etymon as Lobule. Relating to or belonging to a lobule:—as lobular pneumonia, (F.) Pneumonie lobulaire, P. mamelonée, P. disséminée. Pneumonia anatomically characterized by nuclei of red or gray hepatization disseminated in variable numbers in one or both lungs.

LOBULAR BILIARY PLEXUS. The plexus formed of lobular hepatic duets, which are derived chiefly from the interlobular. This plexus forms the principal part of the substance of the lobule.

LOBULAR VENOUS PLEXUS. The plexus interposed between the interlobular portal veins, and the intralobular hepatic vein.

LOB'ULE, Lob'ulus, diminutive of lobus, 'a lobe.' A little lobe. Mr. Kiernan uses the term lobule, for the acinus of the liver of many anatomists.

LOBULI, see Lobulus—l. Pulmonales, see Pulmo.

LOBULUS ACCESSORIUS ANTERIOR QUADRATUS, L. anonymus.

LOBULUS seu LOBUS ANON'YMUS, L. accessorius anterior quadratus, L. quadratus, (F.) Éminence porte antérieure. This is situate in the liver between the passage for the round ligament and the gall-bladder, and is less prominent, but broader, than the Lobulus caudatus. From the lobulus anonymus a bridge runs across the passage for the round ligament. It is called Pons seu Isthmus he'patia.

LOBULUS seu LOBUS CAUDA'TUS, Processus caudatus. This is merely the root or one of the angles of the lobulus Spigelii, advancing towards the middle of the lower side of the great lobe, and representing a kind of tail. Also, the termination of the helix and anthelix of the ear, which is separated from the concha by an extensive fissure.

LOBULUS CENTRA'LIS. A small lobule or prominence of the superior vermiform process of the cerebellum, situate in the incisura anterior.

LOBULUS NASI, see Nasus—1. Pneumogasticus, Flocculus—1. Posterior, L. Spigelii—1. Quadratus, L. anonyms—1. Renum, Ferrein, pyramid of.

LOBULUS seu LOBUS SPIGE'LII, L. posterior seu posticus papillatus, (F.) Éminence porte postérieure, Lobule ou Petit lobe du foie, Lobe de Spiegel ou duodécal ou pancréatique, is situate near the spine, upon the left side of the great lobe of the liver, and is of a pyramidal shape, projecting, like a nipple, between the cardia and vena cava, at the small curvature of the stomach.

LOBUS, Lobe, see Lobulus—1. Quadrangularis, see Cerebellum—1. Semilunaris, see Cerebellum—1. Superior anterior, see Cerebellum—1. Superior posterior, see Cerebellum.

LOCAL, Localis, Top'icus, Mer'icus, Partia'lis, Top'ical, (F.) Locale, Top'ique. An affection is called local—Morbus Localis.—when confined to a part, without implicating the general system; or, at all events, only secondarily. Local is thus opposed to general. A local or topical application is one used externally. See Topical.

LOCH, Looch.

LOCHADES, see Sclerotic.

LOCHA or LO'CHIA, Purgamen'ta Puerper'rii seu Uteri, Purgatio puerper'rii, Lyma, from λοχος, 'a woman in childbed,' λοχεια, 'parturition;' (F.) Suites de couches, Vidanges. The cleansings. A sero-sanguineous discharge following delivery. During the first two or three days, it is bloody; but afterwards becomes green-coloured,—green waters—and exhales a disagreeable and peculiar odour. The lochia, in different stages, have received the names Lochia cruenta, L. serosa and L. alba seu mucosa seu lactea. The duration, quantity, and character of the discharge vary according to numerous circumstances. It flows from the part of the uterus which formed a medium of communication between the mother and fœtus, and continues, usually, from 14 to 21 days. See Parturition.

LOCHIOCELIITIS, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIODOCHIUM, Lochodochium.

LOCHIOPIRA, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIORRHAG'IA, from loch'ia, and ρρηγνυμι, 'I make an irruption.' An immoderate flow of the lochia. Hemorrhage from the uterus in the child-bed state.

LOCHIORRHÆ'A, from loch'ia, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Discharge or immoderate discharge of the lochia.

LOCHIORUM RETENTIO, Ischloch'ia.

LOCHIOSCHESIS, Ischloch'ia.

LOCHIOCH, Looch.

LOCHODOCHI'UM, Lochiodochi'um, from λοχος, 'a female in childbed,' and δεχομαι, 'I receive.' An institution for the reception of pregnant and childbed females. A Lying-in-hospital.

LOCHOMETRITIS, see Metritis.

LOCHOMETROPHLEBITIS, see Phlebitis.

LOCHOÏPHORITIS, see Oaritis.

LOCHOPERITONITIS, see Peritonitis.

LOCHOS, Puerpera.

LOCI, Uterus—1. Muliebres, Uterus, Vulva.

LOCK HOSPITAL. A term of uncertain origin, generally given to venereal hospitals in Great Britain.

LOCKED JAW, Trismus.

LOCKING, Coxofemorale articulation.

LOCOMOTILITY, see Locomotion.

LOCOMOTION, Locomot'io, from locus, 'a place,' and movere, motum, 'to move.' An action peculiar to animal bodies, by which they transport themselves from place to place. It, as well as muscula'tion, has also been used for the function of animal movements. The faculty is sometimes called Locomotiv'ity and Locomotil'ity.

LOCOMOTION OF AN ARTERY, is the movement produced in the vessel with a curvature, by the impulse of the blood sent from the heart, which tends to straighten the artery, and causes the movement in question.

LOCOMOTIVITY, see Locomotion.

LOCULAMENTA COLI, see Colon.

LOCUS CINEREUS, Substantia ferruginea.

LOCUS NIGER, see Peduncles of the Brain.

LOCUS PERFORA'TUS ANTI'CUS seu ANTE'RIOR.

A triangular flat surface of the brain, which corresponds to the posterior extremity of each olfactory process in front of the optic tract, and near the entrance of the fissure of Sylvius. Substantia seu Lam'ina perforata anterior.

LOCUS PERFORATUS POSTICUS, see Tarini pons.

LOCUST, BLACK, Robinia Pseudo-acacia.

LOCUST EATERS, Acriolophagi—1. Plant, Cassia Marilandica—1. Tree, Robinia Pseudo-acacia.

LOCUST, YELLOW, Cladrastis tinctoria.

LODGED, Wedged.

LODOICEA, see Coco of the Maldives.

LOECHE, MINERAL WATERS OF, Leuk, mineral waters of.

LËME, Plague.

LËMIA, Plague.

LËMICUM, see Lœmology.

LËMOCHOLOSIS, Fever, yellow.

LËMOCOMI'UM, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and κομω, 'I take care of.' An hospital for those affected with plague.

LËMOGRAPHY, Loimography.

LËMOLOGI'UM, see Lœmology.

LËMOL'OGY, Lœmolog'ia, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of plague and pestilential diseases. A treatise on the same,—Lœ'micem, Lœmolog'ium.

LËMOPHTHALMIA, see Ophthalmia.

LËMOPYRA, Plague.

LËMOS, Plague.

LOGADES, Sclerotic.

LOGADITIS, Sclerotitis.

LOGIA'TROS, Logia'ter; from λογος, 'a word,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' In the bad sense, a physician without experience; a mere theorist. In the good sense, a rational physician; one who treats disease according to theoretical or scientific principles.

LOGONEURO'SES, from λογος, 'mind, reason,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Diseases of the mental activity.—Romberg.

LOGOS, Reason.

LOGWOOD, Hæmatoxylon Campechianum.

LOG'Y, λογος, 'a description.' A suffix denoting 'a treatise or description.' Hence, Angiology and Neurology, &c.

LOHCH, Looch.

LOIMCHOLOSIS, Fever, yellow.

LOIMOGRAPHY, Loimograph'ia, Lœmography, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' A description of the plague and pestilential diseases.

LOIMOLOGY, Lœmology.

LOIMOS, Plague.

LOINS, Lumbi.

LOISELEURIA PROCUMBENS, Azulea procumbens; indigenous; Order, Ericaceæ; has some reputation as an astringent.

LOLIACEUM RADICE REPENTE, Triticum repens.

LOLIUM ANNULUM, L. temulentum.

LOLIUM TEMULENTUM, L. annuum, Crepida temulentata, Bromus temulentus, Darnel, (Prov.) Cockgrass, Jun, (F.) Herbe d'Iroquoie. A species of the genus Lolium, (F.) Iovine; Ord. Gramineæ; Sex. Syst. Triandria digynia, which has decidedly poisonous properties; occasioning, when mixed in bread or beer, intoxication, vertigo, nausea, and vomiting.

LOMBAIKE, Luubar.

LOMBRICAUX, Lumbricales.

LOMBRICOÏDE, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LOMCHADES, see Sclerotis.

LOCHADITIS, Sclerotitis.

LOCHITIS, Polypodium filix mas.

LONG, Longus, Macros. That which is much greater in length than in breadth; as the long bones. The epithet is, also, applied to several muscles, to distinguish them from others of similar function, when the latter are shorter. We say, for instance, long flexors, and long extensors, in opposition to short flexors, and short extensors.

LONG DU COU, Longus colli—l. du Dos, Longissimus dorsi.

LONGEVUS, Macrobiotic.

LONGANON, Rectum.

LONGAON, Rectum.

LONGAS, Rectum.

LONGEVITY, Longævitæ, from longus, 'long,' and ævum, 'age,' Macrobiosis, Macrobioses. The prolongation of existence to an advanced age. Haller collected examples of more than one thousand centenarians. He had knowledge of sixty-two persons aged from 110 to 120 years; of twenty-nine, from 120 to 130 years; and of fifteen, who had attained from 130 to 140 years. Beyond this advanced age, examples of longevity are much more rare and less sufficiently attested.

The following list of instances of very advanced ages has been given:

	Lived.	Age.
Apollonius of Tyana.....	A. D.	99...130
St. Patrick.....		491...122
Attila.....		500...124
Llywarch Hen.....		500...150
St. Coemgen.....		618...120
Piastus, King of Poland.....		861...120
Thomas Parr.....		1635...152
Henry Jenkins.....		1670...169
Countess of Desmond.....		1612...145
Thomas Damne.....		1648...154
Peter Torten.....		1724...185
Margaret Patten.....		1739...137
John Rovin and wife.....		1741...172 and 164
St. Monagh or Kentigen.....		1781...185

Longevity also means length or duration of life, (F.) Durée de la vie. The mean age at death, (F.) Vie moyenne, of different classes and professions enables an estimate to be formed of the expectation or value of life in each.

LONGING, Malacia.

LONGISSIMUS, superlative of longus, 'long,' Longest. A term applied to parts, which are very long in their relation to others.

LONGISSIMUS DORSI, Semi-spina (F.)

Lombo-dorso-trachelien, Portion costo-trachelienne du sacro-spinal (Ch.), Long dorsal, Long du dos, is situate vertically at the posterior part of the trunk, and fills, in a great measure, the vertebral furrows. It is thick and almost square below; thin and pointed above. It is attached to the posterior surface of the sacrum, to the transverso processes of all the lumbar and dorsal vertebrae, and to the inferior margin of the last 7 or 8 ribs. It maintains the vertebral column in a straight position; straightens it when bent forwards, and can even carry it back. It also assists in the rotatory motion of the trunk.

LONGISSIMUS FEMORIS, Sartorius—l. Oculi, Obliquus superior oculi.

LONG-SIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

LONGUS, Long.

LONGUS COLLI, (F.) Pré-dorso-cervical, Pré-dorso-atloïdien, (Ch.), Long du cou. This muscle is situate at the anterior and superior part of the vertebral column. It is long, flat, and broader at its middle than at its extremities, which are pointed. It is attached to the anterior surface of the bodies of the first three dorsal and last six cervical vertebrae; to the intervertebral ligaments; to the anterior edge of the transverse processes of the last five cervical vertebrae; and to the tubercle on the anterior arch of the first. This muscle bends the cervical vertebrae upon each other and upon the dorsal vertebrae. If the upper portion acts on one side only, it occasions the rotation of the atlas on the vertebra dentata; and, consequently, of the head on the neck.

LONGICERA GERMANICA, L. Perilymenum—l. Marilandica, Spigelia Marilandica.

LONGICÆRA PERILYMENUM, L. Germanica, Perilymenum, P. vulgare, Caprifolium, C. Perilymenum seu sylbativum seu distinctum, Common Woodbine, Honeysuckle, (Prov.) Snekling, (F.) Chèvre-feuille. This common plant is slightly astringent and tonic, and was formerly much used in gargles.

LONGICÆRA SEMPERVIRENS, Caprifolium sempervirens, Scarlet or Trumpet Honeysuckle. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ; indigenus. A syrup of the leaves is said to have been given in asthma and in amygdalitis. [?]

LONK, Coxofemoral articulation.

LOOCH, Lahoch, Loch, Lochuch, Looch, of Arabic extraction. A linctus. See Elegma and Electos.

LOOCH ABSQUÈ EMULSIONÈ PARATUM, Looch préparé sans émulsion; Looch prepared without emulsion. (Pulv. g. trag. gr. xvj—gr. xxx, ol. amygd. dulc. ℥ss, sacchar. ℥ij, aq.æ ℥iij, aq.æ flor. aurant. ℥ij. Mix by rubbing in a marble mortar.) Demulent.

LOOCH ALBUM, L. amygdalinum, Linctus albus seu amygdalinus seu communis, Elegma album seu gummo-oleosum, (F.) Looch blanc, L. b. amygdalin, L. b. pectoral. (Amygd. dulc. ℥ss, amygd. amar. No. ij, sacchar. alb. ℥iv. Make an emulsion by gradually adding ℥iv of water. Then take pulv. tragacanth. gr. xvj. ol. amygd. dulc. recent. ℥ss, succh. ℥ij. Add the almond milk gradually to this, and afterwards aq. flor. aurant. ℥ij. Ph. P.) It is demulcent and pectoral.

LOOCH EX OVO, L. pectoralè leniens, Potio seu emulsio seu mixtura leniens seu oleosa, Looch of Egg, (F.) Looch d'œuf, Looch rouge, Emulsion huileuse, Mixture calmante, Potion pectorale, Lait adoucissant. (Vitell. ori. recent. ℥ss. ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iss, syrup. althææ. ℥j. Rub in a mortar, and add by degrees, aq. flor. aurant. ℥j. aq. papav. rhæad. ℥ij. Ph. P.) Virtues the same as the preceding.

LOOCH VIRIDĒ, L. cum crocē et pista'ciis, (F.)
Looch vert. (Syrup. Violar. ʒj, tinct. croci grt. xx., aquē ʒiv. Mix, and add pistacia semin. sic. ʒvj. Ph. P.) Virtues like the last.

LOOK, Looch — l. d'Œuf, Looch ex ovo — l. Préparé sans émulsion, Looch absque emulsione paratum.

LOOSE STRIFE, CREEPING, Lysimachia nummularia — l. s. Four-leaved, Lysimachia quadrifolia.

LOOSENESS, Diarrhœa — l. of the Teeth, Odontoseisis.

LOPEZ RADIX, Radix lopeziana seu Indica lopeziana. The root of an unknown Indian tree, not possessed of any remarkable smell or taste, or of any appearance of resinous matter. It has been extolled, notwithstanding, in cases of colliquative diarrhœa. Gaubius compares its action to that of simarouba, but thinks it more efficacious.

LOPHADIA, Lophia.

LOPHIA, Lophadia, λοφία. The upper part of the neck. The first vertebra of the back — Vertebra dorsi prima. — Gorræus.

LOPIMA, Fagus castanea.

LOQUAC'ITY, Garra'litus; from loquor, 'I speak. (F.) Babillement. The act of speaking with volubility. It is sometimes a symptom of disease, and is observable in hysteria, &c.

LORDO'SIS, Lordo'ma, from λοδος, 'curved,' 'bent.' Rependa'tio, Repan'ditas. A name given to curvatures of the bones in general; and particularly to that of the vertebral column forwards; Spina dorsi intror'sum flexa, Emprosthoeyrto'ma. This gives rise to the projection of the sternum called chicken-breasted or pigeon-breasted. Pectus carina'tum, Pig'ean breast, narrow chest.

LORIND MATRI'CIS, Epilep'sia uteri'na, Convulsi'vus ute'ri morbus, A barbarous name given to a pretended epilepsy of the womb.

LORIPES, see Kyllosis.

LORUS, Hydrargyrum.

LOT, Urine.

LOTA MOLVA, see Oleum jecoris aselli — l. Vulgaris, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

LOTIO, Enema, Lotion — l. Cupri sulphatis camphorata, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates — l. Rubra, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates.

LOTIO RUBRA, Red wash, (Hydrarg. chlorid. corrosiv. gr. xviii; H. sulphureti rubr. gr. ix; Creasot. ʒ vi; Aquæ f ʒ viij. May be used in the proportion of f ʒj; to from f ʒi to f ʒiij of water; like the yellow wash.

LOTIO SAPONACEA, see Sapo.

LOT'ION, Lo'tio, Lotu'ra, from lavare lotum, 'to wash.' (F.) Hydrolotif, Hydrolé. A fluid external application. Lotions are ordinarily applied by wetting linen in them and keeping it on the part affected.

LOTION, BARLOW'S, Lotion of Sulphuret of potassi'um. (Potassi sulphur. ʒiij; Sapon. ʒiiss; Aq. Calcis, f ʒ viiss; alcohol. dilut. f ʒij. M.) Used in various chronic cutaneous diseases.

LOTION, CAMPHORATED, OF BATES, Bates camphorated water, Lo'tio cupri sulphatis camphorata, Lo'tio rubra, Red wash. (Cupri sulphat. ʒij; Bol. rubr. ʒij; Camphor. ʒss; Aq. bullient. Oij. Strain through linen. f ʒij of this, added to f ʒiv of water, forms Bates's Collyrium, Collyri'um Bateanum, which may also be made extemporaneously as follows: — Cupri sulphat. gr. viij; bol. gr. viij; Camphor. gr. ij; Aq. bullient. f ʒ viij. Mix and filter.

LOTION, FEBURE'S. A cancer remedy, which consisted of arsenic, gr. x; water, Oj; extract of hemlock, ʒj; Liquor Plumbi subacetatis, f ʒiij; lardatum, f ʒj.

LOTION, GOWLAND'S. An empirical preparation. (Bitter almonds, ʒj; sugar, ʒij; distilled water, Dij. Grind together, strain, and add corrosive sublimate, ʒij, previously ground with sp. vini rect. ʒij.) Used in obstinate eruptions.

LOTION, GRANVILLE'S COUNTER-IRRITANT, Granville's Lotion, Granville's antid'ynous lotion. Of this lotion, Dr. Granville gives two forms — a milder, and a stronger. The milder is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. f ʒj; Sp. Rosmarin. f ʒvj; Tinct. camphor. f ʒij, M.

The stronger is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. f ʒx; Spir. Rosmar. f ʒss; Tinct. camphor. f ʒij, M.

The stronger lotion vesicates rapidly. A piece of cotton or linen folded six or seven times, or a piece of thick flannel may be imbued with them, and laid for a few minutes on the part to be irritated.

The Dublin Pharmacopœia has a Linimentum Ammoniæ Compositum, Compound Liniment of Ammonia, which is a close imitation of Granville's Lotion.

LOTION, HANNAY'S, Preventive wash. This famous nostrum for the prevention of venereal infection, was nothing more than a solution of caustic potass.

LOTION, HYDROCYAN'IC, Lotio Ac'idi Hydrocyan'ici. (Hydrocyanic acid, f ʒiv; rectified spirit of wine, f ʒj; distilled water, f ʒxss.) Used with much success in impetigo, &c.

LOTION, STRUVE'S, FOR HOOPING-COUGH. (Antim. et Potass. tart. ʒj; Aquæ, ʒij. Add tinct. cantharid. ʒj.)

LOTIUM, Urine.

LOTURA, Lotion.

LOTUS SYLVESTRIS, Trifolium melilotus — l. Virginiana, Diospyros Virginiana.

LOUCHEMENT, Strabismus.

LOUCHES, see Strabismus.

LOUPE, Wen.

LOUSE, Pediculus.

LOUSINESS, Phtheiriasis.

LOUSY DISEASE, Phtheiriasis.

LOUTRON, Bath.

LOVAGE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LOVE, Eros, Amor, from Sax. lurian, (G.) lieben, 'to love.' (F.) Amour. A tender and elevated feeling, which attracts one sex to the other. Love is occasionally a cause of disease, especially of insanity.

LOVE APPLE PLANT, Solanum lycopersicum — l. Begot, Illegitimate — l. Child, Illegitimate — l. Pea, Abrus precatorius.

LOW SPIRITS, Hypochondriasis.

LOWER. TUBERCLE OF, Taber'culum Loweri. Anatomists have given this name to a small projection, the existence of which is by no means constant, and which is found in the sinus venosus, between the superior and inferior cava.

LOXAR'THRUS, Lozar'thrum, from λοξος, 'oblique,' and ἀρθρον, 'articulation.' (F.) Perversion de la tête des os et des muscles. A vicious deviation or direction of the joints, without spasm or luxation, — as in clubfoot.

LOXIAS, Torticollis.

LOXOPHTHALMUS, Strabismus.

LOZANGIA, Lozenge.

LOZENGIE, Tabella.

LUBRICANTIA, Demulcents, Emollients.

LUBRICUM CAPUT, Penis.

LUCCA, MINERAL WATERS AND CLIMATE OF. The baths and waters, near this ancient Italian city, have been long celebrated. They are thermal, and resemble, in properties, those of Plombières in France, and of Bath England. They contain carbonic acid, sulphates of aluminum, soda, magnesia, and iron. There are ten different sources, the temperature of which varies from 94° to 130° Fahr.

Lucca is much frequented in summer; partly on account of its mineral waters, but more on account of the coolness of the situation.

LUCID, Lu'cidus, from luceo, 'I shine.' In medicine, the word lucid is particularly applied to the intervals, Intervallo lucida, of apparent reason, which occur in mental alienation.

LUCIFER-MATCH-MAKERS' DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

LUCIFUGUS, from lux, lucis, 'light,' and fugere, 'to shun.' Photophobus, Photophob'icus. Dreading or avoiding the light.

LUCINA, Ilithyia.

LUCOMANIA, Lycanthropia.

LUCTUEUX (F.), Luctuosus, 'mournful.' Plintive. An epithet applied to the respiration—(F.) Respiration luctuense—when accompanied by moaning.

LUCUMA, (S.) A fruit which grows in the southern provinces of the coast of Peru, and the north of Chili. It is round; and the gray-brown husk encloses a fibrous, dry, yellow-coloured fruit with its kernel.—Tschudi.

LUCUMORIANUS, probably from lux, 'light,' and morari, 'to tarry.' Continuing for several days: hence, Dormit'io lueumoria'na. A morbid sleep persisting for several days.

LUDUS HELMONTII, L. Paracel'si, Fel terra. A calcareous stone, the precise nature not known, which was used by the ancients in calculous affections. The term was also applied to every species of calculous concretion occurring in the animal body.

LUD'S PARACELSI, L. Helmontii.

LUDWIGIA PALUSTRIS, L. nitida, Isnar'dia palustris, Water Purslane, Phthisis Weed. Order, Onagraceæ; indigenous. An infusion of the dried plant has been used as a pectoral in asthma and chronic cough.

LULLABY SPEECH, Lallation.

LUMBA'GO, from lumbi, 'the loins,' Arthro' gia lumbor'um, Lumbago seu Nephral'gia rheumat'ica, Rachirrh'ema, Rachiorrheu'ma, Rheumatism'us dorsalis, Osphyr'rheu'ma. Rheumatism affecting the lumbar region.

Lumbago psoud'ica, L. apostemat'osa, L. ab arthroc'acè. Pain in the loins from abscess. See Psôitis.

LUMBAGO A NISU, see Effort.

LUMBAR, Lumbor'is seu Lumbor'is, (F.) Lombaire. From lumbi, 'the loins.' Belonging or having reference to the loins.

LUMBAR ABSCESS, Psoas abscess, Apostema psout'icium, Abscess'us lumbor'um, Morbus psoud'icus. This abscess is so called from the matter being found on the side of the psoas muscle, or betwixt that and the iliacus internus. Between these muscles is a quantity of loose, areolar substance; and when an abscess takes place there, it can find no outlet except by a distant course. Generally, it descends along the psoas muscle, forming a swelling immediately beneath Poupert's ligament; at times, however, it extends down the thigh under the fascia. Severe hectic follows the bursting of the abscess, and often death. Its causes are, — serofula, injury to the loins, &c.

When, from the pain of the back continuing for some time, with other symptoms, the disense is suspected, caustics, or the moxa, applied opposite the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebra, may be recommended; and, when the abscess is ready for opening, it may be emptied by repeated discharges of the matter, through a small opening, made with a lancet, or small, lancet-pointed trocar. The medical treatment consists in supporting the system, under the great restorative efforts required of it.

LUMBAR ARTERIES are four or five in number on each side. They arise from the sides of the abdominal aorta, and pass behind the muscles situate in front of the lumbar portion of the spine, to gain the broad muscles of the abdomen. They give off, 1. Spinal branches. 2. Anterior, posterior, and external muscular branches.

LUMBAR NERVES are five in number, and issue from the vertebral column by the spinal foramina of the loins. The first lumbar nerve gives off three branches:—the external or ilio-aeotal; the middle or inguino-cantaneous, and the internal or infra-pubian. Along with the three pairs below it, it forms the lumbar plexus.

LUMBAR PLEXUS, Portio lombaire du plexus crural (Ch.), Plexus Lombo-abdominal. This plexus is formed by the union of the Rami communicantes of the anterior branches of the first four lumbar nerves. It is situate behind the psoas muscle, and before the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebrae. It furnishes, besides the branches which proceed from the first pair, several filaments, that are distributed to the psoas muscle, to the iliacus, the integuments, and glands of the groin; and three great branches—the crural, obturator, and lumbo-sacral.

LUMBAR REGION, Lumbi.

LUMBAR VEINS have an arrangement analogous to that of the arteries of the same name. They communicate with the vertebral sinuses, azygous veins, &c., and pass into the vena cava inferior.

LUMBARIS EXTERNUS, Quadratus lumbor'um—1. Internus, Psoas magnus.

LUMBI, The loin or loins, Lumbar region, (Old Eng.) Lende, (Sc.) Lendia; Re'gio lumbal'is, Lap'ara, Psoa, plural Psoæ, Osphy's, Re'ius, (F.) Lombes. The posterior regions of the abdomen, composed between the base of the chest and the pelvis. The parts which enter into the formation of the lumbar region are,—the skin; a considerable quantity of areolar texture; broad and strong aponeuroses;—the Latissimus Dorsii, Obliquus externus, and Obliquus internus abdominis, Transversalis abdominis, Quadratus lumborum, and the mass common to the Sacro-lumbalis, Longissimus dorsi, and Multifidus spinæ. These muscles surround the lumbar region of the vertebral column. The vessels, nerves, &c., of the loins, are called lumbar.

LUMBO-SACRAL. Belonging to the lumbar and sacral regions. (F.) Loubo-sacré. Bichat calls thus a very large nerve, given off from the anterior branch of the fifth lumbar pair, which descends into the pelvis before the sacrum to join the sciatic plexus.

LUMBRICALIS, Vermicula'ris. Resembling a lumbricus, or 'earthworm.' A name given to small muscles, (F.) Lombrieaux, met with in the palm of the hand and sole of the foot.

LUMBRICALES MANÛS, Fidicina'les, Flexor primi internodii digitorum manûs seu perforatus lumbrica'lis, (F.) Annuli-tendino-phalangiens, Palmi-phalangiens. Four small, fleshy, thin, round, long, fusiform fasciculi, situate in the palm of the hand, and distinguished into first, second, third, and fourth, counting from without to within. They arise from the tendons of the flexor communis digitorum, and are inserted at the outer and posterior side of the superior extremity of the first phalanges of the last four fingers. These muscles bend the fingers on the metacarpus, and fix the tendons of the flexor digitorum communis.

LUMBRICALES PEDIS, (F.) Planti-tendino-phalangiens, Planti-sous-phalangiens, (Ch.) They are analogous to those of the hand in form, number, and arrangement. They increase the flexion of the toes, and draw them inwards.

LUMBRICUS, Ascaris lumbricoides—1. Latus, Bothriocephalus latus, Tænia solium—1. Teres hominis, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LUMBUS VENERIS, Achillea millefolium.

LUMEN, Light, Pupil—1. Constans, Phosphorus.

LUMIÈRE, Light.

LUMINOSITY, Phosphorescence.

LUNA, Argentum, Moon—1. Albini, Sciatic notch, lesser—1. Imperfecta, Bismuth—1. Potabilis, Argenti nitrus.

LUNACY, see Lunatic.

LUNAR, Lunatic.

LUNARÈ OS, Os semilunârè. The second bone in the upper row of the carpus.

LUNARIA, Menses.

LUNARIA REDIVIVA, Leucoïum, Bulbonach, Satin, Honesty. Said, by Ray, to be a warm diuretic.

LUNARIS, Lunatic.

LUNATIC, Lunaticus, Lunaticus, Lunaticus, Lunar, from luna, 'the moon.' Relating to the moon. An epithet given to diseases which are supposed to appear at certain phases of the moon, or to those who are affected by them. The term lunatic (Moon'ed, Moonstruck, Selenoble'tus), is restricted to one labouring under lunacy or mental alienation, Demen'tia accidentalis seu adventitia, that is, under any form unsoundness of mind, except idiocy. In law, a lunatic is one who has had an understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident, has lost the use of his reason, and become non compos mentis or non compos.

LUNATICUS, Epileptic, Lunatic, Somnambulist.

LUNATISMUS, Somnambulism.

LUNE, Moon—1. d'Eau, Nymphæa alba.

LUNELLA, Hypopyon.

LUNES, Menses.

LUNETTES ORDINAIRES, Spectacles.

LUNG, Pulmo—1. Black, of coal miners, Anthraxosis—1. Cancer of the, Phthisis, cancerous.

LUNG FEVER, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

LUNG, PERFORATING ABSCESS OF THE. A purulent collection, which forms exterior to the lung, and afterwards perforates its tissue, so that it is evacuated through the bronchial tubes.

LUNG PROOF, Docimasia pulmonum—1. Wort, Pulmonaria—1. Wort, cow's, Verbascum nigrum—1. Wort, tree, Lichen pulmonarius.

LUNULA, Onyx—1. Unguim, see Nail—1. Scapulae, Notch, scapular.

LUNYIE, Lumbi.

LUNYIE-BANE, Ischion.

LUPIA, Eneystis, Wen—1. Junctura, Spina ventosa.

LUPINUS. Under this term the white lupin, Lupinus albus seu sativus, Ord. Leguminosæ, is meant, in some pharmacopœias. The seeds, which were much eaten in the days of Pliny and of Galen, are now neglected. The meal is, however, occasionally used as an anthelmintic, and as a cataplasma.

LUPOID, Lupoides, badly compounded from lupus, and eidos, 'resemblance.' Resembling, or having the character of, lupus.

LUPULINA, Lupulin, Lupulinic glands. A substance which exists in Humulus lupulus or hop. It is in the form of small, shining, yellowish grains, which cover the base of the scales of the hop; is pulverulent, and of an aromatic odour. When analyzed, it is found to contain resin, volatile oil in small quantity, and a bitter principle—Lupulite. It is aromatic and tonic, and—according to some—narcotic.

LUPULINIC GLANDS, Lupulina.

LUPULITE, see Lupulina.

LUPULUS, Humulus lupulus—1. Communis, Humulus lupulus—1. Salictarius, Humulus lupulus—1. Scandens, Humulus lupulus.

LUPUS, 'the wolf.' So named from its rapacity. Lupus exedens seu vorax seu devorans, Jacob's Ulcer, Ulcus Tuberculo'sum, Cancer seu Phymato'sis lupus, Noli ne tang'ere. Tubercular excrescences, with ragged, spreading ulcerations, chiefly about the alæ nasi, where they destroy the skin, &c., for some depth. Sometimes they appear in the cheek, circularly, or in the shape of a sort of ringworm, destroying the substance, and leaving a deep and deformed cicatrix. The knife or caustic should be used to separate the sound from the morbid parts. Arsenic has been given internally with advantage. See, also, Herpes exedens, and Lycoides.

LUPUS CANCRO'SUS, Cancer—1. Devorans, see Lupus—1. Exedens, Lupus—1. Varicosus, Nævi—1. Vorax, Herpes exedens, see Lupus.

LURCO, Glutton.

LURID, Luridus. Pale, yellow, sallow,—applied to the complexion.

LURKEY-DISH, Mentha pulegium.

LUROR, Paleness.

LUS, Sacrum.

LUSCIOSITAS, Luscitas, Myopia.

LUSCIOSUS, Borgue, Myops.

LUSCITAS, Lusciositas, Luscit'ies, Luscit'ion, from luscus, 'a blinkard,' lusciosus, 'dim-sighted.' Strabismus. The term has also been given to any case of obliquity in which the eye is fixed in an unnatural position.—Beer. The obliquity termed Cock-eye is a form of Luscitas.

LUSCITIES, Luscitas.

LUSCUS, Borgue.

LUSS, Pityriasis.

LUSTRAMENTUM, Cathartic.

LUT, Lute.

LUTE, Lutum ('mud'), Cæmentum. (F.) Lut. A composition employed either for closing apertures in a pharmaceutical instrument, or for covering the surface of retorts, tubes, &c., which have to support a great degree of heat. Lutes are composed differently, according to the object to be accomplished. Commonly, they are made of linseed meal and starch. The fat lute is formed of clay and drying oil. Sometimes, the white of egg and lime are used; and that which is employed for covering vessels, intended to be strongly heated, is made of clay, sifted sand, and water.

LUTEOLA, Reseda luteola.

LUTEUS, Yellow.

LUTRON, λουτρον. A bath. Also, an ophthalmic medicine.—Galen.

LUX, Light.

LUXATIO, Luxation.—I. Imperfecta, Sprain.

LUXATION, Eluxa'tion, from luxare, luxatum, 'to put out of place.' Disloc'a'tion, Olisthe'ma, Apoped'asis, Luxa'tio, Disloc'a'tio, Ec'clisis, Strem'ma, Luxatu'ra, Ectop'ia, Ecept'osis, Elap'sus, Lyp'ismus, Emo'tio, Ec'stasis, Exarthre'ma, E. Luxa'tio, Exarthro'ma, Exarthro'isis, Exo'isis, Ece'the'isis, Paratop'ia, Streblo'isis, Deloca'tio, Ezarticula'tio, (F.) Luxation, Dislocation, Débo'tement. A displacement of a part from its proper situation. A putting out of joint. A displacement of two or more bones, whose articular surfaces have lost, wholly, or in part, their natural connexion; either owing to external violence, (accidental luxation), or to disease of some of the parts about the joint (spontaneous luxation.) Luxation is complete when the bones have entirely lost their natural connexion; incomplete, when they partly preserve it; and compound, when a wound communicates with the luxated joint. The general indications of treatment, are;—1. To reduce the protruded bone to its original place. 2. To retain it in situ. 3. To obviate any attendant or consequent symptoms.

To reduce requires extension, counter-extension, and coaptation.

LUXEUIL. MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters, at the town of Luxeuil, at the foot of the Vosges, in the department of Haute Saône. Five springs are thermal, and two cold. They seem to contain carbonic acid, carbonates of iron and lime, and chloride of sodium; and are employed as aperient, tonic, and stimulant.

LUZ, Sacrum.

LYCAN'CHE, Lycan'chis, from lykos, 'a wolf,' and αγχο, 'I strangle.' Wolf quivvy, Wolf choak;—as Cynuche means Dog choak. Also, hydrophobia. See Lyeoïdes.

LYCANCHIS, Lyeanche.

LYCANTHROPE, see Lycanthropia.

LYCANTHROPIA, from lykos, 'a wolf,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' Lyc'a'on, Lusa'nia lupi'na, Lycan'onia. A variety of melancholy, in which the person believes himself to be changed into a wolf, and imitates the voice and habits of that animal. One so circumstanced is called a Lycanthrope, Lycanthropus.

LYCANTHROPUS, see Lycanthropia.

LYCAON, Lycanthropia.

LYCHNIDIUM, Biolychnium.

LYCHNIS GITHA'GO, Agrostem'ma githa'go, Coru cochle, Rose campion. A naturalized European plant. Ord. Caryophyllaceæ. The seeds are somewhat acrid, but not poisonous. They were, at one time, employed in cutaneous diseases, and in hemorrhage, and as a topical application to ulcers and fistule.

LYCHNIS OFFICINALIS, Saponaria.—I. Sylvestris, Saponaria.

LYCHNIUM, Biolychnium.

LYCIUM, Λυκίον. A medicinal substance, anciently obtained from the roots and branches of a thorny shrub growing in Lycia. It was astringent, and used in dysentery, ulcers of the gums, &c. By some, it has been considered to be the catechu.

LYCOÏDES, Lycoides, from lykos, 'a wolf,' and εϊδος, 'form.' Lupo sim'ilitis. An epithet for a species of cynanche, called, also, Lupus, and Strangu'lor, and absurdly attributed to excessive retention of sperm in its reservoirs and its passage into the blood [?].—Galen.

LYCOMANIA, Lyeanthropia.

LYCOPE DE VIRGINIE, Lycopus Virginicus.

LYCOPER'DON, from lykos, 'a wolf,' and περδω, 'I break wind.' L. Bovis'to seu Archiz'zon seu Globo'sum, Bovis'ta, Crep'itus Lupi, Fungus Chirurgo'rum, Puff-ball, Bull Fiats, Mol'tipuffs, (Prov.) Puff, (Sc.) Dei's suuff'boz, (F.) Vesseloup. Ord. Fungi. The puff-ball dries into a very fine, light brownish dust, which is sometimes used as a mechanical styptic to arrest hemorrhage.

LYCOPERDON ARMIZON, Lycoperdon—I. Cervinum, Elaphomyces granulatus—I. Globosum, Lycoperdon—I. Gulosorum, L. Tuber.

LYCOPERDON PROT'EUS, Common puff-ball. The fumes of this substance have been found to produce anæsthetization animals.

LYCOPER'DON TUBER, L. Gulosorum, Tuber Agricola'stunum seu Cibarium seu Gulosorum seu Nigrum, Tu'hera Terra, Trubs, Truffe, (pronounced troofte), (F.) Truffe. A fleshy, firm body, unknown in its mode of reproduction, which is found under ground, especially in different parts of France, Italy, &c., and is much esteemed as an aliment. It seems to belong to the champignons, and has a particular perfume. Aphrodisiac virtues have been ascribed to it.

A Virginia truffe is called Tuckaho.

LYCOPERSICUM ESCULENTUM, Solanum lycopersicum—I. Pomum amoris, Solanum lycopersicum—I. Tuberosum, Solanum tuberosum.

LYCOPODE, Lycopodium.

LYCOPODIUM, from lykos, 'a wolf,' and πους, ποδος, 'a foot.' L. Clava'tum seu Officina'le, Lepido'tis clava'ta, Cingula'ria, Muscus clava'tus, Club-moss, Wolf's-claw, Witch-meal. Ord. Lycopodiaceæ. This is the largest of the European mosses. The dust, which fills the capsules of its spikes, is very inflammable, and hence has been called Vegetable Sulphur;—and, also, Fer'na seu Puleis seu Semen seu Sulphur Lycopodii, (F.) Lycopode, Soufre végétal. It is used in France and in the United States to roll pills and boluses in; and in medicine is a desiccative, in the excretion to which infants are liable. It is collected chiefly in Switzerland and Germany for commerce.

LYCOPODIUM CLAVATUM, Lycopodium.

LYCOPODIUM COMPLANATUM, Common Club-moss, Ground Pine; indigenous; has the same properties as Lycopodium selago.

LYCOPODIUM OFFICINALE, L. clavatum—I. Recurvum, L. Selago.

LYCOPODIUM SELA'GO, L. Recur'cum, Plauan'tus fastigi'atus seu sel'go, Muscus erectus seu Catharticus, Sela'go, Upright Club-moss, Fir Club-moss, Upright Fir-moss. A decoction of this plant acts violently as an emetic and purgative: and was formerly, on this account, used as an abortive. It is also employed to kill vermin.

LYCOPUS, L. Virginicus seu uislo'rus seu pumila, Bayleweed, Water Bayle, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, (F.) Lycopoe de Virginie. This indigenous herb, Sc. Syst. Dian'tria Monogynia, Nat. Ord. Labiate, grows throughout the greater part of the United States. The whole herb is said to be slightly narcotic. It is given in infusion, (Lycop. ʒj; aq. fervent. Oj.)

LYCOPUS PUMILA, Lycopus.

LYCOPUS SIXA'TES, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, indigenous, has similar properties.

LYCOPUS UNIFLORUS, L. pumila—I. Virginicus, Lycopus.

LYCOREXIS, Fames lupina.

LYCOSA TARENTULA, see Tarantula.

LYCOSTOMA, Hyperoëchasma.

LYE, Lixivium, Ley — l. Dyspeptic, see Fuligokali — l. Medical, see Fuligokali — l. Tea, Physick's, see Fuligokali.

LYGISMUS, Luxation.

LYGODES, Singultus.

LYGMUS, Singultus.

LYGODES, Singultus.

LYING-IN STATE, Parturient state.

LYING-DOWN STATE, Parturient state.

LYMA, Lochia; from λωω, 'to wash,' also, filth or sordes, (to be washed away.) λυμα, Lymē.

LYME, Lyma.

LYMPH, Lympha, from λυμφη, 'water,' by changing v into λ. White blood, Lympha Nutritiva. A name given to the fluid contained in the lymphatic vessels and thoracic duct of animals, which have been made to fast for 24 hours. According to Chevreul, the lymph of the dog contains water, fibrin, albumen, common salt, subcarbonate of soda, phosphates of lime and magnesia, and carbonate of lime. The properties and composition of lymph vary somewhat according to the part whence the lymphatic vessels obtain it. Generally, it is under the form of a transparent, slightly alkaline fluid, sometimes of a madder-red or yellowish colour,—of a spermatic odour, and saline taste; soluble in water,—the solution becoming turbid, when mixed with alcohol. When left to itself, it coagulates. The clot or solid portion becomes of a scarlet red, if put in contact with oxygen; and of a purple red, if placed in carbonic acid.

Like the blood, the lymph consists of a fluid—Liquor lymphæ—in which lymph corpuscles or globules are suspended.

The lymph is probably the product of internal absorption in different parts of the body: it then flows along the lymphatic vessels, uniting with the chyle, and is poured with it into the veins; thus becoming one of the materials of the blood. According to others, the blood, when it reaches the arterial radicles, is divided into two portions.—the one red, which is carried to the heart,—the other serous or white, which is absorbed by the lymphatic vessels, and constitutes the lymph. By others, again, the lymphatics are considered to be the vessels of return for the white blood sent to certain tissues. White blood, however, has probably no existence.

The word lymph is sometimes used unhappily by the surgeon to signify liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH, COAGULABLE, Fibrin, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH CORPUSCLES, see Lymph — l. Globules, see Lymph — l. Hearts, Lymphatic hearts.

LYMPH. PLASTIC, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHADENITIS: from lymph, and adenitis, 'inflammation of a gland.' Inflammatio glandularum lymphaticarum, Adenitis lymphatica, (F.) Adénite lymphatique. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland or ganglion.

LYMPH.EDUCTUS, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGEITIS, Angeioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIECTASIS, Lymphœurysma; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOGRAPHY, Lymphangiographia; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOTITIS, Angeioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIOLOGY, from Lymphangion,

'a lymphatic,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the lymphatics.

LYMPHANGIOTOMY, Lymphangiotoμία; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and τομή, 'incision.' The anatomy or dissection of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGITIS, Angeioloecitis.

LYMPHANGONCUS, Lymphoncus; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the lymphatics.

LYMPHATIC, Lymphaticus. That which relates to lymph; also, abounding in lymph. See Phlegmatic.

LYMPHATIC HEARTS, Lymph Hearts. The frog and several other animals are provided with large receptacles for the lymph immediately underneath the skin, which exhibit distinct and regular pulsations like the sanguiferous heart. Their use appears to be—to propel the lymph.

LYMPHATIC SYSTEM is that particular system of organs which is inservient to the formation and circulation of lymph. These organs are:

1. LYMPHATIC GANGLIONS or GLANDS, see Conglobate.

2. LYMPHATIC VESSELS, Lymphæductus, Lymphangi'a, Lymphang'e'a, Vesæ lymphaticæ, Ductus serosi, Vasa lymphatica seu resorbentia seu hydrogoga, Hydrangi'a. These are very numerous. Arising at the surface of membranes and in the tissue of the organs, they carry into the veins the lymph from those parts. Lymphatic vessels are found in every part of the body. Wherever they are met with, however, they form two orders,—one superficial, the other deep-seated;—the two orders frequently communicating with each other. Lymphatic vessels are generally smaller than arteries and veins. They are very thin, diaphanous, and cylindrical; but present, here and there, more or less considerable dilatations, caused by valves in their interior. They are slightly tortuous in their course; their anastomoses are very numerous, and they often cross each other, forming successive plexuses. Of the arrangement of the extreme radicles we are ignorant. All the branches, before joining the principal trunks, pass through lymphatic ganglions, in which they are convoluted, or subdivided almost ad infinitum. They are formed of an outer areolar membrane and an internal coat, similar to that of the veins; of the latter, the valves are formed. All the lymphatics of the body ultimately discharge themselves at the junction of the subclavian and internal jugular veins. Two of these trunks are considerably larger than the others,—the thoracic duct, and the great trunk of the right side, (F.) La grande veine lymphatique droite. The former receives the lymphatics of the abdomen, of the lower extremities, the left side of the thorax, the left upper extremity, and the corresponding side of the head and neck; the latter receives those of the right upper extremity, and of the right side of the head, neck and thorax.

LYMPHATITIS, Angeioloecitis.

LYMPHE COAGULABLE, Liquor sanguinis — l. de Cotugno, Cotunnus, liquor of — l. Plastique, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHEURYSMA, Lymphangiectasis.

LYMPHITIS, Angeioloecitis.

LYMPHIZATION. A term used by Professor Gross to signify effusion of coagulable lymph. It is not a happy word, inasmuch as lymph has another meaning, whilst the term 'coagulable lymph' is now almost abandoned.

LYMPHOCHEZIA, from lymph, and χηζω, 'I go to stool.' Serous diarrhoea.

LYMPHONCUS, Lymphangoncus — l. Iridis, Iridanxesis.

LYMPHOPYRA, Fever, adeno-meningeal.

LYMPHORRHAG'IA, from lymph, and ρρῆναι, 'I break forth.' Discharge of lymph from a lymphatic vessel, owing to a lesion of its coats.

LYMPHO'SIS. The preparation or elaboration of lymph.

LYMPHO'TOMY, from lymph, 'lymph,' and τομῶ, 'I cut.' Dissection of the lymphatics.

LYNCH'S EMBROCA'TION. An emollient nostrum, formed of olive oil impregnated with bergamot and other essences, and coloured with alkannet root.

LYNGODES, Singultous—l. Febris, Fever, singultous.

LYNGYODES, Singultous.

LYNN WAHOO, Ulmus alata.

LYNX, Singultus.

LYPE, Athymia.

LYPEMANIA, Melancholy.

LYPE'RIA CRO'CEA. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ, the flowers of which closely resemble saffron in smell and taste, and possess similar medical virtues.

LYPEROPHRÉ'NIE, Melancholy.

LYPOMA, Lipoma.

LYPOTHYM'IA, from λυπη, 'sadness,' and ἔπος, 'the mind.' Very great sadness or despondency.

LYRA, lyra, 'the lyre.' Psalter, Psalterium, Corpus Psalterio'des, Lyra Davidis, Lamina medallaris triangul'ris cer'ebr'i, Spatium triangulum. The under surface of the posterior part of the body of the fornix is impressed with numerous transverse and oblique lines, which have been so called from some resemblance they bear to the ancient lyre.

LYRINGIUM, Eryngium campestre.

LYSIA, Lysis.

LYSIMA'CHIA NUMMULA'RIA, L. nemorum, Nummularia, Hiraudinaria, Centimor'bia, Creeping Loose Strife, Money Wort, (F.) Herbe aux écus. Ord. Primulacæ. This plant was formerly accounted vulnerary. It has been considered to possess antiscorbutic and astringent qualities, and has been used in leucorrhœa.

LYSIMACHIA PURPUREA, Lythrum salicaria.

LYSIMA'CHIA QUADRIFO'LIA, Four-Leaved Loose Strife, Crosswort, an indigenous plant, is astringent; and has been used as a stomachic and antiperiodic.

LYSIS, Lysis, λυσις, from λυω, 'I dissolve.' Solution. A common suffix; also, a name given to solutions or terminations of disease, which are operated insensibly: that is, gradually and without critical symptoms.

LYSSA, Hydrophobia—l. Canina, Hydrophobia.

LYSSAS, Maniodes.

LYSSETER, Maniodes.

LYSSODECTUS, from λυσσα, 'canine madness,' and ἔγω, or δακνω, 'I bite.' Hydrophobus; Canē rab'ido vorans. One who has been bitten by a mad dog, or is actually labouring under hydrophobia.

LYSSODEG'MA, Lyssodeg'mus, Lyssodex'is, same etymon. The bite of a mad dog.

LYSSODEXIS, Lyssodegma.

LYTE'RIOS, λυτηριος, (from λυω, 'I dissolve,') 'solving.' An epithet given to those signs which announce the solution of a very violent disease.

LYTHRUM ALATUM, see Lythrum salicaria—l. Hyssopifolia, Lythrum salicaria.

LYTHRUM SALICA'RIA, from λυθρον, 'blood, and dust,' on account of the colour of the flowers of some species, Lysim'chia purpurea, Salic'ria calga'ris seu spicata;—the Common or Purple Willow Herb. Ord. Lythracæ. The herb, root, and flowers possess a considerable degree of astringency, and are used, occasionally, in the cure of diarrhœa and dysentery, leucorrhœa, hæmoptysis, &c.

LYTHRUM HYSSOPIFO'LIA, and L. ALATUM; indigenous, have similar properties.

LYTTA CÆRULEA, see Cantharis—l. Gigas mas, see Cantharis—l. Ruficeps, see Cantharis.

LYTTA RU'PIFES. Class, Insecta; Ord. Coleoptera. A variety of Lytta, peculiar to Chili, which is more active as a vesicant than the cantharis, or the Lytta vittata.

LYTTA SEGETUM, see Cantharis—l. Vesicatoria, Cantharis.

LYTTA VITTA'TA, Cantharis vittata, Potato Fly, (F.) Cantharide tache'tée. Four species of meloë that blister, are found in the United States. The lytta vittata feeds principally upon the potato plant, and, at the proper season of the year, may be collected in immense numbers. The potato fly resembles the cantharides in every property, and is fully equal to them.

M.

M. This letter signifies, in prescriptions, manipulus, 'a handful.' Also, miscæ, 'mix.' See Abbreviation.

MACAPATLI, Smitax sarsaparilla.

MACARONI. An alimentary paste, moulded of a cylindrical shape, and formed of rice or wheaten flour. It is eaten—when boiled—in soup; prepared with cheese, &c. See Turandæ Italiae.

Also, a name formerly given to a pulverulent compound of sugar and glass of antimony, carried into France by the Italian monks, and employed at the hospital La Charité in the treatment of painters' colic.

MACARONS, Biscuits, medicinal.

MACE, see Myristica moschata—m. Reed, Typha latifolia.

MACEDONISIUM, Smyrnum olusatrum.

MACER, Graecilis.

MACERA'TION. Maceratio, from macerare, maceratum, 'to soften by water.' An operation which consists in infusing, usually without heat, a solid substance in a liquid, so as to extract its virtues.

MACERONA, Smyrnum olusatrum.

MACES, see Myristica moschata.

MACE'SCERE, Emaciate.

MACHÆRA, Culter, Knife, Penis.

MACHÆRIDION, Machærian.

MACHÆ'RION, Machærian, Machærid'ion, Gladiolus, from μαχαιρα, 'a sword,' μαχη, 'a fight.' A knife. An amputating knife. Rufus of Ephesus asserts, that the Aruspices gave this name to a part of the liver of animals.

MACHÆRIS, Knife, Novacula.

MACHA'ON, from μαχων, 'I desire to fight.' The son of Æsculapius, and a celebrated physician.

MACHAÖNIA seu MACHAÖNICA ARS. Medicine. The Healing Art:—so called after Machaon, the son of Æsculapius.

MACHINAL, Mechan'icus. This epithet is added especially by French writers to the word movement, to express that the will takes no part in it.

MACHINE', Mach'ina, Machinamentum, Meck'anē, Meckane'ma. A more or less compound instrument or arrangement for putting a body in motion, or for producing any action whatever. Physiologists sometimes use it for the animal body;—as the machine or animal machine.

MACHLOSYNE, Nymphomania.

MACHOÏRE, Maxillary bone—m. Diacranienne, Maxillary bone, lower—m. Sycranienne, Maxillary bone, superior.

MACIES, Atrophy, Emaciation—m. Infantum, Tabes mesenterica.

MACILENTUS, Gracilis.

MACIS, see Myristica mosehata.

MACRAUCHEN, from macro, and αυχην, 'the neck.' Longo collo præ'ditus. One who has a long neck.—Galen.

MACRE FLOTTANTE, Trapa natans.

MACRITUDO, Emaciation.

MACROBIOSIS, Longevity.

MACROBIOTES, Longevity.

MACROBIOTIC, Macrobiot'icus, Macrobi'otus, Macro'bius, Longæ'vus, from macro, and βιος, 'life.' That which lives a long time. The macrobiotic art, Macrobiot'ies, (F.) Macrobiotique, is the art of living a long time.

MACROBIOTUS, Macriobiotic.

MACROBIUS, Macriobiotic.

MACROCEPHALIA, see Capitones.

MACROCEPHALUS, Μακροceph'alus, (F.) Macroceph'ale; from macro, and κεφαλη, 'head.' Qui magnam habet caput 'One who has a large head.' This epithet is given to children born with heads so large that they seem to be hydrocephalic; but in which the unusual development is owing to a large size of the brain. Such are supposed to be more than ordinarily liable to convulsions. [?] The term has also been applied by Hippocrates to certain Asiatics who had long heads. See Capitones.

MACROCHIRIA, from macro, and χειρ, 'hand.' Monstrosity, characterized by excessive development of the hands.

MACROCOLIA, from macro, and κωλον, 'a limb.' Great length of limbs in general, and of the lower limbs in particular.

MACROCOSM, Μακροcosm'us, from macro, and κοσμος, 'world.' The universe, in contradistinction to Microcosm, which means man.

MACRODACTYLUS, from macro, and δακτυλος, 'a finger.' Having long fingers.

MACROGASTER PLATYPUS, Acarus folliculorum.

MACROGLOSSA, see Macroglossus.

MACROGLOS'SUS, from macro, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' One who has a very large or prolapsed tongue. See Paraglossa.

MACROMELIA, from macro, and μελος, 'limb.' Monstrosity, which consists in the excessive size of some limb.

MACRONOSIÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACROPHAL'LUS, from macro, and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' A large size of the male organ.

MACROPHO'NUS, from macro, and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a strong voice.

MACROPHTHAL'MUS, from macro, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' Having large eyes.

MACROPHYSOCEPH'ALUS, from macro, φυσα, 'air,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A word used by Ambrose Paré to designate an augmentation of the head of the fœtus, produced by a sort of emphysema [?], which retards delivery.

MACROP'IPER, Piper longum.

MACROP'NE'A, from macro, and πνεω, 'I breathe.' A long and deep respiration.

MACROP'NUS, Μακροπ'νοῦς. Same etymon. Long breathed. One who breathes slowly:—a word met with in some authors.—Hippocrates.

MACROP'ODUS, Μακροπους, Megal'opus, from macro, and πους, πόδος, 'foot.' One who has a large foot.

MACROPROSO'PIA, from macro, and προσωπον, 'face.' Monstrosity, characterized by excessive size of face.

MACROR, Emaciation.

MACROR'RHIS, from macro, and ρῖς, or ρηί, 'nose.' One who has a long nose.

MACROS, μακρος, 'great.' Long.

MACROS'CELES, Ὀῦρα longa habens; from macro, and σκελος, 'the leg.' One who has long legs.

MACROSIÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACROSOMATIA, see Giant.

MACROSOMIA, see Giant.

MACRO'TES, from macro, and οὐς, ωτος, 'an ear.' One who has long ears.

MACROTRY'S RACEMOSA, see Actæa racemosa.

MAC'ULA. A spot. Dyschræ'a, Celis, Labeis, (F.) Tache. A permanent discoloration of some portion of the skin, often with a change of its texture. Ephelis, Nævus, Spilus, &c., belong to Macula.

MACULA, Molecule—m. Aurea, see Foramen centrale retinae—m. Corneæ, Caligo—m. Corneæ areolata, Gerotoxon—m. Corneæ margaritacea, Paralampsis—m. Cribrosa, see Auditory canal, internal—*m. MAC'ULÆ ALBÆ. M. Lac'tea, In'sula, Milk-spots. White spots, seen on serous membranes, especially on that investing the heart, and which appear to be the result of previous inflammatory action.

MACULÆ ANTE OCULOS VOLITANTES, Metamorphosis—m. Lactea, M. Albæ.

MACULOSUS, Sablé.

MAD, Insane—m. Doctor, see Psychiatria.

MADAR, Mudar.

MADARO'SIS, from μαδρος, 'bald.' Madaro'ma, Mad'e'sis, Madar'otes, Mad'e'wa, Mad'isis, Deplumatio, Milpha, Milpho'sis, Ptilo'sis, Calvities. Loss of the hair, particularly of the eyelashes.

MADAROTES, Madarosis.

MADDER, DYERS', Rubin.

MADEIRA, CLIMATE OF. This island is much frequented by pulmonary invalids, on account of the mildness and equability of its climate. Owing, indeed, to the mildness of the winter, and the coolness of the summer, together with the remarkable equality of the temperature during day and night, as well as throughout the year, it has been considered that the climate of Madeira is the finest in the northern hemisphere. Sir James Clark is of opinion that there is no place on the continent of Europe, with which he is acquainted, where the pulmonary invalid could reside with so much advantage, during the whole year, as in Madeira.

MADELEON, Bellium.

MADEMA, Madarosis.

MADESIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISON SPRINGS, see Georgia, Mineral waters of.

MADISTERIUM, μαδιστηριον, Tricholabium, Tricholabis, Volvel'la. Tweezers. An instrument for extracting hairs.

MADJOUND, Madjoun. A mixture of powdered hemp and honey, used as a narcotic agent, like tobacco, by the Algerines.

MADNESS, CANINE, Hydrophobia—m. Raviuz or furious, Mania.

MADOR, Moisture. A cold sweat.

MADORIUS, Mudar.

MADREPORA OCULATA, see Coral.

MADWEED, Scutellaria lateriflora.

MÆA, Midwife.

MÆEIA, Obstetries.

MÆEUMA, see Parturition.

MÆIA, Obstetries.

MÆSA PICTA, Saoria.

MÆUSIS, Parturition.

MÆUTRIA, Midwife.

MAGDALIA, Magda'leon, Magda'lis. 'Crumb of bread.' Any medicine, as a pill, formed of crumb of bread. A roll of plaster.

MAGEIRICE, Culinary art.

MAGGOT PIMPLE, see Acne.

MAGIS, μαγίς, 'a cake.' A sort of cake, composed of cloves, garlic and cheese, beaten together.—Hippocrates.

MAGISTERIUM, Magistry—m. Bismuthi, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Jalapæ, Resin of Jalap—m. Mercasite, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Plumbi, Plumbi subcarbonas—m. Sulphuris, Sulphur lotum—m. Tartari purgans, Potassæ acetas.

MAG'ISTERY, Magiste'rium, from magister, 'a master.' Certain precipitates from saline solutions were formerly so called; as well as other medicines, the preparation of which was kept secret.

MAGISTRY OF BISMUTH, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MAG'ISTRAL, Magistra'lis. Same etymon. Extempora'neum. A prescription is so called—Form'ula magistra'lis seu extempora'nea—which is prepared extemporaneously; an officinal prescription—Form'ula officina'lis—being such as has been prepared for some time before it is prescribed.

MAGISTRANTIA, Imperatoria.

MAGMA, μαγμα, (F.) Marc. The thick residuum, obtained after expressing certain substances to extract the fluid parts from them. The grounds which remain after treating a substance with water, alcohol, or any other menstruum. Also, a salve of a certain consistence.

MAGMA or MARC OF OLIVES is the residuum after the greatest possible quantity of oil has been extracted from olives by making them ferment. It was formerly employed as a stimulant, under the form of a bath—to which the name Bain de Marc was given by the French.

MAGMA or MARC OF GRAPES, Bry'tia, was once employed for the same purposes.

MAGMA RÉTICULÉ, 'reticulated magma.' The gelatiniform substance found between the chorion and amnion in the early period of embryonic existence.

MAGNES, Magnēt.

MAGNES ARSENICALIS. (Sulphur, white arsenic, and common antimony, of each equal parts. Mix by fusion.) It is corrosive. See Magnetic plaster.

MAGNES EPILEPSIÆ, Hydrargyri sulphurectum rubrum.

MAGNES'IA, Abarnahas, Chanbar, Terra ama'ra, Magnesia terra, Talc earth; from magnes, 'the magnet.' An alkaline earth whose metallic base is magnesium. The term Magnesia was employed, of old, for any substance that seemed to have the power of attracting some principle from the air. At present it is restricted to—

MAGNESIA, M. neta seu calcina'ta, Cal'cinel Magnesia, Oxide of magnesi'um, (F.) Magnésie brûlée, Magnésie, M. Caustique. This is obtained by exposing carbonate of magnesia to a strong heat. It is inodorous; taste very slightly bitter; in the form of a white, light, spongy, soft powder. S. g. 2.3; requiring 2000 times its weight of water for its solution. It is antacid, and laxative when it meets with acid in the stomach. Dose, gr. x to ʒj in water or milk.

Henry's, Husband's, and Ellis's Magnesia, are dense forms of this preparation.

MAGNESIA, ACETATE OF, Magnesia acetas—m. Aerata, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Alba, M. carbonas—m. Calcinata, M. usta—m. Citrate of, Magnesiæ citras—m. Dinneford's, see Magnesia, fluid—m. Edinburgensis, M. carbonas.

MAGNESIA, EFFERVESCING, MOXON'S. (Magnes. carb.; M. sulphat.; Soda bicarbon., Acid tartaric. ãã partes æquales; to be pulverized, well dried, mixed, and enclosed in bottles hermetically sealed.) Dose, a teaspoonful in half a tumbler of water, drunk in a state of effervescence.

MAGNESIA, ELLIS'S, see Magnesia.

MAGNESIA, FLUID. Under this name a preparation is designated, which consists of a solution of carbonate of magnesia in carbonated water. It is also termed carbonated magnesia water, oërated magnesia water, and condensed solution of magnesia, (F.) Eau magnésienne. Dinneford's Magnesia is a solution of this kind.

MAGNESIA, HENRY'S, Magnesia—m. Husband's, see Magnesia—m. Mitis, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Muriate of, Magnesiæ chloridum—m. Nigra, Manganese, black oxide of.

MAGNESIA OPALINA. A name given by Léméry to a mixture of equal parts of antimony, nitrate of potassa, and chloride of sodium, (decrispitated.) It has emetic properties, but is not used.

MAGNESIA SALIS AMARI, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Salis Ebsdamsensis, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Saturni, Antimonium—m. Solution of, condensed, M. fluid—m. Subcarbonate of, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Subcarbonate of, hydrated, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Terra, Magnesia—m. Vitriolata, Magnesiæ sulphas—m. and Soda, sulphate of, see Soda, sulphate of—m. Usta, Magnesia.

MAGNESIÆ ACETAS, Ac'etate of Magnesi'um. This salt is prepared by saturating carbonate of magnesia with acetic acid. It is of syrupy consistence, and about four ounces is a dose. It acts like citrate of magnesia.

MAGNESIÆ CARBONAS seu Subcar'bonas, Magnesia (Dublin), M. aëra'ta seu carbon'ica seu alba, M. Subcarbon'ica seu Mitis seu Edinburg'en'sis seu Salis Ebsdamsen'sis seu Salis ama'ri, Car'bonas magne'sicum, Lac terra, Hypocarb'onas magne'sia, Terra amara aëra'ta seu absorbens minera'lis seu talc'osa oxyant'hraco'ides, Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, Hy'drated Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, (F.) Sous-carbonate on carbonate de Magnésie, Magnésie aërie ou blanche on crayeuse ou douce on effervescente ou moyenne on Anglaise, Craie ou Terre magnésienne, Lait de Terre, Panacée Anglaise, Poudre de Sentinelli ou de Valentini ou du Comte de Palme ou de Zwinger. Prepared from sulphate of magnesia by subcarbonate of potassa. It is inodorous; insipid; light; white; spongy; opaque; effervescing with acids; insoluble in water. Properties the same as the last; but the carbonic acid, when set free, sometimes causes unpleasant distension.

MAGNESIÆ CITRAS, Citrate of Magnesia, (F.)

Citrate de Magnésie. A saline preparation, formed by saturating a solution of citric acid with either magnesia or its carbonate. Dose, an ounce. It is devoid of the bitter taste of the magnesian salts.

A solution in water, or in mineral water, sweetened with syrup, and acidulated with citric acid, makes an agreeable purgative. A simple solution in water has been called magnesian lemonade. In the effervescing state, it is the effervescing magnesian lemonade. The Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851) has a form for the LIQUOR MAGNESIÆ CITRATIS, Solution of Citrate of Magnesia. Take of Carbonate of magnesia, ℥v; citric acid, ℥viiss; Syrup of citric acid, f℥ij; Water, a sufficient quantity. Dissolve the citric acid in f℥iv of water, and add ℥iv of the carbonate of magnesia, previously rubbed with f℥ij of water. When the reaction has ceased, filter into a strong f℥xij glass bottle, into which the syrup of citric acid has been previously introduced. Rub the remaining carbonate of magnesia with f℥ij of water, and pour the mixture into the bottle, which must be well corked, and secured with twine; and shake the mixture occasionally until it becomes transparent. As a cathartic the whole of this may be taken.

MAGNESIÆ HYPOCARBONAS, M. carbonas—m. Subcarbonas. M. carbonas—m. Vitriolicum, Magnesia sulphas.

MAGNESIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphas Magnesie purificata, Magnesia vitriolata, Sal catharticus amarus seu catharticum amarum seu amarum seu Anglicanum seu Epsomense seu catharticum Anglicanum seu Sedlicense seu Ebsdamense seu Seydschützense. Terra amara sulphurica, Vitriolicum Magnesie, Sulphate of Magnesia, Epsom Salt, Bitter purging Salt, (F.) Sulfate de magnésie, Sel admirable de Léméry, Sel d'Égra. Generally obtained from sea-water. Its taste is bitter and disagreeable. It is soluble in an equal quantity of water at 60°. It is purgative and diuretic. Dose, as a cathartic, ℥ss to ℥ij.

MAGNESIAN LEMONADE, Magnesie citras.

MAGNÉSIE AÉRÉE, Magnesia carbonas—m. Anglaise, Magnesia carbonas—m. Blanche, Magnesia carbonas—m. Brulée, Magnesia usta—m. Carbonate de Magnesie carbonas—m. Canstique, Magnesia usta—m. Citrate de Magnesie citras—m. Crayeuse, Magnesie carbonas—m. Donee, Magnesie carbonas—m. Effervescente, Magnesie carbonas—m. Moyenne, Magnesie carbonas—m. Souscarbonate de Magnesie carbonas—m. Sulfate de Magnesie sulphas.

MAGNÉSII CHLORIDUM, Chloride of Magnesin, Muriate of Magnesia. This bitter deliquescent salt has been given as a mild and effective cholagogue cathartic, in the dose of half an ounce to the adult. Being deliquescent, it may be kept dissolved in its weight of water.

MAGNESIUM, see Magnesia—m. Chloride of Magnesii chloridum—m. Oxide of Magnesia usta.

MAGNET, Magnes, Magnetes, Ferrum magnes attractorium, Siderites, Sideritis, Lapis heracleus seu Syderitis seu nauticus, Magnitis, so called from Magnes, its discoverer, or from Magnesia, where it is said to have been first found. (F.) Aimant, Pierre d'Aimant. The magnet or loadstone. An amorphous, oxydulated ore of iron, which exerts an attraction on unmagnetized iron, and has the property of exhibiting poles; that is, of pointing by one of its extremities to the north. This ore, by constant or long rubbing, communicates its properties to iron; and thus artificial magnets are formed. Magnetic ore is found in many countries, and particularly in the island of Elba. The magnet is sometimes used to extract spicula of iron from the eye or from wounds. It has been employed as an antispasmodic; but acts only through the imagination. The powder has been given as a tonic. In Pharmacy, it is used to purify iron filings. It attracts the iron, and the impurities remain behind. It formerly entered, as an ingredient, into several plasters, to draw bullets and heads of arrows from the body—as the Emplastrum divinum Nicolai, the Emplastrum nigrum of Augsburg, the Opodeldoch, and Attractivum of Paracelsus, &c.

MAGNETES, Magnet.

MAGNETIC, Magnet'icus, (F.) Magnétique. Same etymon. That which belongs or relates to magnetism;—mineral or animal.

MAGNETIC FLUID. A name given to the impalpable fluid to which the magnet owes its virtues. By analogy it is applied to a particular principle, supposed to be the source of organic actions, which affects, it is conceived, the nervous system principally, and is susceptible of being transmitted from one living body to another, by contact or simple approximation, and especially under the influence of fixed volition. See Magnetism, Animal.

MAGNETIC PLASTER. A plaster, at present, not used. It has for its base a mixture, called Magnes arsenicalis; formed of equal parts of antimony, sulphur and arsenic melted together in a glass cucurbit. The name Magnetic plaster was, likewise, given to such as contained powdered magnet.

MAGNETINUS, Potassæ supertartas impurus.

MAGNETISM, ANIMAL, Mesmerism, Pathetism, Neurog'mia, Bioga'mia, Biomagnetismus, Zöomagnetismus, Eron'eurism (proposed by Mr. H. Mayo), Tellurismus, Anthropomagnetismus, Gar'galé, Gargalis'mus, Gar'galus. Properties attributed to the influence of a particular principle, which has been compared to that which characterizes the magnet. It is supposed to be transmitted from one person to another, and to impress peculiar modifications on organic action, especially on that of the nerves. The discussions, to which this strange belief has given rise, are by no means terminated. There is no evidence whatever of the existence of such a fluid. Highly impressible persons can be thrown into a kind of hysteric or 'magnetic' sleep and somnambulism, (designated by Mr. Braid, hypnotism, neuro-hypnotism, and nervous sleep); but farther than this, the efforts of the magnetizer cannot reach. It is a mode of action upon the nerves through the medium of the senses.

MAGNETIZATION, Mesmerization.

MAGNETIZED, Mesmerized.

MAGNETIZER, Mesmerizer.

MAGNETIS, Magnet.

MAGNITUDO CORPORIS, Stature—m. Gigantea, see Giant.

The bark is possessed of tonic properties, resembling those of cascarilla, canella, &c. The same may be said of the Magnolia tripetala seu Umbrella, Umbrella tree; the M. acuminata or Cucumber tree, the M. grandiflora and M. macrophylla, Laurel, Elk wood, Silverleaf, Big leaf, White Bay, Beaver Tree, Elk bark, Big bloom.

Magnolia (Ph. U. S.), is the bark of Magnolia glauca, M. acuminata, and M. tripetala.

MAGNOLIER GLAUQUE, Magnolia glauca.
MAGNUM DEI DONUM, Cinchona.

MAGNUM OS. The third bone of the lower row of the carpus, reckoning from the thumb. It is the largest bone of the carpus; and is, also, called Os capitulum; (F.) Grand Os.

MAGRUMS. A popular name in the State of New York for a singular convulsive affection, which resembles chorea. It rarely, however, occurs before the adult age; never ceases spontaneously, and, when fully developed, is devoid of any paroxysmal character.

MAGUEY, Agave Americana.

MAHMOUDY, Convolvulus scammonia.

MAHOGAN FÉBRIFUGE, Swietenia febrifuga.

MAHOGANY, Gynocladus Canadensis. Also, a drink in use among the Cornish fishermen of England, which is made of two parts gin and one part treacle, well beaten together. An analogous drink—a mixture of whisky and honey, (see Mead, under Hydromel,) is known in the Highlands of Scotland by the name Athol porridge.

MALA, Gena—m. Aurea, see Citrus aurantium.

MALABATH'RINUM. Ancient name of an ointment and a wine, into which the malobathrum entered.

MALABA'THRUM, Cadeji-Indi. The leaves of a tree of the East Indies. These leaves entered into the theriac, mithridate, and other ancient electuaries. They are believed to be from a species of laurel—Laurus Cassia; but, according to others, from Laurus Malabathrum. The O'leum Malabathri is obtained from it.

MALACCÆ RADIX, Sagittarium alexipharmacum.

MALACHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MALAC'IA, from μαλακία, 'softness.' A deprivation of taste, in which an almost universal loathing is combined with an exclusive longing for some particular article of food. If the patient desires substances that are noxious or not eatable, it constitutes Pica, Pisso'sis, Pitto'sis, Heterorez'ia, Heterorrhex'ia, Cissa, Citto'sis, Citta, Limo'sis Pica, Allotriophag'ia, Picacis'mus, Pica'tio, Deprav'd appetit'e, (F.) Envie. These symptoms accompany several nervous affections,—those of females in particular. In pregnancy it is common, and is termed Longing.

MALACIA AFRICANORUM, Chthonophagia—m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia.

MALACISMUS, Mollities.

MALACOGASTER, Gastromalaxia.

MALACOPHO'NUS, from μαλακία, 'softness,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a soft voice.

MALE OS, from malum, 'an apple;' so called from its roundness. Zygo'ma, Os mala'rè seu Juga'tè seu Jugam'entum seu Genæ seu Zygomat'icum seu Hypo'pium seu Subocula'rè seu Pudi'cum, (F.) Os Malaire ou Zygomatique ou de la Pommette. The cheek or malar bone. This bone is situate at the lateral and superior part of the face; and constitutes the zygomatic region of the cheek. It is irregularly quadrilateral. Its outer surface is convex, covered by muscles and skin, and pierced with canals, called malar, through which vessels and nerves pass. Its upper surface is concave, and forms part of the orbit. Its posterior surface is concave, and enters into the composition of the temporal fossa. This bone is thick and cellular. It is articulated with the frontal, temporal, sphenoid, and superior maxillary bones, and is developed by a single point of ossification.

The part of the face rendered prominent by it, the French call Pommette.

MALAG'MA, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' An emollient cataplasm, and, in general, every local application which enjoys the property of softening organic tissues.

MALAIRE, Malar.

MALAISE, Indisposition.

MALAKIEN, Mollities.

MALAMBO BARK, Matias.

MALANDERS, Malandria.

MALAN'DRIA. A species of lepra or elephantiasis. — Marecellus Empiricus. Mal'anders or Mall'enders, is a disease of the horse, which consists of a scurfy eruption on the inside of the hock, or a little below it, as well as at the bend of the knee. It is called Mallenders in the foreleg, and Sollenders in the hind leg. — Youatt.

MALANDRIO'SUS, Leprous. Affected with mandria.

MALAR, Mala'ris, (F.) Malaire, from mala, 'the cheek,' Belonging to the cheek, — as the malar bone.

MALAR PROCESS, Zygomatic process.

MALARE OS, Malæ os.

MALARIA, Miasm.

MALARIOUS, Mala'rial. Owing to, or connected with Malaria, — as a malarious soil, malarious disease. &c.

MALASSIMILA'TION, Malassimila'tio; from mala, 'bad,' and assimilatio, 'assimilation.' Imperfect softening of drugs, by kneading them. The process is called Malaxa'tion, Malaxa'tio.

MAL'AXATE, Moll'i'rè, Subig'erè, Malacissa'rè, (F.) Malaxer, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' To produce softening of drugs, by kneading them. The process is called Malaxa'tion, Malaxa'tio.

MALAXIS, Mollities — m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia — m. Hepatica, Adiposis hepatica.

MALAY, see Homo.

MALAZISSA'TUS, Malacissa'tus, same etymon as Malaxate. One in whom the testicles have not descended. It has, also, been used synonymously with emascula'tus and muliera'tus. — Castelli.

MALCE, Chilblain.

MALE, Mas, Mas'culus. Of the sex that begets young. Not female. What belongs to the male sex; as the male organs of generation.

MALE, Axilla.

MALE ORGAN, Penis.

MALE DI BRENO, see Scherlievo — m. Scabioso venereo, Scherlievo.

MALEFICIUM, Poisoning.

MALFORMA'TION, malforma'tio, malconforma'tio; from mal, and forma, 'form.' A wrong formation; or irregularity in the structure of parts. See Monster.

MALHERBE, Plumbago Europæa.

MALIA, see Equinia.

MALIASMUS, Malis, see Equinia.

MALICE, Althæa.

MALICHORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALICORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALIE, Equinia.

MALIG'NANT, Malig'nus, (F.) Malin. A term applied to any disease whose symptoms are so aggravated as to threaten the destruction of the patient. A disease of a very serious character, although it may be mild in appearance; — Morbus malignus.

MALIN, Malignant.

MALING'ERER; from (F.) malingre, 'sickly.' A simulator of disease, so termed in the British military service.

MALIS, Malias'mos, Cuta'neous verminat'ion, Helminth'on'cus. The cuticle or skin infested with animalcules. — Phthiri'asis, Parasiti'smus superfic'iei. In Persia, this affection is produced by the Guinea worm; in South America, by the Chigre; and in Europe, occasionally by the Louse. See Equinia, and Phtheiri'asis.

MALIS DRACUNCULUS, Dracunculus — m. Gordii, Dracunculus — m. Pediculi, Phtheiri'asis.

MALLENDERS, Malandria.

MALLE'OLAR, Malleola'ris, from malleolus, 'the ankle.' (F.) Malléolaire. Belonging or relating to the ankles.

MALLEOLAR ARTERIES are two branches furnished by the anterior tibial artery behind the tendon of the tibialis anticus, to be distributed in the vicinity of the malleolus internus; — the other — the external — glides behind the tendons of the extensor communis digitorum pedis and the peroneus brevis, and sends its branches to the parts which surround the outer ankle, as well as to the outer region of the tarsus.

MALLE'OLUS. Diminutive of malleus, 'a mallet, or hammer;' Race'ta, Raste'ta, Rascha, Raseta, Ras'eta, Sphyra, Talus, Diab'ebos, Tale'olus, Peza, Ankle. (Prov.) Ancler, Ancler, Ancliff, Anclon, Anckley, Rick, (Sc.) Cute, Coot, Hancloth, Heather-cln, (F.) Malléole, Cheville du Pied. The two projections formed by the bones of the leg at their inferior part. The inner belongs to the tibia; the outer to the fibula. The ankles afford attachment to ligaments; and each has a sort of gutter, in which certain tendons slide. See Malleus.

MALLET, Malle'olus, (F.) Maillet. A kind of hammer, used with a gouge for removing or cutting bones, in certain surgical and anatomical operations.

MAL'LEUS, Malle'olus, Ossic'ulum Malleolo assimila'tum, (F.) Marteau. The longest and outermost of the four small bones of the ear. It is situate at the outer part of the tympanum, and is united to the membrana tympani. It has, 1. An ovoid head, which is articulated behind with the incus, and is supported by a narrow part called the neck: this has, anteriorly, a long apophysis, which is engaged in the glenoid fissure, and is called the Apophysis or Process, Processus grac'illis, of Rau. It affords attachment to the anterior seu externus mallei muscle. 2. A handle, which forms an obtuse angle with the neck, and corresponds to the membrane of the tympanum, which it seems to draw inwards. It is furnished at its upper extremity with a process — the processus brevis, to which the internus mallei is attached. This bone is developed by a single point of ossification.

MALLEUS, Equinia—M. farciminosus, see Equinia—m. Slender Process of the, Grête upophyse du naeteuu.

MALLOW, COMMON, Malva—m. Compound decoction of, Decoctum malvæ compositum—m. Indian, Abutilon Avicennæ—m. Yellow, Abutilon Avicennæ.

MALLS, Rubeola.

MAL'MEDY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Malmedy is a town in Rhenish Prussia, between Spa and Coblenz. In its immediate vicinity are several acidulous chalybeate springs.

MALO DI SCARLIEVO, Scherlievo.

MALOGNATUM, Punica granatum.

MALPIGHI, ACINI OF, Corpora Malpighiana.

MALRIG'HIA MOUREL'LA, (F.) Mourellier, Simarouba faux. The bark of this shrub—a native of Cayenne—is reputed to be febrifuge, and useful in diarrhoea.

MALPIGHIAN BODIES, Corpora Malpighiana—m. b. Inflammation of the, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—m. b. of the Spleen, see Spleen.

MALPRAXIS, Mala praxis, Malum reg'imeu. Bad management or treatment.

MALT, Sax. mealc, Dutch, mout, Teut. malt; from μαλαττω, 'I soften'; [?] Byuē, Maltum, Hor'dei maltum, Brac'sium, (F.) Drèche. Barley made to germinate, for the purpose of forming beer. It has been recommended in medicine, as antiscorbutic, antiserofulous, &c.

MALT SPIRIT. A spirit distilled from malt. It is the basis of most of the spirituous cordials.

MALTA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Malta is pretty equable, the range of temperature in the twenty-four hours being rarely more than 6°. The air is almost always dry and clear. The most disagreeable wind is the sirocco, which is the source of more or less suffering to the pulmonary invalid. The winter climate is favourable. Dr. Liddell thinks that no place which he has seen in the south of Europe can compete with Malta, for a mild, dry, bracing air in November, December, and part of January; and during the other winter and spring months, he thinks it is equal to any of them.

MALTHA, Malthē, from μαλαττω, 'I soften.' Wax, particularly soft wax.

MALTHACTICA, Emollients.

MALTHAXIS, Mollities.

MALUM MOR'TUUM. A species of lepra, in which the affected portions of skin seem to be struck with death.

MALUM PILARE, Trichosis—m. Pottii, Vertebral disease—m. Primarium, Idiopathia—m. Regimen, Malpraxis—m. Spinusum, Datura stramonium—m. Terrestre, Atropa Mandragora—m. Venereum, Syphilis.

MALUS, Pyrus malus—m. Aurantia major, Citrus aurantium—m. Communis, Pyrus malus—m. Dasyphylla, Pyrus malus.

MALUS INDICA, Bilumbi liting-bing of Bon-tin. Ord. Rosaceæ. The juice of this East India tree is cooling, and is drunk as a cure for fevers. The leaves, boiled and made into a cataplasm with rice, are famed in all sorts of tumours. The juice, mixed with arrack, is drunk for the cure of diarrhoea. The ripe fruit is eaten as a delicacy; and the unripe is made into a pickle for the use of the table.

MALUS LIMONIA ACIDA, see Citrus medica—m. Medica, see Citrus medica—m. Sylvestris, Pyrus malus.

MALVA, Malva sylvestris seu vulgaris, Commov Malloic, (F.) Mauve sauvage. Ord. Malvaceæ. The leaves and flowers are chiefly used in fomentations, entaplasms, and emollient enemas. Its properties are demulcent.

Malva rotundifolia, Mal'ochē, Mal'ochē, has like virtues; as well as the other varieties.

MALVAVISCUM, Althæa.

MALVERN, WATERS OF. The village of Great Malvern, (pronounced Maw'vera), in Worcestershire, England, has for many years been celebrated for a spring of remarkable purity, which has acquired the name of the Holy well. It is a carbonated water; containing carbonates of soda and iron, sulphate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and is chiefly used externally, in eutaneous affections.

MAMA-PIAN, (F.) Mama-pian. An ulcer of a bad aspect, which is the commencement of the pian; and which, after having destroyed the flesh, extends to the bones. It is also called the Mother of Pians;—La mère des pians.

MAMEI, Mamoe, Momin or Toddytree. From incisions made in the branches of this West Indian tree, a copious discharge of pellucid liquor occurs, which is called nomiu or Toddy wine. It is very diuretic, and is esteemed to be a good antilithic and lithontriptic.

MAMELLE, Mamma.

MAMELON, Nipple.

MAMELONNÉ, Mammillated.

MAMELONS DU REIN, Papillæ of the kidney.

MAMILLA, Mammula, see Mamma.

MAMMA, from namma, one of the earliest cries of the infant, ascribed to a desire for food. Masthos, Mastus, Masos, Thelē, Tithos, Titty, Ruua, Uber, ουβερ, Nutrix, Geniv'oua. The female breast, Pap, Pappe, (Mammilla, Mamilla being the male breast;) (F.) Mauelle. A glandular organ, proper to a class of animals—the mammalia—and intended for the secretion of milk. The mammae exist in both sexes, but they acquire a much greater size in the female; especially during pregnancy and lactation. In women, before the age of puberty, the breasts are but little developed. At this period, however, towards the central part of each breast, the skin suddenly changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint. It is of a reddish brown in women who have suckled several children. This circle has a rugous appearance, owing to the presence of sebaceous glands, and is called Are'ola or Ave'ola. These glands—Tubercles of the Areola, of Sir Astley Cooper—furnish an unctuous fluid for defending the nipple from the action of the saliva of the sucking infant. In the midst of the areola is the nipple, a conoidal eminence, of a rosy tint, susceptible of erection, and at the surface of which the galactophorous ducts open. Besides the skin covering them, the breasts are, also, composed of a layer of fatty areolar tissue, more or less thick; of a large gland; excretory ducts; vessels, nerves, &c. See Mammary.

In the animal, the mamma is called the Udder, ουβερ, Uber, the Bag.

The breasts, plus the space between, are called the bosom, στειν, colpos (κολπος). At times, these terms are restricted to the space between the breasts. (F.) Scin.

Mamma also means a nurse.

MAMMAIRE, Mammary.

MAMMAL, plural Mamma'lia, Mam'mifor, mammiferous animal; from namma, 'a breast.' An animal that suckles its young.

MAMMARY, Mamma'rius, (F.) Mammaire, from mamma, 'the breast.' Relating to the breasts.

MAMMARY ABSCESS. Mastodynia apostematosa.

MAMMARY ARTERIES are three in number. They are distinguished into—1. The Internal Mammary, Arteria sternalis, A. Sous-sternal (Ch.), Internal thoracica. It arises from the subclavian, and descends obliquely inwards, from its origin to the cartilage of the third rib. Below the diaphragm it divides into two branches; the one external, the other internal. From its origin until its bifurcation, it gives branches to the muscles and glands of the neck, to the thymus, mediastinum, pericardium, and œsophagus. In each intercostal space it gives off internal and external musculo-cutaneous branches, and also, on each side, the superior diaphragmatic. Its two ultimate branches are distributed on the parietes of the abdomen, and anastomose with the external mammary, intercostal, lumbar, circumflexa illi, and epigastric arteries. 2. The External Mammary Arteries are two in number, and are distinguished into superior and inferior. The superior external mammary, First of the thoracics (Ch.), Superior external thoracic, Superior thoracic, is furnished by the axillary artery. It descends obliquely forwards between the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, to which it is distributed by a considerable number of branches. The inferior external mammary, the second of the thoracics (Ch.), Long or inferior thoracic, arises from the axillary artery, a little below the preceding. It descends vertically over the lateral part of the thorax; curves, afterwards, inwards; becomes subcutaneous and divides into a number of branches, which surround the breast. It gives branches to the pectoralis major, serratus major anticus, the intercostal muscles, the glands of the axilla, and the integuments of the breast.

MAMMARY GLAND, Glandula lactifera, is the secretory organ of the milk. It is situate in the substance of the breast, to which it gives shape. The tissue of this gland results from the assemblage of lobes of different size, united intimately by a dense areolar tissue. Each of these is composed of several lobules, formed of round granulations, of a rosy white colour, and of the size of a poppy seed. The glandular grains give rise to the radicles of the excretory canals of the mamma, which are called galactophorous or lactiferous. These excretory vessels unite in ramusculi, rami, and in trunks of greater or less size; collect towards the centre of the gland; are tortuous, very extensible, and semi-transparent. All terminate in sinuses, situate near the base of the nipple, which are commonly from 15 to 18 in number. These sinuses are very short, conical, and united by areolar tissue. From their summits, a fasciculus of new ducts sets out, which occupy the centre of the nipple and open separately at its surface. The arteries of the mammary gland come from the thoracic, axillary, intercostal, and internal mammary. The veins accompany the arteries; the nerves are furnished by the intercostals, and brachial plexus; the lymphatic vessels are very numerous, and form two layers. They communicate with those of the thorax, and pass into the axillary ganglions.

MAMMARY SARCOMA, Mastoid sarcoma of Abernethy, Empyema sarcoma mammae. A tumour, of the colour and texture of the mammary gland; dense and whitish; sometimes softer and brownish; often producing, on extirpation, a malignant ulcer with indurated edges. Found in various parts of the body and limbs.

MAMMARY VEINS follow the same course as the arteries, and have received the same denominations. The internal mammary vein, of the right side, opens into the superior cava; that of the left, into the corresponding subclavian vein. The external mammary veins open into the axillary vein.

MAMME'A AMERICA'NA, (F.) Abricot sauvage. Ord. Guttiferæ. The systematic name of the tree on which the mammee or mamei fruit grows. This fruit has a delightful flavour when ripe; and is much cultivated in Jamaica, where it is generally sold in the markets as one of the best fruits of the island.

MAMMEA'TA, Mammo'sa, from mamma, 'the breast.' One who has large breasts.

MAMMELLA, Nipple.

MAMMIFER, Mammal.

MAMMIFEROUS ANIMAL, Mammal.

MAMMIFORM, Mastoid.

MAMMILLA, Mamma (male). Nipple.

MAMMILLÆ MEDULLARES, see Mammillary.

MAMMILLARIS, Mastoid.

MAM'MILLARY, Mammilla'ria, from Mammilla, 'a small breast, a nipple.' See Mastoid.

MAMMILLARY EM'INENCE is a name given, 1. To more or less marked prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, which correspond to the anfractuositities of the cranium. 2. To white, round, medullary tubercles, of the size of a pea, situate at the base of the brain, behind the gray substance from which the Tige pituitaire, of the French anatomists, arises. These Mammillary Tubercles, Corpora albican'tia seu Candican'tia seu Mammilla'ria seu Pisiformia. Bulbi for'niciis, Mammillæ seu Globuli medullares, Prominentiæ albican'tes, Processus mammilla'res cere'ebri, Protensio'nes glandula'res, Eminentia candican'tes, Priorum crurum for'niciis bulbi, Willis's Glands, (F.) Bulbes de la voûte à trois piliers, Tubercles pisiformes (Ch.), are united to each other by a small grayish band, which corresponds with the third ventricle. They receive the anterior prolongations of the fornix.

Some ancient anatomists, taking the nervous trunks, to which Willis first gave the name of olfactory nerves, for simple appendages of the brain, called them, an account of their shape, Caruncula mammilla'res. Vesalius, Fallopius, Columbus, and several others, termed them Processus mammilla'res cere'ebri ad nares. They have also been called Trigona olfactoria.

MAM'MILLATED, (F.) Mamelonné, from mamma, 'the female breast.' That which has mammiform projections on its surface.

MAMMILLATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

MAMMITE, Mastitis.

MAMMITIS, Mastitis.

MAMMOSA, Mammeata.

MAM'MULA; diminutive of Mamma, Mamilla. A small breast.

MAMOE, Mamei.

MAN, Aner, Anthropos, Homo.

MANAKIN, Fantom.

MAN-IN-THE-GROUND, Convolvulus panduratus — m. of the Earth, Convolvulus panduratus.

MANCENILLIER, Hippomane mancinella.

MANCHE D'HIPPOCRATE, Chaussé.

MANCHINEEL, Hippomane mancinella.

MANCURANA, Origanum.

MANDIBULA, Maxillary bone.

MANDIBULARIS MUSCULUS, Masseter.

MANDIIOC, Jatropha manihot.

MANDO, Glutton.

MANDRAGORA, Atropa mandragora — m. Acaulis, Atropa mandragora — m. Officinalis, Atropa mandragora — m. Vernalis, Atropa mandragora.

MANDRAGORITES, from πανδραγορας, the Atropa mandragora or mandrake. Wine in which the roots of mandrake have been infused.

MANDRAKE, Atropa mandragora, Podophyllum peltatum, P. montanum.

MANDRIN A VIRGULE, see Brise-coque.

MANDUCATIO, Mastication—m. Difficilis, Bradygnesis.

MANDUCATORY, Manducatorius; from Manducatio, 'mastication.' Appertaining or relating to mastication:—as,

MANDUCATORY NERVE, see Trigemini.

MANŒUVRE, Manœuvre.

MANGANESE, Manganesium, Manga'nium. A metal, which is pretty abundant in nature in an oxidized state. It is of a grayish-white colour, resembling some varieties of cast iron, is hard and brittle, and destitute of magnetic properties. Specific gravity about 8.

MANGANESE, BLACK OXIDE OF, Mangane'sii oxidum seu Binox'idum, Tetrox'ide of manganese, Magne'sia nigra, Mangane'sium vitriariorum seu oxydatum nativum seu nigrum seu ochraceum nigrum seu oxydatum nativum, Man'ganum oxydatum nativum, Molybdænum magne'sii, Oxidæ mang'ni nativæ, Perox'idum mangane'sii nigrum nativum, Superox'idum manganicum, (F.) Oxyde noir de manganèse. This oxide is not much used in medicine. It has been advised to dust the affected parts, in tinea capitis, with the powder. It is official in the Edinburgh pharmacopœia, and is used in preparing chlorine, solution of chlorine, and solution of chlorinated soda.

MANGANESE, SALTS OF, see Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANÈSE OXYDE NOIR DE, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANESE, SULPHATE OF, Mangane'sii Sulphas seu Protax'idii Sulphas, Sulphate of Protox'ide of Man'ganium. A rose-coloured and very soluble salt, isomorphous with sulphate of magnesia. It is prepared on a large scale for the use of the dyer, by heating, in a close vessel, peroxide of manganese and coal, and dissolving the impure protoxide, thus obtained, in sulphuric acid, with the addition of a little cholorhydric acid towards the end of the process. The solution is evaporated to dryness, and again exposed to a red heat, by which the persulphate of iron is decomposed. Water then dissolves the pure sulphate of manganese, leaving the oxide of iron behind.

This salt has been recommended as a cholagogue, in doses of a drachm or two.

The salts of manganese have been recommended in chlorosis and amenorrhœa, and as substitutes for chalybeates generally. The subcarbonate and the oxide have been chiefly employed.

MANGANESE, TETROXIDE OF, M. Black oxide of.

MANGANESII BINOXIDUM, Manganese, black oxide of—m. Oxidum, Manganese, black oxide of—m. Peroxydum nigrum nativum, Manganese, black oxide of—m. Protoxidi sulphas, Manganese, sulphate of—m. Sulphas, Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANI OXODES NATIVA, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANICUM SUPEROXIDUM, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGANUM, Manganese.

MANGANUM OXYDATUM NATIVUM, Manganese, black oxide of.

MANGÉ, Scabies ferina.

MANGIFERA INDICA, M. domestica, from mango, the fruit, and fero, 'I bear.' The Mango tree, (F.) Mangier. Ord. Terebinthaceæ. A tree cultivated over Asia, and in South America. Mangos, when ripe, are juicy, of a good flavour, and so fragrant as to perfume the air to a considerable distance. They are eaten, either raw or preserved with sugar. From the expressed juice a wine is prepared: and the remainder of the kernel can be reduced to an excellent flour for bread.

MANGO TREE, Mangifera Indica.

MANGONISATIO, Falsification.

MANGONIUM, Falsification.

MANGOSTAN, Garcinia mangostana

MANGOSTANA, Garcinia mangostana—m. Cambogia, Garcinia cambogia—m. Garcinia, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGOUSTAN, Garcinia mangostana.

MANGOSTEEN, Garcinia mangostana.

MANHOOD, Adult age.

MANI, Arachis hypogæa.

MAN'IA, Furor, Hemianthro'pia, Furor seu Euphro'nia seu Delir'ium mania, Insu'nia, Delir'ium mani'acum seu furi'osum, Mania univ'ersalis, Ves'u'nia mania, (F.) Manic, Hyperphrénia, Raving or furious madness, (Sc.) Wodnes; from μανωμαι, 'I am furious.' With some, it means insanity. Disorder of the intellect, in which there is erroneous judgment or hallucination, which impels to acts of fury. If the raving be not directed to a single object, it is mania properly so called; if to one object, it constitutes monomania, which term is, however, usually given to melancholy. Mania attacks adults chiefly; and women more frequently than men. The prognosis is unfavourable. About one-third never recover; and they who do are apt to relapse. Separation is one of the most effective means of treatment, with attention to the corporeal condition and every thing that can add to the mental comfort of the patient, and turn his thoughts away from the subjects of his delusion. In the violence of the paroxysms, recourse must be had to the strait waistcoat, the shower bath, &c. Separation should be continued for some weeks during convalescence, with the view of preventing a relapse.

MANIA, DANCING. Dancing plague. A form of convulsion, which has appeared, at various times, epidemically under the form of St. Vitus's dance, St. John's dance, Tarantism, Hysteria, Tigretier (in Abyssinia), and diseased sympathy: and which has been fully described by Hecker in his 'Epidemics of the Middle Ages.' See Convulsionnaire.

MANIHOT UTILISSIMA, Jatropha manihot.

MANIBAR, Jatropha manihot.

MANIKIN, Fantom.

MANILUVIUM, Mannu'vium, from manus, 'the hand,' and lavo, 'I wash.' A bath for the hands. It may be rendered stimulating, by means of muriatic acid, mustard, &c.

MANIOC, Jatropha manihot.

MANIODES, Mani'acus, Mani'acal. One labouring under mania; Hemianthro'pus, Furi'osus, Furibundus, Lyssas, Lyss'eter.

MANIPULATION, from manus, 'a hand.' Mode of working, as in pharmacy.

MANIPULUS, (F.) Poignée. The quantity of a substance capable of filling the hand. A handful. See Fasciculus.

MAN-MIDWIFE, Accoucheur.

MANTILE, Bandage (body).

MANTLE, Panniculus carnosus.

MANUBRIUM, from manus, 'a hand.' The handle of any thing:—as manubrium mal'lei, petiolus mal'lei, 'the handle of the malleus.'

MANUBRIUM, Chasse—m. Manus, Radius.

MANUBRIUM STERNI, The uppermost broad part of the sternum.

MANULUVIUM, Bath, hand, Manilivium.

MANUS, μαυ, 'I feel,' μαυαι, 'I take,' Cheir, Chir, Instrumentum Instrumentorum, Hand, Paw, (F.) Main. The part which terminates the upper extremity in man, and which is inservient to prehension and touch. It extends from the fold of the wrist to the extremity of the fingers. The hand is sustained by a bony skeleton, composed of a number of pieces, movable on each other; of muscles, tendons, cartilages, ligaments, vessels, nerves, &c. It is divided into three parts—the carpus or wrist, the metacarpus, and fingers. Its concave surface is called the palm: the convex surface the back of the hand. The facility of being able to oppose the thumb to the fingers in order to seize objects forms one of the distinctive characters of the human hand.

MANUS CHRISTI PERLA'TA. A name anciently given to troches, prepared of pearls and sugar of roses. They were called Manus Christi simplicis, when pearls were not employed.

MANUS DEI. An ancient plaster, prepared of var, myrrh, frankincense, mastic, gum ammoniac, galbanum, oil, &c. See Opium.

MARANTA GALAN'GA, Alpi'nia galan'ga, Amomum galanga, Galanga. Ord. Zingiberaceæ. The smaller galan'gal. Two kinds of galangal are mentioned in the pharmacopœias; the greater, obtained from Kampferia galanga, and the smaller, from the root of Moronta galanga. The dried root is brought from China, in pieces from one to two inches in length, but scarcely half as thick; branched; full of knots and joints, with several circular rings, of a reddish brown colour, on the outside, and brownish within. It was formerly much used as a warm stomachic bitter, and generally ordered in bitter infusions.

MARASCHINO, see Spirit.

MARASMOP'YRA, Febris marasmo'des, from μαρασμος, 'marasmus,' and πυρ, 'fever.' Fever of emaciation in general. Hectic fever.

MARASMUS, Atrophy—m. Lactantium, Pædatrophia—m. Phthisis, Phthisis pulmonalis.

MARASMUS SEN'LIS, Tabes senium, Gerontotroph'ia. Progressive atrophy of the aged.

MARASMUS TABES, Tabes—m. Tabes dorsalis, Tabes dorsalis.

MARATHRI'TES, from μαραθρον, 'fennel.' Wine impregnated with fennel.

MARATHROPHYLLUM, Peucedanum.

MARATHRUM, Anethum—m. Sylvestre, Peucedanum.

MARAUGIA, Metamorphopsia.

MARBLE, Marmor.

MARBRE, Marmor.

MARC, Magma.

MARCASITA, Bismuth—m. Alba, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Plumbea, Antimonium.

MARCASITE MAGISTERIUM, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MARCHAN'TIA POLYMOR'PHA, M. stellata seu umbellata, Hepatica fontana, Lichen stellatus, Jecora'ria, Liv'erwort, (F.) Hépatique des fontaines. Ord. Hepaticæ. This plant is mildly pungent and bitter. It is recommended as aperient, resolvent, and antiscorbutic; and is used in diseased liver, &c.

MARCHE (LA), Walking.

MARCHIO'NIS PULVIS, Powder of the Marquis. A powder, formerly considered to be anti-epileptic; and composed of Male peony root, Mistletoe, Ivory shavings, Horn of the hoof of the stag, Spodium, Tooth of the monodon, coral, &c.

MARCORES, Atrophy, Emaciation.

MARCORY, Stillingia.

MARÉCAGEUX, Elodes.

MAREMATIQUE, see Elodes.

MAREO, Puna.

MARE'S FAT, Inula dysenterica—m. Tail, Hippuris vulgaris.

MARGA CAN'DIDA, Lac luna. An ancient name for a variety of spongy, white, friable marl, which was employed as an astringent and refrigerant.

MARGARETIZZA, Scherlievo.

MARGARITA, Pearl.

MARGARITA'CEOUS, Margarita'ceus, Nacreous, (F.) Nacré; from margarita, 'pearl, mother of pearl.' Resembling, or of the nature of, mother of pearl,—as Leuco'ma Margarita'ceum; Pearl-like leucoma.

MARGARON, Pearl.

MARGELIS, Pearl.

MARGELLUM, Pearl.

MARGINI-SUS-SCAPULO-TROCHITÉRIEN, Teres minor.

MARGO, Bord—m. Dentatus, see Retina—m. Orbitalis, see Orbit.

MARGUERITE PETITE, Bellis—m. des Prés grande, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MARIENBAD, MINERAL WATERS OF. Celebrated springs in Bohemia. The Kreuzbrunn contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid.

MARIGOLD, DIAMOND FIG, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum—m. Garden, Calendula officinalis—m. Marsh, Caltha palustris—m. Sin- gle. Calendula officinalis—m. Wild, Calendula arvensis.

MARIOTTE', EXPERIMENT OF, (F.) Expérience de Mariotte. A celebrated experiment of the Abbé Mariotte, which consists in placing two small round spots on a wall at some distance from each other, standing opposite the left-hand object, and looking at it with the right eye, the left being closed. By walking backwards, until the distance from the object is about five times as great as the distance between the two objects, the latter will be found to disappear. Mariotte and, after him, many ophthalmologists, inferred that the optic nerve, on which the ray doubtless falls in this experiment, is insensible; and hence that the choroid may be the seat of vision,—not the retina. The inference is illogical; for it doubtless falls on the part of the optic nerve where the central artery enters, and the central vein leaves the eyeball, and where there is necessarily no neurine.

MARIS, μᾶρις. Ancient name of a measure, containing 83 pints and 4 ounces.

MARISCA, Ficus, Hæmorrhois.

MARJOLAINE, Origanum majorana.

MARJORAM, COMMON, Origanum—m. Wild. Origanum—m. Sweet, Origanum majorana.

MARJORANA, Origanum majorana—m. Man-curana, Origanum.

MARMALADE, Marmelade.

MARMARYGE, see Metamorphopsia.

MARMARYGO'DES, μαρμαρυγῶδες, 'brilliant.'

An epithet, joined particularly to the word οφθαλμος, to indicate a brilliant eye, a flashing eye. An eye which transmits the image of imaginary objects. See Metamorphopsia.

MARMELADE, Marmela'da, Marmela'ta, Marmelade, Miva. Parts of vegetables, confectioned with sugar, and reduced to a pulraceous consistence.

MARMELADE OF APRICOTS. A marmelade, prepared with two parts of ripe apricots deprived of their stones, and one part of white sugar.

MARMELADE OF FERNEL, M. of Tronchin.

MARMELADE OF TRONCHIN, or OF FERNEL. A kind of thick looch, of an agreeable taste, prepared with two ounces of oil of sweet almonds, as much syrup of violets, manna in tears, very fresh pulp of cassia, 16 grains of gum tragacanth, and two drachms of orange flower water. It is used as a laxative, demulcent, and pectoral.

MARMELATA, Marmelade.

MARMOR, μαρμαρος, Marble, Calcis Carb'bonas durus, (F.) Marble. White granular carbonate of lime. Used in pharmacy for the preparation of a pure lime, and the disengagement of carbonic acid.

MARMORATA AURIUM, Cerumen.

MARMOROS, Marmor.

MARMORYGE, see Metamorphopsia—m. Hippocratis, Hemiopia.

MARROUTE, Anthemis cotula.

MARRIAGEABLE, Nubile.

MARRIOTT, DRY VOMIT OF. This once celebrated emetic, called dry, from its being exhibited without drink, consisted of equal portions of tartarized antimony, and sulphate of copper.

MARRONIER D'INDE, Æsculus Hippocastanum.

MARROW, My'elos, Medu'lla, M. ossium, Medullary Juice, Axm'gia de Mamm'ia, Mammia de Medullis, Sax. mērs, (F.) Moëlle, Sac médullaire. The oily, inflammable, whitish or yellowish juice, which fills the medullary canal of the long bones, the cancellated structure at the extremities of those bones, the diploë of flat bones, and the interior of short bones. The marrow is furnished by the exhalation of the medullary membrane. It is fluid during life, and appears under the form of small points or brilliant grains after death. It is enveloped in the medullary membrane.

MARROW, SPINAL, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertebral, Medulla spinalis.

MARRUBE BLANC, Marrubium—m. Noir, Ballota fetida.

MARRUBIUM, M. vulgare seu album seu Germanicum seu apulum, Pra'sium, Phrasum, Horehonud, (F.) Marrube blanc. Ord. Labiatae. The leaves have a moderately strong, aromatic smell; and a very bitter, penetrating, diffusive, and durable taste. It has often been given in coughs and asthmas, united with sugar. Dose, $\overline{3}$ ss to $\overline{5}$ j, in infusion; dose of extract, gr. x to $\overline{5}$ ss.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, is made as follows:—horehonud, liquorice root, aa ℥iij and $\overline{5}$ vij; water, q. s. to strain ℥viij. Infuse. To the strained liquor add:—proof spirit or brandy, ℥l2; camphor, $\overline{5}$ j and $\overline{5}$ ij; opium and benjamin, aa $\overline{5}$ j; dried squilla, $\overline{5}$ ij; oil of sweetced, $\overline{5}$ j; hovey, ℥iij and $\overline{5}$ vij.—Gray. It is pectoral.

MARRUBIUM, Leonurus cardiaca—m. Album, Marrubium—m. Apulum, Marrubium—m. Germanicum, Marrubium—m. Nigrum, Ballota fetida—m. Vulgare, Marrubium.

MARS, Ferrum—m. Solubilis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

MARSEILLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The remarks made upon the climate of Montpellier apply even in greater force to that of Marseilles. It possesses all the objectionable qualities of the climate of southeastern France.

MARSH, Limnë, Helos, Palus, Sax. mērc, (F.) Marais. Marshy districts give off emanations, which are the fruitful source of disease and the cause of great insalubrity in many countries. The chief disease, occasioned by the malaria or miasm, is intermittent fever. Hence it becomes important to drain such regions, if practicable. Some marshy countries are not so liable to phthisis pulmonalis, and it has been found, that where intermittents have been got rid of by draining, consumption has, at times, become frequent. The most unhealthy periods for residence in a marshy district are during the existence of the summer and autumnal heats; at which times the water becomes evaporated, and the marshy bottom is more or less exposed to the sun's rays. This postulatam seems necessary for the production of the miasmata: for whilst the marsh is well covered with water, no miasm is given off.

MARSH POISON, Miasm (marsh)—m. Mallow, Althæa—m. Root, Statice Caroliniana—m. Tea, Ledum palustre.

MARSHALL'S CERATE, see Cerate, Marshall's.

MARSHY, Elodes.

MARSIPIUM, Marsupium.

MARSUM, Mar'sium, Mar'sicum. An ancient wine of Marsia, in Italy, which was used as an astringent in certain diseases of the mouth.

MARSUPIAL, see Marsupium.

MARSUPIALIS, Isebio-trochanterianus, Ob-turator internus.

MARSUPIATE, see Marsupium.

MARSUPIUM, Marsupium, Marsup'ion, Mar-sip'ion, Marsup'ium, Marsip'ium, Sac'culus, (μαρσπιον, 'a small sack, a purse,') A sack or bag, with which any part is fomented. Also, the abdominal pouch in the kangaroo, opossum, &c., into which the young, born at a very early stage of development, are received and nourished with milk secreted from glands which open into the pouches. Such animals are termed Marsup'ial, Marsup'iate, Marsup'ialia. See Generation.

MARSUPIUM, Scrotum—m. Musculosum, Dartos.

MARSYPIUM, Marsupium.

MARTEAU, Malleus.

MARTIAL, Chalybeate.

MARTIALIS, Chalybeate.

MARTIANA POMA, see Citrus aurantium.

MARTIA'TUM UNGUEN'TUM, (F.) Ou-guent de Soldat, Soldier's ointment. This was composed of bay berries, rue, marjoram, mint, sage, wormwood, basil, olive oil, yellow wax, and Malaga wine. It was invented by Martian; and was employed by soldiers as a preservative against injuries from cold.

MARTIS LIMATURA, Ferri limatura.

MARUM CORTUSI, Teucrium marum — m. Creticum, Teucrium marum — m. Syriacum, Teucrium marum — m. Verum, Teucrium marum — m. Vulgare, Thymus mastichina.

MARUTA COTULA, Anthemis cotula.

MAS, Male, Modiolus.

MASCARPIO, Masturbator.

MASCHALADEN'ITIS, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and adenitis, 'inflammation of a gland.' Inflammation of the glands of the axilla.

MASCHALE, Axilla.

MASCHALLÆUS, Axillary.

MASCHALIATRI'A, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ιατρεία, 'healing.' Treatment of disease by applications made to the axilla.

MASCHALIS, Axilla.

MASCHALISTER, Axis.

MASCHALON'CUS, Maschalop'anus, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumour or bubo or swelling in the axilla.

MASCHALOPANUS, Maschaloneus.

MASCULA, Tribade.

MASCULUS, Male.

MASESIS, Mastication.

MASHUA, (S.) A tuberous root, of a flat, pyramidal shape, which is cultivated and cooked like the potato by the Serranos of Peru. It is watery and insipid, but nevertheless is much eaten by them. The Indians use the mashua as a medicine in dropsy, dyspepsia, and dysentery. The plant is unknown to botanists. —Tschudi.

MASK, Larva, (F.) Masque, Larve. A bandage applied over the face, as a sort of mask, in cases of burns, scalds, or erysipelas. It serves to preserve the parts from the contact of air, and to retain topical applications in situ. It is made of a piece of linen, of the size of the face, in which apertures are made corresponding to the eyes, nose, and mouth, and which is fixed by means of strings stitched to the four angles.

MASKED, Larva'tus, (F.) Larvé. Disguised, —as a "masked fever," or one which is not clearly developed. See Fever, masked.

MASLACH, Moslich, Amphion, An'phon. A medicine much used by the Turks, and into the composition of which opium enters. It is excitant.

MASQUE, Mask.

MASS, μαζα, Maza, Massa, from μασσω, 'I mix.' The compound, from which pills have to be formed.

MASSA, Mass — m. Carnea Jacobi Sylvii, see Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans — m. de Dactylis, Paste. date — m. de Extracto glycyrrhizæ, Pasta glycyrrhizæ, &c. — m. de Gummi Arabico, Paste, marshmallow — m. de Zizyphorum fructu, Paste of jujubes.

MASSAGE, Shampooing.

MASSE D'EAU, Typha latifolia.

MASSEMA, Mastication.

MASSEMENT, Shampooing.

MASSEPAINS, Biscuits, medicinal.

MASSES APOPHYSAIRES, see Vertebræ.

MASESIS, Mastication.

MASSE'TER, from μασσασται, 'I eat,' 'I chew.' Mus'culus mandibula'ris, (F.) Zygomatico-maxillaire. A muscle situate at the posterior part of the cheek, and lying upon the ramus of the lower jaw-bone. It is long, quadrilateral, and is attached, above, to the inferior edge and to the inner surface of the zygomatic arch; below, it terminates at the angle of the jaw, and at the outer surface and inferior margin of the ramus of that bone. It is composed of an intermixture of fleshy and aponeurotic fibres. Its office is to raise the lower jaw, and to act in mastication.

MASSETER INTERNUS, Pterygoideus internus.

MASSETER'IC, Mas'seterine, Masse'tericus, Masseteri'cus, (F.) Massétérin, Massétérique. Relating or belonging to the masseter muscle.

MASSETERINE, Masseteric.

MASSETERINE ARTERY arises from the trunk of the internal maxillary or temporalis profunda posterior, and is distributed to the masseter muscle, after having passed, horizontally, through the sigmoid notch of the lower jaw-bone.

MASSETERINE NERVE is given off from the inferior maxillary branch of the fifth pair. It passes through the sigmoid notch, and is distributed on the inner surface of the masseter. In luxation of the lower jaw, this nerve is strongly stretched, and considerable pain, consequently, produced.

MASSETERINE VEIN has the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal maxillary vein.

MASSETERINUS, Masseteric.

MASSETTE, Typha latifolia.

MASSICOT, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

MASSING, Shampooing.

MASSULA, Molecule.

MASTADENITIS, Mastitis.

MASTALGIA, Mastodynia.

MASTAX, Mystax.

MASTEMA, Masticatory.

MASTER OF THE WOODS, Galium circæzans.

MASTERWORT, Angelica atropurpurea, Helicium lanatum, Imperatoria.

MASTESIS, Mastication.

MASTHELICOSIS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTHOS, Mamma.

MASTICA'TION, Mastica'tio, Mase'sis, Masc'sis Masse'ma, Maste'sis, Manduca'tio, Com-manduca'tio, Manduca'tion, Chewing, Chawing, from μαστω, 'I gnash the teeth.' The action of bruising food in the mouth, to prepare it for the digestion it has to undergo in the stomach. This is executed by the joint action of the tongue, cheeks, and lips, which push the alimentary substance between the teeth; and by the motions of the lower jaw it is cut, torn, or bruised.

MAST'ICATORY, Masticato'rium, Maste'ma, Diawaste'ma, (F.) Masticatoire. Same etymon. Chewing. Relating or appertaining to mastication or chewing. Also, a substance, chewed with the intention of exciting the secretion of saliva.

MASTICATORY NERVE, see Trigemini.

MASTICH, see Pistacia lentiscus — m. Herb, common, Thymus mastichina — m. Herb, Syrian, Teucrium marum — m. Tree, Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHELÆON, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHINA GALLORUM, Thymus mastichina.

MASTIGODES HOMINIS, Trichocephalus.

MASTIG'O'SIS, Flagella'tio. Flagellation, scourging; employed by the ancients as a remedy in many diseases.

MASTI'TIS, Mastô'tis, Mastoïd'itis, Mammi'tis, Mazô'tis, Inflamma'tio Mamma, Mastodeni'tis, (F.) Inflammation des Mamelles. Mammitis, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the breast. Inflammation of the mammary gland of the pregnant or parturient female is vulgarly called a weed or weed, and a weed in the breast.

MASTITIS APOSTEMATOSA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTITIS PUERPERALIS. Inflammation of the mamma in the childbed woman.

MASTIX, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTO-CARCINOMA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and carcinoma. Carcinoma or cancer of the breast.

MASTO-CHONDROSIS, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' A cartilaginous formation in the breast.

MASTODES, Mastoid.

MASTODYN'IA, Mastal'gia, Mazodyn'ia, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the breasts; a form of neuralgia. See Neuralgia mammae.

MASTODYN'IA APOSTEMATOSA, Phleg'monē Mammæ, Monthelco'sis, Mastit'is apostematosa, Galaetapostema, Galaetomastoparectoma, Abcessus Mammæ seu lacteus, Phleg'monē Mastodyn'ia, Abscess of the Breast, Mammmary Abscess, Milk-abscess. Phlegmonous inflammation of the breasts, running on to suppuration, generally in the childbed female. It is one of the best examples of acute phlegmonous inflammation, and requires the active use of appropriate treatment.

MASTODYNIA POLYGALA, Sparganosis—m. Polygala, Mastospargosis.

MASTOID, Mastoides, Masto'des, Mastoidens, Mammilla'ria, Papilli seu mammilli-formis, Mammiform'is, Mam'miform, (F.) Mastoidien, from μαστος, 'a breast,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Having the form of a nipple. Also, that which relates to the mastoid process, Mastoidiens.

MASTOID APERTURE—the opening of communication between the cavity of the tympanum and the mastoid cells.

MASTOID CANCER. A kind of firm eareinomatous growth, the section of which is thought to resemble the boiled udder of the cow.

MASTOID CELLS, Cellulæ Mastoideæ, Antrum mastoidem, Mastoid Sinus. These are situate in the mastoid process; communicate with each other, and open into the cavity of the tympanum. Their use seems to be to increase the intensity of sound.

MASTOID FORAMEN is situate behind the mastoid process, and gives passage to a small artery of the dura mater, as well as to a vein which opens into the lateral sinus.

MASTOID FOSSA, (F.) Gouttière mastoïdienne, is a depression at the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which forms part of the lateral sinus.

MASTOID or DIGASTRIC GROOVE, (F.) Rainure mastoïdienne ou digastrique, is a groove, situate at the inner side of the mastoid process, which affords attachment to the posterior belly of the digastric muscle.

MASTOID MUSCLE, POSTERIOR, Splenius.

MASTOID or MAMMIFORM or MAMMILLARY PROCESS, Processus mastoïdeus, Apop'ysis mammilla'ria, Part mastoïdea, is situate at the inferior and posterior part of the temporal bone, and gives attachment to the digastric and mastoid muscles.

MASTOIDEUS, Sterno-oleido-mastoideus—m. Lateralis, Complexus minor.

MASTOIDITIS, Mastitis.

MASTOÏDO-CONCHINEN, Retrahens auris—m. Génien, Digastricus—m. Hyogénien, Digastricus—m. Orientalis, Retrahens auris.

MASTOMENIA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and μην, 'a month.' Vicarious menstruation from the mamma.

MASTONUCUS, Thelon'cus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ουκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the nipple, or of the breast itself. When the tumour is of an adipous character it is termed Mastopion'cus or Mastopimelon'cus.

MASTONUCUS POLYGALACTICUS, Mastospargosis.

MASTOPARECTAMA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and παρεκταμα, 'excessive distension.' Immoderate distension of the mammae.

MASTOPATHIA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and παθος, 'disease.' An affection of the breast.

MASTOPIMELONCUS, see Mastoncus.

MASTOPIONCUS, see Mastoncus.

MASTORRHAG'IA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ρρρηξις, 'to flow.' An unusual flow of milk.

MASTOS, Mamma.

MASTOSCIRRHUS, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and σκιρπος, 'a hard tumour.' Scirrhous, or hard cancer of the breast.

MASTOSPARGOSIS, Mastodyn'ia polygala, Maston'cus polygalacticus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and σπαργωω, 'I am full to bursting.' Fulness of the breasts with milk, so that they are ready to burst.

MASTOSYRINX, Fistula mammae, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and συριξ, 'a pipe.' Fistula of the mamma.

MASTURBATION, Cinæ'dia, Gar'galē, Gar'galus, Gargalis'mus, Mastupra'tio, Mannstupra'tio, Manstupra'tio, from manns, 'the hand,' and stupro, 'I ravish'; Onan'is, Onanism, Edwogargaris'mus, Edwogarg'galus, Anaplas'mus, Gon'dia fæda, Duct'io prap'utii, Voluntary Pollu'tion, Self Pollution, Self-abuse, (F.) Abus de soi-même, Attonchement. Excitement of the genital organs by the hand.

MASTURBATOR, Mastupra'tor, Mannstupra'tor, Mascar'pio: same etymon. One given to masturbation.

MASTUS, Mamma.

MAT, (F.) Dull.

MAT SON. A dull or flat sound. The obscure noise, (F.) Matité, afforded in certain diseases when any part, as the chest, is percussed. It has been compared to that produced when the thigh is struck.' It is opposed to the Son clair, or 'clear sound.'

MATE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATECÔ, Matieo.

MATELLA, Urinal.

MATER, Uterus—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Herbarum, Artemisia vulgaris—m. Metallorum, Hydrargyrum—m. Mollis, Pia mater—m. Perlarium, see Pearl—m. Pia, Pia mater—m. Seecalis, Ergot—m. Tennis, Pia mater.

MATERIA, Matter—m. Fibrosa, Fibrin.

MATERIA MEDICA, Pharmacolog'ia, Pharmacol'ogy, Acol'ogy or Acol'ogy or Aceolog'ia, Hylē Iat'ricē, Iamatolog'ia, Iamatol'ogy, (F.) Matière Médicale. The division of medical science which treats of the knowledge of medicines; their action on the animal economy, and mode of administration. The study of the Materia Medica is one of great importance;—it is a study of the tools with which the practitioner has to work in the cure of disease. Much labour has been spent in contriving classifications of the Materia Medica. Some have arranged the articles according to their natural resemblances: others according to their real or presumed virtues: others, according to their active constituent principles. The Pharmacoepias place them alphabetically. Perhaps the best classification would be one founded on the agency exerted by the articles on the different tissues; but this arrangement, in the present state of science, is by no means easy; and, moreover, ideas in regard to the action of medicines are so associated with certain terms,—as narcotics, tonics, sedatives, &c., employed to denote certain operations, which they are esteemed capable of producing, that, to abandon them, would be to throw obstacles in the way of the student, without the ultimate advantage accruing to him of possessing a better knowledge of the modus operandi of medicines than when a classification, somewhat resembling those usually embraced, is adopted.

The following is the classification adopted by the Author, in his "General Therapeutics and Materia Medica, 6th edit., Philad., 1857 :—

Of old, the Materia Medica consisted of more articles than at present. The tendency, indeed, is, and must be, to diminish it still further; to get rid of those articles which possess no advantages over others equally common, or whose properties are doubtful. In a dictionary, it becomes necessary to insert all that have been reputed to possess virtues; but the majority are unnecessary. The catalogue might be largely reduced with impunity.

MATERIA MEDICA, DYNAMICAL, Pharmacodynamics.

MATERIA MORBOSA, M. Peccans, Materies Morbi, Morbid matter. The matter or material which is the cause of disease.

MATERIA OSSEA, Terra Ossea—m. Peccans, M. Morbosa—m. Sialina, see Saliva—m. Scytophica, Tannin—m. Testacea dentium, see Tooth—m. Urinosa, Urea.

MATERIALISTA, Druggist.

MATÉRIAUX IMMÉDIATS, Principles, immediate.

MATERIES, Matter—m. Morbi, Materia morbosa.

MATHEW'S PILLS, Pilulæ ex helleboro et myrrha.

MATHIEU'S VERMIFUGE, see Vermifuge.
MATIAS. The bark of a South American tree not yet determined. It is used in its native country in intermittents, and as a tonic generally. Its principal characteristic constituent is a bitter resinous matter. It is probably the same as the Malambo bark.

MATI'CO, (pronounced matee'co,) Matecô, Matica, Yerba del Soldado, Soldier's weed or herb. A South American herb—Piper angustifolium seu longatum, Stephensia elongata, Artanthe elongata, Ord. Piperacæ—which is possessed of astringent virtues, and is used both internally and externally. It is given in infusion made of one ounce of the leaves to a pint of boiling water, of which the dose is f \bar{z} iss, or in tincture, made of \bar{z} iss of the leaves to a pint of dilute alcohol.

MATIÈRE, Matter—m. Caséuse, Casein—m. Cérébriforme, Encephaloid—m. Extractive du Bonillon, Osmazome—m. Fibreuse du Sang, Fibrin—m. Médicale, Materia Medica—m. de la Mélanose, see Choroidæ tunica—m. Noire des Pommons, Anthracosis—m. Perlée de Kerkring, Antimonium diaphoreticum—m. Pulmonaire noire, see Pulmo.

MATITÉ, see Mat son.

MATLOCK, MINERAL WATERS OF. Matlock is a village in Derbyshire, England, at which there is a mineral spring of the acidulous class. Temperature 66°. It differs but little, except in temperature, from good spring-water. It is generally used as a tepid bath.

MATONIA CARDAMOMUM, Amomum cardamomum.

MATORIUM, Ammoniac, gum.

MATRACIUM, Matras, Urinal.

MATRASS, Matra'cium. A glass vessel with a long neck; and a round, and sometimes oval, body. It may be furnished with tubulures, or not. It is used in Pharmacy for distillation, digestion, &c.

MATRES CEREBRI, Meninges.

MATRICAIRE, Matricaria.

MATRICAR'ALIS, Matricar'alis, from matrix, matricis, 'the uterus.' Relating to the uterus.

Matricalia are remedies for diseases of the uterus.

MATRICAR'IA, from matrix, matricis, 'the womb;' so called from its reputed virtues in affections of that organ. M. Parthe'nium, Parthe'nium febrif'ngum, Py'rethrum seu Chrysanthemum parthe'nium, Argyrochæ'ta, Chrysoc'alis, Fever-few, Feather-few, Mother-wort, Couthwort, (Sc.) Fever-fonillie, (F.) Matricaire. Nat. Ord. Compositæ. The flowers resemble, in their properties, chamomile and tansy; and, like them, have been esteemed tonic, stomachic, resolvent, emmenagogue, vermifuge, &c. They are not much used.

MATRICARIA, see Matricaria chamomilla.

MATRICAR'IA CHAMOMIL'LA, M. Snav'colens, Anthemis vulg'aris, Chamæmum Vulg'arè, Chamomil'la nostras, Lencan'themum of Dioscorides, Wild Corn, Dog's Cham'omile, German Chamomile, (F.) Camomille vulgaire. The flowers, Matricar'ia (Ph. U. S.), resemble Matricaria in properties.

MATRICAR'IA GLABRA'TA. A South African plant, known at the Cape as Wild Chamomile, has the same properties as the other species of matricaria.

MATRICARIA LEUCANTHEMUM, Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum—m. Suaveolens, M. Chamomilla.

MATRICE, Uterus—m. Col de la, Collum uteri—m. de l'Ongle, see Nail.

MATRIC'ULATE, from matricula, diminutive of matrix, matricis, 'a roll,' originally 'an army roll or register.' One who is admitted into a university or college, by enrolling or having his name enrolled on the register of the institution. In France, prendre inscription means 'to matriculate;' and, in the university regulations of that country, it is required, that the inscription shall be made every three months, until the termination of the prescribed period of study; the student having to take his inscription within the first fortnight of each trimestre or of every three months, and to present himself within the last fortnight of the trimestre to establish the fact of his attendance.

In this country, it is only necessary to matriculate at the commencement of each session.

One who has thus enrolled himself in an institution is called a Matriculate.

MATRISYLVVA, Asperula odorata.

MATRIX, Cytoblastema, Uterus—m. Unguis, see Nail.

MATRONA, Midwife.

MATRONALIS, Viola.

MATTEE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATTER, Materia, Hyle, Materia, (F.) Matière. Any substance which enters into the composition of a body. In Medicine, it is sometimes applied to the substance of evacuations; and is also used synonymously with pus.

MATTING OF PARTS, Hapantismus.

MATULA, Urinal.

MATURATION, Matura'tio, from maturare, maturatum, 'to ripen.' Pepas'mos, Pepan'sis. Progression of an abscess towards maturity. The state of maturity. Coction.

MATURATIF, Maturative.

MATURATIVE, Maturans, Pepauticos, (F.) Maturatif. Same etymon. A medicine which favours the maturation of an inflammatory tumour.

MATURATUS, Concocted.

MATURITY, Maturitas, Horæ'otes. Same etymon. The state of fruits and seeds, when comparatively developed. State of an abscess, in which the pus is completely formed.

MATURITY, Precocious, Precocity.

MAUDLIN, Achillea ageratum—m. Tansey, Achillea ageratum—m. Wort, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MAULES, Rubeola.

MAUVE SAUVAGE, Malva.

MAUX DE NERFS, Hysteria.

MAW, Stomach—m. Bound, Constipated—m. Worm, Asearis.

MAXILLA, Maxillary Bone.

MAXILLARY, Maxilla'ris, (F.) Maxillaire, from maxilla, 'a jaw.' Relating or belonging to the jaws; from μασσω, 'I chew.'

MAXILLARY ARTERIES are three in number. 1. External maxillary. See Facial. 2. Internal maxillary—A. Gatturo-maxillaire (Ch.). This arises from the external carotid with the temporal. It is remarkable for its complex course, and for the number of branches which it transmits to the deep-seated parts of the face. Immediately after its origin, it buries itself under the neck of the lower jaw, curving inwards and downwards. It then advances directly inwards; proceeding in the space between the two pterygoid muscles towards the maxillary tuberosity. It turns again, becomes vertical, and ascends into the bottom of the zygomatic fossa, until, having arrived at the floor of the orbit, it takes a horizontal and transverse direction; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, and divides into several branches. See Artery, (table.)

MAXILLARY BONE, Maxilla, Maudib'ula, Gam'phè, Guathus, Mola, Siugon, Juchone, (Prov.) Chafbone, Chall, Chanle, Chavel, Charbone, Gill, (F.) Mâchoire. A name given to two bones, which support the teeth, and, by means of them, are inservient to the cutting, bruising, and tearing of alimentary substances.

MAXILLARY BONE, INFERIOR, Lower jaw-bone, Os Maxilla'rè inferius, Maxilla inferior, Hypostigon, (F.) Os maxillaire (Ch.), Mâchoire d'antérieure, is a symmetrical, nearly parabolic bone, the middle portion of which is horizontal, and called the body; and the posterior is vertical, the angular portions being termed Rami or branches. These have behind a parotidæan edge, which forms—by uniting with the base—the angle of the jaw. The branches terminate above by two processes, separated by the sigmoid notch or fossa; the anterior of which is called the coronoid; the posterior, the condyloid process or maxillary condyle, supported by a Cervix, Collum, or Neck. The chief parts observed on the lower jaw are—1. Externally,—the Symphysis menti, Apophysis menti, Mental foramen, and the external oblique line. 2. Internally,—the Genium apophysis, the internal or Myloid oblique lines, and the entrance of the dental canal. The lower jaw has, also, an alveolar edge, which contains alveoli for the reception of the teeth. The lower jaw-bone is developed by two points of ossification, which unite at the symphysis of the chin. It is articulated with the temporal bone and with the teeth.

MAXILLARY BONE, SUPERIOR, Upper jaw-bone, Maxilla superior seu zygomatica, Os maxilla'rè superius, (F.) Os sus-maxillaire (Ch.), Mâchoire supérieure. The upper jaw-bones are to the face what the sphenoid bone is to the cranium. They are articulated with all the portions composing it. They determine, almost alone, the shape of the face, and give it solidity. Their size is considerable; form unequal. They occupy the middle and anterior part of the face; and enter into the composition of the nasal fossæ, orbit, and mouth. The chief parts observable in the upper jaw are—1. Externally,—the Nasal process, Processus nasalis seu frontalis seu ascendens, (F.) Apophyse montante, the superior or orbital surface, Superficies orbitalis, Planum orbitale, which forms almost the entire floor of the orbit, the Foramen infra-orbitarium, Zygomatic process, Canine or Myrtiform fossa. 2. Internally,—the Palatine process, Anterior palatine canal, and the Antrum of Highmore. Its circumference is very unequal, and it has behind a round, unequal prominence, called the Maxillary tuberosity, which is pierced by the posterior dental canal. Anteriorly, there is a notch, which forms part of the anterior aperture of the nasal fossæ, and beneath, an eminence, called the anterior nasal spine. The lower part of this circumference forms the alveolar margin. Each superior maxillary bone is articulated with the ethmoid, frontal, nasal, lachrymal, palatine, inferior spongy, vomer, its fellow, the teeth of the upper jaw, and sometimes the sphenoid bone. It is developed by four or five points of ossification.

MAXILLARY NERVES are two in number, and formed of the second and third branches of the fifth pair. The SUPERIOR MAXILLARY NERVE, Nervus sus-maxillaire (Ch.), arises from the middle of the gangliform enlargement of the fifth pair; passes forwards, and issues from the cranium through the foramen rotundum of the sphenoid bone; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, which it crosses horizontally; passes into the infra-orbital canal, which it traverses; and makes its exit to vanish on the cheek. It gives off the following branches,—the orbital, a branch which goes to the spheno-palatine ganglion; posterior dental branches; the anterior dental,—and terminates in the infra-orbital nerves, which are divided into superior, inferior, and internal. The inferior maxillary nerve, Nervus maxillaire (Ch.), is the largest of the three branches furnished by the fifth pair. It issues from the cranium by the foramen ovale of the sphenoid. Having reached the zygomatic fossa, it divides into two trunks; the one superior and external, which gives off the temporales profundi, masseterius, buccal, and pterygoids;—the other—inferior and internal—the larger of the two, which furnishes the inferior dental, lingual, and auricular.

MAXILLARY VEINS present the same arrangement as the arteries they accompany.

MAXILLO-ALVÉOLI-NASAL, Depressor alæ nasi—m. Labial, Depressor anguli oris—m. Narinal, Compressor naris—m. Palpebrat, Orbicularis palpebrarum—m. Scleroticien, Obliquus inferior oculi.

MAY APPLE, Podophyllum peltatum—m. a. Mountain, Podophyllum montanum—m. Flower, Anthemis cotula—m. Weed, Anthemis cotula.

MAYELLA, Curcuma longa.

MAYNARD'S ADHESIVE LIQUID, Colloidin.

MAYS, Zea mays—m. Americana, Zea mays—m. Zea, Zea mays.

MAYWORM, TRUE, Meloe majalis.

MAYZ, Zea mays.

MAZA, Mass, Placenta.

MAZALYSIS, Mazolysis.

MA'ZICUS, from maza, 'placenta.' Relating to the placenta.

MAZISCH'ESIS, from maza, 'the placenta,' and σχσις, 'holding,' 'retention.' Retention of the placenta.

MAZODYNIA, Mastodynia.

MAZOITIS, Mastitis.

MAZOL'YSIS, Mazal'ysis, from maza, 'placenta,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Separation of the placenta.

MAZOPATHIA, from maza, 'placenta,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of the placenta. One originating from the placenta.

MAZOS, Mamma.

MEAD, Hydromeli, Melizomum.

MEADOW BLOOM, Ranunculus acris—m. Fern, Comptonia asplenifolia—m. Pridge, see Calumba—m. Rue, Thalictron—m. Saffron, Vinegar of, Acetum colchici—m. Sweet, Gillenia trifoliata, Spiraea ulmaria—m. Sweet, American, Spiraea lobata—m. Sweet, red, Spiraea tomentosa.

MEALY TREE, Viburnum dentatum.

MEASLES, Rubeola—m. Black, see Rubeola—m. False, Roseolæ—m. French, Roseolæ.

MEASLINGS, Rubeola.

MEASLY, Morbilous.

MEASURE, GRADUATED. A glass measure, used in pharmacy, which is so divided as to indicate accurately the quantities in dispensing liquid medicines.

MEASUREMENT, Mensuration.

MEASURES, see Weights and Measures.

MEASURING, MEDICAL, Mensuration.

MEAT BISCUIT, see Biscuit, meat.

MEAT, EXTRACTIVE OF, Osmazome.

MÉAT, Meatus.

MEAT'US, Ductus, Canal'is, Porus, (F.) Méat, from meo, meatum, 'to go.' A passage or canal.

MEATUS AUDITORIUS EXTERNUS, Auditory canal, external—m. Auditorius internus, Auditory canal, internal—m. Cæcus, Eustachian tube—m. Cuticulares, Pori cutanei—m. Cysticus, Cystic duct—m. Narium, see Nasal fossæ—m. Seminales uteri, Tubæ Fallopianæ—m. Seminarius, Corpus Highmori—m. Urinarius, Urethra.

MECHAMECK, Convolvulus panduratus—m. Bindweed, Convolvulus panduratus.

MECHANE, Machine.

MECHANEMA, Machine.

MECHAN'ICAL, Mechan'icus, from μηχανη, 'a machine.' An epithet given to irritating bodies, which do not act chymically—as a mechanical irritant.

MECHANICAL or IATRO-MATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iâ'tro-mechan'ici seu Iâ'tromathemat'ici, are such as refer every function, healthy or morbid, to mechanical or mathematical principles;—Medic'na mechan'ica.

MECHAN'ICS, AN'IMAL. That part of physiology whose objects are to investigate the laws of equilibrium and motion of the animal body.

MECH'ANISM, Mechanism'us. The structure of a body; the collection or aggregate of the parts of a machine; the mode in which forces produce any effect, &c.

MÈCHE, Tent. This term is usually applied in French surgery to a collection of threads of charpie, cotton or raw silk, united together, which are used for detaching sinuous or fistulous ulcers; or to keep open or enlarge natural or artificial apertures. They are generally applied by means of an instrument called Porte-mèche.

MECHOACANA NIGRA, Convolvulus jalapa—m. Nigricans, Convolvulus jalapa.

MECHOACANÆ RADIX, Convolvulus mechoacan.

MÉCHOACAN DU CANADA, Phytolacca decandra.

MECOM'ETER, (F.) Mécomètre; from μηκος, 'length,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A kind of graduated compass,—compas de proportion,—used at the Hospice de Maternité of Paris, to measure the length of new-born infants.

MECON, Meconium, Opium, Papaver.

MECONICUM, Opiate.

MECONIS'MUS, Intoxicatio opia'ca; from μηκων, 'the poppy.' Poisoning by opium.

MECO'NIUM, same etymon. Poppy juice, Papaver'culum, Purgament'a Infant'is, Mecon. The excrement passed by the infant a short time after birth, which had accumulated in the intestines during pregnancy. It is of a greenish or deep black colour, and very viscid. It seems formed of the mucous secretions of the intestines mixed with bile.

MECONOLOG'IA, Opiolog'ia; from μηκων, 'a poppy,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on opium.

MECONOPSIS DIPHYLLA, Stylophorum diphyllum.

MEDCINARE, Doctor.

MEDEA, Genital organs.

MÉDECIN, Physician—m. Consultant, Consulting physician—m. de Fous, see Psychiatria.

MÉDECINE, Medicina—m. Expectante, Expectation—m. Légale, Medicine, legal—m. Militaire, Military medicine—m. Opératoire, Surgery, operative—m. Perturbatrice, Perturbatrix (Medicina.)

MEDELA, Curation.

MEDE'NI. A term used by Paracelsus for cutaneous ulcerations like those of boils.

MEDEOLA VERTICILLIFOLIA, M. Virginica.

MEDE'OLA VIRGIN'ICA, M. verticillifolia, Gyro'mia Virgin'ica, Indian cucumber. Order, Smilacæ. An indigenous herb, growing in every part of the United States, the root of which resembles a small cucumber. It has been thought to be diuretic.

MEDIAN, Medi'nus; from medius, 'the middle.' That which is situate in the middle.

MEDIAN LINE. A vertical line, supposed to divide a body longitudinally into two equal parts; the one right, the other left. Chaussier calls the linea alba the ligue médiane of the abdomen.

MEDIAN NERVE, Médian digital, (Ch.) This nerve arises chiefly from the anterior branches of Four-ounce Glass Measure.

the last two cervical nerves and first dorsal. The fifth and sixth cervical pairs also send it a branch, which separates from the musculo-cutaneous nerve. The median nerve descends the inner part of the arm along the biceps muscle. Opposite the elbow joint it buries itself behind the aponeurosis of that muscle, and engages itself between the two fasciculi of the pronator teres. Lower down, it is situate between the flexors—sublimis and profundus—and passes, with their tendons, under the anterior annular ligament; it then divides into five branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the thenar eminence, to the lumbricales, the integuments of the thumb, the index, middle finger, and outer part of the ring finger. This nerve gives no branches to the arm. In the forearm, it furnishes filaments to all the pronator and flexor muscles; and one of them accompanies the anterior interosseous artery. It also gives off a filament to the integuments of the palm of the hand.

MEDIAN VEINS. Three of the superficial veins of the forearm are so called. The median basilic—the median cephalic and common median or junior branchii. See Basilic and Cephalic.

MEDIUM, Mediastinum, Mesenterij.

MEDIAS'TINAL, Mediastinalis, (F.) Médiastin. Relating to the Mediastinum.

MEDIASTINAL ARTERIES are very delicate arterial branches, distributed in the areolar texture of the mediastinum. They are distinguished, according to their situation, into anterior and posterior.

MEDIASTINITIS, Mesodmitis.

MEDIASTINUM, Mediastinus, quasi, in medio stans, as being in the middle: Mesod'mē, Mediannum, Mesot'chium, Mesot'chium, Septum thoracis, Hymen Diaphragmaton, Membrana Diaphragmaton seu thoracem intersepiens, Intersepiantum thoracis, Diribitorium, Dissipimentum thoracis, (F.) Médiastin. A membranous space formed by the approximation of the pleuræ, dividing the chest into two parts, the one right, the other left. The mediastinum, formed by a double reflection of the pleura, extends from the spine to the posterior surface of the sternum. Its anterior part, called Anterior mediastinum, Mediastinum pectoralē, lodges, at its upper part, the thymus gland in the fetus, and is filled below with fatty, areolar tissue. Its posterior part, parallel to the spine, is occupied by the œsophagus, vena azygos, thoracic duct, the lower part of the windpipe, the origin of the bronchia and a number of lymphatic glands. This part is called the posterior mediastinum—Mediastinum darsalē.

By some anatomists, Mediastinum is defined to be the pleural walls of the membranous space, whilst the space itself is termed Cavum mediastini.

MEDIASTINUM AURIS, see Tympanum—m. Cerebri, Falx cerebri, Septum lucidum—m. Testis, Corpus Highinori.

MEDIASTINUS, Mediastinum.

MEDICABILIS, Curable.

MEDICABLE, Curable.

MEDICÆ. Sworn midwives, whose duty it was, of old, to inspect women in cases of suspected pregnancy.

MEDICAL, Medicus, Iat'ricus, Pæon'ius, Pæon'icus, Physical (of old). Essent'ipian, (F.) Médical. Same etymon as Medicamentum. Appertaining or relating to medicine or to medicines.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, Medicine, legal—m. Man, Surgeon-Apothecary.

MEDICALIS, Medical.

MEDICAMENTUM, Medicamentum, Remedium, Aces'is, Aces'ma, Aces'tim, Aces'tys, Althos, Hygin'um, I'um, Aces, Medic'um, Pharm'acum, Pharmacem'mu, Alkar, Aucil'ium, Bothē'ma,

*Med'icine, (old E.) Medicine; Physic, Rem'edy, Rem'etic, (F.) Remède; from medicor, medicator, 'to cure or heal.' A medicine. Any substance exhibited with the view of curing or allaying morbid action. Medicines are obtained from the three kingdoms of nature, and are divided into internal and external, according as they are administered internally or applied externally.*

In common language, medicine is often called Stuff, Doctors' stuff, and, in the Southern States, Truck.

MEDICAMENTAL, Medicinal.

MEDICAMENTO'SUS LAPIS, Medic'inal stone, (F.) Pierre médicamenteuse. A name formerly given to a mixture of peroxyd of iron, litharge, alum, nitre, sul ammoniac, and vinegar; evaporated and calcined at a red heat for an hour. The product was regarded as eminently astringent.

MEDICAMENTUM, Drug—m. ex Palmulis, Diaphænicum.

MEDICASTER, Medicastra. An ignorant practitioner. A charlatan.

MEDICATION, Medicatio. Same etymon as Medicamentum. The change in the animal economy produced by the operation of remedies. Treatment by medicine. The act of impregnating with some medicine.

MÉDICATION HYPODERMIQUE, see Hypodermic.

MEDICATRINA, Iatronicum.

MEDICATRIX, same etymon. 'Having the power of healing.' A female practitioner.

MEDICINA, Ars medicæ seu Muchō'nia seu Muchō'nicia, Res medica, Iat'rica, Iat'ria, Iat'ri'a, Iat'ri'ne, Pæos'ynē, Pæon'icē, Iatrotech'nicē, Acesot'ria, Scien'tia medicæ seu medendi, Sote'ria doct'ria, Med'icine, (old E.) Medicine, The healing art, Leech craft, Physic, (F.) Médecine. Same etymon. A science, the object of which is the cure of disease and the preservation of health. Occasionally, it is used to comprehend all the branches of the healing art; at others to comprise one great division, in contradistinction to surgery and obstetrics. Medicine, in this sense, includes many branches;—the chief of which are, Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Therapeutics, Hygiene, Materia Medica, and Pharmacy.

MEDICINABLE, Medicinal.

MEDIC'INAL, Medicin'alis, Medicament'al, Medic'inalis, Med'ical, Iat'ricus, Rem'edial, Rem'ediate, (F.) Médicinal, Médicamentenz. Same etymon. Having a remedial power;—as medicinal plants, &c. Relating to medicine, as MEDIC'INAL DAYS, Medicin'ales Dies. Days on which the ancients considered that remedies might be administered; and especially evacuants. Such days were not esteemed critical.

MEDICINAL HOURS. Times at which—the stomach being freed from its digestive actions—medicine, it was thought, could be most advantageously administered, as in the morning fasting, an hour before dinner, some hours after it, and at bedtime.

MEDICINE, Medicament, Medicina.

MEDICINE is, also, used in the same sense as Medicament, and for a purging potion.

To MEDICINE was formerly used for "to restore or cure by medicine."

MEDICINE CHEST, Pharmacotheca.

MEDULLA, Marrow — m. Cerebri, see Cerebrum — m. Dorsalis, M. Spinalis — m. Dorsualis, M. Spinalis — m. Nervorum, Neurine.

MEDUL'LA OBLONGA'TA, Oblong medulla, Cerebral protuberance, Nervous system of the senses, (Gall), Cerebrum elongatum, (F.) Mésocephale, Moëlle allongée, Mésencephale, (Ch.) The medullary substance that lies within the cranium upon the basilar process of the occipital bone. The anterior surface which rests in the basilar groove, is impressed by the basilar artery. At the upper extremity, and on its posterior surface are the Tubercula quadrigemina. At the same extremity, the medulla gives rise to two prolongations, the peduncles of the brain, separated from each other by the mammillary eminences, and becoming lost in the optic thalami. The lower extremity is called the tail or Rachidian bulb, Bulbus medull'æ spina'lis seu rachid'icus, (F.)

Bulbe rachidien, and is continuous with the medulla spinalis. It is to this part only that some anatomists apply the name Medulla oblongata. From the posterior angles two other prolongations arise, called Peduncles of the cerebellum. The medulla oblongata has several eminences — the Pons varolii, Corpora pyramidalia, C. olivaria, &c. — and it has a longitudinal fissure before, and another behind, called the anterior and posterior median fissures. The vesicular neurine in the centre of the medulla is the nervous centre of respiration and deglutition: hence it has been called centrum vitale.

MEDULLA OSSIUM, Marrow — m. Spinæ, M. spinalis.

MEDUL'LA SPINA' LIS seu Spinæ seu dorsualis seu vertebra'lis seu dorsal'is, Corda spina'lis, Fnuis argen'tens, Rhachetrum, My'elus, M. rachit'es seu noti'us seu diache'nius seu psōi'tes, My'elon, Notomy'elus, Rhachit'es, Eon, Processus rachidia'ms, Sacra fistula, Spinal prolongation, Vertebral marrow, Spinal cord or marrow, Nervous system of voluntary motion and tactile impression (Gall), (F.) Moëlle épinière, Moëlle vertébrale, called by Ch., Prolongement rachidien of the encephalon, is the continuation of the medulla oblongata. It commences at the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, and descends in the vertebral canal as low as the 2d lumbar vertebra, without filling it; presenting, in its course, several evident enlargements. It is grooved on both its anterior and posterior surfaces by a furrow, which divides it, in its whole length, into two great nervous cords, intimately united with each other. It terminates by an oval tubercle, whence a number of nerves set out called Cauda equi'na, (F.) Queue de cheval, from its resemblance to a horse's tail. The spinal marrow has no analogy, as regards its structure, with the marrow of long bones. It is formed of two substances; one white, the other gray, presenting an inverse arrangement to that which they have in the brain, the white being external, the cineritious at the centre, Substantia grisea centralis. It is enveloped by a yellowish, fibrous membrane, very resisting, which seems to be continued insensibly from the pia mater, and by two other membranes, which are merely prolongations of the arachnoid and dura mater. See Nerve.

MEDULLA VERTEBRALIS, M. spinalis.

MEDULLÆ, Sperm.

MED'ULLARY, Medulla'ris, (F.) Médulloire, from medulla, 'marrow.' Relating to the marrow, or analogous to marrow.

MEDULLARY ARTERIES. The arteries, which enter bones and pass to the marrow.

MEDULLARY CANAL, see Canal, medullary — m. Cells, see Medullary Membrane — m. Juice, Marrow — m. Matter of the brain, see Cerebrum.

MEDULLARY MEMBRANE, Perio'steum Inter'num, Endos'teum. A vascular, areolar web of extreme tenuity, which envelops the marrow and lines the inner surface of the medullary canal of the long bones. This membrane has been considered as a species of internal periosteum of those bones. It has numerous vessels, which bury themselves in the thickness of the marrow; and others which nourish the innermost plates of the bone. The cells formed by it are termed Cellulæ seu Sacculi medulla' res.

MEDULLARY NEURINE, see Neurine — m. Sarcoma, Encephaloid, Hæmatodes fungus.

MEDULLARY SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney — m. s. of Schwann, see Nerve-fibre.

MEDULLARY SYSTEM. Bichat gives this name to the marrow and its membranes. He distinguishes two species of medullary systems; the one occupies the cellular tissue at the extremities of the long bones and that of the flat and short bones; the other is found merely in the central canal of long bones.

MEDULLARY TUMOUR OF THE LUNGS, Phthisis, cancerous.

MEDULLITIS, Myelitis. M. Gerdy uses Mé-dullite for inflammation of the marrow of bones, Osteomyelitis. — Myelitis being usually appropriated to inflammation of the spinal marrow.

MEERAN, Daucus carota.

MEGALANTHROGENESIS, from μεγας.

μεγαλη, 'great,' ανθρωπος, 'man,' and γενεσις, 'birth.' A term used by a French physician, named Robert, to designate the art of procreating great men; men of mind; men of genius. He considered that they may be perpetuated by always taking care to have talented men united to clever women!

MEGALOCARDIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and καρδια, 'heart.' The state of having a very large heart.

MEGALOCÆLIA, Intestine, great, Megalospheenia.

MEGALOMELIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A monstrosity characterized by very large limbs.

MEGALOPHONIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and φωνη, 'voice.' The condition of having a full, strong voice.

MEGALOPHTHALMUS, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' A congenital deformity, in which the eye is inordinately large.

MEGALOPUS, Macropodus.

MEGALOSPLANCHNUS, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and σπλαγγχνον, 'a viscus.' Megalocœlia. Hippocrates applies the epithet to those in whom a viscus, or the viscera, are tumid. Some have used the substantive Megalosplanchnia for the tumour itself.

MEGALOSPLENIA, Splenoneus.

MEGETHOS, Stature.

MEGRIM, Hemierania.

MEIBOMIUS, GLANDS OF, Follicles of M.

Palpebræ or Ciliary Follicles, Glandulæ sebaceæ ciliatæ seu Meibomia, Intestiuula Meibomia, Lacina palpebrarum, (F.) Follicules palpébraux ou ciliaires, Glandes de Meibomius. Small, sebaceous follicles, called after Henry Meibomius, although known long before his description of them. They are situate in special grooves in the tarsal cartilages; and are ranged by the side of each other, in the form of yellowish, parallel, and vertical lines; sometimes straight, at others, tortuous. They may be seen at the inner surface of the eyelids, through the conjunctiva, and secrete a sebaceous humour, called Lippitudo, Gum, (F.) Chassie.

MEIOSIS, Meiosis, Miosis, Imminutio, Minutio, Minutio, from μειωω, 'I lessen.' The period of a disease, in which the symptoms begin to diminish; — the decline. Remission. Also, idiotism.

MEIUROS, Deertatus, Myurus.

MEKILWORT, Atropa belladonna.

MEL, Meli, Niliacum, Honey, (F.) Miel. A substance of a mucro-saccharine nature, prepared by the Apis mellifica, or common bee, which collects it from the nectaries of flowers. Honey is employed as aliment, condiment, and medicine. It is demulcent and aperient; and is prescribed as an adjunct to gargles in cynanche tonsillaris, &c. It is, at times, used as a detergent to foul ulcers. Virgin Honey, Mel virginum seu virginum, (F.) Miel vierge, is that which flows from the wax spontaneously.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY is formed of balsam of tolu, ℥j, honey, ℥j, rectified spirit, one gallon. It was long a celebrated empirical pectoral.

HONEY WATER is a mixture of essences coloured with saffron. A little honey is added to communicate a clamminess; the effect of which is to make it retain the scent the longer. It is used as a scent.

MÉLANOSE, Melanosis.

MELANO'SIS, Melan'sis, Melano'ma, Nigritu'do, (F.) Dégénérescence noire, Mélanose; from μελας, μελας, 'black.' An organic affection, in which the tissue of the parts is converted, owing to a melan'ic deposit, into a black, hard, homogeneous substance, near which ulcers or cavities may form; — owing to the softening, either of the substance itself, or of some other morbid tissue, — of tubercles especially. This morbid change affects the lungs particularly; when it is called Melano'sis seu Melano'ma seu Anthracos'ia Pulmo'num, Melanopneu'mon, Nigritu'do melano'ica, Melan'sis Pulmonum, Pneumonomelano'sis, Black tubercle, (F.) Mélanose Pulmonaire. It is, also, met with in the liver and areolar texture. Its causes are very obscure. Melanosis of the lungs constitutes one of the species of phthisis of Bayle; but it is impossible to distinguish it from the other species during life.

In the classification of Fuchs, Melanosen (G.) forms a family of diseases.

The deposition of melanic matter in the tissues is not necessarily connected with malignant disease. See Cancer, melanotic.

MELANOSIS PULMONUM, see Melanosis — m. Universalis, Venosity.

MELANOSMEGMA, see Sapo.

MELANOSPONGUS, Melanomy'ces, from μελας, μελας, 'black,' and σπογγος, 'sponge.' The tuberiform variety of melanosis of the lungs.

MEMBRA'NA PUTAM'INIS, (putamen, 'a shell or husk.') Pellic'ula Ovi. The membrane adherent to the inner surface of the eggshell. — Putamen seu Testa Ovi.

MEMBRANA RETIFORMIS CHORII, Decidua reflexa — m. Ruyschiana, Choroid (inner layer.)

MEMBRANA SACCIFORM'IS. A separate synovial membrane for the inferior radio-cubital articulation, which covers the upper surface of the triangular ligament, and the sort of incomplete ring which circumscribes the head of the ulna.

MEMBRANA SEMIPELLUCIDA, Caligo — m. Scroosa, Membrane (serous) — m. Sinuosa, Decidua — m. Subcostalis, Pleura — m. Succingens, Diaphragm, Pleura.

MEMBRANA TESTÆ, Shell membrane. The membrane that lines the shell of the bird's egg:—a simple membrane.

MEMBRANA THORACEM INTERSEMIENS, Media-stinum—m. Tympani, see Tympanum—m. Tympani secundaria, see Fenestra—m. Urinaria, Al-lantois—m. Uteri interna evoluta, Decidua—*m. MEMBRANA VERSICOLOR. A peculiar membrane—according to Mr. Fielding, of Hull—situate immediately behind the retina, and in connexion with it. It is separable into distinct layers from the choroid, and is supplied with blood-vessels.

MEMBRANA WACHENDORFIANA, Pupillary membrane.

MEMBRANACEOUS, Membranous.

MEMBRANE, Membrana, Hymen, Meninx, Ependyma, Pan'nicle. A name given to different thin organs, representing a species of supple, more or less elastic, webs; varying in their structure and vital properties, and intended, in general, to absorb or secrete certain fluids; and to separate, envelop, and form other organs. Bichat has divided the membranes into simple and compound.

Simple membranes comprise three orders. 1. A Mucous membrane, Membrana mucosa seu pituitosa seu pituitaria, Phleg'mymen, Phlegmat'hymen, Membrane folliculense (Ch.), is so called, on account of the mucous fluid by which it is constantly lubricated. Mucous membranes line the canals, cavities, and hollow organs, which communicate externally by different apertures on the skin. Bichat refers them to two great divisions—the gastro-pulmonary, and the genito-urinary. The mucous membranes have a striking analogy with the cutaneous tissue, in organization, functions, and diseases. They are composed of chorion, papillæ, and epidermis; and are furnished with a multitude of follicles, which secrete a viscid humour,—mucus. They receive a quantity of arterial vessels, veins, lymphatics, and nerves. 2. The Serous membranes, Membrana serosa, M. villenses simple (Ch.), are transparent, thin, and composed of one lamina. One surface adheres to other textures; the other is smooth, polished, and moistened by a serous fluid. They are arranged—in the form of sacs without apertures—as great, intermediate reservoirs for the exhalant and absorbent systems, in which the serous fluid, in passing from one system, carries some time before it enters the other. The serous membranes resemble the areolar membrane in structure and diseases. They facilitate the motion on each other of the organs which they envelop. They may be divided into (a) Serous membranes, properly so called; as the arachnoid, pleura, peritoneum, and tunica vaginalis. (b) Synovial membranes or capsules; which belong to joints, tendons, aponeuroses, &c. These membranes—mucous and serous—are constituted of similar layers—epithelium, basement membrane, condensed areolar tissue; and a looser form of areolar tissue, termed submucous in one case,—subserous in the other. 3. Fibrous membranes, Membranes albugineuses (Ch.) These are almost all continuous, and terminate at the periosteum—their common centre. They have been divided into two sections. 1. Enveloping aponeuroses, Aponeuroses of insertion, Fibrous capsules of the joints, and Fibrous sheath of tendons. 2. The Periosteum, Dura mater, Sclerotica, Tunica albuginea testis, Fibrous membrane of the spleen, &c. The fibrous membranes are not free or moistened by any particular fluid. They adhere by both surfaces to the neighbouring parts; are firm, resisting, but slightly elastic, and of a white colour; sometimes pearly and glistening. Their vessels are numerous, in some, as in the dura mater and periosteum; in others, scarcely perceptible, as in the aponeuroses. The presence of nerves has never been proved, although several circumstances, regarding their sensibility, render their existence probable. The fibrous membranes serve, in general, to augment the solidity of the organs which they envelop; to retain the muscles in their respective positions; to favour the motion of the limbs, and that of the muscles and skin; to form canals and rings for the passage of different organs, &c.

Bichat admits three species of Compound Membranes. 1. The Sero-fibrous, formed of a serous and fibrous lamina, intimately adherent to each other;—as the pericardium, dura mater, and tunica albuginea. 2. The Sero-mucous, formed of a serous and mucous lamina;—as the gall-bladder at its lower part. 3. The Fibro-mucous, constituted of the union of a fibrous and mucous membrane; as the mucous membrane of the nasal fossæ, gums, &c. Chaussier admits six kinds of membranes. 1. The laminated. See Cellular Tissue. 2. The serous or simple villous. 3. The follicular or complicated villous. 4. The muscular or fleshy. 5. The albugineous. 6. The albuminous.

MEMBRANE, ACCIDENTAL, M. false—m. Accidentelle, M. false—m. Adnæe, Conjunctiva—m. Adventitious, M. false—m. Anhistous, Decidua.

MEMBRANE, BASEMENT, Primary or liminary membrane, Membrana propria. A delicate, structureless lamella of membrane found beneath the epidermis or epithelium, on all the free surfaces of the body.

MEMBRANE CADUQUE, Decidua—m. Caduque réfléchie, Decidua reflexa—m. de Demours, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea—m. de Desceemet, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea.

MEMBRANE, FALSE, Accidental or Adventitious membrane, Pseudo-membrane, Pseud'hymen, Pseudomeninx, (F.) Fausse membrane, M. accidentelle. Membranous productions, which form on all the free natural surfaces, and on every free accidental surface, are so called. They are, in general, produced by the exudation of a fibrinous matter, susceptible of organization, which takes place in consequence of inflammation of the various tissues. These accidental membranes occur on the skin after the application of a blister; on mucous surfaces, as in croup; on the parietes of inflamed veins and arteries, &c. The cicatrices of wounds are formed of them.

Of late, it has been proposed to give the name pseudo-membrane to fibrinous exudations, which are devoid of organization, whilst neo-membrane may be applied to such fresh productions as have become supplied with vessels and nerves.

MEMBRANE FAUSSE, Membrane, false—m. Germinal, see Molecule—m. Granular, Membrana granulosa—m. Granulose, Membrana granulosa—m. Haptogen, see Haptogenous—*m. MEMBRANES ALBUGINEUSES, Membranes, fibrous, see Albuginea—m. Folliculenses, Membranes, mucous—m. Veloutées, Villous membranes—m. Villenses simples, Membranes, serous.

MEMBRANES OF THE FÆTUS, Membrana fœtum involventes, Velamenta infantia, Integumenta fœtus, The membranes. The membranes which immediately envelop the fœtus in the cavity of the uterus, and the rupture of which gives rise to the discharge of the liquor amnii. These membranes are the decidua, chorion, and amnion.

MEMBRANES. THE. Membranes of the Fœtus.

MEMBRANEUX. Membranous.

MEMBRANIFORM, Membraniformis, from membrana, and forma:—resembling a membrane. A name given to thin and flat parts, which resemble membranes.

MEMBRANIFORM MUSCLES. Very broad and thin muscles, as the platysma myoides, obliquus abdominis, &c.

MEMBRANOSUS, Fascia lata muscule.

MEMBRANOUS, Membranosus, Membranaceus, Hymenodes, (F.) Membraneux. Having the nature of membrane. Formed of membrane.

MEMBRANULA, Hymenium—m. Coronæ ciliaris, see Ciliary—m. Lunata Vaginæ, Hymen—m. Nervorum, Neurilemma—m. Semilunaris conjunctivæ, Valvula semilunaris.

MEMBRANULE, Membranula, diminutive of membrana, 'a membrane.' A small membrane.

MEMBRE, Membrum—m. Viril, Penis.

MEMBROSUS, Membrosior, Mentulatus, Muttoniatus, Nasutus, calidè Mentulatus, Fascinosus, Psolon, (F.) Membrum, from membrum, 'the male organ.' One whose penis is very large.

MEMBRU, Membrosus.

MEMBRUM, Artus, Melos, Colon, a limb, a member, (F.) Membre. The limbs or extremities or members of animals are certain parts exterior to the body, which are more or less apparent, long, and moveable. It is by means of their limbs, that animals transport themselves from one place to another; and that they defend themselves, or attack others. The limbs are arranged on each side of the trunk, with which they are articulated. In man, they are four in number:—two upper or thoracic, and two lower, pelvic or abdominal. Also, the male organ.

MEMBRUM GENITALE VIRORUM. Penis—m. Muliebri, Clitoris—m. Seminale, Penis—m. Virile, Penis.

MEMOIRE, Memory—m. Perte de, Amnesia.

MEMORIA DELETA, Amnesia.

MEMORY, Memoira, Muemè, Recordatio, Recordatus, (F.) Mémoire. The cerebral faculty, by virtue of which past impressions are recalled to the mind.

MEMPHITES LAPIS. A sort of stone, found anciently in the environs of Memphis; which was esteemed narcotic.

MENAGOGUES, Emmenagogues.

MENDESION, Ægyptiacum.

MENE, Moon.

MENECRATIS ACCIPITER, Accipiter.

MENELCO'SIS, Ulcernia, from μην, 'a month,' and ἔλκος, 'ulceration.' Vicarious menstruation from an ulcer.

MENES, Menses.

MÉNESPAUSIE, see Menses.

MENDRO'SIS, from μην, 'a month, and ἰδρωσις, 'sweating.' A sweating of menstrual blood.—Bock.

MENFRIGE, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MENINGARTHROACÆ, Inflammatio membrarum articulationis, Arthromeningitis, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'membrane,' arthron, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'disease.' Inflammation of the membranes of a joint.

MÉNINGE, Dura mater.

MENINGÉ, Meningeal.

MENIN'GEAL, Menin'gens, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' (F.) Méningé. Relating to the meninges, or merely to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL APOPLEXY, see Apoplexy.

MENINGEAL ARTERY, MIDDLE, Arteria menin'gea media seu Sphæno-spino'sa seu Dura Matris media max'ima seu Sphæno-spinalis, Spinal Ar- tery, (F.) Artère méningée moyenne ou Sphæno-épineuse, ou Épineuse, is the largest of the branches given off by the internal maxillary artery. It enters the cranium by the foramen spinale, and distributes its branches chiefly to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL VESSELS, Vasa menin'gea. The vessels of the membranes of the brain.

MENIN'GES, Eilam'ides, Matres seu Involucra Cerebri, Omen'ta seu Velumenta cerebri'lia, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' The three membranes which envelop the brain—Dura mater, Arachnoid, and Pia mater.

MÉNINGETTE, Pia mater.

MENINGITIS, Meningitis.

MENINGINA, (F.) Méningine. Same etymon. A name given by Chaussier to the pia mater, united to the cerebral layer of the arachnoid.

MENINGINA, INNER LAMINA OF THE, Pia mater.

MÉNINGINE, Meningina.

MÉNINGITE, CÉRÉBRO-SPINAL, Meningitis, cerebro-spinal.

MENINGINITIS, from meningina, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the meningina.

MENINGINUM, Arachnoid membrane.

MENINGIS CUSTOS, Meningophylax.

MÉNINGITE, Meningitis—m. Gronnlense, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Rachidienne, Meningitis, spinal—m. Tuberculense, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGITIS, Meningitis, Encephalitis peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, (F.) Inflammation de la membrane séreuse céphalo-rachidienne, Méningite, from meninges, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the meninges or membranes of the brain. See Phrenitis.

MENINGITIS ARTHRITICA, Cephalagra.

MENINGITIS, CERÉBRO-SPINAL, Myelitis, petechialis, Cerebral or cerebro-spinal typhus, (F.) Méningite cérébro-spinal, Fièvre cérébro-spinal, Typhus cérébro-spinal. An alarmingly fatal form of epidemic fever, which prevailed in different countries of Europe, and, also, in certain portions of the United States, near the middle of the 19th century. It is considered, by Boudin, to constitute the cerebro-spinal form of the nosological group of typhus.

MENINGITIS GRANULAR, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Hydrocephalica, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Infantum, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Membranosa, M. spinal.

MENINGITIS MESENCEPHALICA. Inflammation of the meninges of the medulla oblongata and pons varolii more especially.

MENINGITIS PERIPHERICA, M. spinal—m. Pottatorum, Delirium tremens—m. Rachidian, M. spinal—m. Scrophulous, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGITIS SPINAL, M. Rachid'ian seu Spinalis seu peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, Perimyelitis, Myelo-meningitis, (F.) Méningite rachidienne. Inflammation of the meninges of the spinal marrow.

MENINGITIS, TUBERCULAR, see Hydrocephalus internus—m. Tuberculosa, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENIN'GIUM. Diminutive of μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane. The tunica arachnoidea of the brain.

MENINGO-CEPHALITIS, Meningo-encephalitis, Ceph'alo-meningitis, Enceph'alo-meningitis, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane,' κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membranes and brain.

MENINGO-GASTRIC FEVER, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOGASTRITIS, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOMALACIA, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος,

'membrane,' and μαλακία, 'softening.' Softening of membranes in general.

MENINGOPHYLAX, Custos meningis, Depressorium, (F.) Dépressoire, from μηνίξ, μηνίγος, 'a membrane,' the dura mater; and φύλαξ, 'a preserver.' An instrument for depressing the dura mater, and guarding it from injury, whilst the bone is cut or rasped.

MENINGORRHŒA, from μηνίξ, μηνίγος, 'membrane,' and ῥέω, 'I flow.' Effusion of blood upon or between the membranes of the brain.

MENINGOSIS. Same etymon. The union of bones by means of membrane; e. g. the articulation of the bones of the cranium in the fœtus. Meningosis is a variety of Syndesmosis.

MENINGOSYMPHYSIS; Meningosyn'ia, from μηνίξ, μηνίγος, 'membrane,' and συνφύσις, 'growing together.' Adhesion of or by membrane. Adhesion of the membranes of the brain to each other, or to the brain.

MENINGOSYZIA. Meningosymphysis.

MENINGURIA; from μηνίξ, 'a membrane,' and ουρον, 'urine.' The passage of urine containing membranous shreds.

MENINX, Membrane—m. Choroides, Pia mater—m. Crassa, Dura mater—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Exterior, Dura mater—m. Interior, Pia mater—m. Media, Arachnoid membrane—m. Pachia, Dura mater—m. Sclera, Dura mater—m. Serosa, Arachnoid membrane—m. Vasculosa, Pia mater.

MENISCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENISCI. Cartilages, interarticular.

MENISPERMUM ANGULATUM, M. Canadense.

MENISPERMUM CANADENSE, M. angulatum, Ord. Menispermaceæ, from μηνή, 'the moon,' and σπέρμα, 'seed,' in allusion to the crescentic shape of the seed. A climbing plant, growing in various parts of the United States. Said to be used in Virginia as a substitute for sarsaparilla in serofula, and to be called, in the West, Sarsaparilla. It is an excitant tonic.

MENISPERMUM COC'ULUS, M. glaucum, Anamita Coc'ulus seu paniculata, Coc'ulus suberosus. The systematic name of the plant, the berries of which are well known by the name of Coc'ulus Indicus seu suberosus, Indian Berries, Indica Piscatoriæ, Indian Cockles, Coc'us Indicus, Cocculæ officinarum, Cocci orientales, Grana Orientalis, (F.) Cocque du Levant, C. levant. These berries are remarkable for their inebriating and destructive quality to fish. The deleterious principle appears to reside in the kernel, and in the active principle called Picrotoxine. Cocculus Indicus has been used in decoction to kill vermin. It has, at times, been added to beer, by fraudulent tradesmen, to render it more inebriating.

MENISPERMUM GLAUCUM, M. cocculus—m. Palmatum, Calumba.

MENISPERMUM TUBERCULATUM, M. verrucosum, Coc'ulus crispus. A Chinese plant, an extract from the root of which is tonic to the stomach and bowels, and possesses some astringency. Dose, 5 to 10 grains.

The same may be said of Menispermum Cor'dipitium—the Golunchu, of Bengal.

MENISPERMUM VERRUCOSUM, M. tuberculatum.

MENOCRYPHIA, Amenorrhœa.

MENOLIPSIS, see Menses.

MENOPAUSIS, see Menses.

MENOPHANIA, see Menses.

MENOPLANTIA, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENORRHAG'IA, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ῥήγνμι, 'to flow fiercely.' Flow of the menses. Frequently, the word is used synonymously with uterine hemorrhage or metrorrhagia, or for immoderate flow of the menses—profuse menstrua- tion, Parame'nia superflua seu profusa, Menorrhag'ia rubra, Catamenio'rum fluxus immod'icus, Menstrua inmod'ica seu superflua, Amenorrh'ia.

MENORRHAGIA, Menstruation, Metrorrhagia—m. Alba, Leucorrhœa—m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Erronea, Menstruation, erroneous—m. Stillitia, Dysmenorrhœa.

MENORRHŒA, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ῥέω, 'I flow.' The ordinary flow of the menses. Also, too long continuing, or too often returning, menstruation. Menorrhagia.

MENOSCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENOSTASIS, Amenorrhœa.

MENOS'TASIS, from μην, μηνος, 'month,' and σtasis, 'stasis,' 'stagnation.' This word, according to some, signifies the retention of the menses and their accumulation in the uterus. According to others, it means the acute pain which, in some females, precedes each appearance of the menses: a pain which has been presumed to proceed from the stasis of blood in the capillary vessels of the uterus.

MENOXEN'IA, Menoxen'is, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ξενος, 'foreign.' Irregular menstruation.

MENOXENOSIS, Menoxenia.

MENS, Anima, Intellect.

MENSA, Trop'æza, 'a table.' The upper superficial part or corona of the jaw teeth.

MENSES, (pl. of menstris, 'a month;') M. Mulie'bre, Mulie'bria, Menses, Fluxus mens'ruus seu luna'ris, Pro'fluxum mulie'brè seu genita'tè mulie'bre, Consuetudo menstrua, Catame'nia, Men'strua, Emme'nia, Tributum luna'rè seu men'struum, Purgatio'nes, P. menstruæ, Gynace'ia, Aphedri'a, Cursus mens'ruus, Horæ'a, Luna'ria, Courses, Menstrual flux, Monthly courses or periods, Flowers, Turus, Terms, the Reds, Troubles, (F.) Mois, Règles, Lunes, Flueurs, Affaires, Époques, Ordinaires, Purgations, Fleurs, Menstrues. The sanguineous evacuation from the uterus. Sanguis mens'ruus, Men'strual Blood, the monthly occurrence of which constitutes menstruation or monthly illness. The first appearance of the menses—menoph'ania—is usually preceded by the discharge of a fluid whitish matter from the vagina: by nervous excitement, and by vague pains and heaviness in the loins and thighs; numbness of the limbs, tumefaction and hardness of the breasts, &c. More or less indisposition and irritability also precede each successive recurrence of the menstrual flux. In temperate climates, each period, men'strual period, periodus luna'ris, ordinarily continues from three to six days; and the quantity lost varies from four to eight ounces. The menses continue to flow from the period of puberty till the age of 45 or 50. At the term of its natural cessation, Menolip'is, Mensespausie (Gardanne), Menopau'is, the flux becomes irregular; and this irregularity is occasionally accompanied with symptoms of dropsy, glandular tumours, &c., constituting the Parame'niu cerra'tio'nis of Good, and what is called the critical time or turn or change of life; yet it does not appear that the mortality is increased by it. With the immediate causes of menstruation we are unacquainted. We express only our ignorance, when we assert it to depend upon periodicity; the discharge comes from the vessels of the uterus and vagina, and differs from ordinary blood by its peculiar odour, and by its not coagulating. It is evidently connected with the condition of the ovaries, and—it has been supposed—with the periodical discharge of ova from them. It is arrested, as a general principle, during pregnancy and lactation. In warm climates, women usually begin to menstruate early, and cease sooner than in the temperate regions. The quantity lost is also greater. In the colder regions, the reverse of this holds as a general rule.

Dried menstrual blood, especially of a woman in her first menstruation—Sanguis virginis primum menstruatæ—was formerly given internally as an anti-epileptic.

MENSES ALBI, Leucorrhœa — m. Anomalæ, Paramenia — m. Devii, Menstruation, vicarious — m. Dolorifici, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Retention of the, see Amenorrhœa — m. Suppression of the, Amenorrhœa.

MENSIUM RETENTIO, see Amenorrhœa.

MENSTRUUA, Menses — m. Alba, Leucorrhœa — m. Difficilia, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Dolorosa, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Immodica, Menorrhagia — m. Superflua, Menorrhagia.

MENSTRUUAL, Catamenial — m. Flux, Menses — m. Period, see Menses.

MENSTRUANT, Menstruans, Menstruatns, from menstrua, 'the catamenia.' One subject to the catamenia.

MENSTRUATIO ANOMALA, Paramenia — m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Dolorifica, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Impedita, see Amenorrhœa — m. Per insolitas Vias, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENSTRUATIO PRÆCOX, Premature menstruation. Menstruation occurring before the usual age or time.

MENSTRUATIO RECIDIVA, Menstruation, when protracted beyond the usual age.

MENSTRUATIO RETENTA, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia — m. Suppressa, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia.

MENSTRUATION, Menstruat'io, Chronogygia, Menorrhagia, Fluxus menstruat'is. The flow of the menses.

MENSTRUATION DIFFICILE, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Difficult, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Laboriosa, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Premature, Menstruat'io præcox — m. Profuse, Menorrhagia.

MENSTRUATION, VICARIOUS, is that which occurs from other parts than the uterus. It is called Paramenia erro'ris, Menorrhag'ia erro'nea, Mensium per alie'na loca exere'tio, M. de'vii, Aberrat'io mensium seu menstruorum, Menstruat'io per insolitas vias, Hæmatopla'nia seu Hæmopla'nia menstruat'is, Menopla'nia, (F.) Déviat'ion des Règles, Règles déviées. At times, the secreted fluid has all the characters of the menstrual secretion; at others, it appears to be mere blood.

MENSTRUATUS, Menstruant.

MENSTRUUEL, Catamenial.

MENSTRUUES, Menses.

MENSTRUOUS, Catamenial. Also, one affected with the menses or catamenia.

MENSTRUUM, (F.) Menstrue. Same etymon:—the menstruum being, of old, usually continued in action for a month. The monthly discharge of the female. The plural, menstrua, is now, however, always used for the menses. The name was formerly given to every substance which possesses the property of dissolving others slowly and with the aid of heat. At present, it is used synonymously with solvent. Thus—water, alcohol, ether, acids, oils, &c., are menstrua.

MENSTRUUM AURI, Nitro-muriatic acid — m. Ventriculi, Gastric juice.

MENSURA MED'ICA. A measure of 48 ounces.

MENSURAT'ION, Metat'io, from mensura, 'measure.' Measurement, Medical meas'uring. One of the means used for exploring the state of the thoracic and other cavities. It consists in a comparative measurement of each side of the chest, by means of a riband extended from the median line of the sternum to the spine. When effusion exists on one side, the measurement is usually greater than on the other. When, on the other hand, a portion of a lung has ceased, for some time, to exert its respiratory functions, the corresponding side of the chest becomes smaller, in consequence of the contraction of the pleura, retraction of the pulmonary tissue, and greater approximation of the ribs.

MENTA, Mentha, Penis.

MENTAGRA, Mentulagra, Sycosis — m. Infantum, Porrigo lupinosa.

MEN'TAGRAPHYTE, Men'tagrophyte, Microsporon mentagrophytes, from mentagra, and φύρον, 'a plant.' A name proposed by M. Gruby of Vienna, for a cryptogamous plant, which he considers to produce mentagra.

MENTAL, Menta'lis, from mens, mentis, 'mind,' belonging or relating to the mind, as mental phenomena, mental diseases (Morbi mentales), &c.

In Anatomy, Mental, Menta'lis, (F.) Mentonnier, signifies that which relates to the chin; from mentum, 'the chin.'

MENTAL ARTERY, (F.) Artère mentonnière. This is given off by the inferior dental, and issues at the mental foramen to be distributed on the lower lip.

MENTAL FORA'MEN, (F.) Trou mentonnier, Anterior maxillary F., is the outer orifice of the inferior dental canal. It is situate on the outer surface of the lower jaw-bone, opposite the second incisor, or the canine tooth, and gives passage to the vessels and nerves.

MENTAL FOSSA, see Fossa, mental.

MENTAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf mentonnier, is furnished by the inferior dental nerve. It issues by the mental foramen, and is distributed, in numerous filaments, to the muscles of the lower lip.

MENTAL REGION, Re'gio menta'lis. The region of the chin.

MENTHA seu MENTA AQUAT'ICA, (μνθη, μνθα, μνθος, 'mint.') M. palustris seu hirsuta seu rotundifolia palustris, Menthas trunc, Sijymbrium menthastrum, Bol'sunus palustris, Watermint, (F.) Menthe aquatique, M. ronge. Nat. Ord. Labiateæ. This is less agreeable than the Mentha viridis, and more bitter and pungent. It is used like spearmint.

MENTHA BALSAMEA, M. piperita.

MENTHA CAPEN'SIS, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, possesses the medical properties of the mints.

MENTHA CERVI'NA, Hart's pennyroyal, Hyssop-leaved mint, Pale'gium cervinum, (F.) Mentha cervina. Possesses the properties of pennyroyal, but is very unpleasant.

MENTHA CITRATA, Melissa.

MENTHA CRISPA, M. heryn'ica, Colymbifera minor, Curled Mint, (F.) Menthe frissée ou crépue, Banne d'eau à feuilles ridées. Possesses the properties of peppermint.

MENTHA GENTILIS, M. viridis — m. Hercynica, M. crispa — m. Hirsuta, M. Aquatica — m. Lævigata, M. viridis — m. Officinalis, M. piperita — m. Palustris, M. Aquatica.

MENTHA PIPERIT'A, M. Piperitis seu officinalis seu balsamea, Peppermint, (F.) Menthe poivrée. The odour of this variety is strong and agreeable. Taste, pungent, aromatic, and producing a sensation of coldness in the mouth. Virtues depend upon essential oil and camphor. It is stomachic and carminative. It is chiefly used in the form of essential oil—the oleum mentha piperitæ.

Essence of Peppermint consists of ol. mentha pip. ʒij, sp. vin. rectific., coloured with spinach leaves, Oij. See Tinctura olei mentha piperitæ.

MENTHA PULE'GIUM, Pulegium, P. vegale seu latifolium, Glechon, Pennyroyal, Pudding grass, (Prov.) Hilwort, Lurkey-dish, Organ, (F.) Pouliot. The oil — Oleum pule'gii — possesses the virtues of the plant. It resembles the mints in general in properties. Amongst the vulgar, it is esteemed an emmenagogue. AQUA PULEGII, Aqua Mentha pulegii, Pennyroyal Water, is official in the Edinburgh and Dublin Pharmacopœias.

MENTHA ROMANA, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanaacetum balsamita—m. Rotundifolia palustris, M. aquatica—m. Saracenica, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanaacetum balsamita—m. Sativa, M. viridis—m. Spicata, M. viridis.

MENTHA VIRIDIS, M. Satureia seu viridis seu menthæ seu spicata seu lævigata, Spearmint, (F.) Menthe sauvage ou verte ou des jardins, Camme des jardins. Odour strong, aromatic; taste warm, austere, bitterish. Virtues the same those of the peppermint. The Oleum mentha viridis is obtained from it.

MENTHA VULGARIS, M. viridis.

MENTHASTRUM, Mentha aquatica.

MENTHE AQUATIQUE, Mentha aquatica—m. Cervina, Mentha cervina—m. Cog, Tanaacetum balsamita—m. Crépue, Mentha crispata—m. Frisée, Mentha crispata—m. des Jardins, Mentha viridis—m. Poirée, Mentha piperita—m. Romaine, Balsamita suaveolens—m. Rouge, Mentha aquatica—m. Sauvage, Mentha viridis—m. Verte, Mentha viridis.

MENTIGO, Porrigo larvalis, Sycois.

MENTISME, from mens, mentis, 'mind.' Any irregular movement of the mind, whether from motion or a vivid imagination.—Baumes.

MENTOBICORNEUS, Geniohyoides.

MENTO-LABIAL, Mento-labialis, from mentum, 'the chin,' and labium, 'a lip.' Under this name Chaussier has united the Levator labii inferioris, and Quadratus muscles. See Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTO-LABIAL FURROW: a transverse depression situate between the lower lip and the chin, which is remarkable for the perpendicular direction of the hairs growing upon it.

MENTON, Mentum.

MENTONNIER, Mental—m. Labial, Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTONNIÈRE, see Funda.

MENTULA, Penis—m. Muliebris, Cereosis, Clitoris—m. Parva, Pipinna.

MENTULAGRA, Mentagra. A hybrid word, from mentula, 'the penis,' and agra, 'a seizure.' A convulsive erection of the mentula or penis; such as is said to be sometimes observed in eunuchs. See Pudendagra.

MENTULATUS, Mentabrosus.

MENTUM, Genivum, Genivum, Antherion, 'the chin.' (F.) Menton. The inferior and middle part of the face, situate below the lower lip. The chin is formed of skin, areolar tissue, muscles, vessels, nerves, and the os maxillare inferius.

MENYANTHES TRIFOLIATA, Menyanthes, Menyanthes, from μην, 'a month,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' because it keeps in flower about a month [?]. Trifolium paludosum seu aquatium seu pulsatræ seu fibrii, Water trefoil, Buckbean, Boybean. Nat. Ord. Gentianaceæ. (F.) Plante d'eau ou des Marais ou de Cantor. The root is intensely bitter, and is extracted by water. It is tonic, anthelmintic, diuretic, cathartic, and, in large doses, emetic. In some countries, it is used as a substitute for hops in making beer.

MENYANTHES VERNA, American buckbean, Water trefoil, Water shamrock, Bitter root, has similar properties.

MEOSIS, Meiosis.

MEPHITIC, Mephiticus, (F.) Méphitique; from a Syriac word, signifying 'to blow, to breathe.' Any thing possessed of an unwholesome property; chiefly applied to exhalations.

MEPHITIC ACID, Carbonic acid—m. Air, Carbonic acid.

MEPHITIS, see Mephitism—m. Hepatica, Hydrogen, sulphuretted—m. Inflammabilis, Hydrogen—m. Urinosa, Ammonia.

MEPHITISM, Mephiticus, (F.) Méphitisme. Same etymon. Any pernicious exhalation. Mephitis and Mopheta, (F.) Mofette ou Monfette, are old names for azote; and, in general, for all exhalations and gases that are unfit for respiration.

MERACUS, Meras.

MERAMAUROSIS, Hypamaurosis.

MERANÆSTHÆSIS, Meranæsthesia, from μερος, 'a part,' av, 'privative,' and αισθησις, 'sensation.' Insensibility of a part of the body.

MERATROPIA, from μερος, 'a part,' and τροπος, 'want of nourishment.' Atrophy of some part of the body.

MERCURE, Hydrargyrum—m. Bichlorure de, Hydrargyri oxyurias—m. Biodure de, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—m. Bromures de, see Bromine—m. Corallin, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—m. avec la Craie, Hydrargyrum cum cretà—m. Cru, Hydrargyrum—m. Cyanure de, Hydrargyri cyanuretum—m. Deutiodure de, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—m. Deuto-chlorure de, Hydrargyri oxyurias—m. Doux, Hydrargyri suburias—m. Gommeux de Pleuck, Syrupus de mercurio mediante gummi—m. Muriate oxygéné de, Hydrargyri oxyurias—m. Oxide de, vendré, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—m. Oxide gris de, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—m. Oxide nitrique de, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—m. Oxide noir de, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—m. Oxide rouge de, Hydrargyri oxydum rubrum—m. Périodure de, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—m. Protiodure de, Hydrargyri iodidum—m. Protochlorure de, Hydrargyri suburias—m. Protoxide de, Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum—m. Sous-muriate de, précipité, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—m. Sous-sulfate de, Hydrargyri vitriolatus—m. Sulphure de noir, Hydrargyri sulphuretum nigrum—m. Sulphure de rouge, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MERCURIAL, Mercurialis, (F.) Mercuriel; from mercurius, 'mercury.' That which contains or relates to mercury. A preparation of mercury—Hydrargyrium, Hydrargyrium.

MERCURIAL ERETHISM, see Erethism—m. Rash, Eczema mercuriale.

MERCURIALE ANNUELLE, Mercurialis—m. des Bois, Mercurialis perennis—m. de Chien, Mercurialis perennis—m. Vivace, Mercurialis perennis.

MERCURIALIS, Mercurialis annua, French mercury, (F.) Mercuriale annuelle, Fairole, Ramberge, Vignoble; Class. Diœcia; Order, Enneandria. It has been esteemed cathartic, hypnotic and cosmetic, and has been chiefly used by way of lacement. See Chenopodium Bonus Henricus.

MERCURIALIS HUMOR, Humor melancholicus. A supposititious humor with the older physicians, out of which they presumed that morbi melancholicæ seu mercuriales arose.

MERCURIALIS PERENNIS, Cynocrambæ, Cambæ brasica, M. montana, M. Sylvestris, Dog's mercury, (F.) Mercuriale vivace, M. de chien, M. des bois. This plant is possessed of acro-narcotic properties.

MERCURIALISMUS, Hydrargyriasis.

MERCURIALIST, Mercurialis, from mercurius, 'mercury.' One inordinately addicted to prescribing mercury.

MERCURIALIZATION. Same etymon. The state of being affected by mercury. One under the influence of mercury is said to be mercurialized.

MERCURII CALX VITRIOLATA, Hydrargyri vitriolatus—m. Deuto-ioduretum, Hydrar-

tity lost is also greater. In the colder regions, the reverse of this holds as a general rule.

Dried menstrual blood, especially of a woman in her first menstruation—Sanguis virginis primum menstrualis—was formerly given internally as an anti-epileptic.

MENSES ALBI, Leucorrhœa—m. Anomale, Paramenia—m. Devii, Menstruation, vicarious—m. Dolorifici, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Retention of the, see Amenorrhœa—m. Suppression of the, Amenorrhœa.

MENTIUM RETENTIO, see Amenorrhœa.

MENSTRUUA, Menses—m. Alba, Leucorrhœa—m. Difficilia, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Dolorosa, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Immodica, Menorrhagia—m. Superflua, Menorrhagia.

MENSTRUAL, Catamenial—m. Flux, Menses—m. Period, see Menses.

MENSTRUANT, Menstruans, Menstruatus, from menstrua, 'the catamenia.' One subject to the catamenia.

MENTRUATIO ANOMALA, Paramenia—m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Dolorifica, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Impedita, see Amenorrhœa—m. Per insolitas Vias, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENTRUATIO PRÆCOX, Premature menstruation. Menstruation occurring before the usual age or time.

MENTRUATIO RECIDIVA, Menstruation, when protracted beyond the usual age.

MENTRUATIO RETENTA, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia—m. Suppressa, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia.

MENTRUATION, Menstruatio, Chronogygia, Menorrhagia, Fluxus menstrualis. The flow of the menses.

MENTRUATION DIFFICILE, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Difficult, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Laborious, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Premature, Menstruatio præcox—m. Profuse, Menorrhagia.

MENTRUATION, VICARIOUS, is that which occurs from other parts than the uterus. It is called Paramenia erro'ris, Menorrhagia erro'ria, Mensium per alie'na loca exere'tio, M. devii, Aberratio mensium seu menstruorum, Menstruatio per insolitas vias, Hamatoplasia seu Hæmoplasia menstrualis, Menoplasia, (F.) Déviation des Règles, Règles déviées. At times, the secreted fluid has all the characters of the menstrual secretion; at others, it appears to be mere blood.

MENTRUATUS, Menstruant.

MENTRUEL, Catamenial.

MENTRUES, Menses.

MENSTRUOUS, Catamenial. Also, one affected with the menses or catamenia.

MENTRUM, (F.) Menstrue. Same etymon:—the menstruum being, of old, usually continued in action for a month. The monthly discharge of the female. The plural, menstrua, is now, however, always used for the menses. The name was formerly given to every substance which possesses the property of dissolving others slowly and with the aid of heat. At present, it is used synonymously with solvent. Thus—water, alcohol, ether, acids, oils, &c., are menstrua.

MENTRUM AURI, Nitro-muriatic acid—m. Ventriculi, Gastric juice.

MENSURA MEDICA, A measure of 48 ounces.

MENSURATION, Metatio, from mensura, 'measure.' Measurement, Medical measuring. One of the means used for exploring the state of the thoracic and other cavities. It consists in a comparative measurement of each side of the chest, by means of a riband extended from the median line of the sternum to the spine. When effusion exists on one side, the measurement is usually greater than on the other. When, on the other hand, a portion of a lung has ceased, for some time, to exert its respiratory functions, the corresponding side of the chest becomes smaller, in consequence of the contraction of the pleura, retraction of the pulmonary tissue, and greater approximation of the ribs.

MENTA, Mentha, Peppermint.

MENTAGRA, Mentulagra, Sycosis—m. Infantum, Porrigo lupinosa.

MENTAGRAPHYTE, Mentagrophyte, Microsporion mentagrophytes, from mentagra, and φυτον, 'a plant.' A name proposed by M. Gruby, of Vienna, for a cryptogamous plant, which he considers to produce mentagra.

MENTAL, Menta'lis, from mens, mentis, 'mind;' belonging or relating to the mind, as mental phenomenon, mental diseases (Morbi mentales), &c.

In Anatomy, Mental, Menta'lis, (F.) Mentonnier, signifies that which relates to the chin; from mentum, 'the chin.'

MENTAL ARTERY, (F.) Artère mentonnière. This is given off by the inferior dental, and issues at the mental foramen to be distributed on the lower lip.

MENTAL FORAMEN, (F.) Trou mentonnier, Anterior maxillary F., is the outer orifice of the inferior dental canal. It is situate on the outer surface of the lower jaw-bone, opposite the second incisor, or the canine tooth, and gives passage to the vessels and nerves.

MENTAL FOSSA, see Fossa, mental.

MENTAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf mentonnier, is furnished by the inferior dental nerve. It issues by the mental foramen, and is distributed, in numerous filaments, to the muscles of the lower lip.

MENTAL REGION, Re'gio menta'lis. The region of the chin.

MENTHA seu MENTA AQUATICA, (μνθη, μνθα, μνθος, 'mint.') M. palustris seu hirsuta seu rotundifolia palustris, Menthas'trum, Sisymbrium menthastrum, Bal'samus palustris, Watermint, (F.) Menthe aquatique, M. rouge, Nat. Ord. Labiatae. This is less agreeable than the Mentha viridis, and more bitter and pungent. It is used like spearmint.

MENTHA BALSAMEA, M. piperita.

MENTHA CAPENSIS, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, possesses the medical properties of the mints.

MENTHA CERVINA, Hart's pennyroyal, Hyssop-leaved mint, Pulegium cervinum, (F.) Menthe cervine. Possesses the properties of pennyroyal, but is very unpleasant.

MENTHA CITRATA, Melissa.

MENTHA CRISPA, M. hircynica, Colymbifera minor, Curled Mint, (F.) Menthe frissée ou crépe, Buume d'eau à fenilles ridées. Possesses the properties of peppermint.

MENTHA GENTILIS, M. viridis—m. Hercynica, M. crispa—m. Hirsuta, M. Aquatica—m. Lævigata, M. viridis—m. Officinalis, M. piperita—m. Palustris, M. Aquatica.

MENTHA PIPERITA, M. Piperitis seu officina'lis seu balsamea, Peppermint, (F.) Menthe poivrée. The odour of this variety is strong and agreeable. Taste, pungent, aromatic, and producing a sensation of coldness in the mouth. Virtues depend upon essential oil and camphor. It is stomachic and carminative. It is chiefly used in the form of essential oil—the oleum menthae piperita.

Essence of Peppermint consists of ol. menthae pip. ʒij, sp. vin. rectific., coloured with spinach leaves, Oij. See Tinctura olei menthae piperita.

MENTHA PULEGIUM, Pulegium, P. regale seu latifolium, Glechon, Pennyroyal, Pudding grass, (Prov.) Hilcoort, Lurkey-dish, Organ, (F.) Pouliot. The oil—Oleum pulegii—possesses the virtues of the plant. It resembles the mints in general in properties. Amongst the vulgar, it is esteemed an emmenagogue. AQUA PULEGII, Aqua Mentha pulgii, Pennyroyal Water, is official in the Edinburgh and Dublin Pharmacopœias.

MENTHA ROMANA, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Rotundifolia palustris, M. aquatica—m. Saracenicia, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Sativa, M. viridis—m. Spicata, M. viridis.

MENTHA VIRIDIS; M. Sativa seu viridis seu gentilis seu spicata seu lævigata, Spearmint, (F.) Menthe sauvage ou verte ou des jardins, Leanne des jardins. Odour strong, aromatic; taste warm, austere, bitterish. Virtues the same as those of the peppermint. The Oleum mentha viridis is obtained from it.

MENTHA VULGARIS, M. viridis.

MENTHASTRUM, Mentha aquatica.

MENTHE AQUATIQUE, Mentha aquatica—m. Cervina, Mentha cervina—m. Cog, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Crêpe, Mentha crispata—m. Frissée, Mentha eripata—m. des Jardins, Mentha viridis—*m. which form it, a number of lymphatic ganglions; the trunks and branches of the mesenteric vessels; the nervous plexuses accompanying them, and many lacteals and lymphatics.

MESERA, Tutia.

MESERÆUM, Mesentery.

MESERAION, Mesentery.

MESIAL, from μεσος, 'in the middle.' Relating to or appertaining to the middle.

MESIAL PLANE, an imaginary plane, dividing the head, neck, and trunk into similar halves, towards right and left. Every aspect towards this plane is mesial; and every aspect towards right or left is lateral; every lateral aspect being dextral or sinistral.

MESIAMUM, Aniceton.

MESMER'IC, Mesmer'icus; from Anthony Mesmer, the great promulgator of animal magnetism. Relating to mesmerism or animal magnetism:—as the 'mesmeric state,' 'mesmeric sleep,' &c. &c.

MESMERISM, Magnetism, animal.

MESMERIST, A practiser of, or believer in, mesmerism.

MESMERIZATION, Maguetizati'on. The act of mesmerizing. The state of being mesmerized.

MESMERIZED, Mesmeriza'tus, Maguetized. Affected with mesmerism or animal magnetism. When the person is in a state of 'magnetic sleep,' he is said to be hypnotized.

MESMERIZER, Animal Magnetizer, Maguetizer. One who practises mesmerism.

MESMERO-PHRENOLOGY, Phreno-magnetism.

MESO, μεσος, 'in the middle.' A prefix to certain words.

MESOBREGMATE, see Cranium.

MESOCÆ'CIUM, (meso and cæcum). A name given to a duplicature of the peritoneum, (in some persons only,) at the posterior part of the cæcum.

MÉSOCÉPHALE, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MESOCHON'DRIAC, Mesochondri'acus; from meso, and χονδρος, 'cartilage.' A name given by Boerhaave to fleshy fibres situate between the cartilaginous rings of the trachea.

MESOCOL'IC, Mesocol'icus. Same etymon as the next. Belonging or relating to the mesocolon.

MESOCO'LON, Mesocol'um, Mesenter'ium crassum, from meso, and κωλον, 'the colon.' A name given to the duplicatures of the peritoneum, which fix the different parts of the colon to the abdominal parietes. It has received different names, according to its situation. The right lumbar mesocolon fixes the ascending colon to the corresponding lumbar region. The transverse mesocolon arises from the concave arch of the colon, and forms a septum between the epigastric and umbilical regions. Its inferior portion is continuous with the mesentery. The left lumbar mesocolon, which contains the ascending colon, is continuous below with the Iliac mesocolon. The last includes between its layers the sigmoid flexure of the colon, and ends in the mesorectum. Under the right kidney, it is narrow and firm, and forms the right ligament of the colon: at the under end of the left kidney, it forms the left ligament of the colon.

MESOCRANIUM, Sinciput.

MESOCRANUM, Sinciput.

MESODERMUM, Corpus mucosum.

MESODME, Mediastinum.

MESODMI'TIS, from μεσος, 'middle,' and δωμος, 'a building,' 'the mediastinum,' and itis, 'inflammation.' Mesotæchi'tis, Mediastini'tis, Inflammat'io mediasti'ni. Inflammation of the mediastinum.

MESOËPIDID'YMIS, from μεσος, 'middle,' and επιδιδυμις, 'epididymis.' A double serous fold, like the mesocolon, formed by the tunica vaginalis passing from the body of the epididymis, and uniting it to the testicle.

MESOGASTRIUM, Umbilical region.

MESOGASTRIUM MÛLLERI. A portion of mesentery, which passes from the vertebral column to the left curvature of the stomach.

MESOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGLOTTUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGONIUM, Internodium.

MESOLO'BAR. Belonging or relating to the Mesolobe or Corpus callosum.

MESOLOBAR ARTERIES, Arte'riæ mesolob'icæ, A. cor'poris callo'si cer'ebrî, are the arteries of the corpus callosum.

MÉSULOBE, Corpus callosum.

MESOMER'IA, from meso, and μερος, 'the thigh.' The parts of the body situate between the thighs and hips.

MESOMERION, Perinæum.

MESOMPHALUM, Umbilicus.

MESOPHLEB'IUM, from meso, and φλεψ, 'a vein.' Interve'nium. The space between two veins.

MESOPH'RYON, Glabella, Gabella, Intercillium, Meta'pium, Nasal eminence, from meso, and οφθα, 'the eyebrows.' The part between the eyebrows.

MESOPLEURIUM, Intercostal space.

MESOPLEURIUS, Intercostal.

MESORÆUM, Mesentery.

MESOR'CHIUM, from meso, and σχισ, 'a testicle.' A duplicature of the peritoneum, which supports the testicle in its passage from the abdomen into the scrotum.—Seiler.

MESOREC'TUM, A hybrid word: from meso, and rectum, 'the intestine rectum.' A triangular reflection, formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior surface of the rectum and the anterior surface of the sacrum. Between the two layers of which the meso rectum is composed are found much areolar tissue, and the termination of the inferior mesenteric vessels.

MESOS, Meso.

MESOSCEOCLE, Hernia, perineal.

MESOSCELO'N, Perinæum.

MESOSCELOPHY'MA, from Mesoscelon, (meso, and σκελος, 'leg,' 'perinæum,' and φυμα, 'swelling,' A tumour of the perinæum.

MESOTH'ENAR, from μεσος, and εναρ, 'the thenar,' 'the palm of the hand.' A muscle, which carries the thumb towards the palm. Winslow applied the term to the abductor pollicis, united to the deep-seated portion of the flexor brevis pollicis.

MESOT'ICA, from μεσος, 'middle.' Diseases affecting the parenchyma. Pravity in the quantity or quality of the intermediate or connecting substance of organs: without inflammation, fever, or other derangement of the general health. The first Order, class Eccritica of Good.

MESOTÆCHITIS, Mesodmitis.

MESOTECHIUM, Mediastinum.

MESOTECHIUM, Mediastinum.

MESPILUS, Mespilus German'ica seu domestica. Ord. Rosaceæ. The medlar. (F.) Néflier. The fruit (F.) Nêfle, and seeds of the medlar have both been used medicinally:—the immature fruit as an astringent, and the seeds in nephritic diseases. See Cratægus Aria and Sorbus acuparia.

MESPILUS AR'IA, Cratægus aria—m. Domestica, Mespilus, Sorbus domestica—m. Germanica, Mespilus—m. Intermedia, Mespilus oxyacantha—m. Lævigata, Mespilus oxyacantha.

MESPILUS OXYACANTHA, M. Oxyacantho'ides seu interme'dia seu lævigata, Oxyacantha, Spina alba, White Hawthorn. (F.) Aubepine. The flowers of this uncommon European plant are sometimes used in infusion as a pectoral.

MESPILUS OXYACANTHOIDES, Mespilus oxyacantha.

META, μετα, Meth' μεθ', 'with,' 'together with,' 'after,' 'change of form and place.' A common prefix to words. Hence:

METAB'ASIS, Trans'it'is, Metab'olē, Metabol'in, Metal'logē, Metallux'ia, from μεταβαίνω (meta, and βαίνω, 'I go,') 'I digress.' A change of remedy, practice, &c.—Hippocrates.

METABOLE, Metabasis, Transformation.

METABOLEL'OGY, Metabolelog'in; from μεταβολη, (meta, and βύλλω,) 'change,' and λογος, 'a description.' A description of the changes which supervene in the course of a disease.

METABOLIA, Metabasis.

METABOL'IC, Metabol'ic'us, from μεταβολη, 'change.' Appertaining to change or transformation.

METABOL'IC FORCE. Vis metabol'ica. A term employed by Schwann for the power possessed by living cells of changing the character of the substances brought in contact with them.

METACAR'PAL, Metacarpia'nis, (F.) Métacarpien. From meta, and καρπος, 'wrist.' Relating or belonging to the metacarpus.

METACARPAL ARTERY, Arteria dorsalis metacarp'i, arises from the radial, at the moment it engages itself in the upper extremity of the abductor indicis. It descends obliquely upon the back of the hand. Its branches are distributed to the abductor indicis, and the integuments: some communicate with the dorsalis carpi.

METACARPAL ARTICULA'TIONS are those by which the last four metacarpal bones are united together at their upper extremity.

METACARPAL BONES, or bones which compose the metacarpus, are five in number; and distinguished into first, second, third, &c., beginning from the outer or radial side. They are articulated by their superior extremity with the bones of the second range of the carpus; and by the lower with the first phalanges.

METACARPAL LIG'AMENT, Infer'ior palmar Lig'ament, is a fibrous band, stretched transversely before the inferior extremities of the last four metacarpal bones, which it keeps in their respective positions.

METACARPAL PHALAN'GES are the first phalanges of the fingers; so called, because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus.

METACARPAL RANGE or row of the carpal bones, (F.) Rangée métacarpienne du carpe, is the lower row of carpal bones; so called because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus. It is composed of the trapezium, trapezoides, magnum, and unciniforme.

METACARPEUS, Abductor metacarpi minimi digiti.

MÉTACARPIEN, Metacarpal—m. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti—m. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

METACARPION, Metacarpus.

METACARPO-PHALANG'ÆUS POLLICIS, Abductor pollicis manus.

METACARPO-PHALAN'GIAN, Metacarpophalangia'nis, Metacarpophalang', (F.) Métacarpophalangien. That which belongs to the metacarpus and phalanges.

METACARPO-PHALANGIAN or METACARPO-PHALANGAL ARTICULA'TIONS are formed by the bones of the metacarpus and the corresponding phalanges. In these articulations, the bony surfaces are incrusted with cartilage, covered by a synovial membrane, and kept in connexion by means of an anterior and two lateral ligaments.

MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL, SUS-PALMAIRE, ET MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL, Interosseus manus.

METACAR'PUS, same etymon as Metacarpal. Metacar'pion, Postbrachia'le, Postcar'pium, Torus manus, (F.) Métacarpus. The part of the hand comprised between the carpus and fingers. It is composed of five parallel bones, called metacarpal; forming the back of the hand, externally, and the palm internally.

METACERASMA, Cerasma.

METACHEIRINIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISMUS, Surgery.

METACHORE'SIS, Metastasis.

METACHYSIS, Transfusion.

METACINEMA, Metastasis.

METACINESIS, Metastasis.

METACONDYLE, see Phalanx.

METACY'E'SIS, from meta, and κύσις, 'pregnancy;' Gravid'itas extra-uteri'na secundaria. Extra-uterine pregnancy in which the fœtus is at first in the uterus, but subsequently in some other place.

METADERMATO'SIS, from meta, and έρμα, 'skin.' A morbid development of the epidermis or epithelium.

METAGEN'ESIS, (F.) Metagenēsis, Altern'ate generat'ion, from μετα, and γενεσις, 'generation.' A term, proposed by Professor Owen, to express the changes of form, which one animal species undergoes in a series of successively produced individuals, extending from the one developed from the ovum to that which becomes the imago or last perfected individual. This term he employs in contradistinction to metamorphosis, which he restricts to the changes of form undergone by one and the same individual. See Generation, alternate.

METAL, Metal'lum. From μεταλλω, 'I seek after.' A class of simple, combustible bodies; distinguished from others by considerable specific gravity; a particular splendour; almost total opacity; insolubility in water; and the property they have of ringing when struck. Metals have no effect, except of a mechanical nature, when taken into the stomach; unless they have already undergone, or undergo in the stomach, oxidation or union with an acid; when, at times, deleterious compounds may be formed. Copper cents; half-pence; quicksilver; lead, have frequently been swallowed in the metallic state with impunity. Tin and mercury are the only metals prescribed for a mechanical effect; the former as an anthelmintic,—the latter, idly enough, in cases of fancied intussusception.

MÉTAL DES CLOCHES, Bell-metal.

METALLAGE, Metabasis.

METALLANXIS, Metallage.

METALLIC VOICE, Tintement métallique.

METALLODYN'IA, from μεταλλω, 'a metal,' and δύνη, 'pain.' Pain owing to the injurious influence of a metal—as lead, quicksilver, &c.

METALLUM, Metal—m. Hæmat' poeticum, ferrum.

METAMORPHOP'SIA, Phantasmascopia, Phantasmatoseopia, from μεταμορφω, (meta and μορφή, 'form,') 'I transform, and ὄψις, 'vision.' Suff'n'sio, S. Oculo'rum seu metamorphop'ia seu myo'des, Imagination (Maître-Jean); Cynopsia, Marmor'ygē, Marmor'ygē, Mac'ula ante ocul'os volitante, Marau'gia, Ocul'i marmor'ygē'des, Vis'io phantas'matum, Visus figurat'us, False sight, (F.) Berlue. Aberration of the sense of sight, which transmits the image of imaginary objects. This affection sometimes depends on a slight opacity in the transparent parts of the eye; the cornea, crystalline, or vitreous humour, when it is symptomatic and of no consequence. At other times, it appears to be idiopathic; and occurs particularly in those who have been in the habit of constantly fixing their eyes on very brilliant or small bodies. The objects fancied to be seen are various. They are sometimes circular, perpetually moving; or shining, or black spots, cobwebs, insects, or pieces of wool—when they are often termed Muscæ seu Flocci volitan'tes, (F.) Mouches volantes, and the condition Visus muscærum, Scotom'ata, Suffu'sio Myo'des, Myo'deop'sia, Myiodop'sia, Myodeop'sia, Myodesop'pia, Visus muscærum. These appearances sometimes continue for a few days; being dependent on the state of the nerves of the individual at the time; or they may exist for life, and ultimately impair the sight. Certain of them change their position, and appear to be seated in the humours of the eye, and—it has been supposed—in the vitreous humour more especially: hence the term entohyaloid muscæ applied to them.

If the affection be symptomatic, it is of but little moment. If idiopathic, and connected with any excitement of the brain, which is not often the case, attention will have to be paid to that organ.

METAMORPHOSIS, see Metagenesis.

METAMORPHOSIS VENTRICULI GELATINIFORMIS, Gastromalacia.

METANGISMOS, Decantation.

METAPEDIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPHRENON, Dorsum.

METAPHYTEIA, Transplantatio.

METAPODIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPOROPE'A, Metaporopoe'sis, from meta, poros, 'a pore,' and ποιειν, 'to make.' The change produced in the minute pores, in the capillary extremities of vessels,—when they pass from the morbid to the healthy condition:—Galen.

METAPTO'SIS, Metaschematis'mus, Metaschemat'is. Mutation, change; from μεταπιπτω, (μετα, and πιπτω, 'I fall,') 'I digress.' Any change in the form or seat of a disease. Transformation.

METARRHŒ'A, Metarrh'ysis, from meta, and ρῶω, 'I flow.' Reflex. The transfer of a disease from without to within, or from one part to another.

METARRHYSIS, Metarrhœa.

METASCHEMATISIS, Metaptosis.

METASCHEMATISMUS, Metaptosis.

METASTASIS, Metasthore'sis, Metasthe'ma, Metasthine'sis, from μεταστησις, (μετα, and στησις, 'I place,') 'I change place.' Displacement, Translation. A change in the seat of a disease; attributed, by the Humorists, to the translation of the morbid matter to a part different from that which it had previously occupied: and by the Solidists, to the displacement of the irritation. It has also been used in the same extensive sense as Metaptosis. Disputes have often been indulged, whether a case of metastasis ought not rather to be esteemed one of extension of the disease. The phenomena of gout and acute rheumatism are in favour of metastasis occasionally supervening.

METASTASIS LACTIS, Galactoplasia, Phlegmatia dilens.

METASTATIC, Metastat'icus, (F.) Métastatique. Belonging or relating to metastasis. A metastatic crisis is one produced by metastasis:—a metastatic affection, one caused by metastasis, &c. See Abscess, metastatic.

METASYN'CRISIS, from meta, and συγκρινω, (συγ, and κρίνω, 'I choose,' 'I judge.') Recomposition. A word employed by some disciples of Asclepiades. This physician supposed, that all animals are formed by the union or assemblage of atoms. He designated all bodies by the word συγκριματα, which signifies 'assemblage.' Συγκρινωσθαι, 'to be assembled,' was, with him; synonymous with 'to exist'; and διακρινωσθαι, 'to separate,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to dissolve,' 'to cease to exist.' The word Metasynerisis was invented to express the recombination of bodies after their momentary dissolution. Some have rendered the word by the Latin Recorporatio.

METASYNCRIT'IC, Metasynerit'icus, Recorporat'ivus. Belonging or relating to metasynerisis. A name formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the virtue of producing the metasynerisis or regeneration of the body, or some of its parts.

METASYNCRITIC CYCLE meant a determinate series of remedies employed for this purpose.

METATAR'SAL, Metatar'seus, (F.) Métatarsien. Same etymon as metatarsus. Relating or belonging to the metatarsus.

METATARSAI ARTERY, Artère sus-métatarsienne of Chaussier, arises from the Arteria dorsalis Tarsi; passes transversely over the back of the foot; and furnishes, at its convexity, which is anterior, three branches, called A. interos'sea dorsales Pedis. These branches are distributed in the interosseous spaces.

METATARSAI ARTICULATIONS are those resulting from the junction of the metatarsal bones with each other. They are strengthened, behind, by dorsal and plantar ligaments; and before, by a transverse metatarsal ligament, which is plantar, and has the greatest analogy to the inferior transverse metacarpal ligament.

METATARSAI BONES, (F.) Os métatarsiens, are five in number, and distinguished by their number; first, second, third, &c., reckoning from the outer side.

METATARSAI PHALANGES are the first phalanges of the toes; so called because they are united to the metatarsus.

METATARSAI ROW—(F.) Rangée métatarsienne—of the bones of the tarsus; is the second row, or that contiguous to the metatarsus; comprehending the cuboides and three cuneiform bones: some add the scaphoides.

METATARSEUS, see Abductor minimi digiti pedis.

MÉTATARSIEIN, Metatarsal.

METATARSO-PHALAN'GIAN, Metatarso-phalangia'nus, Metatarso-phalangal. Relating to the metatarsus and phalanges.

METATARSO-PHALANGIAN OF METATARSO-PHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metatarsus and the corresponding phalanges. They bear the greatest analogy to the metacarpo-phalangian articulations.

MÉTATARSO-PHALANGIEN-LATÉRAL, see Interossei pedis—m. Sous-phalangien transversal du premier orteil, Transversus pedis.

METATAR'SUS, Metatar'sium, Metape'dium, Metapo'dium, Præcor'dium seu Solum pedis, Vestig'ium pedis, (F.) Métatarsæ, from μετα, 'after,' and ταρσος, 'the tarsus.' That part of the foot which is situate between the tarsus and toes, corresponding with the metacarpus. It is composed of five parallel bones; one to each toe. Like the metacarpal bones, they are developed from two points of ossification.

METATH'ESIS, from μετατιθημι, (μετα, and τιθημι, 'to place,') 'I change place.' Transposit'io. An operation, by which a morbid agent is removed from one place to another, where it may produce less disturbance in the exercise of the functions:—as, for example, in the operation of depressing cataract, or when calculus in the urethra is pushed back into the bladder. Also, Derivation.

METATIO, Mensuration.

METATOC'IA, from meta, and τοκος, 'birth.'

Parturition in a preternatural manner. Preternatural labour.

METATOPTOSIS, Diadexis.

METENSOMATOSIS, Incorporation.

METEORISMUS, Sublimation, Tympanites.

METEOROL'OGY, Meteorology'ia, from μετεωρος, (meta, and αιρωω, 'I lift up.')

'a meteor,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science, whose object is a knowledge of the origin, formation, appearance, &c. of meteors. The state of the atmosphere has a most important bearing upon the health of animals. Every epidemic affection has its causes seated there. Meteorological conditions have, hence, ever been attended to by the physician for the purpose of detecting the precise character of any particular epidemic influence. The barometer, thermometer, and hygrometer are the instruments used with this intent—to detect, as well the varying weight or pressure, and the temperature, as the moisture. Perhaps, of the three conditions, the last exerts more influence in the production of disease than either of the others. Our knowledge, however, of this part of physics is extremely limited and unsatisfactory.

METER, μετρον, 'a measure.' A suffix to words denoting 'a measure,' as in Barometer, Pleximeter, &c.

METH. A prefix to terms. Same signification as Meta.

METHÆMACHYMLA, Transfusion.

METHÆMATA; from meth, and αιμα, 'blood.'

The capillary or intermediate system of vessels in which the blood undergoes the change from venous to arterial, and conversely. — Marshall Hall. See Capillary vessels.

METHIE, Temulencia.

METHIEGLIN, Melizomum.

METHEMERINUS, Quotidian.

METHOD, Meth'odus, from meth, and οδος, 'way.' This word has different acceptations in the sciences. In medicine, curative method, meth'odus medendi, is the methodical treatment of disease.

METHOD OF COUNTING, Method, numerical—m. Mariano's, see Lithotomy.

METHOD. NUMERICAL, Method of Observation or of Counting, of Louis, (F.) Méthode numérique, consists in observing every case and every symptom of a case numerically, so as to ensure, as far as practicable, accuracy of observation; and to enable us, by the analysis and collation of such facts, to deduce general laws and conclusions. Also, the application of numbers to the study of disease. See Statistics, medical.

MÉTHODE NUMÉRIQUE, Method, numerical, Statistics, medical—m. Perturbatrice, Perturbatrix (Medicina)—m. Stibio-dermique, see Unguentum antiuoni.

METHODICS, Methodists.

MÉTHODIQUES, Methodists.

METHODISTS, Methodical sect, Method'ics, (F.) Methodistes, Méthodiques. Same etymon. A sect of physicians whose doctrine was in vogue after that of the Empirics and Dogmatists, towards the end of the first century. According to the Methodists, of whom Themison was the chief, almost every disease is dependent on contraction or relaxation—strictum or laxum. To these two causes, they added a third—mixed or compound—to include those affections which partook of the two characters. The doctrine, medic'ina method'ica, resembled, in some respects, that of Brown.

METHODOL'OGY (MEDICAL), Methodology'ia Med'ica, from μεθοδος, 'method,' and λογος,

'a discourse.' A word used, by the French more especially, to signify method applied to the study of any science. Medical Methodology, consequently, means method applied to the study of medicine.

METHODUS CATALEPTICA, see Cataleptic—m. Celsiana, see Lithotomy—m. Curatoria, Therapeutics.

METHODUS DERIVATORIA. The derivative or revellent system of treatment.

METHODUS ENDERMATICA seu ENDERMATICA, see Endemie—m. Franconiana, see Lithotomy—m. Guytoniana, see Lithotomy—m. Medendi, Method of cure, Therapeutics.

METHOMANIA, from μεθη, 'drunkenness,' and μανια, 'mania.' An irresistible desire for intoxicating substances. Temulencia.

METHU, see Temulencia, Wine.

METHYLE, HYDRATED OXIDE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYLENE, BIHYDRATE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYSIS, Temulencia.

METHYSMUS, Temulencia.

METHYSTICUS, from μεθη, 'drunkenness.' That which causes, or pertains to, drunkenness.

METHYSTOPHYLLUM GLAUCUM.

A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amyridaceæ, an infusion of whose leaves is pleasant to the taste, and is used in bronchitis, asthma, and other thoracic diseases. With the Bushmen and others, it is a favourite beverage, and is called by them Boschjesmansthee, 'Bushman's tea.' It is, also, chewed.

MÉTIS, Hybrid.

MÉTISAGE, Crossing.

METODONTIASIS, from meta, and οδοντιασις, 'dentition.' Faulty development of the teeth.

METOPAGES, Symphyocephalus.

METOPANTRA, Frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRAL'GIA, from μετωπον (meta, and ωψ, 'the eye') 'the forehead,' αντρον, 'a cavity,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRITIS, Inflammatio sinuum frontallium, from metopantra, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the frontal sinuses.

METOPION, Bubon galbanus.

METOPIMUM, Mesophryon.

METOPODYNIA, Neuralgia frontalis.

METOPON, Front, Frontal bone.

METOPOS'COPY, Metoposcopy'ia, from μετωπον, (meta, and ωψ, 'the eye,') 'the forehead,' and σκοπειν, 'to view.' The art of knowing the temperance and character of a person by inspecting the traits of his forehead or face. See Physiognomy.

METRA, μητρα, Uterus.

METRÆ, Secundines.

METRÆMORRHAGIA, Metrorrhagia.

METRÆMORRHŌIDES, from metra, and αιμορροιδες, 'hemorrhoids.' Hemorrhoids or varicose veins at the orifice of the uterus.

METRAL'GIA, Metroygia'ia, from metra, and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus.

METRANÆMIA, from metra, and anæmia. An anemic condition of the uterus.

METRANASTROPHE, Uterus, inversion of the.

METRANEURYSMUS, Metreuryana.

METRATRE'NIA, Imperforatio uteri, from metra, and ατρασια, 'imperforation.' An unnatural closure of the uterus.

METRATROPH'IA, from metra, a, 'privative,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Atrophy or want of development of the uterus.

METRAUX'Ë, Hypertroph'ia seu Sarco'sis

u'teri, from metra, and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the uterus.

METRECTASIA, from metra, and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the womb.

METRELCO'SIS, Metrelcol'sis, from metra, and ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Ulceration of the uterus.

METREMPHRAX'IS, from metra, and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the womb or of the vessels of the womb—Infarctus u'teri. A name under which some authors have confounded chronic inflammation of that viscus, and the different degenerations to which it is exposed.

METREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

METREN'CHIYTA, Metren'chytes, from metra, and εγχυω, 'I inject.' Injection of the uterus. Substances injected into the uterus are called Metren'chyta.

METREURYS'MA, Metreureys'mus, from metra, and ευρυς, 'dilated.' A morbid dilatation of the womb.

METRHELCO'SIS, Metrelcosis.

METRYMENITIS, see Metritis.

METRIOPATHI'A, from μετριος, 'tempered,' and παθος, 'affection.' State of an individual whose passions are temperate.

METRI'TIS, from metra, and itis, denoting inflammation. Febris uteri'na, Hysteritis, Empres'ma Hysteritis, Inflammatio U'teri, Metrophlogo'sis, Inflammation of the Uterus or Womb, (F.) Inflammation de la matrice. The characteristic symptoms of this affection are:—pain, swelling, and tenderness in the hypogastric region; with heat, pain, and tenderness of the os uteri; vomiting, smallness, and frequency of pulse. It occurs most frequently after delivery, Lochometritis, when there is generally suppression of the lochial discharge. The treatment must be vigorous,—bleeding early, so as to make a decided impression; followed by a full dose of opium, fomentations, blisters, &c.

Acute inflammation of the womb, seated in its internal membrane, Endo-metritis. Metrymenitis, Enmetritis, has been called Inflammatio catarhæ'alis u'teri or Acute catarrh, (F.) Catarrhe aigu, of that viscus. It is known by the discharge of a clear, stringy fluid per vaginam; preceded by pains, which, from the hypogastric region, shoot to the thighs, groins, &c., with more or less fever. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment. Chronic metritis sometimes succeeds the acute. To it must be referred the indurations, observed in the uterus, and many of the leucorrhœal discharges to which females are subject.

METRITIS RHEUMATICA, Metrorrheuma—m. Septica, Metroence—m. Venosa, see Phlebitis.

METROBLENNORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROBLENNOZEMIA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROBOTRYTES, Cauliflower excrescence of the uterus.

METRO'CAE, Metritis septica, from metra, and κακος, 'evil.' Putrescency or gangrene of the uterus.

METROCAMP'SIS, Hysteroloxia.

METROCARCINO'MA, Hystero-carcino'ma, U'teri carcino'ma, Cancer u'teri, from metra, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the uterus.

METROCATARRHUS, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROCELE, Hysterocele.

METROCELIDES, Nævus.

METROCHOL'O'SIS, from metra, and χολος, 'bile.' Febris puerperalis bilio'sa.

METRODYNIA, Metralgia.

METROHÆMIA, Hypermetrohémie, from metra, and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of blood in the uterus.

METROHEMORRHAGE, Metrorrhagia.

METROLEUCORRHŒA, Leucorrhœa uteri.

METROLOXIA, Hysteroloxia.

METROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.

METROMALACOSIS, Hysteromalacia.

METROMANIA, Nymphomania.

METROMY'ZEUS, from metra, and μυζω, 'I suck.' An exhausting syringe, to be applied to the os uteri, for exhausting the womb in cases of amenorrhœa.

METRONCUS, Hysteroncus.

METROPARALYSIS, from metra, and παρὰλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.

METROPATHI'A, from metra, and παθος, 'affection.' An affection of the womb.

MÉTRO-PÉRITONITE PUERPÉRALE, see Peritonitis.

METROPERITONITIS, from metra, and 'peritonitis.' Inflammatio u'teri et peritonæ'i. Inflammation of the uterus and peritoneum. Puerperal Fever. See Peritonitis.

METROPHLEBITIS, from metra, φλεβ, 'a vein, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the veins of the uterus.

METROPHLEBITIS PUERPÉRALIS, see Phlebitis.

METROPHLOGOSIS, Metritis.

METROPIITH'SIS, Phthisis uteri'na, from metra, and φθιω, 'I consume.' Consumption from ulceration of the uterus—Ulcera seu Helco'sis u'teri.

METROPHYMA, Hysteroncus.

METROPLETHO'RA, Metryperæmia, from metra, and πληθωρα, 'fulness.' Congestion or hyperæmia of the uterus.

METROPOL'YPUS, Hystero-pol'ypus, Polyypus U'teri, from metra, and πολυypus. Polyypus of the uterus.

METROPROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METORRHAG'IA, Metrorrhag'ia, Hæmorrhagia uteri'na seu u'teri, Sanguis u'teri'nis uteri'nis, Sanguinis stillo'id'ium ab U'tero, Fluor uteri'ni sanguinis, Profluuium Sanguinis ex u'tero, Hystero'rrhag'ia sanguin'ea, Hystero'rrhæ'a, Hæmorrhæ'a uteri'na (of some), Menorrhag'ia (of some), Hæmatometra, Hæmatometra, Uterine Hemorrhage, Hemorrhage from the Womb, Metro-hemorrhage, (F.) Hémorrhagie de la Matrice, Pertes, Pertes utérines rouges, P. de sang; from metra, and ρηννυμι, 'I break forth.' An effusion of blood from the inner surface of the uterus, either at the menstrual or other periods; but in a greater quantity than proper. Uterine hemorrhage may be caused by those influences which produce hemorrhage in general. It happens, however, more frequently during pregnancy, and during or after delivery, when the vascular system of the uterus is so circumstanced as to favour its occurrence more than at other periods. The termination of metrorrhagia is usually favourable. Should it, however, be very copious, or frequently recur; or should it happen to a great extent after delivery, death may take place very speedily; and, in some cases, without the discharge being perceptible; constituting internal hemorrhage.

Uterine hemorrhage may be active or passive; requiring obviously a different treatment. The main management is similar to that of hemorrhage in general;—the horizontal posture; acid drinks; free admission of cool air; cold applications to the loins, thighs, and abdomen; injection of cold water, even of iced water, into the vagina; plugging the vagina, so as to prevent the discharge per vaginam, and thus induce a coagulum in the mouths of the bleeding vessels. Such will be the special plan adopted where the hemorrhage has occurred in one not recently delivered. In uterine hemorrhage after delivery, the same cooling plan must be followed; but, as the flow of blood is owing to the uterus not contracting so as to constricting its vessels, pressure must be made on the abdomen to aid this; and, if necessary, the hand must be introduced into the uterus to stimulate it to contraction. Should the female be excessively reduced, so as to render the accoucheur apprehensive that she may expire from loss of blood, brandy may be exhibited. The profuse exhibition of opium in such cases is, at least, a doubtful plan.

Transfusion has, at times, been practised as a last resource.

METORRHEU'MA, Rheumatismus Uteri, Hysteralgia rheumatica seu catarrhalis, Metrica rheumatica, (F.) Rhumatisme de l'utérus; from metra, and ρῆμα, 'defluxion,' 'rheumatism.' Rheumatism of the uterus.

METORRHEXIS, Uterus, rupture of the.

METORRHE'IA, from metra, and ρῆω, 'I flow.' A protracted discharge of any fluid from the uterus.

METROSALPINX, Tube, Fallopian.

METROSCEIR'RHUS, Hysteroscic'rhus, Scirrhus seu Carcinoma uteri, from metra, and σκιρπος, 'scirrhus.' Scirrhus of the uterus.

METROSCOLIOMA, Hysteroloxia.

METROSCOPE, Metroscopium, from metra, and σκοπεω, 'to view.' An instrument, invented by M. Nauche, for listening to the sounds of the heart of the fetus, in utero-gestation, when the sounds and movements are imperceptible through the parietes of the abdomen. The extremity of the instrument—the first notion of which was given to M. Nauche by the stethoscope of Laënnec—is introduced into the vagina and applied against the neck of the uterus.

METROSIDEROS GUMMIFERA, see Kino. METROSTERE'SIS, from metra, and στεροσις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the uterus. Want of uterus.

METROSYNIZE'SIS, Hysterosynize'sis, from metra, and συνίζησις, 'running together.' Morbid union of the uterus to adjacent parts.

MÉTROTOME, Hysterotomus.

METROTOMIA, Cesarean section.

METRYPERÆMIA, Metroplethora.

METRYPERÆSTHESIS, see Uterus, irritable.

MEU, Æthusa meum.

MEULIÈRE, Molar.

MEZEREUM ACETATUM, see Daphne mezereum.

MIAMMA, Miasma.

MIANSIS, Miasma.

MIARIA, Miasma.

MIAS'MA, Miasm, μιασμα, 'a stain,' from μιαω, 'I contaminate.' Miasm'ma, Miasm'sis, Mia'ria, Mias'mus, Inquinamentum, Molyn'sis, Contagium. The word miasm has, by some, been employed synonymously with contagion. It is now used more definitely for any emanation, either from the bodies of the sick, or from animal and vegetable substances, or from the earth, especially in marshy districts, (Marsh poison, Effluvium palustrè, Gas palustrè, (F.) Intoxication des Marris), which may exert a morbid influence on those who are exposed to its action. To these terrestrial emanations—the Koino-mias'mata of Dr. E. Miller, of New York—the Italians give the name aria cattiva, but, more commonly, malaria ('bad air'); a word which has been adopted into other languages. The deleterious effluvia, originating from the decomposition of matter derived from the human body, have been called by Dr. Miller, Idiomias'mata; the epithets Koino and Idio being derived respectively from κοινος, 'common,' and ιδιος, 'personal.' Of the miasms which arise either from the animal body or from the most unhealthy situations, we know, chemically, nothing. All that we do know is, that, under such circumstances, emanations take place, capable of causing disease in many of those who are exposed to their action.

MIASMAT'IC, Miasmaticus. Belonging or relating to miasmata. Sauvages, in his classification of diseases according to their etiology, has a class under the name Morbi miasmatici. A fever that arises from marshy miasms, is styled malaria, paludal, Helop'gra, Helopy'etus, &c.

MIASMUS, Miasma.

MI'ULANTES, see Convulsionnaire.

MICÆ PANIS, see Triticum.

MICATIO CORDIS, Systole.

MICHE'LIA CHAM'PACA, Champang, Michelia Tsjampaca. Ord. Magnoliaceæ. An Oriental tree, much prized for the odour and beauty of its flowers. The oily infusion of the flowers is employed in the Moluccas in headache.

MICLE'TA. A medicine used by Mesue for arresting hemorrhage; perhaps, according to Siebenhaar, from the Arabic, michuata, "proved by experience."

MICOSIS, Frambæsia.

MICRANATOMIA, see Anatomy.

MICRANGIA, Capillary vessels.

MICRENCEPHALIUM, Cerebellum.

MICRENCEPHALON, Cretinism.

MICRENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

MICROCEPHALIA, see Microcephalus.

MICROCEPH'ALUS, Microceph'alus, Microcranius, from micros, and κεφαλη, 'head.' One who has a small head. A monster having a small imperfect head, or a small imperfect cranium. The condition is called Microcephalia, Cranioosteno'sis. With some it means Idiotism.

MICROCORIA, Myosis.

MICROCOSM, Microcosmus, from micros, and κοσμος, 'world.' A little world. Some philosophers have given this appellation to man, whom they consider as the epitome of all that is admirable in the world. The world they call Macrococosm.

MICROCOSMETOR, Vital principle.

MICROCOSM'ICA MACH'INA. The organism of man.

MICROCOSM'ICA SCIENTIA, Physiology.

MICROCOSM'ICUM SAL, with the ancients meant the salts of the urine.—Sal urinae.

MICROCOSMOGRAPHIA, Physiology.

MICROCOUST'IC, Microcous'ticus, from micros, and ακουω, 'I hear.' This word, as well as Microph'onus, from μικρος, 'small,' and φωνη, 'voice,' means any thing that contributes to increase the intensity of sound—as the speaking trumpet—by collecting the sonorous rays.

MICROCRANIUS, Microcephalus.

MICROGLOS'SIA, from micros, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' Original smallness of tongue.

MICROLEUCONYMPH'EA, Nymphæa alba.

MICROLOGY, see Microscopy.

MICROM'ELUS, Hemim'elea, from micros, and μελος, 'a limb.' A monster having imperfectly developed extremities.

MICROMMATUS, Microphthalmus.

MICROPH'ONALUS, Microcæstic.

MICROPH'ATH'ALUS, Micro'matus, from micros, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' One who has small eyes. A monster with two small, or imperfectly developed eyes. A small eye,—Ophthalmidium, Ophthalm'mium.

MICROPODIA, Micropus.

MICROPROSOPUS, Aprosopus, from micros, and πρῶσπον, 'face.' A monster in which a part of the face is absent.

MICROPUS, from micros, and πους, 'foot.' One who has small feet. The condition is called Micropodia.

MICROPYLE, Micropylum, from micros, and πύλη, 'gate.' An opening in the epispem of seeds, through which the fecundating pollen enters the ovule to fecundate it. It has been supposed, that such a micropyle exists in the human ovule.

MICROCRHIDES, from micros, and ρχις, 'a testicle.' They who have very small testicles.

MICROS, μικρος, 'little,' as in MICROSCOPY, Microscopium; from micros, and σκοπη, 'a view.' Observation by the microscope; an important agency in the examination of the healthy and morbid tissues. A description of the results of such observation is Micrography. Micrology is often used with the same signification, and for a treatise on the microscope and the results of microscopy.

MICROSOMIA, Nanosomia.

MICROSPHYCTUS. Same etymon as the next. One who has a small pulse.

MICROSPHYXIA, from micros, and σφυγμος, 'pulse.' Smallness or weakness of pulse.

MICROSPORON AUDOUINI, see Porrigo decalvans—m. Furfur, see Chloasma—m. Mentagrophytes, Mentagrophyte.

MICROSOTOMUS; from micros, and στομα, 'mouth.' One who has a small mouth.

MICROTESIA, Partium organica'rum parvitas morbosa; from μικροτης, 'smallness.' Morbid smallness of organic parts.

MICROTRAPEZIA, Leptotrophia.

MICROTRICHIA; from micros, and τριχ, 'hair.' Fineness or shortness of hair.

MICROTROPHIA, Leptotrophia.

MICTIO, Micturition — m. Cruenta, Hæmaturia—m. Inopportuna, Enuresis—m. Involuntaria, Enuresis—m. Sanguinea, Hæmaturia.

MICTION, Micturition.

MICTURITION, Mictio, Mictus, Urisis, Urisis, Omiche'sis, (F.) Miction, Action de pisser, from micturio, and ungere, mictum, 'I make water.' The act of making water—Urination. Also, morbid frequency of passing the water.

MICTUS, Micturition — m. Cruentus, Hæmaturia.

MIDRIFE, Diaphragm.

MIDWIFE, from μι, 'with,' and πιρ, 'wife,' or, from μιγ, 'need,' 'recompense,' and πιρ, 'wife.' Matrona, Obstetrix, Hyperetria, Mæa, Mæas, Mau'tria, Aces'toris, Aces'tris, Aces'tria, (Sc.) Howdy, (Prov.) Grace-wife, Handwoman, Headswoman, Howdy-wife, (F.) Sage femme, Accoucheuse. A female who practises obstetrics.

MIDWIFERY, Obstetrics.

MILIARIA, Miliary fever—m. Sudans, Miliary fever—m. Sudatoria, Miliary fever.

MILIARIS SUDATORIA, Sudor anglicus, S picardicus.

MILIARY, Milia'ris, (F.) Miliaire; from milium, 'millet.' Resembling millet seed—hence, miliary fever, miliary glands, &c.

MILIARY FEVER, Em'phlysis milia'ria, Milia'ris, Miliaria, M. sudans seu sudatoria, Sudor, S. milia'ris, Pap'ula milia'ris, Exanthe'ma miliaria, Syn'ochus miliaria, Aspre'do milia'cca, Febris milia'ris seu essero'sa seu puncticul'a'ris seu culicula'ris seu vesicul'a'ris seu lenticula'ris seu purpura'te rubra et alba milia'ris, Pur'pura puerpera'rum, P. milia'ris, Pap'ulæ sud'ris Millet seed rash, (F.) Miliaire, Millot, Powpre blanc, Millet. It is so called from the eruption resembling the seed of the milium or millet. Fever, accompanied by an eruption of small, red, isolated pimples, rarely confluent, but almost always very numerous, slightly raised above the skin, and presenting, at the end of 24 hours, a small vesicle filled with a white transparent fluid; which quickly dries up, and separates in the form of scales. Miliary fever is now rare, in consequence of the cooling practice in fevers and other states of the system. It is almost always brought on by external heat, and hence the prevention is obvious. The treatment is simple. It requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, in ordinary cases.

MILIARY GLANDS, Sebaceous glands—m. Granulations or Tubercles, see Granulation.

MILII SEMINA, Panicum Italicum.

MILIOLOM. Diminutive of milium, 'millet.' Cenchr'id'ion. A small tumour on the eyelids, resembling, in size, a millet-seed.

MILITARIS HERBA, Achillea millefolium.

MILITARY, Milita'ris, from miles, militis, (F.) Militaire, 'a soldier.' Pertaining to a soldier or an army—as 'Military medicine,' Medicina milita'ris, (F.) Médecine militaire; and Military surgery, Chirur'gia milita'ris, (F.) Chirurgie militaire. Medicine and surgery applicable to the soldier.

MILK, Sax. melc, Lac, Gala, Humor lacteus, Latex ni'reus, (F.) Lait. A fluid secreted by the mammary glands of the females of the mammalia. The skimmed milk of the cow. (F.) Lait de Vache, contains water, caseous matter, traces of butter, sugar of milk, chloride of sodium, phosphate, and acetate of potassa, lactic acid, lactate of iron, and earthy phosphate. The cream is formed of butter, casein, and whey, in which there is sugar of milk and salts. When examined by the microscope, milk is seen to contain a large number of particles, of irregular size and shape, varying from $\frac{1}{200}$ th to $\frac{3}{800}$ th of an inch in diameter. They consist of oily matter, surrounded by a delicate pellicle, and are the milk globules.

Cow's milk is employed for the preparation of cream, butter, cheese, whey, sugar of milk, and frangipane. It is useful in a number of cases of poisoning; either by acting as a demulcent, or by decomposing certain poisons, or by combining with others so as to neutralize them. It is constantly employed as aliment, and may be regarded as an emulsion in which butter and casein are found in suspension. When taken into the stomach, it is coagulated by the gastric fluids, and the coagulum is digested like any other solid. The watery parts are absorbed.

Between milk, flour, and blood, there is great similarity of composition. The following table is given by Dr. Robert Dundas Thomson:

Milk.	Flour.	Blood.
Curd or Casein	Fibrin,	Fibrin,
	Albumen,	Albumen,
	Casein,	Casein,
	Gluten,	Colouring matter.
Butter.....	Oil.	Fat.
Sugar.....	Sugar,	} Sugar.
	Starch,
Chloride of potassium,	} Do.	} Do.
sodium,
Phosphate of soda,
lime,
magnesia,
iron,

From a considerable number of experiments, Messrs. Deyeux and Parmentier class the six kinds of milk, which they examined, according to the following table, as regards the relative quantity of materials they contain.

Casein.	Butter.	Sugar of Milk.	Serum.
Goat	Sheep	Woman	Ass
Sheep	Cow	Ass	Woman
Cow	Goat	Mare	Mare
Ass	Woman	Cow	Cow

Mare	Mare	Sheep	Sheep

MILK ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MILK, ALMOND, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MILK AND SODA WATER. An agreeable mode of taking milk in cases where it lies heavily on the stomach. Heat, nearly to boiling, a teacupful of milk; dissolve in it a teaspoonful of sugar, put it into a large tumbler, and pour over it two-thirds of a bottle of soda water.

MILK, ASSES', (F.) Lait d'Anesse, considerably resembles human milk, of which it has the consistence, smell, and taste: but it contains a little less cream, and more soft, caseous matter. It is often used by those labouring under pulmonary affections.

Artificial Asses' Milk may be made by taking gelatin \mathfrak{z} ss; dissolving it, by the aid of heat, in barley water Oij; adding refined sugar \mathfrak{z} j; pouring into the mixture new milk Oj; and beating the whole with a whisk.

It may also be prepared by dissolving sugar of milk \mathfrak{z} ij in tepid skimmed cow's milk Oj.

MILK BLOTCH, Porrigo larvalis — m. Crust, Porrigo larvalis.

MILK, EWES', (F.) Lait de Brebis. It affords more cream than cows' milk; but the butter is softer. The caseum, on the contrary, is fatter, and more viscid. It contains less serum than cows' milk. The Roquefort cheeses are made from it.

MILK FEVER, see Fever, milk — m. Glass, Breast glass — m. Globules, see Milk.

MILK, GOATS', (F.) Lait de Chèvre, resembles cows' milk: the butyraceous matter, however, which enters into its composition, is more solid than that of the cow.

Artificial Goat's Milk may be made by taking fresh sweet \mathfrak{z} j; cutting it into small pieces; tying it in a muslin bag, large enough to leave the morsels free from compression; and boiling in a quart of cow's milk, sweetened with a quarter of an ounce of white sugar candy.

Used as a diet in scrofulous cases, and also in phtisis.

MILK, GREEN, Colostrum.

MILK, HUMAN, (F.) Lait de femme,—contains more sugar, milk, and cream, and less caseum, than cows' milk. Its composition differs according to the distance of time from delivery.

MILK KNOT, Galacto-ganglion; (F.) Ganglion laitencr. The knots often observed in the breast after inflammation of the organ, or for some time after the suppression of the secretion. They generally end by resolution.

MILK LEG, Phlegmatia dolens.

MILK, MALES', Sperm.

MILK, MARES', (F.) Lait de Jument,—contains only a small quantity of fluid butyraceous matter; a little caseum, softer than that of cows' milk, and more serum.

MILK SCALD, Porrigo larvalis.

MILK SICKNESS, Sick stomach, Sicamp sickness, Tères, Slows, Stiff joints, Paking fever, River sickness. A disease occasionally observed in the States of Alabama, Indiana, and Kentucky, which affects both man and cattle, but chiefly the latter. It is attributed in cattle to something eaten or drunk by them; and in man to the eating of the flesh of animals labouring under the disease. Owing to the tremors that characterize it in animals, it is called the Trembles. It is endemic.

The symptoms of the disease are such as are produced by the acro-narcotic class of poisons—vomiting, purging, extreme nervous agitation, &c.: and the approved indications of treatment appear to be—gentle emetics and laxatives, with quiet, and mucilaginous drinks.

MILK, SNAKES', Euphorbia corollata.

MILK, SOLIDIFIED. Milk, to which little less than an equal weight of white sugar has been added, evaporated to dryness. When re-dissolved in water, it has all the qualities of fresh milk, with the additional quantity of sugar.

To milk, evaporated to dryness, MM. Grimaud and Galais have given the names Lactoline and Lactine.

MILK SPOTS, Macula albæ, Strophulus.

MILK STONE, Morochthus.

MILK, SUGAR OF, Sugar of milk.

MILLET-SEED RASH, Military fever.

MILLIGRAMME, from mille, 'a thousand,' and gamma, 'a gramme.' The thousandth part of a gramme:—about 0.0154 Troy grain.

MILLIGRANA, Herniaria glabra.

MILLIMÈTRE, Millim'eter, from mille, 'a thousand,' and μετρον, 'measure.' The thousandth part of the metre;—equal to 0.03937 English inch, or about two-fifths of a line.

MILLOT. Miliary fever.
MILPHIE. Madarosis.
MILPHIOSIS. Madarosis.
MILT. Melt. Spleen.
MILT-LIKE. An epithet for a form of cancer, characterized by a soft pale growth, containing scarcely any blood;—so called from its resemblance to the milt of a fish.
MILT-LIKE TUMOUR. Ocephaloid.
MILTUS. Plumbi oxydum rubrum.
MILTWASTE. Asplenium.

MIND, ABSENCE OF. Aphelxia socors—m. Abstraction of, Aphelxia intenta—m. Unsound, Insanity.

MINERALIUM. Antimonium.
MINER'S ELBOW. An enlargement of a bursa over the olecranon, occurring in such as are in the habit of leaning much upon it; and, therefore, often seen in those who work on the side in low-roofed mines.

MIN'IM, Minimum, 'the least part or portion.' The 60th part of a fluidrachm. This measure has been introduced by the London College of Physicians, in consequence of the uncertainty of the size of the drop, (see Gutta.) The subdivision of the wine pint has, accordingly, been extended to the 60th part of the fluidrachm; and glass measures, called "minim-measures," have been adopted by the London College. The proportion between the minims and the drops of various fluid preparations is exhibited in the following table. The results were obtained by Mr. Durand, a skilful pharmacien of Philadelphia, under circumstances, as regards the different articles, as nearly identical as possible.

MINIM'ETER; badly compounded from minimum and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for measuring minims, invented by Mr. Alsop. It consists of a glass tube, graduated from the conical point into minims; and having a piston, by the elevation of which, fluid may be drawn into the tube, and by its depression be forced from it.

MINIM MEASURE. A measure for the divisions of a fluidrachm.

MINIMUM, Minim.
MINISTER GYMNASTÆ, Pædotribes.
MINITHOSIS, Meiosis.
MINIUM, Plumbi oxydum rubrum—m. Gæcorum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum—m. Purum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MINOR HEL'ICIS. A muscle situate on the posterior border of the helix of the ear, at its commencement in the fossa of the concha.

MINORATIVUS, Laxative.

MINUTHEISIS, Meiosis.

MINYANTHES, Menyanthes.

MIOSIS, Meiosis.

MIRLES, Rubæola.

MIROCELE, Merocèle.

MIRROT, Daucus Carota.

MISADIR, Ammoniaë murias.

MISANTHRO'PIA, Misanthropy, Exanthro'pia, Phyganthro'pia, from μισος, 'hatred,' and ανθρωπος, 'man.' Aversion to man and society:—a symptom of melancholy, and hypochondriasis.

MISCARRIAGE, Abortion.

MISERERE MEI, Ileus.

MISIME TEETA, Coptis teeta.

MISMAR, Mesemar. A name given by Avicenna to a kind of nodus, which forms on the toes as the sequel of contusion or inflammation of those parts.

MISOPTO'CHUS, from μισος, 'hatred,' and πτωχος, 'poor.' That which has hatred for the poor. The gout has been so called by some, because it commonly affects the rich.

MISSADAN, Hydrargyrum.

MISSIO SANGUINIS, Blood-letting.

MISSISSIP'PI, MINERAL WATERS OF. Cooper's Well, in Hinds County, four miles from Raymond, and thirteen from Jackson, is a sulphuretted saline, the chief constituents being the sulphates of soda and magnesia. Of the solid ingredients upwards of 3 per cent. are of peroxide of iron. The waters are chiefly used in chronic gastro-enteric affections. Ocean Springs, in Jackson County, is an acidulo-sulphureous chalybeate.

MISTIO, Mistura.

MISTLETOE, Viscum album—m. Yellowish, Viscum flavescens.

MISTU'RA, μῆξις, Propotisma, Migma, Mistio, Mixtio, Mixture, (F.) Potion, from miscere, mixtum, 'to mix.' A mingled compound, in which different ingredients are contained in Minim measure.

the fluid state; suspended or not by means of mucilaginous or saccharine matter. In this sense, it is synonymous with the French Potion. In France, however, the word mixture is more frequently understood to mean a liquid medicine, which contains very active substances, and can only be administered by drops. A mixture, in other words, in the French sense, may be regarded as a potion deprived of watery vehicle.

MISTURA, (S.) A fragrant yellow-coloured water, used as a perfume by the ladies of Peru. It is prepared from gillyflower, jasmine, and flor de mistela (Talinum uibellatum). See Campomanesia lineatifolia.

MISTURA ACACIÆ, Mucilago Acaciæ.

MISTURA AC'IDI HYDROCYAS'ICI, Mixture of Prussic acid, Mélange pectoral (Magendie). (Medicinal prussic acid, ℥j, distilled water, ℥xiv, pure sugar, ℥iiss.) A dessert-spoonful every morning and evening, as a pectoral, &c.

MISTURA AMMONI'ACI, Lac ammoniaci, Mixture of ammoniac. (Ammoniac, ℥ij, aquæ Oss. Rub the ammoniacum: adding the water gradually until they are perfectly mixed. Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥ss to f℥ij.

MISTURA AMYGDALÆ, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MISTURA ASAFÆTIDÆ, Lac asafetidæ, Emulsio antihysterica, Mixture of asafetida. (F. Lait d'asafetida. (Asafetidæ ℥ij, aquæ Oss. Rub together, adding the water by degrees. Ph. U. S.) Used where pills cannot be swallowed, and as a glyster in irritations during dentition, and in ascarides. Dose, f℥ss to f℥iiss.

MISTURA ASAFÆTIDÆ PRO CLYSMATE, Enema fetidum.

MISTURA CAM'PHORÆ, Aqua camphoræ (Ph. U. S.), Camphor mixture or julep, Mixture camphorata, Jula'pium e camphorâ seu camphoratum, (F. Julep camphré. (Camphor. ℥ij, alcohol. ℥xl, muges. carb. ℥iv, aquæ Oij. Rub the camphor with the alcohol, and afterwards with the magnesia, add the water, and filter. Ph. U. S.) Virtues like those of camphor. See Emulsio camphoræ.

MISTURA CORNU USTI, Decoctio cornu cervi'ni seu album, Decoction of burnt hartshorn, Mixture of burnt hartshorn. (Cornuum ust. ℥ij, acaciæ gum. cont. ℥j, aquæ Oij. Boil to Oij, constantly stirring, and strain. Ph. L.)

MISTURA CREASOTI, Creasote mixture. (Creasot., Acid. acetic. āā ℥xvj, Sp. Junip. comp., Syrup., āā f℥j; Aquæ f℥xiv. Mix the creasote and the acid; add gradually the water, and then the syrup and spirit. Ph. E.) A fluidounce contains a minim of creasote.

MISTURA CRETÆ, Potio carbonatis calcis, Mixture creta'cea, Mucilago cretica, Chalk or Creta'ceous mixture, Chalk julep. (F. Mixture de Craie. (Creta pp. ℥ss, sacchar., acaciæ gum. in pulv., āā f℥j, aquæ cinnaum., aquæ, āā f℥vij. Mix. Ph. U. S.) Antacid and absorbent. Dose, f℥j to f℥ij.

MISTURA DIABOL'ICA. A mixture under this name is kept in military hospitals for malingerers. It is made of sundry nauseous ingredients, as aloes, asafetida, castor, &c., and is given so as to keep up a disagreeable impression on the gustatory nerves.

MISTURA EMETI'NÆ VOMITO'RIA, Emetic mixture of emetine. (Emetine 4 gr., orange flower water ℥ij, syrup ℥ss; M.) A dessert-spoonful every half hour till it acts.

MISTURA FERRI COMPOS'ITA, Compound mixture of iron. (F. Mixture de fer composee, Griffith's mixture. (Myrrh. cont., ℥j, potassæ carb. gr. xxv, aquæ rosæ f℥viiss, ferri sulph. in pulv., ℥j, sp. lavand. ℥ss, sacchar. ℥j. Rub together the myrrh, subcarbonate of potassa, and sugar; then add, while triturating, the rose-water, spirit of nutmeg; and, lastly, the sulphate of iron.

Pour the mixture directly into a glass bottle, and stop it close. Ph. U. S.) It is tonic and emetic, and is useful wherever iron is indicated.

MISTURA GLYCYRRHIZÆ COMPOS'ITA, Compound mixture of Liquorice, Brown Mixture. (Extract. Glycyrrhiz. pulv., Acaciæ pulv., Sacchar., āā ℥ss; Tinct. opii camphorat. f℥ij; Vin. antimon. f℥j; Spirit. æther. nitric. f℥ss; Aquæ f℥xij. Rub the liquorice, gum arabic, and sugar with the water, gradually poured upon them; add the other ingredients and mix. Ph. U. S.) A popular cough medicine, but not deserving of being made officinal. Dose, a tablespoonful or f℥ss.

MISTURA GUAIA'CI, Mixture of guaiac, Lac guaiaci, Emulsio guaiaci'na, Mixture acaciæ gummo'sa seu gummi guaiaci Ber'geri, Solutio guaiaci gummo'sa seu res'næ guaiaci aquo'sa. (F. Mixture de Guyac. (Guaiac. g. resin. ℥iiss, sacch. pur. ℥ij, muc. acaciæ gum. ℥ij, aq. cinnaum. f℥vij. Rub the guaiacum with the sugar; then with the mucilage. Add, gradually, the cinnamon water. Ph. L.) Dose, f℥ss to f℥ij.

MISTURA GUMMI GUAIA'CI BERGERI, Mixture Guaiaci—m. Hordei, Decoction Hordei compositum—m. Leniens, Looch ex ovo.

MISTURA MOSCHI, M. moscha'ta, Musk mixture. (Moschi, acaciæ gum. contus., sacch. purif., sing. ℥j, up. rosæ f℥vj. Rub the musk with the sugar; add the gum, and, by degrees, the rose-water. Ph. L.) Dose, f℥ss to f℥ij.

MISTURA SCAMMO'NI, Scammony Mixture. (Scammon. gr. vij, Lactis f℥iij. Triturate to form an emulsion. Ph. E.) The whole is a cathartic dose.

MISTURA SPIRIT'US VINI GALL'ICI, Brandy Mixture. (Sp. Vin. Gallic., Aq. cinnaum. āā f℥ij; Vitel. ovo. ij; Sacchar. ℥ss; Ol. cinnaum. ℥ij. M. Ph. L.) An excitant draught for the low stages of fever.

MISTURA STRYCH'NIÆ, Mixture of strychnia. (Distilled water, ℥ij, very pure strychnia, 1 gr., white sugar, ℥j; M.) Dose, a dessert-spoonful.

MISTURA SULPHURICO-ACIDA, Elixir acidum Halleri—m. Vulneraria acida, Arquebusade, Eau d'.

MITCHEL'LA REPENS, Partridge berry. A pretty little indigenous trailing evergreen, of the Cinchona family—Cinchonaceæ,—which flowers from June to July. It has been considered an expectorant, emmenagogue, and diuretic; and has been prescribed in dropsy and gout.

MITELLA, Sling.

MITHRIDATE, Mithridatium, Mithridat'icum medicamentum, Antidotum Mithridatium, Diacisc'ei antidotum, Confectio Damoc'ratis. A very compound electuary, into which entered—Myrrh of Arabia, Saffron, Agaric, Ginger, Cinnamon, Frankincense, Garlic, Mustard, Birthroot, Galbanum, Castor, Long pepper, Poponax, Bdelium, Gum Arabic, Opium, Gentian, Orris, Sappanum, Valerian, Acacia, Hypericum, Canary wine, Honey, &c. It was invented by Mithridates, king of Pontus and Bithynia, and was formerly regarded as alexipharmic. It is little used at the present day, and, from its heterogeneous nature, should be wholly abandoned.

MITHRIDATICUM MEDICAMENTUM, Mithridate.

MITIGANS, Lenitive.

MITRA HIPPOCRATICA, Bonnet d'Hippocrate.

MITRAL, Mitra'lis, from μῆτρον, mitra, 'a headdress.' Having the form of a mitre; resembling a bishop's mitre.

MITRAL REGURGITATION, see Regurgitation.

MITRAL VALVES, Val'vulæ mitra'les seu Cordis mitra'les seu episcopa'les seu bicuspida'les seu bicuspida'tæ. Two triangular valves at the opening of communication between the left auricle of the heart and the corresponding ventricle. These valves are formed by the inner membrane of the left cavities of the heart; and are retained on the side of the ventricle by tendinous cords, proceeding from the columnæ carneæ. They form a species of valve, which permit the blood to pass from the auricle into the ventricle and oppose its return.

MITRIUM, Sling.

MITTE (F.), Effluvium Latrinarium. An emanation exhaled from privies, which strongly irritates the eyes. It consists of ammonia, united to the carbonic and hydro-sulphuric acids.

MIUAMARU, see Arrow poison.

MIVA, Marmelade.

MIXIS, Coition, Mistura.

MIXTIO, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura—m. Almond, Emulsio Amygdalæ—m. of Ammoniac, Mistura ammoniaci—m. of Asafœtida, Mistura asafœtidæ.

MIXTURE, BRANDY, Mistura spiritus vini Gallici—m. Brown, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Colmante, Looch ex ovo.

MIXTURE, CAMPHOR, Mistura camphoræ—m. Chalk, Mistura cretæ.

MIXTURE DE CRAIE, Mistura cretæ—m. of Creasote, Mistura creasoti.

MIXTURE, CRETACEOUS, Mistura cretæ.

MIXTURE OF EMETINE, (emetic.) Mistura emetinæ vomitoria—m. de Fer composée, Mistura ferri composita—m. de Gayac, Mistura Guaiaci.

MIXTURE, GRIFFITH'S, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE OF GUALAC, Mistura Guaiaci—m. of Gum Arabic, see Emulsio Acaeciæ—m. of Harts-horn, burnt, Mistura cornu usti—m. of Iron, compound, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE, HOPE'S. A mixture recommended by Mr. Hope in diarrhœa and dysentery. It is essentially a nitrate of morphia. Although the proposer employed the acidum nitrosuin of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia, nitric acid is generally used. (Acid. nitros. f 3j; Aqua camphor. f ʒviij; Tinct. opii gtt. xl.; M.) Dose, a fourth part every three or four hours.

MIXTURE OF LIQUORICE, COMPOUND, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Lithoutriptique de Darvide, see Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus—m. of Marsh mallows, Decoctum althææ.

MIXTURE, MUSK, Mistura moschi—m. Neutral, Liquor passivæ citratis—m. of Prussic acid, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici.

MIXTURE OF SCAMMONY, Mistura scammonii.

MIXTURE, SCUDAMORE'S. A mixture recommended by Sir C. Scudamore in gouty and rheumatic affections, and much prescribed in the United States. Magnes. sulph. ʒj—ʒij; Aqua mentha f ʒx; Aceti colchic. f ʒj—f ʒiiss; Syrup croci f ʒj; Magnes. ʒviij, M. Dose, one, two, or three tablespoonfuls, repeated every two hours in a paroxysm of gout, until from four to six evacuations are produced in the twenty-four hours.

MIXTURE OF STRYCHNIA, Mistura strychniæ—m. de Whitt, see Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

MNEMĒ, Memory.

MNSEME CEPHALICUM BAL'SAMUM. A very compound medicine, into which entered Balm, Lily, Rosemary, Lavender, Borage, Broom, Roses, Violet, Saffron, Thyme, Storax, Galbanum, &c.

MNEMONÉUTICE, Mnemonics.

MNEMON'ICS, Mnemou'icē, Mnemonen'ticē, Mnemotechūē, (μννη, 'memory; μνημονικος, 'appertaining to memory,') from μναμαι, 'I recollect.' The art of aiding the memory; and of forming, in some sort, an artificial memory.

MNEMOTECHNE, Mnemonics.

MOANING, from Sax. mænan, 'to grieve.' Respiratio luctuosa, Mychthis mos. A plaintive respiration, in which the patient utters audible groans,—moans, (F.) Gémissements.

MOBILE, see Saint Augustine.

MOBILITY, Mobil'itas, from mob'ilis, contraction of moribilis, 'that can be moved.' The power of being moved. In physiology, great nervous susceptibility, often joined to a disposition to convulsion. Greatly developed excitability.

MOCCASIN FLOWER, Cypripedium acaule, C. luteum—m. Plant, Cypripedium luteum.

MOCH'LIA. Reduction of a luxated bone; from μωχλος, a lever.

MOCHLICUS, Purgative.

MOCHLISCUS, Lever.

MOCHLUS, Lever.

MOCHTIUS, Agony.

MOCK-KNEES, Crusta genu equinæ.

MOD'ELLING PROCESS. A term proposed by Dr. Macartney, of Dublin, to signify the mode in which wounds are healed without inflammation or suppuration, by a deposit of plastic matter from the surface of the wound, by which the gap is more rapidly filled,—portion being laid upon portion, without waste, after the manner of clay in the hands of the sculptor;—hence the term.

MODI'OLUS, 'the nave of a wheel.' Pyr'amis seu Axis seu Columella coch'leæ. A hollow cone in the cochlea of the ear, forming a nucleus, axis, or central pillar, round which the gyri of the cochlea pass. The modiolus forms the inner and larger portion of the central pillar, and is the cavity seen at the bottom of the meatus auditorius internus. It lodges a branch of the auditory nerve. The central portion of the modiolus contains a number of minute canals, and is called in consequence Tractus spiralis foraminulosus. Into these the nerves of the cochlea enter, and pass out at right angles between the bony plates forming the zona ossea of the lamina spiralis, to be expanded on the membranous portion of the lamina.

MODIOLUS, Mas, also means the crown of the tripod.

MODIRA CANRAM, Strychnos colubrina.

MO'DIUS. A dry measure, the third of an amphora, equal to the bushel.—Varro.

MODUS OPERAN'DI, 'mode of operating.' This term is applied to the general principles upon which remedies act in morbid states of the body:—a subject of much interest, although involved in considerable obscurity.

The following classification will convey some idea of the ways in which different organs may be excited into action.

1. By actual or immediate contact of the remedy, and by absorption or mediate contact.
2. By an impulse conveyed by the nerves, through an impression made on the stomach or elsewhere.
3. By contiguous or continuous sympathy, or by mere proximity or continuity of parts.

MOÉLLE, Marrow—m. Allongée, Medulla oblongata—m. Épinière, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertébrale, Medulla spinalis.

MŒNIA DENTIUM, Alveoli dentium.

MŒROR, Athymia.

MOFETTE, Azote, see Mephitism.

MOFFAT, MINERAL WATERS OF. Moffat is a village situate about 56 miles S. W. of Edinburgh. The water is a cold sulphureous; containing, in a wine gallon, 36 grains of chloride of sodium, 5 cubic inches of carbonic acid, 4 of azote, and 10 of sulphohydric acid. It resembles Harrogate water in its properties.

A strong chalybeate spring was discovered there about the year 1828, which contains sesquisulphate of peroxide of iron, sulphate of alumina, and uncombined sulphuric acid.

MOGIGRAPHIA, Cramp, writers'.

MOGLA'LIA, Paralalia, from poys, 'with difficulty,' and λαλειν, 'to speak.' This word is inaccurately written by Paul Zacchias,—Mola'lia, and Molib'lia. Difficult or defective articulation. Impediment of speech. See Balbuties.

MOGOSTOCIA, Dystocia, Laborious labour.

MOGUS, Agony.

MOHAWK TASSEL, Eupatorium purpureum.

MOHRIA THURIFRAGA. A South African fern. Nat. Ord. Filices, the dry leaves of which, pulverized and made into an ointment with fat, are serviceable in burns and scalds.

MOIGNON, Stump.

MOIS, Menses.

MOISTURE, Mador, (F.) Moiteur, anciently moiteur. Simple humidity of the skin. The skin is said to be moist or in a state of moisture, when there is slight perspiration.

MOITEUR, Moisture.

MOLA, Maxillary bone, Molar tooth, Mole, Patella.

MOLAGOCODI, Piper nigrum.

MOLAIRE, Molar.

MOLALIA, Mogilialia.

MOLAR, Mola'ria, My'licus, (F.) Molaire, Moulière. That which bruises or grinds; from mola'ris, 'a grindstone,' or mola, 'a millstone,' (mola, 'I grind.')

MOLAR GLANDS. Two small bodies formed by a collection of mucous crypts; seated in the substance of the cheeks, between the masseter and buccinator muscles, and whose excretory ducts open into the mouth opposite the last molar tooth.

MOLAR TEETH, Grinders, Jaw Teeth, Mola'ria permanentes dentes, Dentes molares seu maxillares seu gomphii seu clavales, Molæ, Gomphioi, My'laeri, My'ladontes, My'loidi, Momis'ci, Lag-teeth, Wall teeth, (Prov.) Azle teeth, Azle teeth, Cheek teeth, Wang teeth, (F.) Dents molaires or mâchelières, occupy the farther part of each alveolar arch. Their coronæ are broader than they are high; unequal; tuberculated; and the roots are more or less subdivided. They are 20 in number, 10 in each jaw. The first two pairs of molar teeth in each jaw have been called lesser molares, premo'lar or bicuspid, Dentes bicuspidae'ii seu buccal'es. The coronæ have two tubercles; the outer being more prominent and larger than the inner. The root is commonly simple; sometimes bifurcated. The other three pairs have been termed, Great molares—Dentes multicuspidées (Ch.) Their coronæ are cubical, rounded, and have, at the upper surface, four or five tubercles, separated by deep furrows. The root is divided into two, three, four, and five fangs, which are more or less curved. The third great molaris appears a long time after the others, and hence has been called Dens sapient'ia or Wisdom tooth.

MOLASSES, Melasses.

MOLE, Mola, from moles, 'mass.' My'la, Zephyr'ius fetus, Germen fulvum, Pseudoery'sia malaris, Graviditas malaris, Mooncalf, old French. Fardeau. A fleshy, insensible, at times, soft—at others, hard—mass; of variable and determinate size, which forms in the uterus, and is slightly united by vessels to that organ; from which its feeble vitality is derived. It has been conceived by some to be always owing to imperfect conception; but moles may form in the undoubted virgin. They seem to be owing to a morbid process; and certainly are generally connected with conception. At times, they contain parts of the fœtus; but commonly do not. At very different periods, in different women, the diseased mass is expelled from the uterus, with ordinary symptoms of abortion; and the case requires similar management. See, also, Nævus, and Conception, (false.)

MOLE PLANT, Euphorbia lathyris.

MOLECULAR, Molecularis. Of or belonging to molecules or minute portions of any thing. Hence molecular death, in contradistinction to somatic death.

MOLÉCULE, Molecula, Massula; diminutive of mole, 'a mass.' A minute portion of any body. Also, the ciatricula, ma'cula, gallat'ra, gelatinous molecule, tread of the cock, or embryo part of the impregnated ovum, observable by the microscope before the ovum has left the ovarium of the hen. It lies under the epidermic coats of the yolk, and upon its proper coat. If the ovum, according to Valentin, be lacerated and its contents minutely examined, the centriola is found like a grayish white disk, which in its whole periphery is dense, granulous, and opaque; but in the centre presents a clear, nongranulous, and perfectly diaphanous point. Purkinje found, that when he removed the dark granulous mass by suction with a small tube, there remained a perfectly transparent vesicle filled with a pellucid lymph, which had a decidedly spherical form, but, being extremely delicate, was easily lacerated, and then its fluid escaped. As he found this, which later naturalists have named—after its discoverer—the Purkin'jean vesicle, in the ova of the ovary, but could not see it in ova which had already entered the oviduct, he gave it the name germinal vesicle, or germ cell, vesicula prolifera seu germinativa, (F.) Vésicule germinative. Besides a perfectly colourless fluid, this contains one or more dark corpuscles, which appear as a nucleus through the including membrane in the shape of opaque spots—the germinal spot, ma'cula germinativa seu germinans, nucleus germinativus, Blasto-cardia, Cor'culum germinis, (F.) Tache germinative. The granulous membrane—its thickened portion, the so-called 'ciatricula,'—and the germinal vesicle, constitute those parts of the ovum which pass immediately into the original foundation of the embryo, the blastodermis or germinal membrane, vesicula blastodermatica, blastodermic vesicle.

MOLECULE, GELATINOUS, Molecule.

MOLÈNE, Verbascum nigrum.

MOLES GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser.

MOLIBDUS, Plumbum.

MOLILALIA, Mogilialia.

MOLIMEN, pl. MOLIMINA, from molior, 'to move or stir.' An attempt, a struggle. Hence: MOLIMEN CRIT'ICUM. An impulsion towards a sudden solution or crisis of a disease.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHAG'ICUM. The hemorrhagic diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHOIDA'LE. The hemorrhoidal diathesis or impulsion. See Hæmorrhoids.

MOLIMEN MENSTRU'ALE. The menstrual diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN NATURE SALUTARICUM, Instinct.

MOLKENKUR, Wholly cure.

MOLLESCENCE, Mollities.

MOLLET, Sura.

MOLLIPUFFS, Lycoperdon.

MOLLIS MATER, Pia mater.

MOLLIT'IES, Mollescence, Malacia'mus, Mollitia, Mollit'ido, Emollit'ies, E. morbo'sa, Mollitia, Malax'is, Malacia'is, Malthax'is, (F.) Romollissement; (G.) Malakien (Fuchs); from mollis, 'soft.' Preternatural softness of an organ or part of an organ.

MOLLITIES CEREBRI, Malaco'sia Cerebri, Encephalomalacia, Encephalomalax'is, Neuroencephal'ia (W. Farr), Cerebrumalacia, Encephalosep'is, Mollescence or softening or a kind of liquefraction of the cerebral substance: the remainder preserving its ordinary consistency. (F.) Ramollissement du cerveau. The neurine often contains small clots of blood, giving rise to what has been termed Apoplexie capillaire, (Cruveilhier.) The symptoms denoting it are equivocal.

MOLLITIES CORDIS, Cardiomalacia.

MOLLITIES MEDULLÆ SPINÆ, Myelomalacia. (F.) Ramollissement de la Moëlle Épinrière. Softening of the spinal marrow.

MOLLITIES OSÆ, Malacosteosis, Malacosteon, Emollit'ies ossium, Parostia flex'ilis, Osteomalacosis, Osteomalacia, Rachit'is seu Rachit'is adultorum, Spina vent'osa (of some). Softening of the bones, (F.) Ostéo-malacie, Ostéo-malaxie, Ostéo-malacie, Ramollissement des os. A rare affection, in which the bones are deprived of their salts, particularly of the phosphate of lime, and consist only, or mainly, of gelatin; hence they acquire a degree of suppleness which renders them unfit for the performance of their functions. The disease generally affects all the bones; but it is especially remarkable during life in the long bones, which assume any curvature that may be wished. Very violent pain is often experienced in them; and the urine frequently contains an enormous proportion of calcareous phosphate. The patient is compelled to remain in the horizontal posture; the bones no longer being fixed points for the muscles to act upon. The disease has, hitherto, always terminated fatally, and dissection has exhibited the gelatinous nature of the bones; which, by desiccation, have become transparent, as if they had been macerated in acid.

Experience has afforded no means of relief in this dreadful affliction. The alkaline salts, earthy phosphates, &c. are of little or no use.

MOLLITIO, Mollities.

MOLLITUDO, Mollities.

MOLLUSCUM, Atheroma, Ochth'asis. A cutaneous affection, so called in consequence of its resemblance to certain molluscous animals. It consists of numerous tumours, varying in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg, filled with an atheromatous matter, which are developed in the substance of the derma, and are of various shapes, some having a large base, — others adherent by means of a pedicle.

Molluscum contagiosum, (F.) Aené molluscoïde, a singular variety, is characterized by the presence of hard, round, tubercles, which are smooth and transparent, and when pressed, pour out from an orifice in their summits a little opaque or milky fluid.

The disease is probably seated in the sebaceous follicles.

If internal treatment be adopted at all, it must consist of euphorics, as arsenic, iodine, &c. The external treatment consists in the employment of measures calculated to excite the tubercles to inflammation, as by touching them with potassa.

MOLOCHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MOLOPES, Vibices.

MOLYBDÆNUM MAGNESII, Manganese, black oxide of.

MOLYBDOCACHEXIA, Saturnismus.

MOLYBDOCOLICA, Colica metallica.

MOLYBDONOSUS, Lead-poisoning.

MOLYBDOPARESIS, Palsy, lead.

MOLYBDOS, Plumbum.

MOLYBDOISIS, Lead-poisoning.

MOLYNE, Anus.

MOLYNSIS, Miasma.

MOMIE, Mummy.

MOMIN, Manei.

MOMISCI, Molar teeth.

MOMOR'DICA, M. Balsami'na, from mordeo, monordi, morsum, 'to bite,' Balsami'na, Nervo- sper'ma cuspidata, Balm-apple, Balsam apple, (F.) Balsamine, Pomme de merveille. Ord. Cucurbitaceæ. The fruit of this oriental tree, Pomum mirab'ilè seu hierosolymita'num, was formerly considered vulnerable.

MOMORDICA ASPERA, M. Elaterium.

MOMOR'DICA ELATERIUM: M. as'pera, Elate'rium, Ecbalia Elate'rium, Ecbalinum officina'rum seu agrestè seu cordifo'lium, Cucumis agrest'is seu asin'us seu sylvest'ris, Charan'tia, Bouba'lios, Gnarberba orba, Ecbolinum elate'rium, Wild, Squirting, or Asses' cucumber, (F.) Concombre Sauvage, Momordique. Nat. Order, Cucurbitaceæ. The dried sediment from the juice is the elaterium of the shops. (See Extractum Elaterii.) It is a most powerful cathartic, and, as such, has been used in dropsies. Its active principle is the Elatin, Elaterin or Elaterinum. Dose, gr. $\frac{1}{4}$ to gr. j. until it operates.

MOMORDIQUE, Momordica elaterium.

MONAD, from μονος, monòs, 'unity.' A simple particle, or atom, or unit. — Leibnitz. The smallest of all visible animalcules. A primary cell or germ.

MONÆ, Nates.

MONAR'DA, M. did'yma seu coccin'ea seu purp'rea seu Kalmia'na, Scarlet Rose balm, Mountain mint, Oswego Tea, Mountain Balm, Horsemint, Square stalk, Red balm; a beautiful indigenous plant, Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Labiata, having the excitant properties of Monarda punctata.

MONARDA ALLOPHYLLA, M. fistulosa — m. Clinopodia, M. fistulosa — m. Coccinea, Monarda — m. Didyma, Monarda.

MONAR'DA FISTULO'SA, M. rugosa and oblonga'ta; M. clinopod'ia seu allophy'lla. Wild bergamot, Horsemint. The leaves have a fragrant smell; and an aromatic, somewhat bitter taste. They are reputed to be nervine, stomachic, and deobstruent [?].

MONARDA KALMIANA, Monarda — m. Oblongata, M. fistulosa.

MONAR'DA PUNCTA'TA, Horsemint. Indigenous in the United States. Stimulant and carminative. The Oleum monardæ is officinal in the United States.

MONARDA PURPUREA, Monarda — m. Rugosa, M. fistulosa.

MONDER (F.), from mundus, 'cleanly.' To render clean or pure. In Pharmacy, it means to separate any substance from its impure or useless portion. In surgery, monder or mondifier une plaie, is to clean or deterge a wound.

MONDIFICATION, Detergents.

MONDIFIER UNE PLAIE, see Monder.

MONEMERON, Monoe'meron, Monoe'neron; from μονος, 'one,' and ἡμερα, 'a day.' A name given to several collyria, which were supposed to be capable of curing diseases of the eyes in a day.

MONENTERUM, Colon.

MONESIA. A vegetable extract imported into Europe from South America, in hard, thick cakes. It is prepared from the bark of a tree, whose botanical name is uncertain — probably Chrysothyl'ium glycyphlæ'um seu Burarahem, Burubhem, Guarahem; Ord. Sapotaceæ. It is very friable, and its fracture very much resembles that of a well-torrefied coconut. It is wholly soluble in water; and its taste — which is at first sweet like liquorice — sometimes becomes astringent. It is on account of its astringent properties that it has been prescribed in chronic bronchitis, hæmoptysis, diarrhoea, leucorrhœa, uterine hemorrhage, &c. It has been applied locally, in the form of ointment, (Mones, p. 1. Adipis, p. vij).

The dose of Monesia is from 12 to 40 grains a day.

MONEYWORT, Lysimachia nummularia.

MONGO'LIAN. Anthropologists give the name Mongolian race to a variety of the human species, spread over a great part of the north of Asia, in China, India, Tibet, the Moluccas, &c. The individuals composing it have the skin of a brown red, forehead flat, nose broad, cheeks prominent, and lips large. See Homo.

MONGREL. Hybrid.

MONIPLIES, Omasum.

MONISM, Monis'mus; from μονας, 'unity.' The doctrine, which declares matter and mind to be identical.

MONK PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. A class of practitioners of whom Frère Cosme and Jacques Beaulieu in France, and Pravetz in Germany, were the most distinguished.

MONKSHOOD, Aconitum—m. Common. Aconitum napellus—m. Salutory, Aconitum anthora—m. Wild, Aconitum uncinatum.

MONNI'NA POLYSTA'CHIA. A beautiful South American plant. Nat. Ord. Polygalææ. Sex. Syst. Diodelphia Octandria. The bark of the root is a powerful nstringent, and much used in South America in diseases of the bowels.

MONNYPLIES, Omasum.

MONOBLEP'SIS, from μονος, and βλεψις, 'sight.' An affection in which vision is confused, imperfect, and indistinct, when both eyes are employed; but perfect or nearly so, when either eye is used singly.

MONOCAR'PÆ. from μονος, and καρπος, 'fruit.' A division of cutaneous affections, of the family of Eczematosen, of Fuchs, which includes strophulus, psudraia, and ecthyma.

MONOCEPH'ALUS, from μονος, and κεφαλη, 'head.' A compound monster having two bodies with a single head.

MONOCOLON, Cæcum, Rectum.

MONOCRA'NUS, from μονος, and κρανον, κρανιον, 'eranium.' A monster with one eranium, but with the face in part double.—Gurlt.

MONOCULUM, Cæcum.

MONOCULUS, Mon'ocle, Monophthal'mia, Unio'culus, Unoc'ulus, from μονος, and oculus, 'an eye.' A bandage employed to maintain topical applications over one of the eyes. This bandage, called by some surgeons Simplex oculi, (F.) Ceil simple, is made of a roller three or four ells long, rolled into a single ball. See Cyclops.

MONODIPLO'PIA, from δι-λως, 'double,' and ψ, 'eye.' Double vision with one eye.

MONOEMERON. Monemeron.

MONOGAS'TRIC, Monogast'ricus, from μονος, and γαστηρ, 'stomach.' That which has but one stomach. Man is monogastric; ruminating animals, on the contrary, are polygastric.

MONOGENY, see Generation.

MON'OGRAPHI, MED'ICAL, Monograph'ia medica, from μονος, and γραφη, 'description.' An ex professo treatise on a single class of diseases, or on a single disease.

MONOHEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOMACHON, Cæcum.

MONOMACHUM, Cæcum.

MONOMANIA, see Melancholy—m. Homicidal, Homicidal insanity—m. Incendiary, Pyromania.

MONOMA'NIAC, Monomani'acus, (F.) Monomane, Monomaniacque, from μονος, and μανια, 'mania.' One who labours under monomania, or insanity on one subject.

MONOMANIE, Melancholy—m. Homicide, Homicidal insanity.

MONOMMATOS, Cyclops.

MONOMORIA, see Melancholy.

MONOMPHIALUS, from μονος, and ομφαλος, 'a navel.' A monster produced by the union of two bodies having a common umbilicus. Such a double monster is called by I. G. St. Hilaire Monomph'alian, (F.) Monomphalieu.

MONOPAGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemieriana.

MONOP'ATHY, Monopath'ia, from μονος, and παθος, 'disorder.' A state in which one organ or function is disordered. Applied to melancholy or monomania; which is said to be a monopathic affection.

MONOPEGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemieriana.

MONOPHTHALMUS, Cyclops, Monoculus.

MONOPLAST'IC, Monoplast'icna, from μονος, and πλασσω, 'I form.' That which has one form. A monoplastic element, in histology is one which retains its primary form.—Gerber.

MONOPODIA, Symphodia.

MONOPS, Cyclops.

MONOPSIA, Cyclopia.

MONOPUS, Symmeles.

MONOR'CHIS, (F.) Monorchide, from μονος, and ορχις, ορχιδος, 'testicle.' One who has only one testicle.

MONOS, μονος, one alone; as in

MONOS'CELUS, from μονος, and σκελος, 'a leg.' One legged.

MONOSIT'IA, from μονος, and σιτος, 'food,' 'repast.' The habit of taking only one meal in the day.

MONOSOM'MIAN, (F.) Monosomien, from μονος, and σωμα, 'a body.' An epithet applied to a double monster, which seems, in the first instance, to have had but one body.

MONOTROPA UNIFLO'RA, (μονος, and τροπος, 'a turn,' the solitary flower turned to one side,) Indian pipe, Iceplant, Pipe-plant, Nest root, Fit root. Ord. Ericaceæ. An indigenous plant, whose juice, mixed with water, has been extolled by the Indians in ophthalmia. The dried root in powder has been given in epilepsy and nervous diseases.

MONS VEN'ERIS, Montic'ulus Ven'erie, ('Mount of Venus,') Ephebe'um, (F.) Mont de Vénus, Pénit, Motte, Éminence ans-pubienne. The more or less projecting eminence, situate at the base of the hypogastrium, above the vulva and in front of the os pubis. At the period of puberty it becomes covered with hair, formerly called Tressoria.

MONSONIA OVA'TA, Keita, of the Hottentots. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope. The root and herb are very astringent, and are used successfully in dysentery.

MONSTER, Monstrum, ('anything strange,') Porten'um, Texas, Pelor, Pelo'ria, Pelo'rium, Pelo'rum, (F.) Monstre. Any organized being, having an extraordinary vice of conformation, or a preternatural perversion of every part, or of certain parts only.

The following classification embraces the main varieties of malformations—Vitia primæ conformationis.—1. Those in which certain parts of the normal body are absent or defective—monstra deficientia, constituting Ectrog'eny (Serres).—Monstrosity by defect, (F.) Anomalie ou Monstruosité par défaut, Agénésie. 2. Those produced by fusion or coalition of organs—coalitio partium, συμφυσις. 3. Those, in which parts, united in the normal state, are separated from each other—clefsts, fissures. 4. Those in which normal openings are occluded—atresia. 5. Those by excess, or in which certain parts have a disproportionate size—monstra abundantia, Monstrosity by excess, (F.) Monstruosité par excès, Hypergénésie. 6. Those, in which one or more parts have an abnormal position—situs mutatus. 7. Those affecting the sexual organs—hermaphroditism; and to these "true malformations" Vogel adds 8. Diseases of the fœtus, and abnormal states of its envelopes.

Amongst the numerous hypotheses entertained on the origin or cause of monsters, or of monstrosity—terato'sis, monstrositas, (F.) monstruosité, as the state has been called—three only are worth mentioning. They have been attributed, 1. To the influence of the maternal imagination on the fetus in utero. 2. To accidental changes, experienced by the fetus at some period of its uterine existence: and 3. To a primitive defect in the germs. The second seems to be the only one that is philosophical.

As a medico-legal question, monsters, if capable of action as individuals, have the same rights as other persons.

MONT DE VÉNUS, Mons Veneris.

MONTBRISON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Montbrison is a town in France, in the department of the Loire, fifteen leagues from Lyons. There are three cold springs here, which are highly acidulous, and used as refrigerants and aperients.

MONT-DE-MARSAN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-de-Marsan is a small French town, 10 leagues from Dax; where there is a chalybeate spring, somewhat frequented.

MONT-D'OR, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-d'Or is a village seven leagues from Clermont, (Puy-de-Dôme,) at which are several mineral springs, cold and thermal. Those of the Fountain La Madelaine, and of the Great Bath, are thermal, temp. 112° Fahr., and contains carbonic acid, subcarbonate and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, subcarbonate of lime and magnesia, alumine and oxide of iron. Those of St. Margaret are cold, and contain much carbonic acid.

MONTECATINI, MINERAL WATERS OF. This town is situate near Borgo-Buggiano, in Tuscany. The springs are thermal; ranging from 78° to 118° Fahrenheit.

MONTPELLIER, CLIMATE OF. This seat of a celebrated medical school in the S. E. of France was at one time renowned for its climate, and especially in regard to its adaptation to consumptive cases. This is now exploded, and it is at present esteemed an unfit residence for them. The climate possesses the general characters of that of south-eastern France—being dry, hot, and irritating; subject to frequent vicissitudes, and especially to blasts of keen, cold, northerly winds. It is, indeed, most injurious in pulmonary diseases.

MOON, Luna, Selenē, Menē, Sax. Mona, (G.) Mond, (F.) Lune. The moon has been supposed to exert considerable influence over the human body, in health and disease. Such influence has been grossly exaggerated. Not many years ago, it would have been heretical to doubt the exacerbation of mania at the full of the moon; yet it is now satisfactorily shown, that if the light be excluded at this period, the lunatic is not excited more than ordinarily.

MORPHICA, from μορφή, 'shape.' Monstrosities of birth.' The 3d order, class Typhica of Good.

MORPHINA, Morphia, Morphium, Morphin'ia, Morphine, from Μορφεύς, Morpheus, the 'god of sleep.' A solid, colourless alkali; crystallizable in beautiful pyramids, truncated and transparent; soluble in alcohol, and slightly so in boiling water. It exists, combined with meconic acid, in opium. It may be obtained by decomposing, by means of ammonia or calcined magnesia, an aqueous solution of opium made in the cold.

The following is the process of the Pharm. U. S. Opium, sliced, ℥j; distilled water, alcohol, animal charcoal, each a sufficient quantity; solution of ammonia, f̄ssvj. Macerate the opium with four pints of distilled water for 24 hours, and having worked it with the hand, digest for 24 hours, and strain. Macerate the residue twice successively with distilled water, and strain. Mix the infusions: evaporate to six pints, and filter; then add first five pints of alcohol, and afterwards three fluidounces of the solution of ammonia, previously mixed with half a pint of alcohol. After 24 hours, pour in the remainder of the solution of ammonia, mixed as before with half a pint of alcohol; and set the liquor aside for 24 hours, that crystals may form. To purify these, boil them with two pints of alcohol till they are dissolved; filter the solution, while hot, through animal charcoal, and set it aside to crystallize.

Morphia dissolves perfectly in the acids, which it saturates; and with which it forms very crystallizable salts, with the exception of the acetate. All these salts have a bitter taste, and act upon the animal economy in the same manner as opium, but more powerfully. The acetate is the salt commonly employed in medicine. It was, at one time, supposed that Morphia is the purely sedative part of opium, divested of its irritating properties; but experience has not confirmed this. On the contrary, it will generally disagree where opium does. Dose of morphia, $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of a grain.

MORPHINÆ ACETAS, Morphinæ Acetat, Morphinæ aceti'cum, Ac'etate of Morphine, Acetate of Morphia. A salt formed by saturating morphia with acetic acid. (Morphia, in powder, freed from narcotina by boiling with sulphuric ether, ℥j; distilled water, Oss; acetic acid, a sufficient quantity. Mix the morphia with the water; then carefully drop in the acid, constantly stirring until the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate the solution in a water-bath to the consistence of syrup. Lastly, dry the acetate with a gentle heat and rub it into powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, from $\frac{1}{2}$ of a grain to half a grain.

MORPHINÆ SULPHAS, MORPHIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Morphia. A salt, formed by saturating morphia with sulphuric acid, evaporating, and crystallizing. Dose, the same as of the acetate.

Muriate, and Citrate of Morphia, Morphinæ citras, have likewise been used; but they possess no advantages over the other salts. The sulphate and muriate are officinal in the Ph. U. S. The muriate—MORPHIÆ MURIAS—is directed to be prepared as follows. (Morphinæ, in pulv., ℥j; Aquæ destillatæ, Oss; Acid. muriat. q. s. Mix the morphia with the water; carefully drop in the acid, till the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate and crystallize.) One-sixth of a grain is equal to a grain of opium.

MORPHIUM, Morphina — m. Aceticum, Morphinæ acetat.

MORPHOLOG'ICAL, Morpholog'icus, from μορφή, 'shape,' and λογος, 'a description.' That which has relation to the anatomical conformation of parts. Applied, at times, to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo, in contradistinction to histological, which is applied to the transformation by which the tissues are gradually generated. In comparative anatomy, it is applied to the history of the modifications of forms, which the same organ undergoes in different animals.

MORPHOLOGY, Anatomy.

MORPHOLYSIS, from μορφή, 'shape,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Destruction of organization. An agent, that occasions such destruction, is called a morpholyt'ic.

MORPHOLYTIC, see Morpholysis.

MORPHON'OMY, Morphonom'ia: from μορφή, 'shape,' and νομος, 'a law.' The laws of organic formation. The department of anatomical science which teaches the laws of organic configuration.

MORTA, Pemphigus.

MORTAL, Morta'lis, from mors, mortis, 'death.' Letha'lis, Leta'lis, Thanato'des, Thanas'imus, (F.) Mortel. That which is subject to death; — that which causes death: — as man is mortal; a disease is mortal. Of old, it was the custom to have a division of mortal or deadly wounds, which gave rise to many errors in medico-legal investigations, as the mortality of wounds depends upon various circumstances; and it is often a matter of extreme difficulty to pronounce whether or not a wound is necessarily mortal.

MORTALITY, Mortal'itas, Lethal'itas, Leta'l-itas, (F.) Mortalité. Same etymon. This word, taken in an extended sense, expresses the condition of all organized bodies, — of being subject to the cessation of life. In the sense in which it is most frequently employed, it signifies,—the proportional quantity of individuals who, in a certain population, die in a given time. If we assume the population of the earth to be one thousand millions, and a generation to last thirty-three years; in that space of time the one thousand millions must all die, and, consequently, the number of deaths will be, by approximation,

Each year.....	30,000,000
Each day	82,109
Each hour	3,421
Each minute.....	57
Each second.....	1 nearly.

If, on the other hand, as has been supposed, the number of deaths is to that of the births as TEN to TWELVE: there will be born,

Each year.....	36,000,000
Each day.....	98,356
Each hour.....	4,098
Each minute.....	68
Each second.....	1 & 2-15ths.

It has been estimated that the average mortality of the Pays du Vaud, is 1 in 49: of Sweden and Holland, 1 in 43; of Russia, 1 in 41; of France, 1 in 40; of Austria, 1 in 38; of Prussia and Naples, 1 in 33 to 35; of England, 1 in 45; and of South America, 1 in 30. The same rate of mortality has been given to the United States as to France; but the statistical details on all this matter have been inadequate, and—it is not improbable—inaccurate. The following has been given as the annual mortality of some of the chief cities of this country and Europe: (See the author's Human Health, p. 101: Philadelphia, 1844.) Philadelphia, 1 in 45-68; Glasgow, 1 in 44; Manchester, 1 in 44; Geneva, 1 in 43; Boston, 1 in 41-26; Baltimore, 1 in 41; London, 1 in 40; New York, 1 in 37-83; St. Petersburg, 1 in 37; Charleston, 1 in 36-50; Leghorn, 1 in 35; Berlin, 1 in 34; Paris, Lyons, Strasburg, and Barcelona, 1 in 32; Nice and Palermo, 1 in 31; Madrid, 1 in 29; Naples, 1 in 28; Brussels, 1 in 26; Rome, 1 in 25; Amsterdam, 1 in 24; and Vienna, 1 in 22½.

In the cities, the mortality under two years of age bears a large ratio. This is exhibited by the following table:

AGES.		London.	Philad.	Baltimore.
Under 1	year, }	28-52	22-7	24-11
From 1	to 2, }	8-6	8-6	8-55

	100 to 120, }	—	0-09	} 0-18
	110 to 120, }	—	0-013

It would not be proper to regard the value of life in different countries, or in different periods in the same country, to be indicated by the average mortality; inasmuch as in one case a greater mortality may occur amongst children, and in another amongst adults.

MORTALITY, BILLS OF. Bills of Necrology, Mortality Registers, (F.) Tables de Mortalité. Tables, instituted for the purpose of exhibiting the number of deaths, &c., in a given time. Well-kept bills of mortality are of great use to the physician and political economist. Those of London were proverbial for their inaccuracy and insufficiency; especially as regards the complaints of which the persons have died. They were formerly made out by the parish clerks, and the information was conveyed to them by two old women, who were appointed in each parish, and were called Searchers;—their duty being to see that the deceased had died a natural death. This miserable system has, however, been abolished; and the Registrar-General's annual reports of births, deaths, and marriages, exhibit how admirably vital statistics are now collected in Great Britain.

MORTAR, Morta'rium, Moretarium, Mortorium, Piso, Ac'ouë, Pila, Holmos, Igdë, Iydnus, (F.) Mortier. A vessel for reducing to powder different solid substances, and for making certain mixtures. Various substances are employed in the construction of mortars;—iron, marble, glass, wedgewood ware, &c.

MOSQUITA, see Mosquito.

MOSQUITO (S.), Diminutive of (S.) monea, 'a fly.' Masquito. A very troublesome insect in warm, moist situations. Curtains, called Mosquito curtains or bars, are used by way of protection. The entrance of mosquitos into the bedchamber may also be prevented, to a certain extent, by keeping the doors and windows closed until the lights are extinguished. The pain and itching from the bites are alleviated by washing them with hartshorn.

MOSQUITA is a name given, by the Portuguese, to small, red pimples on the skin, resembling the bites of the musquito.

MOTION, Motus, Mot'io, Mot'a'tio, Mot'a'men, Commo'tio, Permo'tio, (movere, motum, 'to move.') Cine'sis, Movement, (F.) Mouvement. The act of changing place. The various motions may be divided into, — First, the voluntary or those that are executed under the influence of the brain. Secondly, the involuntary, which may be subdivided into, 1. The excited, of the reflex function of Dr. Marshall Hall and others, — as the closure of the larynx on the contact of acrid vapours, of the pharynx on that of the food, — a function of the spinal marrow; and, 2. Those that are executed under the organic and other nerves of involuntary function. It is probable, too, that every living tissue is capable of moving responsive to its appropriate irritant. See Irritability.

MOTIVE, Motory.

MOTOR, Motory.

MOTOR OCULI EXTER'NUS, Nervus tim'idus, (F.) Nerf oculo-musculaire externe (Ch.), Nerf moteur oculaire externe, Sixth pair of nerves, arises from the furrow which separates the pons Varolii from the medulla oblongata. It enters the cavernous sinus; anastomoses on the outside of the carotid artery with two filaments furnished by the superior cervical ganglion; enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, and is lost on the rectus externus oculi. This pair is, also, called Abducentes.

MOTORES OCULO'RUM, Mot'o'rii Oculorum, Oculi'res communes, Ophthalmici exter'ni, Common Oculo-muscular Nerves, (F.) Nerfs moteurs oculaires communs (Ch.), The third pair of nerves, Par'ter'tium. This nerve arises from a depression at the inner side of the peduncles of the brain, between the tuber annulare and corpora mammillaria. It enters the outer part of the cavernous sinus, and passes into the orbital cavity. Behind the sphenoidal fissure, it divides into two branches; the one superior and the other inferior. The former is lost on the rectus superior oculi and the levator palpebræ superioris; the latter — the larger of the two — divides into three branches, which pass to the rectus internus, rectus inferior, and lesser oblique. The last furnishes a filament, which passes to the ophthalmic ganglion.

MOTORIAL, Motory.

MOTORPATHY, Kinesipathy.

MOTORY, Motivæ, Motor, Mot'o'rial, Motrix, Kinet'ic or Cinet'ic, (F.) Moteur. Same etymon.

That which moves or causes movement, as motor nerves, in contradistinction to sensory.

MOTOS, Lintum, Tent.

MOTO'SIS, μωτος, 'lint.' The application of lint to a wound.

MOTRICITÉ, Motility.

MOUTH, Sax. muð, Os, Cavum Oris, Stoma, Gab, (Sc.) Mou, (Prov.) Gob, (F.) Bouche. This word sometimes signifies the cavity situate between the jaws, and containing the tongue, &c.; — at others, the outer orifice of that cavity. The mouth, in the first acceptation, Cav'itas seu Spa'tium Oris, is the cavity; bounded, above, by the palatine arch; below, by the tongue; before, by the lips; and behind, by the velum palati and pharynx. The sides of the mouth and the organs it contains are lined by a mucous membrane. The anterior aperture of the mouth is, sometimes, called facial — the posterior, pharyngeal. In the mouth are the teeth, gums, alveolar margins, tongue; the excretory ducts of the salivary glands, and those of a number of mucous follicles, &c. It is in this cavity that the food is cut, torn, or bruised by the teeth; is impregnated with saliva, and formed into a mass or bolus, which is then subjected to the act of deglutition. The mouth contains the organs of taste; and it serves in respiration, articulation, expectoration, suction, &c.

The condition of the mouth requires to be attended to in Semeiology. The state of the mucous membrane, like that of the tongue, indicates the condition of the membrane of the alimentary canal generally.

MOUTH, Os, Apert'ra, Oriſſi'um, Hia'tus, Peristo'mium, is, also, applied to the open extremities of vessels or other canals.

MOUTH ROOT, Coptis.

MOW, Mouth.

MOXA, Moxib'rium. A word by which the Chinese and Japanese designate a cottony substance, which they prepare by beating the dried leaves of the Artemisia moxa,—a kind of mugwort. With this down they form a cone, which is placed upon the part intended to be cauterized, and is set fire to at the top. The heat and pain gradually increase, in proportion as the combustion proceeds downwards, until ultimately an eschar may be formed. In Europe and this country, the same operation is usually practised with a cylinder of cotton-wool, or with one formed from the pith of the greater sun-flower. This mode of cauterization is employed as a powerful counter-irritant; which it assuredly is. Sloughing may be in some measure prevented, according to Baron Larrey, by the application of liquid ammonia to the burnt part.

The term moxa has been extended to any substance, which by gradual combustion on or near the skin is employed as a counter-irritant,—as the electric or galvanic moxa or cantery, in which voltaic electricity is employed as the cauterizing agent.

MOXIBURIUM, Moxa.

MOXIBUS'TION, Moxib'utio, Moxocau'sis, Eucan'sis. Mode of cauterization by means of moxa.

MOXOCAUSIS, Moxibustion.

MUCAGO, Liquor sanguinis, Mucilage.

MUCARUM, Mucharum.

MUCCINIUM, Mucilage.

MUCEDO, Mucilage.

MUCHA'RUM, Muc'rum. A barbarous term, formerly used for an aqueous infusion of roses, sweetened, and evaporated to the consistence of syrup.

MUCIFIC, Blennogenous.

MUCIFORM, Muciform'is, Myro'des, Blenno'des, Blenno'i'des, Blenno'i'dens, from mucus, and forma, 'form.' Resembling mucus in character or appearance.

MUC'ILAGE, Mucila'go, Muc'ago, Muce'do, Muccin'ium, from the Lat. mucus,—itself presumed to be from ungere, unctum, 'to wipe the nose.' A mixture of gum and a small quantity of matter analogous to mucus, which is found in abundance in linseed, quince-seed, &c. It is obtained by heating in water the parts, or products, of plants which contain it. It is much used in the preparation of emollient cataplasms and the greater part of the demulcent tisanes, (F.) Hydrolés, Hydralités.

MUCIN, Mucus.

MUCIP'AROUS, Mucip'arus, (F.) Mucipare, from mucus, and pario, 'I bring forth.' Mucous-producing; as muciparous glands or follicles.

MUCY'TIS, Mycodermitis, from mucus, and itis, denoting inflammation. A term, badly formed, for inflammation of a mucous membrane.

MUCKSWEAT, Desudatio.

MUCOCE'LE, Hernia sacci lacrymal'is, from mucus, and κελη, 'rupture.' An enlargement or protrusion of the mucous membrane of the lacrymal passages, giving occasion to fistula lacrymalis. Also, dropsy of the lacrymal sac.

MUCO-ENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

MUCO-PURULENT, Mucopurulentus, Pyoblen'nicus, from mucus, and pus. Having the character or appearance of mucus and pus.

MUCOR, Euros, Mucus—m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUCOSIN, see Mucus.

MUCOSITAS, Mucosity, Mucus.

MUCOS'ITY, Mucos'itus, (F.) Mucosité. A fluid, which resembles mucus, or contains a certain quantity of it.

MUCOUS, Mucos'us, (F.) Muqueux. An epithet for all bodies containing mucilage or mucus. It is, also, sometimes used synonymously with gummy. In pathology, it is occasionally employed to express the seat of a disease, as mucous disease, mucous phlegmasia; that is, having its seat in a mucous membrane.

MUCOUS CORPUSCLES, see Mucus—m. Lacer, see Tache embryonnaire—m. Membranes, see Membranes—m. Web, Corpus mucosum.

MUCRO, Apex.

MUCRO seu Cor'yp'hê seu Fundus seu Vertex Cordis. The apex or point of the heart.

MUCRO HUMERI, Acromion.

MUCRONATA CARTILAGO, Xiphoid cartilage.

MUCRONATUM OS, Xiphoid cartilage.

MUCULENT, Muculentus, from mucus. Slimy, viscid.

MUCUNA, see Dolichos pruriens—m. Pruriens, Dolichos pruriens—m. Prurita, see Dolichos pruriens.

MUCUS, Mucor, Mucosus humor, Mucositas, Myza, Myeus, Lapê, Pitu'ita, Blenna, Zoömy'cus, Zoömyz'a, Pit'uite, Animal mucus, Animal mucilage, (F.) Muqueux animal, Morve, Mucilage animal, presumed to be from mungere, 'to wipe the nose.' A substance, analogous to vegetable mucilage; from which, however, it differs, by affording subcarbonate of ammonia on distillation. Mucus exudes through the skin, in a state of combination with a peculiar oily matter; and, drying, forms the epidermis. It constitutes, in part, the different epidermeous productions, as the hair, nails, wool, and horn of animals, feathers of birds, and scales of fish. It is found at the surface of the mucous membranes, and presents some difference in its composition and properties, according to the particular mucous membrane from which it is obtained. Its chief organic constituent is an albuminoid compound,—mucin, mucosin. Mucus preserves the membranes moist, and in a state best fitted for the performance of their functions. The French give the term *glair*e to the thick, stringy mucus, secreted by the mucous membranes when in a state of disease.

When mucus is examined with the microscope it is found to contain numerous epithelial scales or flattened cells; together with round, granular bodies, commonly termed mucous corpuscles or mucous globules, which are contained in a fluid portion—liquor mucii.

MUCUS CARPHODES, see Carphodes—m. Catharticus, Lichen Islandicus—m. Malpighii, Corpus mucosum—m. Narium, Nasal mucus.

MUD-APPLE PLANT, Solanum melongena.

MUDAR, Madar. The Calotropis madarii seu madarii, C. gigantea, Asclepias gigantea, Mado'rius. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. In the Hindoo practice of physic, the bark of the root, as well as the concrete juice of the plant, enters into various compound formulæ for the cure of elephantiasis and many other disorders. Experiments instituted by Dr. Duncan, Jr., exhibit its properties to be like those of ipecaeuaha. Mixed with oil it is used in gout in Malabar.

MULÂTRE, Mulatto.

MULATTO, (F.) Mulâtre, (S.) Mulata. An individual of the human species engendered of a white and black race; from mulus, 'a mule.'

The following table exhibits the proportion of white blood in the various castes,—arising from the hybridous admixture of white and black,—according to the principles sanctioned by usage.

PARENTS.	OFFSPRING.	DEGREE OF MIXTURE.
Negro and White.....	Mulatto,	1-2 White, 1-2 Black.
White and Mulatto,	Terceron.....	3-4 — 1-4 —
Negro and Mulatto,	{ Griffo, Griff, or Zambo, }	1-4 — 3-4 —
White and Terceron,	Quarteron or Quadroon,	7-8 — 1-8 —
Negro and Terceron.....	Black Quarteron or Quadroon	1-8 — 7-8 —
White and Quarteron.....	Quinteron.....	15-16 — 1-16 —
Negro and Black Quarteron,	Black Quinteron	1-16 — 15-16 —

The last two were considered to be respectively white and black, in the British West India Islands; and the former, prior to modern changes, were white by law, and consequently free. See Half-caste.

MULATTO JACK, Fever, yellow.

MULBERRY CALCULUS, see Calculi, urinary.

MULLED WINE, see Wine.

MULLEIN, BLACK, Verbascum nigrum—m. Broad-leaved, great, Verbascum nigrum—m. Yellow, Verbascum nigrum.

MULLER, (F.) Monleur. A moulder. A stone held in the hand, with which any powder is ground upon a horizontal slab. It is sometimes called mullet, (F.) Mollette.

MULLIGRUBS, Tormina, Colic.

MULLIN, Melizomum.

MULOMEDICINA, Veterinary art.

MULOMEDICUS, see Hippiater.

MULSA ACIDA, Oxyglycus.

MULSUM, Hydromeli—m. Vinosum, Cenomel.

MULTIFIDUS SPINÆ, Transversalis dorsi.

MULTIFETATION, Multifetatio, from multus, 'many,' and factus. Pregnancy with more than two fetuses.

MULTILOCCULAR, Multilocularis, from multus, 'many,' and loculus, 'a cell.' Having many cells or small cavities.

MULTIMAMMÆ, (F.) Multimammæ, from multus, 'many,' and mamma, 'a breast.' A variety of hypergenesis, in which there are supernumerary mammae.

MULTIPAROUS, Multiparæ, (F.) Multipare, from multus, 'many,' and parire, 'to bring forth.' One that brings forth several young at the same time. Such a birth is called plural.

MULTIPLICATION MÉRISMATIQUE, see Generation.

MULTITUDO, Plethora.

MULTIVORANTIA, Polyphagia.

MULTIVOROUS, Polyphagous.

MUMIA, Mummy—m. de Medullis, Marrow.

MUMSATIO, Mummification.

MUMMIFICATION, Mummisatio, from mummy, and fin, 'to be made.' Secletem'sis. The mode of preparing a mummy.

MUMMY, Mumia, Arab. Monmya, from mum, 'wax.' Rebolea, Rebona, (F.) Momie. A dead body simply dried, or dried after having been embalmed. The latter acceptance is the most common. Formerly, the Egyptian mummy was extolled as useful in contusions. It was presumed, also, to have healing, tonic, and resolvent properties. It is now only regarded as an archæical curiosity.

MUMPS, Cynanche parotidea.

MUNCHATIO, Mystax.

MUNCTIO, Aponex'is, (F.) l'Action de moucher, from ungere, munctum, 'to blow the nose.' The act of blowing the nose.

MUNDIFICANTIA, Detergents.

MUNDIFICATIVA, Detergents.

MUNDITIA SPINOSA. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Polygalæ, which grows in Southern Africa, and a decoction of whose branches is used in atrophy, phthisis, &c.

MUNGOS RADIX, Phiorrhiza mungos.

MUNGREL, Hybrid.

MUNIMENTUM CASTITATIS, Hymen.

MUQUEUX ANIMAL, Mucus.

MUR, see Coryza.

MURAL, Muralis, from murus, 'a wall.' Vesical calculi are so called, when rugous and covered with tubercles or asperities. They are composed of oxalate of lime.

MURE, Moro, see Moros nigra.

MURFLES, Ephelides, Papulæ.

MURIA, Halmz, Salvilo'go, Brine, (F.) Saumure, ('αλμυρις, 'salt water.') This was formerly used as a glyster in dysentery, in certain inveterate neuralgic, &c.

MURIA, Soda, muriate of.

MURIAS AURICO-NATRICUM, see Gold.

MURIATE D'AMMONIAQUE, Ammoniac murias—m. d'Ammoniaque et de fer, Ferrum ammoniatum—m. d'Or, Gold, muriate of, see Gold.

MURIATIC ACID, from muria; Ac'idum salis seu mari'nium concentratum seu salis culinaris seu salis mari'ni, Spir'itus salis mari'ni seu salis Glau'ber'i seu salis ac'idum seu fumanis, Ac'idum hydrochloricum seu muriaticum, Spir'it of salt, (F.) Acide hydrochlorique ou muriatique. An aqueous solution of chlorohydric acid gas of s. g. 1.16. The odour of muriatic acid is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is nearly colourless when pure; but commonly of a pale yellow; volatile; the fumes visible. Muriatic acid is possessed of tonic and antiseptic properties. It is used in typhus; cutaneous eruptions; in gargles for inflammatory and putrid sore throats, (gtt. xxx to fʒvj of water,) &c. When added to a pediluvium, it renders it stimulating.

ACIDUM MURIATICUM DILUTUM of the Ph. U. S. contains four fluidounces of muriatic acid, to twelve fluidounces of distilled water.

MURIDE, Bronine.

MÛRIER NOIR, Morus nigra.

MURIGENE, Chlorine.

MURINA, Bromine.

MURMUR, (F.) Murmure. A word existing both in the Rommic and Teutonic languages, and probably a variety of onomatopœia;—mur mur expressing the kind of sound which the word indicates. A low continued or continuously repeated sound, as that of flame, or of a stream running over a stony bottom.

MURMUR AURIUM, Tinnitus Aurium—m. Intestinale seu intestinorum seu Ventris, Borborygmus.

MURMUR, RESPIRATORY. (F.) Bruit respiratoire. The noise heard during inspiration and expiration, especially the former. It is produced by the passage of the air through the bronchial tubes and into the air-cells. It has been also called murmur of the expansion of the lungs, (F.) Bruit d'expansion pulmonaire; and, when distinctly vesicular, Respiration of the cells or vesicular respiration, (F.) Respiration ou murmure vésiculaire. Vesicular respiration is of course absent when the cells of the lungs have been obliterated from any cause. We may then have the Respiration nulle, Absence du bruit respiratoire, Silence, and Respiration silencieuse of the French writers.

At times, it is rude during inspiration or expiration, or both—the Respiration rude or R. râpeuse of the French. At others, there is a blowing sound, (F.) Souffle, Respiration soufflante, as if some one were blowing into the auscultator's ear through a tube. This is heard in the healthy state over the larynx, trachea, (F.) Souffle trachéal, and about the bifurcation of the bronchia, (F.) Souffle bronchique; but when it proceeds from the lungs it denotes disease. It may be tubular or diffused. In the former, the whiffing murmurs appear to occur in a space limited to the immediate neighbourhood of the part examined. In the latter, they are produced with but moderate intensity, and sometimes at a distance from the ear, over a tolerably extended space.

The respiration, perceived over the trachea and bronchia in health, is called tracheal or bronchial or tubal, (F.) Respiration bronchique, Souffle tubaire, according to the situation in which it is heard.

MURMUR, UTERINE, Bruit placentaire—m. Utero-placental, Bruit placentaire.

MURMUR, WHIFFING, see Murmur, respiratory.

MURR, Murrain, from A. S. mýrrhan, 'to destroy,' or from (L.) mori, 'to die.' (F.) Claveau, Clavelée, Pestilential Fever. An epizootic, perhaps contagious, disease, having some resemblance to small-pox, which affects cattle—especially sheep; and is said to have been transferred to man.

MURRAIN, see Coryza.

MURREN, Coryza.

MUSA, M. Paradisiaca—m. Cliffortiana, M. Paradisiaca—m. Mensaria, M. Paradisiaca.

MUSA PARADISICA, Musa, M. Mensaria seu Cliffortiana, Amusa, Palma kn'milis, Ficus In- dica, Bata, Plat'anus, Plantain tree. Family, Muscææ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. It grows in many parts of India and South America. The fruit, which is largely eaten for bread, consists of a mealy substance, Plantain meal, Couquin-tay. It is clammy; has a sweetish taste, and will dissolve in the mouth without chewing. The whole spike of fruit often weighs forty or fifty pounds. The leaves of the tree serve the Indians for tablecloths and napkins. Being smooth and soft, they are also employed as dressings for blisters. The water from the soft trunk is astringent, and sometimes used in diarrhœa.

MUSA SAPIENTUM. The Ban'na tree, Baco'ba, (F.) Bauanier, Bacove. This differs somewhat from the last. The fruit, Ban'na, (S.) Platau, is shorter, straighter, and rounder; the pulp softer and of a more luscious taste. When ripe, it is very agreeable; it is eaten like the plantain, and relished by all ranks of people in the West Indies. Both varieties are natives of Guinea.

MUSC, Musk.

MUSCÆ HISPANICA, Cantharis.

MUSCÆ ENTO-HYALOID, see Metamorphopsia—m. Volitantes, see Metamorphopsia.

MUSCADEE, see Myristica moschata.

MUSCADIER, Myristica moschata.

MUSCERDA, Moschardina.

MUSCLE, (old Eng.) Brawn, Mus'culus, Torus, Lacer'tus, Mys, Myon, from μῦς, 'a mouse or rat;' because, say some etymologists, the ancients compared the muscles to flayed mice or rats. According to Diemerbroeck, Douglass, Chaussier, &c., μῦς comes rather from μύειν, 'to close,' 'to move,' &c., a function proper to muscles. This etymon is the more probable. Muscles have been divided into those of Animal life or of the life of relation—voluntary muscles—which execute movements under the influence of the will; as the muscles of the limbs, head, trunk, &c., and into those of organic life—involuntary muscles—which contract under the influence of certain special stimuli; as the heart, fleshy fibres of the stomach, &c. Mixed muscles are those which belong partly to each of these divisions;—as the muscles of respiration; the sphincters, &c. Muscles that act in opposition to each other are called antagonists; thus, every extensor has a flexor for an antagonist, and conversely. Muscles that concur in the same action are termed congenerous. The muscles present numerous varieties in form, size, situation, use, &c., and have been divided, by some, into long, broad, and short. Each of these divisions comprises simple and compound muscles. Simple or rectilinear muscles have all their fibres in a similar direction, and only one body—as the Sartorius, Pronator quadratus, &c. Compound muscles are those which have only one belly and several tendons, as the flexors of the fingers and toes; or several bellies and several tendons,—as the biceps flexor cubiti, sacro-lumbalis, &c. To the compound muscles belong, also, the radiated muscles. Their fibres set out from a common centre, and are arranged like the radii of a circle;—such are the diaphragm, iliacus, temporal, &c. Pennated or Penniform Muscles. Their fibres are arranged in two rows, which are united at a median line, at greater or less angles; nearly as the feathers are inserted into a quill. The palmaris longus is one of these. Semi-penniform muscles: their fibres are oblique, as in the last case; but they are inserted only on one side of the tendon. Hollow Muscles are,—the heart, intestines, urinary bladder, &c.

Much difference has existed in the enumeration of muscles. Some authors reckon them at upwards of 400. Chaussier admits only 368. The greater part of them are in pairs. Very few are azygous.

TABLE OF THE MUSCLES, ARRANGED AFTER THE MANNER OF DR. BARCLAY, ACCORDING TO THEIR ACTIONS.

THE HEAD IS MOVED

Quadratus lumborum,
Longissimus dorsi,
Sacro lumbalis,
Serrati postici,
Latissimus dorsi.

THE SCAPULA IS MOVED

Upwards by

Trapezius,
Levator scapulæ,
Rhomboides.

Downwards by

Lower part of trapezius,
Latissimus dorsi,
Pectoralis minor.

Forwards by

Pectoralis minor,
Serratus magnus.

Backwards by

Part of trapezius,
Rhomboides,
Latissimus dorsi.

THE HUMERUS IS MOVED

Forwards by

Part of deltoid,
Part of pectoralis major,

Assisted in some circumstances by

Biceps,
Coraco-brachialis.

Backwards by

Part of deltoid,
Teres major,
" minor,
Long head of triceps,
Latissimus dorsi.

Inwards by

Part of pectoralis major,
Latissimus dorsi.

Rotated inwards by

Subscapularis,

Assisted occasionally by

Pectoralis major,
Latissimus and teres major.

Outwards by

Supra-spinatus,
Infra-spinatus,
Teres minor.

THE FORE-ARM IS MOVED

Forwards by

Biceps,
Brachialis anticus,
Pronator teres,

Assisted by

Flexor carpi radialis,
" sublimis,
" ulnaris,
Supinator longus.

Backwards by

Triceps,

Rotated inwards by

Pronator teres,
Flexor carpi radialis,
Palmaris longus,
Flexor sublimis,
Pronator quadratus,

Outwards by

Biceps,
Supinator brevis,
Extensor secundi internodii.

THE CARPUS IS MOVED

Forwards by

Flexor carpi radialis,
Palmaris longus,
Flexor sublimis,
" carpi ulnaris,
" profundus,
" longus pollicis.

Backwards by

Extensor carpi radialis longior,
Extensor carpi radialis brevis,
Extensor secundi internodii,

Flexor carpi radialis,
Extensor carpi radialis longior,
Extensor carpi radialis brevis,
Extensor ossis metacarpi,
Extensor primi internodii.

Inwards by

Flexor sublimis,
" carpi ulnaris,
" profundus,
Extensor communis digitorum,
Extensor minimi digiti,
Extensor carpi ulnaris.

THE THUMB IS MOVED

Inwards and forwards across the palm, by

Opponens pollicis,
Flexor brevis,
" longus

Outwards and backwards by

Extensor ossis metacarpi pollicis,
Extensor primi internodii,
Extensor secundi internodii.

Upwards and forwards, away from the other fingers, by

Abductor,

Assisted by part of the Flexor brevis.

Backwards and inwards, to the other fingers, by

Adductor,
Extensor primi internodii,
Extensor secundi internodii.

THE FINGERS ARE MOVED

Forwards, or flexed, by	Backwards, or extended, by	Outwards, to radial border, by	Inwards by
Flexor sublimis, " profundus, Lumbricales, Interossei, Flexor brevis digiti minimi, Abductor digiti minimi.	Extensor communis, " minimi digiti, Indicator.	Abductor indicis, " digiti minimi, Interossei.	Abductor digiti minimi, Interossei.

THE THIGH IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Inwards by	Outwards by
Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Tensor vaginæ femoris, Pectineus, Adductor longus, brevis.	Gluteus maximus, Part of gluteus medius, Pyriformis, Obturator internus, Part of adductor magnus, Long head of biceps, Semi-tendinosus, Semi-membranosus.	Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Pectineus, Gracilis, Adductor longus, brevis, magnus, Obturator externus, Quadratus femoris.	Tensor vaginæ femoris Gluteus maximus, medius, minimus, Pyriformis.

THE THIGH IS ROTATED

Inwards by	Outwards by
Tensor vaginæ femoris, Part of gluteus medius, And, when the leg is extended, by Sartorius, Semi-tendinosus.	Gluteus maximus, Part of gluteus medius, Pyriformis, Gemellus superior, Obturator internus, Gemellus inferior, Quadratus femoris, Obturator externus, Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Adductor longus, brevis, magnus, Biceps cruris, slightly.

THE LEG IS MOVED

Backwards, or flexed, by	Extended by
Semi-tendinosus, Biceps, Semi-membranosus, Gracilis, Sartorius, Popliteus.	Rectus, Crureus, Vastus externus, internus.

THE FOOT IS MOVED

Forwards, or flexed, by	Backwards, or extended by	Inclined inwards by	Outwards by
Tibialis anticus, Extensor proprius pollicis, Extensor longus digitorum, Peroneus tertius. Extensor proprius pollicis, Flexor longus digitorum, longus pollicis, Tibialis posticus.	Peroneus longus, brevis, Extensor longus digitorum, Peroneus tertius.

THE TOES ARE MOVED

Backwards, or flexed, by	Forwards, or extended, by	Inclined inwards by	Outwards by
Abductor pollicis, Flexor brevis digitorum, Abductor minimi digiti, Flexor longus pollicis, digitorum, accessorius, Lumbricales, Flexor brevis pollicis, Abductor pollicis, Flexor brevis minimi digiti, Interossei.	Extensor longus digitorum, Extensor proprius pollicis, brevis digitorum.	Abductor pollicis, Interossei.	Adductor pollicis, digiti minimi, Interossei.

Muscles have been variously named. 1. According to their uses, as diaphragm, buccinator, extensors, flexors, adductors, abductors, levators, depressors, &c. 2. According to their position, as interspinales, interossei, subclavii, poplitei, ancones, cubitalis, iliacus, temporalis, &c. 3. According to their shape, as trapezii, splenius, lumbricalis, serratus, digastric, deltoid, sealenus, rhomboides, &c. 4. According to their dimensions, as pectoralis major, rectus capitis anticus major, pectoralis minor, gluteus maximus, medius, and minimus. 5. According to their direction, as obliquus abdominis, transversalis abdominis, rectus femoris, rectus abdominis, &c. 6. According to their composition, as semi-membranosus, semi-tendinosus, complexus, &c. 7. According to their attachments, or the different points of the skeleton with which they are connected by means of tendons or aponeuroses; as sierno-cleido-mastoideus, sterno-hyoideus, &c. On this is grounded the nomenclature of M. DuRoi, and that of Chaussier.

The end of the muscle, which adheres to the most fixed part, is usually called the origin or head, (F.) Tête; and that which adheres to the more moveable part, the insertion or tail, (F.) Queue; the intervening part or body of the muscle being called the venter or belly, Venter musculi, Medium musculi, (F.) Ventre: hence the names gastrocnemii, digastricus, biceps, and triceps: according as they have two bellies, two or three heads, &c.

Muscles are formed,—1. Essentially of the muscular or fleshy fibre, (see Muscular Fibre.) 2. Of Areolar tissue, which unites together the fibres. This areolar tissue is not very visible between the fine and loose fibres; but becomes more so, when they unite in more considerable fasciculi. It forms, moreover, to each muscle, an external envelope, which unites it to the neighbouring parts, and admits of its motion. This envelope was formerly called Tunica propria musculorum. 3. Of Arteries. These proceed from neighbouring trunks, and are, generally, very large. Their size and number are always in proportion to the bulk of the muscle. With the exception of some viscera, as the lungs and the kidneys, there are few organs that receive as much blood as the muscles. 4. Of Veins. They follow the same course in the muscles as the arteries. Bichat asserts that they are generally devoid of valves. 5. Of Lymphatics. Of these we know little, and cannot easily follow them between the fleshy fibres. 6. Of Nerves. These are numerous, and of different sizes. They, almost all, proceed from the encephalon; some, however, issue from ganglions, and accompany the arteries. In general, they penetrate the fleshy tissue along with the vessels, with which they are closely united. After they have entered the muscles, they divide and subdivide until they are lost sight of.

MUSCLE CANIN, Levator anguli oris—m. Canueli, Ischio-trochanterianus.

MUSCLE OF GAVARD. The oblique muscular fibres of the stomach.

MUSCLE GRAND FESSIER, Gluteus major—in. of Guthrie, Compressor Urethre—in. of Horner. Tensor Tarsi—in. of Houston, Compressor venie dorsalis penis—in. très Large du dos, Latissimus dorsi—in. of Wilson, Compressor urethre.

MUSCULAR, Muscularis, Musculoana, Torolana, (F.) Musculaire, Musculenx. That which belongs or relates to the muscles. Well furnished with muscles, Locertiana.

MUSCULAR ARTERIES. Arteries that are distributed to the muscles. The name, Muscular Arteries of the eye, has been especially given to two branches sent off by the ophthalmic artery:—the one, inferior, which furnishes branches to the rectus inferior oculi, lachrymal sac, &c., and some of the anterior ciliary arteries; the other—the superior, which is sometimes wanting; but, when it exists, gives branches to the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris.

MUSCULAR CONTRACTION. The exertion of the power, possessed by muscles, of shortening themselves, or of contracting to produce motion:—muscular motion being the change in the situation and relation of organs, induced by muscular contraction. When a muscle contracts, its fibres assume more the zigzag direction, and the extremities approximate; but the bulk of the whole muscle is not augmented. This contraction takes place, at times, with extreme velocity: a single thrill, in the letter R, can be pronounced in the 1-30,000th part of a minute. The force of contraction, Myodynamia, depends upon the healthy physical condition of the muscle, combined with due energy of the brain. The duration, in voluntary motion, is for a certain time dependent upon the will:—contractions, excited involuntarily, cannot be so long maintained.

MUSCULAR CURRENT. A current, which, according to Matteucci, exists in every living muscle, whose tendinous extremities are not equally disposed—one, for example, forming a cord; the other broad and ribbon-like—and which circulates in the muscle from the tendinous extremity to the muscular surface.

MUSCULAR FIBRE, Fleshy fibre, Filum musculare, Fibrilla muscularis. A name given to the filaments, which, by their union, form the muscles. This fibre is flat, soft, downy, linear, but little elastic, and more or less red. It is firmer in adults than in the young or the aged; of the same size in the great and small muscles; and runs its course without bifurcation or ramification. It is but slightly resisting in the dead body, tearing readily; but during life it supports very great efforts without laceration. It is, itself, composed of a considerable number of fibrils, similar to each other, and subdividing almost ad infinitum. The ultimate filaments into which the fibre can be decomposed by mechanical means seem to be hollow or tubular. The fibre exists under two forms, the striated or striped, (F.) Fibre striée, and the non-striated, smooth, or unstriped, (F.) Fibre lisse; the muscles composed of the former ministering, as a general rule, to the animal functions,—the latter always, perhaps, to the organic. The colour of the muscular fibres is red in man, and white in several animals. A greater or less number,—united in fasciculi, Fasciculi seu Locerti musculorum, approximated to each other, and forming a distinct mass, of very variable size and shape, the extremities being attached to bones by means of tendons,—constitutes a muscle. In this are included areolar membrane, vessels and nerves. See Muscle.

MUSCULAR NERVES. The nerves distributed to the muscles are so named. Winslow calls the 4th pair of nerves—Nerf musculaire oblique supérieur.

MUSCULAR SYSTEM. A term given to the aggregate of the muscles of the body.

MUSCULAR VEINS. These bring back the blood, which has been carried to the muscles by the muscular arteries.

MUSCULARIS, Corroborant.

MUSCULATION. See Locomotion.

MUSCULEUX, Muscular.

MUSCULI ACCESSORII AD SACRO LUMBALIA, see SACRO-LUMBALIS—in. Papillares, Columnæ carneæ—m. Pectinati, Pectinated muscles. MUSCULINE, see Fibrin.

MUSCULO-CUTANEOUS, Musculo-cutaneus, from musculus, 'a muscle,' and cutis, 'skin.' That which appertains to muscles and skin.

MUSCULO-CUTANEOUS NERVE. This name is especially given to two nerves;—the one, the External cutaneous nerve, furnished by the brachial plexus (see Cutaneous:—) the other, given off from the popliteus externus, (F.) Nerv Sciaticus, Poplite externus, Prætibio digital (Ch.). It descends on the anterior and outer part of the leg,—at first, hid among the muscles; becomes superficial about the middle of the leg; and divides into two branches, which pass superficially on the back of the foot. Two musculo-cutaneous nerves—superior and inferior—proceed from the first lumbar. The superior musculo-cutaneous—il'io-scrotal, il'io-hypogastriens—which divides into two branches,—abdominal and scrotal. The inferior musculo-cutaneous is smaller than the superior, and is distributed as its name, il'io-in'guinal, indicates.

MUSCULO-RACHIDÆ'US. Belonging or relating to muscles and to the spine. A name given to branches, furnished behind by the intercostal, lumbar, and sacral arteries, which are distributed to the spine and to the muscles of the neighbourhood.

MUSCULOSA EXPANSIO, Platysma myoides.

MUSCULO-SPIRAL NERVE, Radial nerve.

MUSCULOSUS, Muscular.

MUSCULUS ACCLIVIS, Obliquus internus abdominis—m. Auxiliarius, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Constrictorius, Sphincter—m. Cutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Eustachii, Laxator tympani—m. Fallopilii, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Femoris membranousus, Fascia lata—m. Patientiæ, Levator scapulae—m. Penicillaris, Levator labii inferioris—m. Pxydoides terestris, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Scandularius, Parathenar—m. Subcutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Securrentarius, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Succingens, Diaphragm—m. Supercilii, Corrugator supercilii—m. Testicondus, Cremaster—m. Testis, Cremaster—m. Tubæ novæ, Circumflexus.

MUSCUS ARBOREUS, Lichen plicatus—m. Caninus, Lichen caninus—m. Catharticus, Lycopodium selago—m. Clavatus, Lycopodium—m. Corallinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Cranii humani, Lichen saxatilis—m. Erectus, Lycopodium selago—m. Helminthocortos, Corallina Corsicana—m. Islandicus, Lichen islandicus—m. Marinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Maritimus, Corallina—m. Pulmonarius quercinus, Lichen pulmonarius—m. Pxydatus, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Villosus, Peristroma.

MUSEAU DE TANCHE, Os uteri.

MUSEUM ANATOM'ICUM, Supellex anatomica. An anatomical museum.

MUSHROOM, Fungus.

MUSIC, Musica, (F.) Musique, from μουσα, musa, 'a song.' The art of producing harmonious and cadenced sounds; an art, which has, at times, been beneficially used in diseases, particularly in those of the mind; or on which the mind could act in a salutary manner.

MUSICOMANIA, Musomania, from music, and mania. A variety of monomania in which the passion for music is carried to such an extent as to derange the intellectual faculties.

MUSING, LISTLESS, Aphelxia otiosa.

MUSIQUE, Music.

MUSK, Moschus, Mosch (Arab.), (F.) Musc. A peculiar concrete animal substance, of a very disagreeable odour, bitter taste, and a deep brown colour: solid, and enclosed in the preputial follicles of Moschus moschiferus, Musk Deer, (F.) Chevrotain porte-musc. It is possessed of stimulant and antispasmodic properties. Dose, gr. v to ʒj in bolus.

MUSK, ARTIFIC'IAL, Moschus factit'ius, Resina Succini. (Ol. succini rectific. 1 part, acid. nitric. 4 parts. Digest;—a black matter will be deposited, which must be well washed with water.)

MUSKGRAPE FLOWER, Bulbus vomitorius.

MUSKMALLOW, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKROOT, Sumbul.

MUSKSEED, see Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKWOOD, Thymiana.

MUSOMANIA, Musicomania.

MUSQUITO, Mosquito.

MUSSËN'DA FRONDO'SA, Belil'la, Bele'som. A decoction of this Ceylonese plant has been esteemed refrigerant.

MUSSEL, Mytilus edulis.

MUSSELLED, see Mytilus edulis.

MUSSITA'TIO, Mussitation, from mussitare, mussitatum, itself from mussare, 'to murmur.' A condition, in which the tongue and lips move, as in the act of speaking, but without sounds being produced. This sort of murmuring is an unfavourable sign in disease, as indicating great cerebral debility.

MUSTA'CÆUM: from Mustacea, a kind of laurus used in making it. A kind of wedding-cake used by the ancients, which consisted of meal, aniseed, cummin, and several other aromatics; its object—it has been conceived—being to prevent or remove the indigestion occasioned by too great indulgence at the marriage feast. Lau-reolum in mustaceo quærere—"to seek for glory in pitiful performances."—Cicero.

MUSTACHE, Mystax.

MUSTARD, BLACK, Sinapis—m. Clammy, Polanisia graveolens—m. Essence of White-head's, see Sinapis—m. False, Polanisia graveolens—m. Green, Lepidium sativum—m. Hedge, Erysimum—m. Mithridate, Thlaspi campestre—m. Stinking hedge, Alliaria—m. Treacle, Thlaspi arvense—m. White, Sinapis alba—m. Wild, Sinapis arvensis.

MUSTELANEUS, Galeacon.

MUSTUM, Wort.

MUTACIS'MUS, Mutacis'm, from μυτακίζω, 'I use the letter μ, too frequently.' A vicious pronunciation; consisting, according to Sauvages, in the frequent repetition of the letters μ, ν, and ρ, which are substituted for others.

MUTA'TIO SEXÛS. 'A change or conversion of sex.' A notion prevailed in antiquity that such a conversion was possible.

MUTEOS'IS, from mutus, 'dumb.' Under this name is comprehended every phenomenon of expression, voluntary and involuntary, which impresses the sight or touch.

MUTILA'TION, Mutila'tio, Maiming, from mutilus, 'broken.' The removal or privation of a limb, or of some other external part of the body. In all countries, this crime has been punished with severity.

MUTINUS, Penis.

MUTISME, Mutitas.

MUTITAS, (mutus, (F.) Muet, 'dumb.') Obtutescentia, Ala'lia, Anan'dia, Dumbness, Speechlessness, (F.) Mutisme, Mutité. Impossibility of articulating sounds; although they can be elicited. Dumbness is often congenital, and united with deafness, of which it is an effect. In some cases it is accidental.

MUTITAS SORDORUM, Aphonia Sordorum, Sordomutitas, Deaf-dumbness, (F.) Surdmutité. Speechlessness from deafness; congenital, or produced during infancy. The subjects of this affection are called deaf-dumb, (F.) Sourds-muets.

MUTITÉ, Mutitas.

MUTO, Penis.
 MUTONIATUS, Membrosus.
 MUTTERKORN, Ergot.
 MUTTON TEA. Prepared from a pound of mutton, freed from the fat and cut into thin slices; and a pint and a half of boiling soft water poured over them, as in the case of beef tea; except that it requires to be boiled for half an hour after the maceration, before it is strained through a sieve.
 MUTUNNUS, Priapus.
 MYACANTHA, Ruscus.
 MYALGIA, Cramp.
 MYASTHENIA, from μυς, 'a muscle,' and ασθενια, 'debility.' Muscular debility.
 MYCE, Occlusion.
 MYCES, Fungus.
 MYCHIMUS, Suspirium.
 MYCHITHISMUS, Moaning, Suspirium.
 MYCODERMA, Myco'dermis; from μυκης, 'a mushroom,' and δερμα, 'skin.' A cryptogamous growth, which constitutes the crusts of favus. See Porrigo favosa.
 MYCODERMA CEREVISIE, Torula cerevisie.
 MYCODERMA PLICÆ, Trichomophyton. A cryptogamous growth, said to be the essence of Plicia.
 MYCODERMITIS, Mucitis.
 MYCODES, Fungoid.
 MYCODIARRHŒA, see Diarrhœa.
 MYCODYSENTERIA, see Dysentery.
 MYCOPHTHISIS, see Bronchorrhœa.
 MYCORTHOPNŒA; from μυκος, 'mucus,' and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing except when in the erect attitude.' Orthopnœa from excessive secretion of mucus in the air-passages.—Orthopnœa pituitosa.
 MYCOSIS, Fungus.
 MYCTERES, Myxæ, Nares.
 MYCTEROPHONIA, Rhinophonia.
 MYCTEROXEROTES, Mycteroxero'sis, from μυκτηρις, 'the nares,' and ξηροτης, 'dryness.' Narium sic'citas. Dryness of the interior of the nose.
 MYCUS, Mucus.
 MYDE'SIS, from μυδωω, 'I abound with moisture,' 'I am putrid.' Moisture. In its most general sense, it means corruption. By some, it is used for a mucous discharge from inflamed eyelids.
 MYDON, μυδων. Same etymon. Fungous or putrid flesh in certain fistulous ulcers.—Pollux. Also, flesh putrid from mouldiness.
 MYDRIASIS, Platyco'ria, Platyco'riasis, Amydri'asis. A name given by several writers to morbid dilatation of the pupil; and, by others, to weakness of sight, produced by hydrophthalmia, or superabundance of humours, from μυδος, 'moisture.'
 MYDRIATICUS, Mydriat'ic. Relating to or causing dilatation of the pupil.—Pereira.
 MYELALGIA; from μυελος, 'the spinal marrow,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the spinal marrow.
 MYELANALOSIS, Tabes dorsalis.
 MYELAPOPLEXIA, Apoplexia myelitica.
 MYELATEL'A; from μυελος, 'the spinal marrow,' and ατελεια, (a, privative, and τελος, 'end,') 'want of end or finish.' Incompleteness of the spinal marrow.
 MYELATROPHIA, Tabes dorsalis.
 MYELITE, Myelitis.
 MYELITIS, M. parenchymatosa seu spinal'is, Inflammatio medullæ spinal'is, Spini'tis, Spino-dorsal'is, Noto'myeli'tis, Rachio'myeli'tis, Rachial-gi'tis (of some), (F.) Myélite, Inflammation de la moëlle épinière, l. rachidienne, from μυελος, 'the marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the spinal marrow or its membranes;—indicated by deep-seated burning pain in the spine, with various nervous and vascular irregularities of function. It is not common. Dr. Marshall Hall proposes to call inflammation of the membranes of the brain Meningitis; that of the substance of the brain Myelitis.

MYELITIS PETECHIALIS, Meningitis, cerebro-spinal—m. Spinalis, Myelitis—m. Exsudativa, Hydrorachis—m. Parenchymatosa, Myelitis.

MYELOCHYSIS, Hydrorachis.

MY'ELOCYTES, from μυελος, 'marrow,' and κυτος, a mass, body or cell. Granules of the brain. Nuclei of the cells of the gray substance.

MYELOGANGLITIS, Cholera (sporadic).

MY'ELOÏD, Myeloi'des, Myelo'des; from μυελος, 'marrow,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Marrow-like.

MYELOID TUMOR, Fibroplastic tumour. A sarcomatous tumour, the more characteristic constituents of which are—peculiar many-nucleated corpuscles, which have been recognised as constituents of the marrow and diploe of bones, especially in the fetus, and in early life.—Paget.

MYELOMA, see Encephaloid.

MYELOMALACIA, Mollities medullæ spinalis.

MYELOMENINGITIS, Meningitis, spinal.

MYELOMYCES, see Encephaloid.

MYELON, Medulla spinalis.

MYELOPARALYSIS, Paraplegia.

MYELOPHITISIS, Tabes dorsalis—m. Sicca, Tabes mesenterica.

MYELOPHY'MATA, Tubercula medullæ spinal'is, from μυελος, 'marrow,' and φυμα, 'a tubercle.' Tubercles of the spinal marrow.

MYELOPLAXE, from μυελος, 'marrow,' and πλαξα, 'a plate or lamella.' Plates or lamellæ with numerous nuclei in the marrow of bones.—Robin.

MYELORRHAGIA, Apoplexia myelitica.

MYELOSPONGUS, see Encephaloid.

MYELUS, Marrow, Medulla spinalis—m. Di-auchenius, Medulla spinalis—m. Dorsites, Medulla spinalis—m. Notiæus, Medulla spinalis—m. Psoites, Medulla spinalis.

MYENERGIA, from μυς, 'a muscle,' εν, and εργον, 'work.' Muscular strength.

MYGMUS, Suspirium.

MYIOCEPHALUM, Staphylo'ma.

MYIODOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYITIS, Myositis, Rheumatism, acute.

MYLABRIS CICHORII, see Cantharis—m. Punctata, see Cantharis—m. Pustulata, see Cantharis.

MYLACEPH'ALUS, from μυλη, 'a mole,' a, privative, and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster with only traces of viscera, and without head or extremities.

MYLACRI, Molar teeth.

MYLACRIS, Patella.

MYLE, Patella, Mole.

MYLICUS, Molar.

MYLO, in composition, from μυλη, 'the jaw.' Relating or belonging to the jaw.

MYLODI, Molar teeth.

MYLODONTES, Molar teeth.

MYLO-GLOSSUS, from mylo, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' Winslow has given this name to muscular fibres, which pass from the posterior part of the myloid line of the lower jaw, and from the sides of the base of the tongue to the parietes of the pharynx. These fibres belong to the constrictor superior pharynx.

MYLO-HYOÏD LINE, see Mylo-hyoideus.

MYLO-HYOÏD FURROW OR GROOVE. A furrow which passes from the superior orifice of the inferior dental canal of the lower jaw in the same direction as the canal, and lodges the mylo-hyoïd nerve, a branch of the inferior-dental.

MYLO-HYOÏD NERVE, see Mylo-hyoïd furrow.

MYLO-HYOÏDEUS, from mylo, and υοιδης, 'the os hyoides.' Mylo'des, (F.) Mylo-hyoïdien.

The Mylo-pharyngeus of Morgagni and Santorini. This muscle is situate at the upper and anterior part of the neck, behind the lower jaw. It is broad, flat, and has the form of a truncated triangle. It arises from the internal oblique, inter-nal maxillary or mylo-hyoid line of the lower jaw bone, and is inserted at the fore part of the body of the os hyoides. Its innermost fibres unite with those of the opposite side to form a raphe on the median line. The mylo-hyoides raises the os hyoides and carries it forward, or it depresses the lower jaw.

MYLO-PHARYNGEUS, Constrictor pharyngis, Mylo-hyoides.

MYLUODES, Mylo-hyoides.

MYO, in composition, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' Appertaining or relating to a muscle.

MYOCARDITIS, Carditis.

MYOCEPHALITIS, Myi'tis cephal'ica; from myo, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the head.

MYOCEPHALON, Staphyloma.

MYOCELIAL'GIA, from myo, κοιλια, 'abdomen,' and αλγεω, 'I suffer.' Pain in the muscles of the abdomen.

MYOCELITIS, Myoceli'tis, Inflammat'io musculo'rum abdomina'tium, from myo, κοιλια, 'lower belly,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the abdomen.

MYODEOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYO'DES, from myo, and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Like unto muscle. Muscular.

MYODESOPIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODESOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODYNAMIA, Vis muscula'ris; from myo, and δυναμις, 'power.' The force or power of a muscle.

MYODYNAMICS, see Muscular contraction.

MYODYNAMOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYNAMOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYN'IA, from myo, and οδνη, 'pain.' Pain in the muscles,—rheumatismal or other. Rheumatism.

MYODYNIA INFLAMMATORIA, Myositis.

MYOG'RAPHY, Myogra'phia, from myo, and γραφειν, 'to describe.' An anatomical description of the muscles.

MYOID, Myoi'des, from μῦς, 'muscle,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' An epithet given to tumours composed of fibre cells or muscular fibres of organic life.

MYOLEM'MA, Myole'ma, from myo, and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The membranous tube of each muscular fibre. It has also the same signification as Sarcolemma.

MY'OLINE, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' A name given by Mr. Erasmus Wilson to a transparent substance that fills the cells, which, he conceives, by their juxtaposition form the ultimate muscular fibril.

MYOL'OGY, Myolog'ia, Sarcolog'ia, Myoiol-og'ia, from myo, and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of anatomy which treats of the muscles.

MYON, Muscle.

MYONARCO'SIS, from myo, and ναρκη, 'stupor.' Numbness of the muscles.

MYONITIS, Myositis.

MYON'OSUS, Myonu'sus, Myopathi'a, from myo, and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the muscles.

MYOPALMUS, Subsultus tendinum.

MYOPARALYSIS, see Paralysis.

MYOPATHIA, Myonosus.

MYOPE, Myops.

MYOPHO'NIA, from myo, and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound of the ventricles of the heart, during the systole of that organ.

MYO'PIA, Myopi'asis, Luscios'itas, Myo'sis,

Parop'sis propiu'qua, Anblyo'pia dissito'rum, Dyso'pia dissito'rum, Dyspho'tia, Visionu' jute'rum, from μῦον, 'I close,' or from μῦς, 'a mouse,' and ωψ, 'the eye.' My'opia, Short-sightedness, Near-sightedness, Monse-sight, Pub'blindness, (F.) Vue courte, V. basse. Persons who can only see objects very near. The defect is owing to the too great convexity of the eye, or too great density of the humours, and is palliated by wearing concave glasses.

MYOP'IC, Myo'picus; same etymon. Short-sighted, Poreblind, Pub'blind, Spurb'blind. Relating or appertaining to myopia.

MYOPODIORTHO'TICON, from μυωψ, 'one that is short-sighted,' and διορθωτικον, 'having power to correct.' An apparatus for the cure of short-sightedness.—A. A. Berthold.

MYOPS, Lucio'sius, Myo'pus, My'ope. Same etymon. One affected with myopia or short-sightedness.

MYOPY, Myopia.

MYORRHEX'IS, from myo, and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of a muscle.

MYOSARCO'MA, from μῦον, 'a muscle,' and sarcoma. A sarcomatous tumour in which muscular fibres are found.

MYO'SIS, from μῦον, 'I close.' Microscop'ia. Smallness of the pupil. Phthi'sis pupilla'ris. Permanent contraction of the pupil. It is usually caused by iritis, and is extremely difficult to cure. When it exists to such an extent as to obliterate the pupil, it is called Synizesis. Also, Myopia.

MYOSITE, Myositis.

MYOSIT'IC, Myositi'cus, from Myosis. Causing contraction of the pupil,—as opium.—Pereira.

MYOSITIS, Myi'tis, Mysi'tis, Myoni'tis, Sarci'tis, Rheumatis'mus phlegmono'des, Myodyni'ia inflamma'toria, Phlegma'sia myo'ica, Inflammat'io seu Phleg'mon'e Musculo'rum, (F.) Myosite, Inflammat'io des muscles, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' A name proposed by Sagar for inflammation of the muscles. Also, Rheumatism.

MYOSOTIS, Hieracium pilosella, Rheumatism, Rheumatism, acute.

MYOSPASMUS, Cramp.

MYOTIL'ITY, Myoti'litas, (F.) Myotilité, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' Muscular contractility.—Chaussier.

MYOT'OMY, Myotom'ia, from myo, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' The part of practical anatomy which treats of the dissection of the muscles. Also, the surgical operation of the division of muscles to remove deformity.

MYOTYRBE, Chorea.

MYRAC'OPUM, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' a, 'privative,' and κοπος, 'fatigue.' An ointment used by the ancients in cases of fatigue.

MYREPSUS, Unguentarius.

MYR'AGRAMME, from μυρια, '10,000,' and γραμμα, 'gramme.' A weight equal to 10,000 grammes, or to 26 pounds, 9 ounces, and 6 drachms Troy.

MYRIAMÈTRE. A measure of 10,000 metres: equal to 16 miles, 1 furlong, 156 yards, and 14 inches.

MYRICA ASPLENIFOLIA, Comptonia asplenifolia—m. Cerifera, see Cera fiava et alba, and Wax, myrtle.

MYR'ICA GALÈ, M. palustris, Myrtus Braban'tica seu Ang'lica, Myrtifolia Bell'gica, Galz, Gagel, Rhus sylvestris, Ac'aron, Elas'anus, E. Cordo, Chama'lag'nus, Dodone'a, Dutch myrtle, Sweet gale, Sweet willow, Candleberry myrtle, (Sc.) Scotch gale, (F.) Piment Royal, Thé de Simon Pauli, Gale odorant. Ord. Myricaceæ. Sec. Syst. Diœcia Tetrandria. The leaves, flowers, and seeds have a strong, fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They are used for destroying moths and cutaneous insects. The infusion is given internally as a stomachic and veruifuge.

MYRICA PALUSTRIS, M. Gale.

MYRINGA, see Tympannum.

MYRINGITIS, Inflammati'o tym'pani, from Myringa, 'the membrana tympani;' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membrana tympani; and, also, of the tympanum.

MYRINX, see Tympannum.

MYRIS, rupis, Myrothe'cē, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narthez, from μυρον, 'a perfumed oil or ointment.' A perfumed oil jar or ointment box.

MYRIS'TICA, M. Moscha'ta seu aromat'ica seu officina'lis seu fragrans, Comacan. Nat. Ord. Myristiceæ. The tree which produces the nutmeg and mace. (F.) Muscadier. The Nutmeg, Myristica, (Ph. U. S.) Myristic'æ seu Myristic'æ moscha'tæ nucleus, Nux moscha'ta seu unguenta'cia, Nacis'ta, Nux myristic'æ aromati'ca, Chryso'bal'anus Gale'ni, Unguenta'ria, As'sala, (F.) Muscade, is the seed or kernel. It has a fragrant, aromatic odour; an agreeable pungent taste, and is much used for culinary purposes. Alcohol extracts its active matter. It has the properties of aromatics in general; being stimulant and stomachic. The oil—O'leum myristic'æ seu uncis'tæ athen'ens—possesses the virtues of the nutmeg. Dose of the nutmeg, gr. v. to ℥j;—of the oil gtt. iij to gtt. vj.

Mace, Macis, Maces, Flores macis seu ma'cidos, (F.) Flores de muscade, is the involucre of the fruit. It is membranous, with the odour and taste of the nutmeg, and is possessed of similar qualities. The O'leum macis seu ma'cidis is a fragrant, sebaceous substance, expressed in the East Indies. It is only used externally. It is the Adeps myristic'æ, Myristic'æ o'leum express'um, O'leum seu Balsamum unci'stæ, Butter of nutmegs, Express'ed oil of Mace.

MYRISTICÆ NUCLEUS, see Myristica moschata.

MYRISTICATIO HEPATIS, Liver, nutmeg.

MYRMECIA, Formica.

MYRMECIASIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIASMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECISMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIZON, Formieant.

MYRMECOSIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMEX, Formica.

MYROBALANUS. From μυρον, 'an ointment,' and βλανος, 'a nut;' so called, because formerly used in ointment: Angeloc'acon, Myro'bolan, Glans unguenta'ria, Palma unguentari'orum. A dried Indian fruit, of the plum kind, of different species of Terminalia. Ord. Combretæcæ. Of this there are several varieties—the M. Bellir'ica or Belliric myrobalan, Bellegu, Bellerigi, Belbiley;—the M. chebul'a or Chebul'e myrobalan; the M. cit'rina or Yellow myrobalan, Ara'ria; the M. Emb'lica or emblic myrobalan, and the M. In'dica, As'uar, Lidiau or Black myrobalan. All the myrobalans have an unpleasant, bitterish, very austere taste; and strike an inky blackness with a solution of steel. They are said to possess laxative as well as astringent properties.

MYROLÉN, see Olea volatilia.

MYRON, Myrum, Unguentum.

MYROPISSOCERON. A topical application in alopecia, referred to by Galen; from μυρον, 'ointment,' πισσα, 'pitch,' and κηρος, 'wax.'

MYROPEÛS, Unguentarius.

MYROPELES, Apotheary, Unguentarius.

MYROSPERMUM FRUTESCENS, Myroxylum Peruiferum—m. Peruiferum, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. of Sonsonate, see Myroxylon

Peruiferum—m. Toluiferum, see Toluifera Balsamum.

MYROXYLON, see M. Peruiferum.

MYROXYLON PERUIFERUM, Myrosperm'um frutescens seu Peruif'erum, Quinquina, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and ξύλον, wood: Cabuc'iba. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Supposed to be the tree which affords the Peruvian balsam, Balsamum Peruvia'num (Ph. U. S.) seu Peruvia'num, Putzochill, Myrox'yli Peruiferi balsamum, Myrox'ylon, Cabureiciba, Indian, Mezican, or American balsam, (F.) Banne de Pérou ou des Indes. This balsam consists of benzoic acid, resin, and essential oil. Its odour is fragrant and aromatic; taste hot and bitter: it is soluble in alcohol, and miscible in water by the aid of mucilage. It is stimulant and tonic, and considered to be expectorant: as such, it has been employed in paralysis, chronic asthma, chronic bronchitis and rheumatism, gleet, leucorrhœa, &c., and externally, for cleansing and stimulating foul indolent ulcers. Dose gtt. v to gtt. xxx.

White Balsam of Peru, Natural balsam, Balsamum album, Styrac' alba, Balsamelæon, is obtained by incision from Myrospermum peruiferum.

The Myroxylon of Sonsonate in Central America—Myrospermum Pereira of Dr. Royle, has been supposed to furnish balsam of Peru.

MYROXYLON OF SONSONATE, see M. Peruiferum—m. Toluiferum, Toluifera Balsamum.

MYRRHA, Heb. מֵרְחָ; Bola, Stact'è, Ergas'ma, Myrrh, Calo'nia, Smyrna, Myrrhu rubra, (F.) Myrrhe. The exudation, μυρον, of an unknown plant of Abyssinia or Arabia Felix, said to be the Balsamaden'dron myrrha. This gum-resin has a fragrant, peculiar odour; and bitter aromatic taste. It is in reddish-yellow, light, brittle, irregular tears; partially soluble in distilled water when aided by friction. S. G. 1.360. It is stimulant; and has been used in cachectic affections, humoral asthma, chronic bronchitis, &c. Dose, gr. x. to ʒj.

MYRRHA IMPERFECTA, Bdellium.

MYRRHINE, Myrtus.

MYRRHIS ANNUA, Athamanta Cretensis—m. Major, Chærophyllum odoratum—m. Odorata, Chærophyllum odoratum.

MYRSINA AFRICANA, Tatzé.

MYRSINE, Myrtus.

MYRSINELÆON, from μυρσινη, 'the myrtle,' and λαϊον, 'oil.' Oil of myrtle.—Dioscorides.

MYRSINTES, μυρσινιτης. Wine in which branches of myrtle have been macerated.

MYRTACANTHA, Ruscus.

MYRTE COMMUN, Myrtus.

MYRTID'ANON, μυρτιδανον. An excrecence, growing on the trunk of the myrtle, and used as an astringent. With Hippocrates, either the myrtus caryophyllata or myrtus pimenta. [?] Also, a wine—Vinum Myrtid'anum—made from wild myrtle berries.

MYRTIFOLIA BELGICA, Myrica gale.

MYRTIFORM, Myrtiform'is, Myrtoid'es, from myrtus, 'a myrtle,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a leaf of myrtle. A name given to a muscel (depressor alve nasi), to the fossa incisiva; and to certain crumles, &c.

MYRTIFORMIS, Compressor naris, Depressor alve nasi.

MYRTITES, from μυρρον, the 'myrtle berry,' A name given to a medicine prepared with honey and myrtle berries.

MYRTLE, Myrtus—m. Berry, Vaccinium myrtillus—m. Candleberry, Myrica gale—m. Dutch, Myrica gale—m. Wild, Ruscus.

MYRTOCHEMILIDES, Nymphæ.

MYRTOCHILLA, Nymphæ.

MYRTODES, Myrtiform.

MYRTON, Clitoris.

MYRTUS, Myrtus communis seu communis Italica, μύρτος, Myrsi'nē, Myrrh'i'nē, The Myrtle, (F.) Myrte Commun. Ord. Myrtacæ. The berries of this plant have been recommended in alvine and uterine fluxes and other disorders of relaxation and debility. They are moderately astringent and somewhat aromatic.

MYRTUS ANGLICA, Myrica gale—m. Brabantica, Myrica gale.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLATA, Calyptanthes caryophyllata, Cussia seu Camel'la caryophyllata, (F.) Capelet, Cannelle giroflée. The tree which is considered to afford the Clove bark; Cortex caryophyllatus seu caryophyllata. This bark is a warm aromatic; resembling clove with an admixture of cinnamon. It may be used with the same views as cloves or cinnamon.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata—m. Leucodendron, Melaleuca cajuputi.

MYRTUS PIMENTA, Eugenia Pimenta. The tree which bears the Jamaica pepper, Pimenta buccæ, Pimento berries, Pimento, Piper caryophyllatum seu chid'pæ seu odoratum Jamaicensē seu Jamaicensē seu tabas'cum, Coc'culi Indi aromat'ici, Amomum pimenta, Fructus pimenti, Carive, Caryophyllus America'nus seu Pimenta, Allspice, (F.) Poivre de Jamaïque, Toute épice, Assouron. The unripe berries—Pimenta (Ph. U. S.)—have an aromatic odour: resembling a mixture of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves; the taste is pungent, but mixed, like the odour. Like other peppers, this is stimulant and carminative. The oil—Oleum Pimentæ—possesses the virtues of the berries. The powdered fruit has been called Quatre épices or Four spices. Dose, gr. v. to ℥ij.

Aqua Pimentæ, Pimento water, is officinal in the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Pharmacopœias. It is carminative. Dose, fʒj or fʒij.

MYRUM, Myron, μύρον. A perfumed oil or ointment. A liquid perfume. The spontaneously exuding juice of many plants, especially of that from which myrrh is obtained.

MYS, Muscle.

MYSILOGIA, Myology.

MYSTITIS, Myositis.

MYSTAX, Μασταξ, μυσταξ, μυσταχος. The hair growing on each side of the upper lip in men. The mustache or mustachio, (Old Eng.) Munchat'oe, (F.) Moustache. Also, the upper lip.

MYSTERION, μυστηριον, 'a mystery.' An areanum, nostrum, or secret preparation in general. Also, an antidote referred to by Galen and others.

MYSTRON, μυστρον. A Greek measure, which held about three drachms.

MYTILUS EDULIS. The common mussel, (F.) Moule. A bivalve, the flesh of which, when at all in a state of decomposition, is highly poisonous. When fresh, it is an agreeable, but not very digestible article of diet, producing, in some persons, all the symptoms of urticaria. One affected with such phenomena is said, occasionally, to be musselled.

MYURUS, Μειν'rus. A pulse is so called when it sinks progressively and becomes smaller and smaller like a rat's tail; from μύς, 'rat,' and οὐρα, 'tail.' Pulsus myurus reciprocus, a pulse, which, after having become gradually weaker resumes, by degrees, its former character.

MYXA, Mucus, Sebestina.

MYXÆ, Mycteres.

MYXIOSIS, Gonorrhœa impura.

MYXODES, Muciform.

MYXOR'RHOOS, μυξορροος, and μύξα, 'mucus,' and ρῶω, 'I flow.' One who is subject to mucus discharge. Applied to an infant, that discharges a considerable quantity of mucus and saliva.

MYXOSARCO'MA, from μύξα, 'mucus,' and σάρξ, σαρκος, 'flesh.' A tumour which is mucocarcaneous; partly mucous and partly fleshy.

MYXOTER, Nasus.

MYZESIS, Sucking.

N.

N. This letter, in prescriptions, is an abridgement of Numero, 'by number.'

NAB'ALUS ALBUS, Prenanthes alba seu serpenta'ria, White Lettuce, Lion's Foot, Rattlesnake's Master, Rattlesnake root, Gall of the Earth, from ναβλα, 'a harp,' owing to the lyrate leaves. An indigenous plant, of the order Compositæ, which, with several other species of the genus, is reputed to possess the power of curing the bites of serpents. The root has been used in dysentery.

NABALUS FRASERI has similar properties.

NABOT, Saccharum candidum.

NABO'THI GLAN'DULÆ, O'vula seu Ova Nabothi seu Nabothia'ua, Ova'rium Nabothi, Folliculi rotundi et oblongi, Vesiculae seu Bullæ rotundæ cervicis uteri, V. seminales mulierum, Corpora seu Corpuscula globosa, Glandulæ seu Hydatides cervicis uteri, Glands of Naboth. Small, mucous crypts or follicles situate in the interstices of the duplicatures of the lining membrane of the cervix uteri. Naboth, from noticing them in a morbid condition, mistook them for ova; and hence they received the name Ovula Nabothi.

NACRA, Nakra, Nasa. A kind of influenza common in the East Indies.

NACRÉ, Margaritaceus.

NACREOUS, Margaritaceus.

NÆVI, see Nævus—n. Pigmentary, see Nævus.

NÆVUS, Plural Nævi; Nævus mater'vus seu Sigillum, Nota mater'na, Nevus, Mac'ula matricis seu mater'na seu matricales, Notæ infantum, Lupus varicosus, Stigmata, Metrocellides, Congenitæ notæ, Mother's or Fancy marks, Mother's spots, (F.) Envie, Tache de Naissance. Spots of various kinds on the skin of children when born, which have been attributed to the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. They are of various appearances, some much better supplied with blood than others. Some are merely superficial or stain-like spots, Pigmentary nævi; others are prominent, Vascular tumours, and often have long, irregular hairs growing from them. These have usually been called Moles, Spili, Spiloma, Epichro'ses spili, &c. The red, rosy, violet or bluish spots are called by I. G. St. Hilaire, Taches Sanguines;—those of an intermediate hue, between the normal colour and black, Taches melaniennes. See Telangiectasia.

When nævi are superficial, without any disposition to enlarge or spread, they need not be meddled with: but all those that partake of the character of aneurism by anastomosis had better be removed, where practicable.

NEVUS SIGILLUM, Nevus.

NAFDA, Naphtha.

NAIL, Sax. næsl. (G.) Nagel, Unguis, Onyx, (F.) Ongle. A whitish transparent substance, similar to horn, which covers the dorsal extremity of the fingers. Three portions are distinguished in it; the extremity, which is free, at the end of the finger;—the body or middle portion adherent by its inner surface; and the root, Radix seu Matrix unguis, Lu'timum unguis, (F.) Matrice de l'ongle. The last presents two distinct parts; the one, terminated by a thin, serrated edge, is buried in a duplicature of the skin, Vallecula unguis, which acts the part of a nail-follicle; the other, called Lu'nula seu Semilu'nula seu Sele'nê seu Arcus seu Exor'tus seu Anat'olê seu Albe'do m'gnium, is whitish and of a semilunar shape, and is situate above the part where the epidermis terminates. The nails are composed of a horny tissue, of the same nature as that which forms the hoofs, horns, and scales of different animals. When the nail has been torn off, the papillæ of the skin become covered by a soft, whitish lamina, whose consistence gradually augments. New laminae are then formed underneath, and give the nail the thickness it ought to possess. The corneous substance, being thus constantly produced at the extremity of each of these laminae, the whole of the nail is pushed forwards, and it would grow indefinitely, were it not cut or worn by friction.

The nails protect and support the extremities of the fingers against the impression of hard bodies. They are, also, useful in laying hold of small bodies; and dividing those that have but little consistence.

NAIL-FOLLICLE, see Nail.

NAIL SPRING, Hangnail.

NAIV, Nanus.

NAISSANCE, see Parturition.

NAKRA, Naera.

NANGNAIL, Hangnail.

NANISME, see Nanus

NANNARI, Hemidesmus Indicus.

NANNYBERRY, Viburnum lentago.

NANOCEPHALIA, see Nanocephalus.

NANOCEPI'ALUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' One of a monstrous state—Nanoccephalia—in which the whole head or certain of its parts are too small, whilst the trunk and extremities are normal.

NANOCORMIA, see Nanocormus.

NANOCORMUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and κορπος, 'a trunk.' One of a monstrous condition—Nanocormia—in which the trunk is too small, whilst the head possesses its normal size.

NANOMELIA, see Nanomelus.

NANOMELUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and μελος, 'a limb.' One of a monstrous condition—Nanomelia—in which some part of an extremity is too small, and the whole limb too short.

NANOSOMIA, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and σωμα, 'body.' Microsomia. Dwarfishness, (F.) Nanisme. A state in which the entire body with all its parts is smaller than common.

NANOSOMUS, Nanus.

NANUS, vavos, Pumil'io, Pu'milo, Pumil'us, 'a dwarf.' Nanonomus, (Prov.) Crut, Rope Spinnick, (Sc.) Croil, Crok, Deavch, Derch, Dreich, Wratuck, (Pu'milus, Pumil'ius, 'dwarfish.') (F.) Nain. One who is much below the usual stature. The term is applicable to all organized beings from man to the vegetable. Trees have their dwarfs, as the human species have theirs. Some curious authenticated instances of human dwarfs are on record. Bebe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, was 33 inches (French) long, and well proportioned. The Polish nobleman, Borwlaski, who was well made, clever, and a good linguist, measured 28 Paris inches. He had a brother, 34 inches high, and a sister 21. A Friesland peasant, at 26 years of age, had attained 29 Amsterdam inches. G. H. Stöberin, of Nürnberg; was under three feet high at 20, yet he was well proportioned and possessed of talents. General Tom Thumb, so called, was seen by the Author in 1817. He was said to be 15 years old; measured 28 inches in height, and when weighed at the mint was found to weigh 20 pounds and 2 ounces. Two remarkable Indian dwarfs were exhibited in the United States and in Europe, about the middle of the 19th century, under the name of 'Aztec children,'—the boy, from 7 to 8 years of age, was 33½ inches in height, and weighed 20¾ pounds;—the girl, from 4 to 6 years of age, was 29½ inches high, and weighed 17 pounds. They were very deficient in intellect. See Pygmy.

NAPE OF THE NECK, Nucha.

NAPELLUS VERUS, Aconitum napellus.

NAPIE FLORES, see Citrus aurantium.

NAPHTHA, Acetone.

NAPHTHA, ναφθα, Nafda, Napta, Napta'ius, O'leum petrae album; (F.) Naphte; from a Chaldaic and Syriac word signifying bitumen. A bituminous substance, found in Persia, Calabria, Sicily, &c. It is liquid, limpid, of a yellowish-white colour, a smell slightly resembling that of oil of turpentine, and lighter than water. It resembles petroleum in its properties, and has been chiefly used as an external application; although occasionally, as an anthelmintic, and in inhalation in phthisis pulmonalis. Also, Ether.

NAPHTHA ACETI, Ether aceticus—n. Coal Tar. Light, see Anæsthetic—n. Sulphurica, Ether sulphuricus—n. Vitrioli, Ether sulphuricus—n. Vitrioli camphorata, Tinctura ætherica camphorata—n. Vitrioli martialis, Tinctura seu Alcohol sulphurico-æthereus ferri—n. Wood, Acetone.

NAPHTHALINE, Naphthalina, Naph'thalin. When coal tar is subjected to distillation, naphthaline passes over after coal naphtha. It is a white, shining, concrete, crystalline substance, fusible at 176° and boiling at 423°. It is soluble in alcohol, ether, naphtha and the oils, but insoluble in water. It has been used as an excitant expectorant, in the dose of 8 to 30 grains, in emulsion or syrup, and repeated. It has also been used as an anthelmintic; and, when made into an ointment, in psoriasis, lepra vulgaris, &c.

NA'PIFORM, Napiform'is, Bu'nioid, Bunioi'des, from napus, 'a turnip,' and forma, 'shape.' An epithet for a form of scirrhous tumour whose cut surface presents concentric lines resembling those seen in the interior of a turnip.

NAPIUM, Lapsana, Sinapis.

NAPLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The climate of Naples in its general characters resembles that of Nice, but it is more changeable: the sirocco too, which is little known in Nice, is severely felt at Naples. It is not a good residence for the phthisical invalid: Sir James Clark, indeed, considers it altogether unsuitable.

NAPLES, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the Quarter Santa Lucia, near the coast, is a cold spring, rich in sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is much used as an aperient tonic, and in cutaneous affections.

NAPLES WATER, FACTITIOUS, Aqua Neapolitana seu acidulata hydro-sulphurata, (F.) Eau de Naples. (Acidulous water, containing four times its bulk of carbonic acid, ℥xv, and ℥ij; hydro-sulphuretted water, ℥ix; carbonate of soda, gr. viij; carbonate of magnesia, gr. x. M. Ph. P.)

NAPTA, Nanus, Nata.

NAPTALIUS, Nanus.

NAPUS, Sinapis — n. Leucosinapis, Sinapis alba—n. Sylvestris, Brassica napus.

NAPY, Sinapis.

NARCAPHTE, Thymiana.

NARCAPHTHON, Narcophthon. The bark of an aromatic tree formerly brought from India. By some, supposed to be that of the tree which affords the olibanum. It was used in fumigation, in diseases of the lungs. See Lacaphthon.

NARCE, Narcosis.

NARCEMA, Narcosis.

NARCESIS, Narcosis.

NARCISSE D'AUTOMNE, Colchicum autumnale — n. Faux, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus — n. des Près, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus — n. Sauvage, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus.

NARCIS'SUS PSEUDO-NARCIS'SUS, N. jostalis seu glauca seu grandiflorus seu hispanicus seu major seu serotus seu sylvestris, Bulbocodium, Pseudo-narcissus, Daf'fodil, (Old Eng.) Aff'adil, Belle-Blome, (Prov.) Affrodile, Bellflower, Butter and Eggs, Leut-rose. Ord. Amaryllidaceæ. (F.) Narcisse sauvage, Narcisse des prés, Faux narcisse, Porrillon, Aiault, Zouzinette, Jeannette. The root is emetic and cathartic, in the dose of ʒij. The flowers are antispasmodic. Dose, 24 grains.

NARCODES, Narcotized.

NARCO'SIS, Narcotism, Narcē, Narcea, Narce'na, Narce'sis, from ναρκωω, 'I benumb,' Torpe'do, Torpor, Stupor, Stupefactio. The aggregate effects produced by narcotic substances. At times, narcotism is confined to a state of more or less profound stupor; and constitutes, in certain cases, a useful remedial condition; at others, it is a true poisoning, characterized by vertigo, nausea, a state of intoxication or apoplexy, constant delirium, convulsive motions, &c. Emetics in strong doses, and not much diluted with water; purgatives and glysters are the first means to be used in this condition. The stupor may afterwards be combated by the use of exciting and stimulating drinks.

NARCO'SIS FOLLICULO'RUM. A state of the scalp, which Mr. Erasmus Wilson conceives to be dependent upon torpid action of the hair follicles, and in which the scalp and hair are found covered with a yellowish, dirty-looking powder, composed of an admixture of granular particles and furfuraceous scales.

NARCOSPAS'MUS, from ναρκω, 'stupor,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Stupor combined with spasm.

NARCOTIA, Narcotine.

NARCOTIC POISON, see Poison.

NARCOTICO-ACRID, see Poison.

NARCOTICS, Narcot'ica, Carot'ica, Obstupefacient'ia, Stupefacient'ia, Stupefact'ients, (F.) Stupefactifs, Stupéfiants. Same etymon. Substances, which have the property of stupefying; — as opium, stramonium, hyoscyamus, belladonna, &c. They are used in medicine as soothing agents; exerting their special influence on the brain and tubular matter of the spinal marrow. In small doses, as a general rule, narcotics stimulate; in large, they act as sedatives. The following is a list of the chief narcotics: — Aconitum, Ætherea, Belladonna, Camphora, Cannabis, Conium, Digitalis, Humulus, Hyoscyamus, Lactucarium, Opium and Morphia, Stramonii Folia, Stramonii Semina, Mental Narcotics, (Appropriate Music, Monotonous sounds, or any succession of monotonous impressions.)

NARCO'TINE, Narcot'ina, Narcot'ia, Narcot'in, Anarcot'ina, Opia'num; same etymon; (F.) Sel de Déroïne ou d'opium, Opiane, Principe cristallizable de Déroïne. A solid, white, inodorous, and insipid substance; by some considered to be alkaloid; by others neuter; crystallizable in straight prisms with a rhomboidal base; fusible like the fats; soluble in boiling alcohol and ether, and scarcely soluble in water. Narcotine produces all the unpleasant effects of opium; but, at the same time, throws the animal into a state of stupor. It is not used in medicine, on account of these objections. The salts, which are very bitter, have been used successfully in India for the cure of intermittents.

NARCOTISM, Narcosis.

NARCO'TIZED, Torpidus, Narco'des. Affected with stupor, as from the use of a narcotic.

NARD, CELTIC, Valeriana Celtica — n. Indica, Nardus Indica — n. Indien, Nardus Indica — n. Indique, Nardus Indica — n. Petit, Aralia nudicaulis — n. Sauvage, Asarum.

NARDOSTACHYS JATAMANSI, Nardus Indica — n. Patriiua, Nardus Indica.

NARDUM GALLICUM, Valeriana Celtica.

NARDUS AMERICANUS, Aralia nudicaulis — n. Celtica, Valeriana Celtica — n. Celtica altera, Arnicæ montana — n. Montana, Asarum.

NARDUS IN'DICA, Spica nardi seu In'dica, Andropogon nardus seu citriodor'us, Ord. Gramineæ [?], or Nardostachys seu Valeriana seu Patriiua Jatamansi, Valeriana spica; Order, Valerianaceæ; Indian nard, Spikenard. The root of this plant is one of the ingredients in the mithridate and theriaca. It is moderately warm and pungent, and has a flavour by no means disagreeable. It is used by the Orientals as a spice: — (F.) Nard Indien ou Indique. An ointment was formerly used, called Unguentum nardi'mum. It was prepared of Nard, Malobathrum leaves, Oil of worms, Costus, Amomum, Myrrh, &c., and was used as a detergent.

NARDUS RUSTICA, Asarum.

NARES, Rhines, Car'itas seu Cavum seu Ca'væ seu Caver'na na'rium, Nasus inter'nus, Mye'teres, Na'rium ad'itus, Ocheten'mata, The nostrils, (Prov.) Sni'rrels, Snu'rles, (F.) Narines. Two elliptical apertures, situate beneath the nose, and separated from each other by the cartilaginous septum seu colum'na nasi. These apertures are continually open, and give passage to the air we breathe, and to the mucous fluids secreted in the nasal fossæ.

NARES INTER'NE, Nasal fossæ.

NARES POSTERIOR, Nares postre'mæ, Estre'mæ nares, Ostia posteriora seu Choanæ na'rium, Na'rium Ex'it'us, (F.) Arrières narines, Ouvertures postérieures des fosses nasales, are the posterior apertures of the nasal cavities, which establish a communication between those cavities and the pharynx. They are bounded, above, by the body of the sphenoid bone; below, by the palate bone, and the base of the velum pendulum; and, on the outside, by the internal ala of the pterygoid process. They are separated from each other by a septum, of which the vomer is the bony part.

NARIFUSO'RIA, from nares, 'the nostrils,' and fundere, fusum, 'to pour.' Medicine dropt into the nostrils.

NARINES, Nares.

NARIUM ADITUS, Nares — n. Siccitas, Mycetoxerotes.

NARROW CHEST, see Lordosis.

NARTHECIA, Formulary, Myrris.

NARTHECIUM, Formulary, Myrris.

NARTHEX, Formulary, Myrris, Splint — n. Asafœtida, see Asafœtida.

NASA, Nasa, Nata.

NASAL, Nasal'is, from nasus, 'the nose.' That which relates to the nose.

NASAL ARTERY. This is the largest of the two branches in which the ophthalmic artery terminates. It issues from the orbit, above the tendon of the orbicularis palpebrarum, passes above the side of the root of the nose, and anastomoses with the last extremity of the facial. Haller gave the name nasal to the sphenopalatine. He also called the dorsales nasi, furnished by the external maxillary, Nasales laterales.

NASAL BONES, Ossa nasi seu nasalia, Ossicula nasi, Ossa maxillæ superioris quarta seu quinta seu secunda, (F.) Ossa nasana, Ossa propriae duae. These bones are situate beneath the nasal notch of the os frontis, and occupy the space between the nasal or angular processes of the superior maxillary bone. Their shape is nearly quadrilateral. They have an external or cutaneous surface, an internal or nasal, and four margins. Each is articulated with its fellow, with the os frontis, ethmoid, and superior maxillary bones. They ossify from a single point.

NASAL CARTILAGE, Cartilago triangulæris Nasi. A cartilage formed of three portions, which unite at the dorsum nasi, and are distinguished into the cartilage of the septum, and the lateral cartilages. This cartilage is continuous, above, with the ossa nasi, and, inferiorly, with membranous fibro-cartilages, which form the supple and movable part of the nostrils. They are two in number—the one before, the other behind.

NASAL DUCT, Lacrymal duct—n. Eminence, Mesophryon.

NASAL FOSSÆ, Cavi narium, Nares internæ. Two large, anfractuous cavities, situate between the orbits below the cranium, and lined by the pituitary or Schneiderian membrane. These cavities have no communication with each other; but the various sinuses in the neighbouring bones—the ethmoidal, sphenoidal, superior maxillary, &c.—all communicate with them. The general cavity of each nostril is divided by the ossa spongiosa into three meatus or passages, which run from before backwards. 1. The Meatus narium superior, placed at the upper, inner, and back part of the superior spongy bone. 2. The Meatus medius, situate between the superior and inferior spongy bones; and 3. The Meatus inferior, situate between the inferior spongy bone and the bottom of the nose. The Schneiderian membrane receives the first pair of nerves, and various branches from the fifth pair. The arteries are furnished by the branches of the internal maxillary, known under the names of sphenopalatine, infra-orbital, superior alveolar, palatine, pterygo-palatine; by the supra-orbital, and ethmoidal branches of the ophthalmic artery; by the internal carotid, superior labial, and dorsales nasi. Its veins are little known, and generally follow the course of the arteries. The lymphatics are almost unknown. The nasal fossæ are the seat of smell; they aid, also, in respiration and phonation.

NASAL MEATUS, see Nasal fossæ.

NASAL MUCUS, Mucus narium, Phlegma narium crassum, Mucor seu Pituita seu Blenna seu Lympha muculenta narium, Apomyxia, vulgarly called Snot, Snob, Snoth, (F.) Morce, is the mucus secreted by the Schneiderian membrane.

NASAL NERVE, Naso-palpæbræ (Ch.), Naso-oculæris (Sömmering), Naso-ciliæris. One of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve of Willis. It enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, passes along the inner paries of that cavity, and divides, opposite the internal and anterior orbital foramen, into two branches. 1. The internal and posterior, which passes into the Foramen orbitarium internum anterius, enters the cranium beneath the dura mater, and passes into the nasal fossæ, through an aperture at the side of the Crista galli. It afterwards divides into several filaments: one of them—the Naso-labiar, of Chaussier—is very small, and descends on the posterior surface of the os nasi, and ramifies on the integuments of the ala nasi. A second terminates near the septum; and others descend along the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. 2. The other is external and anterior, and is called the external nasal nerve. It is distributed to the outside of the orbit. Before dividing, the nasal nerve communicates with the ophthalmic ganglion, and gives off two or three ciliary nerves. Sömmering has given the name Posterior Nasal Nerves to the nerves which arise from the internal part of the sphenopalatine ganglion.

NASAL NOTCH, (F.) Échancrure nasale. A semicircular notch, situate between the nasal prominence of the frontal bone, and articulated with the nasal bones and the nasal processes of the superior maxillary bones.

NASAL PROCESS, Maxillary bone, superior.

NASAL PROMINENCE, (F.) Bosse nasale. A prominence, situate on the median line, at the anterior surface of the os frontis, between the two superciliary arches.

NASAL REGION, Re'gio nasalis. The region of the nose.

NASAL SPINES. These are three in number.

1. The Superior nasal spine of the os frontis, occupying the middle of its nasal notch, and articulated before with the nasal bones, behind with the ethmoid. 2. The inferior and anterior nasal spine, situate at the inferior part of the anterior opening of the nasal fossæ. It is formed by the two superior maxillary bones; and 3. The inferior and posterior nasal spine, Épine gutturale (Ch.), a process, formed on the median line by the two palate bones at the posterior part of the palatine arch.

NASALE, Erhine.

NASALIS, Compressor naris.

NASALIS LABII SUPERIORIS. A small muscular slip, which runs up from the middle of the orbicularis and the lip to the tip of the nose. It lies exactly in the furrow, and is occasionally a levator of the upper lip, or a depressor of the tip of the nose.

NASAS, Nata.

NASATUS, Membrosus.

NAS'CALÉ. A kind of pessary, made of wool, or cotton, which was formerly introduced into the vagina, after being impregnated with oil, ointment, or some other proper medicament.

NASCAPHTHON, Nareaphthon.

NASDA, Nata.

NASI, see Oryza.

NASITAS, Rhinophonia.

NASITIS, Rhinitis—n. Postica, Angina nasalis.

NASO, Naso'tus, from nasus, 'the nose.' One who has a long nose. In composition, appertaining or relating to the nose.

NASOCILIARIS (Nervus), Nasal nerve.

NASO-LABIAL, Naso-labialis; from naso, and labium, 'a lip.' Relating to the nose and lip.

NASO-LABIAL LINE. A line or furrow, which separates the lip from the cheek, and commences at the ala nasi.

NASO-LABIALIS. A muscular fasciculus described by Albinus, which arises from the anterior extremity of the septum nasi, and terminates in the orbicularis oris.

NASO-PALATINE, Naso-palatinus. That which belongs to the nose and velum palati.

NASO-PALATINE GANGLION is situate in the foramen palatinum anterius. Its greater extremity receives the two naso-palatine branches; whilst the smaller gives off two or three filaments, which reach the palatine vault, where they ramify on the membrane of the same name, anastomosing with filaments of the great palatine nerve.

NASO-PALATINE NERVE, Nerve of Coturnicius, is furnished by the sphenopalatine, which proceeds from the ganglion of Meckel. It traverses the vault of the nasal fossæ, and proceeds upon the septum between the two layers of the pituitary membrane. It enters the anterior palatine canal, and terminates at the superior angles of the nasopalatine ganglion, without attaining the mouth.

NASO-PALPÉBRAL, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

NASTA, Nata.

NASTURTIUM AMPHIBIUM, see Sisymbrium—n. Aquaticum, Cardamine pratensis, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Bursa pastoris, Thlaspi bursa—n. Hortense, Lepidium sativum—n. Indicum, Tropæolum majus—n. officinale, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Palustre, see Sisymbrium—n. Peruvianum, Tropæolum majus—n. Prtense, Cardamine pratensis—n. Sativum, Lepidium sativum.

NASUM DILATANS, Pyramidalis nasi.

NASUS, Nose, Rhin, Rhis, Origanon olfactus seu odoratus seu olfactorium, Promontorium faciei, Myxoter, Emunctorium cerebri, Snout, (Sc.) Neis, Nes, (F.) Nez. The nose is a pyramidal eminence, situate above the anterior apertures of the nasal fossæ, which it covers; and, consequently, occupying the middle and upper part of the face, between the forehead and upper lip, the orbits and the cheeks. Its lateral surfaces form, by uniting angularly, a more or less prominent line, called Dorsum seu Rhachis seu Spina Nasi, (F.) Dos du nez. This line terminates, anteriorly, by the lobe,—Lob'ulus. The sides are called Alæ Nasi, Pinnæ Naris, (F.) Ailes du nez. The columna is the inferior part of the partition. Its apex or tip has been called Glob'ulus nasi.

The chief varieties of the nose are the aquiline, the flat nose, (F.) Nez camarot ou épaté, and the snub nose, (F.) Nez retroussé. The nose is formed, besides its bones, of fibro-cartilage, cartilage, muscles, vessels, and nerves; and its use seems to be to direct odours to the upper part of the nasal fossæ.

NASUS INTERNUS, Nares.

NASUTUS, Naso.

NATA, Natta, Nasa, Nasda, Nasta, Nasas, Napta. A fleshy, indolent excrescence, having the shape of the nates.

NATARON, Natron.

NATA'TION, Nata'tio, from natare, natatum, itself from nare, 'to swim.' Swimming. The action of swimming, or of supporting one's self, or moving upon the water. Swimming resembles the horizontal leap in its physiology—the medium being water instead of air. The difference between the specific gravity of the human body and that of water is not great; so that but little exertion is required to keep a part of the body above water. Swimming is a healthy gymnastic exercise, combining the advantages of bathing.

NATES, Ephed'rana, Scap'phia, Podex, Clunes, Glutoi, Gluti, Glu'tia, Sedi'lia, Pygæ, Monæ, Bottom, Backside, Posteriorior, Buttocks, (Prov.) Tout, (Sc.) Donp, Donp, Dolp, Droddum, Hurdies, Lendis, &c., (F.) Fesses. Two round projections, at the inferior and posterior part of the trunk, on which we sit. Amongst the mammalia, man alone has the nates prominent and round. They are formed chiefly by the skin, and a thick layer of areolar tissue, which covers the three glutæi muscles.

NATES CEREBRI, Quadrigenina corpora—n. et Testes, Quadrigenina corpora.

NATRIUM, Sodium.

NATROCRENÆ, Natropegæ.

NATRON, Natrum, Nat'aron, Nitrum, Anatrum, Aphronitrum, from Natron, a lake in Judæa. A saline compound, very abundant in Egypt, which is almost wholly formed of subcarbonate of soda.

NATRONIUM, Sodium.

NATROPE'GÆ, Natrocre'næ, from natron, and πηγη, 'a spring.' Soda springs.

NATRUM, Natron—n. Chloratum liquidum, Liquor sodæ chlorinatæ—n. Muriaticum, Soda, muriate of—n. Muriatum, Soda, muriate of—n. Præparatum, Soda, subcarbonate of—n. Tartarizatum, Soda, tartrate of—n. Vitriolatum, Soda, sulphate of—n. Nitricum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Oxymuriaticum, Soda, chloride of—n. Oxyphosphorodes, Soda, phosphate of—n. Sulphuricum, Soda, sulphate of.

NATTA, Nata.

NATULÆ, Quadrigenina tubercula.

NATU'RA, from nasci, 'to be born or arise.' Physis. Nature. Also, the genital organs.

NATU'RA MORBI. The essence or condition of a disease.

NATURAL PARTS, Genital organs.

NATURALIA, Genital organs.

NA'TURISM, Naturalism. A view which attributes every thing to nature, as a sage, prescient, and sanative entity.—Nysten. See Expectation.

NA'TURIST. A physician who scrupulously investigates, interprets, and follows the indications presented by nature in the treatment of disease.

NAU'CLEA GAMBIR, Uncaria gambir. A plant of the Nat. Order, Rubiaceæ, native of the Malayan Peninsula and Indian Archipelago, which yields large quantities of the kind of Catechu known by the names Terra Japonica and Square Catechu, and which, in Indian commerce, is called Gambier or Gambir. It is a powerful astringent, much used in tanning, and in medicine. See Catechu.

NAU'SEA, Nau'sia, Nausi'asis, Nausio'sis, Nautia, Queas'iness, Squeas'iness, (F.) Nausée, Envie de vomir; from vau, navis, 'a ship;' because those unaccustomed to sailing are so affected. Sickness. Inclination to vomit.

NAUSEA, KREAT'IC, (κρεας, κρεατος, 'flesh.') The sickness and vomiting, excited, in some nervous patients, by the smallest portion of animal food.

NAUSEA MARINA, Morbus nauticus, Vomitus navigantium seu marinus, Sea-sickness, (F.) Mal de mer. The sickness, vomiting, &c., experienced at sea by those unaccustomed to a sea-life; and from which those who are accustomed are not always exempt. It generally ceases when the person becomes habituated to the motion of the vessel, and not till then.

NAUSÉABOND, Nauseant.

NAU'SEANT, Nau'seans, (F.) Nauséabond, Nauséaux. An agent that excites nausea, which is a state of diminished action. Nauseants are, hence, valuable remedies in diseases of excitement.

NAUSIA, Nausea.

NAUSIASIS, Nausea.

NAUSIO'SIS. This word, besides being synonymous with nausea, has been used to express the state of venous hemorrhage, when blood is discharged by jets.

NAUTIA, Nausen.

NAVEL, Umbilicus—n. String, Funiculus umbilicalis—n. Wort, Cotyledon umbilicus—n. Wort, Venus's, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NAVET, Brassica rapa—n. du Diable, Bryonia alba—n. Galant, Bryonia alba.

NAVETTE, Brassica rapa.

NAVICULAR, Navicula'ris, Naviform'is, (F.) Naviculaire, from navicula, 'a little ship.'

NAVICULAR FOSSA, Fossa Navicula'ris seu Scapho'ides, Navic'ula, Scaph'ula. See Scaphoid. This name has been given, 1. To a small depression between the entrance of the vagina and the posterior commissure of the labia major or fourchette. 2. To a perceptible dilatation, presented by the urethra in man, near the base of the glans. 3. To the superficial depression which separates the two roots of the helix. This is also called Scapha.

NAVICULARE OS, Scaphoides os.

NAVIFORMIS, Navicular.

NAVIS, Vulva.

NEAR-SIGHTEDNESS, Myopia.

NEARTHRO'SIS, from neos, 'young or new,' and arthron, 'a joint.' A new joint.

NEBLE, Nipple.

NEB'ULA, Nubes, Nubec'ula, Nephos, νεφέλη, Neph'elē, Neph'e'liou, Vitus nebulosus, (F.) Nuage, Ombre. A slight speck on the cornea. A mist or cloud suspended in the urine. See Caligo.

NEBULOUS, Nepheloid.

NECESSARY, Necessari'us, (ne, and cessare.) The Necessaries of Life, Vitæ necessitates, (F.) Besoins de la vie, include every thing requisite for the maintenance of life, and particularly food.

NECK, Collum—n. Derbyshire, Bronchocele.

NECK OF THE FOOT, Instep.

NECK, SWELLED, Bronhocels—n. Stiff, Torticollis—n. Wry, Torticollis.

NECKLACE, AN'ODYNE, (F.) Collier anodin. These are formed of the roots of hyoscyamus, Job's tears, allspice steeped in brandy, or the seeds of the wild liquorice vine, to suit the fancy of the prescriber. They are employed to facilitate dentition in children, and to procure sleep in fever. (!)

NECKWEED, Veronica beccabunga, V. peregrina.

NECRÆ'MIA, from νεκρος, 'death,' and 'αίμα,' 'blood.' Death of the blood. Death beginning with the blood.

NECRENCEPHALUS, Mollities cerebri.

NECROCEDIA, Embalming.

NECROCOMIUM, Morgue.

NECRODES, Cadaverous.

NECRODOCHIUM, Morgue.

NECROLOGY, BILLS OF, Mortality, bills of.

NEC'ROMANCY, Necromanti'a, Negromanti'a, Necyomanti'a, Nigromanti'a, from νεκρος, 'death,' and μαντεία, 'divination.' Divination by the dead.

NECROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NECRON, Cadaver.

NECRONARCEMA, Rigor mortis.

NECROPHOB'IA, from νεκρος, 'death,' and φοβός, 'fear.' Exaggerated fear of death. This symptom occurs in patients where the disease is not mortal; as in hypochondriasis. In fevers, it is not a good symptom.

NECROPNEUMON'IA, Pneumo'nia gangræno'sa seu typho'sa, Gangræ'na seu Mortifica'tio seu Anthrax seu Carbun'culus Pulmo'num, Pneumone'ria, Pneumoc'acē, (F.) Gangrène du Poui'mon, Pneumonecrosie, — Piorry; from νεκρος,

'death,' and pneumonia. Gangrenous inflammation of the lungs. This may be diffused or circumscribed. The only pathognomonic symptom is the extraordinary and repulsive odour of the breath and expectoration. The treatment consists in the use of the chlorides internally, or of chlorine by inhalation; allaying irritation by opium, and supporting the patient by wine-whey, and nourishing diet.

NECROPSIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROPSY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSED, see Necrosis.

NECROSEMEIOT'ICĒ, from νεκρος, 'death,' and σημειον, 'a sign.' The doctrine of the signs of death.

NECRO'SIS, from νεκρω, 'I kill.' Mortification. State of a bone or of a portion of a bone deprived of life. Osteogangræ'na, Osteonecro'sis. The bone, in such case, is said to be neurosed. Necrosis may take place without the surrounding soft parts being struck with gangrene. It is to the bones what gangrene is to the soft parts. The part of the bone affected with necrosis becomes a foreign body, similar to the gangrenous eschar, and its separation must be accomplished by the efforts of nature, or by art. When necrosis occurs in the centre of long bones, it never extends to their articular extremities. The exterior layers of bone form a canal round the dead portion or sequestrum; between these swollen layers and the sequestrum, suppuration takes place; the matter presses against the bony canal; perforates it, and is discharged by apertures, which become fistulous.

In the treatment, the exit of the sequestrum must be facilitated by proper incisions, by the application of the trepan to the bone, &c.

NECROSIS CEREBALIS, Ergotism — n. Dentium, Dental gangrene — n. Ustilaginea, Ergotism.

NECROSTOA, Morgue.

NECROTOMY, Dissection.

NEC'TANDRA CINNAMOMŌ'DES, Laurus cinnamomŏ'ides, Cinnamo'mum sylves'trē Americānum: Order, Lauracæ; native of New Grenada, where it is called Canela; has the odour and taste of cinnamon, and is used as such.

NECTANDRA CYMBARUM, Ocote'a cymbarum seu ama'ra, grows in Oronoko, where it is called Sass'afra. The bark is aromatic, bitter, and stomachic; and Von Martius thinks it is an ingredient in the curare poison.

NECTANDRA PUCHURY, see Pichurium beans — n. Rodiei, see Bebeeru.

NECTAR, νεκταρ, from νη, 'a particle of negation,' and κταω, 'to kill.' A pleasant liquor, feigned by the poets to have been the drink of the gods, and to have rendered immortal those who partook of it. A name given, by the ancients, to many drinks; and particularly to one made with wine, evaporated, and sweetened with honey.

NECTARIUM, Inula helenium.

NECUSIA, see Wound.

NECYOMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEDYIA, Intestines.

NEDYS, νηδύς. The belly, abdomen, stomach, uterus.

NEEDLE, Sax. nebl, næbl, from Teut. neten, 'to sew.' Acus, Bel'onē, Raphis, Raph'ium, Aces'tra, (F.) Aiguille. A steel instrument, used in many professions. In Surgery, a steel, gold, silver, or platinum instrument, that may be round, flat, or triangular, straight, or curved, supported or not by a handle, but having always a point, by means of which it penetrates the textures; and often having, either near the point, or more commonly, near the other extremity, an aperture or eye for the reception of a thread or tape, which it introduces into the parts. The Aiguille à appareil of the French is the ordinary sewing needle used in the making of bandages, &c.

NEEDLE, ACUPUNCTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Acupuncture. An inflexible gold or silver needle; conical, very delicate, four inches long, furnished with a handle, and, at times, with a caula shorter than it by about half an inch. An ordinary needle, waxed at the head, will answer as a substitute for this. See Acupuncture.

NEEDLE, CATARACT, Acus ophthalmica, (F.) Aiguille à cataracte. Needles of gold, silver, and steel have been used; the latter, alone, at the present day. The cataract needle is employed to depress or tear the crystalline when opaque. This needle is usually made from 15 to 24 lines long; and is attached to a fine handle. The extremity may be, as in Scarpa's and Langenbeck's, pointed, prismatic, triangular, and curved; in Dupuytren's and Wather's, flat, curved, and sharp-edged; in Hey's, flat, with a semicircular and sharp end; or, as in Beer's, Siebold's, Schmidt's, Hämly's, Von Gräfe's, &c., straight and spear-pointed. A mark is generally placed upon the handle to inform the operator,—when the instrument is engaged in the eye,—what side corresponds to the crystalline.

NEEDLE FOR A COUNTER-OPENING, Acus invaginata, (F.) Aiguille à Contre-ouverture ou engagée ou à gaine,—a long, narrow instrument of steel; the point of which is fine and sharp on both sides;—the heel (talon) having an aperture to receive a thread, tape, &c., provided with a flat, silver sheath, shorter than the blade, the point of which it covers when passing through parts that have to be respected.

NEEDLE, DESCHAMP'S, Panpe's needle, (F.) Aiguille de Deschamps, A. à manche, &c., is the last described needle, fixed to a handle. The eye is placed near the point. It is employed in the ligature of deep-seated arteries.

NEEDLE, FISTULA, (F.) Aiguille à Fistule. A long, flat, flexible, silver instrument; having an aperture near one extremity; blunt at the other. This was formerly used for passing a seton into fistulous ulcers. On one of its sides was a groove for guiding a bistouri in case of necessity.

Also, a long, steel instrument, terminated by a point like that of a trocar, which Desault employed for penetrating the rectum, when operating for fistula that had no internal aperture.

NEEDLE, HARE-LIP, (F.) Aiguille à Bec de Lièvre. A small, silver canula, to which is attached a spear-point, that can be readily withdrawn. This needle, armed with the point, is introduced at one side of the fissure in the lip, and through the other. The twisted suture is then applied, and the pin withdrawn.

NEEDLE, LIGATURE, (F.) Aiguille à ligature. A long, steel instrument, sharp towards one extremity, with an eye near the other, which was formerly used for suspending the circulation of blood prior to amputation, by being passed through the limb, so as to include the principal artery and a part of the muscles and integuments.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, round towards one of its extremities, which was straight, and furnished with an aperture; curved and flat towards the opposite, which was pointed, and had a slight ridge on its concave side. At the commencement of the last century, this instrument was used to pass ligatures around vessels.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, flat, regularly curved in the form of a semicircle, with a sharp or lance point, and a long eye, used with advantage in place of the last.

NEEDLE, PANPE'S, Needle, Deschamp's.

NEEDLE, SETON, (F.) Aiguille à Seton. A long, narrow, steel blade; pointed and sharp at one extremity; pierced at the other by an aperture. The Aiguille à contre-ouverture may be used for the same purpose.

NEEDLE, SUTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Suture. For the twisted suture, the hare-lip needle is used; for the others, the straight or curved needle: the straight needle is preferable for stitching up the abdomen, &c., in dissection. In the suture of the tendons, a curved needle has been used: flat on both sides, and cutting only at the concave edge, in order that the instrument may pass between the tendinous fibres without dividing them.

NEEDLE-BEARER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEDLE-CARRIER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEM BARK, see Melia azedarach.

NEESING, Sneezing.

NÈFLE, Mespilus (the fruit).

NÉFLIER, Mespilus.

NEFREN'DES, properly, 'sucking pigs.'—Varro. Nodoi, Eden'tuli (vn, privative, and odos, odontos, 'a tooth.') Persons devoid of teeth. Young children, for instance, who have not cut them; or aged persons, who have lost them. This state is called Nefrendis, Nodo'sia, Odon'tia eden'tula.

NEGOTIUM PARTURITIONIS, Parturition.

NÈGRE BLANC, Albino.

NEGRETIA PRURIENS, Dolichos pruriens.

NEGRO, N'grita, (F.) Nègre. One of the Ethiopian race. See Homo and Mulatto.

NEGROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEIËRA, Abdomen.

NEIGE, Snow.

NEIR, Kidney.

NEIRA, Abdomen.

NEIS, Nاسus.

NELUMB'BIUM LUTEUM, Yellow ne'lumbo, Yellow water lily, Pond lily. Water shield, Water nuts, Water chin'capin, Rattle nut, Sacred bean. A beautiful water plant, common in the United States, and belonging to Nat. Ord. Nymphaeace: Ser. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The leaves are cooling and emollient when applied to the surface. The roots, leaves, and nuts are eaten. The last are called by the Indians and others water chin'capins.

NELUMBO, YELLOW, Nelumbium luteum.

NENDO, Angelica lucida.

NENNDORF, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nenndorf is a village three and a half German miles from Hanover. Its cold sulphureous spring is much celebrated.

NENUPHAR, Nymphæa alba—n. Blanc, Nymphæa alba—n. Jaune, Nymphæa lutea—n. Lutea, Nymphæa lutea—n. Odorant, Nymphæa odorata.

NEOÄRTHRO'SIS, from neos, 'new,' and arthron, 'a joint.' A new joint; an artificial joint.

NEOG'ALA, from neos, 'new,' and gala, 'milk.' Milk secreted immediately after the colostrum. Also, the colostrum.

NEOGENES, Nouveau-né.

NEOGILUS, Nouveau-né.

NEOGNUS, Nouveau-né.

NEOGONUS, Nouveau-né.

NEO-MEMBRANE, see Membrane, false.

NEONATUS, Nouveau-né.

NE'OPLASTÝ, Neoplas'ticē, from neos, 'new,' and πλασσω, πλάττω, 'I form.' An operative process for the formation of new parts. It includes autoplasty, cicatrization of wounds, and the formation of adhesions.—Burdach.

NEOSCYTECHUS, see Craquement de Cuir neuf.

NEOTOCICTERUS, Icterus infantum.

NEOTTIA, Goodyera pubescens.

NEP, Nepeta.

NEPENTHA DESTILLATO'RIA, Banana. A Ceylonese plant, the root of which is astringent.

NEPENTHES, from νη, negative particle, and πεινος, 'grief.' A remedy much extolled by the ancients against sadness and melancholy.

The women of Thebes, according to Diodorus Siciliotes, alone possessed the secret of its composition; and, according to Homer, Helen introduced it from Egypt. Some suppose it to have been opium.

NEPENTHES, Bague—n. Opiatum, Pilula opiata.

NEPETA, N. Cata'ria seu vulg'aris, Cata'ria vulg'aris, Herba felix, Nep, Catnep, Catmint, (F.) Herbe aux Chats, Cataire,—so called, because cats are fond of it. Ord. Labiate. The leaves, Cata'ria, (Ph. U. S.), have a smell and taste like those of an admixture of spearmint and pennyroyal. It has been recommended in uterine disorders, dyspepsia, flatulency, &c., like pennyroyal; and is much used in domestic medicine, on the American continent, in flatulencies, &c., of children.

NEPETA AGRESTIS, Melissa nepeta—n. Glechoma, Glechoma hederacea—n. Vulgaris, Nepeta.

NEPHALIOTES, Temperance.

NEPHELE, Enaërema, Nebula.

NEPHELION, Nebula.

NEPH'ELOID, Nepheloides, Nepheloides, Nebulous, Nubilosus. From νεφελη, 'a cloud,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' An epithet applied to urine when it is cloudy—Urina nepheloides.

NEPHIOS, Nebula.

NEPHRÆMORRHAGIA, see Hæmaturia.

NEPHRALGIA, Dolor Nephreticus, Neuralgia Rennum, (F.) Névrálie des Reins, Dyrnéphronerrie, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain and neuralgia in the kidney.

NEPHRALGIA ARENOSA, see Gravel—n. Calculosa, see Gravel—n. Rheumatica, Lumbago.

NEPHRANURIA, Ichuria renalis.

NEPHRAPOS'TASIS, Nephropo'sis, Abscessus renal'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and αποστασις, 'abscess.' Renal abscess.

NEPHRATON'IA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ατονια, 'want of tone.' Rennum aton'ia seu paral'ysis. Atony of the kidney.

NEPHRAUX'E, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and αυξω, 'to increase.' Enlargement of the kidney.

NEPHRELCO'SIS, Nephropo'sis, Helco'sis renal'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the kidney.

NEPHRELMIN'TIC, Nephrelmin'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and ελμινθς, 'elminthos, 'a worm.' That which is owing to the presence of worms in the kidney.

NEPHREMPHRA'XIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' A name given by Plouquet to obstruction of the kidneys.

NEPHRETIC, Nephrid'icus, Nephrit'ic, Nephrit'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney.' That which relates to the kidney. Applied, especially, to pain, &c., seated in the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM, in Materia Medica, means a medicine employed for the cure of diseases of the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRETICUS LAPIS, Talenm nephrit'icium, (F.) Pierre néphrétique, Jade néphrite ou oriental. A green, fatty kind of stone,—once used as an amulet against epilepsy,—an absurd name, as there can be no such remedy.

NEPHRIA, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRID'ION, Pingue'do renal'is. From νεφρος, 'the kidney.' The fat which surrounds the kidneys.—Hippocrates.

NEPHRIDIDIUM, Capsule, renal.

NEPHRIDIDIUS, Nephretic.

NEPHRINE, Oxyd, cystic, Urea.

NEPHRITE, Nephritis—n. Albumineuse, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRITES, Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIC, Nephretic.

NEPHRITICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRITIS, Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIS, Empres'ma Nephritis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and itis, 'denoting inflammation;' Rennum inflammatio, Nephro-phleg'moné,—Inflammation of the Kidney, (F.) Néphrite, Inflammation des Reins, is characterized by acute pain; burning heat, and a sensation of weight in the region of one or both kidneys; suppression or diminution of urine; fever; dysuria; ischuria; constipation, more or less obstinate; retraction of the testicle, and numbness of the thigh of the same side. It may be distinguished into simple and calculous nephritis—Lithonephritis. In the latter, the urine often contains small particles of uric acid or of urate of ammonia. The most common causes of nephritis are,—excess in irritating and alcoholic drinks; abuse of diuretics; blows or falls on the region of the kidneys; the presence of renal calculi, &c. It may be distinguished from lumbago by the pain which attends the latter on the slightest motion, &c. It usually terminates by resolution in from one week to two or three. It may, however, end in suppuration—pyonephrite; or may become chronic—chrononephrite, (Piorry.) In the treatment, antiphlogistics, as bleeding, baths, &c., are required to the full extent; with the use of diluents, opiates, &c.

NEPHRITIS ALBUMINENSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Albuminosa, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Associated, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Cachectic, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Calculous, see Nephritis—n. Sociata, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCHALAZOSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCOCCOSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCYSTO'SIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and κυστις, 'a cyst or bladder.' A morbid condition, which consists in the formation of cysts in the bladder.

NEPHROCOLICA, Colica nephretica.

NEPHRODES, Nephroid.

NEPHRODIUM FILIX MAS, Polypodium filix mas.

NEPHROG'RAPHY, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the kidney.

NEPHROHÆ'MIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of the kidney.

NEPH'ROID, Nephroides, Nephro'des, Reniform'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Reniform. Having a resemblance to a kidney—as 'nephroid cancer,' so called because the morbid growth resembles the kidney in structure.

NEPHROLITHIASIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and λίθος, 'a stone.' The disease of calculus in the kidney; Lith'ia renal'is, Lith'iasis nephrit'ica, L. Renal'is. See Gravel.

NEPHROLITHIC, same etymon. Belonging to calculi in the kidneys. This epithet has been applied to ischuria, occasioned by calculi formed in the kidneys.

NEPHRO-LITHOTOMY, Nephrotomy.

NEPHROLOGY, Nephrolog'ia, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' A treatise on the kidneys. Dissertation on the kidneys and their functions.

NEPHROMALACIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and μαλακία, 'softness.' Softening of the kidney.

NEPHROMETRÆ, Psœo.

NEPHROMYCUS, Tumor renal'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and μυκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the kidney.

NEPHROPHLEGMATIC, Nephro-phlegmat'icus, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φλεγμα, φλεγματος, 'phlegm.' A name given, by some authors, to ischuria produced by mucus contained in the urine.

NEPHROPHLEGMONE, Nephritis.

NEPHROPHTHISIS, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φθισις, 'consumption.' Phthisis from suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPLETHORIC, Nephro-plethor'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πληθωρα, 'plethora.' Belonging to plethora of the kidneys. An epithet given to ischuria dependent upon this cause.

NEPHROPYIC, Nephro-py'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πυον, 'pus.' Belonging to suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPYOSIS, Nephrapostasis, Nephrelcosis.

NEPHRORRHAG'IA, Hæmatu'ria renal'is, Hæmorrhag'ia renum, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ρραγη, 'rupture,' Proflu'vium sanguinis e renibus. Hemorrhage from the kidney.

NEPHROS, Kidney.

NEPHROSCLE'RIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and σκληρία, 'hardness,' Indura'tio renum. Induration of the kidneys.

NEPHROSPASTIC, Nephrospas'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and σπασω, 'I draw.' That which depends upon spasm of the kidney. An epithet given to a variety of ischuria.

NEPHROTHROMBOID, Nephro-thrombō'idēs, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and θρομβος, 'a clot.' That which depends upon clots of blood, contained in the kidneys or their ducts. An epithet for a species of ischuria.

NEPHROT'OMY, Nephro-lithot'omy, Nephrotom'ia, Nephro-lithoton'ia, Sectio renal'is, S. renis, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Dissection of the kidney. Also, an operation proposed with the view of extracting calculi formed in the kidney, by means of an incision into the tissue of that organ.

NEPHRUS, Kidney.

NÉRION, Nerium oleander.

NÉRIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nérís is on the high road from Moulins to Limoges, eighty leagues from Paris. There are four springs, the water of which is clear, inodorous, tasteless, and has an unctuous feel. It contains carbonic acid gas, carbonate of soda, and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, silic, and an animal matter to which its 'oleaginous' property is probably owing. The waters are generally used in the form of thermal baths.

NERIUM, from νηρος, 'humid,' because growing in moist places. N. oleander.

NERIUM ANTIDYSENTERICUM, Wright'ia antidysenter'ica. The tree which affords the Codagapala Bark. Cones'si cortex, Tillicher'ry cortex, Cortex proflu'vii. Family, Apocynæ. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. (F.) Codagapale, Cropale. The bark of this Malabar tree is of a black colour, externally, and is generally covered with a white moss or scurf. It has an austere, bitter taste, and is hence recommended as an astringent in diarrhoea, dysentery, &c.

NERIUM OLEANDER, Nerium, Rhododaph'nis, Rosa'go, (F.) Laurier rose, Lanrose, Nérion, Rosage, Rhododaphné. The leaves are reputed to be narcotic. The infusion is employed internally, in herpetic affections, and the powder, incorporated with lard, is used in the itch.

NERONIA'NA seu NERONICA (PHLEBOTOM'IA.) An epithet given, for some cause, to phlebotomy, when more than one vein was opened on the same day, or to bleeding coup sur coup. Termed Neroniana, because the philosopher Seneca was bled to death under Nero [?].

NERPRUN PURGATIF, Rhamnus.

NERVE, Nervus, Neuron, νεῦρον, 'a string,' (F.) Nerf, Neuron and Nervus meant also, with the ancients, a tendon and a ligament, Partes nervosæ; and hence the different acceptations of 'nervous'; — 'a man of nerve—a strong, nervous man; and a weak, nervous woman.' The nerves are tubular cords of the same substance as that which composes the encephalon and spinal marrow. They extend from one or other of the nervous centres to every part of the body, communicating, frequently, with each other; forming plexuses, and, occasionally, ganglions; and being, at length, lost in the parenchyma of organs. There are 42 pairs, and, according to their origin, they are termed Cranial or Encephalic, and Spinal. Each nerve is composed of several filaments or cords placed alongside each other, and is surrounded by a neurilemma. The encephalic nerves, in general, have only one root in the brain, whilst the spinal arise from the marrow by two roots: the one from an anterior fasciculus of filaments, the other from a posterior, separated from each other by the Ligamentum denticulatum; uniting outside this ligament, and presenting, near the intervertebral foramen, a ganglion formed only by the posterior root. The two roots make, afterwards, but one nerve; and, like the encephalic nerves, proceed to their destination, subdividing into rami and ramusculi, until they are finally lost in the texture of the organs. The trunks first formed are commonly round, and proceed alone, or accompany the great vessels, being placed in the areolar spaces which separate the organs, and are thus protected from injury. Their manner of termination we are not acquainted with; whether the nervous pulp, for instance, as is more probably the fact, be distributed or lost in a membrane, as seems to be the case with the nerves of sight, hearing, and smell,—or are looped. Certain it is, that there is considerable difference in the organs, as respects the quantity of nerves that terminate in them; and the particular arrangement of the nervous extremities. Some organs have numerous nerves; others seem to have none: a circumstance which influences considerably the sensibility of parts.

The Encephalic Nerves arise from the encephalon, or are inserted into it; (according as we consider the brain the origin or termination of the nerves;) and make their exit by foramina at the base of the skull. They are 12 in number. The spinal nerves are 31 in number, 8 cervical, 12 dorsal, 5 lumbar, and 6 sacral: the four inferior cervical being much larger than the superior, because they furnish the nerves of the upper extremities.

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF THE NERVES.

I. Cranial or Encephalic Nerves.

1. Olfactory (1st pair.)	} Divided into internal, external, and middle branches which are distributed on the Schneiderian membrane.	6. Abducentes (6th pair.)	} To the rectus externus oculi. 1. At its exit from the cranium, the posterior antricular, stylohyoid, and infra-mastoid , to the pavilion of the ear, the mastoid process, the digastricus, and the muscles attached to the styloid process.
2. Optic (2d pair.)		Terminate in the retina.
3. Motors Oculorum . (3d pair.)	} Superior Branch. To the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris. Inferior Branch. To the rectus internus, rectus inferior and lesser oblique muscles; a filament which goes to the ophthalmic ganglion.	8. Auditory (Portio mollis of the 7th pair.)	} To the vestibule, semi circular canals, and cochlea.
4. Patheticæ (4th pair.)		To the greater oblique muscle of the eye. Ophthalmic Branch. Divided into three branches. 1. The lacrimal branch , to the lacrimal gland and upper eye-lid. 2. Frontal branch , to the forehead and upper eyelid. 3. Nasal branch , to the eyelids, nasal fosse, and nose.
5. 1st Trigeminum . (5th pair.)	} Superior Maxillary Branch. 1. The orbital branch , to the orbit. 2. The posterior and superior dental , to the last three molar teeth and gums. 3. The anterior dental , to the incisor, canine, and two lesser molars. 4. Infra-orbital , to the upper lip cheek, and nose. Inferior Maxillary Branch. 1. Temporal profound branches, to the temporal muscle. 2. Masseterine branch, to the masseter muscle. 3. Buccal , to the inner surface of the cheek. 4. Pterygoid , to the internal pterygoid muscle. 5. Lingual , to the mucous membrane of the tongue. 6. Inferior dental , to the teeth of the lower jaw, and to the lower lip. 7. Auricular branch, to the pavilion of the ear and forehead.	10. Par Vagum (8th pair.)	} 1. IN THE NECK ,—a pharyngeal branch to the pharynx; superior laryngeal branch to the larynx, and to some muscles of the inferior hyoid region, Cardiac branches to the cardiac plexus. 2. IN THE CHEST ,—the inferior laryngeal branch to the larynx pulmonary branches, which form the plexus of the same name: oesophageal branches to the œsophagus. 3. IN THE ABDOMEN ,— gastric branches to the pænetics of the stomach: filaments which go to the neighbouring plexuses. At its exit from the cranium—the necessary of the pneumogastric nerve anastomosing with this nerve. In the neck—filaments to the træpezium muscles.
		11. Spinal or Accessory of Willis (9th pair.)
	12. Hypoglossal (9th pair.)

II. Spinal or Vertebral Nerves.

1. Cervical Nerves.

1st Cervical Pair..... { Anterior Branch. Anastomosing par arcade with the second pair.
 2d Cervical Pair..... { Anterior Branch. A branch anastomosing with the first pair: a branch which goes to the cervical plexus.
 3d and 4th Cervical Pairs..... { Anterior Branch. Concurring in the cervical plexus.
 The Posterior Branch of these four pairs ramifies on the occiput and muscles of the superficial and deep-seated cervico-occipital regions.

DESCENDING BRANCHES.—1. Internal descending, anastomosing with a branch of the hypoglossus. 2. Puritic branch, to the diaphragm. 3. External descending branches, dividing into supra-clavicular, supra-acromial, infra-clavicular, and cervicales profundi, to the muscles and integuments of the upper part of the chest and shoulder, to the trapezius, levator scapulae, rhomboides, &c.

ASCENDING BRANCHES.—1. Mastoid, to the posterior and lateral part of the head and the inner surface of the pavilion of the ear. 2. Auricular, to the parotid gland and pavilion of the ear.

Superficial Cervical Branches. (2.) To the platysma myoides, digastricus, the integuments of the neck, &c.

Anterior Branches. Assisting in the formation of the brachial plexus.

Posterior Branches. To the muscles and integuments of the posterior part of the neck and upper part of the back.

1. Thoracic Branches. (2.) to the anterior and lateral parts of the chest. 2. Supra-scapular branch to the muscles of the posterior scapular region. 3. Infra-scapular branches (3.) to the subscapularis, teres major, teres minor, and latissimus dorsi. 4. The brachial interna cutaneous, to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the ulnar margin. 5. The brachial externa cutaneous, principally to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the radial margin. 6. The median nerve, to the forearm, hand, and palmar surface of all the fingers. 7. The cubital nerve, to the last two fingers. 8. The radial, to the first three. 9. The axillary, around the shoulder-joint, and to the neighbouring muscles.

2. Dorsal Nerves, (Nervi dorsales.)

1st Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the brachial plexus.
 2d and 3d Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. An intercostal and brachial branch.
 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the intercostals, triangulæ sterni, pectoralis major, and to the skin. External branches to the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs..... { integuments of the chest, the obliquus externus abdominis, and the skin of the abdomen.

8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th Dorsal Pairs... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the transversalis, obliquus internus, and rectus muscles, and to the skin of the abdomen. External branches, to the integuments of the chest, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen.

12th Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the first lumbar nerve, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen as far as the iliac crest.

The Posterior Branches of the dorsal nerves are distributed to the muscles and integuments of the back and loins.

3. Lumbar Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Lumbar Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Concurring to form the lumbar plexus.

5th Pair..... { Anterior Branch. Aiding in forming the sciatic plexus.

The Posterior Branches of the lumbar nerves are distributed to the loins, sacrum, and nates.

1. Musculo-cutaneous Branches, to the number of three. One superior, to the muscles of the abdomen, to the fold of the groin, and the scrotum: a middle, to the integuments and muscles of the abdomen: and an inferior, to the skin of the thigh. 2. A genito-crural branch to the integuments of the scrotum, the groin, and the thigh. 3. The crural nerve, to the integuments and muscles of the thigh, skin of the leg, and foot. 4. The obturator nerve, to the muscles at the inner part of the thigh. 5. The lumbo-sacral, to the sciatic plexus. It gives off the gluteal nerve to the glutei muscles.

Lumbar Plexus.....

4. Sacral Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Sacral Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. They form by their union the sciatic plexus.

5th and 6th Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. To the parts in the vicinity of the coccyx.

The Posterior Branches ramify on the muscles and integuments of the nates.

1. Hæmorrhoidal nerves, to the rectum. 2. Vesical, to the bladder. 3. Uterine and vaginal, to the vagina and uterus. 4. Inferior gluteal, to the gluteal muscles, perinaeum, and integuments of the posterior part of the thigh. 5. Pubic, to the perinaeum, penis, or vulva. 6. Sciatic, divided into the external popliteal, which ramifies on the integuments and muscles of the external side of the leg, on the dorsum of the foot, and the dorsal surface of the toes: and into the internal popliteal, distributed on the dorsal surface of the two last toes, to the muscles of the foot, and on the plantar surface of all the toes.

Sciatic Plexus.....

Classifications of the nerves have been recommended according to their uses, in preference to the ordinary anatomical arrangement. It has been remarked that the encephalic nerves have generally one root; the spinal two. Experiments and pathological facts have proved, that the anterior column of the marrow and the anterior roots of the spinal nerves are inservient to volition or voluntary motion: and that the posterior column and roots are destined for sensibility. Hence the spinal nerves, which have two roots, must be the conductors both of motion and feeling; whilst the encephalic, which, with but few exceptions, have but one, can possess but one of these properties:—they must be either sensitive or motor, according as they arise from the posterior or anterior column of the medulla: and, consequently, three classes of nerves may be distinguished.

- | | | |
|-----------------------------------|---|---|
| 1. Sensory | } | Arising, by a single root, from the posterior column of the medulla oblongata or spinal marrow. |
| 2. Motor | | Arising, by a single root, from the anterior column of the same parts. |
| 3. Sensory and Motor | | Which have two roots: one from the anterior, and one from the posterior column. |

According to Sir Charles Bell, the medulla oblongata is composed of three columns on each side; an anterior, a middle, and a posterior. Whilst the anterior and posterior columns produce the nerves of motion and sensation respectively, the middle, according to Sir Charles, gives rise to a third set of nerves—the respiratory. To this order belong:—

1. The accessory nerve of Willis, or superior respiratory.
2. The par vagum.
3. The glosso-pharyngeal.
4. The facial or respiratory of the face.
5. The phrenic.
6. A nerve which has the same origin as the phrenic;—the external respiratory.

When a horse has been hard-riden, every one of these nerves is in action.

This division is now, however, generally abandoned, and there does not seem to be a third column, especially destined for respiration.

Sir C. Bell, again, reduced the system of nerves to two great classes. 1. Those that are regular, primitive, symmetrical, and common to all animals, from the worm to man; which have double roots, and preside over sensibility and motion: and, 2. The irregular or superadded, which are added to the preceding, in proportion as the organization of animals offers new or more complicated organs. To the first class belong all the spinal nerves and at least one encephalic—the 5th pair;—to the second, the rest of the nervous system.

Dr. Marshall Hall has proposed a division of the nervous system, which is calculated to explain many of the anomalous circumstances so frequently witnessed. He proposes to divide all the nerves into, 1. The cerebral or the sentient and voluntary. 2. The true spinal or excito-motory. 3. The ganglionic or cyclo-ganglionic,—the nutrient and secretory. If the sentient and voluntary functions be destroyed by a blow upon the head, the sphincter muscles will still contract when irritated, because the irritation is conveyed to the spine, and the reflex action takes place to the muscle so as to throw it into contraction. But if the spinal marrow be now destroyed, the sphincters remain entirely motionless, because the centre of the system is destroyed. Dr. Hall thinks that a peculiar set of nerves constitutes, with the vesicular centre of the marrow as their axis, the second subdivision of the nervous system; and as those of the first subdivision are distinguished into sentient and voluntary, these may be distinguished into the excitor and motory. The first, or the excitor nerves, pursue their course principally from internal surfaces, characterized by peculiar excitabilities, to the centre of the medulla oblongata and m. spinalis: the second, or the motor nerves, pursue a reflex course from the medulla to the muscles, having peculiar actions concerned principally in ingestion and egestion. The motions connected with the first or cerebral subdivision are sometimes, indeed frequently, spontaneous; those connected with the true spinal are, he believes, always excited. Dr. Hall thinks, too, that there is good reason for viewing the fifth, and posterior spinal nerves as constituting an external ganglionic system for the nutrition of the external organs; and he proposes to divide the ganglionic subdivision of the nervous system into, 1. The internal ganglionic, which includes that usually denominated the sympathetic, and probably filaments of the pneumogastric; and, 2. The external ganglionic, embracing the fifth and posterior spinal nerves. To the cerebral system he assigns all diseases of sensation, perception, judgment, and volition—therefore all painful, mental, and comatose, and some paralytic diseases. To the true spinal, excito-motory, reflex, or diastaltic nervous system, belong all spasmodic and certain paralytic diseases. He properly adds, that these two parts of the nervous system influence each other both in health and disease, as they both influence the ganglionic system.

The main views of Dr. Hall on the excito-motory function have been generally embraced.

The following tabular view of the arrangement and connexions of the nerves and nervous centres has been given by Dr. Carpenter. It affords a good general view, although some of the details might admit of modification.

The nerves are sheathed, and are united to the neighbouring parts, by an abundant layer of fatty areolar texture, which sends, inwards, prolongations that separate the nervous cords and filaments from each other. The arterial trunks, distributed to them, transmit branches into their interior. The veins follow the same course as the arteries. Absorbents are not easily traced even on the greatest trunks.

NERVE FIBRES, Fila ner'væ, Fibræ ner'væ. In the nerves of the higher animals, two forms of nerve fibre exist—the tubular, and the gelatinous. In the minute fibrils or tubules, Tubuli ner'væ, full of nervous matter, which constitute the former, there is a difference between the central and peripheral portion:—the former has been called the axis cylinder and primitive band; the latter, the medullary or white substance of Schwann,—being that to which the peculiarly white aspect of cerebrospinal nerves is principally due. In the gelatinous fibre, no tubular envelope can be distinguished, and the white substance of Schwann seems to be wanting. It contains numerous cell-nuclei. See Neurine.

NERVI MOLLES. 'Soft nerves.' The anterior branches of the superior cervical ganglion of the great sympathetic, which accompany the carotid artery and its branches, around which they form intricate plexuses, and, here and there, small ganglia. They are called molles from their softness, and subru'fi, from their reddish hue.

NERVI ODORATORII, Olfactory nerves—n. Reversivi, Laryngeal inferior nerves—n. Subru'fi, Nervi molles—n. Vulneratio, Neurotrosis.

NERVIMOTIION, Nervimotio, from nervus, 'nerve,' and motio, 'motion.' A name given, by M. Dutrochet, to the movement which is caused in the organs of the senses by external agents, and transmitted to the muscles by the nerves.

NERVIMOTOR, (F.) Nervimoteur. An epithet given, by M. Dutrochet, to external agents, which are capable of causing nervous motion.

NERVINE, Nervi'vus, Nervol'ic, Neur'ic, Antineurotic, Antineuropath'ic, (F.) Néerotique, from nervus, 'a nerve.' A medicine which acts on the nervous system.

NERVOUS, Nervo'sus, Neuro'des, Nerv'eus, Neur'icus, (F.) Nerveux. Same etymon. Relating or belonging to the nerves. Strong. Also, weak, irritable.

NERVOUS ATTACK, (F.) Attaque des nerfs, is an affection accompanied with spasm, pain, and different nervous symptoms, to which impressible individuals are liable.

NERVOUS CENTRES, see Centres, nervous.

NERVOUS DIATHESIS is termed Atax'ia spir'ituum, Anom'ia nervo'rum, Status nervo'sus seu crethit'icus, Diath'es'is seu Constit'io nervo'sa, Nerv'ousness. Medically, nervousness means unusual impressibility of the nervous system. Formerly, it signified strength, force, and vigour. Recently, it has been applied to a hypochondriacal condition verging upon insanity, occasionally occurring in those in whom the brain has been unduly tasked;—a condition termed by some cerebro'pathy; by others, brain-fog.

NERVOUS DISEASES, Morbi nervo'si, (F.) Maladies nerveuses. Affections seated in the nervous system. To purely functional disease of the nerves, Dr. Laycock has given the name neur'o'mia, and to the class of diseases he applies the epithet neur'o'mic.

NERVOUS FLUID, Nervous principle, Flu'idum seu Liq'u'idum ner'veum, Succus nervo'sus, Spir'itus vital'is. The fluid which is supposed to circulate through the nerves, and which has been regarded as the agent of sensation and motion. Of this fluid we know nothing, except that it resembles, in many respects, the electric or galvanic. It was formerly called Animal spirits, Spir'itus animal'es, (F.) Esprits animaux.

NERVOUS PAIN, Neuralgia.

NERVOUS POWER, Nerve power, Via nervo'sa seu nervo'rum, Neurodyn'amia, Neurodyn'amia. The power of the nerves as exhibited in the living organism.

NEURAL; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Relating to a nerve or to the nervous system.

NEURAL ARCH. The arch formed by the posterior projections connected with the body of the vertebra, which protect the medulla.

NEURAL AXIS, see Encephalon—n. Spines, Spinous processes.

NEURALGIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Rheumatismus spir'itus nervo'sus, Neurodyn'ia, (F.) Néuralgie, Néurodyn'ie, Ner- vous pain. A generic name for a certain number of diseases, the chief symptom of which is a very acute pain, exacerbating or intermitting, which follows the course of a nervous branch, extends to its ramifications, and seems, therefore, to be seated in the nerve. The principal neuralgiæ have been distinguished by the names facial (of which the infra-orbital, maxillary, and frontal are but divisions)—the ilio-scrotal, femoro-popliteal, femoro-pretibial, plantar, and carbito-digital. A division of anomalous neuralgiæ has likewise been admitted.

All varieties of neuralgia are obstinate, and the greatest diversity of means has been made use of:—bleeding, general and local,—emetics, purgatives, rubefacients, vesicants, actual cautery, narcotics, mercurial frictions, electricity; destruction of a portion of the nerve, &c. The most successful remedy, perhaps, is the carbonate of iron, given in doses of some magnitude; as, for instance, ℞ss or ℞ij, twice or thrice a day, in molasses. This plan of treatment, continued for a month or two, will often relieve, and ultimately remove this much dreaded affection. The mode in which it acts is by no means clear; but it is almost as certain as any other remedy used in disease in producing its salutary effects. The bowels must be kept free; and all inflammatory symptoms removed during its administration.

NEURALGIA, ANOM'ALOUS. Under this name Chaussier has included different neuroses, some of which are characterized by acute pains circumscribed within a short compass, or extending by irradiations, but not having their seat in the course of a nerve; and others which are occasioned by tumours in the course of a nerve, or which succeed contusions or incomplete divisions of nerves.

NEURALGIA BRACHIALIS, Brachialgia—n. Brachio-thoracica, Angina pectoris—n. Cerebralis, Hemieranica—n. Cœliaca, Neuralgia of the solar plexus (Romberg)—n. Cruralis, N. femoro-tibialis.

NEURALGIA CU'BITO-DIGITALIS, Ischias nervosa digitalis. In this variety the pain extends from the part where the nerve passes under the inner condyle to the back of the hand and to its cubital edge.

NEURALGIA DENTALIS, Odontalgia nervosa.

NEURALGIA, FA'CIAL, Neuralgia faciei, Trismus maxillaris seu Dolorif'icus seu Clon'icus, Opsial'gia, Dolor crucians faciei seu faciei period'icus, Hemicran'ia idiopath'ica, Autal'gia dolorosa, Tic douloureux, Dolor faciei seu faciei typp'ico caractere seu faciei Fothergill'i, Rheumatismus caucro'sus, Rheumatismus larva'tus, Prosopalg'ia, Prosopodyn'ia, Febris top'ica, Ophthalmodynia period'ica, Tortura Oris, Affectus spasmodico-convulsivus Labiorum, Face ague, is characterized by acute lancinating pains, returning at intervals; and by twinges in certain parts of the face, producing convulsive twitches in the corresponding muscles. It may be seated in the frontal nerve, in the infra-orbital, or in the maxillary branch of the fifth pair.

Metopodyn'ia, Brow-ague, Neural'gia frontalis, Ophthalmodynia, Tic douloureux, Dolor period'icus, &c., commences at the superciliary foramen and extends along the ramifications of the frontal nerve that are distributed on the forehead, upper eyelid, caruncula lacrymalis, and nasal angle of the eyelids. Sometimes it is felt particularly in the orbit.

Neuralgia infra-orbitaria, Dolor faciei atrox, Rheumatismus caucro'sus, Trismus clon'icus, Prosopalg'ia, Febris top'ica, Odontalg'ia remit'tens et intermit'tens, Hemicran'ia sava, Infra-orbital neuralgia, Tic douloureux, is chiefly felt in the infra-orbital foramen, whence it passes to the cheek, upper lip, ala nasi, lower eyelid, &c.

In Neuralgia maxillaris, Guathal'gia, Guatho-neural'gia, Tic douloureux, Trismus catarrhalis maxillaris, the pain usually sets out from the mental foramen and passes to the chin, lips, temple, teeth, and tongue.

NEURALGIA, FALSE. A term assigned to pains along a nerve or its ramifications, produced by some body compressing it,—those pains terminating with the removal of the compressing cause.

NEURALGIA FEM'ORO-POPLITÆ'A, N. Ischiad'ica, Sciatic'ica, Schias, Malum ischiad'icum, Morbus ischiad'icus, Passio ischiad'ica, Ischiagra, Ischial'gia, Ischio'sis, Ischioneural'gia, Coxal'gia, Dolor Ischiad'icus nervosus, Ischias, I. nervosa Cotuquii seu Cotunnii, I. nervosa post'ica seu rheumatica, Neurisch'ias, Cox'agra, Ischiad'ica, Ischoneural'gia, (Prov. Devonshire) Bone-shove, (F.) Sciaticque, Goutte sciaticque. This is characterized by pain following the great sciatic nerve from the ischiatic notch to the ham, and along the peroneal surface of the leg to the sole of the foot.

NEURALGIA FEM'ORO-PRÆTIBIA'LIS, N. crural, Ischias nervosa anti'ca, Scelal'gia anti'ca. In this, the pain, setting out from the groin, spreads along the fore part of the thigh, and passes down, chiefly on the inner side of the leg, to the inner ankle and back of the foot.

NEURALGIA OF THE HEART, Angina pectoris—n. Hepatica, Hepatalgia.

NEURALGIA ILIO-SCROTAL has been rarely observed. It is characterized by a very acute pain, in the course of the branches of the first lumbar pair; this pain follows the crista ilii and accompanies the spermatic vessels to the testicle, which is often painfully retracted.

NEURALGIA, LEAD, see Lead rheumatism—n. Lienis, Splenalgia.

NEURALGIA MAMMÆ, Ir'ritable breast. An exceedingly painful affection of the female mamma, unaccompanied by inflammation.

NEURALGIA PLANTA'RIS. This is rare; and the pain is confined to the course of the plantar nerves.

NEURALGIA RENUM, Nephralgia—n. Spinalis, Spinal irritation—n. Testis, Orchidalgia.

NEURANAGENNE'SIS, Neuranaph'ysis, neuropon, 'a nerve,' and αναγεννω, 'to regenerate.' Regeneration or renewal of a nerve.

NEURANAPHYSIS, Neuranagenesis.

NEURAPOPHYSIS, see Verteb're.

NEURASTHENIA, Neurasth'emia, Debilitas nervosa. Debility or impaired activity of the nerves; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and ασθησια, 'debility.'—See Irritable.

NEURECTOM'IA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and εκτομη, 'excision.' Excision of a nerve.

NEURICUS, Nervous.

NEURILEM'MA, Neurile'ma, Neurily'ma, Neurylemu, Perin'en'rium, Fis'tula seu Tu'bulus seu Cap'sula seu Involucrum nervorum, Membrana seu Membran'ula seu Tu'bica seu Indumentum nervorum, Vag'ina nervorum; (F.) Névrilème, Périnèvre; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The fine transparent, and apparently fibrous membrane that surrounds the nerves—to every filament of which it forms a true canal.

Robin restricts the term périnèvre to the structure that invests the primitive bundles of nerves; and every nervous filament. It differs from the neurilemma, in its ordinary acceptation, which forms a coat of some thickness in the larger nerves, and supports the nutrient vessels, whilst the périnèvre exhibits no capillaries.

NEURILEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILEMMITIS, Neurilemm'itis, Neurilemmat'itis, Neuril'itis, (F.) Névrilémite, from neurilemma, and itis, denoting inflammation. Same etymon. Inflammation of the neurilemma.

NEURILITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILYMA, Neurilemma.

NEURINE, Medulla nervorum, (F.) Névine, Albumine cérébrale ou du cerveau, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' the substance of which the nervous system is composed. It consists chiefly of albumen and a peculiar fatty matter, associated with phosphorus. There are two kinds of neurine—the one vesicular or consisting essentially of nerve vesicles or nerve cells or corpuscles, or, as they are sometimes called, from their prevailing in the ganglia—ganglion corpuscles and ganglion globules; the other, the tubular, formed—as the word imports—of tubules. The former is the eineritons or cortical nervous matter of the older anatomists;—the latter, the white or medullary. The vesicular neurine has appeared to be restricted to the production and distribution of nerve-power; the tubular, to its conduction; yet the experiments of Dr. Brown-Séquard show, that the former conveys sensitive impressions from the posterior spinal roots to the brain.

NEURISCHIAS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitæa.

NEURITIC, Nervine.

NEURITIS, Inflammatio nervorum, Neurophlogosis, Neurophlegmoné, (F.) Inflammation des Nerfs, Névrite, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nerve.

NEUROBLACIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and βλακεια, 'stupor.' Insensibility of the nerves.

NEUROCHONDRODES, from νευρον, 'a sinew,' χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' A hard substance between a sinew and a cartilage.

NEURODES, Nervous.

NEURODYNAMIA, Nervous power.

NEURODYNAMIS, Nervous power.

NEURODYNIA, Neuralgia.

NEUROGAMIA, Magnetism, animal.

NEUROGRAPHY, Neurographia; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the nerves.

NEUROHYPNOLOGY, Neurohypnologia, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' υπνος, 'sleep,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' A name given by Mr. Braid to his theory of magnetic sleep. See Magnetism, animal.

NEURO-HYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

NEUROLEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEUROLOGY, Neurologia, (F.) Névrologie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the nerves.

NEUROMA, (F.) Névrome, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A morbid enlargement of a nerve. Applied to subcutaneous, circumscribed, and highly painful tumours formed on the tissue of the nerves; and likewise to a small, hard, grayish tumour, Neuromatium, Nervous ganglion, painful tubercle, of the size of a pea, which is observed in the course of nerves, and appears to be formed from the neurilemma.

NEUROMALACIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and μαλακεια, 'softening.' Softening of nerves.

NEUROMATION, Neuroma.

NEUROMETERES, Psoæ.

NEUROMYELITIS, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' μυελος, 'marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the medullary matter of the nerves.

NEURON, see Nerve.

NEURONOSOS, Neuronosis, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' A disease of the nerves.

NEURONYGME, Neuronygmus, Neuronyxis, from from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and πυνη, 'puncture;' Punctio nervi. Puncture of a nerve.

NEUROPATHIC, Neuropathicus, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and παθος, 'a disease.' Belonging to disease of the nerves, to Neuropathia or Neuroses.

NEUROPHLEGMONE, Neuritis.

NEUROPHLOGOSIS, Neuritis.

NEUROPLASTY, Neuroplastie, (F.) Névroplastie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and πλαστικός, 'forming.' M. Serres applies this term to a ganglionic alteration of the peripheral nerves.

NEUROPYRA, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEUROPYRETUS, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEUROSES, (F.) Névroses, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A generic name for diseases supposed to have their seat in the nervous system, and which are indicated by disordered sensation, volition, or mental manifestation; without any evident lesion in the structure of the parts, and without any material agent producing them. Such is the usual definition. Broussais attributes them to a state of irritation of the brain and spinal marrow.

NEURO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

NEUROSPASMI, see Spasm.

NEUROSTHENIA, (F.) Névrosthénie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and σθενια, 'strength.' Excess of nervous irritation. Nervous irritation.

NEUROTHELIC APPARATUS, Corpus papillare.

NEUROTIC, Nervine.

NEUROTICA, Diseases of the nervous function. The 4th class of Good's Nosology.

NEUROTOME, Nérotome.

NEUROTOMY, Neurotomia, (F.) Névrotomie. Same etymon. Dissection of nerves. Also, an incised wound of a nerve.

NEUROTROSIS, Neurotrosmas, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τραωσις, 'wounding.' Nervi vulneratio. Wound or wounding of a nerve.

NEUROTOSMUS, Neurotrosmus.

NEURYMEN, Neurilemma.

NEUTA, Neutha. A membrane, according to Paracelsus, which covers the eyes and ears of the fetus in utero.

NEUTRAL, from neuter, 'neither.' Belonging to neither in particular.

NEUTRAL SALTS, Secundary salts, (F.) Sels neutres. Salts, composed of two primitive saline substances, combined together, and not possessing the characters of acid or of base.

NÉVIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Thermal springs in the department of Allier, France. Temperature, 136° to 148° Fahrenheit.

NÉVRALGIE, Neuralgia—n. du Foie, Hepatalgia—n. des Reins, Nephralgia—n. de l'Utérus, Hysteralgia.

NÉVRILÈME, Neurilemma.

NÉVRILÉMITE, Neurilemmitis.

NÉVRINE, Neurine.

NÉVRITE, Neuritis.

NÉVRODYNIE, Neuralgia.

NÉVROLOGIE, Neurology.

NÉVROME, Neuroma.

NÉVROSE DU CŒUR, Angina pectoris.

NEVROSES, Neuroses.

NÉVROSTHÉNIE, Neurosthenia.

NÉVROTHÈLE, from νευρον, 'nerve,' and θηλη, 'papilla.' Concerning the papillæ of the skin.

APPAREIL NÉVROTHÈLE. The papillary apparatus, or arrangement of the skin in the aggregate.—Breschet.

NÉVROTOME, Neurotome, Neurotomus; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' An instrument used by anatomists to dissect the nerves. It is a long and very narrow scalpel, having two edges.

NÉVROTOMIE, Neurotomy.

NEVUS, Nævus.

NEW JERSEY, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the upper part of Morris county and in the county of Hunterdon, near the top of Musconetcong mountain, there are chalybeate springs, which are resorted to. See Schooley's Mountain.

NEW YORK, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief waters are those of Saratoga, Ballston, Sharon, and Avon.

NEXUS STAMINEUS OCULI, Ciliary body.

NEZ, Nasus.

NGERENGERE. A singular disease, with the New Zealanders, which Dr. Arthur S. Thomson considers to be a variety of such diseases as the Elephantiasis Græcorum, Lepra of the Cosacks, &c., and which he proposes to call Lepra gangræno'sa.

NIANDRIA ANOMALA, Anisodus luridus.

NICARAGUA WOOD, see Cæsalpinia.

NIC'COLI SALES, Salts of Nickel, (F.) Sels de Nickel. These salts are gentle tonics, and have been given with advantage in periodic headache, and in chlorosis and amenorrhœa. The dose of the sulphate is gr. ss or gr. j, three times a day.

NICCOLUM, Nickel.

NICE, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Nice possesses some advantages over the neighbouring climates of Provence and Italy, being free from the sirocco of the latter, and protected from the mistral of the former. Spring is the most unfavourable season. The climate is very dry. It has been a great winter retreat for the consumptive; but does not deserve the encomiums that have been passed upon it.

NICKAR TREE, Gymnocladus Canadensis.

NICKEL, Niccolum, from (G.) Nickel, 'a prostitute.' A term of detraction, having been applied by the old German writers to what was regarded as a kind of false copper ore. A white malleable metal, s. g. 8.8; less oxidizable than iron. The sulphate has been given as a tonic in the dose of half a grain to a grain.

NICODEMI O'LEUM, Oil of Nicodemus. An oil made by digesting, for some time, — in a mixture of white wine and olive oil, — old turpentine, litharge, aloes, saffron, oxyd of zinc, &c.

NICOTIANA, N. tabacum — n. Minor, N. rustica.

NICOTIANA RUS'TICA, called after Nicot, who carried it to Europe; N. minor, Priapeia, Hyoscyamus luteus, English or Wild Tobacco. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves possess the properties of tobacco, but are milder.

NICOTIANA TAB'ACUM, Nicotiana, Herba tabaci, Tabacum, Petum, Petum, Hyoscyamus Peruvia'nus, Tobacco, Virgilia tobacco, Drunkwort, (F.) Tabac, Nicotiane. Tobacco is a violent acro-narcotic: its properties seeming to depend upon a peculiar principle, Nicotin or Nicotianin. It is narcotic, sedative, diuretic, emetic, cathartic, and errhine. In incarcerated hernia, it is injected, in the form of smoke or infusion, but requires great caution. It is extensively and habitually used as an errhine and sialogogue. The infusion is used to kill vermin, and in some cutaneous eruptions.

NICOTIANE, Nicotiana tabacum.

NICOTIANIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.

NICOTIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.

NICTATIO, Hippus, Nictatio.

NICTATION, Nictatio, Nictatio, from nictare, nictatum, 'to wink.' Clonus nictatio, Ble- pharismus, Palpebratio, Twinkling of the eye, (F.) Cignotement, Cillement. A rapid and repeated movement of the eyelids, which open and shut alternately. As occasionally performed, it is physiological; if repeatedly, a disease. It seems to be executed chiefly by the motor 7th pair of nerves; but it is necessary that the excitor 5th pair should likewise be in a state of integrity.

NIDAMENTUM, Decidua.

NIDDICK, Nucha.

NIDOREUX, Nidorous.

NIDOROUS, Nidoro'sus, (F.) Nidoreux, from Nidor, Cnissa, 'the smell of any thing burnt,' &c. Having the smell of burnt or corrupt animal matter.

NIDUS, Nidus hirundinis.

NIDUS HIRUNDINIS, Nidus, Swallows' Nest. A deep fossa in the cerebellum — so called from its fancied resemblance — situate between the velum medullare posterius in front, and the nodulus and uvula behind.

NIEDERBRONN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters in the department of Bas-Rhin, France, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, and carbonic acid.

NIELLE, Nigella.

NIEPA BARK, see Samadera Indica.

NIGELLA, Coptis.

NIGEL'LA, N. Sotiv'ra; Ord. Ranunculaceæ; (nigrella, from niger, 'black.') Melan'thinum, Cuminum Nigrum, Fennel flower, Nutmeg flower, Devil in a bush, (F.) Nigelle, Nielle, Faux cumin, Fleur Sainte-Catherine. This small southern European and Syrian plant was formerly used medicinally as an expectorant and deobstruent, errhine, sialogogue, &c.

NIGELLE, Nigella.

NIGHT-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.

NIGHT EYES, Crusta genu equinæ — n. Mare, Inebus.

NIGHTSHADE, AMERICAN, Phytolacca decandra — n. Bittersweet, Solanum dulcamara — n. Common, Solanum — n. Deadly, Atropa belladonna — n. Enchanter's, Circæa Lutetiana — n. Garden, Solanum — n. Palestine, Solanum sanctum — n. Stinking, Hyoscyamus niger — n. Vine, Solanum dulcamara — n. Woody, Solanum dulcamara.

NIGREDO À SOLE, Ephelides.

NIGRITA, Negro.

NIGRITIES, Melanopathia — n. Ossium, Caries.

NIGRITISM, Melanopathia.

NIGRITUDO, Melanosis — n. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

NIGROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NIGROR, Melasma.

NIGRUM OCULI, Pupil.

NIHIL ALBUM, Zinci oxydum — n. Griseum, Zinci oxydum.

NILIACUM, Mel.

NIMA QUASSIÓ'DES, Simal'ya quassioides, a native of Nepal and the Himalaya mountains, is as bitter as quassia, and is used like it.

NINDSIN, Sium ninsi.

NINE BARK, Spirea opulifolia.

NINE-DAY FITS, Trismus nascentium.

NINSI, Sium ninsi.

NINSING, Panax quinquefolium.

NINZIN, Sium ninsi.

NIPPLE, Sax. nypelo. The Teat, Tit, Tet, Dug, Pap, (Old Eng.) Neble, Titty; Acromas'tium. Uber, Staph'yliis, Staphyl'inm, Bubona, Mammil'la, Mammel'la, Papil'la, P. mammae, Uberis apex, Thelē, Tit'hlē, Titthos, Tit'htion, Titthis, (F.) Mamelou, Bout de sein. The conical tubercle, situate at the centre of the breast. Towards the central part of each breast the skin changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint in young females, or a reddish brown in those who have suckled several children. The circle is called the Areola or Anreola of the nipple. The nipple is capable of erection on being excited.

NIPPLE, ARTIFICIAL, Bout de Sein.

NIPPLEWORT, Lapsana.

NIRLES, Herpes phlyctænodes.

NIRMALLEES, Strychnos potatorum.

NIRMILLIES, Strychnos potatorum.

NISUS, Nixus, Peira, Straining, from Lat. nitro, nixus, and nixus, 'to endeavour.' A voluntary retention of the breath, so as to force down the diaphragm; the abdominal muscles being at the same time contracted forcibly. In this manner the contents of the abdomen are compressed; and the evacuation of the fæces, urine, &c., is effected.

NISUS, Effort — n. Formativus, Plastic force.

NISUS PARTURIENTIIUM. The efforts or forcing during parturition.

NITEDULA, Cicindela.

NITON, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs in the Isle of Wight contain iron, and sulphate of alumina and potassa.

NITRAS, Nitrate — n. Hydrargyricus, see Hydrargyri nitras — n. Hydrargyrosus, Hydrargyri nitras — n. Kalicus, Potassæ nitras — n. Lixivie, Potassæ nitras — n. Natrium, Soda, nitrate of — n. Plumbicus, Plumbi nitras — n. Potassæ cum sulphure fusus, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Sub-bisulphicum, Bismuth, sub-nitrate of.

NITRATE, Nitras, Azotate. A salt, formed of a base and nitric acid. Several nitrates are employed in medicine.

NITRATE ACIDE DE MERCURE, see Hydrargyri nitras — n. d'Ammoniaque, Ammoniac nitras — n. d'Argent, Argenti nitras — n. Mercurienx, Hydrargyri nitras.

NITRE, Potassæ nitras — n. Cubic, Soda, nitrate of.

NITRIC, Nitricus, (F.) Nitrique, from nitrum, 'nitre.' Appertaining or relating to nitre.

NITRIC ACID, Acidum nitricum seu azoiticum seu septitium seu nitri, Aqua fortis, Nitrous acid, Spiritus nitri duplex seu nitri fumans seu nitri Glauberi seu nitri ac'idus, Azotic acid, Dephlogisticated nitrons acid, Oxysepton'ic acid, (F.) Acide nitrique ou azotique. Nitric acid is obtained from nitre—Nitrate of potassa. Its odour is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is corrosive, liquid, colourless, and transparent. S. g. 1.500.

Strong nitric acid is rarely used except as an application to foul, indolent ulcers, or to warts. When given internally, it is in the form of the ACIDUM NITRICUM DILUTUM, Spiritus nitri simplex seu nitri vulgaris—Diluted nitric acid, which, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, consists of nitric acid, f $\frac{3}{4}$, water, f $\frac{7}{8}$ ix by measure. Diluted largely with water, it is used, as a drink in fevers of the typhoid kind; in chronic affections of the liver, syphilis, &c.; but in the latter affections, it is not to be depended upon.

NITROGEN, from nitron, 'nitre,' and γενναω, 'I generate.' Azote.

NITROGEN, GASEOUS OXIDE OF, Nitrous oxide, Protoxide of nitrogen or azote, Paradise, In-toxicating or Laughing gas, Dephlogisticated nitrons gas, Gas azoticum oxygenatum. This gas, when respired, produces singular effects; great mental and corporeal excitement; and, generally, so much exhilaration as to render the appellation, "laughing gas" by no means inappropriate. It has not been much used in medicine, although recommended in paralysis. Its effects are too violent and too transient to render it a valuable remedial agent; and, in the delicate, it has been productive of unpleasant effects, inducing palpitation, fainting, and convulsions.

NITROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITROGENE, Azote.

NITROGENIUM, Azote.

NITROGENIZED, Azoted, Azotized, (F.) Azoté. Containing nitrogen or azote:—as a nitrogenized, azoted, or azotized aliment.

NITRO-MURIATIC ACID, Ac'idum nitro-muriaticum seu muriaticum nitro'so-oxygenatum, Mens'tranæ aurî, Nitro-hydrochloric or Hydrochloro-nitric acid, Aqua regia seu styg'ia seu regis Chrysaleæ, (F.) Eau régule. A mixture of the nitric and muriatic acids, has been used in diseases of the liver, in the form of a bath for the feet and legs, made sharply acidulous. It has, also, been employed, and with more uniform results, in cutaneous affections. Whatever advantage it may possess in internal diseases—and these advantages are doubtful—they are probably dependent upon the chlorine formed by the mixture, or upon the properties possessed by the mineral acids in general. See Chlorine.

The Acidum nitro-muriaticum of the Pharmacopœia of the United States is formed by mixing four fluidounces of nitric acid with eight of muriatic acid.

NITROUS OXIDE, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITRUM, Natron, Potassæ nitras — n. Antiquorum, Soda — n. Cubicum, Soda, nitrate of — n. Facetium, Borax — n. Flammans, Ammoniac nitras — n. Lunare, Argenti nitras — n. Prismaticum, Potassæ nitras — n. Rhomboidale, Soda, nitrate of — n. Saturninum, Plumbi nitras — n. Vitriolatum Schroederi, Potassæ sulphas — n. Tabulatum, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Vitriolatum, Potassæ sulphas.

NIX, Snow — n. Fumans, Calx viva — n. Zinci, Zinci oxydum.

NIXUS, Nisus — n. Parturientium, Nisus parturientium.

NOAH'S ARK, Cypripedium luteum.

NOBLE, Nobilis. Principal, Essential.

NOBLE PARTS, Partes essential'es. Some anatomists have given this name to parts, without which life cannot exist; such as the heart, liver, lungs, brain, &c. The organs of generation have, likewise, been so called.

NOCAR, ωκαρ, Torpor Soporificus. Lethargic torpor.

NOCTAMBULATIO, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULISMUS, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULUS, Somnambulist.

NOCTISURGIUM, Somnambulism.

NOCTUINI OC'ULLI. Gray or blue eyes.—Castelli.

NOCTURNA BELLA, Coitus.

NOCTURNAL, Nocturnus, Nycternus, from nox, noctis, 'night.' Relating to night, as Febris nocturna seu nycterna. A fever occurring in the night.

NODDING, Annutio, Nutatio.

NODDLEPOX, Syphilomania.

NODE, Nodus, Enphy'ma exostosis perion'tea, (F.) Nodosité, Nœud; from Hebr. \aleph , 'a heap.' A hard concretion or incrustation, which forms around joints attacked with rheumatism or gout. Some include, under this name, exostoses, articular calculi, ganglions, and even the chronic swellings of the joints known under the name of white swellings.

NODES, Edentulus.

NODI DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers—n. Lactea, Infaretus mamme lacteæ — n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous—n. Hæmorrhoidales, see Hæmorrhoids.

NODOI, Nefrendes.

NODOSIA, see Nefrendes.

NODOSITÉ, Node.

NOD'ULI ARAN'TII, Noduli Morgagni, Corpora Arantii. The small sesamoid bodies situate on the periphery of the semilunar valves of the aorta and pulmonary artery for the better occlusion of the artery.

NODULI MORGAGNI, Noduli Arantii—n. Nervorum. Ganglions, nervous.

NOD'ULUS, diminutive of nodus, 'a knot.' A small knot. A small prominence or lobule in the portion of the cerebellum, which forms the posterior boundary of the fourth ventricle. The nodulus is on the median line, and before the uvula. See Vermiform process, inferior.

NODULUS UTERINUS, Pessary.

NODUS, Articulation, Edentulus, Encystis, Hamma—n. Cerebri, Pons Varolii—n. Chirurgicus, Knot, surgeon's—n. Encephali, Nœud de l'Encéphale, Pons Varolii—n. Hystericus, Angone—n. Vitæ, Centrum vitale.

NOESIS, Intellect.

NŒUD, Node—n. du Chirurgien, Knot, surgeon's—n. d'Emballleur, Knot, packer's.

NŒUD DE L'ENCÉPHALE (F.), Nodus Encephali. M. Crucivahier, under this name, includes the pons Varolii, peduncles of the cerebrum and cerebellum, and the tubercula quadrigemina.

NŒUD VITAL, Centrum vitale.

NŒUDS, Calculi, arthritic.

NOIR ANIMAL, Carbo animalis—n. d'Os, Carbo animalis.

NOISETIER, Corylus avellana.

NOISETTE, Corylus avellana (nut).

NOIX, Juglans regia (nut)—n. Américaine, Jatropha curcas—n. des Barbades, Jatropha curcas—n. Cathartique, Jatropha curcas—n. d'Eau, Trapa natans—n. de Galle, see Quercus infectoria—n. d'Ignour, Ignatia amara—n. de Serpent, see Thevetia Ahouai—n. Vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica.

NOLA CULINARIA, Anemone pulsatilla.

NOLIME TANGERE, Lupus, see Chancrux (Bouton).

NOMA, Cancer aquaticus—n. Pudendorum, Colpocæe infantilis.

NOMAD, Nomade, Nomas, (νομας, νομαδος), from νομα, 'pasturage.' An epithet given to people who have no fixed habitation, and who travel with their flocks, from country to country, for pasturage. Such are the Tartars. By analogy, the word Nomad'ic has been applied to a spreading ulcer.

NOMBRIL, Umbilicus—n. de Vénus, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NOME, Cancer aquaticus, Phagedenic ulcer.

NO'MENCLATURE, Nomenclatio, Nomenclatura, Onomatolog'ia, Onomatocles'is, Terminol'ogy, Terminol'ogy, Glossol'ogy, Orismol'ogy, from νομα, 'name,' and καλεω, 'I call.' A collection of terms or words peculiar to a science or art. In all sciences, nomenclature is an object of importance; and each term should convey to the student a definite meaning. The Lavoisierian nomenclature was a valuable gift to chemistry; and anatomy has derived advantage from the labours of Barclay, Dumas, and Chaussier, who have given names to parts indicative of their situation. See Muscle. The nomenclature of pathology has required the greatest attention; and although repeated attempts have been made to improve it, the barbarous terms that disgrace it are still frequently adopted. It consists of Hebrew and Arabic terms; Greek and Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, German, English, and even Indian, African, and Mexican; often barbarously and illegitimately compounded. A want of principle in founding the technical terms of medicine is every where observable. They have been formed:—1. From colour; as Melæna, Melas, Atrabilis, Leuce, Alphos, Chlorosis, Rubeola, Scarlatina, Purpura, &c. 2. From duration; as ephemeral, quotidian, tertian, and quartan, continued, and intermittent, &c. 3. From Birds, Beasts, Fishes, Insects, and Plants; as Rabies canina, Cynanche, Boulimia, Pica, Hippopyon, Elephantiasis, Urticaria, Lichen, Ichthyosis, &c. 4. From Persons or Places; as Morbus Herculeus, Facies Hippocratica, Lepra Arabum, Plica Polonica, Sudor Anglicus, Morbus Gallicus, Iguis Sancti Antonii, Chorea Sancti Viti, &c.

NOMUS, Cancer aquaticus.

NON-COMPOS, Lunatic.

NON-COMPOS MENTIS, Lunatic.

NON-NATURALIS, Non naturalia. Under this term the ancient physicians comprehended air, meat, and drink, sleep and watching, motion and rest, the retentions and excretions, and the affections of the mind. They were so called, because they affect man without entering into his composition, or constituting his nature; but yet are so necessary that he cannot live without them.

NONPLACENTAL, see Placental.

NON-SANE, Insane.

NON-STRIATED MUSCULAR FIBRE, see Muscular fibre.

NONUS HUMERI PLACENTINI, Teres minor—n. Linguae musculus, Genio-glossus—n. Vesalii, Peronæus tertius.

NOOS, Intellect.

NORICE, Nurse.

NORMA VERTICALIS, see Normal.

NORMAL, Norma'lis, from norma, 'a perpendicular,' 'a rule.' According to rule; perpendicular.

The normal line, norma verticalis, of Blumenbach, is a vertical line let fall from the prominence of the frontal bone and shaving the superior maxillary, so as to mark the projection of the latter bone beyond the arch of the forehead.

NORRIS'S DROPS, see Antimonium tartarizatum.

NORTH CAROLINA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief springs are the Warm and Hot Springs of Buncombe. Temperatures varying from 94° to 104° Fahr. They have not much mineral impregnation, and have the properties of the thermal waters in general.

NORTON'S DROPS, Liquor hydrargyri oxymuriatis.

NORYSS, Nurse.

NOSACERUS, Sickly.

NOSE, Nasus—n. Bled, Epistaxis.

NOSE, RUNNING AT THE, Coryza.

NOSELI'A, νοσηλια, Nosocomi'is, Nosocomi'a, from νοσος, 'disease,' and νοσηλι'ος, 'care of the sick.'

NOSEMA, Disease.

NOSENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Nosencephale, from νοσος, 'disease,' and εγκεφαλος, 'brain.' A monster whose skull is open only on the frontal and parietal regions, the posterior fontanelle being distinctly present.

NOSERUS, Insalubrious, Sick.

NOSEUMA, Disease.

NOSOCOMESIS, Noselia.

NOSOCOMIA, Noselia.

NOSOCOMIAL, Nosocomia'lis, from νοσοκομειον, (νοσος, 'a disease,' and κομειω, 'I take care of,') 'an hospital.' Relating to an hospital, — as 'nosocomial or hospital fever.'

NOSOCOMIUM, Hospital.

NOSOCOMUS, Infirmier.

NOSOCRATIC, Specific.

NOSODES, Insalubrious, Sick, Sickly.

NOSODOCHIUM, Hospital.

NOSOGENESIS, Pathogeny

NOSOGENIA, Pathogeny.

NOSOGENY, Pathogeny.

NOSOGEOGRAPHY, Geography, medical.

NOSOGRAPHY, Nosographia, from nosos, 'a disease,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' A description of diseases.

NOSOL'OGY, Nosolog'ia, from nosos, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A name given to that part of medicine whose object is the classification of diseases. The most celebrated nosological systems have been those of Sauvages (1763), Linnæus (1763), Vogel (1764), Sagar (1776), Macbride (1772), Cullen (1772), Darwin (1796), Selle, Crichton (1804), Parr (1809), Swediaur (1812), Pinel (1813), Young (1813), Good (1817), Hosack (1818), &c. Besides these general nosographies, others have been published on Surgery exclusively, none of which are particularly worthy of enumeration amongst nosological systems. Nosological arrangements have, also, been formed of single families or groups of diseases. Plenck, of Baden, is the author of two different treatises of this kind: the one, a methodical arrangement of the diseases of the eyes, and the other, of cutaneous diseases. Dr. Willan published an arrangement of cutaneous diseases, which was completed by Dr. Bateman, and adopted into the Nosology of Dr. Hosack. Mr. Abernethy, also, published a methodical classification of tumours, and many other partial nosological classifications might be enumerated. Also, Pathology.

NOSON'OMY, Nosonom'ia, from nosos, 'a disease,' and ονομα, 'name.' The nomenclature of diseases.

NOSOPHYTA, from nosos, 'disease,' and φυτον, 'a plant.' A disease supposed to be produced by, or to consist in the development of parasitic plants—as porrigio, mentagra, &c.—Gruby.

NOSOPHEUS, Nosopœl'icus, from nosos, 'disease,' and ποιω, 'I make.' That which causes disease.

NOSOS, Disease.

NOSOTAX'Y, Nosotax'ia, from nosos, 'a disease,' and ταξις, 'arrangement.' The distribution and classification of diseases.

NOSOTHEO'RIA, from nosos, 'disease,' and θεωρια, 'doctrine.' The doctrine or theory of disease.

NOSTAL'GIA, from nostos, 'return,' 'a journey home,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Nostoma'nia, Nostreas'ia, Apodemial'gia, Pathopatridal'gia, Patopatridal'gia, Philopatridal'gia, Philopatridoma'nia, Ademon'ia, Ademon'gñe, Home-sickness, (F.) Nostalgie, Maladie du pays. An affection produced by the desire of returning to one's country. It is commonly attended by slow wasting, and sometimes by hectic, which may speedily induce death. M. Pinel properly regards it as a variety of melancholy.

NOSTOMANIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRASSIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRILS, Nares.

NOSTRUM, Arcanum.

NOSTRUM, CHITTICK'S. An empirical remedy for stone in the bladder, said to be a solution of alkali in veal-broth.

NOTA MATERNA, Nævus—n. Primitiva, Groove, primitive.

NOTÆ INFANTUM, Nævi.

NOTAL, Dorsal.

NOTAL'GIA, Notial'gia, (Nostalgia, improperly, of Köchlin and others,) from νωτος, 'the back,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the back. Spinal irritation.

NOTANENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTCH, Teut. Nocke, Ital. Nocchia, Emarginatio, Emarginatura, (F.) Échancrure. A depression or indentation of different shape and size, observed on the circumference or edges of certain bones.

NOTCH OF THE CONCHA, Incisura tragica.

NOTCH, ETHMOID'AL, (F.) Échancrure ethmoïdale, is situate on the frontal bone, and joins the ethmoid.

NOTCHES, ISCHIAT'IC, (F.) Échancrures ischiatiques, are two in number:—the greater and the less. The former is large, situate at the inferior part of the pelvis, and formed by the sacrum and ilium. It gives passage to the sciatic nerve, pyramidalis muscle, and to the superior gluteal vessels and nerves. The latter is much smaller than the other, from which it is separated by the sciatic spine. It gives passage to the tendon of the obturator internus, and to the internal pudic vessels and nerves.

NOTCH, PAROT'ID, (F.) Échancrure parotidienne, is the triangular space comprised between the parotid edge of the inferior maxillary bone and the mastoid process; so called, because it lodges the parotid gland. The notches in soft parts are generally called Fissures.

NOTCH, SCAP'ULAR, Incisura scapularis, Lumula scapularis, (F.) Échancrure scapulaire. The notch on the superior edge or costa of the scapula, which is converted into a foramen by means of a ligament, and gives passage to the suprascapular nerve.

NOTCH, SEMILUNAR OF THE STERNUM, Fourchette.

NOTENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTENCEPH'ALUS, from νωτος, 'the back,' and κεφαλος, 'the head.' A monster whose head, with the brain, is on the back. The condition is termed Notencephalia and Notanencephalia.—I. G. St. Hiliare.

NOTHEUSIS, Degeneration.

NOTHIA, Degeneration.

NOTHROTÉS, Torpor.

NOTHUS, False.

NOTIÆUS, Dorsal—n. Myelus, Medulla spinalis.

NOTIALGIA, Notalgia.

NOTOM'ELES, from νωτος, 'the back,' and μελος, 'unprofitable.' A monster with superfluous flesh on the back.

NOTOMYELITIS, Myelitis.

NOTOMYELUS, Medulla spinalis.

NOTON, Dorsum.

NOTOS, Dorsum, Vertebral column

NOUAGE DE LA CORNÉE, Caligo.

NOUÉ, (Bandage) (F.); 'knotted,' from nodus, 'a knot.' A bandage which has a considerable number of knots placed over each other. It is made with a roller, 6 or 7 ells long, rolled into two balls, and is used to compress the parotid region, after the extirpation of the parotid gland.

Also, an epithet applied to children in whom the disease of rickets has swollen the articulations.

It is, likewise, applied to the gout when it has caused nodes on the joints.

NOUET (F.), Nod'nus. A bag filled with medicinal substances, and infused in a liquid to communicate their properties to it.

NOUFFER'S, MADAME, REMEDY, Podium filix mas.

NOURRICE, Nurse.

NOURRICIER, Nutritious.

NOURRITURE, Aliment.

NOUS, Intellect.

NOUURE, Rachitis.

NOUVEAU-NÉ (F.), ('new-born,') Neonatus, nuperrimè Natus, Neog'enes, Neog'iles, Neog'ilus, Neog'onius, Neog'nus, Infans recens natus. That which has been just born. A new-born infant.

NOVACULA, Razor.

NOW, Vertex.

NOYAU, see Cytoblast.
 NOYAU CENTRAL DES PÉDONCULES
 DU CERVELET, Corpus dentatum.

NOYER, Juglans regia—n. de Ceylon, Adhatoda.

NOYRIS, Nurse.

NUAGE, Nebula.

NUBECULA, Enœorema, Nebula.

NUBES, Enœorema, Nebula.

NUBILE, Nubilis, 'marriageable,' 'fit to marry.' Generally, the period of puberty is considered to be the age at which both sexes are unbile. They are truly nubile, however, only when they are fitted to procreate healthy and vigorous children, and are competent to discharge their duties as parents.

NUBILITY, Nubilitas, (F.) Nubilité; same etymon. The state of being nubile or marriageable.

NUBILOSUS, Nepheloid.

NUCES AQUATICÆ, see Trapa natans—n. Quercûs, and Quercus alba.

NUCHA, Nucha, Nucha cap'itis, (F.) Nuque. The nuck, hinder part or nape of the neck, (Prov.) Niddick. The part where the spinal marrow begins.

Ligamentum Nuchæ. A strong ligament from the neck, proceeding from one spinous process to another, and inserted into the occipital bone. It is very strong in quadrupeds. It is called in them Paxywax, Paxwax, Packwax, formerly, Faxwax, and Tarwax.

NUCHAL RE'GION, Re'gio nuchæ seu nucha'lis seu occipitalis inferior, from nucha. The region of the nucha or nape of the neck.

NUCISTA, see Myristica moschata.

NUCK, CANAL OF. A small prolongation of the peritoneum often sent into the inguinal canal of the female fetus. So called from Nuck, who first described it.

NUCLEATED, Nucleatus, from nucleus, 'a kernel.' Having a nucleus or central particle. Applied to the elementary cells of organized tissues; the vital properties of which are seated in the nucleus. See Cytoblast.

NUCLEATED CELL, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEI CEMBRÆ, see Pinus Cembra—n. Ossei, Ossification, points of—n. Pineæ, see Pinus pinea.

NUCLEIN, see Globules of the blood.

NUCLEOLE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLULE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLUS, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEUS, see Cytoblast—n. Blastodermatis, Tache embryonnaire—n. Centralis, Corpus dentatum—n. Cicatriculæ, Tache embryonnaire—n. Dentatus, Corpus dentatum—n. Dentis, Dental pulp—n. Encased, Cytoblast—n. Fimbriatus, Corpus dentatum—n. Furunculi, see Furunculus—n. Germinal, see Molecule—n. Germinativus, see Molecule—n. Olivæ, Corpus dentatum—n. Ossificationis, Ossification, point of—n. Rhomboidalis, see Corpus dentatum.

NUCULA TERRESTRIS, Bunium bulbocastanum.

NUKE, Nucha.

NULE-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

NUMERICAL METHOD, see Method, numerical.

NUMMULAR, Nummularis. Relating to money, from nummus, 'money.' An epithet applied to the sputa in phthisis, when they flatten at the bottom of the vessel, like a piece of money, and to the mode of aggregation of the red corpuscles of the blood—'nummular rolls.'

NUMMULARIA, Lysimachia nummularia.

NUMPOST, Abscess.

NUPHAR AD'VENA, Nymphæa ad'vena, Yellow Pond Lily, Spatterdock. Order, Nym-phaceæ; indigenous in Canada and the United States. The root is a popular tonic, and the fresh root bruised is applied as a cataplasm.

NUPHAR LUTEUM, Nymphæa lutea.

NUQUE, Nucha.

NURICE, Nurse.

NURSE, Sax. noþice, Nutrix, (from nourish, itself from nutrire.) Tithe'nē, Trephou'sa, Lactans, Lacticans, Nutrients, Thelast'ria, Mamma, (L.) Nutrice, (F.) Nourrice, (Sc.) Noyris, Noryras, Nurice, Norice. One who suckles her own child or another's. Also, one that has the care of a sick person, Care-taker, (F.) Garde-malade.

NURSE, DRY. One who gives every care to a child, but does not suckle it.

NURSE, MONTHLY. One who attends a woman during the month of her parturient state.

NURSE, WET, (Sc.) Milkwoman. A female, who suckles the child of another.

To 'nurse artificially,' is to bring up a child by the hand.

NÛS, Intellect.

NUSUS, Disease.

NUT, BRAZILIAN, see Pichurim beans—n. Butter, Juglans cinerea—n. Cembros, see Pinus cembra—n. Clearing, Strychnos potatorum—n. French, Juglans regia—n. Purging, see Jatropha and Croton tiglium—n. Rattle, Nelumbium luteum—n. Sassafra, see Pichurim beans—n. Soap, see Sapindus saponaria.

NUT TREE, MALABAR, Adhatoda.

NUT, VOMIC, see Strychnos nux vomica—n. Zirbel, see Pinus picea.

NUTATION, Nuta'tio, from nutare, nutatum, 'to nod.' Nodding. Also, a constant oscillation of the head, by which it moves involuntarily in one or more directions.

NUTATOR CAPITIS, Sterno-cleido-mastoi-deus.

NUTMEG, see Myristica moschata—n. Butter, see Myristica—n. Flower, Nigella—n. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

NUTMEGS, Testes.

NUTRICATIO, Nutrition.

NUTRICIER, Nutritious.

NUTRICIUS, Nutritious.

NUTRIENS, Aliment, Nurse.

NUTRIMEN, Aliment.

NUTRIMENTAL, Nutrimen'talis, Aliment'al, Aliment'ary, Alimenta'lis, (F.) Alimenteux, from nutrimen, 'aliment.' Having the qualities of food or nutriment.

NUTRIMENTUM, Aliment, Pabulum.

NUTRIT'ION, Nutrit'io, Nutricat'io, Nutritus, Alit'ra, Threpsis, from nutrire, nutritum, 'to nourish.' Nutrition is that function by which the nutritive matter already elaborated by the various organic actions, loses its own nature, and assumes that of the different living tissues,—to repair their losses and maintain their strength. Sometimes the word is used in a more extended signification, to express the whole series of actions by which the two constant movements of composition and decomposition are accomplished, in organized bodies. Nutrition, then, would comprehend digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, and assimilation; the latter being nutrition, properly so called, and being effected in the intermediate system over the whole of the body,—the cells of the tissues attracting from the blood the elements necessary for their repairment.

NUTRITION, FORCE OF, Plastic force.

NUTRITIOUS, Nutric'ius, Nutritive, Alib'ilis, Troph'imos, Troph'ides, (F.) Nourricier, Nutricier, Alibile. Same etymon. Having the quality of nourishing: as nutritious food, nutritious lymph, &c.

NUTRITIOUS or NUTRITIVE ARTERIES, (F.) Arteries nutritivæ. Arterial branches which enter the foramina nutritiva of long bones, and penetrate to the medullary membrane.

NUTRITIVE, Nutritious, (F.) Nutritif. Also, relating to nutrition: hence the 'nutritive functions,' or those that are concerned in nutrition.

NUTRITUS, Aliment, Nutrition.

NUTRIX, Mamma, Nurse.

NUTS, WATER, Nelumbium luteum.

NUX AROMATICA, see Myristica moschata — n. Avellana, Corylus avellana (nut) — n. Barbadiensis, Jatropha curcas — n. Becuiba, Ibicuiba — n. Cathartica Americana, Jatropha curcas — n. Galle, see Quercus cerris — n. Juglans, Juglans regia — n. Medica, Coco of the Maldives — n. Metella, Strychnos nux vomica — n. Methel, Datura stramonium — n. Mosehata, see Myristica moschata — n. Myristica, see Myristica moschata — n. Pistacia, see Pistacia vera — n. Unguentaria, see Myristica moschata — n. Vomica, Strychnos nux vomica.

NYCTALOPE, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPEX, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOP'IA, from νύξ, νυκτος, 'night,' and σπορα, 'I see'; Parop'sis Lucif'uga, Nyctalop'ia, Ca'citas diu'na, Visus noctur'nus, Oxyo'pia, Hemeralo'pia (moderns), Amblyo'pia meridiana, Hemerat'yp'h'o'sis, Hemerot'yp'h'o'sis, Photophob'ia, Photophobopht'hal'mia, Dys'o'pia la'mini's, Visus a'crior, Nyctalopy, Dayblindness, Diurnal amanro'sis, (F.) Vne nocturne, Aveuglement de Jour. The faculty of seeing during the night, with privation of the faculty during the day. It affects both eyes at once, when idiopathic. Its duration is uncertain, and treatment very obscure. It is, however, a disease of nervous irritability, and one of excitement of the visual nerve in particular. The indications of cure will consequently be — to allay direct irritation in every way: to excite counter-irritation by blisters; and to gradually accustom the eye to the impression of light.

One labouring under this affection is called a Nyctalope, Nyctalops, Nyctaloper.

Nyctalopia has also been used for night blindness. See Hemeralopia.

NYCTALOPS, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPY, Nyctalopia.

NYCTERINUS, Nocturnal.

NYCTHEMERON, see Dies.

NYCTHEMERUM, from νύξ, νυκτος, 'night,' and ἡμερα, 'day.' The space of 24 hours, or of a day and night. Certain complaints continue only so long.

NYCTOBADIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBASIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOTYPHOSIS, Hemeralopia.

NYGMA, Wound, punctured.

NYGMATICUM EEMPLASTRUM, Emplastrum resinæ.

NYMPHA, Clitoris.

NYMPHÆ, from νυμφη, 'a water nymph.' Alæ mino'res seu inter'ua mino'res clitor'idis seu mulie'bres mino'res, Carmi'culæ cuticula'res, Criat'æ clitor'idis, Collie'ali vugi'næ, Myrtochi'la, Myrtochi'lides, Labia mino'ra seu inter'ua seu pud'e'ndi mino'ra, (F.) Nymphes, Petites lèvres. Two membranous folds, which arise from the lateral parts of the prepuce of the clitoris, and descend on the inner surface of the labia majora; terminating, by becoming gradually thinner, about the middle of the circumference of the orifice of the vagina. They are formed each of two folds of the mucous membrane of the vulva; and contain, in their substance, a thin layer of spongy, erectile tissue. Their use seems to be, — not, as was once supposed, to direct the course of the urine, which notion gave rise to their name, but to favour the elongation and dilatation of the vagina in pregnancy and labour.

The word νυμφη, Nymphæ, has also been used synonymously with clitoris by Oribasius, Aëtius, &c.

NYMPHÆA ADVENA, Nuphar advena.

NYMPHÆA ALBA, Leuconymp'hæ'a, Nenn'phar, Mieroleuconymp'hæ'a, Castu'lia speciosa, White Water Lily, (Sc.) Cambie-leaf, (F.) Nénnuphar ou Nénnufar blanc, Lis des étangs, Lune ou Volant d'Eau. Nat. Ord. Ranunculaceæ. Sec. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. Formerly employed as a demulcent, antaphrodisiac, emollient, and slightly anodyne remedy.

NYMPHÆA INDICA, N. nelumbo — n. Major lutea, N. lutea.

NYMPHÆA LU'TEA, N. major lutea seu umbilico'lis, Nuphar lu'teum, Nenn'phar lutea, Nyphozanthos vulg'aris, Yellow Water Lily, (Sc.) Cambie-leaf, (F.) Nénnuphar jaune. Used for the same purposes as Nymphæa alba. The flowers are called in Norfolk, England, Brandy bottles.

NYMPHÆA NELUM'BO, N. Indica, Faba Egyptiaca, Cy'anna Egyptiæcus, Pontic or Egyptian Bean. The fruit of this is eaten raw in Egypt and some of the neighbouring countries; and is considered to be tonic and astringent.

NYMPHÆA ODORATA, Sweet-scented Water Lily, Sweet water or White pond or Toad Lily, Coco or Water Cabbage, (F.) Nénnuphar odorant. An indigenous plant, growing in most parts of the United States in fresh water ponds, and on the borders of streams, and having large white, beautiful, sweet-scented flowers. The root is very astringent and bitter. It is sometimes made into a poultice and used as a discutient.

NYMPHÆA UMBILICALIS, N. lutea.

NYMPHÆ, Clitoris.

NYMPHES, Nymphæ.

NYMPHITIS; from νυμφη, 'the clitoris,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Epiderrh'itis, Inflammatio Clitor'idis. Inflammation of the clitoris.

NYMPHOCLUIA, Nymphomania.

NYMPHOMA'NIA, from νυμφη, 'a bride,' and μανια, 'fury'; Furor uteri'nus, Uteroma'nia, Lag'ne'sis furor femini'nus, Metroma'nia, Ædæoyar'gulus, Ædæoyorgaris'mus, Thelygon'ia, Erotoma'nia, Ædæoma'nia, Aidoioma'nia, Melanchol'ia uteri'na, Nymphocl'ia, Sympto'ma turpitu'dinis, Androma'nia, Gynæcoma'nia, Machlos'ynê, Ete'lipath'ia, Tenti'p' vena'rea, Hysteroma'nia, Salu'c'itas vulvæ, Uteri pruri'tus, Brachi'na, Aras'con, Ars'nam, Æstroma'nia, (F.) Nymphomanie, Furor utérine. An irresistible and insatiable desire, in females, for the venereal act. It occurs in those particularly, who possess a nervous temperament, and vivid imagination, especially if excited by improper language, masturbation, &c. Its course, as described, is as follows. In the commencement, the sufferer is a prey to perpetual contests between feelings of modesty and impetuous desires. At an after period, she abandons herself to the latter, seeking no longer to restrain them. In the last stage the obscenity is disgusting; and the mental alienation, for such it is, becomes complete. The treatment consists in the use of the same means as are required in the satyriasis of man. When the mental alienation is complete, solitude is indispensable.

NYMPHIONCUS, from νυμφη, 'the nymphæ,' and σκος, 'a tumour.' A morbid tumefaction of the nymphæ.

NYMPHOTOMY, Nymphotomia, Nymphot'omia, Sec'tio, (F.) Nymphotomie, from νυμφη, and τεμεῖν, 'to cut.' An operation, known and practised for a long time, which consists in the excision of the nymphæ. The operation is had recourse to, when they are attacked with scirrhus, cancer, fungus, or gangrene; or when they are so large as to interfere with walking or coition. Nymphotomy is the circumcision of the female. It is practised in some countries.

Some authors have used the term Nymphotomy for amputation of the clitoris.

NYPHOZANTHUS VULGARIS, Nymphæa lutea.

NYSTAG'MUS. A partial rotatory movement of the eyeball from side to side. Also, Coma vigil.

NYXIS, Puncture.

O.

OAK, BLACK, Quercus tinctoria—o. Common, Quercus robur—o. Jerusalem, Chenopodium botrys.

OAK LUNGS, Lichen pulmonarius.

OAK ORCHARD ACID SPRINGS. These springs—eight in number—are in Genesee county, New York, eight miles from Lockport. They are acid salines, consisting of free sulphuric acid, sulphate of protoxide of iron, and sulphates of alumina, magnesia and lime. They are powerfully astringent and tonic.

OAK, POISON, Rhus toxicodendron—o. Red, Quercus rubra montana—o. Sea, Fucus vesiculosus—o. Spanish, Quercus rubra montana—o. White, Quercus alba.

OARIOCYESIS, Pregnancy, ovarian.

OARION, Ovary.

OARION'CUS, Oariophy'ma, Ovarium tu'midum, Tumor Ova'rii, from ωαριον, (diminutive of ωον, 'an egg,') 'the ovarium,' and ογκος, 'swelling,' Ovarian tumour.

OARIOPAREC'TAMA, Oophoraux'e, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and παρεκτειναι, 'to extend,' Enlargement of the ovary.

OARIORRHEX'IS, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and ρηξις, 'rupture,' Ruptura Ova'rii. Rupture of the ovary.

OARIOT'OMY, Oariotomia, Ovariotomy, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and τομη, 'incision.' The operation for removing the ovary.

OARI'TIS, Oöphoritis, Oori'tis, Inflammatio Ova'rii, Ovari'tis, (F.) Inflammation de l'Ovaire, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and itis, the termination denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ovarium. When occurring in childhood, it is the Lochoöphoritis of some.

OARIUM, Ovary.

OARTHROC'ACÉ, formed by contraction from omo-artthroace. Said to be used by Rust to designate inflammation of the scapulo-humeral articular surfaces.—Nysten.

OATMEAL, see Avena.

OATS, Avena.

OBAUDITIO, Baryecolia.

OBAUDITUS, Baryecolia.

OBCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OB'DORMIT'IO, from ob, and dormio, dormitum, 'to sleep.' The state of the limbs being asleep;—Stupor ar'tuum.

OB'DUCTIO LEGALIS, Autopsia cadaverica legalis.

OBELÆA RAPHE, Sagittal suture.

OBESITAS, Polysarcia—o. Colli, Struma adiposa—o. Nimia, Pimelosis—o. Viscerum, Physconia adiposa.

OBÉSITÉ, Polysarcia.

OBESITY, Polysarcia.

OBESUS, Corpulent.

OB'FUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OBITUS, Death.

OBJECT'IVE CONE. The cone of light proceeding from an object, the apex of which is on the object, and the base on the cornea.

OBJECTIVE SENSATIONS, see Sensation.

OBLINITIO, Inunction.

OBLIQUE', Obli'quus, Any thing inclined, or which deviates from the vertical line. Anatomists have given this name to certain muscles, which have an oblique direction as regards the plane that divides the body into two equal and symmetrical halves. These are:—

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE ABDOMEN. They are two in number, and distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Exter'nus Abdom'inis seu descen'dens exter'nus seu descendens seu major, (F.) Ilio-pubo costo-abdom'inal, Costo-abdom'inal (Ch.), Grand oblique, Oblique externe. One of the broadest muscles of the body. It is situate at the lateral and anterior part of the abdomen; and is flat and quadrilateral. It is attached, above, to the outer surface and lower edge of the 7 or 8 last ribs: below, to the anterior third of the external lip of the crista ilii: before, it terminates at the linea alba by means of a broad and strong aponeurosis, which covers the rectus, and presents towards its inferior part two very solid fibrous fasciculi, which are inserted,—the one at the symphysis, the other at the spine of the pubis,—under the name of Pillars of the Abdominal Ring. These pillars leave between them an opening, which forms the inferior orifice of the inguinal canal. The obliquus externus abdominis depresses the ribs, and carries them backwards during a strong expiration. It impresses on the chest a movement of rotation, and bends the thorax upon the pelvis, and conversely. It contracts, also, the abdominal cavity. 2. Obliquus Inter'nus Abdom'inis seu ascendens seu minor seu internus seu ascendens internus, Musculus accli'vis, (F.) Ilio-lombo-costo-abdom'inal, Ilio-abdom'inal (Ch.), Muscle petit oblique ou oblique interne, is broad, especially before; thin, and irregularly quadrilateral, like the preceding, beneath which it is situate. It is attached, above, to the inferior edge of the cartilages of the 5th, 4th, 3d, and 2d false ribs; below, to the anterior two-thirds of the interstice of the crista ilii, to the posterior part of the crural arch, and to the pubis; behind, to the spinous processes of the last two lumbar vertebrae, and to those of the first two portions of the sacrum; before, to the linea alba. Its upper fibres run obliquely upwards and forwards; the middle are horizontal; and the lower pass obliquely downwards and forwards.

These last, in the male, are dragged down through the inguinal ring, when the testicle descends, and form the two fasciculi of the cremaster.

The obliquus internus resembles the O. externus in function.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE EYE, Anato'rii, Circumagen'tes, Rotato'res Oc'uli, are two in number.

They are distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Superior Oculi, Amot'rius mac'entus, Trochlea'ria, Trochlea'tor, Obliquus major, Circumductio'nis op'ifer, Longi'ssimus oculi, (F.) Optico-trochlei sclerati-cien, Grand trochléateur (Ch.), Grand oblique de l'œil, O. supérieur de l'œil, Amoureux (Muscle), is situate at the inner and upper part of the orbit. It is small, round, fusiform, and reflected upon itself in the middle of its course. Behind, it is attached to the inside of the foramen opticum; and when it arrives opposite the internal orbital process, it becomes a small, round tendon, which slides in a cartilaginous pulley fixed to the os frontis, and is reflected, at an acute angle, to proceed downwards and outwards, and to attach itself to the outer and back part of the globe of the eye. This muscle carries the globe of the eye forwards and inwards; making it experience a movement of rotation, which directs the pupil downwards and inwards. This is conceived to be an involuntary muscle as well as the next. In sleep, according to Sir C. Bell, when the power over the straight or voluntary muscles of the organ is nearly lost, the eye is given up to the oblique muscles, which lodge the transparent cornea under the upper eyelid. At the approach of death, the same thing is observable; hence, the turning up of the eye, at such time, is not an evidence of agony or suffering, but of insensibility. 2. Obliquus Inferior seu minor oculi, (F.) Maxillo-scleroticien, Petit Trochléateur (Ch.), Petit oblique ou oblique inférieur de l'œil, is situate at the anterior and inferior part of the orbit. It is flat and attached to the inner and anterior part of the orbital surface of the superior maxillary bone, on the outside of the lachrymal gutter; from thence it passes outwards and backwards, and terminates by an aponeurosis, at the posterior and inner part of the globe of the eye. It carries the globe of the eye inwards and forwards; and directs the pupil upwards and outwards.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE HEAD. These are two in number. 1. Obliquus Superior seu minor Cap'itis, (F.) Trachélo-atloïdo-occipital, Atloïdo-occipito-mastoi'dien (Ch.), Muscle oblique supérieur ou petit oblique de la tête. This muscle is situate at the sides of, and behind, the articulation of the head: it is flat and attached, on the one hand, to the top of the transverse process of the atlas; and, on the other, terminates at the occipital bone, beneath the inferior curved line, and sometimes, also, at the mastoid region of the temporal bone. It extends the head, — inclining it to one side. 2. Obliquus Inferior Cap'itis, Obliquus major, (F.) Spinu'xatloïdo-trochéli-atloïdien, Azôïdo-atloïdien (Ch.), Oblique inférieur ou grand oblique de la tête, is situate at the posterior part of the neck and head. It is round, fusiform; attached to the spinous process of the axis, and proceeds to terminate behind and below the summit of the transverse process of the atlas. It impresses, on the first vertebra and the head, a movement of rotation, which turns the face to one side.

OBLIQUE PROCESSES. see Vertebrae.

OBLIQUE EXTERNE, Obliquus externus abdominis — o. Grand, Obliquus externus abdominis — o. Grand de l'œil, Obliquus superior oculi — o. Grand de la tête, Obliquus inferior capitis — o. Inferieur de l'œil, Obliquus inferior oculi — o. Inferieur de la tête, Obliquus inferior capitis — o. Interne, Obliquus internus abdominis — o. Petit, Obliquus internus abdominis — o. Petit de l'œil, Obliquus inferior oculi — o. Petit de la tête, Obliquus superior oculi — o. Supérieur de l'œil, Obliquus superior oculi — o. Supérieur de la tête, Obliquus superior capitis.

OBLIQUITÉ DE LA MATRICE, Retroversio uteri.

OBLIQUUS ASCENDENS, O. internus abdo- minis — o. Auris, Laxator tympani — o. Descendens externus, O. externus abdominis — o. Major, O. externus abdominis, O. inferior capitis, O. superior oculi — o. Minor, O. internus abdominis — o. Minor capitis, O. superior capitis — o. Minor oculi, O. inferior oculi.

OBLITERATED, Obliteratus; from obliterare, (ob, and litem), 'to efface.' A vessel or duct is said to be obliterated, when its parietes have approximated and contracted such an adhesion to each other that the cavity has completely disappeared.

OBLITERATIO COMPLETA, Hapantismus. OBLIVIO, Amnesia — o. Iners, Lethargy. OBLIBIUM, Antilibium.

O'OLUS, Onolusat. A weight of 9 or 10 grains.

OBSCENÆ PARTES, Genital organs.

OBSCURISSEMENT DE LA VUE, Caligo.

OBSERVATION, Observatio, (from ob, and servare, servatum, 'to keep,' e.g. in sigill.) Terc'is, Symparateresia. Act of examining a thing by means of the external senses. This word is employed in several acceptations. It expresses — 1. The action of observing — 2. The aggregate of knowledge, afforded by observation. In French — but not in English — it means the case or history of the phenomena presented by a patient in the course of a disease.

OBSERVATION, Case — o. Method of, Numerical method.

OBSTETRIC, Obstet'ricus, Obstet'rical; same etymon as obstetrics. Relating or appertaining to obstetrics, — as 'obstetric auscultation,' 'obstetric exploration,' &c.

OBSTETRIC CHAIR, Labour-chair.

OBSTETRICANS, Accoucheur.

OBSTETRICS, from Obstetrix, 'a midwife,' (obstare, ob, and stare, 'to stand before.') Tokol'ogy, Tocol'ogy, Maie'a, Mae'e'a, Mae'i'a, Moen'tica ars, Arx obstetric'ia, Obstet'ricy, (F.) Obstétrique. The art of midwifery. Midwifery in general.

OBSTETRICY, Obstetrics.

OBSTÉTRIQUE, Obstetrics.

OBSTETRIX, Midwife.

OBSTIPATIO, Constipation — o. Tenismus,

Tenismus.

OBSTIPATIO, see Hump.

OBSTIPITAS, Tortieollis — o. Capitis seu Colli,

Tortieollis.

OBSTRUCTIO, Emphraxis, Stegnosis — o. Alvi, Constipation — o. Duetūs Alimentariū, Constipation — o. Duetūs Stenoniani, Stenostenosis — o. Intestinalis, Constipation — o. Recti Spastica, Stricture of the Rectum, spasmodic — o. Pulmonum punitosa febrilis, Peripneumonia notha.

OBSTRUCTION OF THE INTESTINES,

Enteremphraxis.

OBSTRUENS, from obstruo, (ob, and struere, 'to build,' 'I stop up by building against.' Oppilat'iva. A medicine which closes the orifices of ducts or vessels.

OBSTUPEFACIENTIA, Narcotics.

OBTONDANT, Obtundens.

OBTRUNCATIO, Decollation.

OBTUMESCENTIA, Mutitas.

OBTUN'DENS, (F.) Obtoudant, from obtundere, (ob and tundere, 'to beat,') 'to beat against,' and therefore to blunt the edge. An epithet applied to remedies that were supposed, according to an erroneous theory, to be possessed of the power of blunting the acrimony of the humours. A demulcent is one of these.

OBTURAMENTUM, Emphragma.

OBTURATEUR, Obturator.

OBTURATEUR DU PALAIS, Palate, artificial.

OBTURATIO, Emphraxis.

OBTURATOR, Obturatorius, (F.) Obturator, from obturare, (akin to Supra, 'a door,'[?]) 'to close,' 'stop up the entrance.' A name given in anatomy, to several parts.

OBTURATOR ARTERY, Arteria obturatoria seu obturatoria, (F.) Sous-pubio-femorale (Ch.), Artère obturatrice, arises, most commonly, from the hypogastric. It is, however, frequently given off from the epigastric; a matter of importance to be determined in cases of femoral hernia. Of 500 obturator arteries examined by M. J. Cloquet, 340 were furnished by the hypogastric, and 152 by the epigastric or crural. When it arises from the hypogastric, it passes forwards and outwards, and then turns horizontally into the cavity of the pelvis, to issue from this cavity by the opening left at the upper part of the obturator membrane. When, on the contrary, the obturator artery arises from the epigastric or the crural, it descends obliquely inwards, behind the os pubis, to the obturator foramen. At its exit from the pelvis, the artery divides into two branches, a posterior and an anterior, which are distributed to the muscles of the anterior and superior part of the thigh.

OBTURATOR FORAMEN, Foramen Obturatorium seu obturatum seu infra-pubianum seu ovalè seu thyroïdeum seu Thyroïdes seu Amplum Pelvis, (F.) Trou sous-pubien. A large opening, of an oval or triangular form, in the anterior part of the os innominatum, on the outside of the symphysis pubis and beneath the horizontal ramus of the os pubis. This foramen is closed by a membranous ligament.

OBTURATOR LIGAMENT OR MEMBRANE. Sub-pubic membrane, is a fibrous membrane, fixed to the whole circumference of the obturator foramen, except above, where an opening remains for the passage of the vessels and nerves of the same name.

OBTURATOR MUSCLES, Obturatores, Rotatores femoris. These are two in number. They are divided into a. Obturator Externus, Extra-pelvio-pubi-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien externe (Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and inner part of the thigh. It is broad, flat, and triangular; and is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior surface of the os pubis, to that of the ischium, and to the anterior surface of the obturator ligament. Its fleshy fibres converge to the tendon, which proceeds to be inserted at the inferior part of the cavity of the great trochanter. This muscle rotates the thigh outwards.

b. Obturator Internus, Marsupialis, Bursa'lis, Intra-pelvio-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien interne (Ch.) is seated, almost entirely, in the pelvis. It arises from the inner surface of the obturator ligament, and from the posterior part of the circumference of the obturator foramen, and is inserted, by means of a strong tendon, running between the two portions of the gemini, into the cavity at the root of the great trochanter; after having turned upon the ischium, which forms for it a kind of pulley. This muscle also rotates the thigh outwards.

OBTURATOR NERVE, Sous-pubio-femorale, (Ch.), proceeds principally from the 2d and 3d lumbar nerves. It descends into the pelvis; gains the obturator foramen; gives branches to the obturator muscles, and divides, behind the abductor primus and pectinalis, into two branches; one anterior, whose branches are distributed to the first two adductors, gracilis, and integuments; the other, posterior, distributing its ramifications to the obturator externus and third adductor.

OBTURATOR VEIN has, ordinarily, the same arrangement as the artery. It is common, however, to find it arising from the epigastric; whilst the corresponding artery proceeds from the hypogastric, and conversely.

The term obturator, (F.) Obturateur, is, also, applied to an instrument, adapted for closing an opening caused by a wound or disease.

OBTURATOIRES, Obturator muscles.

OBVOLVENTIA, Demulcents.

OCA, Oxalis tuberosa.

OCCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OCCIPITAL, Occipitalis. That which belongs to the occiput.

OCCIPITAL ARTERY. This arises from the posterior part of the external carotid, beneath the parotid. It proceeds backwards, passes between the mastoid process and the transverse process of the atlas; reaches the occipital bone and divides into two branches, which may be called ascending posterior and anterior, and are distributed to the neighbouring muscles and ligaments.

OCCIPITAL BONE, Os occipitis seu occipitii seu occipitalè seu sphenobasilare seu membra'ria seu nervosum seu basilare seu proræ seu pyr'idis seu sextum cranii seu lambdoïdes seu lambdæ seu laudæ seu puppis seu nervosum seu fibrosum seu pelvicephalicum, (F.) Os occipitalis, is situate at the posterior and inferior part of the cranium, which it assists in forming. It is flat, symmetrical, and curved upon itself. It presents, 1. An occipital or posterior surface, which is convex, and has, upon the median line, the basilary surface, the foramen magnum, through which passes the spinal marrow with its membranes and vessels,—the external occipital crest, the external occipital protuberance; and, at the sides, the upper curved line, large rough arched ridge or transverse arch or linea semicircularis, the lower curved line, the posterior condyloid fossæ, the condyles for the articulation of this bone with the atlas; and the anterior condyloid fossæ, pierced by a foramen for the passage of the ninth pair of nerves. 2. A cerebral or anterior surface. On the median line are: the basilary fossæ, the inner orifice of the foramen magnum, the internal occipital crest, the internal occipital protuberance, the cruciform spine; a channel, which lodges the termination of the straight sinus, and on each side, the occipital fossæ, distinguished into superior or cerebral, and inferior or cerebellous, and separated by a groove which lodges the lateral sinus. 3. The surfaces of the occipital bone are separated by four ridges and four angles. The two superior edges are articulated with the parietal bones; the two lower join the temporal; and the anterior angle, under the name basilary process, is united to the sphenoid.

The occipital bone is developed from four points of ossification; and sometimes from a greater number.

OCCIPITAL MUSCLE, Occipitalis. Many anatomists have given this name to the posterior fasciculus of the occipito-frontalis.

OCCIPITAL NERVE, Sub-occipital nerve, (F.) Première paire trachélienne (Ch.), Nerf occipital ou sous occipital. It arises from the upper part of the spinal marrow by eight or ten filaments, united in two fasciculi. Thus formed, it passes between the foramen magnum and the posterior arch of the atlas; and, at this place, forms a long ganglion, afterwards dividing into two branches. Of these, the anterior, which is long and small, makes a turn above the transverse process of the atlas and forms an anastomotic noose with a branch of the second cervical nerve. The posterior branch, larger and shorter, divides into seven or eight branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the upper and back part of the neck.

OCCIPITAL REGION, Occiput.

OCCIPITAL VEIN. Its roots follow exactly the course of the branches of the artery, and unite into a single trunk, which opens into the internal jugular vein, and sometimes into the external.

OCCIPITIUM, Occipitum.

OCCIPITO-AT'LOID, Occipito-atloïdeus, (F.) Occipito-atloïdien. That which has reference to the occiput and atlas.

OCCIPITO-ATLOID ARTICULATION is the articulation of the condyles of the occipital bone with the superior articular cavities of the atlas. It is strengthened by two ligaments; the one anterior, the other posterior, called occipito-atloid ligaments: the one extends from the anterior, the other from the posterior, arch of the atlas, to the corresponding portion of the circumference of the foramen magnum.

OCCIPITO-AX'OID, Occipito-axoïdeus, (F.) Occipito-axoïdien. That which relates to the occipital bone and the axis or second vertebra.

OCCIPITO-AXOID ARTICULATION is the connexion of the occipital bone with the axis or second vertebra, although these bones are not really articulated, but are merely retained in apposition by three strong ligaments, the posterior of which is called the occipito-axoid, and the two others olantoid.

OCCIPITO-FRONTALIS, Digast'ricus cran'ni, Epiera'nina, Fronta'lis et occipitalis. The majority of anatomists call by this name the whole of the fleshy plane, with the epicranial or coronal aponeurosis, (see Calotte), which covers the head from the occiput to the forehead. It is attached, by its posterior fasciculus, to the two outer thirds of the upper curved line of the occipital bone, and to the outer surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal; and, by its anterior fasciculus, it terminates at the eyebrow, where it becomes confounded with the superciliaris, pyramidalis nasi, and orbicularis palpebrarum.

The occipito-frontalis, by the contraction of its anterior fasciculus, draws forward a part of the integuments of the cranium. It wrinkles the skin of the forehead transversely, and may, also contribute to open the eye by its decussation with the orbicularis palpebrarum. The posterior fasciculus of the muscle draws backwards a part of the skin of the cranium, and assists in stretching the common aponeurosis.

OCCIPITO-MENINGE'AL. That which belongs to the occipital bone, and to the meninge or dura mater.

OCCIPITO-MENINGEAL ARTERY, in Chaussier's nomenclature, is a branch of the vertebral, given off to the dura mater at its entrance into the cranium.

OCCIPUT, Occipit'ium (ob, and caput), Regio occipita'lis, In'ion, Opisthoera'nium, Opisthoceph'alon, Hysteroera'nium, Prova, Occipit'ium. The back part of the head, formed by the occipital bone.

OCCIPUT, SOFT, Craniotabes.

OCCLU'SION, Occlu'sio, Mycē, from occludere, occludere, 'to shut up.' Sometimes this word signifies, simply, the transient approximation of the edges of a natural opening—the occlusion of the eyelids, for example; at others it is synonymous with imperforation, as occlusion of the pupil, vagina, &c.

OCCULT DISEASES, see Latent.

OCEAN SPRINGS, see Mississippi, Mineral waters of.

OCEMA, Vehicle.

OCHETEUMATA, Nares.

OCHETOS, Canal.

OCHTEUS, Scrotum.

OCHLE'SIS, from ochlos, 'a crowd.' A term, applied by Dr. George Gregory to a morbid condition induced by the crowding together of sick persons under one roof.

OCHREA RUBRA, Hæmatites.

OCHRIASIS, Paleness.

OCUROMA, Paleness.

OCHROPYRA, Fever, yellow.

OCHROTRES, Paleness.

OCHROTYPHUS, Fever, yellow.

OCHTHIASIS, Molluscum.

OCHTHODES, Callous.

OCIMUM ADSCENDENS, O. Basilicum.

OCIMUM BASILICUM, O. adscen'dens seu pilo'sum seu racem'sum seu citra'tum, Beren'darus, Basil'icum, B. majus seu citra'tum, Common or Citra'n basil, (F.) Basilic' commun; Ωκισιον, from ωκεις, 'swift,' owing to its swift growth. Nat. Ord. Labiata. Secr. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. This herb has a fragrant odour and aromatic taste. It is used as a condiment, and has been supposed to possess nerve properties.

OCIMUM CARYOPHYLLATUM, O. min'imam, Small or Bush basil. Possesses properties similar to the former. It is sometimes used as snuff.

OCIMUM CITRATUM, O. Basilicum—o. Pilosum, O. Basilicum—o. Raemosum, O. Basilicum.

OCOTEA AMARA, Nectandra cymbarum—o. Cymbarum, Nectandra cymbarum—o. Pichurim, see Pichurim beans—o. Puchury, see Pichurim beans.

OCREA, Hippocampus minor, Shin.

OCTA'NA, Hebdomada'ria, Febris hebdomada'ria, from octo, 'eight.' A fever whose paroxysms recur every week;—a supposititious case.

OCTA'RUS. A pint. The eighth part of a wine-gallon. Same etymon. It contains sixteen fluidounces (Ph. U. S.),—20 fluidounces imperial measure.

OCTOPUS, Synapheocephalus, Hemipages.

OCTUNX, from octo, 'eight,' and uncia, 'an ounce.' A weight of eight ounces.

OC'ULAR, Ocula'ris, (F.) Oculaire, from oculus, 'an eye.' Of or belonging to the eye.

OCULAR CONE. The cone formed within the eye by a pencil of rays proceeding from an object; the base of the cone being on the cornea,—the apex on the retina.

OCULARS COMMUNES, Motors oculorum—o. Dentes, Canine teeth.

OCULARIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

OCULI MARMARYODES, Metamorphosis—o. Palpebrarum scabies pruriginosa, Ophthalmia tarsi.

OCULIST, Oculista, Ophthalmia'ter, Med'icus ocula'rius seu ophthal'micus, from oculus, 'an eye.' One who occupies himself, chiefly, with the management of diseases of the eye.

OCULISTIQUE, Ophthalmology.

OCYODYNIC, Ocytoëic.

OCYPI'ONUS, from ocuis, 'quick,' and φονος, 'murder.' An agent that kills speedily.

OCYTOCEUS, Ocytoëic.

OCYTOC'IT, Oxytoëic, Ocytoëus, Ocytoëus, Ocy'ocous, Ocyody'nic, Odiuag'ous, from ocuis, 'quick,' and τοκος, 'labour.' Any thing that expedites parturition.

OCYTOCIUS, Ocytoëic.

OCYTOCUS, Ocytoëic.

OD. A term, employed by Reichenbach to designate an "effective force," which, according to him, not only manifests itself in contact with man, as in the case of magnets, crystals, the hands, &c., but, also, at distances, as from the sun, moon, and stars—indeed from all matter. Such a force is termed by him odic.

ODAXIS'MUS, Odaxis'mus, Odontoene'sis, Odontocenes'mus, οδαξισμος; a sensation of biting or pricking, as that in the gums which precedes the appearance of the teeth.

ODES. A suffix, see Eidos.

ODEUR, Odour.

ODIC, see Od.

ODIN, Pains, (labour.)

ODINAGOGUS, Ocytocic.

ODINOLYSIS, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Mitigation of labour pains.

ODINOPE'A, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and ποιω, 'I make.' Agents that encourage labour pains.

ODIS, Pains, labour.

ODME, Odour.

ODONTAGOGON, Dentagra.

ODONTAGRA, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A rheumatic or gouty pain in the teeth. Dentagra.

ODONTAL'GIA, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Dentium dolor, Toothach, Odontia, O. dolorosa, Gomphiasis, Gomphias'mus, Odontody'ia, (F.) Douleur des dents, Fluxion sur les dents, Mal de dent ou d'amour. A disease dependent upon a variety of causes affecting the cavity of the tooth; but generally owing to caries, which exposes the cavity to the action of the air, and to extraneous matters in general. Hence, the treatment consists in plugging the tooth, or destroying the sensibility of the nerve by powerful stimulants; and, if these means fail, in extracting the tooth.

ODONTALGIA CARIOSA, Dental gangrene—o. Dentitionis, Dentition—o. Παμοδια, Hæmodia.

ODONTALGIA NERVO'SA, Neuralgia Dentalis. Neuralgia of the teeth. Characterized by periodical pain, shooting with the utmost violence along the branches of the fifth pair distributed to the affected jaw.

ODONTALGIA REMITTENS ET INTERMITTENS, Neuralgia infra-orbitaria.

ODONTALGIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTAMBLYOGMUS, Hæmodia.

ODONTHEMODIA, Hæmodia.

ODONTHARPAGA, Dentagra.

ODONTHYPERÆSTHESIS, Hæmodia.

ODONTIA, Odontalgia.

ODONTIA DEFOR'MIS. Deformity of the teeth from error of shape, position, or number.—Good.

ODONTIA DENTITIONIS LACTANTIUM, see Dentition (first)—o. Dentitionis puerilis, see Dentition (second)—o. Edentula, see Nefrendes—o. Excrescens, Epulis—o. Incrustans, Odontolithos—o. Stuporis, Hæmodia.

ODONTIASIS, Dentition.

ODONTIATER, Dentist.

ODONTIATRIA, Dentistry.

ODONTIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTI'TIS, Odontophleg'monē, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the teeth.

ODONTOBOTHRI'TIS, Odontophatni'tis, Inflammat'io alveolarum, from odontobothrium, (οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and βοθριον, 'alveolus,') and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the alveoli.

ODONTOBOTHRIUM, Alveolus.

ODONTOCLA'SIS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and κλασις, 'fracture; Fractura dentis. Fracture of a tooth.

ODONTOCNESIS, Odaxismus.

ODONTOCNESMUS, Odaxismus.

ODONTODES, Odontoid.

ODONTODYNIA, Odontalgia.

ODONTOG'YENY, Odontogen'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' Generation or mode of development of the teeth.

ODONTOGLYPHON, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOGLYPHUM, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOG'RAPHY, Odontograph'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the teeth.

ODONTOID, Odontoï'des, Odonto'des, Dentiform'is, Denta'lis, Dentoï'dens, Pyrenoï'des, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and αιδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' An epithet given to the Processus dentatus of the second vertebra or axis.

ODONTOID LIG'AMENTS, Ligamenta alaria sen Mauchar'ti, (F.) Ligaments odontoidiens, are two strong and short conical fasciculi, whose truncated summits embrace the sides of the odontoid process, and whose bases are fixed in the fosse at the inner side of the condyles of the occipital bone. Their direction is obliquely outwards and slightly upwards. They enter into the composition of the occipito-axoid articulation, strengthen the junction of the head with the vertebral column, and limit the movement of rotation of the atlas on the axis.

Other ligamentous fibres pass from the highest portion of the processus dentatus to the anterior margin of the foramen magnum of the occipital bone—constituting the Ligamentum suspensorium dentis.

ODONTOLITHOS, (F.) Odontolithe, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' A sort of incrustation, of a yellowish colour, which forms at the coronæ of the teeth, and is called Tartar, Tartarus Dentium, Odontia incrustans, Calculus dentalis, (F.) Tartre des dents, T. dentaire. It consists of seventy-nine parts of phosphate of lime; twelve and a half of mucus; one of a particular salivary matter, and seven and a half of animal substance, soluble in chlorohydric acid. A species of infusoria, Dentic'ola hom'iniis, has been found in it.

ODONTOL'OGY, Odontolog'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' An anatomical treatise of the teeth.

ODONTONECROSIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOPARALLAX'IS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and παρλλαξις, 'deviation.' Irregularity and obliquity of the teeth; (Prov.) Snaggle teeth.

ODONTOPHATNE, Alveolus.

ODONTOPIANITIS, Odontobothritis.

ODONTOPLEROSIS, see Filling.

ODONTOPHYIA, Dentition.

ODONTOPRISIS, Brygmus, Stridor dentium.

ODONTOSEI'SIS, Odontoseis'mus, Dentium vacillanti'a, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and σεισις, 'shaking.' Looseness of the teeth.

ODONTOSEISMUS, Odontoseisis.

ODONTOSMEGMA, Dentifrice.

ODONTOSPIACELISIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSPIACELISMUS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSTERE'SIS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and στερησις, 'privation.' Loss of the teeth.

ODONTOSYNERISM'US, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and συνερισιν, 'to strike together;' (F.) Claquement. Chattering of the teeth.

ODONTOTECHNY, Dentistry.

ODONTOTHERAPIA, Dentistry.

ODONTOTRIMMA, Dentifrice.

ODONTOTRYPY, Odontropy.

ODONT'TRYPY, Odontot'rypy, Odontotrypp'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and τρυπω, 'I perfurate.' The operation of perforating a tooth to evacuate purulent matter confined in the cavity of the pulp.

ODORAMENTUM, Oloriferum.

ODORANT, see O-lour.

ODORAT, Olfaction.

ODORATIO, Olfaction.

ODORATUS, Olfaction—o. Deperditus, Anosmia.

ODORIFERUM, from odor, odoris, 'odour,' and fero, 'I carry;' Oloramentum. A medicine that gives odour or flavour. A scent. A perfume.

ODOROUS, see O-lour.

ODOS, Way.

O-DOUR, Olor, Olnē, Osmē, (F.) Odeur. A smell. O-lours are subtle particles, constantly escaping from the surface of certain bodies hence called o'doroux, (F.) Olorant. They act, in some manner, by actual contact with the nerves of the Schneiderian membrane, and give occasion to the sense of smell or olfaction.

ODOUS, see Teeth.

OD'YNE, οδυνη, 'pain,' Dolor, Olyne'ia. A very common suffix to words; as in Pleurodyne.

ODYNEMA, O-lyne.

ŒCIOMANIA, Oikeionania, from οικιας, 'belonging to a household or family,' and mania. A form of moral insanity, characterized by domestic perversity.

ŒCONOMIA, Economy—o. Animalis, Physiology.

ŒDALICUS, Œlematous.

ŒDALIUS, Œlematous.

ŒDE'MA, from οίδη, 'I am swollen.' Hydrone'ous, Œlemat'ia, Hyderone'ous, Hydrotou'ous, Hydrocōde'ous, Hydrelē'na, Hydrops cellularis ar'tuum, Phlegmat'ia, Leucophlegmat'ia, Ecphy'ua œdemat'icum, (F.) Œdème, Œdématic, Enflure. Swelling produced by the accumulation of a serous fluid in the interstices of the areolar texture. This swelling is soft; yields under the finger; preserves the impression for some time, and is pale and without pain. It presents the same characters as anasarca, which is general œdema. Its etiology and treatment are also the same. See Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ACUTUM, see Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ARSENICALIS. The swelling of the eyelids and face, induced by continued use of the preparations of arsenic.

ŒDEMA CALIDUM, see Anasarca—o. Capitis, Hydrocephalus externus.

ŒDE'MA CER'EBRI, (F.) Œdème du cerveau. Œlema of the brain. A condition of the cerebral pulp, in which there is an infiltration of serous fluid into it, so that it appears more moist or watery than common; and, when sliced or pressed, small drops of water are seen to ooze out.

ŒDEMA, COMPACT, Induration of the cellular tissue—o. Cruentum, Suggillation—o. Febrile, see Anasarca—o. Fugax, Anathymiasis—o. Hysterica, Anathymiasis.

ŒDEMA OF THE GLOTTIS, Œ. glottidis, Œlem'atous Laryngit'is or angina, Laryngit'is submucosa seu œdemat'ia seu sero-purulent'a, Hydrops glott'idis, Angi'na aquosa seu laryng'e'a œdemat'ia, Submucosa Laryngit'is, (F.) Laryngite œdémateuse, L. œdémateuse et sero-purulente ou sub-glottique ou sous-muqueuse, Angine laryng'e œdémateuse, Œdème de la glotte. A disease consisting of serous or sero-purulent infiltration into the submucous tissue of the glottis. The symptoms resemble those of croup; but the disease attacks the adult rather than the child. The age is, indeed, a principal means of diagnosis between the two affections.

The disease is almost always fatal. The treatment has to vary according to the accompanying general symptoms.

ŒDEMA LACTEUM, Phlegmatia dolens.

ŒDEMA OF THE LUNGS, Œ. pulmō'num, Pneumoch'ysis, Pneumocœle'na, Hydrops seu anasar'ca Pulmō'num, Hydro-pneumō'nia, (F.) Œdème du pōumon. Lætuce has so called the infiltration of serum into the tissue of the lung, carried to such an extent as to diminish its permeability to air. It is not an uncommon sequela of pneumonia, and the major exanthemata. The respiration is laborious; the respiratory murmur scarcely perceptible, although the thorax is largely expanded, and there is a slight râle crépitant, particularly at the base and inferior part of the lung. The sound on percussion is clear, and on both sides equally so. The cough is attended with aqueous expectoration. In some cases the respiration becomes purile in a small portion of the summit of the lung.

ŒDEMA NEOGATORUM, Induration of the cellular tissue—o. Palpebrarum, Hydroblepharon—o. Puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens—o. Pulmonum, Œdema of the lungs—o. Pulmonum chronicum, Hydropneumonia—o. Scroti aquosum, Oschehydroœdema—o. Scroti cruentum, Oschæmatœdema—o. Scroti purulentum, Oscheopyœdema—o. Scroti urinosum, Urocele—o. Spasticum, Anathymiasis—o. Uvulae, Staphylœdema.

ŒDEMATIA, Œdema.

ŒDÉMATIE, Œdema.

ŒDEMOTOSARCA, Œdemosarca.

ŒDEMOTOSCHEOCELĒ, Œdemoscheocelē, Oscheocelē œdemat'ica. Oscheocele with œdema of the scrotum.

ŒDEMATOUS, Œdemat'ous, Œdemat'icus, Œdemat'ous, Œdal'ius, Œdal'icus, Œdemat'ous, (F.) Œdémateux. Affected with œdema, (F.) Œdématic, of the nature of œdema.

ŒDÈME, Œdema—o. du Cerveau, Œdema cerebri—o. Douloureux des femmes en couche, Phlegmatia dolens—o. des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—o. actif des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—o. de la Glotte, Œdema of the glottis—o. de la Glotte, Angina œdematosa—o. du Tissu cellulaire des nouveaunés, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ŒDEMOSAR'CA, Œdematosar'ca. A species of tumour mentioned by M. A. Severinus, which holds a middle place between œdema and sarcoma.

ŒDEMOSCHEOCELE, Œdematoscheocele.

ŒIL, Eye—o. de Bœuf, Anthemistinetoria—o. Double, Binoculus—o. de Lièvre, Lagophthalmus—o. Simple, see Monoculus.

ŒILLET GIROFLÉE, Dianthus caryophyllus.

ŒILLIÈRE, Scaphium oculare.

ŒNANTHÈ, Œ. croc'ata seu chærophylli foliis, Hemlock dropwort, Hemlock water-dropwort. Nat. Ord. Umbelliferae. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, from oinos, 'wine,' and ανθος, 'a flower;' its flowers smelling like the vine. A violent poison of the acro-narcotic class. Its juice has been recommended in certain cutaneous diseases; but it is scarcely ever used. It is employed in fomentations.

ŒNANTHE AQUATICA, Phellandrium aquaticum—o. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum—o. Striata rigida, Seseli tortuosum.

ŒNELE'ON, from oinos, 'wine,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of oil and wine.—Galen. Also, rectified spirit or alcohol.

ŒNOG'ALA, οινογαλα, from oinos, 'wine,' and γαλα, 'milk,'—'a mixture of wine and milk.' According to some, wine as warm as new milk.

ŒNOG'ARON, Garrum vino mistum. Wino mixed with garum.—Aëtius.

ŒNOLATURE, see Vinum.

ŒNOLÉ, see Vinum.

ŒNOLOTIF (F.). A name given by M.

Béral to a medicine intended for external use, whose excipient is wine.

GENOIDES, Vinous.

GENOMANIA, Onomani'a, from oinos, 'wine,' and mania. Delirium tremens. Properly, wine-mania. An insatiable desire for intoxicating liquors.

GENOMEL, Genom'eli, from oinos, 'wine,' and μελι, 'honey.' Mel vino'sum, Mulsum Vini'sum. Honey wine. Wine mead. See Hydromel.

GENOPHLYGIA, Temulencia.

GENOPHLYXIS, Temulencia.

GENOS, Wine.

GENOSTAGMA, Spiritus vini rectificatus.

GENOTHE'RA BIEN'NIS, Gen. Mollis'sima seu murica'ta seu gaurro'ides, On'agra, Evening Primrose, Tree Primrose, Primrose tree, Cure-all, Scabish. An indigenous plant, common on the borders of fields, and in natural hedges. Ord. Onagraceæ. Sex. Syst. Octandria Monogynia. Its properties are mucilaginous and slightly acrid. A decoction has been used in cases of infantile and other eruptions.

GENOTHERA GAUROIDES, O. biennis — æ. Muricata, O. biennis.

ESOPHAGEAL, Esophagæ'us, (F.) Esophagi'en. Same etymon as œsophagus. Relating or belonging to the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE DI'APHRAGM, Fora'men œsophage'um, (F.) Ouverture œsophagienne du diaphragme. An opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGEAL APERTURE OF THE STOMACH. A name given to the superior or cardiac orifice of the stomach, to distinguish it from the inferior or pyloric. See Cardia.

ESOPHAGEAL MUSCLE, Esophagæ'us. Some anatomists have given this name to the transverse muscular fibres which surround the œsophagus at its upper extremity.

ESOPHAGEAL TUBE, see Tube, œsophageal.

ESOPHAGEURYS'MA, Esoph'agus succenturiat'us, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and εὐρύσμα, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGIALGIA, Esophagismus.

ESOPHAGIARCTIA, Dysphagia constricta.

ESOPHAGIEN, (muscle), Constrictor œsophagi.

ESOPHAGIS'MUS, Esophagis'mum. A name given by Vogel to spasm of the œsophagus, Dysphagia Spasmod'ica seu Spas'tica seu Nervo'sa, Strictu'ra œsoph'agi spasmod'ica, Esophagial'gia, Esophagospas'm'us, Tenes'mus Gulæ, (F.) Ténésie de l'œsophage. By some used synonymously with œsophagitis, dysphagia, and contraction of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGITIS, Angi'na seu Cyan'chê œsophagæ'a, Dysph'agia inflammat'oria, Inflammat'io œsoph'agi seu Gulæ, (F.) Angine œsophagienne. Inflammation of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGODYN'IA, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and ὀδυνή, 'pain.' Pain in the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGOPATHI'A, Morb'us Esoph'agi, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and παθος, 'disease.' A morbid condition of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGOPLE'GIA, Dysph'agia paraly'tica, Læmoparaly'sis, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and πληγή, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGORRHAG'IA, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and ρᾶγη, 'a rupture.' Hemorrhage from the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGORRHŒ'A, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and ρεω, 'I flow.' Discharge of blood or mucus from the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGOSPAS'MUS, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm of the œsophagus.

ESOPHAGOT'OMY, Esophagotom'ia, from œsophagos, 'the œsophagus,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An incision made into the œsophagus for the purpose of extracting foreign bodies from it.

ESOPH'AGUS, from οἶω, 'future' οἶσω, 'I carry,' and φαγω, 'I eat?' Gula, Fist'ula cibalis, Fist'ula seu Infundib'ulum Ventric'uli, Via stom'achi et ventris, Glutius. The Gullet, (Prov.) Wizen. A musculo-membranous canal, cylindrical, and depressed from before to behind, which extends from the inferior extremity of the pharynx to the upper orifice of the stomach. At its origin, it is situate in the median line; but beneath the larynx, it deviates to the left, and in the chest experiences different reflections. In its cervical portion, it corresponds, behind, with the spine; before, with the larynx and trachea; and, at the sides, it is close to the primitive carotids, internal jugular veins, par vagum, recurrent nerves, &c. In its inferior or thoracic portion, the œsophagus is entirely contained in the posterior mediastinum; and enters the abdomen through the œsophageal aperture, Fora'men œsophage'um, of the diaphragm. The œsophagus is composed of a very strong muscular layer, sometimes called Tunica vagina'lis gulæ; formed, itself, of two sets of fibres, the external being general longitudinal, the internal transverse or annular. 2. Of a mucous membrane which is soft, fine, thin, and white, especially at its lower part. It is continuous, above, with the mucous membrane of the pharynx. The mucous follicles, found beneath it, are not numerous, and have been called Esophageal glands. The arteries of the œsophagus proceed, in the neck, from the thyroid; in the chest, from the bronchial arteries and directly from the aorta;—in the abdomen, from the inferior phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its veins empty themselves into the inferior thyroid, the vena cava superior, the internal mammary, azygos, bronchial, phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its lymphatics pass into the ganglia surrounding it. Its nerves are afforded by the pharyngeal and pulmonary plexuses; by the cardiac nerves; the thoracic ganglia, and, especially, by the pneumogastrics and their recurrent branches.

ESOPHAGUS SUCCENTURIATUS, Pharyngocele.

ESTROMANIA, Nymphomania.

ESTRUATION, Orgasm, see Heat.

ESTRUM, Clitoris.

ESTRUM VEN'ERIS, E. vene'reum, Estrus vene'reus; from αιστρος, æstrus, 'a violent impulse or desire.' A vehement desire for sexual intercourse. Orgasm. With some, æstrum signifies Clitoris.

ESTRUS, Clitoris, see Ectozoa—æ. Venerens, Estrum venerium.

ESYPUS, from οἶς, 'a sheep.' The greasy matter of unwashed wool; formerly employed in friction in diseased joints.

EUFS, Ova.

OFFICE, PHYSICIAN'S or SURGEON'S, Iatron.

OFFICINA, Pharmacopolium.

OFFIC'INAL, Officina'lis, from officina, for opificina, (from opifex (opus and facio.) 'a workman,') 'a shop.' An epithet for medicines found in the shop of the apothecary, ready prepared—usua'lia; in opposition to magistral or extemporaneous,—those prepared after the prescription of the physician.

OFFIUM, Affion, Opium.

OFFSPRING, Epigone.

OFFUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OGLA, Oogala.

OGNON, a Corn—o. Marin, Scilla.

OHIO, MINERAL WATERS OF. Yellow Spring is a chalybeate, situate in Greene county, 64 miles from Cincinnati. It is somewhat frequented.

OIL, FUSEL, Al'cohol amylicum (Ph. D.), Fusel oil, Pota'to oil, Grain oil, Cornspirit oil, Pota'to spirit oil, Oil of potatoes, Amylic alcohol, Hy'drated oxide of amylic, (G.) Fusel, an epithet for poor brandy.) An acid volatile oil, formed in the manufacture of potato brandy, and which is not easily separable from it. Its chemical constitution is analogous to that of alcohol. It exhales a powerful and peculiarly suffocating odour. S. g. '818. In small doses it is highly stimulating,—acting like narcotics in general. In large doses it destroys the mucons membrane of the stomach. It is used by the Dublin College in the preparation of Sodæ valerianas.

OIL, GRAIN, Oil, fusel.

OIL, HÆRLEM. An empirical preparation supposed to consist chiefly of petroleum, turpentine, and balsam of sulphur. Used internally in renal and rheumatic affections.

OÏOCALYMMA, Otiocalyp'trum; from ωοιον, ωον, 'egg,' and καλυπτειν, 'to cover'; Membra'na O'vuli cortica'lis. The membrane of the egg-shell.

OKRA, Hibiscus esculentus.

OLD AGE, Senectus.

OLD MAN, Artemisia abrotanum.

OLD WIFE'S SHIRT, Liriodendron.

OLEA ANIMA'LIA, Animal oils, (F.) Huiles animales. A name given to fixed oils holding in solution the mucilaginous and gelatinous principles of certain animals, as the Oil of frogs, Oil of scorpions, Oil of spiders, &c. Sometimes, also, the term animal oils is given to empyreumatic oils, produced during the decomposition of animal substances by heat.

OLEA DESTILLATA, O. Volatilia.

OLEA EMPYREUMAT'ICA, Empyreumatic oils, (F.) Huiles empyreumatiques ou pyrogénées, Py-rélaïnes. Oils which have an empyreumatic or burnt smell. They are obtained by treating vegetable or animal matters by heat, in close vessels. They do not exist in organized bodies, but are formed during their decomposition by fire. The animal oil of Dippel is an empyreumatic oil.

OLEA EUROPE'Æ, O. sativæ seu lancifolia seu polymorpha seu Gallica, Oli'va, Olive tree, ελια, Elæ'a, (F.) Olivier; (Fruit) Olive. Nat. Ord. Jasminæ. Sec. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. The leaves of the olive are bitter, and an extract prepared from them, and a substance called olivi'na, the bitter principle of the leaves, have been given in Italy as antiperiodics. The fruit, when pickled, is extremely grateful to some stomachs. Olives, as met with in the shops, are prepared from the green, unripe fruit, repeatedly steeped in water. To this, some quicklime or alkaline salt is added, and, afterwards, they are washed and preserved in a pickle of common salt and water. From this fruit is prepared the Olive oil or Salad oil of the Pharmacopœias, which is obtained by grinding and pressing the olives, when thoroughly ripe. The finer and purer oil issues first by gentle pressure, and the inferior sort on heating what is left, and pressing it more strongly. See Oleum Olivæ. In Calabria, an odorous resin exudes from its trunk, which is employed as a perfume by the Neapolitans.

A gum flows from certain wild olives, in warm countries, which consists, according to Pelletier, of a resin, a little benzoic acid, and a peculiar substance, called Olivile. It is in yellow masses, of a slightly acid taste, and of a vanilla smell. It is called Oleæ gummi, O. resi'na, and O. bals-ammum, (F.) Gomme olivier, and is esteemed astringent and detersive.

OLEA FIXA SEU PIN'GUIA, Expressed, Fixed or Fatty oils, (F.) Huiles fixes ou grasses, Oléols. All the oils obtained from the seeds or pericarps of vegetables, without distillation, and which are viscid, but slightly odorous and sapid; lighter than water, and insoluble in alcohol. The rancidity of oils depends on the absorption of oxygen, and therefore they should be kept in bulk as much as possible, and in narrow-necked bottles, so that a very small surface only can be exposed to the air. All the fixed oils are emollient, and, in a certain dose, they act as purgatives and emetics. They are prepared by expressing the fruit or seed containing them.

OLEA FUGA'CIA, Fuga'cions oils, (F.) Huiles fugaces. A name given to oils which are so volatile that, in order to obtain them, recourse must be had to a different process from that employed for other essential oils. Such are the oils of jessamine, lily, violet, &c.

OLEA GALLICA, O. Europæa—o. Lancifolia, O. Europæa.

OLEA MEDICINA'LIA, Medic'inal oils, (F.) Huiles Médicinales, Éléols, Solution par les huiles. A name given to oils prepared by macerating, infusing, or boiling medicinal substances in olive or any other fixed oils. These oils may then be regarded as oily solutions of certain medicinal substances; whence they can never be simple. They have, however, been divided into simple and compound medicinal oils. To the former belong the Oils of St. John's wort, of the Solanum nigrum, &c.; to the other—which have often been called Oily balsams, (F.) Baumes huileux—the Balsams of Fioraventi, Metz, &c. Medicinal oils are, almost always, employed externally.

OLEA POLYMORPHA, O. Europæa—o. Sativa, O. Europæa.

OLEA VOLATIL'IA, O. destillata, Æthero'lea, Volatile, Ethereal, Essential, or Distilled oils, Essences, (F.) Huiles volatiles ou essentielles ou distillées ou éthérées, oléolats, oléules, oléols. Oils found in aromatic vegetables, and in every part of them, except in the interior of the seeds. The majority are obtained by distillation; but some by expression. They possess unctuousity, inflammability, and viscosity, like the fixed oils; but they are generally odoriferous, pungent, and acid. The greater part are lighter than water; but some are heavier, and congeal at a moderate temperature. They dissolve, in small quantity, in distilled water, by simple agitation. Almost all are soluble in alcohol. The odour and taste are the usual tests of their goodness. To preserve them, they should be kept in a cool place, in small bottles, quite full and well corked. Volatile oils are possessed of the aromatic properties of the plants whence they are obtained. They are all, when applied externally, stimulant and rubefacient. Pharmaceutical preparations, in which substances are dissolved in volatile oils, (F.) Solutions par les huiles volatiles, are termed by Béal, Myrolés.

OLEAGINOUS, Oleaginosus, Oleus, (F.) Oléagineux; from oleum, 'oil.' Oily; containing oil,—as 'an oleaginous or oily mixture.'

OLEAMEN, Oleamentum. Same etymon. Any soft ointment prepared of oil.—Scribonius.

OLEANDER, Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

OLECRANARTHROSITIS, from olecranon, ἄρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the elbow joint.

OLECRANARTHROACĒ, from ωλεκρῶνον, 'the olecranon,' ἄρθρον, 'articulation,' and κακία, 'vice or disease.' Inflammation of the articular surfaces of the elbow.—Rust.

OLECRANIAL, (F.) Olécranien. Relating or belonging to the olecranon.

OLECRANOID CAVITY, see Ulna.

OLECRANON, Olecranon, Olecranonum, Olecranon mod'ile; from ωλενῖ, 'the elbow,' and κρῶνον, 'the head.' Acrole'nion, Additamentum uel'atum, Ancon, Processus anconæus seu uncinatus, Glanis seu Cocœna seu Cocœna posterior seu Additamentum uncinatum Ulnæ, Vertex Cubiti, Patella fici, Rostrum extensorium seu posterius, Top of the cubit. Head or protection of the elbow. A large process at the upper extremity of the ulna, on which we lean. When this process is fractured, it is apt to be drawn up by the triceps, and much care is required to keep the parts in apposition.

OLETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. At Olette, in the department Pyrénées Orientales, is a thermal spring, which raises the thermometer to 190° Fahr. It is the hottest in France.

OLÉULES, Olea volatilia.

OLEUM, Oil—o. Abietis, see Pinus pieca—o. Absinthii, Artemisia absinthium, (oil of)—o. Aenstium, Huile acoustique.

OLEUM ÆTHERIUM, Spic'itua ætheris oleus, Ætheréal oil (formed in the distillation of ether), Oleum vini, Oil of wine, Heavy oil of wine, Sweet oil of vitriol, (F.) Huile douce de vin. A peculiar oleaginous matter, obtained by continuing the distillation, after the whole of the sulphuric ether has passed over in the process for the preparation of the latter. It is used only as an ingredient in the compound spirit of ether. It is official in the Ph. U. S.

OLEUM AMMONIATUM, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius.

OLEUM AMYGDALÆ AMARÆ, Oil of Bitter Almonds. An oil, obtained by distilling with water the kernels or the fruit of Amygdalus communis—variety, Amara. Its action is like that of hydrocyanic acid—four drops having destroyed a dog. Dose, a quarter of a drop to a drop. A drop to a fluidounce of water forms a wash, which has been used in Prurigo senilis, and other forms of itching.

OLEUM AMYGDALARUM, Oleum amygdalæ, Oil of Almonds, (F.) Huile d'amandes. (Expressed from both sweet and bitter almonds,—Amygdalus communis.) $\frac{3}{4}$ xvj of almonds yield $\frac{3}{5}$ v of oil. It is inodorous, insipid, and of a pale straw colour, and is employed as a demulcent and emollient.

OLEUM ANACARDII, see Anacardium occidentale.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ, Animal oil, (F.) Huile animale. An oil obtained by the decomposition of the immediate principles of animals, subjected to the action of heat. It is fetid, and always contains a certain quantity of subcarbonate of ammonia. See Olea Empyreumatica. The name animal oil is sometimes also given to the fat contained in the fatty vesicles. The composition of this fat does not, indeed, differ from that of the fixed oil.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ DIPPELII, O. ceruæ cervi, O. C. C. rectificatum, O. pyro-animalē depuratum seu animalē ætheris, Pyraleum osisium rectificatum, Animal oil, Animal oil of Dippel, (F.) Huile animale de Dippel ou de corne de cerf, is obtained by distilling animal matters, especially hartshorn, on the naked fire. The subcarbonate of ammonia, which it contains, renders it partly soluble in water, and communicates to it the stimulant properties for which it is used in medicine. It is employed as an antispasmodic.

OLEUM ANIMALĒ EMPYREUMATICUM CHABERTI, O. Empyreumaticum seu anthelminticum seu contra tæniæum Chaberti, Empyreumatic oil of Chabert, Oil of Chabert, (F.) Huile anthelmintique de Chabert, is made by adding one part of animal oil to three parts of oil of turpentine, leaving them to combine for four days, and then distilling three parts. An effective anthelmintic. Dose, a teaspoonful three times a day.

OLEUM ANIMALIZATUM PER INFUSIONEM, (F.) Huile animalisée par infusion, H. aromatique ou de petits chiens. A preparation, formerly esteemed tonic and cephalic. It was obtained by boiling new-born puppies in oil, first depriving them of their blood, skin, and intestines. When the decoction was cold, origanum, thyme, pennyroyal, St. John's wort, and marjoram were added.

OLEUM ANISI, see Pimpinella anisum—o. Anthelminticum Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti—o. Anthemidis, see Anthemis nobilis—o. Aurantia, see Citrus aurantium—o. Balaninum, Guilandina moringa (oleum)—o. Balsami, see Amyris opobalsamum.

OLEUM BENZOINI, Oil of Benzoin or Benjamin. An oil obtained by heating, in a sand-bath, the matter which remains after benzoic acid has been separated from benzoin by the aid of heat. It has been regarded as balsamic and sudorific.

OLEUM BERGAMI, see Bergamot.

OLEUM BUFILEM, Neat's-foot oil, (F.) Huile de pieds de bœuf. It is obtained by boiling in water for a long time the feet of the beef—Bos dantes'ticus—previously deprived of the hoof. It is introduced into the official list of the Ph. U. S. as an ingredient of the ointment of nitrate of mercury.

OLEUM CACAO SPISSATUM, Butter of Cacao—o. Cadinum, see Juniperus oxycedrus—o. Cajuputi, Caipept (oil)—o. Camphoratum, Linimentum camphoræ—o. Cari sen Carni, Carum (oleum)—o. Cryophylli, see Eugenia cryophyllata.

OLEUM CEDRINUM, Essentia de cedro, (F.) Huile de cédrar. The oil of the peel of citrons, obtained in Italy in a particular manner, without distillation.

OLEUM CHABERTI, O. animale empyreumaticum Chaberti—o. Chenopodii, see Chenopodium anthelminticum—o. Cicutum, see Ricinus communis—o. Cinnamomi, see Laurus cinnamomum—o. Contra Tæniam Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti.

OLEUM COPA'IBÆ, Oil of Copa'iba. (Copa'ib. ℞ij; Aquæ, cong. iv. Distil three gallons; separate the oil; return the water to the copaiba, and again distil three gallons. Separate the oil, and add it to the other. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gtt. x to xxx.

OLEUM CORNU CERVI, O. animale Dippelii—o. Cubebæ, see Piper cubebæ—o. Euphorbiæ lathyridis, see Euphorbia lathyris—o. Fixum nucum coccis butyraceæ, see Cocos butyraceæ—*o. OLEUM GRAM'INIS IS'DICI, Grass-oil of Nemaar, Gingergrass oil, called, by the perfumers, oil of geranium, and oil of rose geranium, and occasionally sold as oil of spikenard, is obtained from Andropogon calanms aromaticus of India. It is used as a perfume, and like the essential oils in general.

OLEUM JEC'ORIS ASELI, O. Morrhua seu Jec'oris Morrhua seu Jec'in'oris Aselli, Acn'gia Ga'di, A. Pisc'na mar'na, Codliver oil, Cod oil, (F.) Haile de morue ou de Foie de morue. The animal oil, which appears under this name in commerce, is obtained from several of the species belonging to the genus Gadus. The Cod, Gadus morrhua; the Dorse or Dorsch, Gadus Calla'rias, Morrhua America'na; the Coalfish, Gadus carbonarius; the Burbot, Gadus lota, Lota vulg'aris; the Pollock, Gadus poll'chius; the Ling, Lota molva; the Torsk, Bros'mius vulg'aris. There is reason also to believe, that on the American coast it is obtained, also, from the Hake, Gadus merlu'cius, and the Haddock, Gadus æglif'imus. The clearest sorts are generally used. An excellent euphratic, in tuberculous and strumous affections, rheumatism, chronic cutaneous diseases, and tumours of the mammae, &c. The dose for an adult is from fʒij to fʒiiss.

Cod liver olein, prepared by subjecting codliver oil to a low temperature and separating the olein by pressure, has been used in the same cases as the oil.

Skote liver oil, Oleum ra'ia, obtained from Ra'ia batis and R. clava'ta, is used in the same cases and doses.

OLEUM SULPHURATUM, Balsanum sulphuris simplex, Sulphurated oil. (Sulphur. lot. ℞ij; olivæ olei, ℞j. Heat the oil in a large iron pot, and throw in the sulphur by degrees; stirring the mixture after each addition till they unite.) It is stimulating, and was formerly much used in coughs, asthma, &c., and, externally, to foul ulcers.

OLEUM TAB'ACI, Oil of Tobacco. An empyreumatic oil, obtained from coarsely-powdered tobacco by heating the retort to dull redness.—Ph. U. S.

OLEUM TARTARI PER DELIQUIM, Liquor potassæ subcarbonatis—o. Templinum, see Pinus mughos.

OLEUM TEREBIN'THINÆ, Oil of Turpentine. The volatile oil of the juice of pinus palustris, and other species of pinus.

OLEUM TEREBIN'THINÆ RECTIFICATUM, O. pini purissimum O. T. purificatum seu terebinthinæ æthereum, Rectified oil of turpentine. Sp. of turpentine. Common oil of turpentine is also called Common oil of Spike, Oleum spicæ vulg'aræ. (Olei terebinth. Oj; aquæ, Oiv. Distil over the oil.) It is stimulating, diuretic, anthelmintic, and rubefacient. Dose, gtt. x to fʒj.

Gnestonian Embrocation for rheumatism consists of ol. terebinth., ol. oliv. āā fʒiiss; acid sulph. dil. fʒij.

OLEUM THEBROMÆ CACAO EXPRESSUM, Butter of cacao—o. Tiglii, see Croton tiglium.

OLEUM VALERIA'NÆ, Oil of Valerian. The distilled oil of the root of Valeriana officinalis.—Ph. U. S. Dose, four or five drops.
